A man could never take his family to a saloon. was the most selfish institution on earth so far as th was concerned. When it is gone, and gone forev the home will begin to come into its own.

In countless families all over America wives a mothers will bless God with streaming tears of j when the last saloon has closed its doors, and the do of the home have wreaths of happiness carved on th panels, as the door opens and a sober father greets h wife and children and asks them to share his recre tions with him.

Courage, old world! If 100,000,000 people can a ually destroy so powerful an enemy of human hap ness as old King Alcohol, it can in time help to d stroy the god of war. Down with old King Alcoh Let the people reign! Also down with the old g Mars! Let the people rule, in universal happiness a peace!

The Man and the Job

Confidence in the Future

By HON. EMERSON C. HARRINGTON
Governor of Maryland

IN THE great problem of industrial readjustment the immediate thing is to establish the best possible relations between the man and his job. We are fortunate in Maryland in that we lost no time in establishing our Bureau for Returned Soldiers, Sailors and War Workers. Within three months 3,918 men registered, and of this number 3,571 were referred to employers and of these 2,729 were given employment.

One feature of the work was getting the employers in Maryland to send letters to their old employees offering them their old jobs. This work has not been done in a patronizing way nor in a spirit of charity, but with full friendship for the soldier. We have had in operation an efficient employment service which has placed more than 100,000 men. By the intelligent handling of the labor problem the surplus which appeared early in some sections was avoided in Maryland.

I have watched the situation very closely and have cooperated in the work, and my observation is that if we have the proper machinery for placing labor and we handle the matter in the right spirit we are going to solve the larger problem of readjustment, and the other problems will do much to work out their own salvation. I have the utmost confidence in the industrial future and safety of the country.

Opening the Waste Places

By HON. THOMAS RIGGS
Governor of Alaska

THE most complex problem confronting the country is the question of industrial readjustment. That there will be a readjustment in the due course of time is inevitable, but I do not believe that there is any one who can at present foresee how and when this is to come about.

Our principal concern is the immediate future. Secretary Lane foresaw an unbalanced condition in the United States as soon as there should be released from the army our splendid young representatives of American manhood who have been risking their all for the country they hold dear. Had the measures advocated by him become effective, there would now be the machinery available for the absorption of t returned soldier in useful and profitable industr Perhaps the scheme will still go through at the spec session of Congress. I can not imagine a more co structive thought than that of Secretary Lane's, whic will open up our waste places to make happy a profitable homes for our soldiers and sailors.

I should like his ideas to go even further and ta in all that part of our population which wants ru homes. To many of our returned warriors the thoug of a country life will not appeal. By extending t privilege of governmental assistance to the labor in industrial occupation who may be displaced by th returned soldier, it will be possible to care for classes of unemployment. As I see it, industrial r adjustment is synonymous with labor readjustme

I am strong for the farm and other personal owne ship, for it is only when the individual can point some one piece of property and say "This is my own that he fully realizes that he is part and parcel of th United States and that to protect himself he mu protect the state.

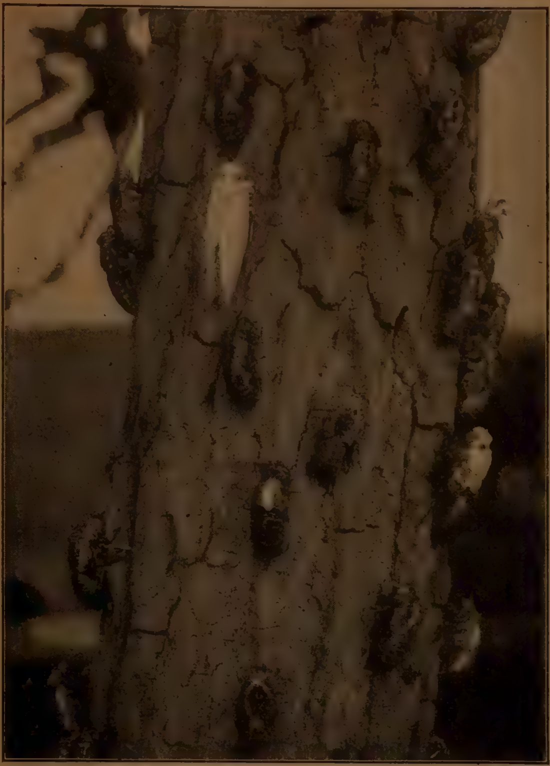
Broad justice and wise generosity to the natio heroes must count also to the best good of the who people.

A DOUBLE INVASION OF LOCUSTS

WHEN you hear a mighty chorus of locusts this summer, do not fear that another cataclysm has come upon us; it will be only a iolent declaration that the armistice of the venteen-year variety has expired, and iat the noisy cicada, as the scientists pre- r to call it, is again abroad in its periodical ttack on the orchards and forests of the nd, particularly the younger trees of the uit-bearing order.

Scientific men who make it a profession study and classify the various breeds ad tribes of predatory insects can foretell ie coming of the seventeen-year locusts ith the same accuracy as the astronomers an predict the eclipse. They know that he omes with a rush at regular intervals and ien disappears in less than two months. accurately is the system of schedules ranged in advance that the horticultural iterests know almost to the day when he ill make his noisy charge, and just in hat sections of the country the attack ill be precipitated. This year he is ex- ected to appear in greatest numbers in the llowing states: Alabama, District of olumbia, Delaware, Georgia, Illinois, In- iana, Iowa, Kentucky, Maryland, Massa- usetts, Michigan, New Jersey, New ork, North Carolina, Ohio, Pennsylvania, outh Carolina, Tennessee, Vermont, Vir- nia, West Virginia and Wisconsin.

WHILE every one uses the term locust, technical authorities all agree that is is misapplied, and that it is not a locust all. They insist that the term locust longs only to the grasshopper family, and at the seventeen-year pest also has a irteen-year side partner. It is when the venteen-year and thirteen-year tribes ake their appearance coincidentally that ie greatest harm is done. The visitation is year is expected to be particularly vere because the cicada calendar, re- rded as well-nigh infallible, calls for a ouble bill. This conclusion is based on ie fact that the seventeen-year class ming out within the next few months, is ood 10, perhaps the largest of the seven- en-year-olds; and that brood 18 of the irteen-year family is scheduled to emerge at the me time, and thereupon the two armies will be erating competitively to some extent.



Seventeen-year locusts laying their eggs

The worst locust year in the history of the United ates, as shown by the records of the entomological ction of the Department of Agriculture, was in 1868, when brood 19, the largest of the thirteen-year class, emerged in conjunction with brood 10, the two combining to make a record infestation. But science has been busy since then, and its votaries have, so to speak, gotten the numbers of both classes of winged Huns.

The statement has often been made that the cicada is the most interesting of all insects, because it has always appeared to be so mysterious. The fact that it comes in countless numbers one year, and then is not seen again for thirteen or seventeen years, only to reappear in reinforced legions, has kept the popular mind mystified to a great extent, and besides has woven many superstitions about the cicada—or locust, as unscientific laymen call him.

THE insect, first of all, spends thirteen or seventeen years in slow development beneath the ground and comes forth to the light and air at almost exactly the same spot where it entered thirteen or seventeen years before. One of the oddest things about it is that, in spite of its exceedingly slow development in its subterranean habitat, all the millions and even billions of individuals forming the grand army attain maturity and burst forth at the same time.

"Locust years," for hundreds of years back, have been regarded with much unfeigned fear and dread. In times past dire predictions were made of wars and other calamities to befall, either with the coming or after the departure of the insects. This was particularly true with the Indians, who regarded the periodical flights as harbingers of great misfortunes, and at such times the medicine men of the tribes were worked overtime designing, or otherwise preparing, panaceas to ward off the dangers. This superstition even spread to the civilized. Some have fancied that they could identify the cry of the cicada as a resemblance to the pronunciation of the word Pharaoh, the name of the Egyptian monarch who so relentlessly persecuted the ancient Jews. Attention has been called to the dark bars that occur on the filmy wings of the insect, in the shape of the letter W, which to many used to mean a forerunner of war.

In young orchards and nurseries experts have recommended that the ground under the trees be watched closely, and that the insects be gathered by hand and destroyed as soon as they emerge. When the emergence is on a wholesale scale the task is likely to be quite onerous, but thousands can easily be shaken off into bags or open umbrellas without much exacting labor. As soon as they come out of the ground they make for the trees, and at times as many as a thousand can be scraped off with a brush. ROBERT H. MOULTON.

GREETING THE RETURNING BOYS

FROM 30,000 to 50,000 American boys for whom the words "home" and "home folks" have taken on a new meaning are landing in New ork harbor every week. Many of them have been ought back wounded and ill from the war, and are aced for a more or less indefinite stay in one the debarkation hospitals of the city. Others -well men—are being sent to the camps of ong Island or New Jersey within a few miles New York City, until they can be transferred ck to demobilization centers nearer their omes, or discharged right there. Some are ilors or marines, in port for a few days—ter laying mines in the North Sea, or carry- g foodstuffs to our Allies, or from convoy ity across the Atlantic.

No matter what or who they may be, they all ant one thing, and want it badly. They want see some one from home. This home-hunger the hearts of the returning soldiers, sailors or arines awoke an idea in the minds of two mem- rs of the New York staff of the War Camp ommunity Service, Dr. Robert Tudor Hill of ebraska and Miss Ruth Duniway of Port- nd, Oregon. In a very short time the "Hall States" had come into being—a converted sidence of five stories, large rooms and many eplaces at 27 West Twenty-fifth Street. The ar Camp Community Service workers set out to furnish the place with simple but com- rtable furniture, and to carry out "the idea" to find groups of people now resident in New ork who had formerly lived in other states d who would be responsible for greeting and friending that state's returning fighting men the Hall of States.

At the end of a few weeks, forty-nine states e represented in this place, and more than 7,000 ys have passed through its doors, consuming, the average, 3,127 freshly made doughnuts d over half as many cups of coffee a week.

Each state represented has its own desk, furnished and equipped by the state or by its committee.

The convalescent boys who are well enough are usually on their way to the Hall of States in a little while after landing. One boy from Nebraska, who had not heard from his home folks for two years, not even in response to the telegram he had sent on his arrival in New York, received his letter at six o'clock one morning. When the workers came to open the building a little before nine o'clock, he was sitting on the doorstep.

In the Hall of States, Ohio Division

ANOTHER letter reached a poor colored boy from Tennessee, who could neither read nor write, and who was still very ill. The Red Cross workers at the hospital got word for him to the Tennessee worker at the Hall of States. When she arrived, the boy was hugging the letter to his breast with tears rolling down his face. The nurse who tended him during his stay in New York said that he never let that letter out of his sight.

Tickets to various sorts of entertainments are given out. Bus rides through the city are arranged. And, of course, there are the daily batches of doughnuts, served by a white-coated chef in the kitchen.

A chap comes at ten o'clock in the morning. He finds some one at the desk who used to be from his home city, or from some place near by, some one who knows people and places that he does. Then other boys come in, and other women. Soon the circle has reached out until it is colliding with other circles around other desks, and no one realizes that it is long past lunch time.

The boys seem to like to talk to the older women even better than the girls. They have so many things to talk out, to unburden their souls of. They do not seem to be able to talk enough in one visit, and they come again and again as long as they are within reach. Many of the women open their homes to the boys for dinners and parties. There is a distinct committee which does nothing else but promote these affairs. BETTY SHANNON.

The Mother and Her Daughters

The Mother's Harvest

By SUSAN CHENERY

Author of "As the Twig Is Bent"

MY SISTER Helen and I are getting along. We can't call ourselves young any more. Her charming daughter Margery is just married. Helen has reason to feel perfectly satisfied with her work as a mother. I asked Helen if she thought that when Margery had children she would follow along her mother's lines.

"Why, no," said Helen; "I hope she'll improve on 'em. You must remember that the children rarely had occasion to know my motives. Perhaps they think every child is trained as they were. I never tried to impress the children with my personality. What I aimed at was what most mothers should desire for their children—the good old standard virtues which we all ought to have, such as truth, honor, charity, obedience, faith. Those seemed essential. There were other things I wanted for them, such as neatness, courtesy, and thrift. There were still others that I hoped they would have, but did not especially strive for: I feared to meddle too much with their individuality. Do you know I could wish now that I had aimed at more in their training? Is it not amazing that every virtue I wished them to have, they have? As I look back I can't see that I worked hard to get them, either. I seem to have simply kept those things in mind and headed the children in that direction. I wanted the children to have certain qualities, and they have them."

"One reason why your children are straightforward and sincere, Helen," I said, "is because you never 'pretended' with them. How will children learn the truth from parents whom they frequently hear telling what isn't true? How will they learn honesty when their parents tell them to deceive the conductor about their ages? Those who are taught to be polite only before company are not apt to be truly courteous. Some parents ought to train themselves instead of training their children."

"Oh, of course we must be in earnest," said Helen. "I'd like to say to every young mother: 'Begin early and keep in view the qualities you want your children to have and they will surely have them. Begin before they know that the world contains opinions different from yours. Get ahead of the enemy that sows the tares. Your tiny trees will be all right if you look after them in season. There's nothing hard in bending or straightening a tree while it is little. If you keep it in sight afterward and see that it stays straight, that is all that is necessary; it will almost certainly grow up as you started it.'"

"Keep the children in sight, indeed!" said I, who see all sorts of children in my school. "Why, Helen, then the mothers could not go off on their own good times! Children nowadays grow up as they happen to. Most mothers would not listen to you."

"Some of them might," said Helen.

The Child's Touch-Hunger

By PROFESSOR M. V. O'SHEA

PSYCHOLOGISTS say that every child has a hunger for experiences which are necessary for his development. He is hungry for sounds, sights, tastes, smells and muscular strains and stresses. These are all of fundamental importance in the building of his mind. A child would be an idiot who was not hungry for these sense experiences. The only way he can learn about objects is by investigating them with every sense that will give him any information regarding them.

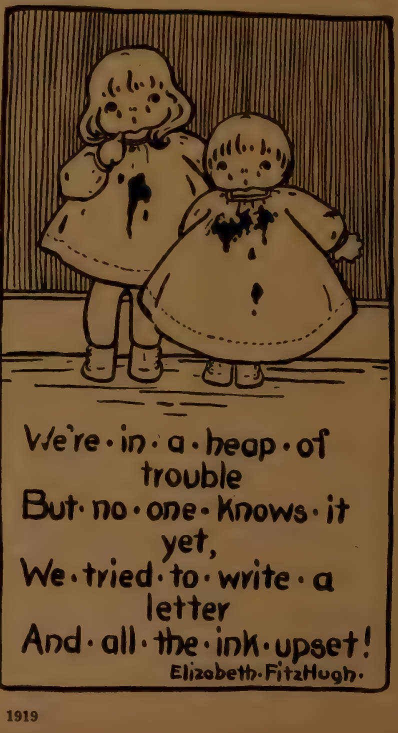
Many persons who realize that a child must see, hear, taste and smell all the objects around him in order that he may come to understand them do not appreciate that the hunger to touch objects is probably more acute than any other kind of hunger. Frequently people think a child is mischievous or wilful when he handles the things around him when he is told not to do so. How often one hears parents and policemen and guards at museums and all such folks say to children, "Don't you touch that! Can't you keep your hands off from things? I told you if you touched any of those things again I would punish you," and so on. But a child will handle objects, even in the face of certain punishment, because his hunger for touch sensations is so overpowering that he cannot restrain it.

What is to be done about it? In the first place, the child should have as great a variety of objects as possible to touch and use in his play activities. He should be permitted to explore everything around him by means of the sense of touch. If necessary, the parent or the teacher or the guardian should stand by and see that no harm is done to valuable objects or to the child himself. But if the typical child be permitted to investigate such objects as books and china until he has discovered how they feel and how they are constituted, until his touch-hunger regarding them is gratified, he will be likely to let them alone thereafter unless he needs to use them in some of his games or plays. A wise parent or teacher would provide books, dishes and the like which could be used in play, and which would make it unnecessary for the child to experiment with delicate things of real value.

Helps for the Housekeeper

SHOE buttons sewed on with dental floss do not come off.

A linoleum rug for the kitchen floor costs less than a fitted linoleum floor covering and can be taken up and washed out of doors.



We're in a heap of trouble
But no one knows it yet,
We tried to write a letter
And all the ink upset!
Elizabeth FitzHugh

First Lesson in Music

By MRS. HARRIET AYERS SEYMOUR

ANY mother who loves music and has studied enough to play fairly well can give her children their first lessons. It is indeed a great advantage to have mother teach, for music will thus become a part of the daily life of the home and prove invaluable in aiding the growth of the children in many ways, besides developing a happy family companionship.

Most children love music. But how often is the love of it killed by inadequate teaching!

How shall we begin? Mary is eight or nine years old and has asked to be taught music. You are eager to teach her. First, choose a time of day when you and she are generally at leisure and rested, and have a short lesson at that time every day. Keep to this arrangement, for it forms a habit of regular work, which is of the greatest value both musically and otherwise.

What is music? This question ought to form a part of the very first lesson, and without actually giving the answer, lead Mary to feel that music is a language, the beautiful language of sound, and that when we play we must say something that we feel.

In our new education we are going to let the child grow and develop, and not force facts into her mind, so that the main thing is not to "tell her" or "make her," but to "let her."

After a little friendly conversation, play a low, then a high note and ask Mary to tell you with closed eyes which it is, high or low. Have her sing high and low for you. Finally, give her a sheet of music paper or a music blank-book and let her write the notes you have played and she has sung.

It is better to start out at once with both treble and bass clefs, and to give the child a clear mental picture of the two staves and clefs as a unity and not separated. "Grown-ups" complain to me that they cannot easily read the two together because they have been taught first one and then the other. Have Mary write middle C on an added line placed between the two clefs and connect it with both the C which is next above in the treble clef and the C next below in the bass clef. In this way she will get an actual picture of the connection between the two clefs, and realize that the C on the added line either above the bass clef or below the treble clet is one and the same note.

Ask Mary to look at this picture intently, close her eyes, and see it with her mind's eyes. She will do it very readily. Explain to her that when she looks at anything very thoughtfully, a picture is made in her mind which she can depend upon just as surely as though she had put it away in a desk drawer. Have her visualize everything she does, a little each day.

I should say that this would easily constitute the first lesson—with perhaps a song to end with.

A Market Bag for Mother

By LAURA A. KIRKMAN

ONE day, as Marion watched her mother remove the old piece of oilcloth from the kitchen table and tack on a new piece, she had a sudden idea:

"Mother, why couldn't I make the old piece of oilcloth into a market bag for you?" she asked.

"So you could," said mother. "The smooth surface could be turned inside and the rough side, if colored, would make a good exterior."

Marion was delighted. She loved to sew and especially to help her mother, who worked so hard for her. She knew that the bag her mother was now carrying was almost worn out and that she would soon have to have another.

This is how she made the new bag: she took a piece of oilcloth one yard long and one-half yard wide and doubled it to make a square bag. She tucked in the two lower corners and stitched them, then sewed up the sides.

At the top she made a one and one-quarter inch hem on each side, through which she ran two pieces of an old shade stick. These two pieces of stick were twelve inches long each, being slightly shorter than the bag itself; for the bag was more graceful, she thought, when the upper corners were shaped in also. Two pieces of rope, each eighteen inches long, were knotted at the ends and used for handles.

HENRY J. HEINZ, BUILDER

By Frank L. Brown

> Work every day as though you would live forever;
> ive every day as though you expect to die tomorrow.”

THIS motto is one of many which hang about the walls of the administration office of the H. J. Heinz Company, Pittsburg. They are l the expressions and life convictions of Mr. Heinz d his mother. This special motto interprets the ysical and moral energy of his life, an energy ich in a lifetime of seventy-five years created a eat business and contributed enormously to the vic and spiritual values of his age.

It is said that Mr. Heinz began life with “horse nse and horse radish.” He began with more. He gan with a mother who was both just, good and se. She founded his life upon the Word of God.

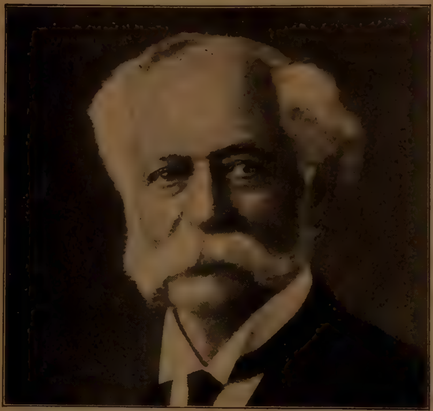
Three weeks ago I was a guest in Mr. Heinz's autiful home at Greenlawn, East Liberty, Pitts-urg. I walked with him about the premises and lled attention to the rich greens of the early ring. About the lawn were many evidences of s love for art. Every room in the home expressed at love for the beautiful in picture, ornament and coration which had been wrought into his life om the face and character of his mother.

That evening the secret of it all came out. Din-r was concluded. He brought to the table an old ible, his mother's gift to him from the years gone . It had been read through by him, and there re pencil marks along the chapters indicating the ading for each day.

And now he was reading it through again at the ening prayer time. And that was the uninter-pted custom of that home and the explanation of a gorous Christian life. Whenever Mr. Heinz went aveling he took with him a Bible. I have said that r. Heinz was a builder. I have indicated the foun-tion upon which he builded. It was a rock founda-n.

He worked wisely, but he worked hard. At six-en he began to help his father, who had a brickyard ar Pittsburg. He cultivated a four-acre garden tch so well that it was found profitable to engage a rse and sell the garden truck in the city. At seven-en the boy had sold his second season's crop for ,400. The first of the famous “57 Varieties” soon peared in the form of horseradish sauce, the product his overtime.

Step by step the business grew until a firm was or-nized at Pittsburg. Now that business employs 000 hands, covers twenty-two acres of floor space in Pittsburgh has sixteen branch factories, and 30,000 acres of land under cultivation; 40,000 people harvest the crops, and 400 traveling salesmen are developing a world business.



Mr. H. J. Heinz, died May 14, 1919

He was a builder in civic affairs. He became a director in the Union National Bank of Pittsburg and the Western Insurance Company; a member of the Pittsburg Chamber of Commerce, he was on several important Labor Commissions, director of the Tuberculosis Sanitarium and Western Pennsylvania Hospital.

He helped found the Kansas City University and had just completed a Y. M. C. A. building for the Pittsburg University. The Sarah Heinz Club near his factory buildings was a model in its service to the weekday life of his employees.

But the interest by which he will be known as long as business was his “58th Variety,” his Sunday school interest. Into this enterprise he put that business sagacity, that enthusiasm and devotion to a great ideal, which had characterized all his undertakings.

For sixty-five years he was in the Sunday school, first as a scholar in the Methodist Episcopal Sunday school at Sharpsburg, Pa., and as secretary and superintendent of this and the Methodist Protestant Sunday school there for twenty-five years.

While in Williamsport, Pa., on a business trip he discovered that the Pennsylvania State Sunday School Association was in session. He attended some of the gatherings and there was discovered by Hon. John Wanamaker, who was presiding. Mr. Heinz, unknown, arose and pledged $100 toward the budget if the Association were put upon a strong business basis. Then and there began a relationship with Mr. Wanamaker in the conduct of the work of the Pennsylvania Sunday School Association which terminated only with Mr. Heinz's death.

He also took a deep interest in the work of the Allegheny County Sunday School Association, which he placed upon a substantial business foundation.

It was inevitable that Mr. Heinz, as a builder of life, should broaden his interest to the work of the International Sunday School Association, in which he was at various times an executive member, a trustee and, at his death, the president.

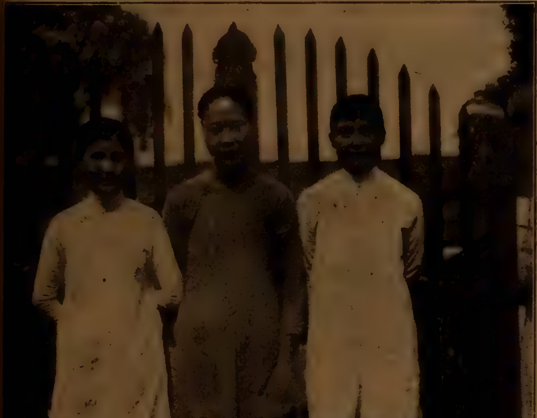
But his greatest investment of time and possibly his thought was in the work of the World Sunday School Association. He was world-wide in his vision, sympathies and work. He was a member . the World's Executive Committee, for years the chairman of that committee, which plans for 35,000,000 members since 1913. He was active in the plans for the Rome, Washington and Zurich World Conventions, and was at the time of his death chairman of the Program Committee for the Tokio Convention in October, 1920. Indeed, that convention and the work of the Association was last in his thought and upon his lips.

Just five years ago Mr. Heinz made a trip around the world to develop the Sunday school idea. He spent three months of this time in Japan, China and Korea. The fact that he, as a business man, believed so mightily in the Sunday school, profoundly impressed Japanese statesmen and leaders, including such men as Count Okuma and Barons Shibusawa and Sakatani.

One of Mr. Heinz's mottoes was “Do the best you can where you are with what you have today.”

[Mr. Heirz, although busy as few men were, consented to serve as one of the judges of the Third Christian Herald Picture Study, the results of which were announced last week.]

“THREE LITTLE MAIDS FROM SCHOOL”



hree girls attending the Methodist school in Sibu. Each had been cruelly abused or driven from home when taken by the missionaries “THREE little maids from school are we!” And you never in the world could guess where that school is, so we will tell you that it is near the town of Sibu, on the Rejang River, in the State of Sarawak, Northwest Borneo. If you know any more than you did before, then you've studied Malaysian geography.

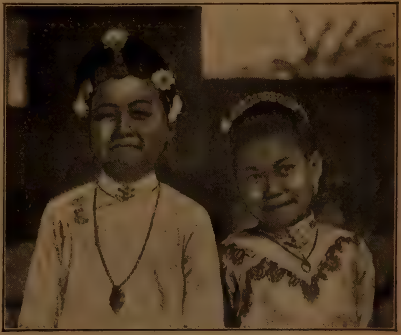
Each of these girls had been cruelly abused or driven from home, when the Rev. James M. Hoover found them.

Their costume somewhat resembles that of the lately popular American farmerette, and like the farmerette, they give part of their time to gardening. They are forgetting recent beatings and maltreatment in the fascinating occupation of learning to recognize curious black letters on the pages of a book—something which they had never before encountered.

◆

THE Methodist Episcopal church has 2,833 pupils in day schools, and 202 in boarding-schools in Singapore, and the work is carried on in seven different languages. In 1916 three out of the four Juniors and all three Seniors taking the Cambridge examinations at the Short Street School, passed creditably.



Two Chinese girls in Short Street School, Singapore; dressed up for their picture

Two Gay Young Belles of Singapore

ALL dressed up—and nowhere to go! So these two Singapore girls were glad to pose for the photographer. The one with the wreath of roses in her smooth, black hair has reason to look superior, for her head-dress has a unique feature. The rose in the middle of her forehead stands up on a spring, and bobs coquetishly up and down with every movement of her head. Her small sister's crown is neat, but not gaudy, and both girls are graced with elaborate earrings. Chinese jackets of silk, and comfortable little trousers to match, complete the costume.

A circle drawn in Malaysia, with Singapore as its center, and a radius of 1200 miles, would contain 60,000,000 people. Within this radius there is at present not a single school of college grade. The people are eager for such an institution, and a number of wealthy Chinese men have already given large sums for that purpose.

INDIA'S FAMINE SUFFERERS FED

INDIA is hungry, nearly two-thirds of it, and will be until September. All winter India has been both hungry and hopeless, except where relief by Government or Christian enterprise has pushed back the crowding pall of slow arriving death and given life new opportunity. June is coming and maybe rain. Famished, parched and starving India is hoping faintly that God or Allah, as the prayer may be, will send the life-giving showers, that men may plant and have faith. But crops must grow, and between seed time and harvest the sower may meet the final reaper unless we, who love Christ and mankind, keep the stream of money flowing toward the Punjab. Already $50,000 has gone for us to help balk Famine's terror. The gifts herewith acknowledged have all been sent on their way to the committee in Bombay, which is making every dollar do the work of two. A new letter from India will appear next week.

Gifts to Feed India's Starving

Mr & Mrs J Jones	$5.00
Mrs B W Crum	5.00
Jane Granner	5.00
Mrs C B Dorr	5.00
H J Hansen	5.00
Mrs S E Walken	1.00
Mrs Elizabeth Strickland	1.00
Mrs F Merritt	1.00
A Little Girl, Pocapson, Pa	1.00
Mrs M Christin	1.00
Mrs C J Waddell	1.00
Ida Young	1.00
A Friend, Marblehead, Mass	1.00
John E Erwan	1.00
Mrs A G Smith	1.00
Miss Emma Carey	1.00
Mrs W B Bois	1.00
Mrs L K Brooks	1.00
J D Washburn	1.00
Mrs J D Washburn	1.00
Mrs C W Forster	1.00
Mrs Hano White	1.00
Mrs Paul Monk	1.00
Mr W Hewton	1.00
Mrs Conklin	1.00
Mrs L M Teft	1.00
Mrs Ella Borown	1.00
Mr Clark	1.00
H Chaply	1.00
Mrs John X Proffetts	1.00
S E A Mass	1.00
Mrs F A Hicks	1.00
Mrs P Tully	1.00
A Friend, Spencer, Ind.	1.00
Miss Flora B Page	1.00
W W Kimmons	1.00
Mrs Hambridge	1.00
Ruby Moede	1.00
Mrs Carl Thomaier	1.00
A Friend, Chenango Forks, N. Y.	1.00
Mrs F Merritt	1.00
Mrs H E Click	1.00
Anna L Baker	1.00
Margaret Wallace	1.00
Thos L Johnson	1.00
Miss E R Sheldon	1.00
Mrs Geo B Shorrat	1.00
Mrs C W W Vest, Glever Vt.	1.00
J F Fisher	1.00
Mrs S B Bury	1.00
J Albert Raiser	1.00
J B Armistead	1.00
I M Keignin	1.00
E C M, Freeport, Ill	1.00
Mrs F Francis	1.00
M Nugersma	1.00
Mrs C L McDesmed	1.00
May F Erving	1.00
Miss Annetra Fehler	1.00
Rose Lesh	1.00
Ida F Martin	1.00
Chas H Page	1.00
A Patchogue friend	1.00
A Friend, Freehold, N J	1.00
S F Melville	1.00
Julie McClure	1.00
Widow's Mite	1.00
Sara B Lancomer	1.00
Mrs Elizabeth Strickland	1.00
Mrs A R Haines	1.00
Mrs W Hicks	1.00
R M Hinnson	1.00
Effie M Lason	1.00
Mrs A F Wright	1.00
A Friend, Salem, Ohio.	1.00
Mayme Melville	1.00
Mrs Margaret Kyler	1.00
Mrs B R Croft	1.00
Alice C Nagle	1.00
I H N, Phila., Pa	1.00
Alvenda H Nicholas	1.00
Margaret Little	1.00
Miss A Mona McDonald	1.00
W E S, Madison Co	1.00
S M Casoes	1.00
M Weeks	1.00
Miss M Cornell	1.00
E W Dinsmore	1.00
Caroline Hubert	1.00
C Salisbury	1.00
Mrs Crum	1.00
C T Morgan	1.00
——, Brooklyn, N. Y.	1.00
Mrs L B Knox	1.00
Rovilla M Van Slyke	1.00
Elsie Spach	1.00
——, Herman	1.00
Mrs H Vial	1.00
Aug Larsen	1.00
Mrs A B Boyd	1.00
Mrs N Middlekoop	1.00
Mrs J W Bucks	1.00
Dr H Balm	1.00
Mrs M B Leach	1.00
——, Arlington Heights, Ill	1.00
Mrs Mattie Mace	1.00
Miss Peny See Bell	1.00
Mrs W G Pringle	1.00
Mrs G C Warren	1.00
M E West	1.00
Mrs Walter Barnes	1.00
Mrs M B McCullock	1.00
Mrs A E Prince	1.00
Rev Kenneth MacLeod.	1.00
——, Patchogue, N. Y.	1.00
Mrs J E Ort	1.00
O Dahl	1.00
E Weymouth	1.00
M E Cafferty	1.00
Ella L Frasier	1.00
Robert Kemp	1.00
J K K, Allentown, Pa.	1.00
M L Domey	1.00
A Friend, New London, Conn	1.00
Mrs Eliza A White	1.00
Mrs Carrie A Bedinger.	1.00
M Veggeberg	1.00
R M Hooker	1.00
Mrs Ella Bingner	1.00

Mrs Rued	$1.00
Mrs S V Mitchell	1.00
Miss Alice J Riley	1.00
A T Hoffman	1.00
Mary P Whitwell	1.00
Mrs H D Blum	1.00
E Duskins	1.00
Mrs Mary D Bagley	1.00
Mrs A R Starks	1.00
L M Deinsmore	1.00
Mrs Mary K Baker	1.00
Mrs H McManaman.	1.00
Subscriber, Coffeyville, Kans	1.00
Mrs Harry L Nicholis	1.00
Salvine S Collins	1.00
John P Hartzernh	1.00
Crist Peterson	1.00
Mrs N H Gossard	1.00
Mrs C N Sloan	1.00
Miss L J Bergstrom.	1.00
Mrs M Perry	1.00
Miss Jennie Mumford	1.00
Mrs C D Youngman	1.00
T A Brown	1.00
A Friend, Charlotte, N C	1.00
W B Eastman	1.00
Mrs Frank Dunn	1.00
J M Rogers	1.00
J E Hawk	1.00
Mrs E E Erickson	$1.00
Mrs E F Spear	1.00
Mrs E F Spear	1.00
Mrs R R McCall	1.00
Elizabeth S Hill	1.00
R N Talmage	1.00
——, Ossining, N Y	1.00
Addie Belden	1.00
E Servil	1.00
Lydia Cunningham	1.00
Anna Smith	1.00
Miss Emily Durick	1.00
Perry Brown	1.00
Mrs Wm Ogton	1.00
——, Petersburg, Va	1.00
E Lowe	1.00
Lung Howe	1.00
Mary E Nevins	1.00
Mrs F B Hanford	1.00
Mrs M A Webb	1.00
A S Adams	1.00
A Friend, Brattleboro, Vt	1.00
Mrs H T Osborn	1.00
Mrs Sowdy	.50
Mrs Hall	.50
Mrs Shelly	.50
Mrs Sprague	.50
Mr Borch	.50
Mr Earl, Hd Co	.50
Mrs C E Taylor	.50
Mrs Clagst	.50
Mr Stedman	.50
Mrs Williams	.50
Mr Benz	.50
Mrs Cleo Clark	.50
Mrs Lamb	.50
Mrs Stradling	.50
J H Wallace, Jr	.50
Miss Ella F Woodroff	.50
Mrs Isaac Wolfe	.50
A Friend, Phila, Pa	.50
Mrs Nellie K Moore	.50
Mrs R V Moseley	.50
Master John E Boyd	.25
Mrs C Cadwallader	.25
Mrs Sadie Welsh	.25
Mrs E Billings	.25
Mrs Ruce	.25
Mrs S Casety	.25
Mrs Collins	.25
A Friend	.25
Mrs Bievell	.25
Mrs J E Casety	.25
Mrs Hylard	.25
Mrs Billings	.25
O K Willcox	22.50
A Reader, Oakland, Cal	75.00
A Friend, Winfield, Kans	1.25
Virgil Bourquin	18.00
O G Young	12.00
Isabel J Burke	40.00
A E & N M Harbour	7.00
Danish Bapt. Church, Hutchinson, Minn	40.00
Friends, LuVerne, Iowa	6.50
Three Friends, Garvin, Minn	6.00
M A M, Michigan	3.05
West Holland M E Churches	18.00
Mrs Mary E Larzelere	4.00
Mary Aldred & Niece	7.00

Courtesy World Outlook

Wards of the State in a famine poorhouse in India

Jane R Williams	$4.00
Mrs Susie Briggs	4.00
Mr & Mrs H J Miller	5.25
Mrs Effie VonThurn	7.50
Miss Anna & Aug W Peterson	7.00
W E S, Sixteen Island Lake, Quebec, Can	6.00
J M Bragg	6.00
Lawrence & Mary E Smith	13.00
Mrs Z Y Jenkins & Elsie	8.00
Mary E Mclonkey	2.09
Mrs Nellie P Meyer	3.50
Mr & Mrs C M Moody and Mrs W B Sims	4.00
By the Willing Workers in the Pattic C, Stockdale School	5.50
Carol Lee Van Nuys	12.50
Friends, Muscatine	12.00
W G Root & Family	6.25
Mrs Herman	7.00
Miss Mary Knight Perry	13.38
Olof Olson	7.00
Miss Nellie M Garland.	6.00
Mrs Eide and Mrs Hugh Currie	6.00
V A Lipscomb	14.00
Miss Emma Meeker	4.00
Ladies Society of the Reformed Church, Spring Creek, Minn	15.25
M B Hutchinson	9.00
Mrs Jane Roberts	4.00
Alice Jaquet Hauck	30.00
Mrs Isabella Porter	35.00
Harry Humason	40.00
Mrs Jennie H McCulloh	10.10
Mrs Mary Miller	4.00
R E Hopkins	6.26
Mrs Ottic S Pauls	6.00
Helen Appleby	8.00
Annie Harris	7.00
Mrs & J C DuMont	7.00
Mrs M J VanTassell	22.00
Mrs Knit Larsen	6.00
Mrs J A James	5.23
Kittie L Garritsen	7.00
Miss Belle E Morris	4.00
Jos H Skillman	125.00
B F Kinsley	3.50
Mrs Anna M Clark	5.10
Nellie Sluyter	7.50
Golden Rule Class of the Waynesville Baptist Chs	7.00
Mr & Mrs Charles Rath	8.00
Alice L Cooper	7.00
Lulu J Doffan	12.00
Ira L Dickerson	21.15
Mrs Ira Howard	3.75
Celia J Willey	4.00
Mrs H R Widdowson	4.00
Minnie & Steve Hawkins	4.00
Mrs A C Grau	4.00
Mary E Parmelee	4.00
Mrs J Shellenberger	23.00
A C Buthler	1.98
David Junk	80.00
Mr & Mrs C B Judson	190.88
Jesse Sanderson	37.00
Miss L Mann	6.00

O O Bergh	$16.00
Mrs Frank Deudel	8.00
The Mogk Family	17.00
George W Brock	12.50
Mary M Williams	7.00
E Handfield	9.00
Dr F E Hardy	12.00
W L Fisher	6.00
Cora A Shoemaker	8.00
Laura McIntosh	7.00
Hans Black	11.00
C S W Merced, Cal	4.15
Mrs R L F Provine	4.00
George Pinchbeck	4.00
Dusk Clark	4.00
Mrs C F Shumacker	3.50
Woman's Aid Society, of Walmit St. Baptist Ch	50.00
Margaretha Srottrup	7.00
Mrs Forrest	4.00
Friends, Belle Plaine, Minn	7.50
Grace W Burleigh	11.00
Mrs Cora Clayton	7.00
Miss Mary P Hilton	12.00
Mr & Mrs J W Henderson	7.50
Mary Oneill	6.00
Mrs Piety A Ball & Friends	8.50
Mrs Robert H Geisert	12.00
Mrs J Olmstead	1.03
Mary, Wm. & Alma Craig	11.00
J O Gaston	6.00
Friend, Eagle, Mich	4.00
A Brown	4.00
Mrs C Barney	3.65
F J Hollinbeck	4.00
A Friend, Monson, Mass	.50
J C & Hattie Michener.	30.00
E S Flitcher	7.00
Jacob Colter	200.00
Margaret Betzemann	25.00
Henry T Wittlig	25.00
Mrs S W Elliott	25.00
J W Phillipie	25.00
C S Robb	25.00
J H Mawhinney	25.00
B. J. Costain	25.00
F M Smith	25.00
M P Coe	25.00
E W Farnham	25.00
St. Johns Luthern C E Society	25.00
Wm Beutman	25.00
Margaret A Tower	25.00
N E Schnitger	25.00
E B Judson	25.00
From Friends, Goodland, Ind	25.00
Mr & Mrs S Silburn	25.00
Mrs Lyman Stacy	25.00
Henry Knoch	25.00
Mildmay Presbyterian Ch	25.00
Ruth C Switzer	25.00
Edith Hall	25.00
"My Kiddies", Canbridge, N Y	25.00
Mr & Mrs McDonald	25.00
Mrs Ellen C Millen	25.00
Henry Hoewing	25.00

B S Crane	$50.00
Wild Flower Ladies Aid, Alberta, Can	25.00
Olive Black Wheeland	50.00
J W Heavner	50.00
Charles H Hamberg	50.00
J C Willis	50.00
A. A. Anderson	50.00
Delia T Marden	100.00
Friends, Camden, Ohio	100.00
C E Williamson	50.00
——, Lake Bluff, Ill	50.00
Mrs Annie M Smith	50.00
Mrs T A Alers	50.00
Oliver Hemstreet	50.00
Helen Debbiner	50.00
Nellie Mackey	50.00
Josephine S Battles	50.00
Alberta Gitchel	50.00
G L Cook	50.00
Miss Olive Hunting	50.00
J Harris Field	50.00
E P Frisbee	50.00
Mrs M Ticklenberg	50.00
Geo W Lenhart	100.00
F Mehring	200.00
In Memory of a soldier boy, Ephraim Gilmore Love, Ark., city Arkansas	200.00
Mrs Sabra C Cason	200.00
Mr & Mrs E S Nichols.	25.00
Frank L Sutherland	25.00
——, Ramson, Pa	25.00
Mrs Emily Banks	25.00
F B Gee	25.00
Jacob Reentsma	25.00
H P Farr	25.00
Jacob Winne	25.00
Mr & Mrs G F Guy	25.00
A Friend, Ballstom Spa, New York	25.00
Mrs Henry	25.00
Mr & Mrs Culp	25.00
Mr & Mrs B T Hall	25.00
Emma J Walburg	25.00
Bert Benton	25.00
Mrs L C Weaver	25.00
H C Pulsifer	25.00
Lillian A. Tischendorf	25.00
Mrs O A Johnson	25.00
F G Feaster	25.00
Mrs Ethel Wortman	25.00
Mr & Mrs Horace Stafford	25.00
Mr & Mrs J S Burris	15.00
Mrs C F Young	15.00
Eleanor M Owen	15.00
L E Modres	15.00
Susan Shrom	15.00
J W Wright	15.00
A A & Anna M Crosiar.	15.00
Miss Mabel E Briggs	15.00
Amanda J Smith	15.00
F H Jenkins	15.00
Mrs Lottie Eldredge	15.00
Miss E A Aldren	15.00
Mr & Mrs Roy E Hanins	15.00
A C Jones	15.00
Mrs A N Randall	15.00
Mrs A H Carey	15.00
G C Oscar	20.00
Mrs Chas M Gilmore	20.00
Laura Loulds Dugan & Children	20.00
Misses A J Steele	20.00
A M Earle	20.00
R P Morse	20.00
Mrs R D Naff	20.00
Rev W W Given	20.00
Mrs C Oostburg	20.00
Mrs E N Tonsly	20.00
L Breuzier	20.00
Mrs Mary Shiply	20.00
James Edge	20.00
Willard Voorheer	20.00
Miss Kate Laughead	20.00
G A Moore	20.00
James Hopfinger	20.00
Mr & Mrs Thos Bauman	20.00
M S Watkins	10.00
Mrs Mary Henrleys	10.00
Mrs Roy N Vance	10.00
A B Doughty	10.00
Mr & Mrs Frank Cordry	10.00
J J Langenes	10.00
Mary E Adams	10.00
S M Moharg	10.00
Mrs J C Studivant	10.00
Mrs J O Wallem	10.00
E C Boehn	10.00
Walter O Shuts	10.00

Mrs Ellen M Winship	$
Mrs C E Busse
Mr Gilman
C W Willingham
James R Walton	1
T G Ellis	1
Mr & Mrs Jas E De Groot	1
V E Manget	1
Maud E Kennedy	1
Peter Fengenburg	1
Mrs Levina Tipton	1
Herman Carlson	1
Mrs A C Winans	1
H L Foster	1
Mrs Mary Asher	1
Mr & Mrs C F Munger	1
Mrs H B Eley	1
Mr & Mrs L A Staley	1
Hans Black	1
Ransom Kellogg	1
Mrs Margaret H. Pikman	1
Mrs F J Kelkhofer	1
Florence M Sabold	1
E Carrie Sabold	1
L C Bird	1
Miss C J Southwell	1
Adelbert Hill	1
L A Tablen	1
Mrs A K Robison	1
"From a friend in Canada"	1
E O Pates	1
Mrs Thows Booth	1
Mrs A Strackham	10
Mrs Wm Hastings	10
John F Eesley	10
E S Rockwell	10
Mr & Mrs W S Lee	10
Mrs Mary A Clark	10
Albert Fagerholt	10
Hulda Weintz	10
Mr & Mrs O A Tate	10
Mr & Mrs Graper	10
Mrs J A Hodge	10
W T Russell	10.
Jos Spring	10.
Mrs B F Miller	10.
Emma Boyd	10.
Mrs H J Gray	10.
Bella Chrisbolm	10.
Mrs J Stark	10.
Mrs Wm H Duncan	10.
Mrs Anna Fulch	10.
Mrs C B Merrihew	10.
A G Deutsch	10.
M A Carter	10.
Mary E Haws, R. N.	10.
Mrs Alice A Bingham	10.
W A Conrad	10.
J L Morgan	10.
Miss Callie Beaty	10.
Mrs John H Warr	10.
Mr & Mrs Richard Demarest	10.
Mary L Travis	10.
Martin Harper	10.
Mrs Eva Sartoonus	10.
Mrs G E Dervey	10.0
Sarah F Kimball	10.0
Mrs J E Westerland	10.0
Mr & Mrs G W Bass	10.0
S S Suffron	10.0
H B Sowell and Mother	10.0
Mrs R B Cressman	10.0
L D Nesbit	10.0
A Friend, Blutenville	10.0
A R Watkins	10.0
Mr & Mrs Albrink	10.0
Mr & Mrs W L Sewall.	10.0
Mrs S N Morris	10.0
Mrs E Titherington	10.0
Henry Wilkin	10.0
W B Hedge	10.0
E Tapps	10.0
A Friend of the needy, Villica	10.0
Jessie F Clark	10.0
Mrs M T Gage	10.0
Mr & Mrs E H Hess	10.0
Mrs Mary E Laird	10.0
Mrs R B McLeod	10.0
C M Steefvater	10.0
Mrs J H Fulcher	10.0
Leonard Bros.	10.0
Christine Holmes	10.00
Mrs Mary Miller	10.00
Mrs M D Johnson	10.00
C M Roberts	10.00
Emma C Sonders	10.00
Matilda B Eno	10.00
Clara Anderson	15.00
Mrs Mary B Craig	15.00
E R Linerode	15.00
Miss Eva Donald	15.00
Alice & Chas Babcock	15.00
F W, Jersey City	15.00
Member of the St. John's Home	15.00
Rachel Robinson	15.00
Lena M Hibbard	15.00
Mrs Jane A Krause	15.00
Beon Maker	15.00
E B Bauman	15.00
Mary H Dunlap	15.00
Adelaide W Prentice	20.00
G H Norwood	20.00
——, Birmingham	20.00
Harry Osborn	20.00
David Smith	20.00
E F Collins	20.00
Mrs Lydia E Herr	20.00
Sallie Ruleman	20.00
M H Coons	20.00
A J May	20.00
Mrs R H Shively	20.00
Mr & Mrs Z A Wonnacott	20.00
R L Perry	20.00
Mr & Mrs G L Wild	20.00
Mr & Mrs Oscar E Acken	20.00
Mrs J A Herring	20.00
Mrs Lena M Forster	20.00
W B Vandeventer	20.00
Mrs J D Bell	20.00
Mrs Jos Davidson	20.00
Mrs C A Albert	20.00
M Emma Adair	20.00
Jas W Winters & Friends	20.00

ennie Wiggers	$20.00
Mrs Walter Kikfer	20.00
e E Mark	20.00
Mrs W D Benet	20.00
Spear	20.00
& Mrs Chas F ther	10.00
Brownstown, Ind.	10.00
ice Kirsch	10.00
Slaghb & Family	10.00
Mrs F R Pooley	10.00
, A Monroe	10.00
Jennie P McClanan	10.00
theans, Zion Evanical S S, Cedar lls, Iowa	10.00
E CoLain	10.00
Howell, Michigan	10.00
nas Blake	10.00
ne Robinson	10.00
Barnes & Wife	10.00
hanhan	10.00
Holdredge	10.00
F Klink	10.00
L A Nichlas	10.00
an Thayor	10.00
M E Simpson	10.00
Switzer	10.00
Geo Wilson	10.00
Walter Pennis	10.00
& John G Moffat	10.00
Nance	10.00
Edwin Olson	10.00
Mrs W E Dunn	10.00
sta S Wood	10.00
L Sharrow	10.00
s E Picke	10.00
Ruff	10.00
Mrs C F Lewis	10.00
Martha Borland	10.00
garet E Rope	10.00
Clark	10.00
E Anna Wilkins	10.00
Mrs C H Clinger	10.00
Smith	10.00
App	10.00
F, Waterbury, Vt.	10.00
& Mrs Clemm Lomas	10.00
& Mrs John Lentz	10.00
Peter Decker	10.00
Price	10.00
Julia Augustine	10.00
Thompson	10.00
J L Base	10.00
y L Rice	10.00
Griffin	10.00
a B Eilmer	10.00
Julia B Powers	10.00
ward M Pennington	10.00
rge Cooper	10.00
Ruth Sagebeil	10.00
Bessie E Seabrook	10.00
Jenkins	10.00
Chas Birch	10.00
Ricie Hartman	10.00
Delaplain	10.00
Bettys	10.00
s A F McArthur	10.00
Friend, Lebanon, Delaware	10.00
s L J Monison	10.00
na L Weeks	10.00
& Mrs F W McClung	10.00
se Haines	10.00
rriet Chipmass	10.00
H Goldsmith	10.00
na Brownell	10.00
o A Matz	10.00
ss Mabel L Josselyn	10.00
Laws	10.00
dford Glascock	10.00
H Wheaton	10.00
nile Ketteman	10.00
Sprague	10.00
ith P Flanders	10.00
s W D Luther	10.00
Greenmyer	10.00
s W W Linfoot	10.00
& Mrs A M Clark	10.10
hn & Mabel Powell	10.00
J Manandise	10.00
J Starwalt	10.00
Allen	10.00
rs Maggie Orebaugh	10.00
r & Mrs S E Olcott	10.00
r & Mrs J A Wilson	10.00
C Branch	10.00
H Depperman	10.00
C Hartog	10.00
gh A McQuiston	10.00
rs Jacob Alpaugh	10.00
lia Bousenecker	10.00
hn Storer	10.00
ary E Carley	10.00
A Ferner	10.00
rs Mary Hunt	10.00
rs Anna E Stratton	10.00
r & Mrs Wilbur A Christy	10.00
rs A S White	10.00
rs Mary A Moore	10.00
L Raymond	10.00
rs J H Clarke & D W Renner	10.00
rs Pauline V Partin	10.00
r & Mrs G L Crymes	10.00
iss Flora E Baldwin	10.00
r & Mrs Hattie M White	10.00
rs Sarah Rea	10.00
m Richter	10.00
nna E Carlson	10.00
rs Josephine Sailer	10.00
r & Mrs F D Tremaine	10.00
rs Mary Dipman	10.00
r & Mrs Durand	10.00
W Barney	10.00
rs T A Allers	10.00
r & Mrs Lee L Smith	10.00
r & Mrs John Schuyler	10.00
A Marsh	10.00
rs R J Truax	10.00
rs C A Wigal	10.00
rs Mary Van Antwerp	10.00
le Fingerson	10.00
r & Mrs R Newhouse	10.00
I Strom	10.00
r & Mrs A M Davis	10.00
rs James T Hallock	10.00
M L, Stebensville, Ohio	10.00
alph E Best	10.00

Grain for famine relief in the courtyard of a village market

Jerusha B Benn	$10.00
Miss Ora Gates	10.00
Amelia Smith	10.00
Mrs James Brodie	10.00
Mrs Ida Swinn	10.00
George Borwood	10.00
O F Goodwin	10.00
Mrs M C Heim	10.00
Mrs L A James	10.00
Mrs Mary F McQuire	10.00
Mrs E T Collins	10.00
Anna A Main	10.00
Mrs L P Teel	1.00
Miss Frances C Staples	1.00
From a Christian Herald Reader	1.00
Mrs T H Canbourn	1.00
Mrs A J Sturtenant	1.00
Mrs B Field	1.00
Mrs Verna Falker	1.00
From a Friend, Synden, Wash	1.00
E W English	1.00
Mrs F H Wright	1.00
A L Conway	1.00
Mrs G England	1.00
Mrs J T Stewart	1.00
Mrs H M Leighty	1.00
Mrs C M Sooney	1.00
Julia S Gibbs	1.00
Kate Carron	1.00
Edith N Finster	1.00
Mrs John Cate	1.00
Mrs L Callicote	1.00
The Longs	1.00
Mrs N S Taylor	1.00
Roy L Netcott	1.00
Miss Lu Bird Hendell	1.00
——, Saint Paul, Texas	1.00
J W Hund,	1.00
Thomas H G Burke	1.00
Anna Smith	1.00
Mrs F J Baker	1.00
Miss Carrie Schmidt	1.00
A Friend, Independence, Iowa	1.00
La Mc	1.00
Mrs M Young	1.00
Mrs P G Brand	1.00
Emma A Gile	1.00
Kate A Rankin	1.00
May Willis	1.00
Mrs H House	1.00
A Friend, Columbia, Tenn	1.00
Mrs Effie Bennett	1.00
Mrs L H Watts	1.00
Anne Bates	1.00
Mrs D Livingston	1.00
G A Woodruff	1.00
Rev. James Robinson	1.00
Mrs J L McNair	1.00
——, Los Angeles, Cal.	1.00
Mrs G G Clark	1.00
Miss A Thatcher	1.00
Miss Nellie K Moore	1.00
Mrs L A Riches	1.00
E R Ditterer	1.00
Farmer's daughter	1.00
Yours in Christ, Vaiden, Miss	1.00
P R Barger	1.00
Mrs Hedda Worcester	1.00
Mrs Mary Martin	1.00
Mrs Ira Gaveliner	1.00
Mary Williams	1.00
Mrs John Sindertron	1.00
M M True	1.00
A Friend, Bernie, Mo	1.00
Margaret Bowen	1.00
A Friend, Orangeville, Ill	1.00
Thelma F McKitrick	1.00
Mrs A J Cheathan	1.00
J M Beadles	1.00
A E White	1.00
Mrs A B Hanor	1.00
Mrs J Boulden	1.00
A T Swarner	1.00
Mrs L A O Palisades	1.00
Mrs Annie Cooper	1.00
Mrs Dora Bushman	30.00
Mrs J W Wright	4.50
A Reader, Galena, Ill	15.50
Mrs Mable Sipp	5.25

Mrs Rilla Wrugh	$11.00
Mrs H R Chapman and Anna	7.00
A Friend, Washington C H, Ohio	12.00
M O Ulstead	50.85
D J Keen	6.00
Mrs D A MacDougall	4.00
In the Master's Name, Palmyra, Pa	35.00
Adah Evans Coleman	37.00
Mr and Mrs Rohde	14.00
J L Blair	35.00
J M Van Landingham	5.60
Geo Bassingthwaite	3.33
Bessie C Phaney	.34
H S Koen	7.50
Spencer E Stearns	4.00
Mrs S McCurdy	4.00
Mrs Mary E Foster	2.15
Mr A T, R T & Mrs P S Gronna	13.00
Mr & Mrs Sather, Alma & Carl	7.00
Miss M A Baker	22.25
Sunday School of Braman Corners Baptist Ch	4.58
Elsie H Jenkins	8.00
Mrs Sarah J Johnson	4.00
Sarah C Clark	3.50
P L K & H L K	12.00
Mrs A E & Miss L R Cooper	7.00
——, Maysville	6.00
Miss A E Lappen	6.00
Mr & Mrs Fred T Porter	7.00
J L Delany	6.00
Miss Amelia Hosteller	4.00
Mrs J M Brown	6.00
The Baptist Sunday School, Oxford, Mich	10.04
Mrs C C Sasscer	3.50
Wm J Hickok	4.25
Mr Wm Maltas	13.00
Mr & Mrs T N Reynolds	6.00
Mrs C M & Miss Helen Rosworth	35.62
A Friend of India	220.00
S M Blake	40.00
Marian Higgins	4.00
Mrs A K Lively	2.60
Mrs W M Lintz	4.00
Mrs Sarah L Speny	8.00
Mrs M E B Wright	4.00
Mrs G T Anderson	22.00
A H Blacher	3.15
Mary E Ball	8.00
A Friend, Cedarville, N J	4.00
G O Mona	24.60
Mrs J Hanson	6.50
Mrs L M LaGrange	8.00
Marie Wokoun	12.00
Mrs H Evers	.99
Mrs Geo W Sowers	4.00
Mrs Clia Meyers	6.00
Mr Lyon & family	7.00
Sophia Shellum	7.00
Mr & Mrs J H Faud	7.50
Wm Landsdown	10.15
L Hilt	6.00
W T Crounston	9.00
L M Jones	2.12
Mrs Emma Conover	2.25
Misses Van Horn	4.00
Frank E Cooper	6.00
Mrs Lucinda Belzer	6.00
H J Newman	6.00
Mrs J Cady	7.00
H M Clark	8.00
Mrs M E & Nellie Cheeseman	8.00
Mrs Laura Anderson	8.00
Mrs Harriet A Pease	9.50
O T Storaasli	35.00
Eliza Brener	40.00
J T Molloy	27.00
George W Armstrong	12.50
Abner Towne	3.50
Minnie G Tiffany	2.20
Miss Anna L Haud	.15
Helen Middleton	4.00
Mrs H J Stiles	4.00
Mrs Peter Nederhood	.10
Mrs D M Brillhart	9.00
J W Smoots	18.00

The May Bakery	$8.00
Mrs Samuel Pollock	6.00
W I Teeds	32.50
Helen Ashmore	2.95
Miss E Harrison	4.00
Chas E Suit	6.21
Sallie B Crook	2.16
A H Hovda	7.00
John & Rose Herget	14.50
E A Williams	4.75
Sadie R Wise	4.00
Mrs P Murchie	8.00
E & H. Aid Society, Coudersport, Pa	7.00
Mrs A A Morton	12.50
Mrs Lydia Houghton	1.25
Miss Betty Jones	7.00
Bieder families	11.00
Mrs D E White	.50
Mrs S E Courtright	.50
E Everding	.50
A Friend, Kahoka, Mo	.50
A Reader, St. Martin, Md.	.25
Wallace Griggs	10.00
Martha Will	10.00
Milo Fidler	10.00
C H Ball	10.00
A Salat	10.00
Mrs J H Pratt	10.00
Miss Mary J Aldrich	10.00
Josephine H Benedict	10.00
Mrs J Den Heider	10.00
Mrs M Crosttee	10.00
Mr & Mrs J A Patterson	10.00
A Friend in Conn	10.00
Reid Love	10.00
H A A Guiling, Rev	10.00
J C Icenogle	10.00
Helen Bliss	10.00
Mary Mason	10.00
A Friend, Detroit, Mich.	10.00
V E Mauget	10.00
George M Bram	10.00
Mrs W H Ward	10.00
A C Tilby	10.00
Mrs B W Dodds	10.00
Dale Feln	10.00
J E Rejerson	10.00
Charles A Peck	10.00
Mr & Mrs John Cook	10.00
A B Church	10.00
C E Warney	10.00
O Ensberg	10.00
Mrs L C Ericson	10.00
Mrs Worten Moore	10.00
Elsie E Ross	10.00
Daisy D Cook	10.00
The Jolly Club, Wardver, B. C., Canada	10.00
Mrs L R Hannah	10.00
Mrs N T Adams	10.00
C A Hagaman	10.00
H N Karickhoff	10.00
Mrs E Lindgreen	10.00
Mrs Hattie Cheeseborough	10.00
Mrs Alex A Kelso	10.00
Miss S C Adamson	10.00
F W Owen	10.00
Mrs Irene E Montgomery	10.00
Mrs E J Briggs	10.00
P J Stevens	10.00
Mrs M J Lewis	10.00
Mabel J Spencer	10.00
Miss F E Taylor	10.00
Mrs W O Lewis	10.00
Mrs Anna Bennett	10.00
Oscar Hanson	10.00
Mrs D Hooi	10.00
Mrs M E Getzendaner	10.00
Mr Neal Hoelsstra	10.00
H G Yost	10.00
Friend, Switz City, Ind.	10.00
A C Smith	10.00
Kitty C Ellefsen	10.00
C E W Huffman	10.00
Henry Eyes	5.00
Mr & Mrs Ed Batdorf	5.00
C S Waggoner	5.00
Mrs I J Newemer	5.00
Mrs S Hare	5.00
Mrs Ira S Kennedy	5.00
Mrs B A Peirse	5.00

Mrs A H Bartlett	$5.00
Mrs Arthur C Norton	5.00
W R Caplinger	5.00
Mrs R A Henricks	5.00
Mrs L J Trace	5.00
J R McDonald	5.00
N C Cypruss	5.00
Mr & Mrs Wiley Cawan	5.00
Mrs Chas L Ashwood	5.00
Nellore M Coucklin	5.00
Mrs Sadie C Chapin	5.00
Sarah Jameson	5.00
G W Baker	5.00
John McNeill	5.00
Mrs Phi B Clark	5.00
R W Putnam	5.00
Mrs D W King	5.00
Mr & Mrs D Heimlich	5.00
G B Dray	5.00
S Agnes Smiley	5.00
Miss O T Davis	5.00
Sarah Frost	5.00
J C Gray	5.00
A G Olson	5.00
Mrs G V Shedd	5.00
H M Wold	5.00
Mrs H M Shook	5.00
Lizzie Cale	5.00
George W Oxley	5.00
Nellie G Barnes	5.00
Chalmers J Elder	5.00
V A & A M Spangler	5.00
Mrs Samuel S Horner	5.00
Eunice Mull	5.00
Mrs Wm, Mrs Eliz Alexander	5.00
H J Simack	5.00
H Sundeen	5.00
Lida M Burham	5.00
Mrs Alger Huff	5.00
Lena Gerber	5.00
G H Cushman	5.00
Katie Young	5.00
Mrs Mary B Willis	5.00
John D Williams	5.00
——, Portland, Ore	5.00
Mrs C P Greis	5.00
Mrs Dan Henderson	5.00
W T Andrews	5.00
M N Cari	5.00
Mrs L A Lehan	5.00
Mrs S W Lockwood	5.00
Mrs W T McMillen	5.00
John Edward	5.00
Mrs. Carrie L Lamb	5.00
J M Wheeler	5.00
Mrs J C Sturdivant	5.00
Mrs E A McCua	5.00
Lila D Smith	5.00
Ida A Balbirnie	5.00
Mary S Grimwell	5.00
Elizabeth B Black	5.00
Miss Lavinia Morrison	5.00
C A Smith	5.00
Edward Ulrich	5.00
Mrs Jennie Freeland	5.00
Mr & Mrs T K Buchanan	5.00
Mr & Mrs M E Denney	5.00
S E, Chicago, Ill	5.00
Anna Miller	5.00
Mr & Mrs W Carley	5.00
Mrs B McQuier	5.00
Mrs Ada Maphis	5.00
Mr & Mrs A J Millen	5.00
Mrs S J Filbey	5.00
Miss C Filbey	5.00
Mr Sam Gunsend	5.00
Mrs A K Fuld	5.00
Mrs W H Cassidy	5.00
Mrs L E Hitchcock	5.00
Mrs L Campbell	5.00
Mrs J Bird	5.00
Mrs J C Plaine	5.00
Mr & Mrs George N Ritz	5.00
Ola Brock	5.00
E S Rand	5.00
Jessie Williams	5.00
Mr & Mrs Wm Talen	5.00
J M Howe	5.00
C A Mastrud	5.00
Nellie Banner	5.00
Mrs A L Martin	5.00
A J Bennett	5.00

J R Throne	$5.00
A Christian Herald reader, Mount, Ill	5.00
James Hunter	5.00
Mrs M A Emerson	5.00
Mrs S P Marsh	5.00
A C Dowa	5.00
Mrs L W Seigworth	5.00
E C Houghton	5.00
Geo E Ingham	5.00
Mrs Geo E Ingham	5.00
Rev C C Washington	5.00
Mr & Mrs R Ardern	5.00
J M Goodspeed	5.00
Mrs J M Goodspeed	5.00
Mrs Annie S Thompson	5.00
Ruth C Hodgeman	5.00
Mrs M Olson	5.00
Ole Larson	5.00
Nels Amsberg	5.00
Nellie & Minnie Alexander	5.00
Ladies Mission Society Calfon, New Jersey	5.00
Mrs Claud Warres	5.00
Mrs C, N Y	5.00
R E Henderlili	5.00
N P Paulson	5.00
Mrs Nancy C Redley	5.00
Mrs D H Kindig	5.00
Mrs A W Deck	5.00
Mrs M J Clingan	5.00
H F Prouty	5.00
M Myrtle Scroggs	5.00
G B Wineland	5.00
A F B, Kenington, Ohio	5.00
M H Windsor	5.00
J L Stevenson	5.00
Miss Sarah L Petersen	5.00
A Friend, Worcester, Mass	5.00
Mrs S B Overby & Daughter	5.00
Nellie Snezy	5.00
Mrs H Chedgey	5.00
H D Guernsey	5.00
"Two Friends," Erick, Okla	5.00
Mrs M A Tinkham	5.00
Mrs E M Slopes	5.00
Mrs J Welden	5.00
——, Oneonta, New York	5.00
Mrs E H Mock	5.00
Mrs Nettie Higgins	5.00
Edna Holmes	5.00
Miss J Chamberlein	5.00
——, Acme, Alberta	5.00
E E Mann	5.00
F T Black	5.00
Mrs C M Richmond	5.00
Miss Mary Roundtrue	5.00
J T Suls	5.00
Nellie A Reynolds	5.00
Mrs J B Wait	5.00
Mrs Lue McHagaman	5.00
Nora Lancaster	5.00
H A Eckels	5.00
Mrs A M C Brockton, Mass	5.00
Miss Althes L Masters	5.00
Nellie Harrison	5.00
Mrs Howard Angell	5.00
Mr N Hasseldahl	5.00
Theodore Price	5.00
Mrs L H Shaffer	5.00
Marian Spencer	5.00
Wm Smith	5.00
Mrs George Yoder	5.00
A Subscriber, Ohio	5.00
Miss Harriet E Van Buren	5.00
Mrs Mary A Davis	5.00
Lottie Ingraham	5.00
Mrs D C Whitehill	5.00
Arthur Peterson	5.00
Emma C Curtis	5.00
Frank J Brooks	5.00
Mrs C E North	5.00
Mr & Mrs Frank Cain	5.00
Joseph Sollie	5.00
Nellie, Marion Crowther	5.00
Frank Wadsworth & family	5.00
Mrs C J Fales	5.00
L J Kolt	5.00
Katherine A Gaylord	5.00
Sympathizer, Marshall, Minn	5.00
M Laudella Eteluson	5.00
Mrs Agnes L Lawrence	5.00
M J Mead	5.00
T N Bodine	5.00
C W Gay	5.00
Mrs G A Fountain	5.00
Mrs John Kuhne	5.00
C E McCreight	5.00
Lillian Maffett	5.00
A B Kendall	5.00
E A Townsend	5.00
Stella Smith	5.00
W C Bartges	5.00
L D Boyer	5.00
Mrs Sarah Hopper	5.00
Mrs H F Wettlaufer	5.00
Mr F J Kickhoefer	5.00
William J Veith	5.00
Ellen Elizabeth Hollen	5.00
J S Otteson	5.00
Elizabeth R Smillin	5.00
M E Cowles	5.00
Kathryn Custer	5.00
Georgia B Conrad	5.00
W E Grin	5.00
Mrs E M Brauett	5.00
W J McGill	5.00
Mrs E T Benett	5.00
Eliza Bartholomew	5.00
Frances Rhodes	5.00
J C Clark	5.00
S E Barton	5.00
Mrs F H Lawrence	5.00
Hawford Thompson	5.00
T H Vinter	5.00
Mrs Carrie Flenning	5.00
Mrs Jennie Hall	5.00
Mrs Harrieh R Carper	5.00
J H R Smith	5.00
C B	5.00
A B C	5.00
Bertha F Blowers	5.00
Floyd E Keiner	5.00
Mrs N B Q, West Mansfield, Ohio	5.00
H Setterington	5.00
Mr & Mrs W C Hellmund	5.00
——, Harpster, Ohio	5.00

Mrs M B Garrett	$5.00
Agnes Hyslop	5.00
Harry Hibert	5.00
Wishi Hadmore	5.00
Mrs J C Christoph	5.00
Mrs H A Wheat	5.00
Miss A M Adams	5.00
Mrs John Knight	5.00
O F DeSoto	5.00
Mrs M E Bailey	5.00
Alice Cooke	5.00
Mrs C E Shephard	5.00
M R Banan	5.00
Mrs A J Boyer	5.00
Mr & Mrs O C Trumbull	5.00
——, Herkimer, N Y	5.00
Pauline Conover	5.00
Syver Evenson	5.00
Mrs W H Porter	5.00
Mr & Mrs H S Loomis	5.00
Mrs L L Augstead	5.00
A Friend of the Christian Herald, Washington, D C	5.00
Mrs D J Griffiths	5.00
Edward Simkin	5.00
David Naysmith	5.00
Jesse Sniper	5.00
Mrs G Boun	5.00
Paul & Annie Kendall	5.00
Ethel K Smith	5.00
Mrs G Horwood	5.00
Center M E Church, Dalton, Nebr.	5.00
Mrs Catherine Fretz	5.00
An Illinois Friend	5.00
Mrs James E Woods	5.00
E P Elwell	5.00
Mrs C J Wood	5.00
Mrs C E Freeman	5.00
A Reader, Ohio	5.00
Miss Many Jeter	5.00
Mr & Mrs G B Forsythe	5.00
Gertrude Illinois	5.00
Mrs R N Mills	5.00
Mrs Mercy Pierce	5.00
Mr & Mrs G T Tharnton	5.00
—, Birmingham, Mich.	5.00
E A Ritterhausen	5.00
Herald Subscriber, Ocala, Fla.	5.00
E H Emory, Va.	5.00
Mr & Mrs J M Griffin	5.00
Miss Bessie Seimbach	5.00
Guy Benham	5.00
Miss L B Hyden	5.00
Mrs Seitz & Daughter	5.00
Mrs J H Slayden	5.00
O B Bacheler	5.00
Mr & Mrs J M Garrison	5.00
Mrs J B Forbes	5.00
Sympathizers, Wonfull, Iowa	5.00
Ethel Smith	5.00
Alice A Hercus	5.00
G E Claxon	5.00
A Berrg	5.00
E H Milter	5.00
H Ebert	5.00
Mrs J Farster	5.00
Jane Moats	5.00
M C Salmar	5.00
J A Tune	5.00
C S Hicks	5.00
Mrs K E M	5.00
Mrs P S Wyckoff	5.00
Mrs Irving Wright	5.00
Mrs Elizabeth Poindexter	5.00
C W Coe	5.00
Carrie Rudisill	5.00
J H Stickney	5.00
Mrs Martin Kittilson	5.00
Mrs W A Kibler	5.00
George A Elliott	5.00
Edw H Knauff	5.00
Mrs G E Spangler	5.00
Mrs I W Cook	5.00
Mrs Anna R Tappan	5.00
Mr Fred Schild	5.00
"In Mother's Name," Rushville, Mo.	5.00
E H Fanklins	5.00
Mrs J A Scott	5.00
Mrs M B Jones	5.00
Catherine H Anderson	5.00
Mrs J E Northwitt	5.00
Bertha King	5.00
Sadie R Davis	5.00
S L Gosser	5.00
Mr & Mrs E T W, Clarksville, Iowa	5.00
E M Triplett	5.00
Mrs M G Lee	5.00
May Danheim	5.00
F B Fellingham	5.00
Mr & Mrs W G Platt	5.00
Mrs Ruth Patterson	5.00
Mrs John Talley	5.00
——, Bancroft, Mich.	5.00
Mrs J W Loyd	5.00
Mrs C A Johnson	5.00
Mr & Mrs John Ather	5.00
M E Hetherington	5.00
Mrs Ella Fullerton	5.00
E N Whiteman	5.00
J F Davis	5.00
W B Sawyer	5.00
Mrs C Pfitzenmain	5.00
Mrs S J Nicholas	5.00
Ellen J Proctor	5.00
Mrs M S Ellis	5.00
Miss L A Jackson	5.00
F W Macdonald	5.00
C E Miller	5.00
M R Wiley	5.00
Mrs N Higgins	5.00
B D Kilmer	5.00
M E Beckwitts	5.00
Eleanor S Crunnrine	5.00
Perris E Scofield	5.00
Mr & Mrs J A White	5.00
Mr & Mrs L R Auck	5.00
D D MacPherson	5.00
Mrs C S Hubbard	5.00
Mrs E Ellis	5.00
E Hall	5.00
Mrs C H Randall	5.00
Chas Hodge	5.00
Mrs J C Page	5.00
Nellin S Treverton	5.00
——, Moveytown, Pa.	5.00
Mrs M J Merritt	5.00
Mrs George F Berry	$5.00
Miss Bertha Hipp	5.00
Mrs F M Hipp	5.00
Mrs T W Benson	5.00
Mr M L Hawley	5.00
Ida L Dildine	5.00
Mrs J S Bickel	5.00
Mary E Miller	5.00
Mrs J W Yeomans	5.00
Emily C Round	5.00
Frank E Smith	5.00
Charlotte Mead	5.00
Mrs M S Lockwood	5.00
Mrs Mary Simmers	5.00
Mrs Margaret Lawall	5.00
Mary E Gilson	5.00
Mrs C Lee Sperry	5.00
Grace L Brush	5.00
Mr & Mrs M Booth	5.00
E B Wylie	5.00
Mrs Julius W Geyer	5.00
Emma Stonemetz	5.00
Edward Gitz	5.00
Mrs E F Rogers	5.00
Mrs J H Lee	5.00
S T Johnson	5.00
A Friend, Pa.	5.00
W F Goldspohn	5.00
Mrs H G Smith	5.00
Mary A Smith	5.00
Mrs F D Anderson	5.00
Wm Koehl	5.00
John J Porter	5.00
S C Clarke	5.00
Grace M Banks	5.00
Mrs J F Belman	5.00
Mrs P G Mygatt	5.00
Mrs M C Ryan	5.00
J H Geiser	5.00
Mrs Ellen S Taylor	5.00
E J Brink	5.00
Mrs G B Walker	5.00
Miss May Brown	5.00
Mr & Mrs R J Eliasons	5.00
Lydia Kylander	5.00
Nancy L Butler	5.00
Mrs Anna Cooney	5.00
Mrs S J Beell	5.00
Mr & Mrs J A Nicholson & Family	5.00
Mrs Harry Graham	5.00
Mrs Ray Keith	5.00
Miss Anna R Miller	5.00
O T Wilson	5.00
J Rockfeller	5.00
Mrs J E Collins	5.00
Agnes Forth	5.00
Mr & Mrs E E Van Ness	5.00
Mr & Mrs B Sherwood	5.00
W J Neukom	5.00
A Friend, Fairhaven, Mass	5.00
W E Jeffers	5.00
Amanda E Rossiter	5.00
Miss Glenn O Henderson	5.00
A Sister in Va	5.00
Mr & Mrs J B Sheffer	5.00
Ardella Gifford	5.00
Elbert H Artz	5.00
R C Landon	5.00
Mrs Emily Wadsworth	5.00
Martha A Gregson	5.00
James Sayie	5.00
Mrs Sarah M Ramson	5.00
Rev & Mrs Edward G Sharp	5.00
Mr & Mrs John M Kirk	5.00
George M Fote	5.00
James D Blydenburgh	5.00
R E Shuphelp	5.00
J C & Hattie Michener	5.00
Mrs Orson A Moody	5.00
Roger Parsley	5.00
A L Guy	5.00
Mrs J S Cunningham	5.00
Mrs R E Bagwill	5.00
Pearl Narren Haller	5.00
Miss Mae Brunard	5.00
——, Cleveland, Ohio	5.00
Mrs T J Clum	5.00
Harry E Bixler	5.00
G L Upham	5.00
F E A Smith	5.00
G H Daron	5.00
Marjory Bishop	5.00
Fred L Reeder	5.00
H G Elsey	5.00
J E Raiser	5.00
Mrs C C Reed	5.00
Pauline M Jones	5.00
Mrs A Kershan	5.00
R S Tucker	5.00
Mrs George Orbin	5.00
Mrs Olive O Harlan	5.00
Mrs Emily Wallem	5.00
Mrs L S Wymans	5.00
Alex McKay	5.00
Mrs Elsie Lindner	5.00
Mrs J S Fraser	5.00
Eli F Crouse	5.00
Mrs Wm Sattler	5.00
H S Moore	5.00
Mr M M Bergquist	5.00
Mrs Charles Geller	5.00
Swamette Barth	5.00
Paul Isbell	5.00
C A Ruhter	5.00
Marie Ervin	5.00
Mrs Anna C Bock	5.00
Mrs Wm Soland	5.00
Mrs O R Dorster	5.00
A Friend from Centralia, Ill.	5.00
The Herbert Sister	5.00
Mrs Ruth Taylor	5.00
Mr R C Richardson	5.00
Mrs Geo Miller	5.00
Kate A Johnson	5.00
Anna Valladingham	5.00
Mrs Katie M Esman	5.00
Mrs E E Marsh	5.00
HE BE, Portland, Me.	5.00
J D Cross	5.00
A Rocky Mountain Stewart	5.00
J C DuRant Jr	5.00
Edwin V Cole	5.00
A N Erlandson	5.00
M John M Buck	5.00
Josephine B Allen	5.00
Stephen P Queen	5.00
Mrs Jennie McCartney	5.00
Mrs W E Miller	5.00
S Nunamacker	5.00
Mrs R C Wellwood	$5.00
A Subscriber, Vernfield, Pa.	5.00
Mrs J B Ateward	5.00
Mrs B F Thomason	5.00
Mrs E R Benedict	5.00
Mr & Mrs M L S Eafert	5.00
Mrs J A Robinson	5.00
J W Hughes	5.00
Mrs Frank Hurlock	5.00
M D Ulmer	5.00
Mrs Alice M Meidinger	5.00
O J Robinson	5.00
Mrs M E Philbrook	5.00
Nettie O Andrews	5.00
Elizabeth L Moon	5.00
Ella F Pidgean	5.00
Mrs F M Tinkham	5.00
Mary B Sheck	5.00
May O Davenport	5.00
Mrs T Speed	5.00
Miss Harriet VanBuren	5.00
Mrs R Meiklejohn	5.00
Miss Laura Bradford	5.00
Mr & Mrs Glen Callhoun	5.00
D W Smith	5.00
A Friend, South Ohio, N S	5.00
Mrs Rufus Darby	5.00
Sallie Reimhart	5.00
Mrs Bettie Leonard	5.00
Miss Clara E Lochrke	5.00
Mrs M Aalsetts	5.00
Mrs M E Morse	5.00
In His Name, B P, Pa	5.00
Jos Germershousen	5.00
Daniel Bixler, Jr	5.00
Eva H Gibson	5.00
Mrs C M Thompson	5.00
John Awsador	5.00
Mrs John Evans	5.00
A Subscriber to the Christian Herald, Bluff, Arkansas	5.00
Annie Warucke	5.00
Miss Hattie Genrtze	5.00
Mary E Wilson	5.00
Mrs M E Graves	5.00
Mrs J Long	5.00
Herbert M Butcher	5.00
Mary H Crowly	5.00
Alice B Everitt	5.00
Mr & Mrs F G Van Swearingen	5.00
Mrs Annie F Hartings	5.00
Mrs Martha B Stelt	5.00
Alfred Swanson	5.00
W D Stevens	5.00
Mary Fox	5.00
Miss Hannah L Jones	5.00
Lillian C Applelin	5.00
Mrs Lidia Bishop	5.00
Mrs W R Daily	5.00
C A Isaaceson	5.00
J M Hayden	5.00
Ralph Knop	5.00
S D Crane	5.00
Mrs C Botrendamme	5.00
Mrs O E Jenkins	5.00
Owen T Edgar	5.00
J L Whitaker	5.00
Emma Mark	5.00
John T Walker	5.00
Mrs C G Messerole	5.00
Miss Lizzie Wall	5.00
Samuel Stepp	5.00
E R McGee	5.00
Mrs A E Swenson	5.00
Mrs W S Byerr	5.00
F A Temple	5.00
Mrs H H Ashley	5.00
——, University Pl, Nebr.	5.00
J G Mayer	5.00
Mrs E L Ames	5.00
Henry W Threl	5.00
Mrs C A Conner	5.00
E Boyd	5.00
Solomon Rugh	5.00
Helen Wood	5.00
Mary D Kuhn	5.00
Mrs W Pettan	5.00
Mrs J B Shannon	5.00
Mrs H W Paul	5.00
Mary E Lord	5.00
E G Altner	5.00
Mrs Emily Evans	5.00
Mrs Isaac Keys	5.00
Rev G G Jackson	5.00
James F Caldwekill	5.00
Ethel M Abell	5.00
Mrs Hannah Hull	5.00
Mrs R H Roberts	5.00
Mrs A L Celley	3.00
Mrs D Foose & daughter	3.00
Mrs M A Shellets	3.00
Mr & Mrs A J Newman	3.00
Mary E Dillman	$3.00
A Friend, Red Deer, Alta	3.00
Mrs Wm Hulton	3.00
Mrs Jennie Wiltre	3.00
A F H, Galva, Ill	3.00
A Friend, Springfield, Maine	3.00
Mr S Morterud	3.00
Mrs K B Dosh	3.00
Kate Johnson	3.00
Martha Drake	3.00
Wm Frutman	3.00
Mrs Howard C Staale	3.00
Mrs Laura E N Hedrick	3.00
A N Klosten	3.00
W C Hartman	3.00
Mrs A D Brown	3.00
Orlena B Herzog	3.00
Maggie E Evans	3.00
Sarah E Marshall	3.00
Ruth L Beardsly	3.00
Henry A Barker	3.00
Mrs B F Clark	3.00
M A Longworth	3.00
Loyal Walker Class, St Martin, Md	3.00
Isaac Scott	3.00
Mrs G C Schrader	3.00
Sallie B McMuntny	3.00
A L Schanzenbacher	3.00
A Friend, Algona, Iowa	3.00
Katharine A Dosh	3.00
J H Weber	3.00
Kate A Jackson	3.00
Mrs Lydia Steinmeger	3.00
Mrs R E Sparks	3.00
L A McCombs	3.00
Mrs J C Sanders	3.00
Mrs N H Welch	3.00
Mrs Mary Selig	3.00
Mrs Lois Lilsey	3.00
Mrs H L Womeck & sons	3.00
J F Reinhart	3.00
Miss Emelia Brauer	3.00
Mrs Anna W Staines	3.00
Mrs D Penny & daughter	3.00
Elizabeth, Martha & Mrs Geo M Johnson	3.00
Mrs Hattie E Gibbs	3.00
Mrs James Hamilton	3.00
D C Eberly	3.00
Mrs L G Lewis	3.00
Ella G Wilson	3.00
George Morrison	3.00
Mrs M A Clark	3.00
A Friend, Ross, Mich.	3.00
Mr & Mrs W E Broderson	3.00
Mrs C W Stoner	3.00
Miss Rose Berry	3.00
Elizabeth C Watson	3.00
Lulu Horner	3.00
Mrs Eliza Wilson	3.00
Mrs C N Russell	3.00
Mrs Jas A Miller	3.00
Elizabeth Johnson	3.00
Georgianna Green	3.00
Mrs E R Griffith	3.00
Ettie Wheeler	3.00
Mrs S H Green	3.00
Eva Bell	3.00
A J Wright	3.00
Mrs Ella Bradly	3.00
Martin B Shugy	3.00
Mrs Geo M Andrews	3.00
Miss Kate Trotter	3.00
From A Western Friend	2.00
Mrs C Moore	2.00
P K Savvas	2.00
Mrs H E Jenkins	2.00
Mrs J D Moore	2.00
A subscriber, Lacena, N H.	2.00
Annie F Given	2.00
Mrs A L Kind	2.00
Mrs G M Doty	2.00
W W Rockwell	2.00
Mrs Annie Selby	2.00
D H Campbell	2.00
Two friends in South Orange, N J	2.00
A J Weigle	2.00
W W Eaton	2.00
Mr and Mrs E. Eusminger	2.00
Mr and Mrs Will Duffild	2.00
In his name, M A P	2.00
Jos L Black	2.00
N E Brotton	2.00
A Friend, Coatesville, Pa	2.00
Mrs M T, Verona Sta, N Y	2.00
Mr & Mrs Earl Bidwell	2.00
Margaret Van Demark	2.00
Altoria Club, Y M C A	$2.00
J C Hattie Gordon	2.00
Mrs Emma Leibard & friend	2.00
Mrs D W Griffin	2.00
J F Obover	2.00
Mrs M E Hunt	2.00
Mrs Emma A Every	2.00
——, Greenfield, Iowa	2.00
A friend & subscriber of the Christian Herald, McComb, Ill.	2.00
Mrs H M Helly	2.00
Mrs J M Hart	2.00
Mrs & Mr Ed Wicks	2.00
Mrs W G Lytle	2.00
Mrs C E Watson	2.00
F N T., Mainville, Ohio	2.00
Mrs. Phebe J Fredericks	2.00
Mrs J E Johnson	2.00
Mrs J T Cribbins	2.00
Mr & Mrs Gus Winborg	2.00
Mrs L V Newton	2.00
Mrs Edward Kneal	2.00
Mr & Mrs E T J Hollingsworth	2.00
E M Trulock	2.00
Mrs M Rideout	2.00
Mrs Arbella Russell	2.00
Mary A Martin	2.00
Mrs Lizzie A Clinton	2.00
R E Drake	2.00
C L Houson	2.00
W S Lynch	2.00
Mr & Mrs W A Kistler	2.00
Mrs S W Mirich	2.00
Mrs O Colborg	2.00
Myrtle M Huntly	2.00
W L Kemp	2.00
Mrs Ezekiel Mechen	2.00
Mrs Ada Pilken	2.00
D D Davis	2.00
Lillie McEwan	2.00
Mrs A Beardsley	2.00
M R Benchly	2.00
Mrs Sarah M Hunnings	2.00
D M Colby	2.00
J C V LaRaysville	2.00
Mrs S Fairchild	2.00
Mrs F M Lamberton	2.00
——, Port Chester, N Y	2.00
Mrs D D Edwards	2.00
Rooxa S Hoover	2.00
L K Wiley	2.00
Mrs George S Bickel	2.00
Mrs S E Waldridge	2.00
Catherine R Miles	2.00
——, Gayhead, N Y	2.00
——, Bellevue, Pa.	2.00
J H Fairfield	2.00
Mrs A J Cooper	2.00
Mrs C L Tubbs	2.00
A Christian Herald reader, Battle Creek Mich	2.00
A Christian Herald reader, Naugatuck, Ct	2.00
Mr & Mrs A B Johnson	2.00
Mrs C D Hutchins	2.00
Mrs Addie Dash	2.00
A Friend in Christ, Unionville, Iowa	2.00
Jennie M LaRue	2.00
Mrs John Henderson	2.00
A Friend G B	2.00
Mrs A T Finch and Children	2.00
Miss S E Barnes	2.00
Mrs H A Poole	2.00
Mrs S M McCanliss	2.00
Mrs J M Beggs	2.00
Mrs. Thos Long and Daughter	2.00
Mrs Alice F Maxwell	2.00
Mrs R R Stevens	2.50
Gale Forest Reinertsen	2.50
Friend, Tiffin, Ohio	2.50
H P Farr	2.50
Jane Johnson	2.50
Samuel Millesack	2.50
Perry Brown	2.50
A Friend of Minn	2.50
Geo E Voorhess	2.50
In the Master's Name	2.50
Workers S A Class of Rea	2.50
I D Clare	2.50
L W Wards	2.50
The Miami Valley Hospital	2.50
Mr & Mrs J C Ross	2.50
Mrs T T Adams	2.00
Mrs E E Rodgers	2.00
M C Everhart	2.00
A friend, Easton, Pa.	2.00
Grace E Uhler	2.00
Albert J Kappeli	2.00
Mrs C T Baldwin	2.00
Mrs G L Brown	2.00
A friend, Long Branch, New Jersey	2.00
Mr & Mrs E M Goughnout	2.00
H S Bartles	2.00
Mr & Mrs O Swabson	2.00
Mary A Evender	2.00
Sympathy, Beverly, Mass	2.00
Mrs E Milton Tracey	2.00
L A Merrill	2.00
Mrs E J McKernon	2.00
Jennie L Simpson	2.00
S H Hall	2.00
Mr B J Cushing	2.00
Mrs E D Leets	2.00
A Friend, Gladstone, Ore	2.00
Mrs. J. M. Weldin	2.00
W H Smith	2.00
Emma A Grover	2.00
Della Dunklee	2.00
Miss Kate A Yerger	2.00
D A K, Passaic, N J	2.00
Mrs Tom Evans	2.00
Mrs W B Woolery	2.00
Mrs O F Garner	2.00
A Reader, Toledo, Ill.	2.00
Mrs E H Rogers	2.00
O R Sletten	2.00
——, Marion, Md.	2.00
E A Lewis	2.00
Mrs R E T, Grand Rapids, Mich	2.00
Mrs H Stockwell	2.00
Mrs I B Heil	2.00
Mrs J W Magness	2.00
Sallie Romane	2.00
A friend, Newark, N J.	2.00
Mrs Walter Luther Jane G Wood
H E R, Akron, Ohio
Mrs Sophie Brisker
Mrs Tillie Gilbert
Mrs J B Hippenteel
B W Doughty
Rowland Hill
A Friend, N. Bennington, Vt.
Mrs Alice Abel
Mrs Floyd Hadkins
Anna M Klein
A Friend, Pittstown, N
Mr & Mrs W M Mayhe
Mis Hattie L Clease
Viola E Peakes
Sarah Jane Shafer
A Widow's Mite, Albany N Y
John I Guptill
A Williamson
A Christian Herald reader, New York
Mrs W H Van Sickle
Mrs Geo F. Babuck
Mrs A J Decker
The Proverbial Widow's mite
M A Chase
H M Moyer
Mrs J E Clifford
Anna Brenard
Mrs Cora W Shepherd
Mrs E F Barr
Miss M T, Philadelphia, Pa.
Mrs S Reynolds
Anna Wilson
Mrs C Wenner
Mrs Annie Genn
S A Sawyer
Miss John Ruess
Anna & Martha Condon
Mrs M E Ford
Wm A Hollan
Mrs D W West
Mrs J G Donnay
Miss G L Donney
Rose Rasmussen
Mrs E L M
A Friend, Trenton N J
E J M
Elsie C Anderson
A Litsmbuger
Della Hunt
Mrs M H Quackenbush
Mrs J Norman
A Friend, Lowville, N Y
Georgie Brown
Mrs R J Wright
Emil Lervig
Warren Hedges
Miss Julia C Hauley
Mrs Elizabeth Keins
Henrietta Young
Mrs A D Rew
L D Gott
H P Moss
Mrs Susan Helpingsting
Mrs J L Swart
Mrs Lydia M Wallace
M.s I H Winters
Mrs Edwin H Tarbox
Mrs Alice L Baroy
Mary A Walling
Mrs C M Borst
Mary E Parker
Jacob Jonker
T W Howe
Mrs C E Thomson
Mrs Henry Wellenmeyer
Rachel M Sweaney
J W Milick
Mary E Cumeron
Wm Morris
Mrs L F Oak
——, Salem, Ohio, Mrs L V Cory
R L Bruce
Mrs M C Moser
Dina Scandrett
A Reader, Ballston Spa, N Y
Mary A Wright
Mrs T R Williams
Mrs T C Horace
Mr & Mrs E N A Fredericks Hall, Pa.
Mrs E J White
Mrs J C Milroy, Tenn.
Mrs E Thompson
Rev Charles H Miller
Mrs S E B McNeill
Mrs C A Willis
N L Laughlin
Miss Margaret MacMohn
Russell B Lister
A Friend, Bath, Me.
R A Fobes
Mrs Jannie E Crone
Mrs J L Palmer
——, Indianapolis, Ind
Mrs S W Nelson
Mrs Mary Doly
Mrs I H King
Fanny A Simpson
Mrs Henry M Hoyt
Mrs Estella Townsend
Miss E A Johnson
John Young, Sr.
Mrs Ed Scharff
Susan E Smith
Mrs E F Thamason
E M Moore
——, Burlington, Colo.
Mrs Geo Walker
Mrs A D Springstead
Mrs H H Hill
Mrs L W Murrell
Mrs A C Robbins
A Friend, Syracuse, N Y
A Friend, Naples, N Y.
F Scott
A Friend and Subscriber, Bellevue, Ohio
Miss Rose B Wolf
Mrs Wm Baker
Mrs E Eliza Ober
Mis M Wilbur
Elizabeth Jordan

The famine is taking its toll. Missionaries found this seventeen-year-old girl just too late. She died a few hours after this picture was taken.

Additional acknowledgments in subsequent issues of Christian Herald.

SEND ALL GIFTS FOR THE INDIA FAMINE FUND TO CHRISTIAN HERALD, BIBLE HOUSE, N. Y. CITY

THE LIGHTHOUSE ON THE BOWERY

HE day of the down and out is not passed. Nor has the time arrived en men are never foolish, when they ver let a night's dissipation ruin a d job, when sin does not banish op-tunity. The Bowery is not today focus of human wrecks that it once was; conditions are changing, slowly, for the better. The bread line no longer forms, but each midnight sees hungry men on the Bowery, and each one is fed who enters the Bowery Mission. Each day there are broken men, broken by adversity, by misfortune, by sin, among the present day crowds on the Bowery. And to these the Bowery Mission is an open door to a present Saviour, a renewed life, a regrasped opportunity, a happy life of Christian usefulness and of business success. The gifts acknowledged on this page have helped men out of despair into courage, out of idleness into self-respect and regular employment, out of sin into the redeemed life. The Bowery Mission is still, and will always be, a lighthouse piloting sinful men to the feet of the Saviour whose power and love never fail.

fts to Remake Men

The midnight meal at the Bowery Mission

Slanes	$2.00
s M G McAboy	2.00
M Vallette	2.00
L Talman	2.00
s Carrie Walsh	2.00
ss Amelia Mantz	2.00
George Cohen	2.00
Breikemidge	2.00
Tompkins	2.00
Wands	2.00
s James Demrast	2.00
Woodin	2.00
Germantown, Pa	2.00
s F Sanders	2.00
s C W Treverton	2.00
n W Dallnu	2.00
ry Shawsheean	2.00
s G W [illegible]	2.00
ss Annie Crisy	2.00
Kenyon	2.00
s Lucy B Ives	2.00
s Elizabeth M Spoor	2.00
s John Morgan	2.00
n L Dayton	2.00
s E L Pierson	2.00
E Krumville	2.00
M Taylor	2.00
Hicks	2.00
Friend, Little Ferry, N Y	2.00
ristian	1.50
F Gallowny	1.50
rry Brown	1.50
la S Newby	1.50
H W, Phil, Pa.	1.00
s Wooper	1.00
s R E Reisnger	1.00
Brown	1.00
hn E Stahl	1.00
ry Pittman	1.00
s H M Mayer	1.00
s Kate Edinger	1.00
s A Diehl	1.00
foyer H[illegible]	1.00
s S G Boardsman	1.00
iss A E Morlan	1.00
iss Alice E Weber	1.00
s C Seiler	1.00
ary A Young	1.00
s Shuman Lyons	1.00
Allentown, Pa	1.00
s J A McDonald	1.00
uise Thalman	1.00
manda Mark	1.00
iss Mildred Knight	1.00
r Frank Lundsten	1.00
s Carl Tompson	1.00
s M E Langenour	1.00
O Volk	1.00
A Edwards	1.00
arrie Merrill	1.00
s C N Bacon	1.00
s Jane Bount	1.00
lla V Cox	1.00
s Irvin Clark	1.00
bert J Wilson	1.00
B Detring	1.00
Friend, Johnstown, Pa	1.00
s Martha Uhl	10.00
artha A Ames	1.00
ary A Hard	1.00
H Welcher	1.00
s A J Ryan	1.00
s N D Scane	1.00
Stella Cop	$1.00
Mrs J T Hubbard	1.00
R A H	1.00
—, Elizabeth, N J	1.00
Miss Chase	1.00
Alice Hubbard	1.00
Geo S Gass	1.00
F Hassen	1.00
Mrs H H Kirkpatrick	1.00
W H Herron	1.00
Miss Frances Jonas	1.00
Ella J Morris	1.00
Mrs B Summers	1.00
Mrs Joseph Smith	1.00
Mrs A Hoffland	1.00
Rev B Marck	1.00
M E Biggart	1.00
Mrs J R Gregory	1.00
Chauncy Pollock	1.00
Stella V Cox	1.00
M A Ford	1.00
Clara Chadbourne	1.00
Eliza M Robert	1.00
—, Minneapolis, Minn	1.00
Mrs Geo Field	1.00
Mrs Olive L Brown	1.00
Mr & Mrs Welker	1.00
Richard Hardy	1.00
Mrs H Baldwin	1.00
Mrs Ellen M Holman	1.00
Stella V Cox	1.00
O Hagstron	1.00
Mrs Susan Reeder	1.00
J A Trowbridge	1.00
Etta Nickle	1.00
G D Mersereau	1.00
S F Young	1,00
W A Goechringer	1.00
Edmund White	1.00
T A D, Perkasie, Pa	1.00
Mrs S H Shank	1.00
Leonard Jefferes	1.00
Mrs E E Babcock	1.00
Wm D Terry	1.00
Lillian M Benton	1.00
Emma Kriebel	1.00
N E Solt	$1.00
W E Matthews	1.00
Mrs E M Lillibridge	1.00
Mrs Anna Ebeek	1.00
Alice M Blair	1.00
J A D, St Petersburg, Pa	1.00
Rev. H E Doonhein	1.00
L P Taylor	1.00
Mrs Kimpel	1.00
Geo H Grobe	1.00
—, Pittsburg, Pa.	1.00
W H Hellman	1.00
J Hoffman	1.00
E M Baker	1.00
Levi Brackbill	1.00
Mary A Seifle	1.00
Mrs Mary O'Dull	1.00
J & A Sweaver	1.00
Jas A Croll	1.00
L E L Bates	1.00
Clara B Lauder	1.00
Anna Romann	1.00
L M Zimmerman	1.00
Kate T Cash	1.00
Henle	1.00
H D McConkey	1.00
Mrs E M Brown	1.00
—, Flushing, N Y	1.00
O Danielson	1.00
F D Hubbell	1.00
Gottleit Geiger	1.00
E L Ayer	1.00
Viola K Suetterlein	1.00
Emlie Weniger	1.00
Miss M E Evans	1.00
William E Wall	1.00
Anna Goldman	1.00
Edward Bryant	1.00
Mrs E B Evans	1.00
Mary J Drexel	1.00
F Youngblutt	1.00
Annie L White	1.00
Anna Lucks	1.00
Iva D Klair	1.00
F Cressman	1.00
Isac Guxsen	1.00
Mrs X	1.00
Mrs H H Ashley	1.00
Alverda H Nicholis	1.00
Mrs G W Peffer	1.00
W D Boyce	$1.00
Rev John Geittens	1.00
Mrs McCalmont	1.00
J T Andrews	1.00
E K Rittenhouse	1.00
K T Mathias	1.00
J R Davis	1.00
J J Stengle	1.00
Miss M Williams	1.00
Olive L Wollen	1.00
Mrs Henrietta Oakley	1.00
J W Chapman	1.00
Mrs Henry Hewitt	1.00
Mrs E W Jones	1.00
D W Smith	1.00
Miss Mary Ryder	1.00
Mrs John Biggs	1.00
Mrs G S Clark	1.00
Mrs Lang	1.00
S W Edson	1.00
D Muller	1.00
Mr & Mrs C D Patton	1.00
Miss B E Davis	1.00
Mrs C A Smith	1.00
H S Snybolt	1.00
J B Miller	1.00
John McMurray	1.00
Perry C Ostrander	1.00
Mrs E La Munion	1.00
Miss P J Valentine	1.00
A Friend of the Cause, L I	1.00
A Widow, Harris, N Y	1.00
Mrs F Hehr	1.00
Harry R Coults	1.00
Rosina M Williams	1.00
Thomas J McGrau	1.00
M A Hammill	1.00
Henrietta Suitther	1.00
Mrs A T Clark	1.00
H Bugbee	1.00
Mrs Jacob Mayer	1.00
Mrs V T Blake	1.00
P C Harty	1.00
Mrs S H Frost	1.00
John C C Carter	1.00
Mrs Geo O Nason	$1.00
John A Zink	1.00
Emily M Turner	1.00
Mrs C W Bennett	1.00
Miss A L Peyleg	1.00
N M Lewis	1.00
Marietta N Southwick	1.00
Mary A Bristol	1.00
Mrs Levi Coop	1.00
Henry Van Ostrand	1.00
Mrs Ritte Hoggarth	1.00
Mrs D D Goddard	1.00
Mrs Sarah K Haskell	1.00
D A Kinken	1.00
A B Clark	1.00
A C Davidson	1.00
Mrs Helen Bartterman	1.00
Mrs J Kermode	1.00
Mrs J H Blauvelt	1.00
James Thomas	1.00
Mrs M H Schumerhorn	1.00
Mrs N Nielson	1.00
H R Howes & Son	1.00
Sarah J Wayne	1.00
Ida M Knoop	1.00
Elizabeth Height	1.00
Miss D Ballard	1.00
C V T, Flushing, N Y	1.00
Mary D Smith	1.00
Mrs Geo E Graham	1.00
Mrs Grundland	1.00
Mrs C E Waterbury	1.00
Mrs Fred H Swanson	1.00
J K Waddington	1.00
Mrs A Quackenbush	1.00
Mrs J V Powell	1.00
Chas H Page	1.00
Mrs Norman B Tyler	1.00
Deltha A Johnson	1.00
R Mold	1.00
Mrs S E Davis	$1.00
Mrs M T Benjamin	1.00
Mrs J H Westfall	1.00
Mrs R Espie	1.00
Charlotte C Wiedrich	1.00
Miss Emma Haase	1.00
Mrs C H Smith	1.00
J M Porter	1.00
Mrs Percy W Holmes	1.00
La Fayette Doerty	1.00
Myrtle E Mitchell	1.00
Alice E Thomas	1.00
C E Saunders	1.00
A Friend, Knoxville, Pa	1.00
Mrs W J Fredericks	1.00
B F Bohnen	1.00
Alice C Nagle	1.00
S H F, Newton, Mass	1.00
Mrs A L Milligan	1.00
Mrs Louis Brunner	1.00
Mrs H H Kirkpatrick	1.00
Mrs H E Hamilton	1.00
Frank B Bachelor	1.00
Mrs S G Miller	1.00
Mrs Mannie Hartjbr	1.00
Miss Dora Shaddock	1.00
Mrs N A Anderson	1.00
Mrs L A Corwin	1.00
Miss Danner	1.00
Mrs E P Shean	1.00
—, Binghamton, N Y	1.00
Mrs L T McNair	1.00
Albert B Lord	1.00
Mrs J E Thompson	1.00
Mrs Daniel J Ray	1.00
Miss Clara Rupp	1.00
T A Frizell	1.00
Mrs H P Hall	$1.00
—, Baltimore, Md	1.00
Mrs Fred Schleich	1.00
Mrs Harriet Walters	1.00
E D McBain	1.00
Alma Leist	1.00
Ida M Trenary	1.00
Stella V Cox	1.00
Mrs H H Kirkpatrick	1.00
Mrs J W Brook	1.00
Mrs Lydia Smith	1.00
Otto Koenig	1.00
Lina Hoffman	1.00
Mrs Emily S Campbell	1.00
Roberta D Walker	1.00
Ethel B Barstow	1.00
Mrs Edward Kelly	1.00
Miss H M Streeper	1.00
Clara Hanson	1.00
Mrs Spencer Waring	1.00
Mrs M T Baker	1.00
M V Wilson	1.00
W H Batt	1.00
Mrs Mary E Yeoman	1.00
A Friend, Elizabeth, N J	1.00
Ira M Kells	1.00
Mrs L A Mellor	1.00
A Subscriber, Owooso, Mich	1.00
Mrs J N Clinton	1.00
Dorelle Berel	1.00
Alice M Bishop	1.00
A Belle Morse	1.00
Mr & Mrs L H Brisbine	1.00
Stella V Cox	1.00
Emily E Balfour	1.00
Frank D Hansen	1.00
Mrs C M Skelley	1.00
L E Packard	1.00
Mrs McC J Warren	1.00
B M A, Friend, Minneapolis, Minn	1.00
Blanch Ruley	$1.00
Miss Frances Lucas	1.00
Mrs Carrie Walsh	1.00
A Friend, Richmond, Va	1.00
Mrs B, Tiffin, Ohio	1.00
Mrs K B McCue	1.00
Mrs A D Wiesenfeld	1.00
Mrs Thos M Tunk	1.00
Martha J Johnson	1.00
Era Karagers	1.00
A Friend, Battlecreek, Mich	1.00
Helen M Allen	1.00
Stella V Cox	1.00
Mrs Sarah K Haskell	1.00
Rev Howard Ives	1.00
Mrs B B Poiser	1.00
Mrs Jas M Kirk	1.00
—, Cleveland, Ohio	1.00
Ramanda Strehlow	1.00
J H Sturgis	1.00
Mr Will Robertson	1.00
Mrs Christina Crowell	1.00
J R Vanderwater	1.00
Mrs H Hoekstra	1.00
Theron Dean	1.00
Mrs Ida A Simeons	1.00
Mrs J B Norton	1.00
Eva L Zimmerman	1.00
Mr & Mrs E W Wright	.50
Mrs W W Dickens	.50
Mrs Wm Cation	.50
Mr & Mrs E W Wright	.50
H C S, Somerville, N J	.50
Mrs L Thurman	.50
M A Martin	.50
Mr & Mrs E W Wright	.50
Robert M Brown	.50
Mrs W H Robbins	.50
Mrs M J Evans	.50
Annie C Letter	.50
Edith L Readon	.50
Thos Stackhouse	.50
Mr & Mrs E W Wright	.50
La Clede, Ill	.50
Mrs E L Kyle	.50
Miss Christina	.50
Wm Lyons	.50
Mr & Mrs E W Wright	.50
Miss Margaret Anderson	.50
Mrs Henry Lynn	.50
Eliza C Lauchle	.50
Mr & Mrs E W Wright	.50
Mrs D H Wall	.50
L Throman	.50
Mrs Helen M Many	.50
A Friend, Pittsburg, Pa	.50
Mrs Lulu M Dolloff	.25
Mrs L M Dolloff	.25
Mrs C A Van Warmers	.25
Mrs Lulu M Dolloff	.25
Donald Williams	.25
Lydia L Depen	25
Mrs Lowth	.25
John W Rudman	.25

Additional acknowledgments in subsequent issues of the Christian Herald.

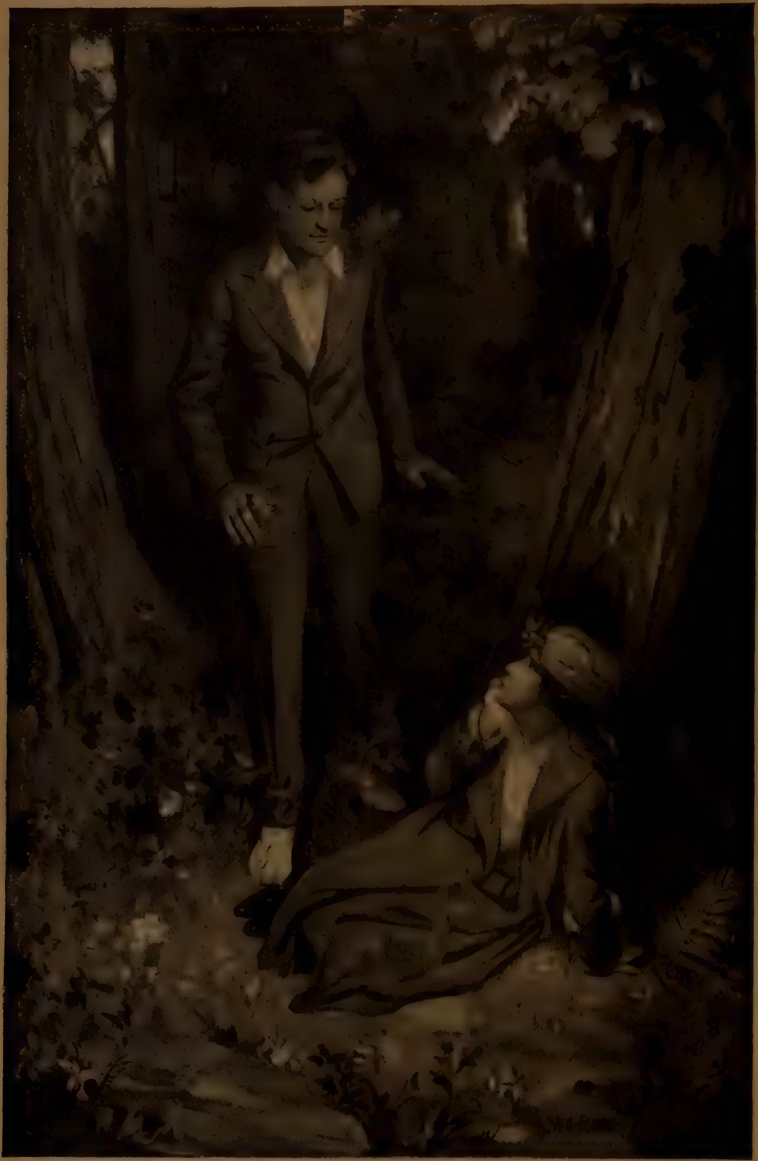
ifts to the Christian Herald Fund for War Widows and Orphans, Including Gifts to Palestine and to Armenia and Syria

rs J Sparks	$4.00
rs Kirkpatrick	4.00
H Gibson	4.00
F Harrison	6.00
A Watkins	6.00
s Rachel Woods	3.60
estville, S. S. Cl. Beloit, O.	3.60
alter Cramer	4.00
venth & 8th Grades of the La Fayette, Ore. Public School	6.25
L. Harrington	3.25
J May	17.50
t Cong. Ch, Belle Fourche, S Dak	35.00
nice Vallancour	1.20
H W Marshall	$.40
Primitive Math, S S, Tamaqua, Pa	22.50
Hampton Hall, S S, Lawrenceville, N. J.	4.30
H C Down & family	2.70
L A Fegley	2.65
Elizabeth Schwab	4.00
Jr C E Soc, Bloomingdale, Mich	2.40
Sarah E Estabrook	6.00
Mrs John W Smith	3.50
Volunteer Class, Lincoln Way Meth. Ch	22.50
Johnnaestal Ch, Elgin N D	15.60
H M Sanders	$28.00
A Swanson	12.00
Ebenezer Church, Elgin, N Dak	21.00
S W Morrison	1.00
Frances M Hugo	1.00
Mrs G H Mast	1.00
Mrs E B Kiblu	1.00
Mrs Louise Knapp	1.00
E H M, Cambridge, Mass	1.00
L E Wieght	1.00
Ira S Coppen	1.00
J A Snearer	1.00
Mrs Henry Singley	1.00
Mrs Wm Whitted	1.00
L E Sherwood	1.00
Mrs C M Sawney	$1.00
— Bloomington, Ill	1.00
E H K, Greensburg, Pa	1.00
Mrs Florence E Butler	1.00
Mrs J H Hinters	1.00
R S Bell	1.00
A Friend, Ely Creek, N Y	1.00
——, Washington, D C	1.00
Anna Atkisson	1.00
Mrs McHarktdrick	1.00
Mrs John Rhodes	1.00
Mrs E Tuchman	1.00
Nellie Brown	1.00
Amelia Ruegg	$1.00
Carrie Stevens	1.00
Walter E Warren	1.00
J W Sharrack	1.00
Miss A Tweeddale	1.00
Mrs H C Mayhew	1.00
A Friend, Washington, Md	1.00
M L Black Sourn	1.00
A Friend, Portage, Wis	1.00
Julian Hatch	1.00
Mr Nic Middlecoop	1.00
Mrs Anna Condon	1.00
Mrs Amos	1.00
Mrs Ella Means	$1.00
Mrs Lewis B Rowe	1.00
Miss Gladys Johnson	1.00
Mrs Nelson Stead	1.00
Mrs S S Perry	1.00
A Friend, Phila., Pa	1.00
Lillie M Wallace	1.00
S J Black	1.00
Mrs W B Wheeless	1.00
Mary A Slazmaker	1.00
H P Barten	1.00
Philip Patterson	.50
Mrs E K Karr	.50
A Friend, San Antonio, Texas	.50
Mrs Ira Gardner	$.50
Miss Florence Johnson	.50
Miss Esther Johnson	.50
Miss Hulda Bjorkquest	.50
Mrs Erick Johnson	.50
Miss Hazel Johnson	.50
Miss Ethel Eckwall	.50
Mrs Edith Kennedy	.50
Miss Helen Frisk	.50
Miss Mannie Martenson	.50
Miss Marie Youngstrand	.50
Miss Esther Swanson	.50
Miss Ethel Lund	$.50
Miss Myrtle Swanson	.50
Miss Frances Wibarg	.50
Grace Bowal	.50
S A Burruss	.50
Mrs Joseph Condon	.50
Mrs C E Condon	.50
Mary Edith Hershey	.50
Mrs S N Dawson	.50
Mrs Jas Condon	.50
Miss C E Condon	.50
Mary Edith Hershey	.50

Additional names will be found on the third cover of this issue, facing page 628.

END YOUR GIFTS FOR ALL FUNDS TO THE CHRISTIAN HERALD, BIBLE HOUSE, NEW YORK CITY

LILACS AND LOVERS



"You little thing!" he cried, because he must say something for the pity that swelled within him. "I've hurt my foot—in a hole. It won't go"

A Short Story of a Sweet Inheritance

By ANNIE HAMILTON DONNELL

Author of "A Chance Detective"

"I SMELL them!"

She stood, a little blanched creature, with her face uplifted raptly. There were plenty of smells on McDooley Street, but none of them could by any stretch of imagination have called that look into Janet's face. The look the McDooley smells "called" was a patient, weary one, born of long acquaintance and submission.

This look—

"They are there, blossoming—I smell them!" the uptilted little face intent with the smelling. Yet never in her life of eighteen years had this child of the workshops smelled of lilacs blossoming. She had only inherited the smell of them. It was that inherited essence of Maytime—the sweet wealth of perfume from great bushes—that was wafted to her now. For this was Maytime.

"In May," Grannie had always said, "sure as ever May came you could smell 'em, blossoming. Down each side o' the gate, but, land, the smell didn't stay down there! It came to meet you a long ways—oh, the smell of 'em blossoming, Janny!"

As long as she and Grannie had lived together in their three little rooms in a city tenement, Janet had heard of the bushes down each side of the gate that blossomed in May. They never ceased to be fresh in Grannie's memory, and when, not very long ago, Grannie could no longer bear life in a city tenement, and had slipped away from Janet to live in the Beautiful Country, she had carried with her the yearning for her beloved blossoms.

"Each side o' the Gate—I'll smell 'em, Janny,"—she had murmured. "They'll be bigger and purpler There. The smell will come to meet me. I'm beginning to get—whiffs of—it now—" and so Grannie had gone to the Country to live.

Crowds of girls and boys, none of them out of their teens, were bursting momently from the big door behind Janet and eddying past her with the onward rush of freed slaves. An untimely accident to certain machinery had tied up the work; there was to half holiday. And it was Maytime. Riotous possessed them all. Some one caught at Ja sleeve. Some one else pulled at her skirt.

"Come along—make her come, Pearlie! Wh she doin' standin' still, wastin' her time?"

The girl, Pearlie, tugged harder. "Come with Janet. Me an' Addy an' Mame's goin' out to beach."

"Come along to the movies with us, Janet!" c other voices. "We're goin' to stay clear through second show!"

The tuggings and the voices ceased, and gradu the riotous little tide flowed by and left the girl al still with her rapt, lifted look.

"I'm going, Grannie." She talked sometimes Grannie instead of to herself. "The machinery br down; it's a holiday. I'm going to find lilacs. I smell 'em somewhere. You said in May—it's M time, Grannie."

When the small figure at length moved, it mo very swiftly. Janet wasted no more time. She w straight to the railroad station and demanded ticket."

"Where to,'d you say?" But she had not said. H riedly counting the silver in her worn little bag, slid it all under the wicket, to the last penny.

"Is there enough to go an' come back? I've got come back."

"Go where to? Our rates are higher to some pla than oth—" But the flippant words stopped closer study of the girl's face. Something th stopped them short.

"I want to go into the country where there are— She stopped in some confusion, but went on ag bravely. Was it anything to be ashamed of? "Wh there are lilacs," she finished, meeting the man's e steadily. "Out far enough for that. If you know a place—"

"See here!" The man was leaning forward a speaking earnestly. "You get a ticket to—here, th ticket. That'll drop you off at a junction whe there's trolleys Take a car going east and you w come to a piece o' woods. We've been there on pi nics, my wife an' I an' the kids. It's a nice place, a not far off, either. I don't know about lilacs—"

"It's May," smiled Janet blithely. "They'll b there! Somewhere." The smell would come to me her—it had already come, the smell she had inherite from Grannie.

"Well, I don't know about there being any i woods—there's your train now, miss. Yes, that's return ticket. You've forgot your change." H leaned a little farther forward. "Hope you find 'em, he called after her.

Of course she would find them. She sat in the ca with that curious effect of an expectant little nose, up tilted, waiting.

"I'm on the way now, Grannie! Oh, wasn't it goo the machinery broke down!"

If it had been Maytime in the city, what was i here in this new, this tenderly green and blossomin world! Janet sat drinking in the sweet wonder of it No gaunt great buildings, shutting out the sky— nothing shutting out the sky—nothing dreary o work-ridden or McDooley. The space and tende greenness and Maytime of it took Janet's breat away. She almost forgot the lilacs.

In the same general space, the same tender greenness and Maytime, another young creature was at large. Moses Tuttle went swinging through the woods whistling joyously. May was in his blood, thumping in all his veins, singing in his soul. For this was his May of Mays—his time to rejoice. He had won his fight with disease and was whole again. The doctor only yesterday had pronounced him whole. He had put up a good fight; there were weeks in it that he did not like to remember—gray and hopeless weeks, a little grayer and more hopeless because he fought all alone—but he had been game. He liked to remember he had been game. It added to this joy of Maytime—sent him striding faster, whistling louder.

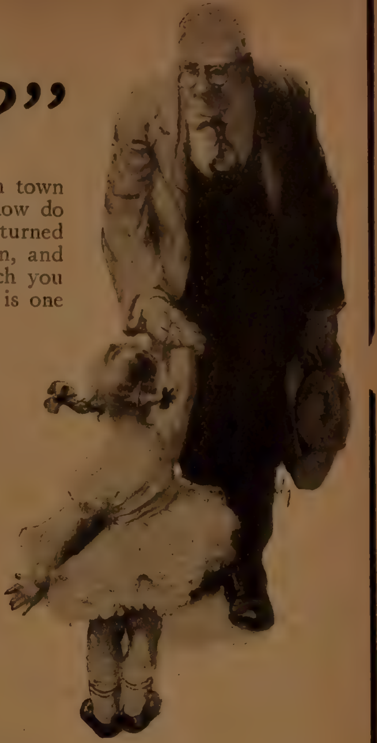
Of course, now, he might go back— Go back! To a city desk, from this? He laughed at the joke of it. No, he would build his little shack over into a little house. He would add to his acre other acres—he would stay here under the open sky and make good. He flung out his arms and breathed deep. It would be so good to make good!

He had a bag of Aunt Avis's cookies under his arm, and when he could stop whistling he ate one—or two— or three. Aunt Avis lived back there beyond the woods; she had been his friend from the moment she had discovered the white, weak thing that had been Moses Tuttle. She was a friend now to this brown, lusty thing.

The lovely day was over. The twilight was nearly over. A star or two peeped through the sky; a little new moon shone lambently down near the horizon. The woods were full of evening sounds—drowsy twitters and small squeaks, the flurry of small homing wings. And there were beautiful woodsy and Maytime smells. One of the beautiful smells came from

Continued on page 622

"How Do You Do, Mr. Riley?"



"'Onct when I was ist a little girl'—only four years old—mother and I were down town nd I saw you not far away. I broke away from mother, ran up to you, and said 'how do ou do, Mr. Riley?' I shall never forget the wonderful smile on your face when you turned nd saw me, a tiny little tot. You bowed and spoke to me as though I were a queen, and when I told you I knew 'most all of your child rhymes and enjoyed them very much you were as pleased as if some man of letters had complimented you. That, Mr. Riley, is one of my finest memories."

So wrote a grown-up little girl to James Whitcomb Riley.

Are you giving your children the precious memories of those beautiful poems? Will your children be able to say—"My mother read me Riley when I was a child—and the 'Raggedy Man' and 'Little Orphant Annie' have rejoiced and comforted me all the days of my life?"

JAMES WHITCOMB RILEY

has passed on—and the grown-up world mourns. In the hearts of the little children is a void that cannot be filled—but that can be forgotten by the reading and re-reading of those simple and childlike poems.

No more does Uncle Sam's postman stagger under the weight of 10,000 letters—the tribute of the children of the world to their Uncle Sydney (James Whitcomb Riley) on his birthday. Riley has passed on but his work lives. You can read it to your children—and enrich their lives and yours for all times.

Those of us who missed things in childhood—missed learning to ride or to swim—feel that there is a lack that can never be made up. Even more is this so with things of the spirit. The child whose imagination has been enriched by the beauty and charm of Riley, carries a treasure to old age—a treasure hard to get later on.

From the little girl who said she felt all alone without him to the President of the United States, who pays him tribute, Riley is in all hearts—big and little.

Never Again At This Price

The heirs of James Whitcomb Riley came to us, as the publishers of Mark Twain, and said that they would be glad to reduce their royalty so that we could place his works in the homes of all those who love him. So we are able to make this complete set of all Riley's works, beautifully illustrated by Howard Chandler Christy and others—at a very low price—for the present.

If the books are not full of joy and inspiration for you and your children, send them back at our expense. If they are all you expected, you pay for them in little monthly payments that you will never notice. It costs you nothing—puts you under no obligation. Send the coupon, only, no money.

The generosity of the Riley heirs and the resources of Harper and Brothers give you a rare opportunity. Don't miss it.

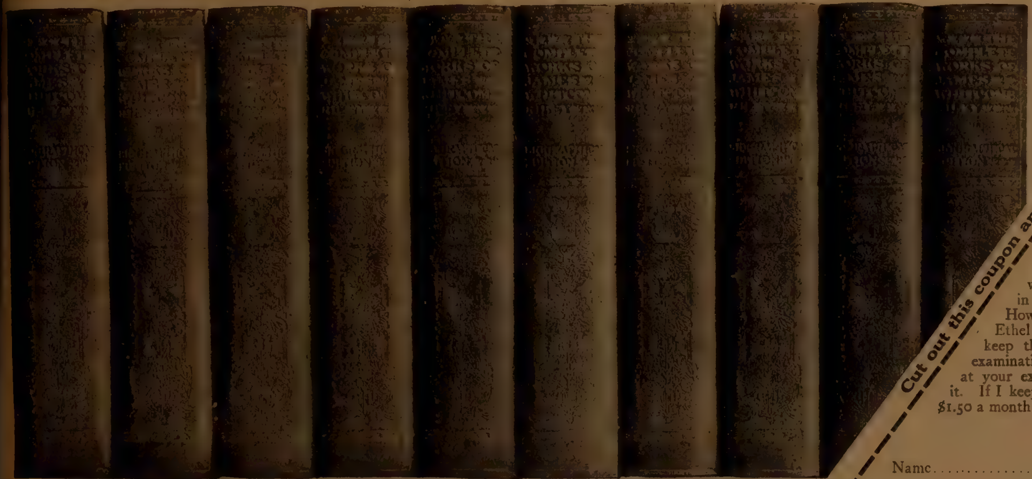
For Christian Herald Readers—A LAST CHANCE

So marvellous an opportunity as this cannot last. What we have on hand is just one edition. As long as it lasts, this low price holds good. Afterwards—remember the price of the making of books rises from day to day.

So these books are going fast—and the opportunity for the low price goes with them.

Act now and get your Riley at the low price. This is the first time we have made the offer to the thousands of readers of the Christian Herald—and it will probably be the last—as their demands will eat up every last set of the edition. Many a reader will be disappointed. Don't be one of those. Get the low price while you can. Send this coupon today.

HARPER & BROTHERS - - - - ESTABLISHED 1817 - - - - NEW YORK



Cut out this coupon and mail it today!

C. H.
5-31-19

Harper & Brothers
170 Franklin Square
New York

Please send me the complete works of JAMES WHITCOMB RILEY, bound in rich, wine colored cloth, stamped in gold, fully illustrated by Howard Chandler Christy and Ethel Franklin Betts. I may keep this set for ten days for examination and return it to you at your expense, if I do not want it. If I keep the books, I will remit $1.50 a month for thirteen months

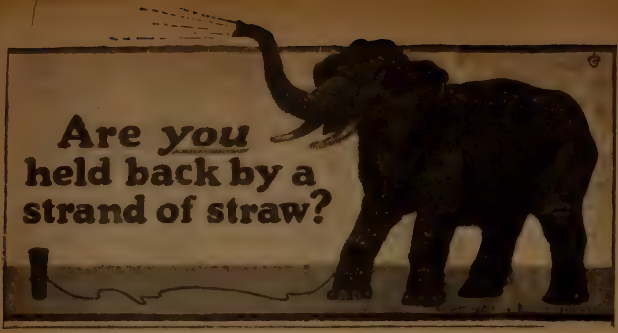
Name..

Address..

Occupation..

Send for our Special Canadian Offer

Cut out this coupon and Mail Today



Are you held back by a strand of straw?

Then read this story of a remarkable Club —an organization of Opportunity and Advancement—that helps you win your way to Freedom, Effectiveness and Fortune.

DO you remember the story of the elephant that was tethered to a post with a rope of straw—held captive for years with a bond he could have broken with but a fraction of his strength?

Have you ever thought that you may be like that elephant—believing yourself enslaved by some chain of steel when in reality you are permitting yourself to be held back by some strand of straw?

Why is it you haven't a better job—easier hours and more pay?

Why haven't you a bigger business—a larger income?

Why aren't you forging ahead instead of standing still?

What is holding you back? Is it something real or something imaginary?

If your advancement—your happiness—your success—is lessened or retarded by some imaginary handicap—some fetter of straw—shake it off—now—and be through with it forever. Then develop the courage—the confidence—the power—that will enable you to do more, be more and have more all the days of your life.

You can do it—just as others are doing it—through Membership in the United Sales Club of America, a nation-wide institution of continuous inspiration, friendly encouragement and practical cooperation.

What the Club Does For You

The United Sales Club is founded on the fundamental fact that everyone has something to sell—either merchandise, ideas or services. And, whatever you have to sell, you are wonderfully helped in selling it, the very minute you are elected to Membership in this successful organization.

If you are an employe, selling your time for a weekly wage, the U-S-C shows you how to multiply the worth of your services and how to sell those services at the highest market price.

If you are a merchant, the U-S-C shows you how to sell more goods and make more money than you ever made before.

If you are a manufacturer, the U-S-C shows you how to reduce friction and waste, increase your output and enlarge your markets.

If you are a professional man—lawyer, doctor, teacher, clergyman—the Club helps you solve your many problems and make your services more efficient and more profitable.

In fact, no matter who you are, where you are or what your daily task, the United Sales Club of America shows you how to turn stumbling-blocks into stepping-stones and gain the goal for which you are striving.

Investigate at Once

Let nothing—no matter how important it may seem—prevent you from immediately investigating this constructive Club of alert and progressive people who are linked together for worthy personal and business achievement.

Learn how—by prompt action—you can now secure a Charter Membership in this Club at a cost so low you won't need to give it a second thought.

Find out exactly how the Club service—its Plans, Principles and Ideas—may be immediately applied to your personal problems in a way that will surely lead to mental, physical and financial betterment.

It costs nothing to investigate. You have everything to gain. And you can't possib'y lose as the Club absolutely guarantees its privileges, benefits and profits.

No Money Required

Send no money. Simply send your name, address and occupation (a postal will do) to the United Sales Club of America, Suite 1105, Fifth National Bank Building, New York, and the Club Secretary will send you, by return mail, without cost or obligation, a beautifully bound copy of the Club Year-Book, which contains the Club's history and your opportunity. Not until you read this intensely interesting book can you possibly realize the importance of this remarkable organization, and how a Membership therein can build, for you and yours, better lives and bigger bank accounts.

LILACS AND LOVERS

Continued from page 620

the lapel of Moses Tuttle's coat, where Aunt Avis had pinned a great cluster of lilacs.

"Good!" sniffed Moses from time to time, as he strode. He was going to ask Aunt Avis for a little lilac bush—no, a big lilac bush!—to plant on each side of his gate, when he had a gate. He was going to have a gate!

He was good to look at, in a freckled, brown, clean way—this Moses who had been rescued from the swollen stream of commerce, or who, by the grace of God, had rescued himself. He was neither tall nor short, neither thick nor thin—an ordinary Moses, but good to look at in his way.

Not so far now to the little shack. The soft dark closed in around him and he loved it. He thought of his little oil lamp and the supper he would get—with the lilacs in water on the table. Thinking of supper made him eat another of Aunt Avis's cookies—two, three others. So he strode onward toward that other young creature within the same general world-space. They were getting pretty near to each other now.

Suddenly, in one of the brief intervals between his whistlings, a new night-sound smote on Moses' ear—a new and alarming one. It was a soft little sob.

"What!" He stopped, listening, and it was repeated. It seemed now to be a very avalanche of soft little sobs. His ears must be deceiving him.

"Oh—dear!" Then again and yet again: "Oh—dear! Oh—dear!"

Moses Tuttle became thoroughly alarmed. By straining his eyes he was able to discern a little heap of darker shadow than the surrounding shadows. With three strides he was beside it.

"Oh! Oh, are you alive—I mean a man—I mean somebody! I thought there'd never be anything but trees. I've kept trying and trying to walk!"

Moses pulled his flashlight from his pocket and directed its shaft of clear light down upon the darker little shadow. As long as he lived he was not to forget what he saw—the piteous, blanched little face.

"You little thing!" he cried because he must cry something for the pity that swelled in him.

"I've hurt my foot—in a hole. It—it won't go! I've tried and tried. And there weren't any—" She sat up suddenly and threw up her head." I smell them! I smell them now!" she exclaimed, true to her inheritance from Grannie. She was actually laughing in spite of her pain.

"Now I can walk!" she said almost blithely. "I've got to walk to get back to that trolley track. I was so afraid I'd be late to work tomorrow! When you have to be early you can't be late! You have to get up and walk—I'm going to!" But the effort was not a success. She fell into Moses Tuttle's outflung arms, an unconscious little load that in all his excitement he felt to be too pitifully light. Even so light a weight had been too much for the wrenched and swollen foot.

Here was a situation to try the mettle of still stancher souls than that of Moses, and his was stanch. What to do now? Night—woods—this little load—

"There's just one thing," thought Moses, and proceeded to do it. He must carry his load to his little shack in the woods; it was close by, and all other shelters were far away. There was no shelter but his, absolutely none, and shelter there must be for this little wounded creature. A dash of rain was in Moses' face, and he realized suddenly that no crescent moon or friendly stars were visible now through the trees.

He found his way slowly to avoid stumbling, and stepped into the small shack he called his home. By instinct as well as the familiarity of long acquaintance he found his bunk and deposited his load gently upon it. Then he lighted his little lamp.

Moses was thinking quick thoughts. He set the lamp on the table and drew the table up beside the bunk. The clear little flame lighted up the face of the girl, and again he felt the oversweep of pity that blocked his throat and hurt him like physical pain of his own.
was such a frail little face! All boy's clean, splendid chivalry respon to the appeal of it.

Any moment she might regain sciousness, and he did not want her t
yet. He had much to do. Instinctiv he recognized that the girl was in great danger; she would be shelte and comfortable here.

He placed a glass of water and A Avis's cookies, what were left of th beside the clear little lamp. Th finding a sheet of paper and a pencil, wrote rapidly.

"Aunt Avis made the cookies—ple eat them. She will be here soon. Do try to move till she comes. This i beautiful safe place."

Outside he waited until he heard stir and sob her little soft "Oh—dea
Then he heard the rustling of paper knew that she was reading his n
There were no more sobs. He could now.

He ran most of the way, but thoughts kept pace. In later ye Moses wondered and smiled a li whimsically over the wide scope those thoughts of his as he crash through underbrush and darkness a rain. For he never forgot th thoughts.

He made actual plans as he ran,
only of what he would do tonight
what he would do tomorrow. So th when he arrived, panting, at the w to-do little home of his good friend, was at no loss for words. He was o at loss for breath.

Aunt Avis was knitting peacefu beside her great lamp, thanking stars (as she would have said) for ho and light and shelter from Mayti rain. From this calm contemplati Moses awoke her.

"Will you be my aunt? he panted
—the great glistening—wet boy
"For better or worse? To have a hold—from this time forth? I do n an aunt so—a Simon-pure aunt! N tonight, right away! At the shack

Aunt Avis lowered her knitting a raised her glasses to her soft white h

"Moses," she said, "did you w your feet? Today was my sweep day—there, never mind. What's f Go on."

"It's about feet," went on Mo
"One, anyway. I don't think a thing's really broken—"

"Come nearer to the light," co manded Aunt Avis. "You don't out o' your head."

"I'm not," laughed Moses, and in relief of laughing picked up his st more sanely; but he told it with gr rapidity. There was such need rapidity.

"She came to before I left. I he her," he finished. "She's got y cookies to eat, and I told her in the n it was a perfectly safe place and—you'd be there soon. Will you be aunt, Aunt Avis? It's raining," add he honestly.

"What's rain? Get my rubber front hall, under front stairs. U brella's in the corner. Waterpr hanging on hook. I'll get some thi upstairs, Moses," calling over shoulder as she went. "Get the nica bottle on kitchen shelf—mark
'A-r-n-i-c-a.' Get the right one. get my roll of old linen. Moses!"

"Yes?"

"Get the alcohol bottle, too
A-l-c-o-h-o-l. Oh, yes, and, Neph Moses——"

Moses laughed happily.

"What say, Auntie?"

"Get the lantern under the kitch sink and light it. It's all trimmed nic

In the small bright shack Janet contentedly. She had read her n and eaten the cookies, and now she w nursing something sweet—very sweet and moist against her cheek. She h them in her hand against her cheek! R ones! With terrible tweaks and grim of pain she had wriggled to where th lay on the floor and salvaged them.

"Grannie dear, if you could sm
I'm holding them here in my hand
I'm kissing them, Grannie."

The whole little place was sweet w them. They still lay against Jane hon Aunt Avis came. And as asleep.

little thing!" murmured Aunt Moses, take my wet things out ır shed or somewhere. Blow lantern. Build up the fire.
teakettle. I brought some tea—er have tea. And biscuit and a the basket—don't upset the get the bandages ready to put as she wakes up. She's terrible ephew."
nodded, his throat blocked re, with the pity of it.
thin."
thin," he managed through kade.
ks the way—" kindly Aunt Avis to finish. But Moses knew—she need to finish. The thin one the way he himself had looked e began his fight.
e he blew out the lantern Moses d another note. It was a part plan he had made on his run the woods. He had planned words.
gone to hold down her job.
me about it. She was terribly Tell her it's all right. She hurry about getting well. You ood sport, Aunt Avis, and I'm your nephew."
ast of it he had not planned. He s he wrote that part, but it was a mile, as if he would like to kiss vis for being a good sport.
ote he smuggled into the shack;
written it in the tiny lean-to
If he was to carry out the plan, hurry. He was leaving his wan est in beautiful care. He must hand when the girl's factory blew; from experience he knew ily jobs were lost. But the ad gone out of his gallant plan unt Avis had begun—and he shed.
e end of the second day Moses ck. He whistled softly outside k, to attract the attention of vis, whom he could see bustling nside. He could see her cant te head at the soft whistling
Now she was coming out—
dn't stay," he said.
didn't?" But the sarcasm was ntle. She was looking at him ntle old eyes.
t Avis, I saw the kind of place
I didn't breathe the air, for asn't any! Aunt Avis, I couldn't wn a job like that for her! A room—no air—up on the top o fire escape—death for little ite things like her." He brought grim details in little jerks, as he were out of breath. "She's aving, Aunt Avis!"
looked into each other's eyes,
-man and the old woman with rt of a girl. Aunt Avis's eyes ll of tears.
ll save her, Moses. I'll begin, u—well, the beginning comes
've got her at my house now. I mi Wood take her in his cart's got easy springs. I was just setting things to rights here.
walk back with me through the it's beautiful in the woods to-You'll find that little thing most red up in laylocks!"
May days grew to May weeks
e "saving" of lone little Janet and color came creeping to her d cheeks and love to her heart.
very happy, and by and by eful at Aunt Avis's; the days
joy-days to Janet.
s came and went—worked and
. Joy-days, too, to Moses. He at his house-making and his farmall the vigor of his healthened body and the vigor of his soul.
aytime went by.
white laylocks won't blossom middle o' June, maybe not till d," Aunt Avis said one day.
how much later that bush is—kind of freak. But I tell lengthens out the season, so I You'll like the white ones,
' She used Grannie's name, and ved to have her.
love them!" Janet cried. "I'm to watch them from the first the little white buds are born.
ng to kiss the first baby!"
s later than ever in June when covered the first little bursting buds. Moses found her beside the bush, reaching up on tiptoe. She seemed to be whispering, but he did not know it was to Grannie.

"Here's some, Grannie—I've found some! The fattest little white babies! They'll be blossoming and keep blossomed weeks, Aunt Avis says. Oh, Grannie, if you could have them, too!"

The picture was very sweet to Moses, and inspiration came with it to him. Being Moses, he seized it—he lost no time.

"Janet—dear"—he held out both his big brown hands— "they're beautiful flowers to be married in, white lilacs! Don't you think, dear, you'd be willing to marry me in them? I could wait till the last ones—I love you, little girl. You little thing! Janet—Janet!"

He was good to look at in his freckled, brown, clean way. And now with his shining face—

"Janet, aren't you going to say yes, dear?" he pleaded. But she was already saying it with the soft touch of her given lips. That first soft touch, as old and as young as life.

◆

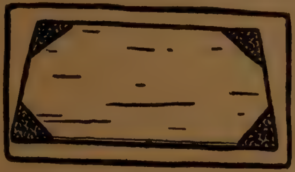
A Blotter Pad for Mother's Desk

BY LAURA A. KIRKMAN

NELLIE had seen, in stores, the desk pads with the fancy corners of leather and brass which are made to hold large sheets of blotting paper, and the thought occurred to her that she might make such a pad out of cardboard and cretonne for her mother's desk.

This is how she made it: she fitted a piece of stiff cardboard to the desk top and then cut a second piece of cardboard the exact size of the first.

Next she made four corner pieces out of a pretty scrap of cretonne, lining these pieces with stiff paper and pasting the edges ot both cretonne and paper-lining to the under side of one of the large pieces of cardboard.



When the paste had dried thoroughly, she took the second large piece of cardboard and pasted it firmly to the under side of the piece with the covered corners.

Now the blotter pad was complete and all that remained to do was to buy one of the large ten-cent sheets of blotting paper and cut it the right size to fit the pad.

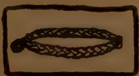
A Ribbon Collar for Kitty

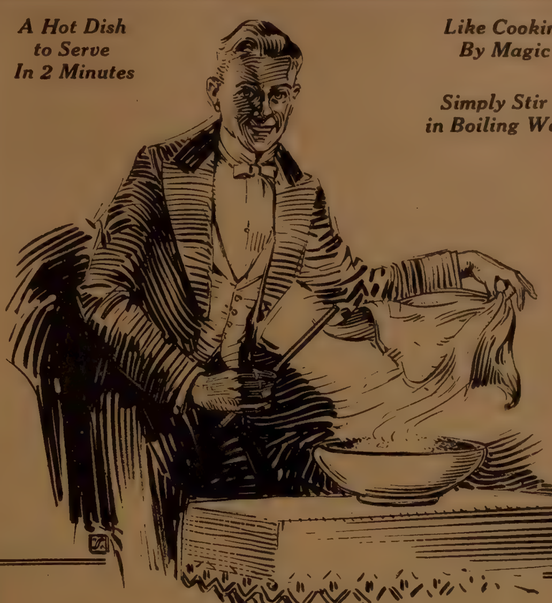
EVERY spring, before the young birds were old enough to get out of their nests, Elsie's mother put a leather collar around kitty's neck which had a bell attached to the front part. She did this so that the birds would be warned that their enemy was near, and also in order that she might keep track of the cat and see that he was not up in trees after the birds.

But this year Elsie asked mother if she might not make kitty a softer collar which would not rub the fur off his neck or be as heavy as the old one. Mother was glad to have Elsie try and see what she could do, and this was the kind she made:

She took three lengths of ribbon one inch wide and fourteen inches long, and braided them together. On one end of this ribbon braid she sewed a hook and on the other end an eye, cleverly covering the hook and eye by a small rosette made of baby ribbon. The bell she slipped to the center of the collar and, with a few stitches, sewed it fast to the collar. (See diagram.)

"We can wash it when it gets dirty," she explained to mother. And mother agreed that it was a better collar than the old leather one.





Two-Minute Oat Food

Already Three-Hour Cooked

A Hot Dish
to Serve In 2 Minutes

Like Cooking
By Magic

Simply Stir It
in Boiling Water

Presto—It Is Ready!

Hot, Flavory Oats—Super-Cooked

Yes, Madam, we have it—a hot, ready-cooked oat food—the dish you have always wanted. Now you don't need to serve an oatless breakfast just for lack of time. It is ready in two minutes.

High-Heat Cooking

Two-Minute Oat Food is the best-cooked oat dish ever served.

We cook it three hours by live steam under pressure, at higher than boiling heat.

It is cooked as homes can't cook oats, and made easy to digest.

This high-heat cooking also brings out a new, delightful flavor. It gives the oat dish a new welcome, especially with children.

That's what you also wanted. Oats are the supreme food which every child should get. This new form makes them convenient, and gives them new enticements.

20 Dishes—15c

Simply stir in boiling water. In two minutes the water is absorbed. Then you have a hot, soft, flavory dish—the finest oat food that you ever served.

We evaporate these cooked oats so they come to you condensed. One-half cup will make 4 dishes.

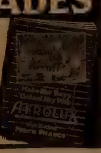
The 15-cent package serves 20 big dishes, and saves you the cost of cooking.

Start it now. See what it saves you, see how folks like it. It means a new breakfast era.

Ask your grocer for Two-Minute Oat Food—15 cents.

The Quaker Oats Company

(3102)



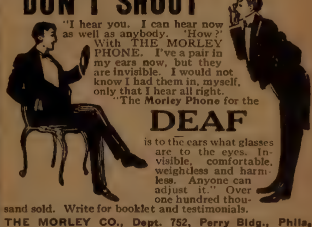
AEROLUX
NO-WHIP
Ventilating
PORCH SHADES

Transform your porch into a cool, shady, outdoor room at small expense. They shut out heat and glare but let in cooling breezes. No other shades like them.

Send For This Book—Free

It will show you how others have made their porches cozy, attractive, home-like --will give you valuable suggestions for beautifying your porch.

THE AEROSHADE COMPANY
894 Oakland Ave., Waukesha, Wis.



"DON'T SHOUT"

"I hear you. I can hear now as well as anybody. 'How?' With THE MORLEY PHONE. I've a pair in my ears now, but they are invisible. I would not know I had them in, myself, only that I hear all right.

"The Morley Phone for the

DEAF

is to the ears what glasses are to the eyes. Invisible, comfortable, weightless and harmless. Anyone can adjust it." Over one hundred thousand sold. Write for booklet and testimonials.

THE MORLEY CO., Dept. 752, Perry Bldg., Phila.

BLYMYER CHURCH BELLS

Bring people to church. Their clear, beautiful, sustained, far-reaching tones are a power for good. Your church should have one. Durability guaranteed. Inexpensive. Art catalog & buying plans free.

The Cincinnati Bell Foundry Co. Dept. B51 Cincinnati, O.

WE PAY CASH FOR OLD FALSE TEETH

Don't matter if broken. Also cash for old gold, silver, platinum, dental gold and old gold jewelry. Will send cash by return mail and will hold goods 10 days for sender's approval of our price. Mail to Mazer's Tooth Specialty,
Dept. 37, 2007 So. 5th St., Philadelphia, Pa.

Champion

Dependable Spark Plugs

Champion Spark Plugs were used in the Overland Model 90 stock car that made the remarkable non-stop high gear run at Oklahoma recently.

Perfect Score in High Gear Non-Stop Record

It was a searching, gruelling test. The gear shift lever was removed—the car sealed in high gear, and for 4370 non-stop miles it ran perfectly. The Overland report states: "Not once did the motor miss an explosion. Not even a spark plug was changed." Champion Spark Plugs have long been standard equipment in all Overland cars. Their well known dependability was again demonstrated in this 7-day test over all kinds of roads and through bad weather. It is this dependability, known to users of all types of motor cars, that makes car owners demand spark plugs with the name "Champion" on the Insulator.

Champion "O" ½-inch
A 14, Price $1.00

Champion Spark Plug Company, Toledo, Ohio
Champion Spark Plug Company, of Canada, Ltd., Windsor, Ontario

First Lien Mortgage
GOLD BONDS
Netting the Investor 7%

Secured by income-bearing, improved Apartment properties located in the larger cities of the rich and growing South. Existing conditions make interest rate higher than in the North. Secure this higher rate now. When the rate recedes it is then too late. Bonds free from normal Federal Income Tax up to 4%. Bonds repayable annually. Interest payable monthly, in advance. Ask for booklet "REASONS WHY" and "MILLER SERVICE, How This Insures and Protects the Bond-Buyer's Investment Interests"

G. L. MILLER & COMPANY, Inc.
126 Hurt Building, Atlanta, Ga.
Also Miami, Florida

6%

A SOUND 6% INVESTMENT

Our 6% Time Certificates are a very desirable investment. For 24 years they have been worth their full face value plus interest—First Mortgage security back of them—Issued for $100 or more—Interest checks semi-annually. We pay 5% on Certificates payable on demand.

Booklet gives full information. Write for it.

THE CALVERT MORTGAGE CO.
863 Calvert Bldg., Baltimore, Md.

ROUGH ON RATS

Clear your house and keep it free of rats and mice with old reliable "Rough On Rats." Kills them all quickly — and they
"Dont Die in the House"

"Rough on Rats" successfully exterminates these pests where other preparations fail. Mix it with foods that rats and mice will eat. Change the kind of food whenever necessary. Don't be pestered—get "Rough on Rats" at drug and general stores. Send for booklet, "Ending Rats and Mice".

E.S.WELLS, Chemist, Jersey City. N. J.
Originator of
"Rough On Rats"

Window and Door Screens
(A hint for husbands)

A THOROUGHLY clean screen lets a surprising amount of light into the house. Since your screens were on duty last year they doubtless have gathered dust, oil and grime. Here's a quick recipe for immaculate screens: First, free them from dust, then dissolve a tablespoonful of Gold Dust in a pail of warm water. Scrub up and down and sideways. Rinse with plenty of water. Dry in sun. Gold Dust is the soapiest and quickest grease-dissolvent. It is gentle in action, too. Remember: You need to use only a little. See how the above recipe will freshen up your screens this year!—Adv.

One Treatment with Cuticura
Clears Dandruff

All druggists; Soap 25, Ointment 25 & 50, Talcum 25. Sample each free of "Cuticura, Dept. M, Boston."

WALL PAPER
1,000,000 ROLLS
1c Per Roll
Write for sample catalog of 50 new designs and colorings.
SAMPLE BOOK MAILED FREE
Martin Rosenberger, 1861 Vine Street, Cincinnati, Ohio

THE DAIL

J. H. Jowett, D.D., Rev. Richard Braunstein, Rev. Edwin W. Caswell, Cha

Christ's Moral Repulsions

SUNDAY. Matt. 4 : 10. "Get thee hence, Satan!" Mark 8 : 33. "Get thee behind me, Satan!" It is the intensity of this moral repulsion with which I am now concerned. There is no toying with the tempter. The answer is not half in resentment and half in endearment. It is not the genial speech of compromise. It is vehement, violent, final. It makes no difference that in the one temptation Satan sought to lead Christ to roads of worldly sovereignty, while in the other he sought to lure him from the rugged ways of sacrifice to the flowery ways of ease. Both enticements were met with stern repulsion. It would seem as though the Man of Nazareth called out all his reserves and met the gentle and plausible seduction as if it were a massed assault by all the armies of the evil one. All of which means that Jesus never treated a gracefully clad temptation as though it offered only a light encounter. He treated every temptation as though there were within and behind it all the forces of hell. Always and everywhere he met Satan with all his moral and spiritual powers, and he answered his allurements with the negative of a magnificent repulsion. "Get thee hence!" "Get thee behind me!"

Now there is always a deadly peril in a mild recoil. Mildness offers hospitality to the evil one. It gives him footing and entertainment. That was a mighty word spoken by our Saviour: "The prince of this world cometh and hath nothing in me." There was nothing in common between them. There was not a pinch of congenial soil where the evil seed could find a lodging and a home. Everything was preoccupied. Everything was resistant. And therefore everything was immune. But mildness of retort offers communion. The evil seed finds a partial welcome and in the smallest partiality the evil ministry gets its nutriment. The fact of the matter is, when our answer to the tempter is a sort of half-and-half, or even nine-tenths and a tenth, the wavering tenth destroys our immunity and our soul is smitten with the evil contagion. Our only safety is in a response that is immediate and overwhelming. "Get thee hence, Satan!" J. H. J.

The Measure of God's Love

MONDAY. John 3 : 16. "For God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth on him should not perish, but have everlasting life." In this verse we have packed the whole redemptive theme: It is the sum and substance of the entire Gospel.

How much did God love the world? So much that he gave himself. He could do no more. He gave all. Paul could not comprehend the breadth, length, height and depth of that love. One day while in the Arctic Sea Nansen was trying to find the depth of the water in which his ship was anchored. He let down all the line on board, and could not find the bottom, making repeated attempts, and after each entry wrote the words "deeper than that." One would need gather all that has been written, said, sung and imagined to grasp God's love, and underneath it all put the words "deeper than that." To tell how much God loves the world is the despair of the ages.

"That whosoever believeth." That means everybody everywhere. The rich, poor, wise, ignorant, great, humble, all sorts and conditions of humanity. Every race and every tongue. John Newton said he was glad that the word "whosoever" was used in the text rather than John Newton, for had it been there he would have thought some other John Newton was meant.

"Should not perish." All men regard all men mortal except themselves. The wise man will consider h mortality. "The fashion of thi passeth away." Jesus Christ resurrection and the life. " believeth in me, though he were yet shall he live: and whosoever and believeth in me shall neve God's love is as long as eternity.

R

Sleep

TUESDAY. Psalm 127 : 2. giveth his beloved sleep." seems a waste of time to many people. They associate sleep wi sluggard, and therefore retire lat rise early; whereas sleep and re as divinely ordered as toil, or as and day.

Death is made beautiful by called a sleep; we sing "Asleep in J we read, "Stephen fell asleep"; friend Lazarus sleepeth". We from death, but when weary we w sleep, notwithstanding how much they are. In both we sink awa unconsciousness, letting go of thing visible, trusting that we awake in the morning in safety an light. We have believed that mi ing angels will watch over us and a us. Every night the whole wo beings surrenders into the arms of who giveth sleep. If our day co a repetition of the night, then our and soul surrender would be com We trust to the Spirit of the Alm hovering over us when we give up embrace of sleep, we are then as less as the child in the cradle.

Rest is the luxury of life, restori wasted energies. It is like a new to manhood. All difficult thought problems have a solution in the mi when the mind is clear and the heart ceases to pain. How can willing to receive such priceless from the Infinite in the sleeping while we resist and oppose him i day, the only time our will can s itself? He who keeps the world in the sunlight will care for all t while you sleep between the days. that keepeth thee will not slum He will preserve thy lying down an rising up, thy going out and thy c in, from this time forth and eve evermore.

Is this not the prayer we neve grow—"I pray the Lord my so keep"? We know we can do bu to keep either soul or body, night or day. His hand, like a mo on the brow, soothes to sleep weary child, and his lips kiss us with the morning light. He is than lover, parent or friend; h awaken us in the eternal mo when we shall rest without slum having day without night forever

E. W.

The Map of God's World

WEDNESDAY. Ps. 24 : 1. earth is the Lord's, and the f thereof." That statement from psalm is carved on the front of the exchange in London, in the city by the famous Bank of England, in heart of the financial life of the Br Empire. Whoever put it there st a tremendous fact, which the nations of the earth have not ma reality in the policy of their deve ment.

For most of the wars of history been wars for territory, for more for more of the earth, which has longed to the Lord and not to any nation or people. It is an intere fact that the geographical area population of the great nations at have a striking ratio to the dem which all of them are now making in peace settlement.

All the nations are struggling more of the earth's surface. The U States is almost the only nation th

EDITATION

n, D.D., C. C. Albertson, D.D., W. W. Bustard, D.D., Prof. W. H. T. Dau

nanding some more territory, and re very many people in our own who think we ought to keep the ines and even try to annex nations need to have some lessons 's geography. They do not own It all belongs to God. only stewards put upon it and occupy it with their commerce and give est account of their stewardship. he nations recognize God's own- of the earth there will always be and jealously and war.

C. M. S.

he Child in the Midst

RSDAY. Matt. 18 : 2. "And called a little child unto him, and n in the midst of them." Love ildren has played a great part in velopment of the human race. the child, the little helpless and burden of life, the family ystallized. Around the child the as been organized, and the family beginning of both the state and urch. If there is anything sacred world—anything that lifts hu- above the dust—it is the home, e child is the center of it. Christ more clearly revealed at once ep wisdom and his red-veined ity than when he called a little nd set him in the midst of them. Guy Pearse once said he counted cure verse in Genesis, in the story ar and her child in the wilderness, f the sublimest sentences ever "And God heard the voice of d." "The child in the midst"— loes it mean? It means the exal- of humility. Humility of spirit root both of discipleship and ser- It means the idealization of simple trustfulness, teachableness. Who as a child, who that has been a does not know how close is heaven child heart?

eover, when Jesus set a little in the midst of his disciples, he sized the sanctity of humanity in dividual. There was the child in idst. Yonder was Cæsar on his Pilate was a little Cæsar. Back ar and Pilate was the army. They all against the individual, but was for the individual, since he r the child. What does Cæsar or a child? What does Herod What does Pharaoh care? But cares, and in the long run history es the view of Jesus. Democracy e heart of the child, and the future e world belongs to democracy. hild is symbol not of a class, but classes; symbol not of producer or umer, but of a complete humanity ch the weak grow strong and the grow childlike in innocence and The child in the midst! The war was fought for him. The h was founded for him. The Son n was incarnate for him. The f God died for him. So the uni- belongs to the child, since he is t's and Christ is God's.

C. C. A.

ersion of a Great Thinker

IDAY. Acts 9 : 5. "Lord, what ilt thou have me to do?" Some tell us that religion is good for n, invalids and ministers, but that longer commends itself to the htful minds of scholarly men. is the greatest man of all history, ssing the greatest mind of all men, ing all to follow Christ. His con- n is one of the most dramatic s given in the history of the King- of God. In this experience of we see three things:

Conversion has something to do with Paul cried out, "Lord, Lord!" uddenly discovered that he was g against God, and Christ immediately became the greatest reality of his life. We should never doubt the redemptive power of Christ. All history is filled with the miracles of his grace; and what happened to Paul that day has been happening to others ever since.

2. Conversion has something to do with self. Paul asked this personal question: "Lord, what wilt thou have me to do?" Religion is a personal matter and no man can either be saved by proxy or serve by proxy. Conversion shows us to ourselves as we really are. There is always a temptation to dress ourselves up morally as well as physically in our best clothes, for we always like to look as good as we can. When God comes to us in conversion we see ourselves as we really are and just as he knows us to be. This is an essential factor in our religious life in order that God can make out of us what we ought to become.

3. Conversion has something to do with others. Paul exclaims, "Lord, what wilt thou have me to do?" Conversion is only the first step into a Christlike life, which means service for others. One of two principles rules all life: the principle of personal selfishness, or sacrificial service. One is a whirlpool into which everything goes. The other is a fountain out of which everything flows. One or the other dominates every life. The two can never exist in the same heart at the same time. Religion must find its ultimate expression in the good that it does for others.

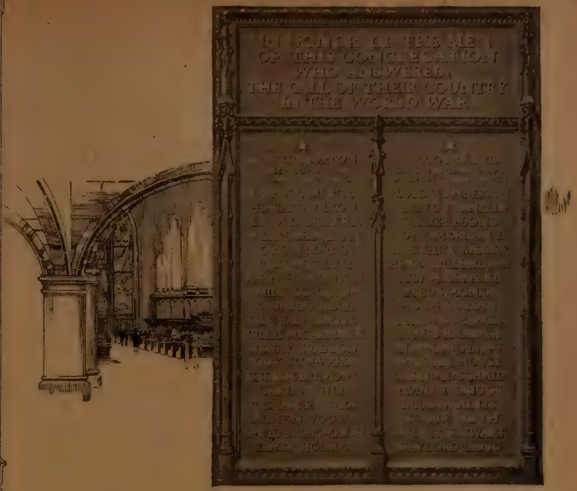
W. W. B.

"Tell Peter"

SATURDAY. Mark 16 : 7. "Tell Peter." A touching feature of Mark's account of the resurrection of our Lord is this reference to Peter in the angel's message to the women at the sepulcher. We might think that a renegade like Peter, who had knowingly denied the Lord and in doing so had perjured himself, did not deserve to share the joyful news of Christ's resurrection. Our Lord thinks otherwise—for it is his mind that the angel declares. Jesus even singles out Peter from the rest of the disciples, because he knew that Peter stood in need of consolation before the rest. He had left the scene of his pitiful fall weeping bitterly. We can imagine in what grief he spent the rest of that night and the next days, reviewing his ignominious action. He may have been on the brink of despair that very Easter morning. He needed reviving and encouragement, and what news more cheering could have been broken to him than this: "The Lord liveth!" John tells us that he proceeded slowly to the grave to examine whether the report that had been brought to the city was true. How glad he must have felt when the truth of the resurrection had been fully established, and it dawned on his bewildered mind that the special message which the Lord had sent him was his pardon! Jesus had virtually said to his wayward disciple: "Rise, Peter; thy sin is forgiven. Behold, I live, and I make everything new. Go, and sin no more."

The message of our text is to be repeated to every one who knows himself guilty of Peter's sin and is suffering the terrible remorse which the knowledge of that sin causes. Such a person is to be told that, although he may have forgotten his Lord, his Lord has not forgotten him, but has commissioned his ministers to carry a special message of pardon to such a sorrowing disciple. The redemption which Jesus wrought is so great that no sinner shall be shut out from it. Those especially who know themselves guilty and regard themselves as unworthy of any favor from God are objects of special interest to the Christ who has conquered sin and death: they must be told that the Lord wants them to participate in the gladness with which the ransomed greet their returning Lord. If we know any Peter, let us not neglect to tell him.

W. H. T. D.



A Bronze Honor Roll

NO finer recognition of those who offered themselves a bulwark to democracy can be found, than that their names be recorded on tablets of enduring bronze.

Matthews Honor Roll Tablets possess permanence and dignity; fitting tributes to the brave boys whose names they bear.

Many sizes and designs, suitable for churches, commercial and industrial organizations, fraternal orders, and municipalities are shown in an illustrated booklet which we will be glad to send you. Write for a copy of it, asking for design book No. 18.

JAS. H. MATTHEWS & CO.
Established 1850
3860 Forbes Street Pittsburgh, Pa.

MATTHEWS BRONZE TABLETS

How to Sell Your Real Estate

Any Kind—Anywhere

I got cash for my property in less than two weeks. Made sale myself so had no commission to pay. You can do the same with The Simplex Plans for Selling Real Estate. No matter where located, these practical, scientific plans will show you how to sell your property—quickly and for cash—without employing agents or paying commissions. Investigate at once. Learn how easy you can use The Simplex Plans, just as I did, to sell your real estate. Write today (a postal will do) to

The Simplex Co
Dept. 49, 1123 Broadway, N. Y.
They will send you full particulars without cost or obligation.

Quick Results!

"Sold for cash in 10 days. Recommend your methods."—Wm. H. Cartland, Mass. "Your method sold my farm for cash."—Mrs. L. A. Childs, Minn. "Sold my property. Your plan is quickest I ever saw."—Johnson String, N. J. "Sold my hotel for $5,375."—G. F. Stewart, Ill.

POULTRY—RABBITS
MONEY IN BOTH
Poultry Advocate 50c year
Our Great Rabbit Book 25c
Paper one year and book 65c
POULTRY ADVOCATE, Dept. A-33, SYRACUSE, N.Y.

SING No. 10, "Bring in the Tithes," a new song by Mrs. C. H. Morris, in WORLD-WIDE REVIVAL SONG PAMPHLET
40 pages of new and of the latest favorite Gospel Songs.
1 copy of the pamphlet by mail, 15 cents, 2 copies, 25 cents; 5 copies, 50 cents; 25 copies by mail, $2.00; 50 copies by mail, $4.00; 100 copies by mail, $8.00
W. ELMER BAILEY, Publisher, Station E, Columbus, Ohio

YOUR FUTURE
Depends on how you prepare yourself now. Personal power lies in the Art of Expression.
Its study will make you more successful and increase your popularity and earning power.
WE TEACH
ELOCUTION
BY MAIL
Whatever your occupation or position, you can improve by our course in Public Speaking, dramatic reading and entertaining, which includes physical culture and voice training. Mothers and teachers can instruct their children to recite.
Graduates receive handsome diplomas.
Send 6c. in stamps for Illustrated Recitation
THE MERRILL SCHOOL OF EXPRESSION
Dept. 10, 2905 Woodward Ave., Detroit, Michigan

Indoor Toilet
Convenient – Sanitary

The Comfort Closet for Homes, Summer Cottages and Camps. Entirely odorless. Scientifically ventilated. Strong chemicals dissolve contents; kills all germs. Easily installed. Convenient to move. Contents disposed of easily as garbage. Prevents water contamination and fly breeding. Provides sanitary, odorless toilet in home protected from cold and stormy weather. Only closet with porcelain container. Easily cleaned. Approved by U. S. Health Bureau. 30 Days' Free Trial. Agents make $60 to $100 Weekly. Exclusive territory. Ask for booklet—FREE.
Comfort Chemical Closet Co. 545 Factories Bldg., Toledo, O.

ORNAMENTAL FENCE

6 Cents per Foot and up. Costs less than wood. 40 designs. All steel. For Lawns, Churches and Cemeteries. Write for free Catalog and Special Prices.
Kokomo Fence Machine Co. 499 North St., Kokomo, Ind.

BRISCOE

Touring and Roadster Types

Over hill and dale, wherever the call of the great outdoors leads you, the Briscoe travels with the same ease and certainty.

Fuel and upkeep economy make touring a pleasure unalloyed.

BRISCOE MOTOR CORPORATION
JACKSON MICHIGAN
The Canadian Briscoe Motor Company, Ltd., Brockville, Ontario

99% BRISCOE BUILT

Is your farm large enough for a tractor like this?

Or will a smaller $750 tractor do all your work?

A tractor can save money on every farm—if it is properly selected—or, it can prove a total loss if not intelligently handled and not adapted to the work at hand.

It is the business of the Motor Service Bureau, recently organized by The Christian Herald, to help its readers choose the tractor best suited to their needs.

If you will give us complete information called for on the following coupon, we will give you unbiased expert advice free of charge.

THE CHRISTIAN HERALD (Motor Service Bureau)
Bible House, New York, N. Y.

Coupon

Please recommend the size and type of tractor for use on my farm. The following information may be of use to you:

No. acres on which tractor can be used .... Nature of land ....
....
Kind of crops ....
Distance to railway or other distributing point ....
Automobiles or trucks owned by me ....
Make of tractor preferred ....
Approximate investment available for purchase of tractor ....
Price of gasoline .... Price of kerosene ....

Check which of the following power works tractor would be used for:

Silo cutting...... Stump pulling...... Wood sawing...... Threshing...... Dredging..
Name ....
Address ....

OBEDIENCE

International Sunday School Lesson for June 8
Matt. 7 : 16-29 and John 14 : 21-24

The Test of Discipleship

By Rev. George D. Allison, Ph.D.

WITH good reason Obedience follows Faith in our series of lessons on the great things in the Christian Life. For so very often we cannot possibly see all that is involved in the outcome of our actions, and we must make our decisions in the light of a mighty conviction that God calls for our cooperation in the carrying out of plans of his which we do not fully understand. So it was in the World War: ofttimes the soldier could have no idea what was involved in the special orders he received, but he had faith in his commander, and believed his orders were part of some larger plan. Often in the reports of one of the big armies we read, "Objectives attained as prearranged." But the individual soldier did not know what was "prearranged"—he simply obeyed orders. So with us: obedience is the test of our loyalty to Christ's cause. "Whatsoever he saith unto you do it," was the advice Jesus' mother gave to the servants in the house in Cana long ago. It is the proof of discipleship today.

But how shall we know what he is saying unto us? In several ways. The great thinker Kant spoke of certain aspects of duty as a categorical imperative in the soul of man beyond all dispute and modification by others. He meant that certain things ring true in human hearts. We know it is wrong to lie and to steal, for example. Well, Christianity brings into sharper focus the conception of imperative duty that God has implanted in all hearts. Other systems leave large areas vague and uncertain, but the way of Jesus is plain indeed. He himself felt these imperatives of conduct. When he was a mere lad he said, "I must be about my Father's business." In manhood he declared the same inner compulsion: "We must work the works of him that sent me while it is day." This powerful spiritual conviction comes to all who seek to serve him. "I must preach the Gospel in other towns also," he said, and all the great missionaries and evangelists have echoed him.

So, first of all, there is an imperative within the soul of the earnest disciple that lays out the large outlines of service for each one and tells us not simply what is right and wrong, but what is the call of the Master to us for our share of world service.

Obedience the Organ of Spiritual Knowledge

Frederick Robertson of Brighton preached a wonderful sermon from the text: "If any man willeth to do His will, he shall know of the teaching." Around the world Robertson has sent Christ's message that the way to understand him is to obey him; the more we follow his teachings, the plainer they become to us. Christianity is learned by obeying the measure of light you already have, and the pathway brightens unto the perfect day.

Somewhere I have read a little story of a child in a woodland camp whose father sent him with a letter to the village, pointing out a trail over which the lad had never gone before. "All right, father, but I don't see how that path will ever reach the town," said the boy. "Do you see the trail as far as the big tree down there?" answered the man. "Oh, yes, I see that far." "Well, when you get there by the tree you'll see the trail a little farther ahead, and so on until you get within sight of the houses of the village." There is in our pilgrimage of faith an element of sheer faith, not seeing.

The Proof of Loyalty

The unexpected demands of war soon classified American citizens by testing their loyalty to their country. Some who had always rendered lip-service tried to avoid obedience in the crisis. Some who had gladly acknowledge bounty of her provision in peace plained bitterly against food regula that called for sacrifice. Some who always claimed her protection tri escape the draft which ordered the protect her.

The same sifting process goes on in the Church of Christ as the batt life tests the quality of the disci loyalty to his Lord. It is the mi tune of the Church in every age there are many who name the Name are unwilling to "follow even death." There are plenty of outv worshipers who sing the praises of Suffering Servant of Jehovah who obey the Spirit when he calls upon t to give or to serve or to go. Long, ago the Hebrews learned of the pro Samuel that "to obey is better than rifice"; yet even now we have to b minded again and again that our f is not proved by reciting our beau creed or attending our inspiring ch service, but by hearing the word of and doing it. "Follow me!" calls deeds, not words.

Have we a supreme allegiance?
know that no patriot can have fatherlands. Jesus told us forcibly we cannot serve God and gold. We all obeying some force, whether it b low as the craving for drink, or so l as the hunger and thirst for righte ness. This lesson challenges us to m the will of our Father the supreme tive of our lives, even as Jesus sought to do his own will but the will of F that sent him. It is a simple, subli motto that a modern apostle has gi us: "God's will—nothing more—no ing less!—nothing else!"

Love and Duty

Our reading lesson in the Fourtee of John suggests something glori about following Jesus Christ. Seld is the Christian torn between love a duty; nearly always love and duty
one. He that loves obeys, and equa he that obeys proves his love. The lo is tested by the obedience. "He th keepeth my commandments, he it that loveth me." The obedience elicited by the love; for such a Mas we dare attempt anything! Even the training of officers for our arm great stress was laid on the kind of p sonality and attitude that would eli faith and confidence which make unquestioning obedience in the cris

Those who know Jesus best love hi most, and those who love him best a most willing to obey even his harde commissions. His will becomes the w of his follower, who says what the litt girl said to her mother in the story: " you want me to do it, then I want to it." The summits of Christian faith a reached by those who have become devoted to their Master that obedien to his spirit has become the instincti habit of their lives.

Obedience and Sonship

True sonship never means a reckle independence of the Father, yet so have erred in thinking that there is n room in the Christian philosophy f obedience, placing all the emphasis o freedom and on grace. The more pe fect the concord between a father and h son the more certain the son's obedien to his father's will. If he has absolu confidence in his father, the son deligh to obey. In a world of sin and need costs something to obey the Father.
was written of Jesus himself that, So though he was, he learned by all he su fered how to obey, and by reason of h perfect obedience became the impart of sonship to all who obey him. Mo simply, Jesus himself said, "If a ma love me, he will keep my word: and m Father will love him." Loving Chri and obeying Christ, we enter into th loving Fatherhood of God.

Blessed is that man who can say the darkest night of his life:

"As the Father gave me comman ment, even so I do."

OUR MAIL-BAG

NOTICE

editors of the Christian Herald will be ld to answer any question addressed to il-bag provided it be of general interest t merely personal. Correspondents may om de plume to identify the question, but rs must contain name and address of the in addition to the nom de plume. No m will be paid to anonymous letters nor written with lead pencil.

uestions and Answers

E. DeV., New York City, writes concerning the character of David: "Dr. Adam Clark in his commentary says: 'David, the son of Jesse, after mine own heart, that is, a man would rule the kingdom according to wil'.' Dr. Benson's observation on int is judicious: 'When it is said David man after God's own heart, it should be tood not of his private but of his public ter. He did not allow of idolatry, he t set up absolute power He was guided government of the nation by the law of as the standing rule of government, the prophet as the divine oracle. Whataul's private character was, he was not a king in Israel. He did not follow the he oracle, the prophet, but attempted absolute, and thereby to subvert the ution of the kingdom. Surely this is aning in saying that David was a man God's own heart.'".

I. C., Leola, S. D. The passage in Luke —the declaration of Zaccheus—is re l as meaning that the publican had been these things in the interest of justice ir dealing. He had been giving half of ds to the poor, and he restored fourfold, y case where there was the slightest on or possibility of injustice by false tion, overcharge, or fraud in any form. l not wait for absolute proof, but waived estion, and gave the other the benefit of ubt by magnanimously paying him far than his loss could have amounted to.

., St. Paul, Minn. Of heaven and the iness in the life to come we know only is revealed in the Scriptures, and it is ossible for our limited knowledge to ny adequate conception of it. The Bible bes the happiness of heaven in general ; it is described as a kingdom (Matt. ; as a place of rest; as a place where edge will go on to perfection, and as a in which the saints will dwell together. be a place of complete felicity, where the nent will be heightened by friendly in rse. It is further described as a city everlasting foundations; a place of in erable homes (see John 14 : 2); a place we shall meet our loved ones and our en (see II Sam. 12 : 23; Luke 16 : 25). in Rev. 22, tells us of the "pure river ter of life" and the tree of life with its lance of "fruit." We have enough to us that it is a place of great happiness r 2 : 9); of blessed reunions where there ernal youth and strength and where sor sighing, pain and the afflictions that l in this life are unknown.

s. A. L. C., Byron, Ill. 1. We think, in al, that the Ten Commandments are closely observed today than at any time past. The principles of the command are so thoroughly interwoven with the tian faith that wherever Christianity he tendency is toward observance. There was a time when they were completely by all persons. Jesus himself found only ho could claim perfection. 2. The early h held that the unpardonable sin was uting the work of the Holy Spirit to ic agency. It has never been definitely lished, although Jesus implied that there n unpardonable sin, and the situation in this statement was made indicated that sin might be a sin against the Holy .

McC., Flattop, Colo. While Jesus d to deal harshly with the Syro-Phoeni woman, he was really teaching his dis a lesson in widened sympathy. The e were Jews; they looked upon the Gen s dogs; they were not ready in heart for ide mission to the world for which Jesus training them. So he appeared to dis the woman, calling her audibly by the the disciples were probably using mentally. Her quick wit played in well with his purpose, and she gained her boon of healing, while the twelve gained a new insight into the mind and heart of their Master.

You seem to have misread Abraham's character. God chose him because he was a man of faith and courage. Abraham was just; he loved peace, but he was ready to fight the despoilers of his people God loved Jacob as the child of the promise made to Abraham. He had to discipline Jacob severely before Jacob was ready to bear the covenant name of Israel. Probably Jacob's perseverance was a God-given trait which God naturally blessed in its exercise.

E. B., Wheatland, Wyo. Please give a brief history of the words "Hun" and "Boche."

The Huns, who were the fiercest and cruelest of the barbarians who overran the Roman Empire, first appear in history about 372 A.D., when under a leader named Balamir or Balamber they emerged from their settlements north of the Caspian Sea. In 451, under Attila, they penetrated into France, where they were defeated, and shortly afterward, on the death of Attila, they were dispersed in various places in southeastern Europe. Some consider them to be the ancestors of the modern Hungarians. The application of the name "Hun" to the Germans is said to have originated in a speech by the Kaiser in which he exhorted his troops to emulate the ferocity and cruelty of the ancient Huns. The word "Boche" is a French slang word, and is variously interpreted as meaning "blockhead," "hog," etc.

L. J. O., Kalamazoo, Mich. In all matters concerning estates, the courts seek to ascertain as far as possible the real wishes of the person leaving the estate. The advantage of having a lawyer draw up a will is that the lawyer will be more liable to express your desires in language that would not be mistaken. A well-written will, signed by you in the presence of witnesses, is just as valid as any will that an attorney could draw up. The advantage in having a notary attest the will is that it prevents any question being raised as to the validity of the signatures of the witnesses. These precautions are very important when there are parties in interest who might be expected to make trouble. A will is valid even without witnesses, if it can be established as the written instrument of the person owning the property. In the case of one unaccustomed to the use of legal forms, it is always best to engage the services of a lawyer in drawing a will.

G. B. Q., Syracuse, N. Y. The whole of chapter four of Romans is given over to an exposition of the truth that we are not, and cannot be, justified before God by any of our own works of righteousness, and that through faith alone can we approach God and be reconciled to him. Verse five does not mean that we should cease to do works of righteousness, but that we should cease to depend upon them in any degree for our salvation.

Rev. Hervey Wood, 49 Claremont Avenue, New York City, writes to us that any readers of the Christian Herald, or any Sunday School, Bible Class, Woman's Temperance organization, Woman's Missionary Union, Christian Endeavor or other organization interested in the great national struggle for temperance in China, on sending him a postcard, can obtain very interesting information on the subject. China is threatened with an alcoholic inundation and is appealing to America and other Christian powers to save her from this calamity.

◆

"Record Hard to Equal"

THE News Bulletin published by the American Committee for Armenian and Syrian Relief had the following in a recent issue: "Last month the Christian Herald gave $15,000 to Armenian and Syrian Relief, bringing its contributions to this cause up to $126,833. This is a record hard to equal. The Sunday School Times comes next with its contributions to date amounting to $15,693. The Gospel Advocate has contributed $6,781, the Living Church $3,951.94, the Way of Faith and the Christian Standard have gone well over the thousand mark, while many other religious periodicals have been alive to the terrible need of the Near East and most generous in their response to its appeal for help.".

HE CHRISTIAN HERALD is published weekly by The Christian Herald, at the ble House, Fourth Avenue, 8th and 9th Sts., ew York City. The Officers are: Graham C. tterson, President and Treasurer, Bible House, . Y. City; Geo. H. Sandison, Vice President, ble House, N. Y. City.

SUBSCRIPTION PRICE, $2.50 a year in adance. Remittances should be made in the safest anner available. Make checks and money orders yable to The Christian Herald.

FOREIGN POSTAGE.—For copies mailed outside the United States, Canada and Mexico, add one dollar a year to subscription price.

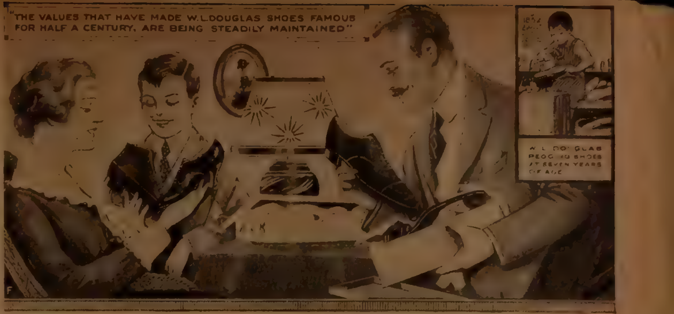
CHANGE OF DATE.—It takes at least two weeks to change the date, after your subscription is renewed.

EXPIRATION OF SUBSCRIPTION.—The date on the wrapper indicates when your subscription ends.

CHANGE OF ADDRESS.—It requires three weeks' time to make the change. Give both old and new address.

LETTERS should be addressed, THE CHRISTIAN HERALD, Bible House, New York.

Entered as Second-class Matter at the Post Office Department, Ottawa



"THE VALUES THAT HAVE MADE W. L. DOUGLAS SHOES FAMOUS FOR HALF A CENTURY, ARE BEING STEADILY MAINTAINED"
W. L. DO GLAS PEGG NG SHOES AT SEVEN YEARS OF AGE

W. L. Douglas

"THE SHOE THAT HOLDS ITS SHAPE"

$4.00 $4.50 $5.00 $6.00 $7.00 & $8.00

IF you have been paying $10.00 to $12.00 for fine shoes, a trial will convince you that for style, comfort and service W. L. Douglas $7.00 and $8.00 shoes are equally as good and will give excellent satisfaction. The actual value is determined and the retail price fixed at the factory before W. L. Douglas name and the retail price is stamped on the bottom. The stamped price is W. L. Douglas personal guarantee that the shoes are always worth the price paid for them. The retail prices are the same everywhere. They cost no more in San Francisco than they do in New York.

Stamping the price on every pair of shoes as a protection against high prices and unreasonable profits is only one example of the constant endeavor of W. L. Douglas to protect his customers. The quality of W. L. Douglas product is guaranteed by more than 40 years experience in making fine shoes. The smart styles are the leaders in the fashion centers of America. They are made in a well-equipped factory at Brockton, Mass., by the highest paid, skilled shoemakers under the direction and supervision of experienced men, all working with an honest determination to make the best shoes for the price that money can buy.

CAUTION—Before you buy be sure W. L. Douglas name and the retail price is stamped on the bottom and the inside top facing. If the stamped price has been mutilated, BEWARE OF FRAUD.

For sale by 106 W. L. Douglas stores and over 9000 W. L. Douglas dealers, or can be ordered direct from factory by mail. Parcel Post charges prepaid. Write for Illustrated Catalog showing how to order by mail.

W. L. Douglas
President W. L. DOUGLAS SHOE COMPANY, 165 SPARK STREET,
BROCKTON - - MASS.

FOR MEN
FOR WOMEN
W. L. DOUGLAS $5.00 SHOE BOYS' SHOES
Best in the World
$3 $3.50 $4

HINDS HONEY ALMOND CREAM
FACE, HANDS, SKIN

THE cooling, soothing influence of

Hinds HONEY AND ALMOND Cream

upon the tender, sunburned skin brings grateful relief to home gardeners and others whose vocation or recreation exposes them to the weather.

SAMPLES: Be sure to enclose stamps with your request. Hinds Honey and Almond Cream 2c. Both Cold and Disappearing Cream 4c. Talcum 2c. Trial Cake Soap 8c. Sample Face Powder 2c., Trial Size 15c. Attractive Week-end Box 50c.

Hinds Cream Toilet Necessities are selling everywhere or will be mailed, postpaid in U.S.A. from Laboratory.

© A. S. H.

A. S. HINDS, 291 WEST ST., PORTLAND, MAINE

Brooms that make a "clean sweep"

BROOMS cost money! So to keep brooms new as long as possible means a saving in expense as well as easier, cleaner sweeping. One housekeeper sends us this recipe: Dissolve a tablespoonful of Gold Dust in half a pail of hot water. Work the broom up and down in this soapy Gold Dust water, pressing it into shape if it has grown "lop-sided." Rinse in warm water, then cold. Hang to drip. This Gold Dust treatment dissolves the grease and dirt, and adds long life to the broom because it prevents the straw from becoming harsh and brittle. Freshen whisk brooms by this same treatment.—Adv.

GORDON

Theological, Missionary, Religious-Educational College course. Graduate School of Theology (3 year). Collegiate and advanced degrees. Two year collegiate training course. Interdenominational, evangelistic. New, fireproof buildings, with dormitories. Organized religious work. Self-support. Catalog. Nathan R. Wood, President. GORDON BIBLE COLLEGE, Boston, Mass.

6% Year In and Year Out

When you invest your money in our First Farm Mortgages and Real Estate Gold Bonds, furnished in amounts to suit you are assured of a steady income of 6%. Our loans are secured by rich agricultural lands worth several times amount of loan. Write for pamphlet "O" and offerings.

E. J. Lander & Co., Grand Forks, N.D.
Est. 1883. Capital and Surplus $500,000.00

Young People's Topics for June 8

World Peace

Christian Endeavor and B. Y. P. U. Topic. Micah 4 : 1-5

MICAH'S prophetic eye saw the day when swords should serve as plowshares and spears would enter husbandry. But he saw more. He beheld every man contented under his own vine and fig tree. The peace of town and state and the world is disturbed most often by those who long for the shade of another's vine or the fruit of another's fig tree. War has its root in unhallowed ambition, unrighteous nationalism, unbridled desire on the part of one people to have the goods, the territory or the power of another. Such a people must be resisted in the interest of right. We will have an end of war when every nation seeks righteousness first, individual righteousness, social justice, national righteousness. National righteousness includes mutual good will; if every nation is playing fair, there will be no ground for enmity.

National righteousness will include strict observance of treaties. No nation will pledge to do what it means to avoid, and pledges kept do not invite to conflict. Nations have not always thus sought righteousness in the past. Just now, under America's leadership, the world is turning toward a new ideal of national relationships. The League of Nations must be a League of righteous nations or its counsels will soon be held of little worth. Righteous nations can exist only upon the foundation of individual rightness. Personal faith, vital religion in the hearts of men and women which energizes and creates the life of the state, will alone assure world peace. Christ must rule the nations if strife is to cease, but he rules through the people. He saves the world one soul at a time. The best way to world peace, therefore, is through a widened evangelism and a better appreciation of the relation of the principles of Christ's Gospel to the life of men in industry, in home and in nation.

Amazing Shirt Offer
$12.00 Genuine Jacquard Shirts 3 for $4.35

SEND NO MONEY
For These Beautiful Shirts!

Genuine Jacquard shirts in rich-looking striped patterns that men like so well—most amazing values you ever saw. Shirts have sheen and lustre of silk, yet will out-wear silk many, many times. Come in black, blue and lavender stripes with a white background interwoven with white figures. Ordinarily you would pay $2.50 apiece or $5.00 each if custom made.

Our Price for the Three Only $4.35

Don't send a cent of money. Just write your name and address plainly and state size of neck-band —shirts will be shipped immediately, transportation charges paid. You pay $4.35 on arrival. If not fully satisfied, return them and your money will be immediately refunded. Write today. Be sure to give size of neck-band.

Bernard-Hewitt Co., 430 South Green St. Desk. HS.65. Chicago.

Rider Agents Wanted
Everywhere to ride and exhibit the new Ranger "Motorbike" completely equipped with electric light and horn, carrier, stand, tool tank, coaster-brake, mud guards and anti-skid tires. Choice of 44 other styles, colors and sizes in the famous "Ranger" line of bicycles.
DELIVERED FREE on approval and 30 DAYS TRIAL. Send for big free catalog and particulars of our Factory-direct-to-Rider marvelous offers and terms.
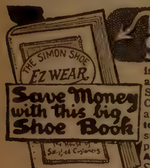
TIRES Lamps, Horns, Wheels, Sundries, and parts for all bicycles—at half usual prices.
SEND NO MONEY but tell us exactly what you need. Do not buy until you get our prices, terms and the big FREE catalog.
MEAD CYCLE COMPANY Dept. G-71 CHICAGO



THE SIMON SHOE
EZ WEAR
Save Money with this big Shoe Book
The House of Satisfied Customers

This FREE Shoe Book is crowded with photographs and descriptions of Ez Wear Shoes for Men, Women and Children. Ez Wear shoes are sent postpaid, guaranteed to combine comfort, style and quality, to fit perfectly or money back. Amazingly low prices.
Send for your copy today
The H. V. Simon Shoe 1589 BROADWAY BROOKLYN, N.Y.

Become a Nurse
IF YOU cannot spend three years in hospital or are past hospital age limit, send name and address on postcard for yearbook explaining the C. S. N. Home-Practice Method of studying trained nursing. State age.
The Chautauqua School of Nursing
341 Main St. Jamestown, N.Y.

Individual Cups
Every church should use. Clean and sanitary. Trial free.
Thomas Communion Service Co. Box 150 Lima, Ohio

Why Go to College in War Time?

Epworth League Topic. Prov. 8 : 10; 24 : 5; II Tim. 2 : 15

WAR has about closed his contract with the world, for the present, but this topic is still timely, for war showed the value of trained leadership. A college course is not merely an avenue to a degree and mental and spiritual development. It is a preparation for leadership. Education that is merely absorbed lectures or text books is a misbranded article. A college course consists in certain classes in which satisfactory grades must be attained if the course is to be completed. This is the skeleton. The real meat of college is the social life that is coincident with the classes. The fraternity life, the literary societies, the debates, the athletics, the Y. M. C. A. and Y. W. C. A. activities, the daily clash of mind on mind, the student movements, the class organizations, the honors earned or granted, all these give body to the course and round it off and make for leadership. The college man or woman should be able to influence for the better the life of any community in which they live. The world expects it of them. That is why it supports the colleges. It wants leaders. It had to have leaders in war, and while Mars ruled, the patriotic place for every son of America under 18 was in college. Mars has lost his helmet and bent his sword, but "Peace hath her victories," and she, too, needs leaders.

If you would make the most possible of your life go to college and be an all-around student. Get into every activity that is good. Don't be a clam or a grind. Pass up your work, but don't cram, and you will be strengthened, broadened, wider-visioned, improved in leadership when you take your degree.

◆

To the Pastors. The Minute Men of America

THE following resolution was unanimously passed by the Executive Committee of the Anti-Saloon League of America:

> "Resolved, that the General Superintendent be requested to draft and publish, in behalf of the National League, a request that the pastors throughout the United States on June 8 bring to the attention of their people the issue of Americanism involved in the attempt to nullify National Prohibition, and urge the members of their congregations to insist that Congress shall immediately pass an adequate permanent enforcement code to carry into effect the 18th Amendment and War-time Prohibition."

The liquor interests, particularly the brewers, who stand convicted of unpatriotic and pro-German activity, are now trying to nullify not only war-time prohibition but the National Constitutional Amendment as well. They are proposing to desecrate Flag Day, June 14, by holding at the National Capital on that date a monster parade as a demonstration against prohibition. The federated forces which stand for righteousness and which brought about the enactment of prohibition as an expression of the moral conviction of the American people, have no choice excepting to rally their forces as often as the enemy continues his counter-attacks.

The National Convention of the Anti-Saloon League of America will be held in Washington City, June 3-6, followed on Sunday, June 8, by a Field Day for the presentation of the prohibition situation to the churches of the Capital City.

◆

The Call of the Garden

WHEN brown buds are bursting to tender green leaves,
And the soft, creeping grasses a tapestry weaves
O'er the moist, smelly bosom of old Mother Earth,
And all nature is shouting with gladness and mirth—
When with jubilant chorus the bluebirds appear,
And the robin's clear whistle announces he's here,
Then for indoors amusements I don't care a fig;
I want to get out in my garden and dig.

In the warm, sunny days, when with infinite grace
The blue sky bends down and just laughs in my face,
When I hear the soft murmuring song of the stream,
And catch through the willows the water's bright gleam—
When in warm, sheltered corners the wind-flowers unfold,
And the cowslips are starring the meadows with gold,
Then all the wide world is astir and awing,
And my heart just leaps up at the call of the spring.

Now how could I stay in the house when the earth
Is all overflowing with laughter and mirth,
And my garden is calling and telling its need
Of spading and raking and planting its seed?
When the lilies and iris are showing their heads,
And the pinks peering up from their leaf-covered beds,
With crocuses pushing and crowding for room,
And tulips and daffodils budding to bloom—
With all these dear things springing up everywhere,
You will see that my garden is needing my care.

ELIZABETH CLARKE HARDY.

◆

Locating Stolen Diamonds

POSSIBLY you will remember having read from time to time of the remarkable tricks resorted to by the native diamond miners in the great Kimberly diamond region in South Africa and other parts of the world. So great has the temptation often become to steal diamonds, especially when an extra large one may have been suddenly unearthed, that these natives have been known to resort to the most unbelievable tactics in order to carry the diamonds out of the mine and to withstand inspection even when stripped, as practically all of them are, before they leave the mine at the end of the day's labor.

One of the successful schemes which has been worked out by the superintendent of a large South African diamond mine involves the use of a powerful X-ray machine having several X-ray bulbs excited simultaneously. As each miner passes before the X-ray bulbs, the examiner looks through his fluoroscope and rapidly swings it up and down, so as to take in the entire body in a few seconds. This system of detecting the presence of a diamond, no matter whether it is buried in the flesh, resting in a throat cavity or even in the stomach—an almost unbelievable practice resorted to in several instances on record—the X-ray examination quickly indicates the presence of the diamond.

What Food Do
the Body Need

Answering that quest and providing the food
the daily duty of ev
housewife. If it is prope answered, the family is w nourished and is likely to healthy. If it is not pr erly answered, every me
ber of the family suffers that much less fit.

The Government app
ciated the importance a the difficulties of this ta of the housewife when prepared a book on

How to Select Foods

It tells how much cere
how much meat, how mu fruit, the man of the hous
the child in school, t daughter who works in office, should have.

It also gives the detail to the amount of nouris ment in different foods i proportion to their price.
tells how to get the greate food value for the leas money.

Learn How to Ge the Greatest Pos-sible Food for a Dollar

To do this you have cut out the attached coupon, fill it in, writing plainly, and mail it as indicated, enclosing a two-cent stam
for return postage.

Christian Herald Information Bureau

Frederic J. Haskin, Director,
Washington, D. C.

Enclosed find a two-cen
stamp, for which you wil
please send me, entirely free
the book "How to Selec Foods."

Name. . . . .

Street Address . . . .

City . . . .

State . . . .

ars That Have Brought Life and Health and Courage

the Christian Herald Fund for the Relief of War Widows and Orphans. Money Given to this Fund Has Brought Light and Life Into Stricken Regions Devastated by the War

...	$15.00
lux ...	15.00
ont- io.	15.00
bert	15.00
eld	15.00
hers	15.00
G ...	15.00
ma ...	15.00
klin ...	15.00
...	20.00
nes.	20.00
ins.	20.00
Car- ...	20.00
ng.	20.00
W ...	20.00
Bert ...	20.00
...	20.00
ess- ...	20.00
J D ...	20.00
sdale	20.00
3 W ...	20.00
...	20.00
man	20.00
Gar- N Y	20.00
lf..	20.00
...	20.00
a...	20.00
Ad- ...	20.00
Vag- ...	20.00
nie ...	10.00
on.	10.00
...	10.00
ert ...	10.00
io..	10.00
of Ohio	10.00
on..	10.00
non.	10.00
an..	10.00
n...	10.00
n & Imos	10.00
Til- ...	10.00
Bland	10.00
ran.	10.00
...	10.00
e F ...	10.00
...	10.00
land.	10.00
n...	10.00
vell..	10.00
Van ...	10.00
r...	10.00
vald.	10.00
...	10.00
Offerle ...	10.00
alter ...	10.00
...	10.00
nd..	10.00
r....	10.00
nter.	10.00
Henry ...	10.00
Vilson	10.00
A C ...	10.00
alter- ...	10.00
eaux.	10.00
...	10.00
rlow.	10.00
n....	10.00
nning- ...	10.00
y....	10.00
a....	10.00
nbro.	10.00
yakes	10.00
pes..	10.00
ond.	10.00
3 ...	10.00
ll....	10.00
liott.	10.00
ews..	10.00
a Bar- ...	10.00
rs H ...	10.00
lle, ...	10.00
Julian ...	10.00
wood ...	10.00
Win- ...	10.00
Buffett	10.00
Ander- ...	10.00
abeth ald...	10.00
Laco	10.00
lark..	10.00
Mapes	10.00
Petter- ...	10.00
da Ol- ...	10.00
Velch.	10.00
l....	10.00
nthia ...	10.00
Hem- ...	10.00
nmons	10.00

D L Thomas...	$10.00
Mr & Mrs A J Gettle.......	10.00
Mrs Jennie Foster..........	10.00
Mr & Mrs E H Hess.........	10.00
G W Guthrist..	10.00
Mrs E S Thoroman.......	10.00
"God's Revivalists Office" G, Cincinnati, O.	10.00
Annie F Patterson..........	10.00
Mrs Joseph Coofman.........	10.00
Isabel M Crouch	10.00
Lucreton George	10.00
Mary R Bispham	10.00
Edith Seeley...	10.00
Artie Brown....	10.00
Fred B Chamberlain.........	10.00
"A Subscriber," Dixon, Ill....	10.00
A C Richards	10.00
Mrs S H Wellspoon........	10.00
Mrs H S Morgan	10.00
Mrs M R, Sandborn, Ind.....	10.00
Mrs David Stewart......	10.00
Dr R W Frey...	10.00
Mrs C M Porter	10.00
Mrs Henry Walters.........	10.00
Esther Nelson..	10.00
M L Sponangle.	10.00
Lucy T Stonestred........	10.00
Mr & Mrs C C Chamberlain	10.00
G Wakoun.....	10.00
Raymond Hale.	10.00
Melvin W Farmer.........	10.00
Roger C Lyons.	10.00
Mrs Caroline Dahbesstem..	10.00
Mr & Mrs E H Hess.........	10.00
Ellen S Smith..	10.00
Mr & Mrs J W Adams.......	10.00
Frances Boldin.	10.00
Mrs Josephine B Allen........	10.00
Mrs E C Kellogg	10.00
Wm Lyons.....	10.00
Mrs E E Coles..	10.00
In His Name, Bluffton, Ohio	10.00
Mr & Mrs Lonnie McPherson...	10.00
J H Dorsett....	10.00
Mr & Mrs G Easton.......	10.00
Mrs W A Shackelford.........	10.00
A Friend, Pa...	10.00
Goldie Christy.	10.00
Persie Patterson	5.00
Mrs Will Alderman.........	5.00
Mrs Anna G Bosford......	5.00
Mrs N B E Irwin	5.00
E Messenger...	5.00
J M Brown....	5.00
Caroline E Mayer	5.00
Mrs Carrie Parman.........	5.00
Mrs E McG, Morence, Mich	5.00
Mrs Sam Shanon	5.00
Mrs M S Faust.	5.00
Nora, Lancaster	5.00
Mrs Everett Paullin......	5.00
A Friend, Nuadilla, Nebr...	5.00
Mr & Mrs L A Lundgreen ..	5.00
Mr & Mrs T N Reynolds.....	5.00
Mr & Mrs Reuben La Rosh.....	5.00
J N Hughes....	5.00
Mr & Mrs A B Doughty.....	5.00
W W Thomas..	5.00
Mrs B B Bethell	5.00
John Van Dellen	5.00
Anna E Roberts	5.00
Rev J T Wilson Sr	5.00
Mrs M E Tilton	5.00
Mr & Mrs A L Martin......	5.00
W B Cornog...	5.00
Mrs D W Grass.	5.00
A—— H——, Middletown, N Y.........	5.00
Miss Kate Tucker	5.00
Mrs J N Birmington..........	5.00
Mrs I C Lawrence	5.00
S E L, Armington, Mont...	5.00
Thomas J Poland	5.00
Henry Zoet....	5.00
Mrs T O Waddill	5.00
E Chattaway..	5.00
Mrs C L T Stewart..........	5.00
John W Hart...	5.00
Mr A Bakker...	5.00
S B Wray......	5.00
"In Memory of Helen"......	5.00
A Reader, Brandon, Iowa....	5.00
Vernice Lovett.	5.00
Mr Alke V Ruhl	5.00
Grace Gardiner.	5.00
Susanna Trower	5.00

Mrs S J Callahan	$5.00
Annie L Brubaker........	5.00
R C W, Toronto, Ohio.........	5.00
Mrs Mary E Baker........	5.00
Mrs Mary Carpenter.......	5.00
H J Decker.....	5.00
E M A Alexander, Pa......	5.00
Mrs L T Specher	5.00
Chas E McWright......	5.00
Elizabeth Addy	5.00
Margaret S Toppin..........	5.00
Mrs E Yeiser...	5.00
Mrs B D Yoder.	5.00
Mr & Mrs Edward Schwartz	5.00

Mrs T Ballentine	$5.00
A Sympathizer, for the hungry, Colo.........	5.00
L Nider........	5.00
Mrs J Frank Diggs........	5.00
Geo F Schrader.	5.00
Mrs B A P Croff, No Dak......	5.00
Mr & Mrs L W Kastrup	5.00
Bernhard Nikkel	5.00
Mrs E G Middleton..........	5.00
L L Were......	5.00
M J Baird.....	5.00
Glenn A Carson	5.00
Cora S Davis...	5.00
R J Mason.....	5.00
Mr & Mrs J E Springer.....	5.00

Mrs O A Beam..	$5.00
Mrs R Ermatinger...........	5.00
A Friend, Elizabeth, N J.....	5.00
W B Selles.....	5.00
Minnie A Taylor	5.00
Virginia Miller.	5.00
Mr & Mrs H R Thompson...	5.00
Mrs F L Dunn.	5.00
Miss Elizabeth Lesher.......	5.00
Mr & Mrs Daniel Heinlich.....	5.00
Wm S Lowny..	5.00
A subscriber, Marion, N Y.	5.00
Mrs Chas H Gilmore........	5.00
Herbert M Hodges..........	5.00

Mrs H L Cairns	$3.00
Miss Edith Robison..........	3.00
Mary E Thompson.........	3.00
Mrs M A Noble	3.00
Mrs Besse E Gamble......	3.00
Mrs W D Smith	3.00
C E Lyons.....	3.00
Miss Ella Schultz....	3.00
Mrs L A Rector.	3.00
Alice E Natt...	3.00
E Conklin.....	3.00
John A Brown.	3.00
E C Goy.......	3.00
Mr & Mrs J M Watkins.....	3.00
Mr & Mrs R E Wright......	3.00
Mrs Silas Shaw.	3.00

Photo from American Committee for Relief in the Near East

A soup kitchen in Aleppo which is able to feed hungry refugees because American dollars have been quick to answer the call of need

Lena Parriera..	$5.00
C B Girard	5.00
Mr & Mrs S H Row.........	5.00
Mrs Nan K Huntington..	5.00
Mrs Alma J Ober	5.00
Olive Haywood.	5.00
Mrs E M Derry.	5.00
Miss M H Bowen	5.00
Mr Robt Peasgood.........	5.00
Mr & Mrs C O Prior........	5.00
Mrs A W Deck.	5.00
L Q Wayne, Ind.	5.00
Brighton Brethren, Sunday School, Howe, Ind....	5.00
W C Boutges...	5.00
Ethel R & Mrs Lee R Bolles..	5.00
Miss Sarah Harvey.........	5.00
Mrs F L Walsh.	5.00
Mrs Annie Widmuyer.......	5.00
Mary M Osgood.	5.00
Mrs Geo Babington.........	5.00
Bessie Hunne...	5.00
W H Craig.....	5.00
D Needham....	5.00
Mrs M P Hurt..	5.00
A Friend, West, Texas........	5.00
Mrs Agnes L Owens.......	5.00
Miss C L Anderson..........	5.00
Mrs H J Helmar.	5.00
Mrs E H Pifer...	5.00
Mrs H Ginnon..	5.00
Mrs S D Winten.	5.00
Mr & Mrs J G Sluyter......	5.00
Mr & Mrs R J Richards.....	5.00
Mrs Icy B Carr.	5.00
Mrs Fremont Gillispie.........	5.00
Mrs Irene Safford	5.00
Mr & Mrs A Sylar	5.00
Mrs Evelyn Mannings.........	5.00
Mary A Fleming	5.00
Mrs Lizzie Robison.........	5.00
Mrs W E Crater	5.00
M A Ressegui..	5.00
Cora & Edith Dingman.....	5.00
Mrs M E L Pinkham.........	5.00
Mrs L A Ijames.	5.00

Florence Rise...	$5.00
David Naysmith	5.00
Mrs W M Jackson.........	5.00
Mrs C P Hudgin	5.00
Geo E Farley..	5.00
I A Wheelock..	5.00
L O Boughthell.	5.00
Jack Jones.....	5.00
Mrs S L Burley.	5.00
Mrs J Johnson.	5.00
Mrs R L Justice	5.00
Miss Maggie E McMaster....	5.00
J E Raiser.....	5.00
Mrs N E Converse........	5.00
C L Ekstrand..	5.00
Rev J H Stoughton..........	5.00
Mary, Burnside, Ill...........	5.00
Miruh Brothers	5.00
M Owin.......	5.00
Mrs James Clayton..........	5.00
Mrs M E Dulton	5.00
Mrs R E Rogers	5.00
F G Welch	5.00
Mrs J S Gerhart	5.00
Miss Louise C Johnson......	5.00
Mr & Mrs W C Jeffries	5.00
Christine Hasmer	5.00
Annie A Kefauner	5.00
G W Parker...	5.00
Mrs T S Jones..	5.00
Mrs R N M Buffalo, Minn	5.00
John Mayer...	5.00
Miss Dora E Jaquith........	5.00
Una L Moore..	5.00
Mrs Geo Bullerway, Sr......	5.00
Rev J M Ryan..	5.00
Mrs Bertha Lucas	5.00
S O Harness...	5.00
Miss Freda C Scheick.....	5.00
F M Ferit....	5.00
A Friend, Mineral City, Ohio	5.00
Mrs R Pierson..	5.00
Emma L Head.	5.00
M S Martin....	5.00
Mrs J C Rocker	5.00
C V Winger....	5.00
Mrs B H Wai...	5.00
A M & J M Oswalt.........	5.00
In His Name, Boise, Idaho..	5.00
Mrs R D Jones.	5.00

Mrs B F Hess..	$5.00
Mrs A D Wiesenfield.........	5.00
Mary A Plummer.........	5.00
Mrs A M Bauman.........	5.00
—— Brockton, Mass........	5.00
Sarah C North & daughter.....	5.00
J E Raiser......	5.00
Mrs G A Hund.	5.00
Mrs C A Hines.	5.00
John Wiley ...	5.00
Fidilia McNaughton.........	5.00
Miss Sallie Howison.........	3.00
The Baldwins..	3.00
Miss M D Robie	3.00
Miss Katie Krueger......	3.00
"In Memory of Helen," Cardwell, Mont........	3.00
Chas E Heimberger.......	3.00
Mrs N Baker...	3.00
C H & S E Rubencame........	3.00
Boyd Meheling.	3.00
A F L, Saint Marys, Ga ...	3.00
M J Robinson..	3.00
Lydia Myers...	3.00
Rev A L Anderson..........	3.00
Mrs N G Osborn	3.00
Merle N Shaw..	3.00
—— New York, N Y.........	3.00
The Shiloh Union Sunday School, York, Pa....	3.00
Mrs Edw S Miller	3.00
Katherine McPhee.........	3.00
Mrs M E Reynolds........	3.00
L Penn.......	3.00
Mrs H L Adams	3.00
Mrs Dan Hinckley	3.00
Ruth Schoner..	3.00
Mrs Geo Volk..	3.00
Mrs F W Draper	3.00
Mrs Mildred A Stacey.......	3.00
K E Prouty....	3.00
Clifton School, Oakland Co., Mich.........	3.00
—Middle Island, L I.........	3.00
Mrs A S Parsons	3.00

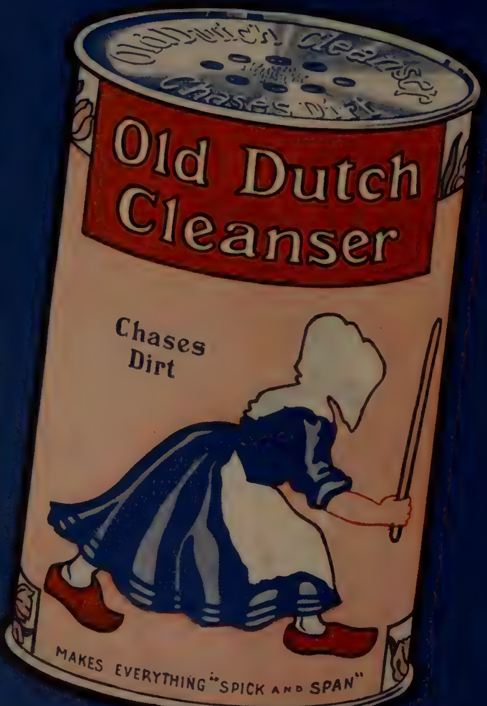
Mrs Nellie Burger	$3.00
Cadet James E Brougles.....	3.00
Mrs Force Spencer...	3.00
Norma J Dobb deal.......	3.00
Mrs Minnie Eimnsh......	3.00
J A Brown.....	3.00
Mrs Emma Raat	3.00
Mrs Eliza D Knoblaugh...	2.50
Mrs T J Dunn.	2.50
C S Klose......	2.50
Mrs T N Reasoner........	2.50
Miss Jennie Burns	2.50
Mrs C Farnhan	2.50
Mrs A A Stutz.	2.50
Mrs Susie Buhlen..........	2.50
Mrs G A Weining..........	2.50
M B Hutchinson	2.50
Mrs C T Bassett	2.50
Mrs Ida Kron..	2.50
John Bolt......	2.50
Katie Blaich...	2.50
Mr & Mrs Geo I Hopson......	2.50
A Friend, So Bend, Ind....	2.50
Mrs M B Parkyn	2.00
Mr & Mrs Robt Oneill.......	2.00
Ira Clynick....	2.00
Mrs Samuel Lee	2.00
J L Cox........	2.00
Miss E A Hotchkin.........	2.00
Tobias Stickey.	2.00
S R Buckwalter.	2.00
Lizzie Wynne..	2.00
Lucy F Hill....	2.00
In His Name, Monroe, Mich	2.00
M A Taylor....	2.00
J C Cramer....	2.00
Augustus Prescott	2.00
Mrs Howard Stott	2.00
A Friend, Muncy, Pa..........	2.00
Mrs D Morrison	2.00
Mary M Osgood	2.00
W M Herring..	2.00
Carolyn M Cornell.........	2.00
Alice L Cheshire.........	2.00
Albert Somer'ott	2.00
Mrs G W K. Ill.	2.00
Stella V Cox...	2.00
Mrs Frank Platt	2.00
Mrs J W Booth.	2.00

Mrs M Mebus.	$2.00
Mrs E G Erickson..........	2.00
Circle of King's Daughters, Phil. Pa......	2.00
Mrs C B Coon & daughter....	2.00
Oliver W Lawton	2.00
Miss Rena J Dunn........	2.00
Mrs J W Crembough.......	2.00
Lester H Baker.	2.00
In His Name, Terra, Alta, W Va.......	2.00
Miss A & L Wynne......	2.00
Mrs L W Grace	2.00
Emma Fay.....	2.00
Charley Patterson..........	2.00
Mr & Mrs C C Karschgen....	2.00
Caroline E Moyer	2.00
Mrs Virginia White.......	2.00
Mrs M Toal....	2.00
John L Hoffman	2.00
Alice C Nagle..	2.00
Mrs F C Hancock.........	2.00
S R Gregg.....	2.00
Mrs John Smith	2.00
Mrs Hanford Knapp.......	2.00
Mrs Mary Garner	2.00
Mrs C H Cody & Family......	2.00
A Friend, Hillsdale, Ore....	2.00
Mrs W N Lintz.	2.00
Lillian B Marshall	2.00
Mrs M D Thomas	2.00
Mrs H R G, Scranton, Pa.	2.00
R E Smith.....	2.00
Mrs M E Ford.	2.00
Joan Lippincott	2.00
Mrs T R Williams	2.00
Nellie Walker..	2.00
W E Watts....	2.00
Roderick Stewart	2.00
Friend Mary, Ashtabula, Ohio	2.00
C E L, Old Orchard, Maine	2.00
Mrs F Shaw....	2.00
Emma & Lucella Stonemetz ...	2.00
Mrs C Weiner..	2.00
Grace Boice...	2.00
Mrs J L Church	2.00
Mrs Mary Crossette.........	2.00
Mrs M A Webster.........	2.00
Mrs E A Crosby	2.00
Mrs E B Murphy	2.00
Clyde C Winn..	2.00
Jennie Smith...	2.00
Mrs E J Martin	2.00
Mrs Amy Hull.	2.00
Angie Reynolds McClure.....	2.00
Mrs J W Booth.	2.00
Mrs Winter....	2.00
C E L, Old Orchard, Maine...	2.00
Harry Knappenberger.......	2.00
Mrs Anna Swoyer	2.00
Esther Mains...	2.00
A F Hillman...	2.00
M R Brokan....	2.00
Mrs Will Schroder..........	2.00
Sarah E Watts.	2.00
Mrs Jacob Neymeyer.......	2.00
Mrs Emma Claridge.....	2.00
Mrs W A Smith & Mrs McBoyle	2.00
Mrs Margaret J Sisson.......	2.00
Mrs Lena Seaward........	2.00
Mrs M S Watkins	2.00
Mrs Eunice B Michener....	2.00
Edward Baker..	2.00
Mrs Harry B Fiske........	2.00
Mrs Ida Fern..	2.00
Mrs T G Tybouts	2.00
Mrs L Hanson.	2.00
Miss Zelba Young	2.00
Mrs Charles Ebuspacher..	2.00
Odessa Delawall	2.00
Mrs Edna Wilson	2.00
Mary Montgomery..........	2.00
Mary B Allen..	2.00
Mrs E T Bennett	2.00
Lenora Warmuth	2.00
John R Edmunds	2.00
Mrs O M Olny..	2.00
N A Shradeens.	2.00
Lyle Patterson.	1.50
Mr & Mrs L H Brisben......	1.50
Margaret Williams.......	1.50
F L Smailes....	1.50
Roberta & Thurlow Gardner.	1.50
A L Stoddard..	1.50
Wm N Nash...	1.50
E A Knowles...	1.50
Mrs W L Condon	1.50
A L Steward...	1.50
Mrs W L Condon	1.50
Esta Mumow..	1.50
A Friend, Eagleville, Ohio...	1.00

Leslie Patterson	$1.00
Mrs N B Lamoreau	1.00
Mrs J S Jones..	1.00
Mrs C Strong..	1.00
A Friend, German Valley, Ill	1.00
Mrs Jas Harris.	1.00
— Arlington Heights, Ill..	1.00
C E L, Old Orchard, Maine...	1.00
Mrs P L Hill...	1.00
Mrs H F Carlson	1.00
Ruth A Miller..	1.00
Mrs A E Camp.	1.00
Mary Camp....	1.00
W G Camp....	1.00
Mrs B D Snook.	1.00
— Magnetic Springs, Ohio	1.00
I N Telfer......	1.00
Roy L Netcott.	1.00
B McWilliams.	1.00
Mrs M E Stafford.........	1.00
C A Street.....	1.00
A Friend, Charlotte, N C....	1.00
Mrs Mary A Fountain.....	1.00
Mrs Julia E Cherry.......	1.00
A Reader, Forestville, Conn...	1.00
— Shawnee, Wyo	1.00
Mrs F Francis..	1.00
Margaret Crowall	1.00
D D McIntyre.	1.00
R W Miller....	1.00
Mrs H P Nelson	1.00
Grandma Eberspash er.....	1.00
Gusti Winborg.	1.00
Mrs Elizabeth J Boykin......	1.00
T G Ellis......	1.00
Alda L Dewitt	1.00
Mrs F H Camburn.........	1.00
Mrs Wilbert Nicholas.....	1.00
M S Dockson...	1.00
Miss Mary Bain	1.00
Jacob I Kellar..	1.00
— Hamilton, N Y	1.00
Mrs M O Smith	1.00
Mary M Mayer.	1.00
M E C, Cleveland, Ohio...	1.00
Miss Celia J Riley	1.00
Mr Everett Kjellander.......	1.00
Emma F King..	1.00
M M Ritchey..	1.00
Miss I V Waldo.	1.00
Mary B Allen..	1.00
Mrs L B Knox .	1.00
From one who cares, Cumberland, Md....	1.00
Mrs Anna W Greene.......	1.00
Mrs Howard Murray......	1.00
Mrs M J Crum.	1.00
Mrs L E Clark.	1.00
Mrs W C Summer.........	1.00
Mrs E A Redford	1.00
— Pinon, Colo.	1.00
Mrs P A Neibergall.........	1.00
B S Burruss....	1.00
Hattie Clark...	1.00
Mrs A M Cutler	1.00
A Friend, Boston, Mass........	1.00
J A Ulrich	1.00
D W Mathaney.	1.00
Mrs A J Foast..	1.00
Mrs J D Wright	1.00
Mrs Geo H Haynet..........	1.00
Mrs Eva Tomson	1.00
Mrs G M Eddie.	1.00
Edward H Crain	1.00
Mrs Edward Ritman.........	1.00
Mrs Eugene Brown.......	1.00
J R Craig......	1.00
Mrs Helen Mills	1.00
Mrs E J Jones..	1.00
Mrs M M C....	1.00
Mary H Morris.	1.00
Mrs W L Gooding..........	1.00
E J Briggs.....	1.00
Mary D Whitwill	1.00
Mr & Mrs Jas Baldwin.....	1.00
C E Conlin....	1.00
Mrs H K Aurand	1.00
Arthur Close...	1.00
Ella McDonald.	1.00
Elizabeth McDonald......	1.00
D M McDonald	1.00
Mrs H N Elist.	1.00
M Montgomery	1.00
Mrs I H King..	1.00
A silent friend, Antwerp, N Y	1.00
Mrs Callie Baker	1.00
Mrs Lewis Church......	1.00
Hyalman A Rude	1.00
Edward Brett..	1.00
— Collingswood, N J.........	1.00
Miss Anna Condon.........	1.00

Additional acknowledgments in subsequent issues of the Christian Herald.

d All Gifts to Christian Herald Fund for War Widows and Orphans, Bible House, N. Y.



Old Dutch Cleanser
Chases Dirt
Old Dutch Cleanser
Chases Dirt
MAKES EVERYTHING "SPICK AND SPAN"

Keeps
Kitchen Wares
Bright
and Clean

For sanitary cleanliness in the kitchen use
Old Dutch
The Quality insures Economy

Christian Herald

l. 42. No. 23. Published weekly at w York City by The Christian Herald.
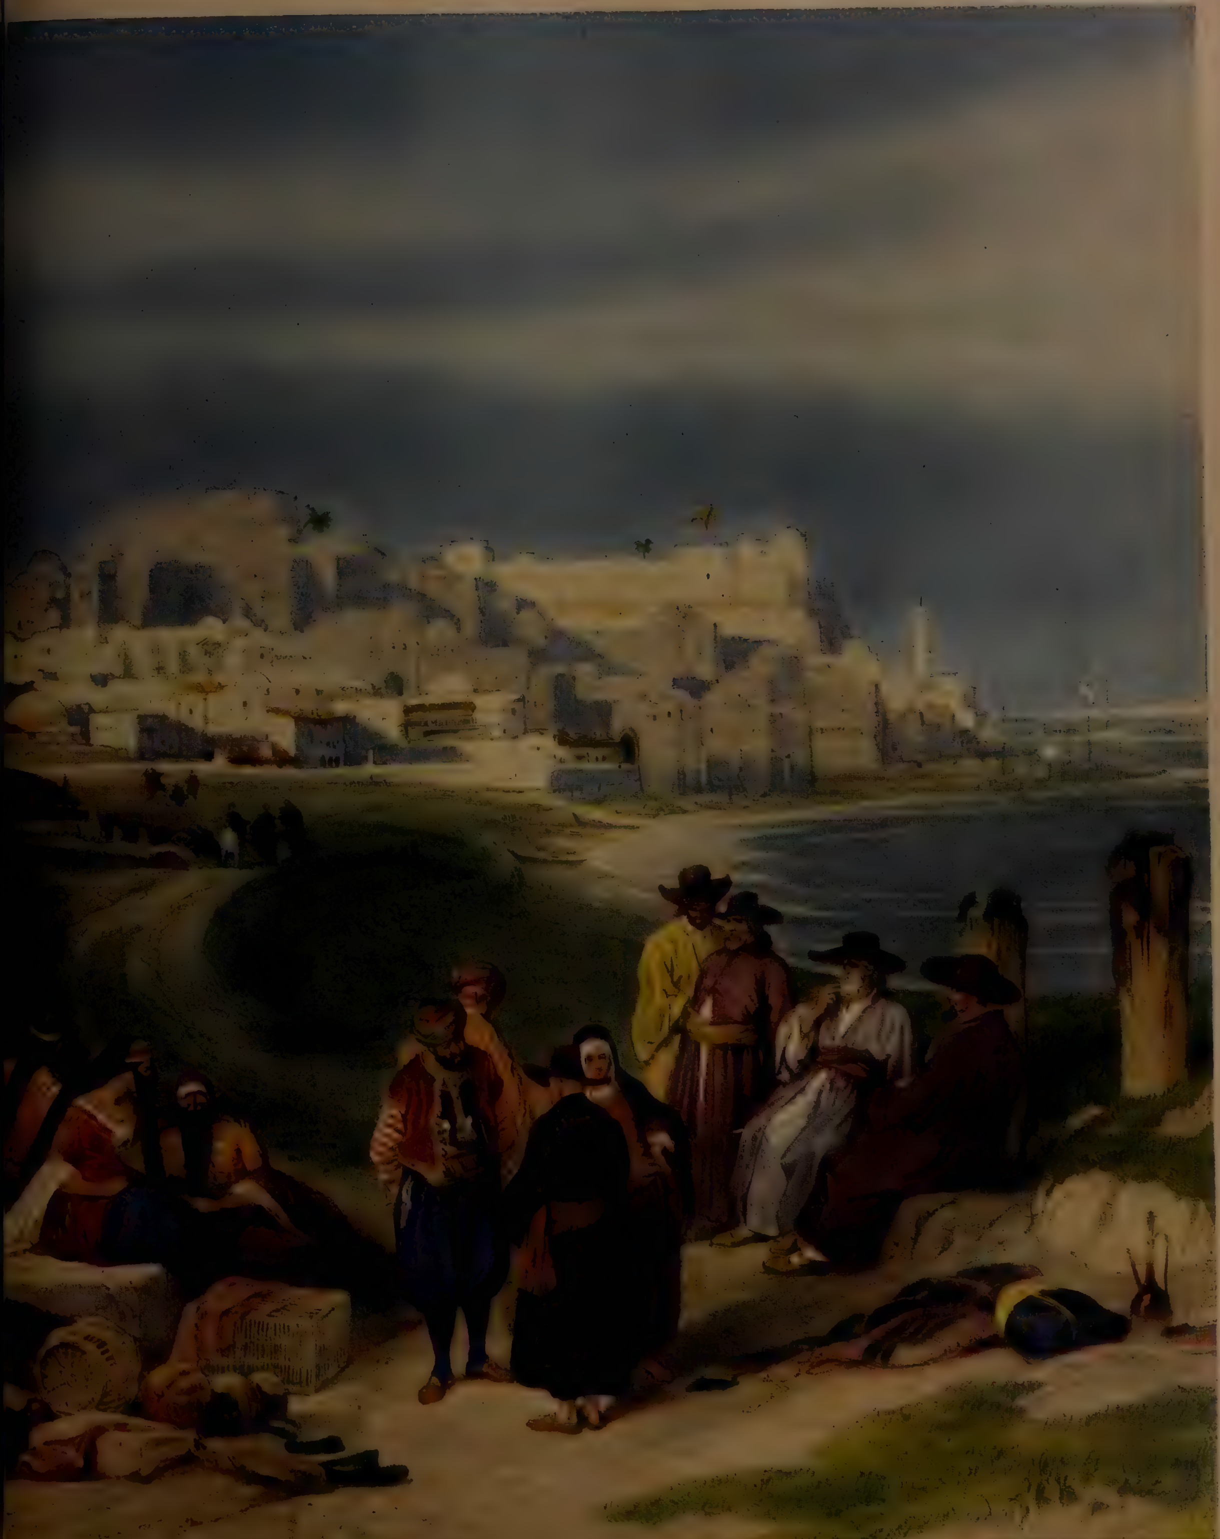
pyright, 1919, The Christian Herald

$2.50 a Year

NEW YORK, JUNE 7, 1919

Ten Cents a Copy

Entered as Second Class Matter, January 25, 1909, at the Post Office at New York, under the act of March 3, 1879



COPYRIGHT 1919 BY THE PROCTER & GAMBLE CO., CINCINNATI

THE woman who appreciates beautiful old china takes pride and pleasure in washing her treasured bowls and jugs and plates. Just as she values the china too highly to entrust its care to servants, so is she particular to use for its cleansing nothing but pure, mild Ivory Soap.

Ivory Soap cannot injure either painted or gold decorations on china, because Ivory contains no free alkali nor any other injurious ingredient. Neither does Ivory contain unsaponified oil; its thick, cleansing suds rinse off easily and thoroughly, leaving no filmy streaks to cloud the polished surface.

Ivory makes dishes clean in the strictest sense. It leaves hands soft, white and smooth —an Ivory quality that is important to every woman who does her own housework and is careful of her appearance.

IVORY SOAP . . . . 99$\frac{44}{100}$% PURE

IT FLOATS

PROCTER & GAMBLE PRODUCTS EST. 1837

THE CHRISTIAN HERALD
AN ILLUSTRATED NEWS WEEKLY FOR THE HOME

SUBSCRIPTION $2.50 PER ANNUM
PUBLISHED 52 TIMES A YEAR

GRAHAM PATTERSON
Publisher

GEORGE H. SANDISON
Managing Editor

VOL. 42—NO. 23. PRICE 10 CENTS
OFFICES: BIBLE HOUSE, NEW YORK

HE EBBING TIDE OF BOLSHEVISM

How the Flood Has Receded Under Armed Pressure and the Awakening of the People

By RAE D. HENKLE

DO YOU know the funniest thing in Russia?” a man who has just returned to New York from a long trip of investigation in the old land of the Tsars, asked me today.

“I can't see much humor in Russia's dy,” I replied.

No? Well, how does this appeal to you? When Moscow the middle of April the Red army was ting for an eight-hour day! It was threatening neral strike, too, unless the demand was granted. k of an army working on the three-shift princi- But that is the Russia of the present.”

the opinion of the investigator, that is a typical nce of the absurdities to which Bolshevism has ed the Russian peasantry; a logical development, ver, of the earlier proclamation that all orders for soldiers must be approved and issued by a com- ee of the men. And there is abundant reason to ve that it is one of the contributory causes of the lly failing Bolshevist strength.

is doubtful if, in all history, can be found a move- t which, in point of economic importance, sinister ficance, and potential power, grew so quickly and uickly entered its decline. No longer ago than ch it was the Banque's ghost at the world's feast ictory. It virtually monopolized the attention of peace conference. It was gaining adherents and ing ground at a speed which threatened to spread ver Europe.

hen came the reaction—a strange, psychological tion—which made itself manifest almost in a day. we can place the date definitely as May 1 with almost complete failure of dozens of carefully ned May Day demonstrations as the first con- utory factor. The Bolshevist wave during April been rising higher and higher, with the Bela Kun lution in Hungary and the uprising in Munich he last impetus behind it. All Europe was in a e of grave anxiety over what would follow May 1. ernments were so uncertain of the real feelings heir peoples they feared to take more than the t ordinary precautionary steps. There was a ten- that closely approached the hysterical, especially rance, Italy and Germany.

he fateful day came—and it was an anti-climax. stituted authority, virtually unsupported by force, -awed the demonstrants. A few lives were lost aris and Rome, but government was secure. The tre of the Red Terror was laid and the people somewhat shamed-faced smiles said to each r: “Is that what we have been afraid of?”

olshevism seems definitely to have been removed menace to western Europe in a month's time. re is a possibility that in this assumption we may too optimistic and that sub-surface currents are king toward its reappearance, but the chances are light they need cause little apprehension. The mally sane minds are recovering their poise, and tical sanity is the rule rather than the exception. agony of four years of war and the reactions of a den peace brought a strained perspective to a t part of the world and now this perspective is g readjusted with a celerity characteristic of nor- human beings. Bolshevism was a large part of distortion.

ermany, where the best informed observers had on to look for the warmest reception of the Lenine- tzky doctrines, has manifested a surprising deter- ation to withstand them. It is probable that the esses which accompanied the seizure of Munich by communists largely influenced the remainder of old empire. But whatever the influence, the Ger- n people acted with a unanimity, exceptional since armistice, in their successful efforts to overthrow Red régime and restore to Bavaria the form of ublican government acceptable to the majority of people. The Berlin authorities moved with energy despatch, and they received a popular support which could indicate nothing but a decision on the part of the German citizen to accept whatever terms of peace are imposed on him rather than throw the nation into chaos, widespread civil war, and complete economic ruin. There is no certainty as this is written that Germany will sign the treaty of peace. The probabilities are that she will. But even in the event that she refuses, one thing can be said with confidence—the fever of Bolshevism has burned itself out and the great mass of the people will accept Allied occupation of their country rather than suffer its revival. The greatest, and seemingly the most fertile, field outside Russia for the propagation of the Bolshevist, has proved sterile.

The situation in Hungary seems at present to be somewhat of an anomaly. Bela Kun, the director of the government, once secretary to Nikolai Lenine and an ardent Bolshevist, has found it necessary to modify his theories, so that while ostensibly Hungary is under Bolshevist rule it has been diluted until there is a probability of its recognition by the Allied and Associated powers. Kun managed to check military operations against him by Rumania, Czechoslovakia, and a French-reinforced Serb army and has entered into an armistice agreement with Rumania. The Paris conference is willing to treat with the de facto government, which now can be regarded as more Socialist than Bolshevist. Kun's policy may be properly regarded not so much as a defection from the ranks of Lenine and Trotzky as an effort to retain power by compromise.

In the Balkans, where early in the spring Bolshevism was threatening to overrun Rumania and Bulgaria, conditions have been measurably improved. The former has been able to erect what promises to be an effective dam against further inroads, and the unrest in the latter has taken no more virulent form than a demand for a Socialistic government. Thus far, however, even this has not been obtained.

But Bolshevism in all the states of Europe, whatever its status, is more or less the reflection of the situation in Russia, for the manifestations elsewhere are but the attennæ of the main growth. It is to Russia, then, that one must look for the facts on which to base an estimate of the present tendency of the Bolshevist movement. And that tendency is one of steady decline.

Lenine and Trotzky have maintained themselves by force. Broadly put, their supporters always have been of two classes: those who found an attachment to the Red government a source of wealth through blackmail or graft, and those who professed Bolshevism as the easiest way to avoid a sudden and untimely death. There are, of course, groups of sincere communists—among whom it is probable Lenine can be numbered—but they are a small minority of the Russian population. It is the Red army that has upheld the Red banner through its absolute control of foodstuffs, shops, factories and transportation facilities.

An army that wants to work on the basis of an eight-hour day is a poor staff for dictatorship to lean on when it is opposed by several armies that are willing and eager to fight it twenty-four hours a day and seven days a week. There could be no question of the result in such circumstances. Six weeks ago, the Bolshevist forces held nearly four-fifths of the old European Russia outside Poland. Their sway extended from the Urals on the east to the Baltic Sea and the Bug River on the west, and from the vicinity of Archangel, where the Allied White Sea army was in serious straits, to the Black Sea. A Franco-Serb-Italian army of more than 200,000 men then had just been driven out of Odessa.

Some power unseen, but seemingly the strong hand of Providence, now began working its will against tremendous obstacles. As rapidly as the Bolshevist legions had advanced, sweeping all opposition in front of them, their columns turned in retreat. North, south, east and west, the forces in league against them gained ground. From the White Sea and the Murmansk coast the Allies have advanced between 100 and 175 miles. Finnish troops, aided by British naval forces, have cleared the district northwest of Petrograd. The Livonians and Esthonians have recovered all the Baltic region, the district around the Gulf of Riga, and the Esthonians are within nineteen miles of Petrograd on the southwest. There is not the slightest doubt but they could capture the capital at any time they choose, but it seems improbable they will take this step for obvious reasons. Petrograd, in the present circumstances, has no military significance. It is not the seat of the Bolshevist government. It contains approximately a million very hungry people for whom the Bolsheviki are sending in eighteen to twenty trains of food a day. On the occupation of the city by an enemy, these trains would be immediately discontinued, and on the Allies would devolve the task of feeding 1,000,000 people, with no food at hand, no facilities for sending it to the city, and no machinery for its distribution once it reached there. Certainly two months, and probably a longer time, would be needed to make even an impression on the situation.

Further south, despite a new war in violation of the commands of the Peace Conference which is being waged between the Poles and the Ukrainians, the Reds have been driven eastward from the Bug and northward from the Black Sea while from the Urals Admiral Kolchak's army has advanced at some points as much as 300 miles. The apex of this advance is pointing toward Moscow. While the city is in no immediate danger, Lenine and Trotzky have made all their plans to evacuate it when necessity arises.

In the few weeks since the turn of the tide the Bolsheviki have lost more than one-third of the territory they then controlled. In retreat, and with gradually decreasing strength, they are facing augmented and determined armies on all sides—armies that have both the moral and material support of all the Allied Governments with the exception of the United States. For our part we have been specifically requested by Admiral Kolchak, whose army now is the most formidable anti-Bolshevist force in the field, to push no further into Siberia because of a firm belief on the part of Siberians and loyal Russians that the American Government is favorable to the Bolshevist cause. Our best efforts to aid in the overthrow of Lenine, he tells us, will consist in remaining as far as possible from the scene of activities, until we place ourselves unmistakably among the opponents of Bolshevism.

All observers who have been in close touch with the situation agree that for the present the greatest hope of a reconstituted Russia rests in Kolchak. His most serious danger is in the composition of his government. Placed in power by a coup d'état he has built up and retained his strength by reason of his ability to carry water on both shoulders. Regarded as a reactionary and an adherent of the monarchists, he has succeeded in bringing about him elements of the right, left and center, and in holding their support by refusing to commit himself to any definite program of administration beyond the summoning of a constituent assembly in the event that he is able to establish a central government in Russia. His success has come because his is the only all-Russian army fighting Bolshevism, because his rallying cry is “Down with Bolshevism!” and because he has very consistent Anglo-French support.

With all Europe in a state of flux it is impossible to predict the course of the summer's events. Many mistakes have been made in handling the program of Bolshevism, and there is no assurance that more will not be made. The sudden and almost general reaction against it, however, is a sign of an awakening by the peoples of the war-stricken nations to the fact that Bolshevist theories are impractical aids to moral, physical and economic regeneration.

BRITISH FLIERS RESCUED IN MID-OCEA

AFTER a week of silence, their friends finally giving them up as lost, the news came from the Butt of Lewis in the Hebrides Islands that the Danish steamer Mary, without wireless, had picked up at sea, 1,100 miles from New Foundland, the British fliers, Hawker and Grieve, who left New Foundland on May 18 to fly to Ireland. The machine was forced to descend by trouble with the water cooling system of the engine. A cable ship had reported sighting the red light of an airplane in mid-ocean early on Monday morning, May 19. A little later the steamer Samnanger gave Hawker his position by wireless. After receiving his position, Hawker was forced to land on the water, but he came down out of sight of the Samnanger. The little biplane remained afloat for an hour and a half, when the small boat from the Mary took off the aviators.

On rounding the Butt of Lewis the Mary signalled "Saved hands of Sopwith Airplane." The signal station at the Butt asked "Is it Hawker?" and the Mary's flags answered "Yes." The news was at once flashed to the admiralty, which ordered destroyers to overtake the Mary and take off the aviators. The destroyer Revenge soon came up with the slow freighter, and the men were quickly transferred and carried back to Thurso, Scotland.

Mrs. Hawker, rejoicing over the good news at her cottage near Surbiton, said she had been confident all the time that he would come back.

◆

The Week in the World's News

THE PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE. Those who looked for any sensational or startling announcements in the President's message must have been surprised to find it more or less of a business document dealing in a quiet way with the work that is cut out for Congress. The three things that stand out most prominently are the declaration that the railroads at the end of the calendar year "will be handed over to their owners"; the request of Congress to repeal the act of November, 1918, forbidding as a wartime measure the manufacture or sale of wine and beer, and the desirability of preventing new industries from being subjected to undue foreign competition.

The message, cabled to Washington from Paris, the first to be thus dispatched to Congress, began with expressions of regret of his inability to be present at the opening of Congress, but he declared that he felt it his duty to call Congress, because "it was not wise to postpone longer the provisions which must be made for the support of the government." The President said there were several questions to which he thought he must direct their attention. He said: "The question which stands at the front of all others in every country amidst the present great awakening is the question of Labor." In this he did not refer to efficient industrial production, but meant that the vital question was how "men and women who did the daily labor of the world were to obtain progressive improvement in the conditions of their labor. . . . How are they to be given their right advantages as citizens and human beings?"

Photo from International Film Service

Hon. F. H. Gillett, new Speaker of the House

The President recommended the reorganization of industry on a basis of real community of interest, and joint participation and control. The President asked also that action be taken to provide employment for returning soldiers. He recommended developing and maintaining the Federal employment agencies, the stimulating of individual enterprise and the developing of waste land for cultivation as recommended by Secretary of the Interior Lane. The President recommended the readjustment of the excess profits and income tax and the estate tax, and the repeal of the luxury tax. He recommended adequate protection for the dye and chemical industries. He also recommended the passage of the Woman Suffrage Amendment, the early return of the telephone and telegraph lines to their owners, and return of the railroads to the owners, not later than the end of the calendar year. He recommended, in regard to the telephone and telegraph systems, that they should be so organized under private ownership that they would be unified into a national system. He declared the demobilization of military forces had progressed to such a point that he thought it safe to remove the ban on the sale of wine and beers.

GERMANY'S PROTESTS UNAVAILING. The German Cabinet on May 20 authorized the announcement that "Germany declines to sign the peace terms laid before it because they spell the economic destruction, political dishonor, and moral degradation of the entire German nation, not only for the present, but also for still unborn generations." The German statement also declared that these consequences had been recognized in the American press, that the acceptance of such conditions could not be demanded and that the Entente was unjustified in imposing such demands.

The statement further declared that the German people demanded nothing more than what was promised in the Fourteen Points, not a single trace of which they found in the terms proposed.

Although this statement by the German Cabinet, issued in Berlin, appeared to be a categorical refusal to sign the proposed treaty, Count von Brockdorff-Rantzau on May 21, in a note to M. Clemenceau as president of the Peace Conference, requested more time in which to present the German observations on the terms. M. Clemenceau, in reply granted an extension of one week, to May 29.

Following the publication of the Berlin government's announcement that it would not sign the peace treaty, the Allied armies on the Rhine advanced their transport and artillery and made ready for an immediate advance into Germany. As if in response to the movement of Allied military power toward the Rhine, and in answer to the government's declaration that it would not sign the treaty, Berlin saw on May 21 a monster demonstration organized by the Independent Socialists, in which 500,000 people swept through the streets crying, "Sign the peace terms!" and "We want bread, not bullets!"

The Allied reply to the German economic objection was delivered on May 23. The Germans were told that while the terms imposed heavy burdens for Germany, the war Germany had launched had put burdens on the rest of Europe and there was no reason why Germany should escape. The Allied note also declared that in spite of apparently onerous terms, Germany was not being held to full reparation. The German delegation was assured both that the terms would not be modified, and that there was ample opportunity under the terms for German economic growth and commercial prosperity.

Count von Brockdorff-Rantzau made another trip to Spa on May 22 to meet Dr. Scheidemann.

Herr Edward Bernstein, leader of the Social Democratic party, was quoted on May 22 as saying that the peace terms were not entirely dictated by hatred and passion. "It appears more likely," he said, "that distrust of our policy inspired them. The conservative elements of the German Majority and Independent Socialists, the bankers, manufacturers and business men and the military authorities, were all said to favor signing the treaty.

It was expected that the Austrian treaty would be ready by May 28, and that its provisions would follow closely the plan of the treaty with Germany.

CONGRESS REASSEMBLES. The extraordinary session of the 66th Congress was called to order at noon on May 19. The Republicans organized both Houses, electing Senator Cummins president pro-tempore of the Senate and Frederick H. Gillett, of Massachusetts, speaker of the House. A caucus of the Republican members of Congress held May 17 outlined the work of the new session as follows: Return of the telephone, telegraph and cable lines to their owners, passage of the Woman Suffrage Amendment, legislation for the development of transportation facilities, the fixing of a national military policy, the earliest possible return of our soldiers from overseas, the formation of a merchant marine policy, regulation of public oil and coal land and water powers, the revision of the tariff on imports, the reduction of domestic taxes and repeal of the luxury taxes, measures to promote employment of the home-coming soldiers.

BOLSHEVISM IN CANADA. Winnipeg, Manitoba, on May 21 was in the grip of a general strike, which was declared by government investigation to be a movement against constituted government that must be fought out. A strike committee was organized which took full control of the city, allowing food, milk, light and water service. Thirty-five thousand workers were concerned in the strike. No papers were allowed to appear except those which favored the strike. On May 21 attempts were being made to resume normal business in the city. There had been no disorder up to May 21 and by May 23 commercial activities were reported nearly normal.

WHAT ABOUT THE TURKS? Since the Sultan of Turkey is recognized head of the Moslem faith, the question of the disposition of Turkey at the Peace Conference has proved most puzzling. England's operations in Mesopotamia were conducted largely with forces raised in India, most of whom were Moslems. On May 21 an Indian delegation appeared before the Council of Four to ask for consideration of the feelings of the Mohammedan world and to request that the Sultan should not be forced out of Constantinople. The United States was to be asked to accept the mandate for Constantinople, whether the Sultan was permitted to remain or not.

HOUSE FOR SUFFRAGE. The House of Representatives on May 21 passed by a vote of 304 to 89 a resolution proposing a Federal Amendment for Woman Suffrage.

SENATORS DISCUSS LEAGUE. A resolution offered in the Senate on May 23 by Senator Johnson of California, calling on the State Department for the full text of the peace treaty, resulted in an impromptu debate on the League of Nations covenant. Senator Johnson criticized the secrecy in which the treaty was being held, Senator Sherman of Illinois attacked the League Covenant as impairing the sovereignty of the Republic, Senator Lodge declared the official summary of the treaty worthless, and Senator Hitchcock defended the action of the President in keeping the treaty in confidence and decl resolution "a gross breach of tional propriety."

POGROMS IN POLAND. Figh
veloped again in Galicia during of May 20. Ukrainian troop an offensive, but were driven the Poles, who captured quan war material, a great many and put the Ukrainians
While Polish armies were winn tles on the Ukrainian and Lit front there were rumors that had been initiated against the Poland.

Upper Silesia was said to be fight against Polish dominion.

FOR PRESBYTERIAN UNION.
sponse to a telegram from the S Presbyterian Assembly the 131
eral Assembly of the Presb Church, U. S. A., in session in St unanimously agreed to begin tions at once for the "organic un
all Presbyterian Churches.

THE OCEAN FLIGHT. On M Commander Towers, in charge transatlantic flight, cabled from Delgada that the NC-1 had sunk
The NC-3 was at her moorings at Delgada in a very badly damaged
tion; the plane was being disass to be shipped back to New York NC-4 at her moorings at Ponta D in first-class condition, waited o vorable weather to proceed to
The NC-3 had been forced to la Saturday morning owing to the direction in the fog. She had ta the ocean for more than 300 mile having ridden out a 48-hour gale wrecked her lower wings and da her hull so that she leaked badly was first seen when about seven off Ponta Delgada.

PROHIBITION GAINS AND LOSES.
Supreme Court of the State of ington, on May 24, declared th of the legislature, in ratifying th hibition Amendment, subject to a endum vote of citizens of the Texas, on May 24, by 50,000 ma voted statewide prohibition.

NC 4 RECORD BEATEN. Lieut Roget, of the French Army, on M flew from Villacoublay, France,
Paris, to Kenitra, Morocco, a dista
1,348 miles. The NC 4 flew 1,211 from New Foundland to the Azore

VOLCANO TAKES LIFE. The cano Kloet, one of the smallest forty-five volcanos on the Isla Java, Dutch East Indies, in an eru reported May 26, wiped out villages, partially destroyed sev others, caused a loss of life estim at 15,000 and created a distur which was felt for hundreds of Kloet had been inactive since 1901

Photo from International Film Servi

Senator Curtis of Kansas, Republica whip in the Senate

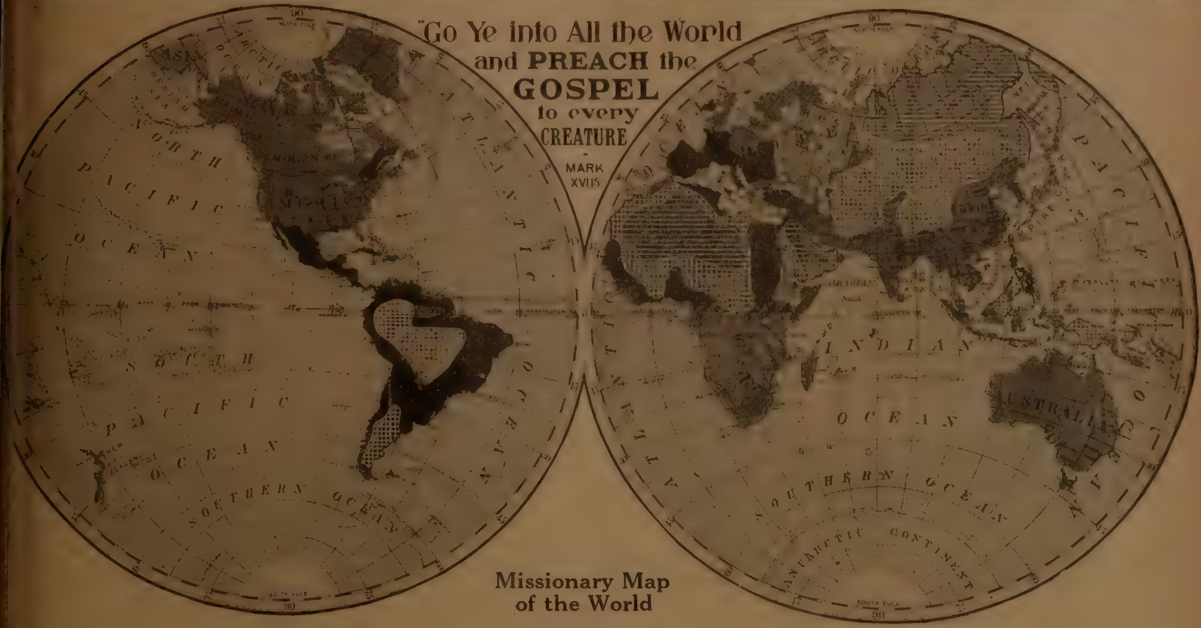
LIGHTING THE DARK PLACES

By LOUIS E. ORCUTT



Missionary Map of the World

WHEN we read the annual reports of missionary societies and note the thousands of dollars which have been sent abroad, and when we glance over the totals of mis- ries at work and of native helpers and of converts ne year, we are tempted to feel very much satis- with ourselves and to repeat the Lord's command ye into all the world" with the accent of one has performed the task. Yet after all, when we the missionary enterprise and compare it in bulk the populations which it must serve, we find that pitifully inadequate; that we have scarcely made a ning in the task of bringing to the world a knowl- of the risen Lord.

e map on this page has been marked to bring to each reader as graphically as possible the extent of the unoccupied world. In the nations sented by that part of the map which is marked hite, there is none to bring the Gospel message to inful, the sorrowing, or the dying. Those portions hich the lines cross are populated more or less ely. The parallel lines mark deserts or sparsely pied regions. Yet even there are men and women hearts like yours and mine, people for whom st died.

the rest of the world outside of this unoccupied there are missionaries and native helpers at work. even at that there are millions of people who born, who live normal lives and who die without hearing the name of Jesus except perchance in ath or as a part of a strange fable too wonderful lieve.

nce the war in Europe disarranged the transporta- of the globe, a great many missionary furloughs had to be extended and the missionaries on the have had their work doubled and multiplied.

ost of us think of China as a land which has been gelized. We know it is not all Christian, but in missionary meetings we have heard so much of a that we feel certain that those Chinese who ain Buddhists or Mohammedans or Confucianists at their own election after having heard of Christ. only last spring a Baptist missionary in China a pathetic call for help. He had been left prac- ly alone in a province of 5,000,000 people to whom ad to be pastor, evangelist and teacher. The t figures available, those of 1916, gave China a lation of 439,214,000. At that time there were hina 5,961 Protestant foreign missionaries, or one very 73,513 of the population. There were 23,- native helpers, native helpers and foreign mission- together numbering about one for every 15,000. this work is to a great degree condensed in treaty , in the larger cities and the more accessible prov- Figuring each mission station as a center of occupied area, with a diameter of thirty miles, there are large portions of China even in the best parts of the empire where there is no preaching of Christ. And beyond the mission stations there are whole provinces in which there are but one or two stations at which preaching services are regularly held.

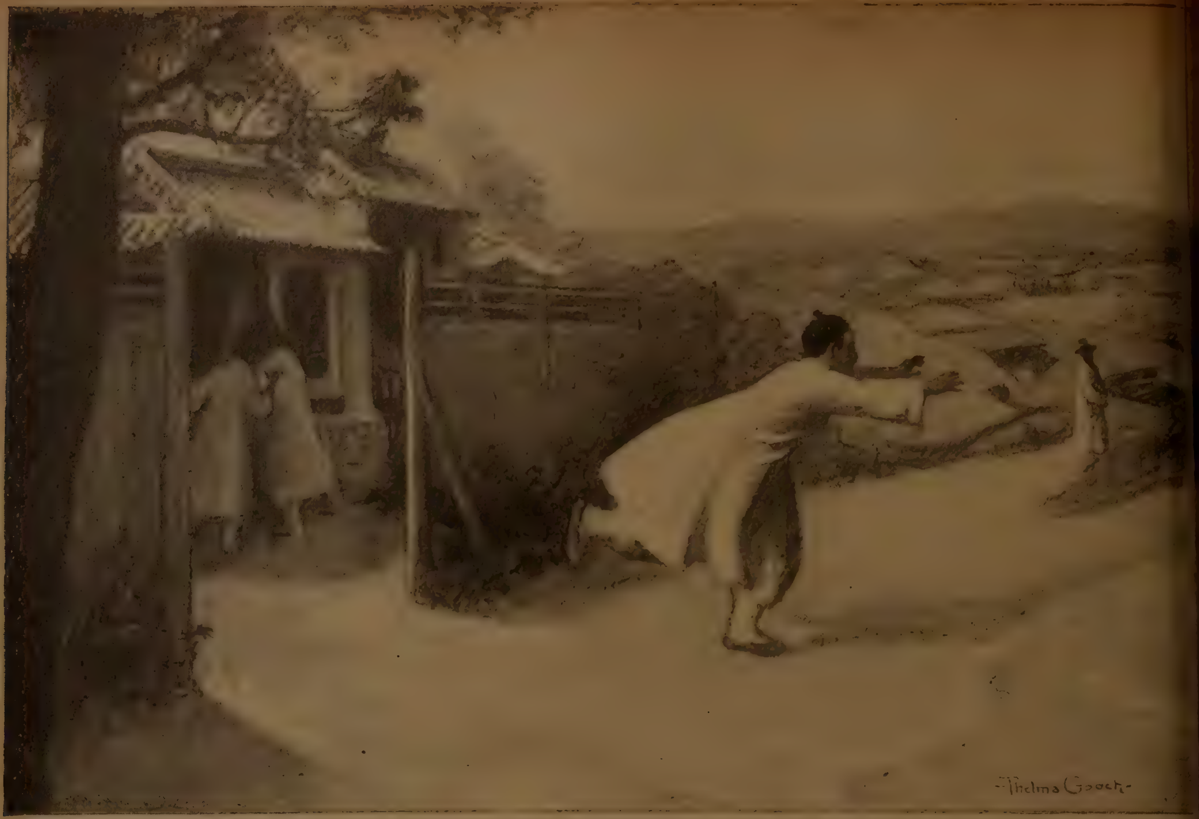
Japan, we are certain, has been fully evangelized, yet there are only 1,075 foreign missionaries and 3,011 native helpers ministering to a population of 59,771,000, or one to 14,674. India also has bulked large in our missionary history. Yet the need of India's population of 315,156,000 is met with only 5,465 foreign missionaries and 39,555 native helpers, or one to 7,000. And these are the best manned fields of the church. South America is almost untouched by Protestant missions. There are earnest Christians in South America who have learned of Christ through the ministry of Catholic priests. But so utterly has the Catholic Church failed of its opportunity that millions of nominal Catholics in South and Central America spurn the church and deny its creed. South America is therefore a difficult field, yet one which Protestants must reach if they would be true to the commission of their Lord. The Australian aborigines have scarcely been touched by missionary effort. But Australia is not marked as an unoccupied field.

Wide stretches in the United States itself and in the Dominion of Canada are virgin territory for our home missionary boards. Much of Europe in normal times is open to the preaching of a freer Gospel. Some of the unoccupied world is unoccupied because of physical and political obstruction to missionary effort. Wide stretches of fever-infested country or trackless desert, mountain barriers and human barriers of superstition and of kingly policy bar out the missionary. The physical difficulties we are learning to surmount; they yield one at a time. The railroad from Cairo to Khartum put a fringe of mission stations along the borders of the desert and from Cairo to the Cape a stretch of country is fairly well covered by missionary effort. The region in Africa marked as unoccupied has a population in the neighborhood of 50,000,000. Here Islam is pushing a vigorous missionary campaign, working feverishly to win for the prophet of Allah the people who have not yet heard of the Son of God. Even the oases and mountains of the desert support a population of nearly a million.

The unoccupied portions of Asia include the province of Helung Kiang with a population of a million and a half; Mongolia with a nomad population of 2,500,000; Sin Kiang, including Chinese Turkestan, with a population of more than 1,000,000; Tibet with 6,000,000; Afghanistan and Turkestan with a population of 20,000,000; all of these without a missionary. Mongolia, Tibet and Afghanistan have until recently been closed to missionary effort by their own laws. The exclusiveness of Tibet has begun to give way. Afghanistan, now perhaps at war with India, has come within the field of operations of the British army, and missionaries have followed the army. Siberia, as is true of the rest of Russia, has been practically closed to all Protestant missionary effort by the laws of the empire. And the same is true of Indo-China and the French colonies in Africa, where France, as defender of the faith of Rome, barred the teachers of any other expression of Christian faith. The disestablishment of the church in France has changed conditions in the colonies, and the revolution in Russia has abolished the state church, so that now both Russian and French territory are wide open to the preacher of evangelical truth.

And what shall be said of the ability of the Church to man these unoccupied fields, and to increase the forces in those now occupied so that the Word can have free course and be glorified in every corner of the world? It has been estimated that the national wealth of the United States is in the neighborhood of $250,000,000,000 and that the increase is at the rate of $10,000,000,000, in one year. The total income of all the foreign missionary societies in 1918 was $20,775,321, or about two thousandths of the increase in our national wealth. It is true that all of this wealth is not in the hands of Protestant Christians, but a careful estimate will show that about 50 per cent, perhaps more, of it is controlled by church members who are supposedly Christians. Some of our great churches give scarcely fifty cents a member per annum to all missionary enterprise, and in none does the average exceed ten dollars a member. Yet the average income of all the men over twenty-one in the United States is in the neighborhood of $700 a year. A great many men and women are tithing. If all of us tithed, or even if all of us gave half a tithe to the whole work of the church and half of what we gave went to the support of missionary effort, the boards would not be wondering where to place the few additional missionaries which their funds warrant, but would be enabled to make a careful disposition of ample forces to carry the light into every dark corner, for "how shall they believe in Him of whom they have not heard, and how shall they hear without a preacher, and how shall they preach except they be sent?"

The great movements of the last two years, the Baptist Five-Year Program, the Disciples Men and Millions Movement, the Congregational Tercentenary, the Presbyterian New Era and the Methodist Centenary are putting missionary giving and missionary planning on a new basis. The decade ahead of us will see the greatest forward movement for Christ in the history of the Church. In about a month we hope to present a view of what this will mean in mission lands.



Blind, unreasoning fear seized him. A hand seemed to grasp his throat like a hangman's noose. In sudden panic he fled from the place, out by the river path along t cliff to a thicket of pine trees

CHANSUNG'S CONFESSION

By William Newton Blair, D.D.

Illustrations by THELMA GOOCH

Foreword

WOULD you like to leave this hurried, worried, modern, Western world of ours a little while? Then come across the sea with me to Old Chosen, where peace was born and holds dominion still in spite of storm and war. And where in all Korea's stretched-out thousand miles could one hope to find a sweeter spot than where the clear South River lingers before the village of Tai Pyeng Dong, reluctant to leave the cool, deep pool beneath the cliff and the friendly chatter of the women washing at the river's edge?

CHAPTER I

Tai Pyeng Dong

TAI PYENG DONG means village of great peace; and so in truth it seemed, nestling between the pine-clad mountain and the river, guarded above by the cliff and below by a picket-line of weeping willows; ninety houses all told, mostly straw-thatched, with low clay walls.

To the rear, on slightly higher ground, several tile-roofed houses clustered around the most pretentious of them all, the home of Han Chanho, the elder of the village, as his father had been before him.

It was a beautiful October morning. The Korean hills were decked in their gayest holiday garments of golden brown and green and yellow, trimmed with orange apricot trees, and just the proper touch of scarlet ivy and crimson oak new grown from summer's cutting, indignant at winter's untimely threatening.

Certainly it was too fine a day to remain indoors, as half the population of Tai Pyeng Dong had already decided. A crowd had gathered on the hill behind the village near a solitary mague dang, or devil's shrine. A canopy hung between four tall bamboo poles. Food was being carried up the hills on wooden platters and liquor in long-necked bottles, while near by a pig was boiling in an iron kettle.

Under the canopy, surrounded by kettle-drums and cymbals, sat three women amazingly attired in flowing robes and shining helmets, sorceresses engaged by the village to dance before the shrine, that the spirits might be pleased to bless the people with health and food and sons, and that war and famine might be prevented.

Crash go the cymbals. Bang, bang go the drums, and the dance begins, slowly at first with gentle waving of arms and rhythmic jingle of bells, round and round the canopied square closed in now by a solid wall of faces. Each sorceress sings a weird chant that rises higher and higher as the dance proceeds.

The music quickens; swifter, swifter turn the dancers, now crouching, now leaping, darting this way and that till the eye is bewildered; but always keeping time to the crash of the drums and cymbals that urge them on faster and faster, till they seem no longer human shapes, but frenzied beings that mock alike at men and demons.

All the world loves a din, and a canopy flapping in the wind with flying streamers, who can resist it? No wonder old Chang finds school-keeping unusually difficult. His twenty ink-spattered scholars are wild to join the crowd on the hill; all but one, a lad of fifteen years, Han Chansung, the son of the village elder, who continues reading his Chinese history. Already the burden of position and responsibility rests heavily on Chansung's straight young shoulders. Was he not married three months ago, and is not his father the village elder?

Whenever old Chang's back is turned, eager messages flash across the schoolroom.

"You, Yungsik, you ask him."

"No; you, Ninsuh."

Until old Chang, who has know day what was coming, concludes th is useless to keep the school lo Turning suddenly he demands of Y sik, the leader of the younger b "What's the matter with you ras You haven't studied all day."

Thus addressed, Yungsik answ "Honorable teacher, please, you k all the village is up on the hill to watching the dancers. Please le go. We will study hard tomorro Old Chang has already decided to them go. If the truth be told, he w to go himself. It would never do, ever, to seem too willing.

"What nonsense!" he growls; " if you are determined to go and hav mind to study, be off with you! Quie quietly now!" as the boys rush for their shoes at door.

In another moment they are gone and only Chang and Chansung remain to gather up the b and inkstones and fasten the door.

"What makes you so serious today?" old Ch asks, smiling at the frown on the earnest of his favorite pupil. "Have you not a mind t too?"

"No," Chansung replies; "father says these wo are evil women who deceive the people, and objects to their coming. He has been away, returns this evening, and I must hasten home greet him."

As Chansung made his way home through the lage, he could see the crowd on the hill and hea weird strains of the dancers' song, and, boy th he was, he bit his lip with displeasure. Nowhere earth does good blood show more plainly than i old Orient. Han Chanho, his father, was an ea seeker after truth, high-minded and cultured w long study of the Chinese classics. He had instilled in his son's mind his own disgust at the su stitious customs of his people.

CHAPTER II

The Quarrel

NSUNG inquired of the gatekeeper if his ther had returned, and, learning that he had assed on into the inner court through a small of asters in full bloom and tiny, gnarled pines then pots guarding a glass bowl with goldfish g in the sunlight.

dless of the flowers and beauty about him, still ed in thought, Chansung went at once to his oom. He was met at the door by a young girl r even than the flowers in the garden, Paksie wha, his bride since the tenth day of the fifth graceful in form, with laughing black eyes h a mass of hair that glistened like the wing of n, red lips and dimpled chin, dressed for a holi- her best pink jacket and flowing gown of thin- ream silk from Pyeng Yang. No wonder Chan- vas proud of his bride and loved her in his quiet sed fashion. He smiled a greeting and began if any word had come from his father; then, ng that Choonwha was dressed for the street, "Where are you going?"

," laughed Choonwha, "just up the hill for a e of the crowd." Then, guessing his mind, don't care, do you? I will only stay a little and I am tired of remaining indoors."

t I do mind," responded her young husband in proper, lordly fashion. "You know father dis- he sorcerers. I am not going, and you must not er."

t I must go," pleaded Choonwha. "I promised ok to go by for her. Please give permission."

Changsung remained firm. "No, you cannot ay no more about it."

ck tears came to the black eyes and a flush of spread over the girl's face. A small foot stamped one floor. "There is no harm in it. If father ere, he would let me go, and I am going, no mat- at you say."

a moment Chansung stood stunned. His fine aled, then purpled with rage. "You—you speak like that?"

zing her by the shoulder he pushed her back into om so suddenly that she stumbled and fell, only ing to her feet, white with anger and screaming, fiend! You struck me! I hate you; let me go!"

e more Choonwha tried to pass and once more sung pushed her with all his strength back into oom. Entirely beside himself with anger, he a small ironing-stick from the floor and struck y at the maddened girl, and the blow fell on her sed head, cutting a deep gash above the temple. out a word Choonwha dropped to the floor and ill, with red blood coursing from the wound to oor.

moment people came running from everywhere. and dizzy, Chansung leaned against the wall eard the cries, but saw nothing before his eyes e blood streaming from the wound his hand had . Half fainting, he crept from the room to the open Gradually his confused brain grasped the mean- the cries, "Aigo, chugusso! Aigo, chugusso! (Alas, dead! Alas, she is dead!") nd, unreasoning fear seized him. A hand seemed sp his throat like a hangman's noose. In sudden he fled from the place, out by the river path the cliff to a thicket of pine trees, where he fell ong, panting for breath and trembling in every Burying his face in his hands, he began to weep awful, heartbroken sobbing that shook his frame convulsion; wept till strength to weep was gone, obbing still as a child will sob that has cried itself ep. Poor, broken-hearted lad! So young to have such a wreck of life, and all in a moment!

hausted, he fell asleep to be awakened two hours by the sound of voices. Night had fallen; but, ng between the branches, he could see three men lanterns. Beyond doubt they were looking for He heard them say, "Yes, the girl is dead. The will soon be here."

ansung knew what that meant. If found, they l drag him to Pyeng Yang to be first tortured hen hung by the neck outside the city wall. nly hope lay in flight. Waiting for the men to he rose and fled by a path he knew across the tain to the north, falling many times in the ess, but struggling on till twenty miles lay be- him and Tai Pyeng Dong. All the next day he dden in the bushes, and traveled the second night e first, and came at last, scarcely able to stand, main road between Pyeng Yang and Kai Chun. iven by weakness and hunger, he entered a small nd ordered a table of rice, and fell asleep on the while the innkeeper's wife prepared the food. ing only to eat, he lay down again and slept on after hour, sometimes starting up in his sleep noaning till the innkeeper's wife, looking at his coat and scholar's hat, wondered much at her r but, being a wise woman, left him to sleep on ng as he might.

CHAPTER III

Choonwha Recovers

E sun was setting behind the western hills when he village elder turned the last bend in the road ame in sight of Tai Pyeng Dong. His donkey, ing sight of the village, started forward, braying y. Eager to be at his journey's end, the elder gave the animal rein, and in a few moments he had entered the village and were nearing home when he realized that some accident must have happened. The yard was filled with village folk crowded before his son's door, while from within came the sound of weeping. Leaving the donkey to shift for himself, the elder sprang into the courtyard, crying, "What has happened? Where is my son? Some one tell me quickly what is the matter."

The crowd fell back, but no one answered. Thoroughly alarmed, the elder forced his way into the room where Choonwha lay on the floor, apparently dead.

At the elder's abrupt entrance, the wailing ceased for a moment, then broke forth redoubled. It was many minutes before any one could tell him what had happened. There had been a quarrel between his son and his wife; about what no one seemed to know. A fight had ensued, and his son had killed his girl-wife with the ironing-club and fled; no one knew where.

When no more could be learned from the crowd, the elder turned to the group before the door and issued his command. "You, all of you, go search for my son."

Approaching the girl he threw himself on his knees at her side and took her limp hand in his own. Dropping the hand, he hastily felt for her heart.

"Strange!" he exclaimed. "When did this happen? There is no heart beat, but the flesh is warm."

Turning to his wife, he asked, "What have you done to restore her? Perhaps even yet life may be brought back."

"No," she replied, "we have done everything. Ko, the doctor, has been here and given his strongest medicine. We have blown with the bamboo pipes into her ears and mouth and nose, but it was no use. She is dead."

At the last word the wailing broke forth afresh. But Elder Han, with that strength of mind that had early made him a leader, refused to believe that all hope was gone. Calling for a hot stone from the fireplace, he placed it at the girl's feet. He wrapped her with warm quilts and began bathing the bruised face with cold water. Placing his hand again on the breast, he felt a faint flutter of the heart, or was it only the pulsation of his own hand? He could not tell. Encouraged, he began to stroke the girl's face, calling, "Choonwha, awake! Choonwha, awake!"

The wailing ceased outside the door; the crowd waited breathlessly to see if the elder's skill could bring the girl back to life.

Suddenly there was a commotion at the gate. Some one came running with the cry: "The police! the police! Run to the hills! Run to the hills!"

In a moment the yard was clear and in the distance was heard the quick thud of fleeing feet. The village had felt the rough hand of the law before. They knew the police would seize every man, woman and child they would find and beat them without distinction, the government holding the whole village responsible for a crime committed within its bounds. A murder especially furnished the officials an excellent opportunity to seize the men of means in the community and flog them till they paid all that official avarice demanded. No wonder the villagers fled, all but Elder Han and Songsie, his wife, and one old woman too lame for flight, who threw herself down in the courtyard crying, "I shall be killed! I shall be killed!"

Outside the door only one other remained, Pak, the faithful gatekeeper. Approaching Elder Han he said, "Master, you and the lady go and leave the girl with me."

"No," said the elder, "they will not seize me; anyway, life is returning to the girl, and I will not leave her." "Nor will I," said Pak, and he took his stand at the door.

Now other cries were heard. The police had arrived and were seizing all who had failed to escape. A moment more and two fierce-looking men in official blue rushed into the court with drawn swords. Pak, faithful to the last, tried to prevent them from entering the room and was promptly knocked down.

Rising to his full height, Elder Han faced the officers. "Stand back! You cannot enter here. I am Han Chanho, the elder of this village. Touch me at your peril. This girl is only stunned, not dead." Without another word he turned and began chafing Choonwha's hands once more.

The policemen hesitated. They felt, as all men feel, the dignity and power of a true nobleman. They also knew that Elder Han had many friends in high position. Withdrawing, they conferred with the men outside, and at length decided to leave two of their number on guard while the rest hurried the prisoners to the county-seat, and received instruction concerning Han Chanho.

And now Elder Han redoubled his efforts to arouse Choonwha, and was rewarded ere long by a low moan from the girl's lips.

"She lives!" he cried, and taking a pinch of pepper forced it into her nose and blew it far in with his breath.

A tremor ran through the slender frame; the face flushed; first a cough, then a sneeze, and Choonwha opened her eyes like a bewildered child.

"What is it, father?" she asked, and sought to rise, but the elder prevented. "No, no, Choonwha, lie still, you have hurt your head. Go to sleep now, and you will be all right in the morning."

With a weak smile Choonwha obeyed and fell to sleep almost at once, breathing naturally, her hand in the elder's hand.

Carefully, so as not to waken the sleeping girl, Elder Han rose, and, passing into an inner room, returned with his money box. Wise was this man with the wisdom of the East. Crossing the court to the two policemen on guard, he gave each five silver dollars.

"The girl has recovered consciousness," he said. "Take this and see that there is no more trouble. Also here is a present for his honor, Nim Kwansik, the magistrate. Give him my kind regards and say that I hope the men arrested will be set free."

CHAPTER IV

A Stranger in a Strange Land

CHANSUNG awoke with an aching body and an aching head. For a moment he was unable to realize where he was. The strange room and the old woman working in the kitchen—how came he here and who was she? Gradually it all came back—the long, weary tramp in the darkness. But why had he come? Then the voices by the cliff came to him again, and the three lanterns, and as if shouted in his ears the words, "The girl is dead. The police will soon be here."

Now he remembered clearly. He had quarreled with Choonwha She had resisted and he had struck her with the ironing-stick, and she had fallen at his feet with red blood streaming from the wound.

A cold sweat broke from his forehead. Why had he delayed at this inn? The police might overtake him any moment. Summoning all his self-possession, he arose and paid for his meal and was soon on the highway once more. Keeping steadily north, he crossed the North River twice before sunset, paying the ferryman fully half the money left in his pocket.

That night he slept in an inn at Mu Chin Dai. At first he thought the town was on fire as from a distance he saw a blaze that lit the nearby hills bright as day. Coming nearer, he saw that the light came from a huge furnace set against the hillside. Behind the furnace twenty men pumped a great bellows by alternately jumping up and down on either end of a long plank, all singing to keep time, and with every swing of the plank a blast of air drove the flames twenty feet above the furnace.

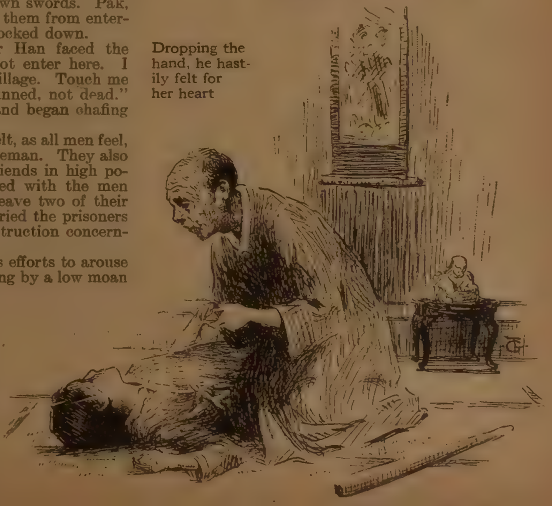
Below, soot-blackened men staggered back and forth from the furnace to a long line of earthen molds, catching the spurting flame of white hot metal in an iron vessel and pouring the liquid fire with marvelous skill into the molds, enough and just enough to make an iron kettle.

Chansung stood for a time in the edge of the light and watched the kettle-makers. He had never seen anything like this before, and the fierce rush of the flames and the spurt of the glowing metal fascinated him. He forgot for a moment his trouble and was strangely rested. Later too, at the inn, all was noise and bustle. No one noticed him, and he was glad to find a place where he could sleep again, having first eaten a bowl of rice.

The inn was astir long before daylight the next morning. Too sore and stiff to rise, Chansung lay for a time watching the other travelers prepare to depart. Already they were feeding the horses in the dark outside. Presently the innkeeper announced breakfast. Chansung arose, made a brief toilet by the water jar in the yard, and ate his breakfast with a relish. He had just enough money left to pay for this meal, and not knowing where the next would come from made the best of the opportunity.

One of the strangest things in life is the swiftness

Continued on page 651



Dropping the hand, he hastily felt for her heart

Our Gospel and Our Obligations

A SERMON

By

REV. J. H. JOWETT, D.D.*

TEXT—Col. 1:5, 6. "The word of the truth of the Gospel, which is come unto you."

"THE truth of the Gospel." God-spel, the God-speech, the God-story, the story of the love of God in Christ Jesus our Lord! The Gospel—all the hints of light, all the gracious evangels which find expression in the incarnation, the atonement, the resurrection, the exaltation of Christ our Saviour! The Gospel—the unveiling of the Eternal, the light of his countenance, the voice of grace, and of love, and of pleading, the home-call!

"The Gospel, which is come unto you." Is it worth anything? What value do we place upon it? Have its assumptions been confirmed by experiment, or have its claims been overthrown? Is the Gospel like some of those dogmatic nostrums which are to be found buried in obsolete medical text-books, and which are now exploded and rejected? Is the Gospel only a wornout medical theory, which served its little day, or is it as permanent and indispensable as air, and light, and water, and bread? Does it touch the need it professes to remove? Is it worth a proclamation? Does it deserve transmission?

The man who first touches the secret of cancer, and confronts it with some invincible antagonist, will not hide his discovery in selfish silence; he will proclaim it from the housetops, and the evangel will be shouted to the ends of the earth. And if to us there has come a remedy for needs more appalling than the pangs and ravages of cancer, even for the cancerous corruptions and afflictions of the soul, shall we hide the revelation in selfish silence, or shall we give it universal proclamation, that all the ends of the earth may see the glory of our God?

The Gospel has come to us; is it worth transmission?

What does the Gospel claim to do? What does it claim to have done? I am more and more amazed at the unflinching boldness of its professions. It quietly confronts the three most stupendous presences in human life—sin, and sorrow, and death—and it confidently proclaims its powers and conquest. It does not address itself to surface work, to superficial dressings or external sores; it proclaims a ministry which is radical, fundamental, absolute, and which results in perfect triumph. It has no competitor in the field. There is criticism, but no competition.

The three dark presences in this city are sin and sorrow and death. Is there any ministry dealing with these except the ministry of the Gospel of Jesus? I want to know where the competitors are in this city who are addressing themselves to the burdensome bondage of guilt and of sin. I want to know what other evangel there is that is singing to the broken heart. I want to know what other light there is accompanying men into the chilling mists and shadow of death.

The Gospel of Jesus claims to come with the grace of forgiveness, with the power of salvation, and to break up the empire and bondage of sin in irreparable confusion. It claims to bring a transfiguring ray into the presence of sorrow, to set a rainbow in the tearful sky, to make the yoke easier and the burden light. It claims to come into the darkening presence of death, to set in the life an eastern window, to unfold the dawning of a new day, to turn "good-by" into "good-night," and to kindle the cheering hope of reunion and immortality. The Gospel has come to us; is it worth the transmission?

NOW, let us walk the ground again with more vigilant deliberateness. It is a Gospel in the presence of sin. It confronts the most tyrannous and galling bondage in the spirit of exulting hope. It announces itself as the emancipator, giving "liberty to them that are bruised," and "opening the prison to them that are bound." It addresses itself equally to those who are imprisoned in sheer animalism, and those whose servitude is gilded by comparative refinement.

I am not quite sure whether I ought to make this distinction. It seems to make very little difference whether a man's chains be made of iron or of gold. Some men appear to be bound with a vulgar cart-rope; others seem to be equally enslaved with multitudinous cords of variety. There is Caliban, and there is Apollos, the learned Alexandrian, both needing emancipation; and the Gospel proffers its ministry to both, and promises their redemption. There is Caliban, more than half a beast, sunk and buried in animalism, finding a grave in his own flesh. Has anything been done for Caliban? Why, a missionary told me that, out in his church in New Guinea, some of his senior deacons were oncewhile cannibals! You could find similar trophies in the New Hebrides. Don't let that statement pass without bringing to bear upon it the ministry of an alert imagination. Think what it means—the oncewhile cannibals now sober, reverent, dignified servants and leaders in the Church of Jesus Christ! The sleeping angel has been awaked, the fleshly passions have been restrained, the man has leaped into his rightful sovereignty, and the beast has been belted and subdued.

But I do not go only to New Guinea and the New Hebrides for evidences of the redemption of Caliban; they are to be found within our own land. Every month I have sent to me the literature of the Salvation Army, and it constitutes a veritable "Acts of the Apostles" in its marvelous stories of spiritual emancipation. The Salvation Army is toiling among men and women round about whose lives there gathers no softening, alluring influence of culture and refinement. And have they any trophies to show? Have they any redeemed Calibans? I am amazed at their triumph. Why, their ranks are full of them! My labor and ministry are cast in another sphere, but my faith in the regenerating power of the Gospel of Christ is month by month enriched as I read and hear the stories of their conquests.

It is blind stupidity of us to sit at home, and shape our theories, and say it cannot be done. Let us leave our indolent theorizing and go out and inspect the field. I tell you that if my faith in the power of Jesus to redeem the beast were ever to waver and grow weak, I would go and search out some Salvation Army captain, and would put myself under his guidance, and I would ask him to show me "the marvelous works of God," and he would take me to houses which were once mere sties, but are now clean and beautiful homes; which were once occupied by Caliban, but are now tenanted by the purified saints of God. Let no one theorize, or treat Caliban with evasion. The theorist, in all his reckonings, must account for the redemption of the beast.

BUT the Gospel not only proclaims its power in the redemption of Caliban, but also in the emancipation of Apollos. It claims to be able to convert cold refinement into ardent virtue. It claims to be able to change superficial glitter into a deep and radiant warmth. It claims to be able to transform a frosty and perilous passivity into the purifying ministry of a passionate love. And wha claims to do it has done. It has changed self- ceit into cleansing aspiration. It has changed aggressiveness into eager passivity. It has cha the hard heart into a place of broad streams rivers of soft and flowing sympathies. These th I know. I "testify that I have seen, and give wit of that I have heard."

The miracle is being worked every day. Our are so holden to other things that we do not se Some months ago two young fellows were brou into consecrated fellowship with the Lord. T set themselves, in eager, loving purpose, to win ev man in the workshop to the Master. Today ev man in the workshop, save one, is living the life in Christ. Again I speak that which I do kn and testify that I have seen. And this Gospel come to us: is it worth transmission?

But now let me take you a step further. Gospel has not only put into our midst redee characters; it has, through the redeemed charact sweetened and purified the common life. S eight years ago, one of our distinguished states coined the phrase, "psychological climate." I thou it a very happy phrase. What is its suggesti It suggests that, just as we are inevitably born i a certain quality of native air, so we are inevita born into a certain quality of surrounding thou The lungs breathe a certain provided atmosph and so does the mind. We imbibe common thou as we imbibe common air. Therefore, when we sp of the influence of the Gospel, we must not c count redeemed men, we must pay regard to deemed atmosphere. We may not ourselves redeemed, but we simply cannot escape breath an air which has been purified and sweetened redemption.

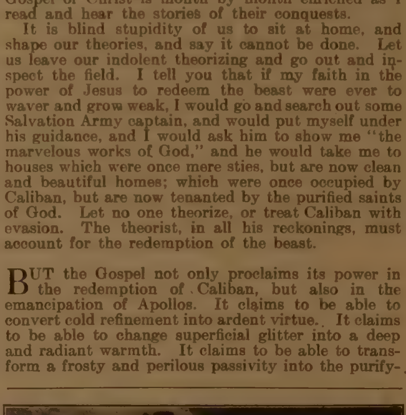
In this land of ours we may refuse to be the Mast disciples, but we cannot avoid touching the hem his garment. The ample robes sweep through land, and everything gains by the touch. Christ touched our homes; he has touched our privile and freedom; he has touched our literature and he has touched our music and our architectu We cannot get away from him! The influence redeemed men and women is the very air we breat There is many a man who affects to sneer at religi and to regard its ministry as effeminate or effe whose very liberty is the fruit of the Gospel, a who owes every worthy element in his being to radiant and beneficent influence of the redeemed cl dren of God. We are breathing an air which partially Christianized, and the impregnation mak for liberty, and sympathy, and reverence, and tru Where else can you find the same invigorating It is only to be found in Gospel climes, where Saviour is known, and where the redeemed ha walked with him in white.

"Show me a place on this planet," says Low "show me a place on this planet, ten miles squa where a decent man can live in decency, comfo and security, supporting and educating his childr unspoiled and unpolluted; a place where age is re erenced, infancy respected, womanhood honored, a human life held in due regard—when skeptics can fi such a place, ten miles square, on this globe, whe the Gospel of Christ has not gone and cleared t way, and laid the foundation, and made decency a security possible, it will then be in order for t skeptics to move thither, and then ventilate th views."

It is a Gospel in the presence of sorrow. I kn not how I may speak about this except to the deemed. It is an experience which can only suggested; it cannot be defined. When the robes sorrow wrap themselves around the redeemed like chilling mist, what is the saving element in th consciousness? Just this: the Gospel evangel th they are not alone, that the chill hour is also th dwelling-place of the divine. "When thou pass through the waters I will be with thee."

That is the saving presence by which sorrow transfigured. The Father knows! The sorrow all measured! He will render it innocuous; yea, will transform it into advantage, and convert into my friend.

> "And so the shadows fall apart,
> And so the west winds play;
> And all the windows of my heart
> I open to the day."



Growing up with her children

IN SPITE of agitation and education, child marriages still persist among the high-caste Hindus. In India mothers grow up with their children. This eighteen-year-old girl is the mother of three. Her children are bright and well-fed, but the great proportion of babies die of starvation and neglect before reaching maturity.

The missionary doctor is waging war against the ignorance and superstition which have doomed hundreds of thousands of children to death.

---

*Dr. Jowett's sermons appear in The Christian Herald in the first issue of every month.

EYLON BUDDHISTS WON TO CHRIST

By ARTHUR S. PAYNTER, Director India Christian Mission

RS. PAYNTER, Miss Houston and a party of workers of the India Christian Mission have just had a month's meetings in a large village d about half way een Colombo Kandy. illage, a lucaste n One mission ts was perse- for refusing to wor- ere seems to be on the line where the two classes ghalese people meet the Kandyans and the untry folk.

m the beginning of the meetings, great interest anifested, and from fifty to two hundred heathen gathered daily to hear the message. All agreed ing that the Gospel had never before been ed in the village.

ading Upasaka (Buddhist religious layman) rose feet at the close of two meetings and asked per- n to speak. The message, he said, was wonder- e teaching good, just what the people of the vil- eeded; and he himself was so impressed that he come to the meetings every day.

ing the month, four Buddhists professed con- n, and others are earnestly inquiring the way of ion. Of these young converts one of the workers today: "The converts are genuinely true. are real Christians."

other worker, Mr. Pereira, writing today, says: work is very promising. There are a number of inquirers. Today I am going to the next village where a man has sent for me saying he wants to become a Christian."

There are many polyandrists in this village and district—one woman having three or four husbands, who are always brothers. It is a dark, heathen district, but the outlook is more promising than I have known for many years in any Ceylon village. We feel that the Lord would have us open Wadduwaa as a permanent mission station, and we have decided to do so. It will mean a considerable extra financial responsibility, at least $50 a month, for the station will need to be strongly manned. This is a step taken in simple faith; for, since the first few months after the outbreak of war in August, 1914, we have not had so severe a time of financial faith-testing as now. Will your readers join us in earnest prayer for an outpouring of the Holy Spirit on the dark people of Wadduwaa and neighboring villages, who seem to be so ready to accept the Gospel?

There will undoubtedly be many and great difficulties. Pray that grace may be given us to overcome them.

[Mr. Paynter, whose articles on the work of the India Christian Mission have appeared at intervals in the Christian Herald during recent years, is a missionary of wide experience. In the course of his work in Ceylon and elsewhere, many have been persuaded to abandon heathenism and accept Christianity. Additional workers are needed, as the field extends into districts where there are many unevangelized heathen.

A typical home of a native evangelist

Military Training in the Schools

By JOHN WANAMAKER

E SHOULD be in no hurry to take up military training. In my own store I have had a military organization for twenty-seven years. e paid out so much money to maintain this sys- hat I hesitate to tell you. The great expense l dishearten you in your efforts to have military ng. I approve of military drill for wage-earners, do not approve of a course in military training public schools.

elieve that the majority of the people are not in of military training. The best educators in the ry have tried military training, have found that ed and have abandoned it. Such a plan would the minds of the students off their work. It will them crave the applause of silly crowds. Be- that, it does not serve its purpose of making solis question of opposing military training does not the question of a man's patriotism or loyalty. can't go plunging—planting things in the ls because they are novelties and appeal to the . The administration of the schools is not a r of sentimentality. We are not giving in it per return to the taxpayers. There will be a popular revolt against the kind of management distracts the attention of the pupils with the lure tside interests such as military training.

◆

omen Oppose Military Training

JRING the summer of 1918, the Woman's Church Federation was repeatedly urged by persons inent in the Universal Military League to put on record as in favor of compulsory military ing in America. It seemed wise to the Executive Committee of the Federation to ask a special committee to study various forms of universal training in this and other countries, and to report its findings when the war should be over. This committee, made up of women from both within and without the Federation, has now submitted its report.

The document is interesting and timely. It shows that England and France years ago tried military training in their schools and discarded it as unsatisfactory. During the past year England has adopted a wonderful new educational system which makes no provision whatever for military training. In France a strong central committee has been formed to promote physical (not military) education. In Switzerland military training does not begin till the age of twenty. Germany has never had military training in her public schools.

In our own country educators and teachers in large numbers are openly opposed to compulsory military education. The National League of Teachers' Associations, representing 20,000 teachers, in convention at Pittsburg last July, sent a resolution to Secretary of War Baker expressing a "warm approval" of his stand against universal military training in this country.

A bulletin recently issued by the Bureau of Education of the United States reports the conclusion of legislators in the various states.

The Woman's Church Federation, having viewed the whole ground, concludes its report as follows:

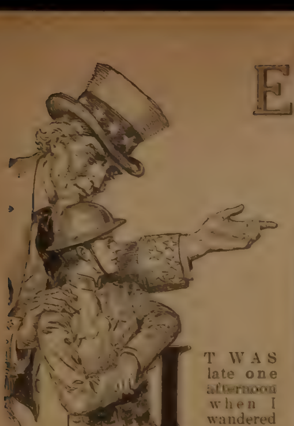
"Carefully considering this array of testimony, we are led to the conclusion that military training is not a desirable addition to American public schools, but that what we shall provide for our children instead is a thorough system of physical education from the kindergarten up, adapted to the different ages of the pupils and including health supervision and instruction, supervised play and competitive games and contests, group singing, pageantry and amateur dramatics and vocational training. Such a system would tend to develop strong, well-trained, perfectly controlled bodies fit to be the foundation of joyous and efficient manhood and womanhood of the highest possible service to humanity. If it still must be that for some young men service of their country must take the form of the grim business of war, let them be given specialized training for their profession, as other specialists are trained—but subsequent to and not during the impressionable years. Patriotic training in the public schools during the later teens may better take the form of instruction in the ideals of democracy and their application to industrial and civic affairs. The idealism of youth, aroused to the highest pitch during the war, may well be enlisted with the coming of peace in the valorous fight for clean and beautiful cities, fit homes and working conditions for all the people, and the introduction of Christian standards into social and business relations."

The report recalls the fact that the efforts to get a universal military training bill through the National Congress have failed. An amendment to the draft act, introduced March 29, 1918, would have made military training obligatory for all young men between the ages of nineteen and twenty-one, but it was defeated on vote. The Chamberlain Bill, providing that all physically fit male citizens, except those that are the main support of their families, must train in their nineteenth year was also defeated.

Now the war has been won and the constitution of a League of Nations has been submitted for approval. In this constitution provision is made for the reduction of armaments and the settlement of international disputes by arbitration. "To militarize America now would be to acknowledge that though by our aid the power of Prussia has been broken, we have been overcome by the Prussian spirit and are now putting our trust no longer in idealism but in arms."

EDUCATING AN ARMY

By MARGARET E. SANGSTER



One of the American Army schools in France. Soldier students arriving

IT WAS late one afternoon when I wandered down the quaint old Faubourg St. Honoré and walked into the pleasant white building that the Bureau shares with a certain branch of the Y. M. C. A. And there I met Dr. John Erksine, who is in charge of the university department of the Bureau, and he told me the details of the wonderful plan that has been in operation ever since the armistice was signed.

Anson Phelps Stokes outlined the preliminary plan of the Army Educational Bureau in January, 1918. His plan was not an involved one, merely the putting into practice of the theory that the right kind of education makes of any man a better soldier and a better citizen. Mr. Stokes was wise enough to realize that an entirely new and extensive educational opportunity had been placed before our country by its entrance into the European war. For Europe holds the educational background that the United States as a new country necessarily lacks. The older universities, the world-famed art schools, the great music masters are in and of Europe.

At the time that the war ended there were over two millions of our soldiers in Europe, and an overwhelming majority of these soldiers were in their youth and early manhood. Placed in the center of a wide field for educational effort, the Army Educational Bureau felt that the time had come to put into effect Mr. Stokes's plan.

The Y. M. C. A. offered its organization to start the work. University men took hold of the various branches of it with a splendid enthusiasm, and from the start until this time, when our American schools and colleges are holding their commencement exercises, the Bureau has been a marked success.

The work has been divided into three branches: the university department, under Dr. Erskine; the agriculture and trade department, which is under the supervision of Dr. Kenyon L. Butterfield; and the high and lower school work, which is managed by Dr. Frank Spaulding. The university department has charge of the advanced students, the agriculture and trade department attends to vocational pupils, and the high and lower school department undertakes the teaching of those men who have never had the complete e that is eve

due. It wa
departme for me h greatest in

The wi ganization der the c
the Gener and, since mistice ea mental el been co
and tau officers.
army divi
its post sch
its high
There a
about 2,
these scho
a total en of perhaps pupils.
pupils are the rudim knowledge
ing, writing and arithmetic—and if they are advanced, elementary Latin, mathematics modern languages.

Directly after the signing of the armis
A. E. F. university was started at Beaune, in Ordinary college courses are given there by professors—courses in agriculture, business spondence, music, art, law and medicine. Th versity ranks with any American college.

For the members of the American Expedi
Force who are college graduates a different a more advanced system has been arranged.
colleges have offered to give free post-graduate to 12,000 army students, and English univ have offered to take 2,000 pupils. Julien's a Beaux Arts, in Paris, have opened their atelier American artist—but only a limited number accepted. The pity of it is that 40,000 appli for these advanced courses have been made first of February. For the youth of America w oh, desperately hard!—to be taught.

THE HUMAN TOUCH An Interview With Evangeline Bo

COMMANDER EVANGELINE BOOTH looked at me with eyes that were almost piercingly direct as she took my outstretched hand into a firm, almost masculine, clasp. I felt something of her wonderful magnetism even before she spoke; felt something of the power that is hers—the power that can make great audiences follow her slightest gesture and thrill to her merest suggestion. It was a concrete part of her, that magnetism—a part of her that could hew away barriers and walk over obstacles.

"You wanted to see me?" she questioned simply, and

"Yes, I wanted to see you!" I answered just as simply. Somehow the formalities of the average interview were not at all necessary.

"About what?" questioned Commander Booth. "You see," she added, "I have to be abrupt, for there is so little time. My days are very full."

"I wanted to ask you," I told her—answering her self-styled abruptness with the briefest sort of a statement—"about the new kind of work that the Salvation Army will do, now that the war is over. Of course—" I couldn't help saying it—"your work with the soldiers has opened the way to a broader, better field."

"We won't do any new sort of work," Commander Booth told me, "not in the most literal sense. But we'll do our old work on a larger scale—and we'll put it on a more solid financial basis.

"You say that our work with the soldiers has placed our organization in the foreground. We realize that, and we are glad. But the world must not think that our success has gone to our heads. We will go on preaching the word of God to whoever will listen—"

"But," I half interrupted, "it has been said that the Salvation Army will be changed; that the old uniform will be substituted by a more modern one; that the poke bonnet and the tambourine will be laid aside—"

It was Commander Booth who interrupted this time.

"The only thing that we will do away with," she said firmly, "will be the street begging. That will be stopped. We will, of course, continue to take up a collection at each of our meetings, but from now on we will not have our workers stand upon street corners with outstretched hands. No," at a murmured word from me, "we do not feel that street begging is undignified. But we do feel that it takes up a tremendous amount of time that might be used in some better way.

"We are planning, each year, to carry on a national campaign to raise money for our work. The money raised will be used to make up deficits—and in no other way! We do not wish to endow our churches, for an endowed church is a dead church. But we wish to be relieved of the strain and worry that a marked shortage of funds always causes."

"You'll not have any trouble raising money when you start campaigning!" I laughed; "not when our boys get back and tell what they know of you. It's been very wonderful—the story they have to tell."

A smile swept magically across Commander Booth's face until her very eyes were alight with happiness.

"I'm glad that the boys like us," she told me; "but, really, we've done nothing at all out of the ordinary. The cellars that our workers lived in in France are not the first cellars that they have had to know. They've preached, before ever we had a war, in mud and water up to their knees. You've heard stories, doubtless, of how our girls made doughnuts over open fires, each girl of them wearing a gas mask while she worked because of the death that was always so very near? Well, they've been near death on other occasions, too. When officers were sent overseas I always talked about their prospective work with them. And I always said, as I wished them good-by and godspeed, 'Die for our soldiers as willingly as they would die for you!' And they always answered, 'We will!'"

"The Salvation Army had been successful in its work overseas because that work has made the magic of the human touch! We have always done our work in great and crowded cities. That is why our workers can appeal to any sort of a man. They know how to reach him on his own ground.

"Oh," Commander Booth's whole face was made radiant again by her smile, "I wish that you might see some of the letters that I have received! There have been letters from privates and from generals; there have been letters from French civilians and Belgian refugees. And they've all felt this same human touch. The mothers of soldiers have written to us and the sweethe soldiers—written letters, every one, thanking the work that we have done and the added c that we have been able to give." She pause then—

"Don't think," she said hurriedly, "when that we have given comfor
we have appealed only material side of the soldie ture. No, indeed. For w helped him spiritually. O cers have told me of the bo came up to them, half shy asked for meetings; of th who wanted a word of before they went into battl have held meetings in tr and ruined farmhouses. W sung hymns and read Sc with the men in devastate lages, and in the open co out under the sky."

Commander Booth pause denly, and I realized that been sitting tensely on th of my chair, listening to l came back, with a jerk,
business of interviewing.

"Will you go on with e work in the cities—just a have in France?" I asked.
you meet the boys on the liberal footing that you did There? After the first of J

"We will," Commander told me. "We will make boy feel the same spirit that them love us in France.
the first of July we hope t
many saloons into canteen-where boys can have the clea unrestrained fun that the
tures demand.

"You see," finished Com
er Booth, "we do not tell that he must do things. O the simple doctrine of a love. The salvation is of th and for the poor. The Sal Army reaches up to ma down to him. The Sal Army tells a man what he c not what he must do!

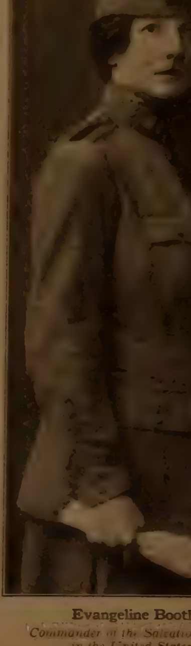
"And after all, that's the
of our success!" M. E.



Evangeline Booth

Commander of the Salvation Army in the United States

AFTER THE SALOON—WHAT?

Better Home Life

HARLES M. SHELDON, D.D.

THE question of substitutes for the saloon out here in Kansas never caused us any special concern, perhaps because we no very large cities with foreign lation, and because Kansas is an ultural state. But as a matter ct, I believe that the substitute a saloon automatically solves . Here in Kansas the substi- have been the Y. M. C. A., the ng picture house, the outdoor the churches, and above all, the s of the people.

ave never believed that a selfish had any right to a social life h shut his wife and children all of his companionship. The plea a workingman needed the saloon ompanionship and for a club has one of the most selfish pleas ever up by a man. Thousands of h men every summer pack the of the baseball grounds on Sun- afternoons, while the wives and ren of these men stay back in the tenements and boarding-houses. place of social gathering which ually shuts a man's wife and ren away from it while he continually ents it is a place where he has no to go, and the laws of even saloon s have regularly forbidden women to saloons. I say shame on any real who whines that an institution like a n should not be taken away from without giving him a substitute.

hat better substitute can a real work for than his own home and and children?

d as a matter of fact that is what eally happened in Kansas. The men used to frequent saloons are now d at home or out in the parks with iddies. More people in Kansas own own homes than any other state in union, and one reason is that the im- se amount of money once spent on e now goes to the home.

nderstand that the housing problem s into the whole question of where a shall spend his social time. In big in a stuffy tenement or a bleak ding-house it is not easy to have a home life, but even that does not se any man for demanding a place of ation which will exclude his family. thousands of cases out here a man used to spend all his savings on , and on that account could not a decent home, now owns a home of wn. It will be found true in New and Chicago and every other big as in Denver and Detroit already, by the immense saving on account e absence of the saloon, thousands of ingmen have been able to move into r houses and finally have their own es.

shall never waste much of my sym- y over the man who has been a fre- ter of the saloon at the expense of amily and now demands a substitute. t him take the money he will now and put it into a better home life. man is a coward and worse who de- ds special privileges and social sures for himself which are not shared with those are a part of his existence.

e saloon as a poor man's club has been one of most selfish demands ever made. There is no substitute for anything so selfish as this except Christian home. Any substitute which ignores great institution is a blunder in the long run.

The new man of the new day

The Saloon Itself a Substitute

By CHARLES GRANT MILLER

THE saloon itself has been a "substitute" for the home, the church, the school and other wholesome institutions.

Whisky has been the substitute for children's shoes, for their education, for their chance of advancement. Drunken loafing has been a substitute for honest labor; squandering has been a substitute for saving, and poverty a substitute for good pay.

Does one recovering from disease seek a "substitute"?

There is not a true mother but has looked upon the saloon with a quiver of fear for the safety of her boy. Is she asking for a "substitute"?

There is not an enlightened mind in all the land but knows that the saloon is the cesspool which has been breeding four-fifths of the vices and crimes that curse humanity. Pauperism, disease, degeneracy, insanity, failure, suicide emanate from this cesspool as poisonous vapors emanate from a malarial swamp. Do these curses require "substitutes"?

Who thinks of suggesting substitutes for the jails that are to be emptied, the poorhouses to be closed, and the hospitals no longer needed?

Throughout the country reading-rooms and recreational centers are being established, and it is at these places that the young and unmarried men, as well as those who have families, may spend their evenings with profit and with good to themselves and the community at large. But these are not substitutes; they are the real thing.

Perhaps definite substitutes will be found; but here are some that have already found themselves: Empty pockets will be substituted by full pay envelopes; bare baby feet will be substituted by shoes; tears will be substituted by smiles; despair will be substituted by hope and aspiration; for drunkenness there is the ready substitute, sobriety.

The supposed need for a saloon "substitute" arises from the assumption that the saloon supplies some real social service. It is a false assumption.

For every man who ever "got a good job" in a saloon ten thousand have lost theirs there.

"Lots of legitimate business has been arranged in the saloon," eh? Line it all up beside the businesses that have been wrecked there, and see it shrink to insignificance.

From every part of the country reports are coming in which show that in practically every case where a building has been vacated by the saloon a legitimate business of some kind has stepped in, taken down the sign, cleaned up the place, removed the screen and proceeded to be of some real value to the community.

No, it is not a substitute we need; the need is effectively to get rid of that which has been doing the substituting, thus freeing the home, the church, the school and other helpful forces from deadening restraints and liberating manhood, womanhood and childhood to grow and develop to the maximum.

The one direct and effective substitute for the saloon is rigid enforcement of the law. This alone will fill up its grave and sod it over out of sight.

reased Efficiency and Earnings

By JOHN D. ROCKEFELLER, JR.

Y CONVICTION concerning the rum evil was confirmed a few years ago when I was foreman e grand jury that investigated the white slave ny. I discovered then that the sale and use of holic beverages had a very vital and intimate ion to the white slave traffic. In fact, I doubt if ould have flourished without connection with g drink.

was permitted to have a near-at-hand observation e practical operation of prohibition in Colorado nnection with the Colorado Fuel and Iron Com- , in which I am financially interested. When we first took hold of the property the company actually operated a saloon, the employees, many of whom were foreign born, insisting that alcoholic beverages were essential to their comfort. Then Colorado went dry. In a surprisingly short time the men seemed to forget all about the saloon, and their efficiency and earnings increased about 12 per cent. Denver remained wet for one year, while the remainder of the state was dry, and then Denver, by a large majority, joined the dry ranks. I believe that I am entirely within bounds when I say that if the question were again submitted to the voters of Colorado the state would vote dry overwhelmingly.

The Home, the School, the Church

By ALBERT SIDNEY GREGG

General Superintendent American Civic Reform Union

BEFORE we can suggest a substitute for the saloon we must analyze the saloon itself, and, if possible, ascertain the secret of its attractiveness to so many men. What, after all, is the real reason for its remarkable drawing power? Is it due to the accessibility of intoxicants? Is it the opportunity for free and easy sociability that the saloon affords? Is it the hospitality of the saloon-keeper?r Yes—and more.

The open barroom makes an appeal to the primal passion of the human male animal for freedom. The saloon does not impose any inhibitions, except that a patron must not become so drunk on the premises that he will interfere with the conviviality of the place. There are no objectionable signs on the walls of the average saloon such as "Don't swear," or "Don't spit on the floor." Pictures suggestive of decency or self-restraint are unknown in the saloons. Most of them display pictures of quite the opposite character.

Being of a criminal nature itself, the saloon naturally fosters the criminal impulse in men who frequent the saloon. Intoxicating drink intensifies the feeling of lawlessness which can find expression in the saloon atmosphere. Thus, impulses and desires are fostered which logically drive men into theft, murder, vice and other forms of outbreaking crime.

In contrast with this atmosphere of freedom that pervades the common run of drinking-places, let us consider other institutions, such as the home, the school and the church. These institutions are all hedged about with inhibitions, which constantly protest against the egoistical freedom demanded by the growing boy or young man. The young buck runs away from such restraint and finds it in the most accessible place within reach—the open saloon. Of course we all understand that these restraints are part of the system for promoting the betterment of the young male animal. But the male animal of the human variety doesn't want betterment. He wants his own way, and the saloon-keeper turns his "wants" into money, at the expense of the boy and his parents.

The question has often been asked: "Why does the Y. M. C. A. fail to draw a certain type of young men who may be found in saloons?" The answer is that the Association has rules and restrictions which create a feeling of restraint, while there is no restraint in a saloon. It is true that numerous young fellows who love freedom are drawn into the Association gymnasium largely through an appeal to their enlightened self-interest. Others in the Association are mainly made up of young men who have been trained by education and religion to respect rules and restrictions.

A church that expects to establish a saloon substitute that will really appeal to the young men who most frequent barrooms must be prepared to be very unconventional. Such a substitute must be at the rear, where it can be reached through a back alley. There must be stained glass in the windows, so nobody can see in from the outside. And then all rules and restrictions must be taken off, and the patrons of the place be given full liberty to swear, smoke, sing, dance, loosely talk, or fight. They must have as much of the freedom they have in a barroom or they will not come.

The next question is like this: Are church officials ready to sanction such conduct in a church under church management?

With the saloon gone, the patronage of the poolroom will increase, until stronger restrictions have been imposed in the form of a higher age limit and earlier closing hours.

The practical effect of prohibition will be to develop home life, church life and community life.

Possibly buildings for community gatherings will be erected, independent of the school and church—a place where all sorts of people may meet on a common ground, just as they do in an evangelistic tabernacle.

With the demoralizing influence of the saloon out of the way, the church and the school will have a far better opportunity to mold life and character. In place of wasting their money and time in a barroom, men will save, buy property, found families and stay at home of an evening.

In the last analysis, the home is the real substitute for the saloon.

That is the way it has worked out in communities that have been dry for years under local option and state-wide prohibition, and there is no reason to think that a different plan is needed just because the entire country has gone dry.

OUR EDITORIAL PAGE

Great Thoughts for Today

IN READING the utterances of those who are foremost in the spiritual life of this nation, and leaders in its religious assemblies, one cannot avoid being struck with the tremendous widening of national vision. The Board of Bishops of the Methodist Episcopal Church, recently in session at Buffalo, made public proclamation in these words: "We feel that the League of Nations is an advance toward the period prophesied by the Hebrew prophet, when men should not 'learn war any more'; and that it is likewise an attempt at an international application of the spirit and teaching of Jesus Christ, the Prince of Peace. We respectfully urge the Senate to adopt the Covenant, that we may cooperate with our sister nations in preventing future wars."

Dr. William Pierson Merrill, the eloquent pastor of the Brick Church, New York, in a recent deliverance declared that "it is the gravest sort of mistake to think that Christ and Christianity have to do exclusively with the souls of individuals. The Gospel is meant to control the high ideals and conduct of all masses of men. . . . What is clearer than that Christ is the life ideal for individuals, churches, nations, for all the life of the world? Certainly, if the spirit of Christ and his plain teachings are on one side of any proposition, no Christian has any right to be on the other side."

Dr. Robert E. Speer tells us how Earl Grey, Canada's great viceroy, foresaw this when he said in his dying message: "I want to say to the people: Here is a real way out of the mess materialism has got us into. I have been trying to tell them for thirty years. It's Christianity! We have got to get together to realize we are all members of one family. This is my farewell address to the world."

Harry Emerson Fosdick wrote: "Once, patriotism meant 'Hate other nations'; henceforth, patriotism must mean 'Understand other nations,' and this new spirit of international fellowship, confirmed and organized into a League of Nations, must be exalted by the churches. . . . May the Church be great enough in spirit, wise enough in mind, to draw herself together for a campaign that will make America the blessing of the world."

Principal Faunce, president of Brown University, has this striking thought: "Having won the war by moral force, we must rebuild the world on moral principles. Having shown that the nation that appeals unto Cæsar goes down, we must show that the society that appeals to the Nazarene steadily rises in peace and power and happiness."

To these we would add one last thought, which is in the minds of millions of devout Americans in these days. It is a thought that nothing can eradicate. It is that our country has been divinely called to its high mission of world-service. Call it national destiny if you will, or the logic of human events; the conviction has come to stay that the future of this nation depends upon its fidelity in responding to the call and in spending itself for others instead of for itself. In this consists the whole difference between the broad view that leads to larger national life, and the narrow, that leads to decay; it is the difference between Christlikeness and selfishness.

Will Congress Modify Prohibition?

PRESIDENT WILSON'S recommendation in his message to Congress, that the War Prohibition Act be repealed in so far as it applies to light wines and beers, was not wholly unexpected. The temperance forces had thought that the ban on these drinks might be lifted automatically by September, through the completion of demobilization. It was supposed that the act approved November 21, 1918, gave the President authority to do this; but in his message he took the ground that it did not, and asked for legislative action, thus putting the decision on the shoulders of the people's representatives.

It should not be forgotten, however, that several substantial reasons may underlie this action of the chief executive. One is the $500,000,000 of revenue which will be realized through an extension of the legal life of the lighter liquors. Revenue just now is important, though history shows that the loss of liquor revenue has always been an incomparable gain.

The impact of the President's recommendation upon Congress appeared to produce more evidence that the Congress would let well enough alone than that any measure of repeal would succeed. Bills were offered in both houses both for repeal of war prohibition and for complete enforcement of the amendment. Prohibitionists in Congress were certain that no repeal could be pushed through, and wet Senators and Representatives were noncommittal, although some opponents of prohibition could see little to be gained in a six months' respite to King Alcohol.

The Presbyterian General Assembly in session at St. Louis adopted resolutions addressed to the President and Congress deploring the recommendation, while the General Assembly of the Southern Presbyterian Church in session at New Orleans also took cognizance of it. The Northern Baptist convention in session at Denver unanimously condemned the recommendation. The Anti-Saloon League was ready; it has had no illusions regarding the battles yet to be won.

America has taken a long step forward in adopting the Prohibition Amendment. It means better and happier lives, better homes, healthier children, more prosperous industry, higher wages, and clearer thinking. War prohibition was a fortunate stepping-stone. The nation should not be forced one-thousandth of an inch along the backward trail.

The Widening Sphere of Womanhood

THAT women should have a larger place in the councils and activities of the church is a new factor in the expansion program of the Presbyterians, as submitted to the General Assembly in St. Louis lately. It was recommended not only that the women should be privileged to hold office in the church councils, the boards of trustees and various committees, but that in cases where they showed capacity for leadership they should be fully recognized. This in all probability may lead to their entrance to the pastorate. It is a program in line with the new religious spirit of the times, and is all the more significant from the fact that Presbyterianism in the past has been conservative.

The splendid services rendered by the Christian women of America during the four years of the war and in the later work of reconstruction gives them a new standing and a larger orbit in church affairs. And now comes the recommendation in the President's message that Congress should pass the Woman Suffrage Constitutional Amendment Resolution, which the House has done with such amazing promptness and by a majority so overwhelming—304 to 89—that its passage in the Senate would seem assured. Its enactment now would be a fitting climax to the triumph of American womanhood.

Opportunities

HENRY J. HEINZ, who made millions and gave noble sums to worthy causes, found his opportunity in the humble pickle.

The pessimist who sees no opportunities for young men any more, such as there used to be when the men now rich first got their start, argues that the chances are all taken up and the good places all filled.

But it was the same twenty-five and fifty years ago —yes, 10,000 years ago.

What the pessimist now sees to be a "chance" would not have appeared to him as such at all if some man's intellect, patience and energy had not developed it into a good thing.

Oil was a pitiably poor business when Rockefeller first brought his power of organization to bear upon it. Steel had made no millionaires when Carnegie's brain and enterprise made of it an opportunity. Peter Cooper made his wealth in glue.

It is not alone the big things—made big by somebody's wise efforts—that are the great opportunities. Hundreds of men have, like Henry Heinz, left enormous fortunes made from relatively insignificant things. The man who first charged water with carbonic acid gas for soda fountain use became many times a millionaire. Emulsions of cod liver oil have made many millions. Pills and patent medicines have built palaces. The simple metallic hooks over the eyelets by which shoes are laced and the old-fashioned "copper toes" of children's shoes, and even shoe pegs, all brought large monetary returns. The simple expedient of the twin steel balls, flying apart by centrifugal force to regulate or "govern" the steam engine, brought their inventor millions. The little invention by which the perforations in postage stamps are made yielded more profit than a gold mine. A big fortune lay in the silk fiber device in banknote paper. Buttonhooks, new processes of making buttons, pens, pins, all have contributed their quota of big fortunes.

Opportunities lie all around. The world teems with them. There are far more opportunities than men able to embrace them. The biggest opportunity means nothing to the little man; but to the big man so small an opportunity as the pickle is the open chance to fortune and grand public services.

The Deadly Infection of Child

WHEN the daughter of Sir Robert stricken with typhus, the infection w to a stylish riding habit ordered at a correct Regent Street shop, but finish tenement of a starving tailor with two child the fever.

Nine-tenths of the clothing emanating f
York City is made wholly or partly in sw which frequently are radiating centers for germs. The fact does not concern New Yor for New York is the source of the clothing s
the whole country.

The little child that is forced to strain its bruise its little hands and to sear its tender h interminable work, that the grasping emplo get a little more profit and that the fine l get her cloak a little cheaper, is breeding a dise more deadly than that of any fever which me

There are infections that burn deeper tha and there are noxious seeds that may fly far soil at last.

We may get our garments cheaper because sweat-soaked and because want and pain an lessness are sewn in the seams. But how mu must we pay for hospitals and asylums and

Who can estimate the loss—in actual ca
if we know no other means of measurement—w a human character is degraded? Though w know the cost, we know that we must pay it.

No sociologist has ever computed, or ever c pute, how much the world loses in wealth-forces because millions of youthful hearts possessed of their natural heritage of health h

Tutelage in Thrift

IT HAS been frequently charged that we most thriftless of all the nations. Yet the ing habit may not always be a bad one. Ce even with our tendency to free spending—w characteristic of almost every class—we are whole a saving and caretaking people. Pro and the disuse of alcoholic liquors will make a difference in the budget of innumerable homes, materially to the opportunities for comfort a enjoyment of the substantial things of life.

For four years and more we have been au cally learning the lesson of thrift. It is not a sertion to say that millions of Americans fin selves better off today than they were five ye Our best teachers in money-saving have b patriotic loans; but there are others not to b looked. Our savings banks report a gain of $5 000 in the last twelvemonth, while postal have eclipsed all previous records, and this is perience of banks all over the country. It is markable showing; yet it is only the logical r the training we have undergone. If we had spendthrift in the past, we have wheeled right face and at last learned to put our money wh can get it again, and where it will work for us available when we need it.

Village Historians

NEW YORK'S legislature has set a good ex in passing an act authorizing the appoin of a historian in every town, village an in the entire state, the metropolis alone exc probably because it has already a well-deve plan on this line.

There are already many historians by appoi in different states, but the system is one might be adopted with profit by all the states.
is an opportunity here for many valuable additi American literature. Mrs. Lamb's book on Ol York has shown how many incidents and ancien marks of historic value may be preserved to en and instruct the coming generations. Da
"Knickerbocker Days in Old New York," writt one personally familiar with the leading men and of his time, is another volume of intense interest.
there are still others, dealing with colonial days, never fail to attract the reader. These, howeve more largely reminiscences than histories.

One who has traveled much in the different and noted the magic rise of hamlets and tow
the dignity of cities must have felt that behi all there was a story worth the telling for th spiration of those to come after us. Old land and historic sites are worth preserving, in the p page if nowhere else. But it is rather the sto those brave souls who led in the march of pr that makes the work worth while.

BUILDING A NEW SYRIA

DR. HOWARD BLISS, president of the Syrian Protestant College at Beirût, Syria, just returned from Beirût via Paris and the Peace Conference, said recently that democracy r the kind oversight of a Christian nation, and of effort on the part of Christian leaders, were hope of Syria in the days of reconstruction to . He said that mechanically held creeds had the curse of Syria both among Christians and ammedans, and that many Moslems, Druses and stians were hopeful of 'uture and anxious to retruct the country on d spiritual lines emphag neither sect nor creed. r. Bliss said that, algh, except for two weeks the breaking of relations 'een Turkey and Amer- the college had not been ped in its work during war, no one in America d know with what joy the lty and students watched Allied warships enter the oor on October 6. Two later General Allenby's ps entered the city and blished a civil administion, French officials being in charge. The Turks had gone since October 1.

r. Bliss spent seven weeks aris, appearing before the e Conference to present a's claim to self-deteration and to her right to se her mandatory power, ost all factions recognizthe fact that she could yet stand alone. A statet was presented to the ference in which the aims rance and Great Britain naking war in the Near t were quoted from their official declaration made November, 1918, to be "to insure the complete final emancipation of all those peoples so long ressed by the Turks, and to establish national ernments and administrations which shall derive r authority from the initiative and free will of the ples themselves. . . . They have no other care n to assure by their support and practical aid the mal workings of such governments and administions as the peoples shall themselves have adopted; guarantee impartial and even justice for all, to litate the economic development of the country, to foster the spread of education, to put an end actions."

resident Wilson's address at Mount Vernon, in ch he said that every question of territory, of ereignty, of economic arrangements, or of political tionship must be settled upon the basis of the free eptance of that settlement by the people immedily concerned, was also cited, and Number Twelve the now famous "fourteen points" was quoted to ure the rights of Syria, as was the nineteenth sec of the proposed plan for a League of Nations.

r. Bliss said that whatever the government of ia was to be the people had a right to be consulted, that he had asked the Allied Peace Commissioners to send a commission to Syria to find out the wishes of the people.

He said the people were not yet capable of self-government, but were capable of starting on the road and would eventually be able to rule themselves. The people of Beirût are intelligent and fairly well educated; the people farther from the coast have had fewer advantages.

The college, which is interdenominational, established fifty-three years ago, takes its students from the Turkish government schools and the mission schools at the age of twelve. Its work begins at academic grade and approximates the work of an average American university, teaching through the medium of the English language arts and sciences, commerce, dentistry, pharmacy and medicine. The enrolment is now over 900, and at no time during the war was it under 650. Because the college was known to be disinterested the Turkish authorities were increasingly friendly and all students of belligerent nations, except Russian Jews, were permitted to continue their studies. Except for a brief period, British professors were not disturbed. But for all this the difficulties were very great, for they never knew what would happen, through the changing of officials.

Deportations included many Syrians, Protestant and Moslem alike, who were believed to be hostile to Turkey. Thousands died of starvation, and the college authorities and other missionaries are only too grateful to the American Red Cross and the American Committee for Armenian and Syrian Relief for what they have done and are doing to relieve distress. Although provisions could not reach Beirût and money depreciated, they were conscious all the time of the support and prayers of the American people.

The main buildings of the Syrian Protestant College at Beirut

Dr. Bliss said relief work during the war was very difficult because of the war sensibilities of the Turkish government, but that much had been done to minister to the fearful needs of the people. The suffering and loss of life were unspeakably great.

As to the future, he said the Syrian people looked forward to eventual independence; that liberty would expedite Christian progress, and that the mandatory power must support liberty of conscience and of opportunity to change faiths. At the college there are now more Mohammedan than Christian students. The college does not require Mohammedans to attend its Christian services, but very many do. It attempts to create a feeling that it is there to give the best it has in return for their best; and of course its best is its Christian ideals. The college Y. M. C. A., under Mr. Bayard Dodge's supervision, has exerted a wonderful influence during the war.

As illustrating the Moslem appreciation of the value of graduates of the Christian schools he said that Prince Faisal, son of the king of the Arab kingdom of Hedjaz, was eager for graduates for reconstruction work in Arabia. Other graduates were sought by the British High Commissioner in Egypt for similar work in the Soudan.

Dr. Bliss said that the Mohammedans were still loyal to the prophet and that many of their leaders are attempting to revive the spiritual values of Islam. He said that Islam believes that God reveals his truth through successive prophets, of whom Christ was one and Mohammed the latest, but that all Moslems believe in and look to the second coming of Christ, and that a tomb awaits him in Medina. They reject, however, the deity of Christ and the Trinity, and because of this definite teaching are difficult to convert to Christianity.

The Greek and Armenian churches Dr. Bliss pronounced orthodox theologically but weak spiritually, in that they had emphasized the purely intellectual concept of religion, had encouraged an intellectual acceptance of the creed, and had made creed a substitute for spiritual belief. He believes that reconstruction in the Near East must have a spiritual basis, and that men are not going to achieve a new ideal in government without new spiritual conceptions.

A marvelous opportunity awaits missionary effort in this new era of reconstruction, and America has the confidence of all and it is for America to decide whether these doors, now flung so wide open, shall be entered.

[Dr. Henry C. King, President of Oberlin College, and Charles R. Crane have been named as American members of an Interallied Commission which will investigate conditions in Syria for the Peace Conference, take a plebiscite and submit recommendations on the disposition of the country.]

The "Battalion of Life"

THE organization known as the American Women's Hospitals was formed in June, 1917, by the War vice Committee of the Medical omen's National Association, with Dr. salie Slaughter Morton as chairman d Dr. Mary Merritt Crawford as corponding secretary of the Executive mmittee. The latter afterward beme chairman of the Executive Board. e organization at once offered its seres to the government and the Red oss, submitting its plan of work to rgeon General Gorgas. It has sent er 100 women physicians to the waricken countries of Europe, besides ny nurses and other technically ined women, who have been aptly lled the Battalion of Life. The apeciation of their services has been own by decorations conferred on six of ir number by the French government. American Women's Hospitals have n established at various places in ance and Serbia, besides a unit of six ctors to work with the American Committee for Relief in the Near East. Besides its work on the ground in Europe, the organization has permanent committees in every state of the Union, which hold up the hands of workers in the field by raising each its quota of funds.

The signing of the armistice did not curtail the work of the hospitals, though this no longer consisted in administering first aid to wounded men at the field hospitals. Its efforts are now largely directed toward civilian relief. For instance, the American Women's Hospital No. 1, at Luzancy, France, has established five centers at as many near-by villages where patients can conveniently wait, and where calls are made twice a week to collect the memoranda left by those needing the attention of the Dames Américaines, as the doctors are called, and these requests for aid are followed up. Each dispensary ambulance contains a doctor, a nurse and a chauffeuse, with medicines, sterilizing apparatus, and a stove for boiling water, as the homes visited are often destitute of even as much conveniences as a stove or fireplace since the devastation of war. During the visitation of influenza and typhoid last fall the promptness and vigilance of the ladies of the hospital at Luzancy was instrumental in stamping out the epidemic. Members of the staff were detailed to look after the sick and to inoculate those who were willing to submit to this treatment. Two of the doctors established a record by giving seventy-five inoculations in twenty-five minutes.

As soon as the Serbians had regained control of their national domain, a hospital was established at Pristina, under the administration of Dr. Mabel Flood and Dr. Regina Flood Keyes. Last October they were visited by an epidemic of Spanish influenza and malignant pneumonia, which attacked the entire staff, one after another.

A donation of $25 was sent to Dr. Keyes last fall to do with as she chose. Some time before, twelve dolls had come in a Red Cross box, "and," says Dr. Keyes, "never in all my travels have I seen such joy as those dolls brought to young and old. . . . These children and grown-ups had never seen real dolls, and they kissed and hugged them until tears came into my eyes." So Dr. Keyes "bought all the dolls Salonica had, and that was thirty-six." And these dolls probably did more good to the children than medicine.

The work of the Women's Hospitals has been established also in Palestine, where they are doing effective service in Jerusalem and in Tiberias, on the shores of the Sea of Galilee. The disease most met with in Jerusalem, according to Miss Alice Goldman, a laboratory worker, is malaria.

One dollar entitles anyone to a membership in the American Women's Hospitals Auxiliary. The children in these stricken lands are dying at an alarming rate. The conditions in Europe and the Near East are a menace to our country as well as to the whole world.

Four Great Movements in Present-Day History

II. THE INDUSTRIAL MOVEMENT

By CHARLES M. SHELDON, D.D.

THE eternal law of labor was announced in the very beginning of the life of man on the earth when the author of Genesis declared, "And Jehovah God took the man, and put him into the garden of Eden, to dress it and to keep it." And again it was announced when in the Fourth Commandment man was told, "Six days shalt thou labor and do all thy work."

Work, whether it be of the hand or the head or the heart, is a joy and blessing when it is done under the right conditions with healthy surroundings and just rewards. But when labor is made the occasion of strife and misunderstanding and hatred, the whole thing becomes a curse embittering the toilers and blocking the wheels of human progress.

Any man or woman is entitled to the name of "toiler," whether the work be that of the hand or the mind, who by his toil adds to the general happiness and welfare of the race. The term "workingman" as ordinarily used is too narrow in its scope if by the term is meant only those who use tools of physical labor. No one class of men or women should be honored above others in the use of that most noble word "laborer," which the Master himself used to distinguish his disciples.

The present condition of the industrial world so far as employer and employed is concerned is an evolution. Organized labor and organized capital as at present constituted live in opposite camps and instead of being mutually fraternal they declare the reason for their organization to be the distrust they have of each other. As for example, the preamble of the Bricklayers' and Masons' International Union of America says, "The trend of employers, assisted by combined capital, is to debase labor and deny it its lawful and just share of what it produces." It is on account of that fact that the Bricklayers unite to "defend their interests which are attacked." In other words, the common attitude of labor and capital up to the present time has been that of enemies rather than friends. The new movement of industry to which we shall refer in this article is revolutionary along the line of bringing these two forces together in a plan of cooperative effort for the mutual good.

AS an illustration of the attitude of capital and labor it will be interesting to the readers of the Christian Herald to note what men on both sides say and feel. The following is submitted as a fair summary of conditions as revealed by men who are honestly giving expression to their position as they face one another in opposite camps.

At the time this article was being prepared there was a local strike on the part of the carpenters and bricklayers in Topeka. The following questions and answers on the part of a representative employer and a representative trades union man are interesting as showing the mental attitude of each. The demand of the carpenters was for 75 cents an hour and the employers would concede only 70.

Questions to an employer of labor and his answers:

(1) Are the wages that the workingmen are asking fair, considering the present cost of living? Ans. Yes.

(2) If wages are advanced, who will have to pay the additional amount? Ans. The consumer.

(3) Is trade unionism, as at present organized, a help to the workingman in developing him into an expert mechanic? Ans. No; absolutely no.

(4) Do you consider an eight-hour day a fair amount of time for a workingman to labor? Could the same amount of real work be done in less time if the men were allowed to work as hard or as fast as they wanted to? Ans. In both cases, yes.

(5) Compared with twenty-five years ago, what is the average condition of the workingman? Is it better or worse? Ans. Better, on the whole; in part due to local conditions here in Kansas, where there have been no saloons for a quarter of a century.

(6) What is the reason for the high cost of building material as compared with twenty-five years ago? Ans. Combines in material. Shipments of great quantities of material abroad. But the increased cost is not due to lack of material.

(7) Does the average carpenter or bricklayer today do better work than he did twenty-five years ago? Ans. Not so good, on the whole. There is more mill work.

(8) If you were a workingman would you be able to live on the wages the contractor pays? And would you be willing to live on the wages you pay him? Ans. Yes. I have lived on less and was happy. As to the second part of the question, I could not employ labor on the wages I pay, nor get credit for material.

(9) What is your solution for the troubles between capital and labor? Ans. Too big for local or individual solution. Needs national legislation.

(10) Are you in favor of some form of cooperation between capital and labor? Ans. Yes, so far as I understand the term cooperation. Profits and losses should be shared equally, and both be apportioned according to the ability of the workers, both employers and employed.

THE employer who gave these answers has kept a record of wages paid, going back to 1890. They are interesting as showing the steady increase up to the present. In 1890 it was a ten-hour day. Now it is an eight-hour day.

Stonecutters in 1890 were getting 40 cents an hour. Today they are getting 68¾.

Bricklayers in 1890 were getting 50 cents. Today 87¾.

Stonemasons in 1890 were getting 30 cents. Today 75.

Carpenters in 1890, 25 cents. Now, 62½.

These figures are true of Kansas workmen. The demand for 75 cents an hour by the carpenters is the cause of the present deadlock between them and the contractors, who agree to 70 but not 75 cents. The carpenters claim that 75 cents is only a living wage at the present high cost of living.

Other increases in wages are: Plasterers, from 35 cents to 87½. Painters, 25 to 55. Tinners, 25 to 55. Day laborers from 15 to 40.

THE following replies to questions by the trades union workman reflect fairly the mental attitude of the other men.

Questions to a trades unionist laborer and his answers:

(1) What is your definition of a workingman? Ans. One who works for wages or salary and is dependent on them for a living.

(2) What would you call a living wage in this town, at the present cost of living? Ans. $1200 as a minimum.

(3) Has trades unionism improved the condition of the average workman who belongs to it? Ans. Yes, especially in the matter of forcing from capital something approximating a living wage.

(4) Why is not a sliding scale of wages a fairer method than the present plan of a minimum wage? Ans. The sliding scale has been tried and the result is almost always the employment of the cheapest labor. The contractor can pay more for expert labor, or he can dismiss incompetent labor.

(5) Would you try to restrict the labor of all men to eight hours a day if they wanted to work more? Ans. The eight-hour day is planned for the worker's own good. A man can do more good work in eight hours than he can in ten.

(6) Is the average workingman better off today than he was twenty-five years ago? Ans. In s ways, yes. In others, no. He spends more, bu costs more to live.

(7) If wages are advanced, who will pay the creased amount? Ans. The consumer, always.

(8) What is the reason for the high cost of ma rial? Ans. Inflation of the currency, which has to the decreased purchasing value of a dollar.

(9) What is your solution for the strikes a troubles that labor and capital have with each oth Ans. A better understanding each of the other.

(10) Are you in favor of some kind of cooperati with a sharing of gains and losses on the part of t men who work with tools and the men who dir labor? Ans. Yes. But the word and meaning cooperation must be clearly defined. We are co mitted, in our principles, to getting away from t wage system.

THE Industrial Movement is not local to a country or community. Labor is a part of t whole world's energy. All people of all nations a dependent on the work of the human hand for existence. If all work of the human hand shou cease all over the world, within a week or ten da nearly everyone would die of starvation. Citi would drop down in ruin. Pestilence and disea would carry off those who had not perished fro starvation and the world would come to an end.

Understanding the fundamental thing that hol civilization together, it is of the most intense intere to note the conditions in other countries. In Chi there is the most acute need of industrialism based o technical skill. Hundreds of bandits roam over th land robbing the very poor, because no labor is offere In Japan we have the astounding spectacle of 200,0 Japanese girls entering factories every year, an working behind stockades, virtually slaves, fro twelve to sixteen hours a day for the pitiful sum five dollars a month, body and soul being ruined b the unsanitary and immoral surroundings.

The whole beautiful thing called labor is degrade and debased unless it is done under conditions tha make for happy and wholesome living. And th greatest hope for the future lies in the movement tha industry is now making toward some form of cooperation, and especially international union of collectiv effort as illustrated in the recent proposals to th Peace Conference for the internationalization o labor conditions. This proposal has been called th Magna Charta of labor. Its first article states a supreme fact which all through the ages has been ignored or denied. "In right and in fact the labor of human being should not be treated as merchandis or as an article of commerce."

The most hopeful outlook on the whole thing, therefore, is the fact that in Great Britain, especially in the new constitution of the British Labor Party, and in America among the more thoughtful men in the employers' associations and among the leaders in the trade unionist circles, there is a fast growing conviction that in the questions concerning labor and capital the interests of both parties are so bound up in the welfare of society and civilization itself that they should not be settled by selfish arrangements made by one side over against the other, but the whole matter should be in the hands of an international congress. No more significant action has ever been made than the serious attempt now being made to incorporate the labor question into the program of the League of Nations.

Surely when once the Christian rule of brotherhood in the industrial world has once been established, and men are working under conditions that make for justice and happy well-being, war will be a thing of the past, and man shall go forth to his labor with a song on his lips and a prayer of praise in his heart.

Each Day Better Than the One Before

By SAMUEL GOMPERS

President of the American Federation of Labor

AMERICA is not merely a name, a land, a country, a continent; America is a symbol. It is an ideal, the hope of the world.

American organized workers have always endeavored to promote good-will among the peoples of the world. The possibility of war has ever been regarded by them as the black shadow of an indescribable catastrophe.

The interests of the workers are identified with those of peace.

War has never meant to them opportunity for gain or exploitation. It has always meant to them privation, direst suffering, service on the firing line and in the actual fighting of the war, and bearing the burdens that follow in its wake.

The workers abhor war with all its frightfulness, horror, bloodshed and mangled flesh, but they realize that there are greater evils than war. Peace secured through the surrender of a principle vital to liberty, justice and democracy is nothing less than coward servility.

The American labor movement never advocated peace at any price. It never encouraged nor gave support to any movement of peace at any price. While it recognizes that peace is essential for normal, progressive development, it steadfastly refused to advocate peace at the sacrifice of the ideals of freedom and justice.

American labor has kept its trust with democracy and the principles of liberty and justice. It yields to no person or institution in its fidelity and devotion to our Republic.

The affairs of the whole world are in the process of remaking. Relations between nation and nation, and between the peoples within the various nations, and among working people particularly, are undergoing a new change and a new life.

I stand in so far as I can and dare—and I dare much—for the principles of natural and rational development and growth.

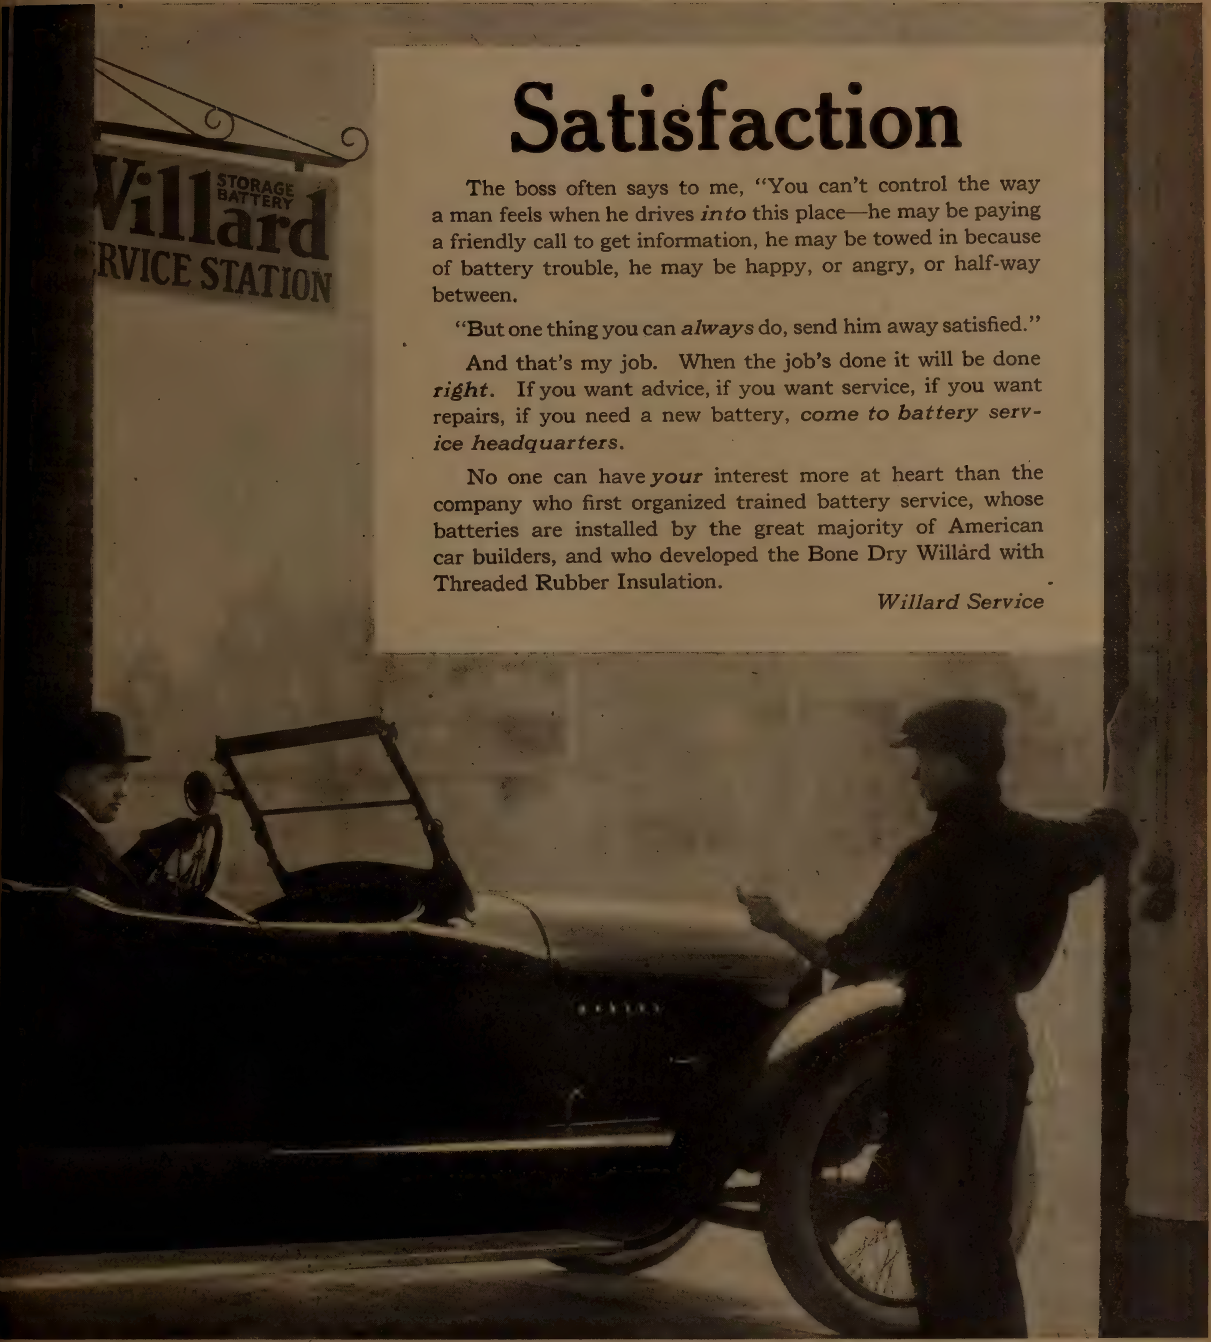
I am opposed, as is organized labor of America, to any destructive policy.

There is nothing that is worth while maintaining that I would aid or abet in destroying.

Our policy, our work, our method, our ideas and our ideals are to build, to construct, to grow, to help in the development of the highest and best in the human family; to make today a better day than yesterday, to make tomorrow a better day than today, to make tomorrow and tomorrow's morrow each a better day than the one that has gone before. That evolutionary process of progress and improvement is the basis for freedom, justice and democracy.

Willard STORAGE BATTERY

Willard Threaded Rubber Insulation



Satisfaction

The boss often says to me, "You can't control the way a man feels when he drives into this place—he may be paying a friendly call to get information, he may be towed in because of battery trouble, he may be happy, or angry, or half-way between.

"But one thing you can always do, send him away satisfied."

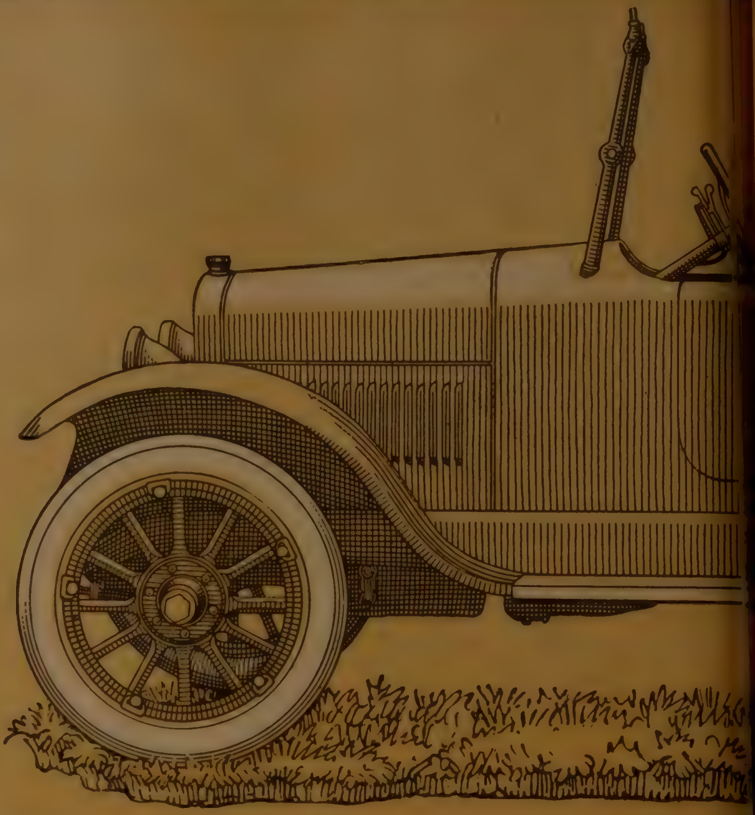
And that's my job. When the job's done it will be done right. If you want advice, if you want service, if you want repairs, if you need a new battery, come to battery service headquarters.

No one can have your interest more at heart than the company who first organized trained battery service, whose batteries are installed by the great majority of American car builders, and who developed the Bone Dry Willard with Threaded Rubber Insulation.

Willard Service

Maxwell

More miles per gallon
More miles on tires



The public has paid $200 this is a g

IT is not a new Maxwell. It is in fundamentals the worthy descendant of 300,000 Maxwells that grace the highways of the world.

But it is a greater car in many ways.

There are the Hot Spot and Ram's-horn, for instance.

These alone add to Maxwell a superiority among cars selling for less than $1000 that does not measure small.

Then there is a much improved electric system, a new type radiator, a development in upholstery, a far more durable top, and so on.

You find in the greater Maxwell a whole automobile show in itself. You will see things developed during the war.

It is like a "river of engineering ideas, dammed up, and suddenly let loose."

To spend an hour in examining this Maxwell i treat that any one will enjoy and long remember

But before you set forth to look it over, let the sink into your mind:

It is a magnificent feat in engineering and bui be able to add so many new features to a car wh had a $200,000,000 run.

That sum represents the amount paid for t model Maxwell to date.

But it is a far greater feat, in a business sense, able to add these magnificent improvements a increase the price of the car.

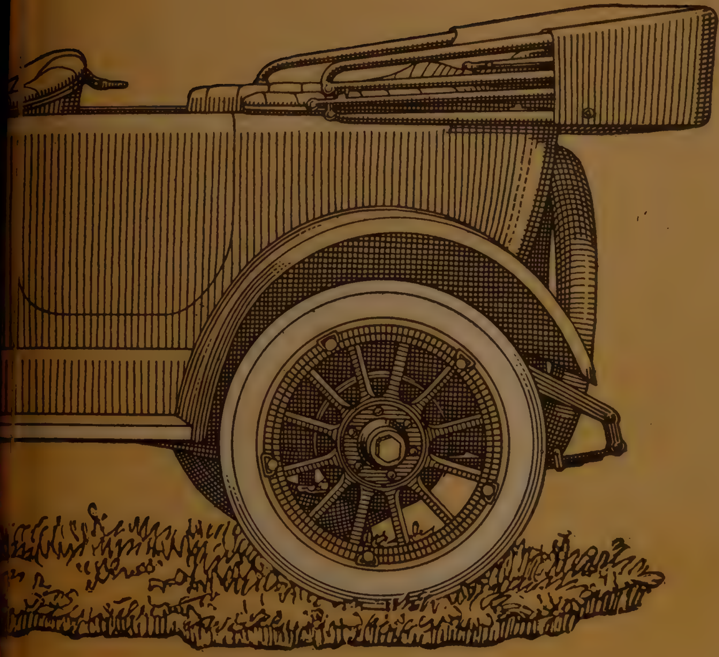
The price is still $895 f. o. b. Detroit.

Stop and think what your dollar bought four ago and what it buys now. About half.

Then think what a rare bargain in value alone getting in this car.

MAXWELL MOTOR CO

(MAXWELL MOTOR CO. O



0 for previous Maxwells;
Maxwell

w car today has the same wheelbase and a gine—and the price is $500 more than the matter what price you pay, you'll find diffi-quiring a car that will run longer, last longer, u less trouble.

ay seem a strong statement; but the record
well bears it out, and here is why:

ars ago the first Maxwell of the present model
There has never been a fundamental change since. We kept on making this car better
We have built more than 300,000 to date.

de it simple to begin with, and we have made tter and better as we made more of them.

e a locomotive engineer, a painter, a stenog-barber improves at his or her daily task.

striking example in modern business of the about doing one thing and doing it well.

The best steel that money can buy goes into this car—the best automatics and other machines that money can buy cut up and finish this material.

The best workers that can be hired put it together, and a group of men hard to duplicate in the automobile industry run the business.

Five years ago there was one Maxwell in every 1000 cars. Four years ago there was one Maxwell in every 500 cars. Three years ago there was one Maxwell in every 200 cars. Two years ago there was one Maxwell in every 48 cars. Today there is one Maxwell in every 16 cars.

It is not the aim of the Maxwell Motor Company to make the most cars in the world, but its aim is to make the most—best cars!

Several thousand will go without Maxwell cars this year. The demand is without precedent. Don't be among those. See the greater Maxwell without delay.

The price, remember, is still $895, f. o. b. Detroit.

- DETROIT, MICH.
WINDSOR, ONTARIO

And Denominational Differences Disappeared

By D. C. VANDERCOOK

REPEATEDLY those returning from France have said that the soldier has not bothered himself about denominational differences; his idea is that denominational lines should bind together rather than separate humankind, should provide organized divisions, distinct allied armies, each training and provisioning its own forces, "fighting" under the orders of the Supreme Commander. Perhaps denominational differences troubled soldiers less over there because so infrequently expressed, because the Church's lay and ministerial representatives so successfully proved that they could team up by actually teaming up. At any rate the soldier expressed himself in unexpected places and times, bluntly and freely, both by word and action.

Late one night, after they had helped to operate the canteen in a great Red Triangle hut, a small group of soldiers gathered in the kitchen to chat sociably over wafers and hot chocolate. In the background of their jesting, however, was the moving picture of the funeral procession which had that day solemnly moved through a cloud of dust out to the cemetery.

"I've a notion to write Buddy's mother," thoughtfully suggested one of them, and the crowd sobered.

"She would be right glad to know what you fellows did for him," urged the Red Triangle man.

"He was a Jew and a Catholic priest buried him," offered an M. P. just off duty. "Seems sort-a funny, don't it?"

"Aw, what difference does it make!" ejaculated another doughboy. "He was put away decently, it was a fine service, and there was nobody else to do it."

Rev. John H. Clifford, better known as "Old Doc of the Fifth," having been decorated for helping to save an officer's life and for Red Triangle service, was requested by some marines to conduct a communion service before they were to "go up." When ninety-one men crowded in under the broken, faded tile roof of an old French building, "Doc" counted nine Catholics, nine Baptists, thirteen Presbyterians, eleven Methodists, two Jews, and recognized those of other faiths. Clearly he indicated the nature of the sacrament, suggesting that some men might desire to leave the place. Not a man stirred, and when "Doc" broke the bread secured at the Marine "galley" and offered the sour French wine, all but eight of those ninety-one accepted it. Afterward, when he reported to a Catholic chaplain at a nearby town, that officer gave him ten rosaries, one each for the nine Catholic boys who had accepted the bread and wine, and one for "Doc" himself, which he still has. After that, "Doc" gave away many a rosary; he is a Baptist.

In another way, the men of a famous regiment up behind Ypres, just before Mount Kimmel was taken, indicated that denominational lines were no barrier to a brotherly understanding. A Catholic chaplain did not know the extreme lengths to which his men would go until one memorable morning when he was stopped on his way to "chow."

"Where's that usual cheery smile of yours, chaplain?" questioned a sergeant.

"I have none this morning—for you fellows," rather bitterly. "You're trying to make a fool of me."

"What do you mean, father?" The sergeant slowed up to hear the answer.

"I asked the men of this regiment to indicate on those slips of paper I passed out their church or church preference. It was a serious request. I wished honest answers, but you fellows seem to think me a fool. Take yourself, for instance. We have had many a long but friendly argument. Often you have shown why you are an Episcopalian, yet you put yourself down as a Catholic. And so did many others. What you men wrote in answer to my questions would make any one who did not know think that most of you are Catholics. But you know, and I know, you are not!"

"Oh, forget it, father!" exclaimed the sergeant. "Forget it! When we heard what you wanted, we Protestants got together. We knew that most of our regiment is Protestant, and that once this was officially known, you would be removed, some one else being substituted. So at our meeting we decided that for the period of the war, father—remember, it's just for the period of the war—we'll forget it."

MANY months ago, in the village of Neufmaison, not far from the village of Baccarat, I wrote in my notes an unusual illustration of the distance one man went. I give it here as then written:

"For six weeks, on an obstinate, long-eared jack, the Baptist preacher from Philadelphia has ridden to the big gun emplacements of the Rainbow Division, loaded with his packs of canteen supplies. Tomorrow I am to go on the old white horse in the saddle of the soldier always detailed to assist him—'Buff,' a good Catholic boy who regularly goes to mass, as he should. After supper, served in the bare and low-ceilinged chamber of a manless French family, tonight my friend and I puffed up one end of the village street, through an orchard, and on up to The Pines near the top of a great hill.

"'Germany's lines are three or four miles away, right over there,' said he, as we settled in the long grass in the shade of those fragrant trees. 'Tomorrow we will take that road which slips into the woods. See that puff-cloud breaking there on the left against that background of trees? Fritz aims at that road every night about this hour, thinking our supply trains go up over it. We'll come back that way tomorrow night.'

"For a few moments we sat in silence, looking out across the village set so low in a bowl of hills that if the enemy's guns attempted to hit it his shells usually dug themselves into the nearest side, or else flew over. Ribbons of roads ran out through fenceless fields to many other partially wrecked little villages, some of which are stripped of all their homekeepers.

"From above came the bumblebee hum of two French planes, mounting the sky. We counted the seconds from the moment when Fritz's evening salute was first fired until the whining shell had struck and exploded. From the valley came the creaking and rumbling of a long wagon train. Suddenly the planes, having twice swung up to the line and back from it, darted over enemy territory. A shout or two in the village below cut the air. Then the band started its evening concert on its improvised dirt platform by the old mill. This was not like war: it was more like a bird's-eye view of a country fair. . . .

"A few months ago, after the Baptist preacher had reported for duty with this division, then in another sector, he was one of six guests at a chicken dinner given by a grateful madame in honor of a lieutenant who had gladly and without charge attended to the teeth of her four youngest. The table was set in a little room between two children's beds. From the ceiling to these sleeping-places hung great canopies of vivid red and yellow. Out in the kitchen was the baby of the eldest daughter; her father was away with her husband, fighting off the invader. Daughter and mother fluttered back and forth between the two rooms with chicken, potatoes, war bread and coffee. Really, it was more than these poor folks could afford; afterward the American guest of honor paid the reluctant hostess for the very chicken served in his honor.

"NEAR the end of the feast, the lieutenant endeavored to introduce the Red Triangle man to his hostess.

"'A preacher,' said he, pointing to the Philadelphian Baptist.

"The bent little woman shook her head. The officer tried again.

"'A Protestant minister.'

"'Je ne comprend pas,' she answered with another shake.

"'A-a-a priest—a padre,' he persisted.

"'Oh, la! la! la!' With rising inflection and eloquent hands she poured out a flood of liquid sounds.

"Mother and daughter then spoke at one and the same time. They talked with their ha heads, their shoulders, their hearts; in 'talked all over.' But the Americans daze their heads, looking questioningly from o other. Then the grandmother dashed kitchen, quickly returning with her wee grandchild held aloft. Somehow she ma understand:

"For months the village had been wit Roman Catholic padre. Frequently one o intelligent mothers had gathered all the li into the partially wrecked church to tea
There had been no one in the village who co tize l'enfant since it had been born; these wished to have that immediately done.

"'But I'm a Baptist,' regretfully wailed Triangle man, 'and don't believe in sprinkli infant baptism.' The officers argued 'Well, it's all right with me, if it is with t decided.

"They found it impossible to explain that a Protestant, so with misty eyes the five A officers stood, the minister taking the squirm from the arms of its grandmother. Afterw brought wine, hoarded for months for this portant occasion, but the Baptist preacher could not drink it. More than thirty years b had promised his mother not to taste into liquors; he was too old to begin now.

"'Then you'll undo all,' disappointedly sp lieutenant. 'We cannot make these women stand your refusal to even taste it. With them part of the service. . . . Let me taste it. .
nothing but pure blackberry juice!"

"Thus mother and grandmother were made
But the conscientious Baptist preacher w
'Some day,' he thought to himself, 'the paren learn that a Protestant performed that cer and, hearing, think deceit had been planned.'
morning he returned to the home with an inter After many words and gesticulations, the mother shook her head and replied, 'It makes ference: We all have one God.'"

THIS the Baptist preacher told me while we handfuls of long grass and daisies, watchi planes circling above and the shelling of the ro

"Two or three nights a week," said he, "I the evening service in the Catholic church at maison. Of course I cannot understand a wor can I worship as do these folks, but as the old mother said, 'It makes no difference: We all ha God.' . . . It's about the hour for the service.
There's the bell. Do you care to go down?"

I will long remember this evening when a B and a Methodist worshiped side by side in a R Catholic church in a foreign land. The old w with heads crowned with stiffly starched bonn few French soldiers; more Americans in uniform shrill chanting of men-children in the loft behin the sing-song voice of the bent, gray padre; the ing response of the choir boys near him; the fra incense and lighted tapers; the barefoot altar b loose, brown upper garment, and with baggy tro flapping loosely about his knees, like all the o serving and worshiping with gas mask hung fro shoulder; the coolness of the church; and the high walls of stone and great pillars, but little lowed by the slowly coming twilight.

And the old grandmother who said makes no difference; we all have one G

◆

Giving a Music Lesson in Ja

Japanese girls kneel by their instruments when they are taking music lessons

THIS is the way the Japanese sc girl takes her music lesson: Te and pupil discard their shoes at the lest they injure the soft padded ma of rice straw. No lofty perch or stool is provided for these dainty ladies. Down they drop on their k beside their curious instruments.

To an American's ears the sounds w they call forth might not be particul pleasing. Japanese music is always minor key and full of what we would sider discords, as it is based upon a s different from ours.

Of course, Western music is now ma itself heard under the cherry trees an the little paper houses of Japan. The sionary's wife, for instance, when she v
the women in their homes, gathers them gether in a cosy little group on the floor teaches them to sing hymns.

They seem to like this, and they seem to welcome the Christian religi which gives woman so much higher a pl than she has been accustomed to in Orient. Education of her mind, devel ment of her individuality, even a cha to enter business or professional life, gradually coming to her as the influence the new religion spreads through her co try.

Dynamic America Demands Results

The age of car generalities is passed.

Many own cars today. Car values are known.

Vague statements applicable to all cars alike do not satisfy.

The buyer insists on specific features.

This attitude has focused public attention upon the Apperson—America's manufactured custom-made motor car.

The Apperson is a car of definite values. Consider these superiorities:

The Apperson glides in high from 1 to 40 miles in 20 seconds.

No dust to take on country roads—no cars to pass you on city boulevards.

The Apperson comes to a dead stop from 40 miles an hour in 40 yards—4 seconds.

In crowded traffic with it you are master of every situation.

The Apperson, with a 130-inch wheelbase, turns in a 38¼-foot circle.

Easy to get in and out from city curbs—easy to turn around on narrow country roads.

The Apperson speeds as fast as road conditions will permit.

The Apperson Brothers were among the first to have racing teams in America. The Apperson is the "Jack Rabbit" Car.

The Apperson is light in weight, producing maximum mileage with minimum fuel consumption.

This also makes sensational tire mileage records possible by Apperson owners.

The Apperson is 99% built in the Apperson shops—it is a true product of tried experience.

This makes it a safe investment—it satisfies and endures.

The Apperson is built under the personal supervision of those pioneer motor car builders of Kokomo—the Apperson Brothers. Body and equipment by a New York designer.

So in it is combined rugged Hoosier chassis construction with a style dress from the world's metropolis.

The Apperson is the product of twenty-six years of experience, as in 1893 the Apperson Brothers built with their own hands the first mechanically successful American automobile.

Dynamic America demands results.

Apperson produces them.

If you are approaching a car-buying decision—

"Drive an Apperson first—then decide."

Descriptive brochure sent upon request.

APPERSON BROS. AUTOMOBILE CO.
Manufacturers of Custom Made Motor Cars
KOKOMO, INDIANA
Export Department—100 West 57th Street, New York City

APPERSON

The Eight with Eighty Less Parts

THE BIBLE AND NEWSPAPER

Conducted by FERDINAND C. IGLEHART, D.D.

Burbank's Mastery Over Nature

THERE is an interesting article in the American Magazine for May on "Burbank at Seventy," which recites some of the struggles of the "plant wizard." At the beginning of his career he took a potato and cultivated it, and by painstaking experimentation he developed it into what is known as the Burbank potato, of which five hundred million bushels have already been sold. He sold that plant for $125 and spent the money on a trip to California in search of health and to find a larger field for nursery work. After a terrible struggle against poverty and sickness he got a good start under the following circumstances: A fruit-grower was making the rounds of the California nurseries looking for twenty thousand young prune trees to be ready for planting in ten months. Not a nursery would undertake so impossible a task, but when Burbank, owner of the Santa Rosa, heard of this man he sought him and took the contract to furnish the trees. He planted almonds because they were of hurried growth, and when they sprouted they were removed to the nursery rows. Then he secured from the surrounding orchards prune buds. These were budded into the almond trees, and the tops of the young trees were broken off, which caused them to make a new growth. In a little over half of the ten months' limit young Burbank had delivered 19,023 prune trees ready for planting. That was the beginning of his fortune and his fame. He claims that he is no "wizard"; that what he has done has been done by hard work for the last forty years at ten to fourteen hours' work a day. But in his modesty he has minimized the real genius which he possesses, which makes him the master of the field and the benefactor of the race, and gives to Santa Rosa its world-wide fame. From the beginning of the race the agriculturist has been at the basis of all other forms of industry. The first man was a professional gardener and after he was driven from the garden his task was to till the earth. "Therefore the Lord God sent him forth from the garden of Eden, to till the ground from whence he was taken." (Gen. 3 : 23.)

Novel Water Wheel

IN ONE of the little streams in the state of Washington there is a strange water wheel rigged on logs. It has sixteen paddles with which it strikes the water, and has as many cups with which it lifts the water into a trough some eight feet above the stream. It then runs down into ditches and irrigates the field. This wheel is the invention of a full-blooded Indian and attracts considerable notice and friendly comment. What a blessing irrigation is to the desert districts of the world and our own country! The farm land that has been reclaimed by this process in extent and value cannot well be measured in numbers. This Indian irrigates the field without a penny of expense for steam or electricity, and has reduced economy down to about its lowest terms. The fall of water from the smallest mountain stream to great Niagara generates the electric power that turns many, many mills and will still turn many more as the years go by. Irrigation has been used in the world from the earliest times. And primitive methods were used for taking the water out of the streams or wells and pouring it into ditches. There is this reference to irrigation among the Jews: "And he said, Thus saith the Lord, Make this valley full of ditches. For thus saith the Lord, Ye shall not see wind, neither shall ye see rain, yet that valley shall be filled with water, that ye may drink, both ye, and your cattle, and your beasts." (II Kings, 3 : 16-17.)

Pigeons Choose Their Owner

THERE was a singular case in court in Chicago the other day when the question of the ownership of five homing pigeons was settled by the court. Silverman caused Seigel's arrest charged with stealing the birds. As homing pigeons find their way home under all conditions, Judge McKinley decided to put it up to the birds. The judge wrote his name on five slips of paper and the bailiff tied them to the legs of the birds. Out of the window went the homers. The next day Silverman came to court with the five slips of paper, and the birds were given over to him. Pigeons as carriers of messages have been employed from the earliest times. They were used in Egypt, Greece and other countries, and special mention has been made of them in the Olympic games. Much prominence was given to the pigeon post during the siege of Paris in 1870-71, and they were employed as valuable messengers in our present war. A homing pigeon well trained is very valuable, as high as $250 being paid for a single bird, or even $500 for the prize pigeon at the poultry show. It seems like a little thing to have a trial in court over pigeons, and yet five homing pigeons well trained would make an amount worth contending for. The gentleman who undertook to scoop his neighbor's pigeons must have felt pretty cheap when the pigeons themselves testified so eloquently against him. God writes the instincts deep in the pigeon and in the constitution of the human soul. The method the judge took at arriving at his decision reminds us of the two women who contended for the possession of the living babe, and Solomon proposed that the child be divided in two, one half to go to one, the other half to the other woman making the claim. The woman who was not the mother of the child consented to the division, the mother protested against it, preferring that the other should have it rather than that it should be killed. "Then spake the woman whose the living was unto the king, O my lord, give her the living child, and in no wise slay it. But the other said, Let it be neither mine nor thine, but divide it." (I Kings 3 : 26.)

Cloth from Pineapple Fibre

THE pineapple is a delicious and healthy food in the countries where it grows and is more and more used for culinary purposes by the people of the world, but the spirit of progress which is everywhere and in everything has found a new use for the pineapple tree. Its leaves are turned into thread, and the thread is spun into garments. Even China has a practical process by which vast amounts of some clothing are made from the cocoanut leaf. The green leaves are soaked in lime water, are scraped with a piece of glass and the fibers are withdrawn by the fingers and after another simple treatment they are spun into thread, wound on spools and ready for the old-fashioned looms. The Jews wove wool into their heavier garments and used the fiber of flax for their lighter garments. In the description of the idea who spun these two fibers into thread and w into garments it is said: "She seeketh wool and worketh willingly with her hands." (Prov.

Farms for French Soldier

THE department of the Loire in Centra has just made provision to give the s farm. A minimum of twenty to twenty-fi may be assigned to each man; besides, the de offers to give $200 worth of farm machin which to till the ground. The soldier must pr occupy the ground given to him for ten years.
nations are treating their soldiers in the same England is making provision for her bo Australia, Canada and other British domin taking similar action. Our own government ful to the precious men who carried its flag to but has been too slow in this matter to provi for those who want to cultivate them. T Congress ought to have looked after this mat this, like many other questions of supreme imp was allowed to fall at the time of the adjou
One of the first things the new Congress sh would be to make generous provision for t who offered their lives in the service of their recognizing the principle of loyalty in the which was so highly commended in these
"For he loveth our nation." (Luke 7 : 5.)

Lioness Kills Keeper

LUCY, a lioness with a circus showing at bury, N. J., was playing with her two a cage in the menagerie tent the other aft when John Henry, a discharged soldier, w recently been hired as her tamer, shoved open t and went in to clean out the cage. One of th at the same moment jumped at his mother's In cuffing him aside Lucy lost her balan tumbled heavily against the cage door. It open. The keeper made to fasten the door. Lucy' forepaw made a lightning catching him across the sh and lifting him bodily in far corner of the cage, wh fell with his neck broken.
Lucy sprang through the
The afternoon performan in full swing. The anim almost a straight course fr circus grounds to the main of the town. When she r it shopkeepers had disap from sight. No children w
the street, and only eyes fr stairs windows, where father getting out their guns, w her course. The lioness passed through the tow a clump of woods, where she was killed. Man material nature made of clay and an animal akin to the lower tribes. He has in him the instincts of the lion and tiger that tear an Christ came to tame that beast nature, to transf into love. The wild beasts of the human soul broken loose in the world, and anarchy and bloo are threatening our civilization. The church look to Christ to tame that savagery and insist such reforms as will allay the world's unrest.
death that accompanies this fleshly nature is described by the apostle: "For to be carnally m is death but to be spiritually minded is life and p (Rom. 8 : 6.)

Baby McLean Killed

VINSON WALSH McLEAN, nine years old of Mr. and Mrs. Edward P. McLean and h one of the greatest fortunes in America, was run by an automobile May 18, and died the same eve Since his birth the boy had been famous as the closely guarded child in America. That mornin escaped his guardians for a moment, slipped thr one of the great gateways, and was run down in road by an automobile. Servants and nurse wealthy families can be multiplied until they a each other's way and until the purpose of their ployment is missed. It is likely that the boy ha many guards that each one expected the other to care of the child. In wealth or in poverty there nurse and no guardian like a mother; that is G plan and it cannot be improved upon. The la wealth and the most complete precautions are un to shut out death when it strikes at its mark.
boy had good blood on both sides and was natu bright and promising, and it was a pity that his yo life should have been cut off in such a manner.
unfortunate accident of the millionaire boy call mind these words: "There is but a step between me death." (I Sam. 20 : 3.)

PEACE, not as the torpid calm
  Of a limpid lake at rest,
Void of zephyrs' vibrant psalm,
  Not a ripple on its breast;
But the peace of Earth that thrills
  With a myriad tuneful deeds,
Like orchestral mountain rills—
  This the peace the whole world needs.

Peace, with passions harnessed fast
  To reverberating tools,
With our eager armies massed
  Where the lure of labor rules;
Peace, with cannons fashioned o'er
  Into plowshares, plunging deep
In the laughing soils that pour
  Harvest treasures, heap on heap.

Peace, with powder's tragic wrath
  From the battle-fields transferred,
Crushing mountains in the path
  Where our steeds of steel are spurred;
Peace, with dreadnoughts of the sea
  Into laden liners made,
Till all lands near neighbors be
  In the comradeship of trade.

Lo, the storming rage of men,
  Like the Sea of Galilee,
Hears Christ's ' Peace, be still ' again;
  Let all war now cease to be—
Till, old enmities forgot
  And all battle-banners furled,
Comes the League of Nations, wrought
  By the heroes of the world!

Proof on the face of it

It is hand-buffed and feather-edged, easy to apply, and you can count on its firm hold, without pucker or "creep"

HERE, on this Firestone Tube Patch, is the name which stands for most miles per dollar—a big name in travel today.

Everybody knows that this big idea, most miles per dollar, extends to the smallest thing the Firestone people make. In this Cementless Tube Patch, for instance, there is quality clear through.

Look for the name Firestone and get most miles per dollar results from every tire accessory you buy. Your dealer has a full stock.

FIRESTONE TIRE & RUBBER COMPANY
FIRESTONE PARK, AKRON, OHIO BRANCHES AND DEALERS EVERYWHERE

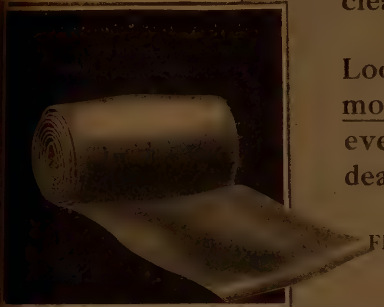
BLOWOUT PATCH
Strong, reliable. Holds tire surely after cut or blowout



FIRESTONE RE-LINER
New life for worn tires

Firestone
TIRE ACCESSORIES

HOLDFAST
Patch Stock
Repairs All Injuries
to Inner Tubes
Complete with tube of cement and metal buffer

Stewart CUSTOM BILT NECESSITIES
"They're More Than Accessories"

Stewart-Equip Your Ford, For Greater Convenience, Safety and Economy

Do you know how far you go and how fast you go? You should, not only because of the increased motoring satisfaction it gives you, but also from an economy standpoint. You can then check your motoring costs, know how much mileage you are getting from gasoline, oil and tires, and prevent costly fines from speeding.

A Stewart Speedometer provides the ONLY ACCURATE means of obtaining this most essential information. Automotive engineers have decided this point. That's why over 95 per cent of all cars use the Stewart as standard equipment. Why should you experiment? Install a Stewart Speedometer and our Special Stewart Instrument Board and know you have the best.

The three greatest safety additions to a Ford car are the Stewart V-Ray Searchlight, Stewart Warning Signal, and Stewart Autoguard. They protect you, your car, pedestrians, and other motorists. No Ford car is complete without them. Also if you want to know how much power your Ford car really has, install a set of Stewart Spark Plugs.

Stewart Custombilt Necessities are the highest grade, most popular Ford Accessories. Any good dealer will be glad to show them to you.

Stewart V-Ray Searchlight, $6.00

Stewart Autoguard $12 00 Ford and Chevrolet Sizes, $10.00

Stewart Warning Signal Hand-Operated, $4.50

Miss Stewart Custombilt says: "All our products are strictly "custom-bilt," as only Stewart knows how, offering you better values."

Stewart V-Ray Spark Plug $1.25

Stewart Speedometer, $25.00
Special for Fords - 11.75

Stewart-Warner Speedometer Corporation
CHICAGO, ILLINOIS

THE DAIL

J. H. Jowett, D.D., C. C. Albertson, D.D., Rev. E. W. Caswell, Cha

Transforming Duty Into Joy

SUNDAY. Rom. 13 : 10. "Love is the fulfilling of the Law." How does love fulfil the law? By transforming it. Love converts an outer command into an inner constraint. Love changes duty into joys. Love turns statutes into songs. All this is surely what is intended by the Psalmist when he said, "I will run in the way of thy commandments when thou shalt enlarge my heart." A bigger heart transforms both the road and the runner. It is the smaller heart that is painfully conscious that the journey is along the highway of statutes and decrees. But when there comes a bigger love the way of the commandment is transformed into Lover's Lane. We do not walk along it with the leaden feet of slaves, discharging a task. We hasten with the winged feet of those who are upborne by the sense of privilege and delight. The disciples felt they were obliged to wash one another's feet in obedience to traditional commandment, and they moved to the task with gloomy reluctance, or they shirked it altogether. Mary Magdalene washed the Saviour's feet from an impulse of passionate devotion, and she was never conscious of any command. "She loved much," and cold statutes had nothing to do with her gracious ministry. Love fulfilled the law without knowing it.

And thus does love transform the law. The magisterial command becomes the lover's wish, and love leaps to meet it on the way. For example, let us take a divine commandment from the Old Testament: "Seek ye Me!" It is a call to worship. It lays a command upon the conscience, and duty can obey the command. But with what cold scrupulousness does duty set about the service! With what precision it measures out the exact dimensions of the task like some mean and grudging tradesman who will not add a single grain more than is required to turn his scales! We can study the ways and manners of duty by watching the Pharisees. How expert they were in discovering the minimum demands of a divine statute! If the law compelled them to go a mile, they would never go two. But suppose a passionate love had expelled this meager sense of duty, then surely the ways of worship would have been transformed! "Seek ye Me!" Precise measurements would vanish in the ample consciousness of privilege and delight. The worshiper would not go to Zion like a slave to his labor. He would go like a lover to the trysting-place, filled with holy expectation and joy.

J. H. J.

With Christ

MONDAY. John 17 : 24. "Father, I desire that they also whom thou hast given me, be with me where I am." Prepositions have a great part in the philosophy of Christian experience. To come to Christ signifies approach. To be with Christ signifies association, fellowship. And there is a third preposition which implies a further step in faith. It is the word "on." If "to" suggests approach, and if "with" suggests association, "on" implies an act of the heart and will, an investment of life, a venture of the spirit. The late Dr. A. J. Gordon wrote a book on the two words "In Christ." What did he make of it? He made out of it only what is in the phrase—the eternal miracle of the believer's vital union with Christ.

There are three kinds of union: mechanical, as when we clamp two pieces of iron together or dovetail one piece of wood into another; chemical, by which two or more elements unite to make a different substance, which we call a compound; vital, as when we engraft a bud into a tree. If the process is rightly done, the bud becomes of the tree. The preposition in this portion of Jesus' inte prayer suggests a vital unio Christ, so much more comple
mechanical or chemical union, destroy one factor in the unio destroy every element that wen
—it is to destroy the union itself.
declared his purpose to live forev his disciples and in his disciples.
sider a fountain in its relation stream that is born of it. On t to the shining sea, the fountain the stream, since it is in the Take another analogy: Jesus sp himself as the head of the body, is the church. Is the head in the Is the body in the head? Well the head to every part of the bo delicate nerves so that the two
one. And from every part of th to the head run blood-vessels, s each is dependent on the other.

Is Christ dependent on us? I seem presumptuous to say it, but We are the only body he has world now. If we are unwortl can get another body to take our but until the race repudiates its we are his only body in the world in a very real sense, we are with C and in Christ, as Paul well unde when he said, "Your lives are hi Christ in God."

C. C

The Armor of God

TUESDAY. Eph. 6 : 14. "Hi on the breastplate of righteous
When everything seems against the whole armor of God is your de Thus panoplied, you will quench a fiery darts of the enemy and be al stand fast against an evil world.
breastplate means a coat of mail,
tecting the vital parts of the body.
on righteousness always, not your good deeds, but Christ's purity power. Faith in Jesus armors one invincible protection. Christ b Pilate could have delivered himself.
power could harm the eternal Rede who is just, righteous and true.
perfect man and perfect God; wea
the robes he gives you, no harm enter your being. Men may kill body, but cannot touch the Clothed in his likeness, the law ha claim upon you, for Christ is the J administering penalty. Behind you are shielded. He puts his arm love and power around every guilty ner and proclaims his freedom thr his precious blood. However weak are, you are strong in him. O glor righteousness of the Son of God!
yours forever; nothing can separate from him while eternal ages roll.
great Protector has wrapped you in robes.

It is not an external breastplate, woven into your very nature. He imparted himself to your being, tr forming your spirit into angelic bea made one with himself. He covers from the sins of the past, the temp tions of the present and the fears of future.

E. W. C

Is America Christian?

WEDNESDAY. Matt. 7 : 4. "A lo, the beam is in thine own ey Wong Fu had been sent by the Chin government to America to receive education at an American univers and fit himself for a government po tion.

After a year in the university he ca to his teacher in philosophy. "Teache he said in his slow, grave, patient ma ner, "I am greatly perplexed over ma ter. Perhaps you can help me."

"Perhaps," replied the professor, w had once or twice been questioned b Wong Fu and found him very keen.

"This is my trouble," said Wong F gently. "I come to this country wh

EDITATION

lon, D.D., Bishop W. A. Quayle, W. W. Bustard, D.D., Rev. R. Braunstein

lled Christian. I expect to find tions much better here than in my ry. I find much evil here. Sa- , and vice houses, and child labor, great labor strikes where people, women and children, are killed, Sabbath-breaking and law-break- ommerce combining to break law, number murders and suicides, divorce and family unhappiness, gard of parents by young people, money spent for liquor and to- and shows than for churches and ls, and great war preparation. uestion I want to ask is, when I go to my people, how shall I explain nis to them? If Christ religion is uch better than ours why do all things go on over here? If these uits of Christianity, how is your on better than ours?"

e professor looked at Wong Fu .

have a son and daughter both mis- ries in China. The question you s one they ask a good many times. your people are asking it of them. g Fu, we have a great work to do hristianize this country for the sake e missionaries and our own."

will do my part," said Wong Fu ely. And without criticism he his way. And he is doing it. rica must help him, if he in his turn ing to help his people when he goes . We need to have some mission- sent to us. Perhaps China could some, like Wong Fu, for instance.

C. M. S.

Love Made the Supper

HURSDAY. John 12 : 2. "There they made him a supper." That ating "they"! Who is this "they," beautiful "they"? It eludes us the voice of the vesper sparrow. ints of the beautiful poetry of love. his supper was a neighborhood af- In point of personal accuracy it Simon who gave it. I think he the bills; but the neighbors took a d at this sweet dinner at Simon's et desire. They who loved him le him a festival. Simon the leper; supper was at his house. Toward Christ walked despite the warn- raucous voice of leper Simon, nclean, unclean, beware." Toward voice came the holy feet and out- tched was the holy hand to touch untouchable leper and not to be lered unclean thereby but to cleanse leper. It was Christ, and his touch s cleansing.

nd then Simon the leper came home nawares, and wife and children wept id, and sang aloud and kissed aloud, elcome home!" And Simon made Saviour a supper? Likely enough, rightly enough. A beautiful supper. ut next door in lovely Bethany be- th the olive trees dwell the grown-up hans, Martha and Mary and Laza- And to these Christ had come . He had touched their hand of th and Lazarus sprang up a living . Small wonder Simon knew they t be at the supper. And Simon sat the table and Jesus beside him, and arus sat at the table, but not to eat just to look and adore. And Mar- to be sure. Martha served. We ld have known that without the ing. And John's Zebedee was there see it all and to love to rehearse it all this endearing phrase "and they de him a supper." There never was supper like this. A supper of pure e And who is absent? Are we all e? It looks somehow as if somebody away. Why, Mary is not here! is Mary away? Has she forgotten e Resurrection and the Life"? Mar- is among those that serve, but re is— When coming running with a e alabaster box, with her eyes shin- love and her black tresses loose like ying veil, is Mary, and stops not till reaches the feet, the blessed naked feet of God, "and anointed the feet of Jesus and wiped his feet with her hair; and the house was filled with the odor of the ointment." Love made him a supper!

And then his Love made them and us all the Lord's Supper, where we all kneel to partake, and he girds himself and serves us and breaks upon our heads and hearts the alabaster box of his love, until all the world is filled with the odor of the ointment. W. A. Q.

What Came Out of the War

FRIDAY. 1 Kings 18 : 36. "Let it be known that I am thy servant." Luke 15 : 19. "Make me as one of thy servants." There are those who say that war has no compensations. Others tell us that war does bring with it some benefits, and there appear to be at least three good things which have come out of the recent war:

First, we have discovered that no one nation has a monopoly on courage. We have found that the English can die for the thing they believe right; the French still possess the spirit of Joan of Arc; the Italians have that courage which made Rome mistress of the world, while the American is as good a soldier as ever drew a sword or fired a shot.

When in khaki we did not ask our boys what they were religiously, but would they be faithful to the old flag and follow it over the top to victory?

The second compensation of this war will be the future use of the great instruments of destruction in a constructive civilization. The submarine and the airplane will become the messengers of commerce in the rebuilding of the world's prosperity in the years of peace.

The third thing, which is the best, is a new spirit of sacrificial service. Men are saying in the words of the prophet of old, "Let it be known that I am thy servant," and they are coming back to their heavenly Father with the request of the prodigal, "Make me as one of thy servants." We are getting back to Christ's idea about service and greatness. The professional man grasped this ideal, giving up his practice when it paid thousands of dollars for an opportunity of service which only reimbursed him in hundreds. The business men gave up their incomes to serve the government for a dollar a year. Mr. John D. Rockefeller said not long ago, "The greatest thing now in all the world is to be a servant." W. W. B.

Goodness in Action

SATURDAY. Matt. 10 : 7. "And as ye go, preach." That little word "go" is one of the most important words in the vocabulary of the Kingdom. It suggests movement, action, progress. Christianity to make itself felt must be dynamic. "The end of a man is an action, not a thought," said Carlyle. Christianity must be characterized by action and industry. "That man who meditated and made Italy has gone to a diviner country," wrote Mrs. Browning when Cavour died. "Meditated" and "made" are significant words. Creed without deed is useless. To hold a service and not do a service is not efficiency. Prayer must be followed by the "amen" of ministry. The age needs the Rose of Christ as well as the Botany of Christ. Jesus did much preaching, but he also did much good. His life may be summed up in the words, "The Son of God went about doing good." He himself said, "I am not come to be ministered unto, but to minister." "As the Father hath sent me, even so send I you." We are prone to lose ourselves in the contemplation of glory when we should be absorbed in life. Charles Wesley sang that he had "a never-dying soul to save." He also sang that he must "serve the present age." The Word must become flesh.

R. B.

We Are Coming to Better Teeth

All Statements Approved by High Dental Authorities

We Now Combat Film

Science has discovered something which means better teeth to millions. Able authorities have amply proved its efficiency. Leading dentists all over America are urging its adoption.

It is a way to really clean teeth. Not to merely wash them, but to fight the tooth-wrecking film. That means everything. The slimy film which you feel with your tongue is the cause of most tooth troubles.

That film is what discolors—not the teeth. It is the basis of tartar. It holds food substance which ferments and forms acid. It holds the acid in contact with the teeth to cause decay.

Dentists call it "bacterial plaque," because millions of germs breed in it. They, with tartar, are the chief causes of pyorrhea.

This clinging film gets into crevices where it hardens and stays. It resists the tooth brush. The ordinary tooth paste cannot dissolve it. So millions find that teeth discolor and decay despite their daily brushing. And they wonder why.

Dentists long have known the reason but they found no way to help it. Now there is a way, and everyone should know it. The method is embodied in a dentifrice called Pepsodent. And to quickly let the millions prove it we send to everyone who asks a 10-Day Tube to try.

You Are Welcome to It

You are welcome to this 10-Day Tube. Just use it and see what it does. Then read the reasons in the book we send. You owe that to yourself.

Pepsodent is based on pepsin, the digestant of albumin. The film is albuminous matter. The object of Pepsodent is to dissolve it, then to constantly combat it.

Pepsin long seemed impossible. It must be activated, and the usual method is an acid harmful to the teeth. But science now has found a harmless activating method. Patents have been granted by five governments already. That method, used in Pepsodent, offers people now a way to safer, whiter, better teeth.

We urge you to compare it with your old teeth cleaning methods, then let the evident results tell you what to do.

Send the coupon for a 10-Day Tube. Use it like any tooth paste. Note how clean the teeth feel after using. Mark the absence of the slimy film. See how the teeth whiten as the fixed film disappears.

In ten days you will realize that this method is essential to clean teeth. You will use it always, we believe, and have your children use it.

Send us the coupon and see.

Ten-Day Tube Free

THE PEPSODENT CO.,
Dept. 530, 1104 S. Wabash Ave., Chicago, Ill.
Mail Ten-Day Tube of Pepsodent to

Name.................................

Address..............................

Pepsodent
REG. U.S. PAT. OFF.

The New-Day Dentifrice

A scientific tooth paste based on activated pepsin. An efficient film combatant, now endorsed by dentists everywhere and sold by druggists in large tubes.

(184)

WEAR-EVER ALUMINUM TRADE MARK

Accompany Your Wish of Happiness with this practical gift of every-day utility – a gift that will aid the Bride materially in starting her housekeeping right and that she will prize highly because of its convenience, silver-like beauty and permanence. Give her a set of

"Wear-Ever"
Aluminum Cooking Utensils

They are preferred by women who are no less proud of the utensils in which food is prepared than of the dishes from which it is served.

Replace utensils that wear out with utensils that "Wear-Ever"

The Aluminum Cooking Utensil Co., Dept. 34, New Kensington, Pa.
In Canada "Wear-Ever" Utensils are made by Northern Aluminum Company, Limited, Toronto, Ont.

WEAR-EVER ALUMINUM TRADE MARK

FOR THE YOUNG FOL

The Doll's Trunk That Donald Made

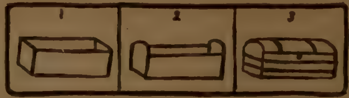
BY LAURA A. KIRKMAN

DONALD made a pretty little dolls' trunk for his sister in the following manner:

He found a wooden box 6 x 12 inches and 6½ inches high, and whittled curved sides with his penknife, also whittling away half an inch at the top of the long front and back of the box. (See Fig. 2.)

He then took a wide, curved board from the side of a barrel and sawed it off to fit the top of the box, th the effect of a rounded t Hinges of tape, tacked on the cover and box, secured this t

The last step was to tack of string on the lid, precisel center, in front, and a bras tack j it, on and t paint stripes top a of the shown



Child Policemen

A STRICT regard for the rights and feelings of whatever has feeling is the cardinal principle of civilization, of courtesy and of Christianity. Children are fond of animals and by no other means can kindness be so thoroughly inculcated in them as by humane teaching.

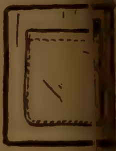
The San Francisco Call says: "Today the Jefferson School is one of the most orderly in all the city. The children don't fight as they used to; they don't stone cats, or tie tin pails to the tails of dogs, or molest the sons of the Flowery Kingdom. And why? every school child down that soon as he is old enough to name, is made a member of the the prevention of all the old e no blue-frocked, brass-buttone dian of the peace could ever ha a tithe of the good that those have accomplished. For four y principal has been organizing th of all the various classes into B Mercy, and now every child seem of his enrolment. There are ab members."

An Apron Pencil Pocket

WHEN at her work the efficient housekeeper carries about with her a notebook and pencil so that she may jot down any changes she wishes to make in recipes, any labor-saving devices she discovers, etc.

A notebook, because of its weight, runs no risk of being jostled out of an apron pocket, but a pencil is apt to slip out when the housekeeper bends over, and for this reason it should have a special little pocket of its own into which it fits snugly.

Such a pocket can be made by running a seam down through any pocket, half an inch from one the pocket, partitioning off a slit just the size of the pencil (see illustration). The remainder of the pocket provides an excellent place for the notebook, which should be kept near the pencil for convenience' sake.



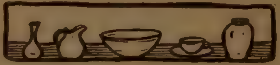
Sam's "Tom Sawyer" Cave

SAM had read "Tom Sawyer" and had often wished there were a cave near his home like the one Tom was lost in. Then, one day, the idea occurred to him to make a cave.

"Say, fellows," he said to his friends, "father says I can have those six old barrels in the woodshed. Let's take them out in the meadow behind the barn and put them end to end (knock out top and bottom, of course) and then cover them with brush. They'll make a fine dark cave!"

The other boys liked the idea. They worked two whole afternoons n the cave. Some of the barrels th at right angles with the other barr that the cave would have severa sages, covering the open spaces b them with sacking, boards and br

At the very back of the main p they made a 7 x 7 foot square roon crates, and covered this too with l leaving only a chink or two in th for ventilation. This room acco dated all of the boys and provided a for them to hide in when an imag enemy was lying in wait for them ou



Hand-Made Dolls' Dishes

NORMAN'S little sister Margaret broke some of her dolls' dishes and she felt so badly about it that Norman made her some new ones out of modeling clay which his mother made by this recipe:

One cup of flour, one-half cup of salt, one teaspoon of powdered alum; mix these with water until the right consistency for molding.

Norman made a little cup and saucer, a pitcher, and a fruit bowl. He then mixed some bluing with the clay and made some pretty vases to go on the top of her dolls' bureau.

The clay that was left over was wrapped in a damp cloth for future use.

Education of the Heart

MILLIONS are poured into our colleges and universities to educate the brains of America, while almost nothing is done to educate the heart.

"Show me the laws of a state for the prevention of cruelty to animals, and I in turn will give you a correct estimate of the refinement, enlightenment, integrity, and equity of that commonwealth's people."—Hon. L. T. Dashiell, Speaker of Texas House of Representatives.

The Coming Educatio

"How can I teach your children g
ness,
And mercy to the weak, and reve
for life,
When by your laws, your actions
your speech,
You contradict the very things I tea
—Longfello

"The greatest need of Americ more education of the heart."—H Powers.

The Cake and the Bird

ON THE playground fence a te put a cake for the birds, telling pupils of their usefulness and in gence, and the wrong of injuring th Next day her most unruly boy ate c half his lunch and put the other hal the fence. Kindness is contagious example is powerful. That fence i the favorite perch of many birds, e when the yard is filled with noisy b and the unruly boy has changed fo better. Surely those boys will all nobler men and better citizens fo tuition of such a teacher.

While every child should be intel tually educated it is certain that ed tion of the heart is even more essen to the welfare of society and t individual happiness, and children entitled to both.

Chansung's Confession

Continued from page 633

vhich human nature adjusts itself nged conditions. Han Chansung, calmly eating his morning meal Chin Dai, could hardly be recog- as the terror-stricken boy who om Tai Pyeng Dong. He seemed ve dropped his burden of fear in ght—or was it the strange power mounting flames of the furnace? ertain at any rate that he took the gain with an empty pocket and a heart.

r at the furnace the tread song of en at the bellows still continued; rent crew of men, no doubt, but ame song. Black-faced toilers still scurrying with their glowing from the furnace to the molds. lames still leaped from the fur- mouth in answer to the song and se and fall of the bellows; but the picture of the night was gone. In rly morning light the flame itself aled, casting a tint of green upon ene that now appeared weird and thly.

en Chansung had fled from home he had turned to the north, with no plan except to get as far as possible from Tai Pyeng Dong. Gradually a purpose formed in his mind. Years ago a former teacher had come from Tuk Chun and had told strange tales of the land behind the highest mountains where oats and corn were grown instead of rice and barley, of black, pine-clad mountains where tigers lived, and of houses with roofs of wood instead of tile or straw as in the lower country.

Chansung had asked at the inn how far it was to Tuk Chun and had been shown a distant mountain pass called Alger Yung, the gateway to all Tuk Chun.

"Thirty miles," the innkeeper said, "if you go by the big road by Kai Chun, and twenty miles if you take the short cut across the mountains."

Chansung wisely chose the big road and started off as fast as his sore feet and stiffened limbs permitted. Hour after hour he traveled, climbing now steadily till the river he had been following since morning became a tiny stream.

To be continued

Bishop Greer Passes Away

Photo by Pach

Bishop David Hummel Greer

HE Right Rev. David Hummell Greer died 19, in St. Luke's ital, New York in his seventy- h year, after g held the post otestant Episcopal Bishop of New k for eleven , the duties of office he con- d to perform gh a succession evere illnesses. op Greer was in Wheeling, a., in 1844, and graduated from hington College, nsylvania, in , and from the estant Episco- Seminary in bier, Ohio, in , in which year, at the age of twenty- he became rector of Christ Church, ksburg, W. Va. He served as rector essively at Covington, Ky., Provi- e, R. I., and St. Bartholomew's ch in New York City. A charac- tic story is told of his first entrance a New York parish. Some one d him which of two calls he would pt—to the wealthy St. Thomas's rch on Fifth Avenue or to the poor, nt-pewed St. Bartholomew's on lison Avenue. He replied: "St. mas's has its pews full, has a e congregation and does an active k. At St. Bartholomew's half the s are vacant, the congregation is l, and the resources undeveloped. all have more to do at St. Barth- lew's."

on after Dr. Greer's first sermon at Bartholomew's the pews were full, before long the church was one of most influential in the city, and the r became the administrator of ch funds that would have taxed the city of many a business man. One is achievements was the erection parish house which contained, be- s the community features, the offices arious societies through which Dr. er helped the poor to help them- es.

lthough Bishop Greer became a onal figure, he remained a modest, l-working man. He declined three s to become a bishop. Not until was he persuaded to accept the of coadjutor to Bishop Henry C. ter, on whose death he automatically ame bishop.

bishop, Dr. Greer's talents as an inistrator soon began to show re- s. In his study was a map of his ese, in which pins of different colors wed the location of active churches, sions, and localities for mission work. One of the favorite interests of Bishop Greer was the promotion of international peace and the prevention of future wars. He was president of the Church Peace Union, and an executive member of the American League to Limit Armaments. But when the United States entered the war, he was an untiring worker in furthering every patriotic cause.

Christian Unity was another of the Bishop's favorite interests. He stirred up considerable discussion when in furtherance of the Church Unity movement he invited ministers of several denominations to speak in the Cathedral during the Lenten services. For his activities he received both criticism and commendation, but he cared little for either, apparently.

The funeral services were conducted Friday morning, May 23, in the Cathedral of St. John the Divine, by Bishop Edward S. Lines, of Newark, N. J., Bishop Arthur S. Lloyd, president of the Board of Missions; Bishop Charles H. Brent of Western New York, and Bishop Charles S. Burch. The Cathedral choir sang during the services. The body of the Bishop was laid in the Cathedral crypt beside that of his predecessor in the episcopal office, Bishop Henry C. Potter, and that of Dean William M. Grosvenor, the late rector of the Cathedral. Between 200 and 300 clergymen attended the funeral. The bishop's chair was draped in purple and the choir stalls were draped in black and purple.

In 1869 Dr. Greer married Miss Caroline A. Keith, of Covington, Ky. She was seriously ill at the time of the Bishop's death. Four children survive him: William A. Greer, of the Governing Committee of the New York Stock Exchange; Lawrence Greer, a lawyer; Mrs. Thomas S. McLane of New York, and Miss Jean Greer.

Bishop Greer was the author of "The Historic Christ," "From Things to God," "The Preacher and His Place," and "Visions."

◆

NORMAN H. CAMP, superintendent of the Chicago Hebrew Mission, writes to the Christian Herald that the mission's workers during January distributed 41,585 tracts in Yiddish and English, visiting 18,998 homes, and in this way reaching nearly 100,000 people in three Jewish districts.

Never Again Will She Try To Bake Beans

There is one dish which the oldest cooks and wisest do not now attempt to bake.

Scientific cooks—men with college training—have revolutionized Baked Beans. Under their direction—at Van Camp's—the dish has been bettered tenfold. Now Van Camp's are served in hotels or homes where people seek the best.

A Four-Year Study

These culinary experts at Van Camp's devoted four years to Baked Beans. The old-time dish was very hard to digest. It was crisped and broken and mushy. The tomato sauce was not zestful. One by one they solved these cooking problems.

First, they studied beans. They found that the best beans grow on certain rare soils, and now we always get them. They found that those beans differed, so now each lot is analyzed before we start to cook.

New-Way Baking

They then instructed the Van Camp chefs in new ways of cooking and baking. Now the beans are always boiled in water freed from minerals. That insures tender skins.

They are hidden in modern steam ovens—baked for hours at 245 degrees. Thus the beans are fitted to digest. Yet this live-steam baking leaves the beans uncrisped and unbroken—nutlike, mealy and whole.

856 Sauce Formulas

Other experts worked on the sauce. They made it in 856 different ways to attain this ideal tang and zest. That sauce is baked with the pork and beans so that every granule shares it.

Such beans cannot be baked in ordinary kitchens. The dish requires analyses, costly facilities, scientific methods. We spent $100,000 in learning how to make it.

The wise way is to always serve Van Camp's Then the dish is delicious and digestible Compare it once with others and you'll see.

VAN CAMP'S

Pork and Beans

Baked With the Van Camp Sauce—Also Without It

Other Van Camp Products Include
Soups Evaporated Milk Spaghetti Peanut Butter
Chili Con Carne Catsup Chili Sauce, etc.
Prepared in the Van Camp Kitchens at Indianapolis

Van Camp's Soups—18 Kinds

Van Camp's Spaghetti

Van Camp's Peanut Butter

Black Cat

Men's Reinforced Silk Hosiery

Black Cat Reinforced Hosiery seldom develops "rub-outs" in the heels nor lets toes punch through, as ordinary hosiery does. When they ask their dealers for this famous brand, Men Need Not Wear Darned Socks!

In every style, the toes, heels and garter hems are reinforced for extra wear. Thus, Black Cat combines great lasting qualities with its supremely dressy appearance.

Black Cat is made in all materials and weights, at prices no higher than you pay for ordinary hosiery.

BLACK CAT TEXTILES CO.
Home Office, Kenosha, Wis.

COOPER'S ORIGINAL Spring Needle UNDERWEAR BENNINGTON

Makers also of Cooper's-Bennington
Spring Needle
Underwear
for Men

The Only Shade Made With A Ventilator

Self-Hanging Vudor Ventilating PORCH SHADES

Add Half a Day to the Enjoyment of Your Porch

When you lower your Vudor Porch Shades you turn out the sun. Hot afternoon hours are made comfortable hours because the ventilating feature of Vudor Shades allows the air to circulate, at the same time excluding the sun.

There are lots of interesting things you should know about Vudor Porch Shades. Write for complete description, illustrations in color and the name of your local dealer.

HOUGH SHADE CORPORATION
242 Mill St., Janesville, Wis.

SAVE YOUR BODY Conserve Your Health and Efficiency First

"I Would Not Part With It For $10,000"

So writes an enthusiastic, grateful customer. 'Worth more than a farm", says another. In like manner testify over 100,000 people who have worn it.

The Natural Body Brace

Overcomes WEAKNESS and ORGANIC AILMENTS of WOMEN and MEN. Develops erect, graceful figure. Brings restful relief, comfort, ability to do things, health and strength.

Wear It 30 Days Free at Our Expense Does away with the strain and pain of standing and walking, replaces and supports misplaced internal organs; reduces enlarged abdomen; straightens and strengthens the back; corrects stooping shoulders; develops lungs, chest and bust; relieves backache, curvatures, nervousness, ruptures, constipation. Comfortable and easy to wear. KEEP YOURSELF FIT. Write today for illustrated booklet, measurement blank, etc., and read our very liberal proposition.

For Boys and Girls Also

HOWARD C. RASH, Pres. Natural Body Brace Co., 171 Rash Bldg., Salina, Kansas

Ranger Electric Lighted Motorbike

FACTORY-TO-RIDER
SAVES YOU MONEY

Buy direct and save $10 to $20 on a bicycle. RANGER BICYCLES now come in 44 styles, colors and sizes. Greatly improved; prices reduced. Other reliable models also. WE DELIVER FREE to you on approval and 30 days trial and riding test.

Our big FREE catalog shows everything new in bicycles and sundries. Write for it.

TIRES, lamps, wheels, parts and supplies at half usual prices.

Do not buy a bicycle, tires, or sundries until you get our wonderful new offers, low prices and liberal terms. A postal brings everything.

MEAD CYCLE COMPANY Dept. H 71 Chicago

Three Old Organs For Sale

Two Manual and Pedal Organ—PRICE $400 Boxed on Cars at Factory

One Manual and Pedal Organ—PRICE $350 Boxed on Cars at Factory

One Manual Organ—PRICE $200 Boxed on Cars at Factory

DESCRIPTION ON APPLICATION

HOOK & HASTINGS CO. KENDAL GREEN, MASS.

GENERAL AND LOCAL AGENTS Enormous profits selling DUO guaranteed products. Easy sales at every house. All or spare time. Outfit free. DUO CO., Dept. W84, ATTICA, N. Y.

WE PAY CASH FOR OLD FALSE TEETH

Don't matter if broken. Also cash for old gold, silver, platinum, dental gold and old gold jewelry. Will send cash by return mail and will hold goods 10 days for sender's approval of our price. Mail to

MAZER BROS.
Dept. 241, 2007 So. 5th St., Philadelphia, Pa.

CHURCH BELLS SCHOOL

Ask for Catalogue and Special Donation Plan No. 85
THE C. S. BELL CO., Est. 1858, Hillsboro, Ohio

PRAYER

International Sunday School Lesson for June

Matt. 6:5-15; Luke 18:1-14

Elements of Christian Prayer

By Rev. George D. Allison, Ph.D.

PRAYER is hard to analyze, and to one who deeply appreciates the privileges of prayer analysis is like taking apart a rose; pieces are left, but not the flower. Just so it is better to go on loving than to attempt to explain love. However, it should be possible for Christian friends to talk over the things that have entered into their prayer life, for mutual benefit. It often happens that a false or mistaken notion of what is involved has handicapped a willing and earnest young disciple.

To begin with, we have done away with the old pagan notion that prayer is chiefly a means of influencing God and changing his mind, as though he did not know the facts or could be persuaded to alter his plans. In Christian prayer we remember the Master's great word, "Your heavenly Father knoweth what things ye have need of before ye ask." This glad fact makes prayer less and less a matter of begging, as though God needed to be cajoled into giving, and more and more a matter of communion of child with Father, that we may fulfil the conditions which are necessary for his noblest gifts. More than ever are we sure that by prayer we become stronger to do the right, more than ever are we persuaded that if we have hard decisions to make we can seek and obtain the divine guidance. But we are also more modest in attempting to substitute our little wills for the great Mind of the universe. We are more careful to say, with Jesus, at the close of the most heartfelt petition, "Nevertheless, Father, not my will but thine be done."

The Christian prays not less than the superstitious heathen, but rather more. He eliminates from his supplications only the unworthy. Like a loving child he pours out his heart's desires to his Father, remembering only the law of unselfishness, for he dares not crowd his way past other souls with special pleas for personal gain. The Father is glad to have the confidence of his child and manifests himself to him as he cannot to the world.

Aspiration in Prayer

The very fact that a man seeks converse with the divine proves that he is not a child of earth alone. It is spirit that doth seek spirit and the man who does not pray is stunting the possibilities of his life. Tennyson puts it strongly when he says,

> "What are men better than sheep or goats,
> That nourish a blind life within the brain,
> If knowing God they lift not hands of prayer
> Both for themselves and those they call their own?"

The prodigal was turned homeward by aspiration: "I will arise and go to my father." It is often true that we go to Him just because we are driven by our need. We feel keenly our limitations and our sins. Then we press onward and upward into his presence, and all the longings of our souls for higher and better things are confirmed and strengthened.

Sincerity in Prayer

How severe Jesus was in his judgment upon insincerity! He felt that the hypocrite was the one man for whom he could do nothing. The note of utter reality in the publican's prayer was the thing that contrasted so vividly with the prayer of the Pharisee, who after all "prayed thus with himself"—half audience, half preacher, without any keen sense of need.

It is in voicing a real want of the soul of man that prayer becomes genuine. No matter how foolish the expression, how ignorant and simple the petition, we may be sure that the kind and loving Father stoops to hear and to least of his children. When th is a cry for help, we may be assu God hears. Doubtless he ta count of the sincere supplicatio by primitive altars by the n tutored of his creatures, just as count unworthy of attention e
most elaborate of insincerities they be staged within a Christia
dral, if the spirit is selfish and f

If we truly want things that of God, we will put ourselves in of receiving them. We will h answer to our petitions, saying, then . . . and do this." For ten he does answer by indicating to us the course we should take.
the very act of prayerfully putt fore God the otherwise unspok tions and longings of our souls l lead us to their fulfilment.

The Social Element in Pray

Jesus said, "When ye pray, s Father"—thereby teaching us n approach the throne of God
When we come with the Lord's on our hearts we draw all men to the place of healing and of pow may be doubted if any real disc Jesus ever prayed long without t ment of intercession for others in. That element transforms hi delivers even prayer itself from th of self-seeking. When you pra people your heart becomes tender more Christlike toward them.
pray for your enemy you can no hate him. If you bless them tha secute you, you find the way, oth so hard, of forgiving them. The Christian prayer has ever the out ing of the spirit in ministry and passion.

Not only so, but there are dee in praying together with others minded. Jesus seems to have ind that when two or three gather to in his name he can manifest hims peculiar power. How often hav proved this truth of the praye
There is one joy of the prayer clos another joy of fellowship in prayin one has never prayed aloud in a prayer group he has missed a sou riching experience. It is worth th ing. There is a special advanta the little groups that meet for pra a local church or at some quiet su assembly or religious retreat. S thing of the experience of the Wa Emmaus enters into the soul.
summer you may have such opportu
to be eagerly embraced, not negl as by so many nominal Christians have not entered into the deeper ex ences of Christ.

The Chain of Prayer Down the Sometimes one realizes "the munion of the saints" in the ete prayer cycle of the Church militant good sign of the times is the publica of many manuals of prayers of g Christians of various eras. Many these rebuke us for the poverty narrowness of our own praying and us out into new fields of intercessio

the world and communion with our L I am carrying in my pocket a little called "Fellowship Prayers," comp by Sarah T. Dickinson, which is a spiration. Any bookseller would ge for you for seventy-five cents (publis by the Woman's Press, New York.)

These prayers of real praying men women are transforming the pra habits of people today and mean m for the Church that is to be. In t prayers all the scattered branches Christ's body are one. The varied pressions of gratitude, of trust, of c secration, of enlistment for serv bring us in tune with our Father's w purify us from selfishness and gre and sweeten life despite its burdens a trials. Also let us never forget t prayer puts us into direct contact w the Source of infinite power. We "c do all things through Christ w strengtheneth" us.

e Christian Herald Prayer League

Christians are urged to unite with e members of the Prayer League ly prayer at the noon hour. Also e is at liberty to send a request for or an acknowledgment of answered , thereby becoming enrolled as a r of the Prayer League.

ME of the letters we have received uring the past week for the Prayer eague show the deep interest of iters. H. B. W. asks the League ay that he may somehow find to take a course at Bible School, er to be more effective in the Mas- ervice. R. S. R., Harris, Sask., : "Your prayers helped me won- ly three years ago." He requests r prayers, that he may be strength- and helped physically and men- that he may learn to appreciate the blessings he now enjoys, and e may love God and serve Christ . N. T., Saranac Lake, N. Y., or prayers for strength and faith ourage to undergo a serious opera- A reader in Portsmouth, Va., : "Please unite with us in fervent r for the outpouring of the Holy and for a revival of the old-time n, and that this chain of prayer encircle the world." Reader, enzie, Tenn., asks the League to for her nephew, who has returned the army almost a physical wreck t he may be helped, and, if it be will, that his mind and body may stored. M. R. H., Le Roy, N. Y., sses a desire to join the Prayer e and asks its prayers that he may a deeper consecration and im- d health, if God wills. Nine mem- of the Nutbush Church Sunday l, Henderson, N. C., have formed yer League and sent their names rolment to the parent League. ader, Galesburg, Ill., writes that quest for the League's prayers that ovies might be defeated in trying ure Sunday opening has been glori- answered. E. R. M., Ocean e, N. J., writes that her prayers been answered many times. M. ., New Haven, writes that some ago she asked the special prayers e League for her two sons and that as just had the great joy of know- that both prayers have been an- d. She wants to acknowledge s wonderful goodness. A young an in Washington, the daughter of sbyterian clergyman, asks for the ers of the League to help her to bear at sorrow, and a disappointment h threatens to shadow her life. ral letters announce the desire to the Prayer League. These have sent to the secretary.

F. B., a local preacher in far-away sh Honduras, who joins the Prayer ue in supplication every day at , asks the prayers of all God's chil- for an outpouring of the Holy Spirit he people of his village, who are and indifferent to spiritual things. l of God's praying ones will gladly nd to the appeal of Miss E. K. M., writes: "Please pray that I may be inely and publicly converted."

A. T., St. Paul's Park, Minn., asks cial interest in our prayers for the n to his mother of her wandering B. F. Taplin, who has not been d from for five years. Also for a dmother, who, old and feeble, is ken by her children.

rs. F. I. McC. asks that the use of cco may cease from the land.

and Mrs. E. R. C., coming to the ue with a request for prayer for own conversion, write: "We want e worthy parents of our children raise them in the right way."

rs. E. S., who asks the prayers of League, writes: "I am not a Chris- , but I don't know of anything that uld like more than doing something Jesus. I hope I can be of some help ringing some one to Christ." This r is surely not far from the King- .

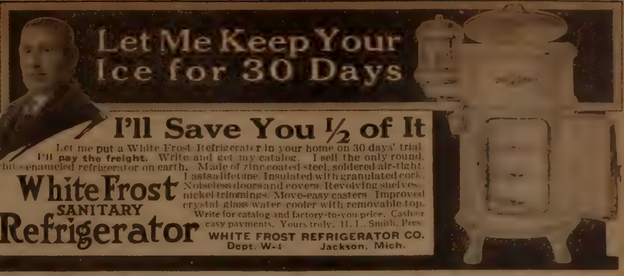
distressing letter from Mr. and Mrs. J. tells us that their three-and-a- -year-old boy was bitten by a dog, e brain, when examined by the e biologist, showed signs of hydro- a. They hurried the child to a Pasteur institute. Mrs. F. M. S. says: "The great desire of my heart is to hear from my boy, sixteen years old, and to know that he may be converted. I don't know where he is." Mrs. J. H. writes that her two boys, whom she has dedicated to God's ministry, are failing in their college work. She asks the prayers of the League that they may be led to see the necessity of greater application. A Reader in Red Wing, Minn. asks prayers for a brother who is one of the heroic band that is guarding the honor of the flag in Archangel, Russia. A Reader asks us to join in prayers for the divine blessing on the farm work of the coming season.

Among the individual requests for prayer three hundred and seventeen are for bodily healing; thirty-five for mental healing; twenty-two for restoration or improvement of sight for self or others; eleven for restoration or improvement of hearing; nine for deliverance from the tobacco habit; ten for deliverance from drink; one from drugs; eight ask prayer for employment; and forty for divine aid and guidance in financial affairs.

Sixty-eight ask prayer for spiritual blessing for themselves or others; forty-two parents ask prayer for the conversion of children; sixteen wives, for conversion of husbands; one husband, for conversion of wife; eighteen friends, for conversion of brothers, and three for conversion of sisters; thirty-seven for conversion of other relatives or friends; twenty-three ask prayer for the restoration of estranged friends and relatives, and seven ask prayer for their own conversion.

Forty-three ask prayer for the granting of various desires and needs. One asks united prayer for this nation. A Subscriber for 24 years asks special prayer for forgiveness for a particular sin. A Christian preacher asks prayer for the divine blessing on his ministry. Two ask prayer for a blessing on the Prayer League. Five ask to be delivered from secret troubles. Two ask to be protected from bad influences. Three ask prayer for the granting of an unspoken request. Requests for prayer for revivals and reforms come from Barry, Minn.; Wellesley, Ontario, Canada; Green Lake County, Wis.; Manatee, British Honduras; New Cambria, Mo.; Ridge, Mont.; Sugar Grove, Ill.; Camden, N. Y.; Seadrift, Texas; Markesan, Wis.; Barry, Minn.; Nashua, N. H.; Muskegon, Mich.; New Albany, Miss.; Petersburg, Va.; Rollo, N. D.; Clymer, Pa.; Rock Hill, S. C.; Detroit, Mich.; Jesup, Iowa; Athol, Idaho; Barry, Wash.; Glendin, Mont. (in the United Brethren Church); Elmhurst, Ill.; Chicago, Ill.; West End, Gastonia, N. C.; Wakulla, N. C.; Barry, Texas. An unknown petitioner asks prayer that a revival of religion may come upon "our river."

Acknowledgments of answered prayers have been received from Reader, Greene, N. Y.; H. E. C., Iowa; E. P. T., Maxton, N. C.; M. M. C., Selma, Calif.; Mrs. I. E., Van Etten, N. Y.; E. B. C., Nottawa, Mich.; M. E. M., South Bethlehem, N. Y.; Mother, Oakland, Ore.; Mrs. F. I. M., Sheridan, Mont.; Mrs. D. L., Pawtucket, R. I.; Miss E. K. S., Hagerstown, Md.; Mrs. M. S. E., Garfield, Wash.; Praying Friend, Richmond, Va.; M. A. W., Dixie, Wash.; Member, Senoia, Ga.; Mrs. S., Barnes City, Ia.; Reader, Winston-Salem, N. C.; M. D. C., Riverport, Nova Scotia; Reader, Chino, Calif.; Miss A. L. Creston, Iowa; R. I., Harlan, Iowa; C. W., Wooster, Ohio; Mrs. J. C., Cold Spring Harbor, N. Y.; H. B. T., Norfolk, Va.; Mrs. M. C., Muskegon, Mich.; Mrs. A. W. H., Indianapolis, Ind.; Mrs. M. A. A., Pittsfield, N. H.; Mrs. M. E., Pineville, W. Va.; J. H., Anoka, Minn.; Mrs. J. B. M., Geneseo, N. Y.; A Friend, Maine; Mrs. B. L. R., Princess Anne, Va.; A Reader, Red Wing, Minn.; A. C. A., Moreland, Ga.; M. K. F., Cambridge Springs, Pa.; Mrs. F. Z., Glencoe, Minn.; Mrs. C. B. R., East Stroudsburg, Pa.; J. D. M., Conway, Ark.; E. C. Earlham, Iowa; H. M. E., Pittsburg, Pa.; Troubled, Stockbridge, Mass.; Mrs. E. A. K., Omaha, Neb.; C. B., Madrid, Iowa; Mrs. C. H., Elwood City, Pa.; Mrs. M. J. T., Port Wade, N. J.



Let Me Keep Your Ice for 30 Days

I'll Save You ½ of It

Let me put a White Frost Refrigerator in your home on 30 days' trial. I'll pay the freight. Write and get my catalog. I sell the only round, white enameled refrigerator on earth. Made of zinc coated steel, soldered air-tight. Lasts a lifetime. Insulated with granulated cork. Noiseless doors and covers. Revolving shelves, nickel trimmings. Move-easy casters. Improved crystal glass water cooler with removable top. Write for catalog and factory-to-you price. Cash or easy payments. Yours truly, H. L. Smith, Pres.

White Frost
SANITARY
Refrigerator

WHITE FROST REFRIGERATOR CO.
Dept. W-4 Jackson, Mich.

Heal Itching Skins With Cuticura

All druggists: Soap 25, Ointment 25 & 50, Talcum 25. Sample each free of "Cuticura, Dept. M, Boston."

YOU CAN RECOVER IT YOURSELF
AND SAVE TWO-THIRDS PRICE OF A NEW TOP

Ask for Catalogue No. 59

$6.23 and up
Parcels Post Paid

Ask for Samples of material.

New roof, and quarters sewed together. New Rear Curtain, Tacks, Bindings and Fasteners. All ready to apply. We furnish printed instructions with each top. Give us name of your car, year and Model number and we will quote you exact prices.

LIBERTY TOP & TIRE CO., Dept. K, Cincinnati, O.

Tell them the truth,—tell them everything!

He had decided to leave her—to save her the pain his confession would cause. Yet she begged him to stay—begged him to tell everyone the truth! It meant poverty, failure, disgrace perhaps, yet she was willing to share these trials with him!

The truth! What had he done? What terrible deed menaced the world of ease and luxury his daring had won for him? And why was she ready to sacrifice her name, her future—everything?

And why—but you must read for yourself this great love story by Juliet Wilbor Tompkins. Everyone will read "The Glory" for it is the latest novel by America's most popular woman writer. They will buy it next winter at the bookstores. But it is to appear first in McCall's Magazine, and you can read this wonderful full-length

$1.50 Novel for 25¢

This special 25-cent subscription gives you four big issues of McCall's, including "The Glory" complete, also 16 other absorbing stories, scores of articles, all the latest fashions, hundreds of beautiful pictures, housekeeping secrets, etc.

(35c. in Canada)

Read the Season's Novel-Success in famous McCALL'S!

To McCALL'S MAGAZINE
Dept. A12 236 West 37th Street, New York, N. Y.

I accept your generous offer. Please enter my subscription for the next four issues including "The Glory." I enclose 25 cents.

Name ....

Local Address ....

City and State ....

Will Protestantism Die Out In France and Belgium?

DEVASTATION and the high cost of living are causing more suffering in France and Belgium now than during the days of actual fighting.

Starvation, sickness and imprisonment have weakened the people. Especially is this true of the children. The death rate of very young children in the city of Bordeaux increased from 25% in 1914 to 81% in 1917. Europe literally has millions of young children who are half fed, half clothed, and who with diseased little bodies drag out a miserable existence. These little children were in no sense responsible for the war, and yet the heaviest curse of the war rests upon their little heads.

Will the Protestants of America permit these children to die?

If we can save their lives by our gifts, and do not, are we guilty of murder?

Protestant Pastors in Need

The nine hundred French and Belgian pastors receive as salaries just one-half that received by the street sweepers.

These men are coming back to their congregations to heal the sick at heart and to give comfort to all that mourn. They must be kept at their work and we Americans must give our money to keep them there.

Read This Record of the Protestant Pastors During the War

Of the 900 pastors, 450 were mobilized, 316 received citations for valor; 100 pastors, missionaries and ministerial students gave their lives for France and for US. Another hundred sons of the manse made the supreme sacrifice. The Living Church of Christ that inspired this type of Character must be kept alive.

Protestantism Facing Other Difficulties

There are those who want Protestantism to die out, those who are trying to kill it. Protestant refugees have been neglected because they are Protestant. Seven hundred thousand are practically dependent upon the Protestant Churches and these churches are without funds. Many are in ruins while ours stand.

Churches, Sunday Schools, Christian Endeavor and Epworth League Societies, Lovers of the Christian Faith without regard to race, creed or color, are asked to make a gift to the International and Interdenominational Committee on Christian Relief in France and Belgium.

THREE MILLION IS NEEDED FOR THE YEAR

This money will be used to

1. Supply food and clothing, furnish houses, make family life possible.
2. Restore destroyed churches and manses.
3. Assist widows and orphans and pastors who have lost all they had.
4. Assist hospitals and asylums, and for re-education of mutilated soldiers.
5. Restore Sunday schools, seminaries and other educational institutions.
6. Develop evangelistic work for the 70,000,000 people open to the influence of French home and foreign missions.

EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE

Rev. John Y. Aitchison
Prof. Jean C. Bracq
Rev. Arthur J. Brown
Rev. William I. Chamberlain
Rev. Francis E. Clark
Rev. Charles S. Cleland
Rev. Henry Sloane Coffin
Mrs. James C. Colgate
Rev. William H. Foulkes
Rev. James I. Good
William A. Harbison
Rev. William I. Haven
Rev. Hubert C. Herring
Rev. William S. Holt
Mrs. Frank B. Kelley
Rev. Frederick Lynch
Rev. Charles S. Macfarland
Paul G. McIntire
Rev. Eddison Mosiman
Rev. Frank Mason North
Rev. W. W. Pinson
Rev. R. C. Reed
Edmond E. Robert
William Jay Schieffelin
Rev. Charles J. Smith

SEND YOUR MONEY TO THE COMMITTEE FOR CHRISTIAN RELIEF IN FRANCE AND BELGIUM

Headquarters: 289 Fourth Avenue, New York City

George O. Tamblyn, Director Charles S. Ward, Advisor Alfred R. Kimball, Treasurer

Christian Herald subscribers may send their gifts to ALFRED R. KIMBALL, care of The Christian Herald

The Ancient City of Joppa

(Our Cover Picture)

IN THE days when Jacob's flocks grazed on the hills of Judea and when Joseph was garnering the corn of Egypt, Jaffa was a seaport with ships on the Great Sea. When Israel, become a nation, came into the promised land, Jaffa, then and throughout Bible times known as Joppa, was alloted to the Tribe of Dan.

When Solomon built the temple and great beams were required from the forests of Lebanon, it was to Joppa that the logs were floated and over the road from Joppa that the timbers were moved, by what efforts of man or beast we know little, to Jerusalem; but it is written that Solomon set aside threescore and ten thousand men to be bearers of burdens.

When Jonah tried in vain to run away from God and duty it was at Joppa that he took ship to Tarshish. At Joppa also Peter restored Tabitha to her good works and grieving fellow Christians, and there Peter himself received, at the house of Simon, the vision of the sheet let down from heaven and the admonition, "What God hath cleansed, that call not thou common."

In the year sixty-eight Vespasian destroyed the city, but it was rebuilt, and until the days of Mohammed there were Christian bishops in Joppa. In 1187 it was taken by the Crusaders and lost again to Saladin. In 1191 Richard the Lion-Hearted retook it and the English knights held it for five years. Later it became an almost uninhabited ruin, but in the seventeenth century it had again become a flourishing seaport. Napoleon took the city in 1799, in the Syrian campaign that marked the turning-point of his power.

In 1918 Jaffa was again taken, British troops capturing it from the Turks and Germans a few days before the capitulation of Jerusalem, forty-five miles away to the southeast.

Jaffa is built upon a promontory some 150 feet in height, giving it a wide outlook southward over the plains to Gaza, northward to Mount Carmel and eastward toward the hills of Judah, while westward the blue Mediterranean sweeps to the sunset. According to the painter, Mr. Roberts, the streets were narrow, mired in winter and choked with dust in summer, and the people were "compressed into hovels, which seem the natural nests of disease." The city of his day numbered some 5,000 inhabitants. Today more than 35,000 people live in Jaffa, which is a prosperous port, albeit the ship may not approach nearer than a mile because of reefs and shallows, and goods and passengers must be lightered ashore. A more or less modern railroad, said by some to number the spirit of Jonah among its properties, now connects Jaffa with Jerusalem.

The view, here drawn by Mr. Roberts's faithful brush, looks from the north along the curve of the shore. The figures in the foreground are Polish Jews returning home from a pilgrimage to Jerusalem.

* * *

The Liquor Exodus to China

A LETTER received from missionary sources in Shanghai, China, by Dr. Hervey Wood, secretary of the Native Races Anti-Liquor Traffic Committee in New York, conveys information that many protests have been made to the United States Legation at Peking about the exodus of American brewers and liquor dealers to China. The protest was cabled to the United States by the China Continuation Committee, representing a large number of missions in China. What is greatly needed at the present time by the temperance forces in China is an active, vigorous leader, who can speak with authority to intelligent audiences on sanitation and hygiene and also on the general evil effects of alcohol. They regard the present time as a good one to get in most effective work.

Eastern Engineering, the monthly technical supplement of the London and China Express, says that there has of late been a marked increase noticeable in the demand in China for cheap foreign spirits and other forms of stimulant, and urges that British liquor plants be installed wherever practicable.

Baby's Skin Doesn

You delight in the chubbiness c baby. Its skin is as delicate as a petal, and yet creased and rolled i down to the little wrists and ankl

A baby is constantly irritated friction of every fold of that flow skin, and its involuntary habits a rible discomfort.

When that pinkness reddens a and rashes break out, the overlap the delicate folds of the skin in its misery.

Kora-Konia steals into every fold and chubby crease with the s of a fairy's touch. Eruptive dist cooled, healed, and smoothed away normal rose-flush replaces fiery Healthy, soft-breathing sleep come heavenly little smiles.

Kora-Konia is an unusual powd taining several ingredients of reco medicinal value. It is antiseptic, all moisture, and adheres light hours, giving lasting relief.

There is nothing just like it for c
Everyone in the family will find it a frien

Send 10c for a Physician's sample.
full size box of Kora-Konia costs 5

Do You Chafe ?

Kora-Konia Will Bring You Blessed Relief.

MENNEN'S
KORA-KONIA
GERHARD MENNEN CHEMICAL CO.
NEWARK. N.J.
U.S.A.

THE MENNEN COMPA
NEWARK. N.J. U.S.A.
Laboratories: Newark, N. J., Montreal, Queb
Sales Agent in Canada:
Harold F. Ritchie & Co., Ltd., Toronto, Ont.

Earn Extra Money

THE CHRISTIAN HERALD needs additional representatives to procure renewal subscriptions. Experience not necessary.

A special proposition is ready for those who wish to build up a business of their own. You can put your whole time on our work—or you can work during spare hours.

Send a postal today for complete information of our special offer to agents.

AGENCY DEPARTMENT
Christian Herald, Bible House, New York, N.Y.

ft Corns Out With Fingers

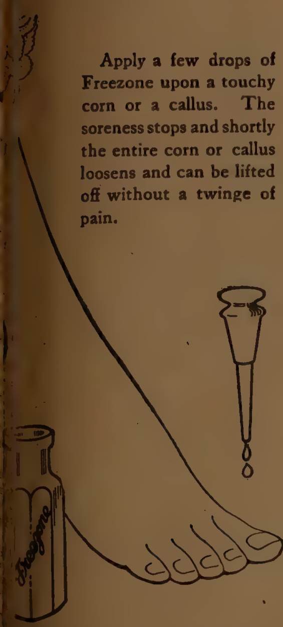
w drops of Freezone loosen corns or calluses so they lift off

Apply a few drops of Freezone upon a touchy corn or a callus. The soreness stops and shortly the entire corn or callus loosens and can be lifted off without a twinge of pain.



eezone removes hard corns, soft , also corns between the toes and ened calluses. Freezone does not te the surrounding skin. You feel ain when applying it or afterward. omen! Keep a tiny bottle of zone on your dresser and never corn ache twice.

Tiny bottle costs few cents at drug stores—anywhere

g Out the Hidden Beauty

ath the soiled, discolored, faded or aged com- is one fair to look upon. Mercolized Wax grad- gently absorbs the devitalized surface skin, re- the young, fresh, beautiful skin underneath. refined women who prefer complexions of true ness. Have you tried it?

olized Wax in one ounce package, with directions for use, sold by all druggists.

Become a Nurse

IF YOU cannot spend three years in hospital or are past hospital age limit, send name and address on postcard for yearbook explaining the C. S. N. Home-Practice Method of studying trained nursing. State age.

The Chautauqua School of Nursing
341 Main St. Jamestown, N.Y.

TENTS Send sketch or model for preliminary examination. Booklet free. Highest references. Best Promptness assured. Watson E. Coleman, Patent 624 F St., Washington, D. C.

A Great Gospel Summer Campaign

READERS of the Christian Herald are already acquainted with the religious work of the Evangelistic Committee of New York City, which has been organized since 1905, and doing non-sectarian, interdenominational Gospel service in the metropolis for fourteen years. Rev. Arthur J. Smith, General Secretary of the Committee, writes us: "Would you not be glad to ask the members of the Christian Herald Family to remember our work in prayer this summer, praying particularly for our workers?

"A Russian came to New York determined to kill a man who had wronged him. He attended one of our open air meetings, was impressed by the message and converted. He then sought his enemy with a view to leading him to Christ. An Italian, a leader of a band of anarchists, who was also the editor of an anarchistic newspaper, was converted in a tent meeting, united with a church and is now a missionary.

"While last year was one of the greatest in the history of our work in number of meetings, centers and attendance, we want this year to be great in spiritual power. The social unrest, the reaching out on the part of the people, foreigners as well as Americans, for something they know not what, presents an unusual soul-winning opportunity. The Gospel is the only message that will satisfy the longings ot their hearts."

This is a work which deserves to be generously supported, and it is specially valuable in these days of reconstruction after the war, when the spread of the Gospel is the best preparatory work for training in good citizenship.

◆

National Conference of Social Workers

IN THE forty-sixth annual meeting of the National Conference of Social Work, to meet at Atlantic City, N. J., the first week in June, many subjects of religious interest will be treated by the delegates who will be sent by churches and other allied organizations. The opening session will be a mass meeting with addresses appropriate to the restoration of peace. The closing session on Sunday, June 8, will be devoted to a discussion of the social consequences of national prohibition. Such subjects as Child Welfare, Delinquents and Correction, Health, Public Agencies and Institutions, the Family, Industrial Economic and Community Problems, Mental Hygiene, Social Organization, Immigration, etc., will be treated during the week by authorities of national reputation.

◆

Song Writer Active at Eighty

THE Cabery Presbyterian Church in the rich corn belt of Illinois has as its pastor the oldest minister in active service in Illinois. The Rev. Elisha A. Hoffman, during his fifty years of preaching, has found time to write some 5,000 Gospel hymns, many of which have been widely translated. "Leaning on the Everlasting Arms," "What a Wonderful Saviour," "Are You Washed in the Blood?" and "I Must Tell Jesus" are a few of Dr. Hoffman's hymns that have been sung by two generations of Christians.

Dr. Hoffman was eighty years old in May. The morning of his anniversary day he spent in his garden, hoeing. The afternoon he devoted to his pastoral duties. The evening he gave over to a community banquet arranged in his honor by the Ladies' Aid Society. Everybody for miles around attended that banquet.

Dr. Hoffman, full of energy and looking scarcely sixty, asked to what he attributed his health and unusual strength, replied: "God has blessed me with long life and good health, and I have trusted in him. I have abused my body with neither dissipation nor worry. Worry has cut short a great many lives, and is itself an abuse and a sin. He who genuinely trusts in an all-wise Master can have no occasion to worry."

Familiarity Breeds Contempt—

But Little Ills Are Now Known

To Be Danger Signals

It was not so very long ago that a cold was considered merely an incident, and, though troublesome, perhaps inconvenient, was hardly serious enough to require medical attention unless it was a particularly hard one. When, however, Pneumonia became more prevalent and virulent some years ago, folks began to recognize a cold as the invariable preliminary to this dangerous complaint and recognized it for what it always had been—a danger signal and a warning to busy ourselves with a treatment to correct it.

And now with the advent of the dreaded Spanish Influenza and the tremendous and fearful record of mortality it is but seldom we hear the old familiar expression, "It doesn't amount to anything. Just a little cold." To everyone now it is a Danger Signal demanding prompt attention.

It is most interesting and marvelous as a matter of fact, how faithful and infallible old Mother Nature is in throwing out Danger Signals to us of approaching illness. She is just as infallible as a perfectly operated railroad. And if we are wise enough to obey her block-signals, we can almost invariably avoid entering the "danger zone."

Just as does a railroad, too, Dame Nature requires a clear track and failing it she displays the most infallible Danger Signal of them all. Physicians are unanimously agreed that the great majority of human ills are super-induced by an accumulation of waste in the lower intestine—that's the reason that a laxative is almost invariably the first treatment prescribed by a physician, no matter what your complaint may be.

Under our present mode of living, there are few if any folks who are free from this accumulated waste—that's the reason that more drugs are used for this particular purpose in this country than for all other ills combined.

As usual, before any of these many ills develop, Faithful Nature throws out her Danger Signal, readily recognized in slight headaches, biliousness, constipation, or that feeling of inertia or lack of ambition which always accompanies this accumulated waste—For this waste is the most insidious and dangerous poison known to man, and when the blood in circulating takes up even the little that it does in passing near, the nourishing quality of that blood is reduced and all our functions are weakened, making us an easy prey to whatever complaint we are most susceptible.

Now in this time when we are properly trying to avoid dosing ourselves with medicines as much as possible, it would be sad if Nature herself had not provided us with a natural method of correcting our trouble when her Danger Signals appear.

And this she has done.

For twenty-five years, in a conservative way, Internal Baths have been gaining favor with the millions of progressive Americans, as their marvelous results in making folks well and keeping them well by the periodical cleansing of the lower intestine in a thorough though purely natural way, have become widely recognized.

For that period of time Charles A. Tyrrell, M.D., producer of the "J. B. L. Cascade," the really effective Internal Bath, specialized on this form of treatment and proved conclusively that contrary to drugs, the Internal Bath, with purified warm water, was a regulator rather than a habit-former and was the one natural, harmless, effective way of keeping the lower intestine free from this poisonous waste.

The host of people who voluntarily testify that it has made them well, keeps them well and has added fifty per cent. to their efficiency speaks more conclusively than any claims that its producers might make. A common expression by its users is, "I never feel so well as in the morning after an Internal Bath"—and that is simply because their entire physical structure has been functioning normally without the dragging, enervating handicap of the pernicious, poisonous accumulated waste.

Dr. Tyrrell wrote a remarkable little book on the subject of Internal Baths which is the sum of his experience during twenty-five years of his practice of this Nature method; it will tell you interesting facts about your functions which you have probably never known.

If you wish to inform yourself further on this subject, the importance of which must be decided by you personally, I am informed that this book, the title of which is "Why Man of Today Is Only 50% Efficient," will be sent you free on request by Tyrrell's Hygienic Institute, 134 West 65th Street, New York, if you mention the Christian Herald.

Knowing much of the progress and results of this method, I feel sure you will have no regret if you write for this little book now before it escapes your attention.—Adv.

Weigh what you Should

If thin, build up. If burdened with excess flesh, reduce! Have an attractive figure. You CAN—as sure as sunrise. Let me explain how 87,000 refined women have done this; how you can do it. Simple, sure, effective. All in your own room—in a surprisingly short time.

Be Well
Without Drugs

I build your vitality so that all sorts of physical ailments are relieved by Nature's methods—no drugs nor medicines. I strengthen your heart, teach you how to stand, to walk and breathe correctly. I have spent 16 years at this work—leading physicians endorse me. My booklet telling how to stand and walk correctly is free. Shall I mail it to you NOW? If later you desire my services you will find the cost most reasonable. Write me.

Susanna Cocroft
624 S. Michigan Ave., Dept. 18, Chicago

Miss Cocroft is nationally recognized as an authority on conditioning women as training camps have conditioned our men.

600 Shaves From One Blade

Yes, and more. That's the record of many men who shave themselves. Old blades made sharper than new—in 10 seconds. For all Safety Razors. Quick, velvety shaves for life with the wonderful, new

Rotastrop

Just drop blade in, turn handle. Nothing to get out of order. Machine gives "heel and toe action," just like a barber strops a razor. 10 Days Free Trial—write for booklet and state make of razor.

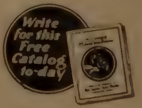
Burke Mfg. Co., Dept. 322, Dayton, O.

CASH FOR OLD FALSE TEETH, DISCARDED JEWELRY, ETC.

Mail us useless false teeth, (with or without gold fillings), discarded or broken jewelry, watches, magneto points—anything containing gold, silver or platinum—and we will send you the full cash value by return mail (and hold your goods 10 days pending your acceptance of our remittance.) Dun and Bradstreet References.

OHIO SMELTING & REFINING COMPANY
202 Lennox Building, Cleveland, Ohio

KIDDER'S PASTILLES Standard relief for ASTHMA (Inhalation.) All Druggists, 50 cts., or trial size for 2c. stamp. STOWELL & CO., 50 D Main St., Charlestown, Mass.



Write for this Free Catalog to-day

Adds Beauty, Value and Protection!

ENTERPRISE

All-Iron FENCING Chain-link

Your property will look its best, its value will be enhanced, and your buildings and lawns will be securely protected from trespassers when you enclose your property with Enterprise Fencing.

Erect that long-desired fence now! If you choose Enterprise Fencing you get the advantage of a complete line of styles, moderate prices, time-tested methods of construction, and prompt delivery. Erect your fence now—in time to protect summer lawns and gardens.

Be sure to write today for our large illustrated catalog, showing and describing all our many handsome styles of fencing and gates, and giving lowest prices. Sent gladly upon request, without obligation.

Fence Builders for 34 Years

ENTERPRISE IRON WORKS
2482 Yandes St., Indianapolis

MR. C. E. BROOKS

Don't Wear a Truss

Brooks' Appliance, the modern scientific invention, the wonderful new discovery that relieves rupture, will be sent on trial. No obnoxious springs or pads.

Brooks' Rupture Appliance

Has automatic Air Cushions. Binds and draws the broken parts together as you would a broken limb. No salves. No lies. Durable, cheap. Sent on trial to prove it. Protected by U. S. patents. Catalog and measure blanks mailed free. Send name and address today.

C. E. BROOKS, 498 State St., Marshall, Mich.

Free Book
Containing complete story of the origin and history of that wonderful instrument—the

SAXOPHONE

Easy to Play
Easy to Pay

This book tells you when to use Saxophone—singly, in quartettes, in sextettes, or in regular band; how to transpose from orchestral parts and many other things you would like to know.

You can learn to play the scale in one hour's practice, and soon be playing popular airs. You can double your income, your pleasure, and your popularity. Easy to pay by our easy payment plan

MAKES AN IDEAL PRESENT

Send for free Saxophone book and catalog of True-Tone Band Instruments

BUESCHER BAND INSTRUMENT CO.
259 Jackson Street, Elkhart, Ind.

Is your farm large enough for a tractor like this?

Or will a smaller $750 tractor do all your work?

A tractor can save money on every farm—if it is properly selected—or, it can prove a total loss if not intelligently handled and not adapted to the work at hand.

It is the business of the Motor Service Bureau, recently organized by The Christian Herald, to help its readers choose the tractor best suited to their needs.

If you will give us complete information called for on the following coupon, we will give you unbiased expert advice free of charge.

THE CHRISTIAN HERALD (Motor Service Bureau)
Bible House, New York, N. Y.

Coupon

Please recommend the size and type of tractor for use on my farm. The following information may be of use to you:

No. acres on which tractor can be used .... Nature of land ......

Kind of crops ....

Distance to railway or other distributing point ....

Automobiles or trucks owned by me ....

Make of tractor preferred ....

Approximate investment available for purchase of tractor ....

Price of gasoline .... Price of kerosene ....

Check which of the following power works tractor would be used for:

Silo cutting ..... Stump pulling ..... Wood sawing . Threshing Dredging . .

Name ....

Address ....

Young People's Topics for June 15

Speech, Wise and Otherwise

Epworth League Topic. James 3 : 1–18.

SHAKESPEARE said of one of his characters, "She speaks poinards and every word stabs." No Christian speech that, yet how often the thread of unity, so necessary to our societies, is severed by a caustic sentence or a thoughtless word. You ask why some former worker is no longer active and are told lightly that "He got peeved at something that was said." He may of course have taken offense foolishly; but what shall we say of the unbridled tongue that gave the offense? Some take pride in the hurts they have given by truth-telling, seeming to feel that by tearing asunder the fabric of the League with caustic statement of undeniable fact, they have assisted in the separation of the sheep from the goats. If they could only learn how true truths may still remain when spoken lovingly and with consideration, many offences would not be given. The tongue is a fire when unrestrained, a power for good when tamed. It has been said that we should think twice before speaking once. But most of our ill-speaking is based on thoughtlessness and on a desire to appear bright, a "smart Aleck" tendency that even divine love does not quickly overcome. When once the spirit of God rules wholly in our hearts, our tongues will be tuned to better harmonies and will speak peace to other hearts, instead of stirring up tumult; will be swift to heal instead of hurting, and will bear convincingly the Gospel message of redeeming love.

A heart truly inspired with Christian love will give the tongue wisdom and fend off foolish speaking. There are times when truth must be told fearlessly, but it may also be told kindly and with a consideration that will heal with conviction the hurt it makes. There are times when silence is better than any speech. Here, too, the Holy Spirit must be our guide. Syrus wrote, "I have often regretted having spoken, never having kept silent."

These lines of Langford's are worth pondering.

"Speak gently! 'tis a little thing
 Dropp'd in the heart's deep well,
The good, the joy, that it may bring Certainly shall tell."

What We Owe and How to Pay It

Christian Endeavor and B. Y. P. U. Topic. II Cor. 8 : 1–15

(This topic was treated in this column in the issue of April 19 as the Epworth League Topic for April 27).

◆

The National Bible Institute

THE National Bible Institute is planning two week-end Bible Conferences on the Foundations of the Christian Faith to be held in June. The first one will be at Wallace Lodge, Yonkers, N.Y., from Friday, June 6, to Monday, June 9. Reservations can be made by applying to Miss Amy Hillman, 214 West Thirty-fifth Street, New York. The enrolment fee is fifty cents. The second conference will be at Kitchawan, Westchester County, N. Y., June 20 to 23, and the enrolment fee is $1. Speakers of national reputation will address the Conferences on the subjects indicated in the call.

◆

Battle Wins Over Disease. In all past wars disease killed more men than military action. In the war just closed, the American army lost 57 men per thousand per year in action, and only 17 per thousand in France from disease and 16 per thousand in the army at home. The table of losses in the preceding wars is as follows:

	Battle Death Rate	Disease Death Rate
Mexican War.......	15	110
Civil War (North) ..	33	65
Spanish War	5	26

AUTO SUPPLIES BARGAIN BOOK
1919
Montgomery Wa
CHICAGO

FR
100
B K
L Pr

Auto Owne
Get This Big New Bo

Sit in an easy chair at home and buy auto plies from this Guide to Low Prices. Over selections to choose from. It shows supplies will improve all cars—and make them w more—gas savers, spark plugs, batteries, lights, painting outfits, touring outfits, etc.

Reduced Prices on Riverside
5000-Mile Auto Tires

Riverside Tires are now priced the lowest have been in months. This new FREE book all about them the prices prove Riverside T give you "Most for the Money." Write for your FREE copy of this book. Address house nearest you.

Dept. C 169 Montgomery Ward

Chicago Kansas City Fort Worth Portland, O

Do You Wan
a Better Job?

The man at the top is th because of what he knows, a result of the study and experie he has gone through. All the be fits of study are open to you, just around the corner, if you take the pains to seek them o

The FREE JOB BOO

points the way to him who wa to study, opens the door of kno edge, blazes the trail to succ It is the stepping stone of ambitious, the ladder to h who aspires.

Do You Want to Ma
Your Old Job Pay Mor?

The rule is the same. Kno edge opens the door to results. few hours, a few days, a weeks of study may add n dollars to your pay every day the rest of your life. Why not your brains help your hands getting ahead in the world?

The JOB BOOK is being d tributed, without charge, throu the Washington Informat Bureau of The Christian Hera as a part of its service to reade It is free, except for postage.

It is a guide book to the pr tical learning that will affect t pay envelope. It has 100 he ful pictures.

It specializes on pointing t way to men emerging from forms, but its advice is good anyone.

Send this coupon properly fill out, and enclose a two-cent stan for the book postage.

DO IT TODAY.

CHRISTIAN HERALD INFORMATION BU
FREDERIC J. HASKIN, Director
WASHINGTON, D. C.

Enclosed find two-cent stamp for return po on the "Make More Money" Job Book.

Name ....

Street Address ....

City .... State.

Send Your Order
NOW!

Every Home Needs
One!

THE History OF THE Great War

The Christian Herald feels that it is doing a timely service for its readers in publishing and offering a splendid

ILLUSTRATED HISTORY OF THE GREAT WAR

Hundreds have written to us stating that they hoped we would publish such a work. Thousands have already ordered the work.

Thomas H. Russell, A.M., LL.D. the editor-in-chief of this thrilling nistory of great world events, has done his work in a masterly manner and received invaluable assistance from governmental official sources, not only from our own, but from the British, French and Canadian Governments.

The Greatest of All Dramas unfolds itself in the pages of this work, so intense with the thrilling stories of eye-witnesses, that the reader gasps at the tremendous and startling spectacles caused by this war of many nations. Actual photographs, many of them furnished from the records of the Allied Governments, embellish the work throughout and are in themselves a great pictorial history.

Mobilized Armies Engaged	59,176,800
Casualties on All Fronts	33,500,000
Killed and Died of Wounds and Disease	7,781,000
Wounded	18,681,000
Prisoners and Missing	7,080,500
Cost to the Warring Nations	250 Billions of Dollars

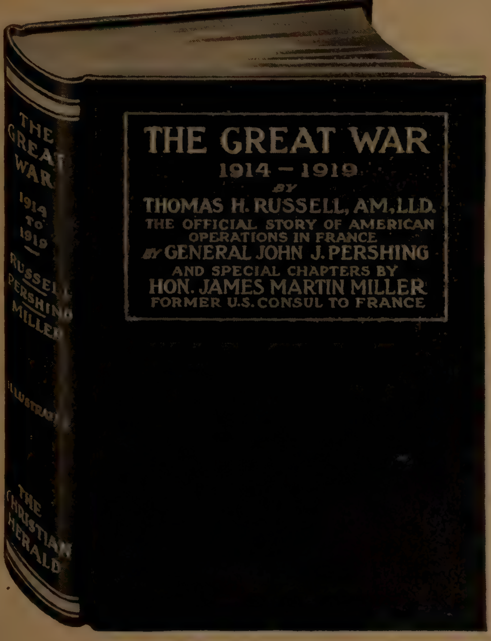
These are figures which surpass our wildest thoughts of numbers. They measure the colossal cost in life and treasure of a Modern War. This brief statement shows how necessary it is that you be informed by reading the latest work that will tell you by pen and picture, eye-witnesses and official statements, how the Great War developed from the early days of 1914 to the glorious victory of November, 1918, and how the boys of the United States turned the tide of battle in favor of democracy. The vast stretches of the oceans were bridged with ships in spite of the under-sea pirates, and America's millions were landed on the shores of France with a promptness and equipment that amazed the world.

WITH PEACE SUPPLEMENT

750 Pages Illustrated. Fine Cloth Binding, Embossed.



Eye-Witnesses on the Battlefields

Aside from the value of the history as a chronicle of great events, chapters are devoted to thrilling stories of heroic acts on the battlefields which command your admiration. These are personal experiences told by actual combatants in the field, both privates and officers. The prisoners of war have their stories to tell. The wounded who survive and the refugees rendered homeless tell stories that carry conviction with them and that would move a heart of stone. The fearful state of the battlefields is described by eye-witnesses. The story of the pirates of the sea, the enemy submarines, and how they worked in their slaughter of innocents, such as the ruthless sinking of the Lusitania.

General Pershing's Own Story of American operations in France is given in full, with his glowing tribute to our fighting boys. From a literary, authoritative and pictorial standpoint we cordially recommend this book to our readers as a compact record of the Great War and at moderate cost.

This history of the Great War is replete with authentic stories of the unforgetable events of the winning of Right over Might.

No American can forego this opportunity to secure a copy of this splendid book now.

How complete is it? you ask. Right down to President Wilson sailing for the Peace Conference.

But Here Is Our Further Promise

To every one who purchases a copy of the History of the Great War for $2.50, postpaid, The Christian Herald will send a supplementary volume, bound in cloth,

Free of Charge

to include the further history of the War since the signing of the armistice in November, 1918. This valuable supplement will not only include the report of the Peace Conference, but will have a

New Series of 32 Pages of World Maps, in Colors

corrected as defined by the decisions of the Peace Conference and the terms of Peace, and bringing the World War down to the signing of the Peace Terms.

The big book is ready and the supplement will follow as soon as it is possible to complete it.

CLIP THIS COUPON AND MAIL TODAY

THE CHRISTIAN HERALD 1919
2 Bible House, New York

Gentlemen:—

Please send me, pcstpaid, one copy of The History of the Great War, by Thomas H. Russell, A.M., LL.D., and others, as described in your announcement.

I enclose $2.50 to pay for the same. It is understood that in consideration of this order you are to send me free of charge when ready, your new supplement, cloth bound, giving the history of the Peace Conference and its decisions, as well as a set of new world maps in colors, with latest corrections as defined by the Peace Conference, together with further information about the war.

Name..................................

Street..................................

Town.................State

House cleaner—
Baby healthier!

THE wooden floors he's apt to creep on, the refrigerator that protects his food, the stairs he climbs on "all fours," his bathtub — all need the thoroughly cleansing action of Gold Dust.

For Gold Dust has a hygienic way of its own of dislodging dirt and dissolving grease. It helps to keep the surroundings of that precious "Star Boarder" of yours in a sweet, fresh, sanitary condition.

Read what the maker of a famous baby-food has to say:

> "Simply rinsing feeding bottles in water will not do. As soon as the meal is finished, the bottle should be rinsed with hot water and Gold Dust, otherwise the fatty constituents of the milk cannot be removed from the inside of the bottle."

But for real, sanitary, Gold Dust cleansing be sure it is really Gold Dust you buy.

FAIRBANK'S
GOLD DUST
Washing Powder

THE N.K. FAIRBANK COMPANY

GOLD DUST

Let the Gold Dust Twins do your work

NO WRAPPING—NO ADDRESS
A. S. BURLESON, Postmaster General.

Christian Herald

$2.50 a Year NEW YORK, JUNE 14, 1919 Ten Cents a Copy

THE MODERN OX

Vol. 42. No. 24.
Published Weekly at New York City by The Christian Herald. Copyright, 1919, The Christian Herald.

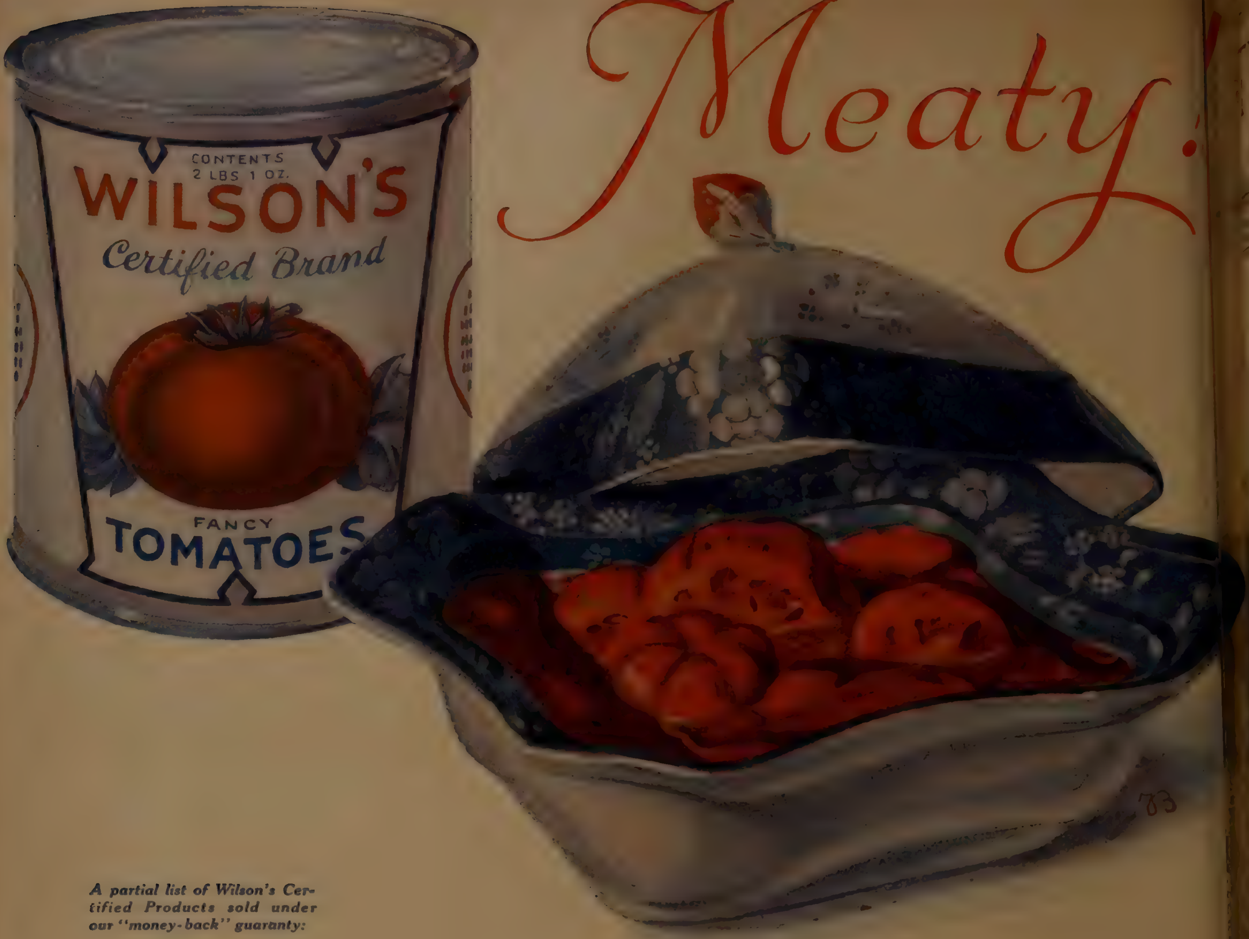
In This Number

Heavy Hauling on the Farm

The Motor in Present Day Agriculture

Entered as Second Class Matter, January 25, 1909, at the Post Office at New York, under the act of March 3, 1879.

Meaty!



A partial list of Wilson's Certified Products sold under our "money-back" guaranty:

- Sweet Corn
- Green Peas
- Tomatoes
- String Beans
- Beets
- Pork and Beans
- Leaf Spinach
- Asparagus Tips
- California Peaches
- Pineapple
- Cherries
- Blueberries
- Raspberries
- Strawberries
- Pumpkin
- Catsup
- Chili Sauce
- Jellies
- Jams
- Preserves
- Peanut Butter
- Mince Meat
- Olives
- Sardines
- Salmon
- Ox Tongue
- Veal Loaf
- Oleomargarine
- Ham
- Bacon
- Coffee

WHEN you open a can of Wilson's Certified Tomatoes yo see instantly why they deserve not only our certified labe but the "money-back" guaranty which it carries.

Big, firm, plump, ruddy tomatoes, they are—grown from seed o our selection—gathered and put up in their full-ripe freshnes and flavor. Their fine quality appeals to you immediately.

Like all foods bearing the Wilson label, they have been selected handled and prepared with respect—such respect and care as you own mother would show were she to put them up for you herself

Ask your dealer for Wilson's Certified canned fruits, vegetables, and table specialties, as well as for Wilson's Certified Ham and Bacon. If he does not yet have them in stock, we can supply him at once as our distribution is national.

"This mark WILSON & CO. your guarantee"
CHICAGO

The Wilson Label Protects Your Table

THE CHRISTIAN HERALD
AN ILLUSTRATED NEWS WEEKLY FOR THE HOME

SUBSCRIPTION, $2.50 PER ANNUM
PUBLISHED 52 TIMES A YEAR

GRAHAM PATTERSON
Publisher

GEORGE H. SANDISON
Managing Editor

VOL. 42—NO. 24. PRICE 10 CENTS
OFFICES: BIBLE HOUSE, NEW YORK

AMERICA SPANS THE SEA

© International Film Service

The N.C.-4, American conqueror of the air above the sea, landing at Horta, Island of Azores

ONE of the great adventures which marks the path of human progress was accomplished in the transatlantic air flight, in which the laurels of victory have fallen our American aviators. Lieutenant-Commander ead and his crew of argonauts of the air sought a easure more precious than the golden fleece. Flyg unerringly through fog and nasty weather, they irst out of the enveloping mist above the harbor Plymouth on May 31, and circling gracefully, in mpany with the British flying escort which had ne out to meet them, and which looked like swalws beside the great bulk of the NC-4, brought their gosy to rest on the smooth waters of Plymouth arbor, at 2:24 P.M. Greenwich time. The search for e golden fleece was a merry tale that was told, but e struggle for mastery of the air combines the mysry of magic, the impossibility of mythology, and e certainty of science. It was the latter element, us American grit and resource, American faith and aring, which made the trail through the uncharted her above the seas. The total flight from Rockaay to Plymouth was 3,925 sea miles, covered in 7 hours and 16 minutes of actual flying time.

Two mechanical contrivances helped Read and his avigator to keep the course and to reach their sucessive destinations. One was a sextant in which a ubble replaced the horizon, the height of flying deroying the mathematical relations of the true horion. The other was a directional wireless by which e wireless calls of the destroyers recorded the diection from which they came, enabling the pilot of he speeding plane to steer unerringly toward the ender.

Plymouth had been waiting for the American fliers, nd the bulletins, announcing the steady flight from errol and the ever nearer approach of the big winged oat, were read eagerly. All eyes were strained seaard, and at 2:21 P.M. someone cried her approach. ancy circled over the harbor to locate her mooring, then dropped gracefully to the water, making a erfect landing near the buoy while the crowd on the arbor front cheered themselves hoarse, and the haror craft tied down their whistles to make the welome noisy. A tender from the Aroostook took off the rew while British flying boats, of the escort, swept nto the Cattewater and drew up alongside the NC-4.

Commander Read and his fellow fliers were given brief reception on the U. S. S. Rochester, then went o the Aroostook, where they changed from flying lothes to uniform. Then they went ashore to receive, at the Mayflower Stone, the official welcome of the city from which the Pilgrims of 1620 set sail upon voyage as hazardous and uncertain, but as victorious in its outcome as that of Lieutenant-Commander Read.

The Royal garrison artillery band played the "Star Spangled Banner" and "God Save the King" as the visitors' boat came alongside the pier, and a guard of honor of bluejackets was drawn up on the pier, under a canopy of Allied flags.

The Mayor in cocked hat and crimson fur-lined robe, with a heavy gold Mayoralty chair, and with three mace bearers, was accompanied by the Deputy Mayor in a purple robe and the town clerk in a powdered wig.

British and American officers stood with the Mayor to receive the crew. The Mayor said in greeting:

"Plymouth is always a point of historic interest to Americans. The memorable sailing of the Pilgrim Fathers from this spot, though comparatively unnoticed at the time, was an event which has proved to be a point in history of immeasurable interest. Mainly out of that small beginning a mighty people has sprung up, and today, in most dramatic fashion, their descendants have crossed back to us in a way never dreamed of by our forefathers.

"While science has made their flight possible, the great note of the achievement is that it was the old spirit of daring, courage, and enterprise which brought success.

"I am satisfied that the events we are celebrating today are but the precursors of further great developments, and that your achievement will go down in history not only as a great triumph over the elements but as tending to strengthen the relationship between the two countries. Gentlemen, I salute you and welcome you to England."

After the address the men were banqueted by the Royal Air Force, following a triumphal progress through the streets of Plymouth.

The President sent a cable of congratulations from Paris, and Secretary Daniels wired felicitations from Washington.

There was a suggestion that the NC-4 might fly home, but as this would necessitate refueling at sea, the bucking of head winds and the possible loss of the plane, which it is desired to preserve as a historic thing, it was thought that the original plan would be adhered to, and that she would be disassembled and shipped back on the Aroostook.

On June 1, London gave Read and his crew, and the crews of the NC-1 and 3, an uproarious welcome. Lieutenant-Commander Read was borne aloft on the shoulders of American soldiers and sailors, while Britishers cheered one, two, three and a tiger, repeated. Harry Hawker shouted his congratulations across the bedlam. He had previously wired his congratulations to Plymouth. The Americans were given a brief reception at the Aero Club House, where Hawker was received, then went with Hawker to the Hendon flying field to witness some "stunt" flying.

After a week's halt for clearing weather the sea plane NC-4 took the air at 10:18 A.M., May 29, at Ponta Delgada, and dropped into the harbor at Lisbon, Portugal, 9 hours and 44 minutes later. Fourteen destroyers were stationed at regular intervals along the 800-mile course, and the flying plane passed over them with clocklike regularity. As soon as Commander Read's boat took the water at Ponta Delgada sirens of the United States' ships in the harbor at Lisbon announced the fact. The people of the city crowded the hills about the harbor and lined the banks of the Tagus to watch the landing. A squadron of Portuguese planes flew out to meet Commander Read and to escort the American flying boat to its anchorage.

Commander Read and his crew of the NC-4 were received as conquering heroes by the Portuguese people. The Portuguese Government decorated them with their most precious military medals. A great reception was given in their honor, while British and American naval authorities congratulated them by cable upon their success in completing the ocean flight.

The ocean span was completely American, an American plane, manned by a wholly American crew, making the success a distinctive American triumph. While Commander Read was completing his flight, Harry Hawker and his pilot and Commander Grieve were being received in England as conquering heroes, and commended not on what they had accomplished, but for what they had dared to attempt. Hawker's machine was picked up by a British-bound American steamer, Lake Charleville, which brought the machine and its mail to Falmouth.

Hoping to complete her scheduled flight on Decoration Day the NC-4 lay over in Lisbon until the morning of May 30. At 5:20 A.M. she was off for Plymouth, England, from which the earlier pilgrims started for America. But the pilgrims of the ocean air were not to have smooth sailing. The radiator gave trouble and the plane was forced to land off the mouth of the Mondego River, about 100 miles from Lisbon. She lay here until high tide at 1:28 P.M. and started again, flying 200 miles more to Ferrol, Spain, on the south shore of the Bay of Biscay, where she landed at 4:45 P.M.

The NC-4 remained at Ferrol over night and at 6:40 A.M., with her engines working perfectly, she was off for the 475 final flight. The Bay of Biscay was shrouded in fog, there were occasional rain squalls and the pilot of the big plane was unable to locate all the station ships, but he held his course. At 12:30 the big airship was off Brest, and at 2:24 P.M. she dropped gracefully to the water at Plymouth, where a hearty welcome had been kept warm over night for her and her crew.

Photo by U. S. A. S. Corps

Premier Clemenceau addressing the German Peace Delegation at the first meeting of the Peace Congress. The arrow points to von Brockdorff Rantzau

New German Government May Sign Trea y

WITH Brockdorff-Rantzau still finding new epithets for the peace treaty offered to Germany, which he termed "victorious violence," it appeared possible on June 2 that both the present German Government and the present German peace delegation would resign rather than accept the "humiliation" of signing the treaty. This would involve some delay while a new government was being organized and a new delegation appointed.

Count von Brockdorff-Rantzau was quoted as declaring that he would not sign a scrap of paper or a treaty that would lead his people to failure, and that the terms of the treaty are "a sentence of death." A strong separatist movement was indicated, on June 1, by the proclamation of a Rhine Republic at Wiesbaden.

The Allies were all ready in case Germany refused to sign the treaty to move their armies forward and to restore the blockade.

The German reply to the Allied peace terms, presented to the Allied representatives on May 29, was not made public, but it was announced unofficially that Germany declared that the terms of peace ignored the fact that Germany had replaced an imperialistic and irresponsible government by a strictly democratic one, and to have declared: "It will be difficult to say what different conditions could have been imposed upon an imperialistic government." It declared that Germany was entitled to a peace of right and was handed a peace of violence. The German answer was reported to include a refusal of the surrender of the Kaiser and other war offenders, a refusal to agree to the territorial changes without consultation with the population, and an emphatical rejection of the cession of upper Silesia and also the cessions called for in east Prussia and west Prussia. The German answer also suggested that Danzig be made a free port and that the river Vistula be neutralized. Germany also resisted the loss of her colonies, suggesting that she was entitled to become a member of the League of Nations and to administer her former colonies as mandatory for the League. In regard to compensation, Germany offered to pay in gold $5,000,000,000 by the year 1926, with an additional annual payment to bring the total to $25,000,000,000. Germany also presented a counter claim to an amount exceeding $3,000,000,000 for damages resulting from the blockade of Germany.

Germany also offered to disarm all of her battle ships in exchange for the return of some of her commercial ships, and to reduce her army to the number dictated by necessity.

Paris dispatches of May 28 declared that the question of Fiume and the southern boundaries of Austria had been settled by the Council of Four, that Fiume would be made a free state, and that the states formed from the old Austrian Empire had agreed to pay part of the Austrian indemnity in recognition of their liberation and to redeem the Austrian currency in circulation within their boundaries.

It was expected that the treaty would be presented to the Austrian delegates on May 30, but at the request of the smaller nations concerned, they were given additional time to study the treaty and the presentation to the Austrians was set for June 2.

The Peking Missionary Association on May 25 telegraphed to the Peace Conference in Paris that the settlement of the Shantung question had dashed to the ground the Chinese hopes, and that the movement in China to resist Japanese sovereignty in Shantung was the natural result of this disappointment, and was likely to grow and to seriously menace the peace of the Far East.

The Week in the World's News

THE DAY OF MEMORY. May Thirtieth, once the day sacred only to the boys in Blue and Gray saw a widened observance in 1919. In the processions which did honor to the noble dead, the now thinning line of blue was followed by the khaki-clad veterans of the world war, whose solid columns and triumphant bearing marked them the victors in Democracy's latest battle. Nor were the veterans of 1898 forgotten. Thus soldiers of three wars united, in city and town and countryside, to testify to a nation's gratitude and to assert again the spirit of the great Republic. In France, where American graves now mark our debt paid in full to France, every mound of earth that covered one of our boys was appropriately marked and bore its flowers, laid on by the loving hands of French women. And, even in Berlin two American soldier graves were decked with flowers by American correspondents.

President Wilson, in a Memorial Day address at the American cemetery at Suresnes, near Paris, declared that the men who lay there had fallen in a new crusade for "the cause of humanity and of mankind." He saw in the League of Nations covenant the legacy of honor of America's dead, and he declared that if the spirits of the men who had died could speak they would bid Americans forget the little circumstances of the day and be ashamed of the jealousies that divide them, and bring the counsels of men together.

REDS PLOT NATION'S OVERTHROW. The morning of June 3 brought stories of bomb outrages about midnight in eight American cities, most of them aimed at public officials and all accompanied by Bolshevist manifestations. In Washington the home of Attorney General A. Mitchell Palmer was greatly damaged and nearby homes were shaken, but with no loss of life except that the two men who placed the bomb appeared to have died in placing it. Their bodies were too greatly dismembered to make identification absolute. In New York a bomb blew off the first floor front of the home of Judge Charles P. Nott, Jr. Here also two lives were lost in the street, one of the dead being a woman. Identification was difficult, but indications were that they were passersby. In Boston the home of Judge Albert F. Hayden, was bombed. He had recently sentenced some Red rioters to jail. In Cleveland the house of Mayor Harry L. Davis was damaged; in Pittsburg, Federal Judge Wm. H. Thompson and Chief Inspector of Immigration W. W. Sibray were favored; and in Newtonville, Mass., State representative Leland W. Powers, author of anti-anarchist laws, received the respectful attention of the midnight bomber. In Philadelphia a Catholic rectory and the residence of a business man were damaged, and in Paterson, N. J., a silk manufacturer's home was partly wrecked. There was no loss of life in any of the homes. In New York and Washington the explosions scattered in the street large quantities of a leaflet headed "Plain Words" that announced the fact of the proletariat revolution against the "democratic lords of the autocratic republic."

REVOLT MENACES REDS. On May 28 Bolshevist wireless dispatches reported revolution against Soviet rule in the neighborhood of Odessa on the part the Ukrainian troops, and northwest of Petrograd und Lake Onega, where positions were occupied by orth Russian and Allied troops. The Reds were stil tiring under pressure of the Esthonians sou of Petrograd.

CANADIAN STRIKE SPREADS. On May 28 the na- dian Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen offer the services of their officers as mediators of the g ral strike in Winnipeg. The strike was threaten to spread to all the cities of western Canada. The us- trial ferment in Canada also extended eastw to Toronto where it was evidenced on May 30 by all for a general strike to support the metal worke a demand for a 44-hour week and the Govern al recognition of the right of collective bargaining. he strike proved to be something less than general, w- ever, only 10,000 going out, the life of the city ng little affected. Meanwhile in Winnipeg, whe he fever originated, the strike was waning, and ne ia- tions promising its end were in progress.

EUROPE'S LABOR TROUBLES. On May 26 thou ds of discharged soldiers and sailors out of employm in London marched toward the House of Common nd being stopped by the police started for Buckin m Palace. Similar demonstrations were held thr n- out Great Britain by the country's unemployed. he alliance of railway men, coal miners, and tran rt workers were reported to be planning a new ge l strike, the trouble being complicated by a thre of the police departments to join the strike. Fran A. Vanderlip of the National City Bank of New k, recently returned from four months in Europe, s k- ing in New York, on May 26, declared that all o - rope was paralyzed; that Britain was on the ver of revolution, and that the Italians dare not demo e their army, because there was no work for the - charged soldiers; that France had been literally d white, and that Spain had a Bolshevist cance Barcelona which defied all authority. He said Europe was threatened with a social overthrow, b t was his opinion that American credit, American go , and American cooperation would help both our A s and our former enemies to regain their balance to restore normal conditions without a catacly .

PADEREWSKI DENIES POGROMS. Premier Pade ski of Poland, in Paris, on May 28, declared that reports, of pogroms in Poland were due to Ger propaganda which was twisting battles with Bolshev into pogroms. On May 31 Premier Paderewski he would ask President Wilson to appoint an Am can Committee to make a full investigation.

REVIVING KUKLUX. In a revival of the Kuk Klan in Putnam Co., Ga., 5 negro churches, 2 ne schools and a negro lodge hall were set on fire at same hour on May 28, One of the churches stroyed was Ward's Chapel given to the negroes the white people over 100 years ago. The white peo of Putnam Co. immediately organized to punish t men responsible for the outrage, and raised $1 as a reward for the offenders and $3,000 to help t negroes in rebuilding the churches.

THE VICTORY LOAN. The total subscription to t Victory Loan was $5,229,908,300, an over subscri tion of $749,908,300. Twelve million persons su scribed to the Loan.

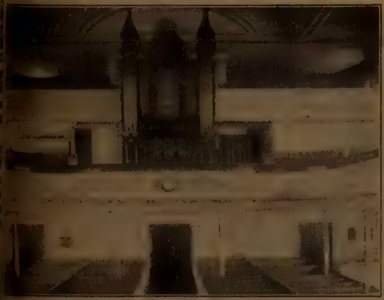
A CENTURY OF CHRISTIAN SERVICE

By LOUIS E. ORCUTT

ALTHOUGH many thousands have without doubt sought America's shores for the personal prosperity they expected to find here, the fact is indisputable that the great majority ur earliest settlers came, primarily, in search of rty of conscience. The Puritans of New England, Huguenots of the Carolinas, the Churchmen of ginia, the Friends of Pennsylvania, all left their ive countries and braved the stormy passage of the antic that they might be true to the faiths they d. The Dutch burghers who first settled New k had perhaps less religious motive for their emi- tion than the others, for Holland granted men rty of belief, but though the profits of trade and chandising impelled them, they too brought to erica their solid religious customs.

mong the families who kept alive the vital Cal- ism of the Reformed Dutch faith none was more stant than the Rutgers. Yet there was no narrow tarianism in their faith. About 1816 Henry Rut- s, Revolutionary fighter and broad visioned citizen, of his line, decided to add to the ever expanding of New York his farm in the Seventh Ward. He out a street parallel to Park Row and the Bowery gave three sites along this street to churches. e of these sites was at Henry and Market Streets, was accepted by the Dutch Reformed Church; others went to the Presbyterians and Baptists. e Presbyterian Church moved uptown, and the ilding, after being for a time privately owned, is w used by the Catholics. The Baptist Church is o gone. But the church erected in 1819 ll stands, still serves, is still Protestant, d looks forward to more years of service, future being amply guaranteed by the omise of the present. But this church no ger houses a Reformed Dutch Congregation; is today the Presbyterian Church of the Sea d Land.

THE site of the church was admirably located. Just a block west stood the Bull's ead tavern, which marked the first stop of the tward bound and the last stop, before City ll, of the inward bound Boston coaches. day the square, which once resounded with e stamp of hoofs, the clank of harness and the are of horns, is filled with a great station and ssing of the elevated lines. Though its ises have multiplied, they are quite different. e roar of the elevated, the clang of the start- g-bells, the shrill whistle for the switch, the nking of auto horns in the street and the mor of the surface cars for right of way rough crowding traffic, create a volume of und that would have made the noisiest day the history of the old tavern seem like a untry Sunday. The site of the tavern is now part of the entrance to the great Manhattan idge. Adjoining the church property was e orchard, on one of whose trees the patriot than Hale was hanged. Not far away stood e Franklin House, in which President Wash- gton lived for a time. At the foot of Pike reet, not far from Market, Robert Fulton built e little steamship which revolutionized river affic over the world, and at the same dock the vannah tied up when she came back from her p across the Atlantic. This shore front with shipping was destined to bear a close relation the edifice built in 1819 to house the aris- cratic Dutch Reformed congregation.



The balcony, organ and slave gallery

The church edifice was planned by one of those asters of religious architecture (his name is not now nown) who made the early churches of New York e despair and models of later craftsmen. The main or of the auditorium was a little deeper than wide. he pulpit was placed a bit high, with a beautiful lumnated arch in the rear, later plastered over and ill later restored. A wide balcony ran along both des of the room and across the end facing the pulpit, e organ and choir being placed in the center above e entrance. Above this balcony across the end of the room ran a gallery reserved for the negro slaves of the church members. This gallery is still in place, but since 1827, when New York State abolished the chattel ownership of human beings, it has been occupied only by free men and women. In the entrance foyer a marble tablet bears this inscription:

FOUNDED A.D. 1817
Completed and dedicated to the worship of Almighty God, the 27th day of June
A.D. 1819
on ground generously presented for the site of a REFORMED DUTCH CHURCH by Col. Henry Rutgers.

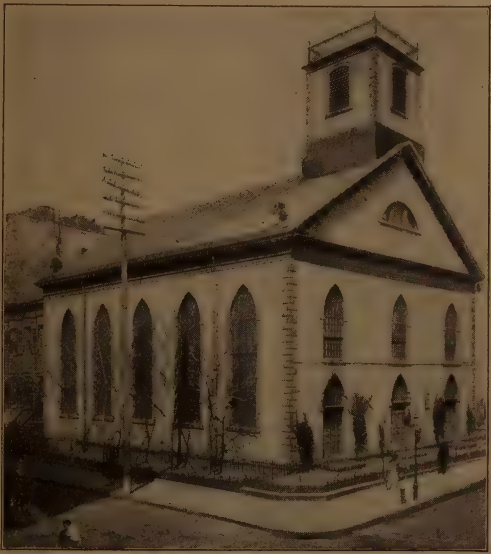
AMONG the trustees whose names follow on the slab are mentioned Dr. Philip Milledoler, one of the founders of the American Bible Society, and Rev. Samuel M. Matthews, who was a professor in the first theological seminary established in New York.

The church was seated and still is with the old-fashioned enclosed pews, each door swinging on hand-wrought hinges and bearing hand-hammered numbers but, though pews were rented, the democracy of later days was forecasted by a provision which made every tenth pew free. Today all are free. Facing the pulpit and flanking it on either side were the pews where sat the elders and deacons, in solemn state, setting an example of piety and a pattern of decorum to the rising generation, and serving silent notice on the preacher that his orthodoxy must be unquestioned.

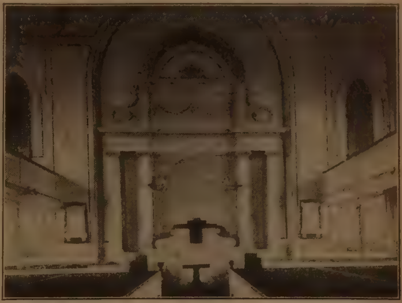


The Church of the Sea and Land

The first minister of the church was Dr. William McMurray, who served for fifteen years, and whose faithful labors are commemorated in a tablet placed on the wall at the right of the pulpit. Another tablet on the other side bears eloquent testimony to the church's affection and gratitude for Col. Rutgers.

The congregation was gathered from the wealthiest and best-favored families of the city, and for more than a generation the church flourished. Then the ever northward tendency of the city began to tell on the neighborhood of Henry Street. Business crowded in and one family after another moved out, until, during the pastorate of Theodore Cuyler, later famous as the pastor of the Lafayette Avenue Presbyterian Church in Brooklyn, the congregation seriously considered moving up town. Twice the question came up and twice the decision was to stay on. Dr. Cuyler was active in widening the outreach of the church, the galleries were filled with young men, the mission work at Five Points was aided, the Mulberry Bend neighborhood touched if not reached, and the old church lived an abundant life. But after Dr. Cuyler left, the work began to languish; difficulties increased, and in 1866 the building was sold to Hanson K. Corning. In 1868 Mr. Corning deeded the property to the Presbyterian Church of the Sea and Land, which was organized in the parlor of a sailors' boarding-house in 1864.

THE late sixties and early seventies saw thousands of sailors entering and leaving New York. Many of them were foreigners. The practice was to pay the men off and discharge them when their ship docked. When the ship was ready to sail again, a new crew was procured through shipping agents who "shanghaied" most of the sailors. Cheap saloons, gambling halls, dens of vice were everywhere. Everything possible was prepared to tempt the feet of the visiting sailors into wrong paths and to separate them from any money the chances of their trade had left in their possession. The Church of the Sea and Land was organized to give these men spiritual strengthening and material help. It directed them to honest boarding-houses and assisted them in many ways to avoid the pitfalls and sharks of the city. A line of godly men filled the pulpit and the ministry of the church became almost worldwide. One of the powers of the work for soldiers was Christian A. Borella, who always came to church with a train of sailors in tow. He later decided to be a missionary and went to Africa to run a steamboat on the Congo for Bishop Taylor, giving his life there.



The pulpit and pews. The deacons' pews at right and left of the pulpit are slightly raised

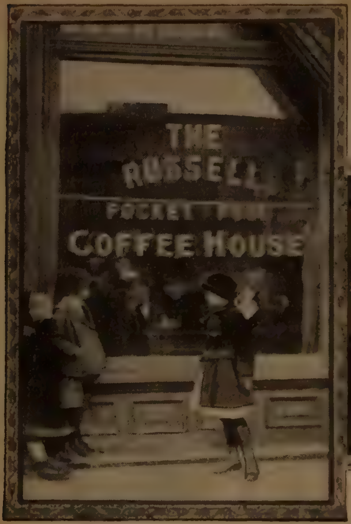
Gradually, through the change from sail power to steam, and through better seamen's laws, the old conditions passed away and the ministry of the church came to be much more to those on land than to those who sailed the sea. The Sunday school flourished; the church house was a center of neighborhood life; a fresh air work was initiated, and the enterprise assumed its present form of a church ministering under the plan of a neighborhood settlement.

On June 20, 1919, three generations of Christians, or at least representatives of them, will unite in praise to God for the spiritual vigor and faithful service of the church founded to minister to the rich, now perpetuated through a legacy from the sainted Borella to serve the poor, the unlearned, the foreigner, the teeming multitude in tenement and decayed old residence, and more especially the children of many races who will be the Americans of tomorrow.

THE pastor, Alfred D. Moore, and his two assistants live in the church in rooms fitted up on the Market Street side of the old gallery, with sleeping quarters in the tower beneath the old bell. Three young women also serve the settlement, living in the four-story Church House. This Church House is a hive of industry from morning to late evening. Girls' clubs and boys' clubs, debating clubs, guilds and other enterprises bring the children and young folks of the neighborhood and some of their elders into the house. Debates, cooking-classes, banquets and recreations, intelligently supervised, keep the young folks interested, and gradually Sea and Land gets an unbreakable hold on a boy or a girl and starts that one on the Christian way, trained and eager for definite service. The field is a difficult one. The population is Jewish, Russian, Scandinavian, Italian, Irish, and most everything else, with a sprinkling of native Americans. The Jewish and Catholic young people are drifting away from their own faiths, and they are very suspicious of any apparent attempt to make them religious. But they do like the clubs, the debates, the classes, the basket-ball games and the other clean fun. Friendship gained, suspicions cease, and many of them finally come into the church and make good workers.

Sea and Land is not a hundred years old; it is living in a new spiritual youth with all a youth's vigor, resource, enthusiasm and power, but with the memories of one hundred years of God's blessing to add assurance to its resources, to inspire its enthusiasm and to warrant its power. It is a bulwark of righteousness, a lighthouse of truth in a dark corner of the old city where dark forces, unenlightened by its faith and testimony, might readily prepare an avalanche of terror that would sweep over the home of Father Knickerbocker and turn its orderly life into a bedlam. Sea and Land is a barrier to Bolshevism, because it shows a better way.

Snap-shot of a coffee house in the foreign district of Detroit. This was formerly a saloon



How Prohibition Works in Detroit

By EMMY MARY RUSH

A former saloon which has been tran into a "Polish Liberty Club." Note cle

Interior of a Temperance Bar. Where beer signs and liquor bottles formerly prevailed we now find milk and ginger ale signs and candy and gum in boxes

THE question is often asked, "Does temperance pay in Detroit? Has the city of Detroit been benefited by the prohibition law enforced upon it by the electorate of the State of Michigan?" Yes! A thousand times yes! Most positively YES!

This question has been in the minds of the masses, for Detroit is the largest city in the world which has abolished the traffic in liquor, and statistics of the police department more than confirm the highest aspirations of those responsible for this condition of prohibition in this city.

The electorate of the city of Detroit, it must be known, voted against prohibition, and the cause was lost so far as the city was concerned. But, in submission to the voice of the state electorate and the state laws of Michigan, Detroit, as a city of Michigan, was forced to bow its head submissively to the new order of things, and became the largest "dry" city in the world on May 1, nineteen eighteen.

Before May 1, 1918, however, many private cellars had been amply fortified against the day of prohibition. But this supply must exhaust itself with time, and under the Lewis Law, making it a misdemeanor to bring liquor into the state of Michigan by any one whatsoever, this individual supply, once exhausted, must remain so, for it will become an act of felony to replenish the same.

During the interval of this first year of enforced prohibition, the city of Detroit has become a safer and a saner place in which to live, and thousands have been attracted to its gates. Although prohibition was not the only factor to this end, the fact remains that, owing to various causes, the industries of the city have taken a tremendous impetus forward, and prohibition is undoubtedly doing valiant service in the matter of improved industrial conditions.

It will be interesting to note that during the first year of prohibition there was a decrease of 1,043 accidents as against the previous year!

There was a decrease of 50 per cent. in attempted suicides.

There were approximately 1,000 less burglaries as against the last "wet" year, and during this last "wet" year there were 428 arrests for begging as against only 36 during the first year of prohibition.

Also, during the last "wet" year, there were 7,290 arrests for drunkenness as against 3,624 during the first year of prohibition. That there should have been any arrests at all for drunkenness during this period is due to the privately stocked cellars, and many saloons attempting to operate as "blind pigs," until police intervention put a stop to this illegal business.

There were 132 fatal accidents during the last "wet" year, as against but 84 fatal accidents during the first year of prohibition.

Street car accidents diminished 50 per cent. Accidental deaths diminished 30 per cent. Automobile accidents diminished 30 per cent.

From May 1, 1917, to May 1, 1918, the last "wet" year, the city afforded relief to 10,187 destitute families, as against but 7,628 cases during the first year of prohibition.

During this period in 1917–1918, previous to the death of the liquor demon, there were 92 deaths from alcoholism, as against but 17 the first year of prohibition.

The number of inmates at the Eloise Infirmary, the county poor farm, it has been stated, decreased 30 per cent. during the first year of prohibition, and there has been a like decrease in the number of inmates at the house of correction and the city jail.

Surely these figures tell the story better than words, although many chapters might be written upon the subject. The police department states that its burdens were lightened during this period of prohibition, and the labors of the city courts were materially decreased, owing to the decrease in crime and felony. The question arises, what is Detroit giving the populace as a quid pro quo for saloons and saloon rea-tion? No organized attempt has as yet been ade to fill this void in the lives of the populace, to actually provide a substitute for the saloon; it would appear that this matter is gradually, an naturally, taking care of itself in the minds of the peop and in the matter and manner of recreation sought er.

During the first year of prohibition many the saloons endeavored to operate as "blind pigs although displaying the cards of temperance drin producers. But the vigilance of the Detroit poli department soon put a stop to this illegal traffick in liquor, and today 75 per cent. of the former are being operated as legitimate "soft drink" pa rs, and in the foreign settlements of the city many saloons have been transformed into "coffee ho (similar to those in Europe) and restaurants, food is served according to the manner of the fo home of the populace. In connection with thes drink parlors and coffee houses, table provided for "table" games—che rs, dominoes, etc.—and in many cases a room or billiard room adjoins them. The remaining 25 per cent. of the saloons been closed out entirely and other bus has taken their place.

Recreation Building, Detroit

A Recreation Center

RECREATION à la carte is the l thing in Detroit, and to say th has taken hold is putting it mildly.

The lovers of recreation thought could make the pursuit of happiness a easier by combining under one roof al varied forms at a cost of $1,500,000.

For the billiard enthusiast there is n ending enjoyment. Imagine the feelin the billiardist when he gazes upon tables, the largest number assembled u one roof in the world. Eighty-eight b ing alleys are here, and when all the bill tables and bowling alleys are in operat 1,000 persons are being entertained si taneously. The temperature is ideal.
is automatically controlled by thermost and the atmospheric conditions are r lated by an elaborate washed-air syst
How hard and unfeeling the billiardists in regard to their supply of ivory ball attested by the fact that 100 elephants w required to furnish the tusks for this st of ivory, the value of which is $10,000.

In the billiards and bowling departm
there are special rooms for tourname with amphitheater arrangements.
ready we have seen some of the wo experts in both branches of sport enter spirited contests for supremacy.

One hundred thousand visitors thr the place weekly. They participate in these joyous comforts of home, select the one that makes the greatest appeal, a all for a nominal fee.

A certified accountant is required to ta care of the complicated bookkeeping in Sweeney-Huston establishment; one pers devoted all his time to counting cashie receipts and another to checking billia cards and bowling sheets. Some b little recreation parlor.

roup of French boys and girls under treatment at one of the American Red Cross Tuberculosis Sanitariums in France recovering from a malady that would otherwise take its heavy toll of life from this happy group

THE FRIENDLY CROSS

By Margaret E. Sangster

ven though in a foreign country we may land,
e Red Cross lends a helping hand;
ough headquarters are not near,
female representative is a dear.
hen a 'Blesses' to Base 41
here through windows all day comes the sun, ven though within walls we must roam, he dear nurses and workers make us think constantly of
home!"

THE above verses are, perhaps, faulty. They lack that technique that makes a rhyme into a poem. But the doughboy who wrote them as he leaned across the counter of a Red Cross canteen was appallingly honest. He wasn't striving after literary effect—not a bit of it. He was merely trying fittingly to thank the endid women who had been kind to him.

'I'm just out of a hospital—Base Hospital 41 it s," he told me. "And, say! the nurses in that hos- al treated me great! They're ular guys, th' Red Cross nurses. ne of 'em was so friendly and 'rested that you almost felt as if u belonged to each other—as maybe, you was relations!"

The Red Cross worker on the er side of the counter laughed o the doughboy's face.

'I'm afraid," she told him, hat you boys are born flatterers. hy," she turned toward me, hey are forever saying the love- st things! And the poems that y write—oh, the poems that y write! If my hair wasn't y I'd have my head turned by attentions they shower on us."

"Lady," said the doughboy, and spoke ever so seriously, 'we dn't turn your head—an' you ow it! That's why we're all so plumb crazy about u. We know——"

"That we don't take you seriously?" questioned the d Cross worker. She was still laughing.

"That you take us seriously enough," corrected the ughboy. "An' that you like us!" he finished.

LAUGHED with the Red Cross worker. But in my heart I was agreeing with the doughboy. For ad seen enough of the work done by the American d Cross to know and appreciate the value of liking an—and of not taking him so seriously that he is comfortable. I had seen a good many Red Cross nteens—a good many Red Cross reading-rooms and pply stations. And I had listened to a good many thusiastic reports of Red Cross kindness and effi- ncy—of Red Cross willingness to help—always.

There was the little canteen on the border between rmany and Luxemburg. I had stopped there be- en trains—not for long, perhaps, but long enough see and appreciate the affection that the boys bore he women in charge of that canteen. I had gone to the little clean kitchen where coffee and hundreds andwiches were made, and had realized the work t those women did—and had realized, too, that y enjoyed doing that work. I had talked with m and had come, through talking to them, to understand their attitude to our soldiers—the attitude of a glorified mother or sister. And I, who have a brother in the army, have often thanked God for their sympathy and ready tact and utter friendliness.

I myself have had three rather typical experiences with the Red Cross in France. I have tested their friendliness and willingness to help. And I have found that it is a whole-souled desire to be of service—not a play to the gallery.

THE first day I was in France I had a rather terrible cold. My head hurt, and my throat was sore, and my chest was one great ache. And, because I was alone in a large, lonely city, my heart was as sore as my throat. I went out, wearily, for a walk, and wondered, as I walked along strange streets, how soon I would die and whether they would be sorry back home when the news reached them.

In the course of my walk I wandered past a great building. It had once been a large hotel, but I saw that there was a huge printed sign over it that told the world that it was the Paris home of the Red Cross. I went in through the great swinging door and up to the information desk.

The Red Cross recreation hall in a military hospital

"What can I do for you?" asked the pleasant girl who sat behind the desk.

"I'm afraid," I told her in answer, "that I'm going to be very ill. I have the sorest throat! And I can't go to a doctor, because my French is very bad and I'm afraid that I couldn't make him understand."

Before I had finished the girl was writing an address on a bit of paper. "This," she told me, "is the office address of an American doctor that I can recommend. He'll make you well right away. And"—she smiled in the way that a good pal smiles—"stop in here in a day or so and let me know how you are feeling. And if there's anything that I can do——"

It wasn't much—of course. It was just the giving of an address, just the shadow of a smile. But the sincerity of it, and the glow of home that it gave to my home-hungry soul! . . . Oh, it's hard to explain what it meant to me!

Another time I was in another strange city. I had left Paris during one of its warm spells of weather, and the strange city had proved to be unexpectedly cold. And, because I had left Paris dressed to suit the Paris weather, I, too, was unexpectedly cold There was a Red Cross girl stopping at my hotel. She had the room next to mine, and we came to know each other during the first evening. Among other things I told her that I spent most of my time shivering. "But I was silly," I added, "to come away without a heavy coat."

The Red Cross girl agreed that I was silly. But the next morning the femme du chambre brought a great woolly sweater to my door. A note came with the sweater. "I didn't have one of my own to lend you," said the note, "but I went out hunting this morning, and finally found some one that I could borrow this from. Perhaps it will help."

My third experience with the Red Cross was on a train coming back from Belgium. I was tired and nervous, for my stay in Belgium had been a rather exciting one, and when an American woman with the blessed little red symbol on her hat got into my compartment I was overjoyed. I told her so.

"You know," I confided, "I was scared while I was in Belgium. My hotel was so noisy. I'm glad to be going back to Paris!"

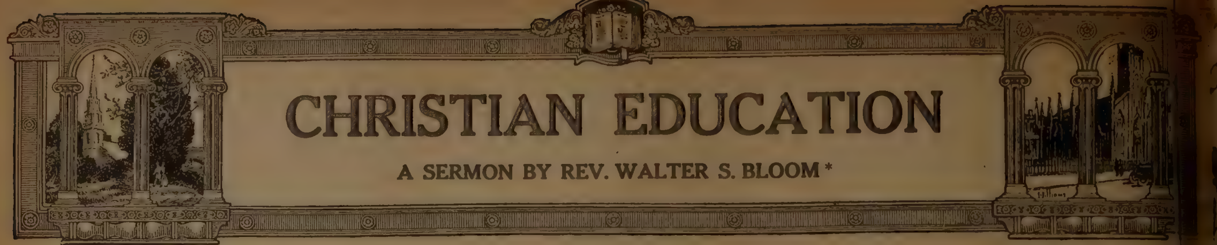
The Red Cross woman looked at me. "I'm sorry that you were alone!" was all that she said. But when our train reached Paris, very late at night, she came—tired as she was—all the way to my hotel with me. "I'll feel better knowing that you're in a safe place," she told me simply. "Me! Oh, I'm used to knocking about by myself!"

SINCE the signing of the armistice the Red Cross has considered carefully its future policy of operation in France. The necessity for emergency service has, naturally, diminished; but the Red Cross will not fail to do everything possible to add to the health, comfort, and welfare of the American troops so long as there is a soldier overseas. With its splendidly equipped staff, there are many other things that the Red Cross can do and is doing.

The canteen service of the Red Cross has actually increased since the armistice. Some of the canteens are equipped with infirmaries for wounded men going home; others are just cheery, friendly meeting-places. It is impossible for any one to imagine the good that these canteens do.

At the ports effort is made to supply the immediate needs of every man who is homeward bound. Particular care is given to the maimed and the sick, but, whether he is sick or well, the returning soldier receives from the Red Cross at the ports of embarkation hot drinks and food, pajamas, handkerchiefs, razor blades, tooth-brushes and paste, and whatever else is needed to make the homeward voyage comfortable. And, best of all, American women stand at the gang planks to say a final bon voyage.

"THEY'RE regular guys," said the doughboy, "some of 'em was so friendly an' int'rested that you'd think they was relations!" And he was right. The Red Cross is friendly and interested. And, more than that, the Red Cross is efficient and practical. It has been standing back of our fighting men since the beginning of the war—standing back of them with the right sort of service and encouragement. And those fighting men aren't the sort who forget!



CHRISTIAN EDUCATION

A SERMON BY REV. WALTER S. BLOOM *

TEXT—Prov. 4:7. "Wisdom is the principal thing; therefore get wisdom; yea, with all thy getting, get understanding."

THE importance of Christian education is emphasized by the almost universal recognition of the need and value of education, by its own qualifications, and by certain tendencies in present educational conditions.

The need of learning has been widely recognized in this country. Our national government first put its stamp of approval in an authoritative way on the getting of learning in 1787, when in an act relative to the Northwest Territory it provided that instruction for the young should be maintained therein. Later, in 1862 and in years following, by enormous gifts of public land and by generous annual money subsidies Congress provided the material assistance to popular education which has resulted in practically every state of the Union having a great State University open to all, where scholarships may be obtained by any poor but promising young person. Today no young person need go without this higher education for lack of funds if he have the energy, ability and ambition to take advantage of the opportunities so freely offered.

Such actions on the part of Congress were only a national recognition of that widespread, passionate desire for education seen in the early settlers of this country as it found expression in the many schools built and acts of legislatures requiring some kind of public support for instructors of the young. This was especially marked in New England. And this desire early led to the establishments out of which grew the old colonial institutions of higher education such as Yale, Princeton, King's, Queen's, Harvard and the rest. This longing for education has persisted, becoming crystallized in the acts of Congress just mentioned and in many others, like the establishment of the Bureau of Education to act as a clearing-house for improved methods and higher standards; and also in the acts of many state legislatures, until the country is dotted like a bright starry sky with elementary schools, academies, high schools, colleges and universities. This persistent longing is also seen in the parents who are willing to sacrifice themselves, working themselves bent and gray, denying themselves the pleasures and comforts and even the necessities of life for the boy or girl in school. Many of us today owe all that we are to such sacrifices of parents for our good.

In this great, persistent longing for education and in the provision so abundantly made for it we seem to have acted on the Scriptural injunction, "Wisdom is the principal thing, therefore get wisdom."

BUT a closer inquiry reveals wisdom to be much more than we ordinarily make it. One definition is this: "Scientific or practical knowledge, or learning." This I fancy is uppermost in the minds of many slaving to take advantage of the opportunities in our land for an education. They want, or they want their children to have, that learning of things, of sciences, literature, figures and methods that will take them to ever higher and higher rounds of material success. But wisdom is broader than this. Another definition is this: "The ability to judge soundly and deal sagaciously with facts, especially as they relate to life and conduct; knowledge with the capacity to make due use of it; perception of the best ends and the best means."

This opens up a tremendously broader field for learning than at first supposed. "Ability to deal sagaciously with the facts, especially as they relate to life and conduct" opens up the whole field of morals and religion. What are the best ends and means to these ends save the ends and means taught us in the realm of the religious and spiritual, in the sphere that deals with the inner life as the source and determining factor of the outer life? Thus wisdom consists not so much in the sciences and knowledge of things that we strive after so strenuously, but rather especially in the disciplined and instructed heart and spirit that shall govern the life and conduct of the individual as he uses his knowledge of things. Perhaps this phase of wisdom has been too much neglected in our striving after education.

Dr. R. F. Horton once said, concerning the training of children: "We often teach them to avoid the lie on the tongue, to put away from them the froward mouth and the perverse lips, and yet leave them with the lies in the soul, the deep inward unveracities which are their ruin. We often succeed in bringing them up as respectable and decorous members of society, and yet leave them a prey to secret sins; they are tormented by covetousness, which is idolatry, by impurity and by all kinds of envy and malignant passions."

All this reminds us of the broad meaning of the term "wisdom," as used in our text. With the Hebrews, wisdom meant skill in the knowledge of divine things quite as much as knowledge of the objects and materials of the world. Remembering then that the fear of Jehovah is the beginning of wisdom, and that a knowledge of the Holy One is understanding, we see that, much as we strive after a knowledge of things, sciences, literature, etc., we should the more strive to know God. "Wisdom is the principal thing; therefore get wisdom." But, further, the principal thing of wisdom is that part of it which relates to the knowledge of God, that part of it which deals with the deep questions of life and conduct, the best ends and the best means. In short, it is that part of wisdom which is covered by what we may call a Christian education, an education in the wisdom, in the knowledge of God as revealed by the great Revealer and Teacher Jesus Christ. Hence we can not emphasize too much that the widespread desire for learning by itself only impresses on us the importance of a Christian education, because, in the desire for wisdom, its broadest meaning, its principal part, its most important features ought not to be neglected. "With all thy getting get understanding," but with all thy understanding get an understanding of the things of God, an education in which the teachings of God in Christ as to the conduct of life are woven into the fabric of character.

THE need of such education is still further emphasized by its own qualifications. The test of any training is its qualification to accomplish the ends in view. When a young graduate of an engineering school applies for a position, the prospective employer wants to know whether the young engineer's training is sufficient or not. His diploma from a recognized school is his recommendation. A Christian education qualifies one for the greatest and most difficult task of life, that of being the engineer of one's character, of deciding questions of conduct. This is the most important task, though many young people do not think so. But employers are more and more insisting on character. They want to know your habits when you apply for a job. The army called for men of character. Every activity of life is calling for men of character. And a Christian education trains for just this task of fitting us to make manhood and womanhood what they ought to be.

A young man I know once applied for a position with a large New York firm. He was a graduate of a certain school that is distinctly a Christian school. When the employer received the young man and commenced his inquiries as to the man's fitness for the place, as soon as he found out that the young man was a graduate of this particular school he said that was enough. He did not care to question further, for he knew the school, he knew its graduates, and knew that they were predominantly upright, Christian men. He was convinced that training in such a school would produce the honest employee he wanted.

And the sufficiency of a Christian education for the greatest tasks of life stands out in bolder relief when put in contrast to the insufficiency of any other training. Any learning, no matter how great, is inadequate for the great problems of life so long as it is devoid of what Christ teaches. Here is the outline of the story of a father whose son had gone to war. The father in his boyhood days had been brought up to believe in God and in a religious fashion generally, but he said, "Sunday at our house was a dreary waste of starched clothes and idleness, and heaven was promised to us as one long succession of Sundays, with the addition of harp-playing and hymn-singing, both of which I cordially disliked." During college days he gained a broader view of things, and with something of pride threw over this ancestral notion of heaven and all his inherited religious belief. He became an agnostic and thus lived until his son went to war. Then with the possibility of bereavement being very near he began to think and to study the question of immortality, and gradually by stages that can not be enumerated here he came back to faith in God and in personal immortality. "I believe that now," he says, "it is the sublimest expression of the great truth which the human mind can conceive. The Great Intelligence is the Father, and my little groping intelligence is his child." He was a man ric dowed mentally and superbly educated, but learning without Christ was not sufficient greatest issues of life. Only Christ was compe meet all his needs.

Recently a great English thinker, a man position in the British world of education, gav statement to the effect that the educational of a nation must no longer be dominated by th of practical efficiency, but by the higher ideals such as those expressed in Christ. So test might be heaped upon testimony to show the quacy of the spiritual education, of training sin the practical, material knowledge of the world. education which is sufficient is the one which the proper place to the highest spiritual faculti deepest soul-needs of man. And that is the Ch education. Such, and such alone, is qualified t the needs of the whole life of any man.

THE importance of Christian education is st ther emphasized by certain tendencies in p educational conditions. There is first the utili standard that prevails. It was almost inevitabl the desire for a training merely of a practical nat training that could be directly transformed into wealth or power, should be met by a standard o cation of like nature. And this in turn opera cultivate, strengthen, and deepen the materi desire. And again, the story already told of the whose son had gone to war reveals the tendency modern educational world for young people to their faith in God and all their religious convi unsettled and removed as they advance in b learning. Just as their childhood faith in fair banished by a larger knowledge, so do they throw their childhood faith in God without coming ou a fuller knowledge. And, further, the cause of unsettling is often traceable to the presence on t ing forces of instructors who themselves, unconv and unbelieving, use their position to propagat belief among the young.

I have a friend whose daughter, attending o the most prominent universities of this land, re the atmosphere of some of the class-rooms to b rectly anti-Christian and opposed to any faith reverence for God. Because of such overturnin faith in the process of higher education, becau the prevalence of pernicious teaching, because o natural adherence to the simply material thing life, Christian education is supremely and pressi necessary among our young people. It is exceedi important that they shall gain a firm foundatio the fundamentals of life and conduct, in the pr truths of the Christian faith.

All this begins in the home. Religion in the h was the strength of the Hebrew people when t flourished. It was the duty of Hebrew parent instruct their children in religious truths and to that they were present at the religious services. I could say to Timothy, "From a babe thou known the Sacred Writings," because of Timot mother's and grandmother's faithfulness in rea him in the Scriptures. Jesus sat in the temple tonishing the scribes, not simply because he was su natural, but because he had been faithfully tau by a Hebrew mother of unusual piety the deep thi of God. Religion in the homes, a religious atmosph for the babes and the boys and girls, was the secre Israel's glory in her days of glory, and the secret her position for all time as the religious teacher of the world.

SO TODAY the beginning of that Christian train which is so supremely necessary is in the hom It rests with the fathers and mothers throughout land to teach their children the unsearchable riches Jesus Christ, and to see that they are brought up the Sunday school and church. The former with the latter is not sufficient, and the latter can be ma tenfold more effective with the aid of the former. we could all only realize how exceedingly important this religious fervor, this Christian atmosphere, p vading the home life!

A wise divine once said that if he might have t children up to the age of five, he cared not into who hand they came afterward. Lincoln said, "All that am I owe to my angel mother." The importance the religious influence during the early years cann be magnified too much. Why do not more you men enter the ministry or distinctly Christian wor For many reasons, but also for this; because

Continued on page 683

---

*Pastor, First Reformed Church, Hawthorne, N. J.

NDIA'S STRUGGLE WITH FAMINE

Mrs. Smith at the Day Nursery

Methodist Mission, Bowda Camp, India

Boys as they come to the orphanage because of famine conditions. Photo taken before they were clothed and made comfortable

Lacemaker, Ahmednagar

LETTERS from India received this week by the Christian Herald are full of forebodings concerning the progress of the famine in the t three months. Rev. Charles B. Hill, rman of the Christian Herald Relief mmittee, writes:

I fear that with the coming of the mertime and the rapid exhaustion of drinking er, we must inevitably expect bad outbreaks of lera.

The aggregate area in the Bombay Presidency ne, now under famine, measures 8,697 square miles erritory, with a census population of 12,050,000 ls. The area of food scarcity measures, however, ch larger, or about 55,694 square miles, and it has ery much greater population. The government is ng all it can to bring grain into India, and to supply der for agricultural cattle, while a food controller been appointed to distribute grain and to regulate es. In many places we are using cacti as fodder the cattle, scorching off the thorns so as to make vailable.

According to the government figures just pub- ed, there are now in Gujerat alone 15,174 persons o are too old or too sick to work for their daily d, and are being fed gratuitously. In order not to pauperize the people, the government has opened up several public undertakings such as road-making, digging wells, building reservoirs, throwing up railway embankments, etc., at which those who work may receive wages sufficient to help them to purchase food and clothing. At the present time there are 10,555 people here in Gujerat who are being kept alive in this way. Of course, the numbers in other parts of western India greatly swell these figures."

Chairman Hill also sends the following statistics showing the approximate numbers on relief works, or receiving help, in the provinces named: Bengal Presidency, 6,753; United Provinces, 24,870; Behar and Orissa, 10,776; Central Provinces, 46,416; Central India, 11,100; Bombay Presidency, 106,035; Madras Presidency, 7,194.

In the beginning of April twenty-four boys from the famine area found their way to the Baroda Mission, where they were received. Fortunately they were not emaciated, and the missionaries were glad they had received them before they had become weakened through the lack of nourishing food.

Missionary John E. Norton of Orai, United Provinces, India, is situated in an area where both crops this year have been an absolute failure, and the people are suffering in consequence, in spite of the government help. He and his wife are the only American or English missionaries in the district. He has written to the Christian Herald, earnestly appealing for assistance. Mr. Norton's father was an independent missionary who came to India about forty years ago, and was visited by Dr. Klopsch while the latter was in India during the great famine. The Christian Herald Committee has been asked to extend aid to Missionary Norton for the sufferers in his district.

Mrs. Edith Smith, of the American Mission Girls' School at Ahmednagar, writes: "I am just a teacher in our school here, and am doing whatever I can to relieve famine conditions, which are very bad all over this part of India, and especially bad in this particular district." She tells of the "half-starved beggars whom we now see wherever we go in the city." She also tells of the lacemakers, who in ordinary years

Continued on page 681

CARRYING HEALING INTO DARK PLACES

VISION was restored last year to the blind eyes of 10,000 men, women and children in non-Christian lands by medical missionaries of erican Protestant churches, according to Fred B. her of the Centenary of the Methodist Episcopal urch.

This single fact gives an idea of the great scope of work by American physicians connected with ssions in heathen lands. The medical missionary soon overrun with patients. His fame spreads. iends or relatives often carry a sick person many ys to reach him. He is called upon to perform ficult operations under primitive conditions.

In parts of Africa, for instance, missionary surgeons ve to treat a surprising number of natives who have en scalped. The scalping is done, not in American dskin style, but by wild animals in the jungle. ildren are frequent sufferers. Where the entire lp has been torn away, a satisfactory scar tissue ms after the wound has been dressed properly d the necessary sanitary precautions enforced.

Dr. John G. Vaughan, formerly a medical missiony in China, and now at the head of all the medical ssionaries of the Methodist Episcopal Church, ints a striking picture of the veneration and awe used by the white doctor in the East.

"Two relatives of a blind man in China often will rn over a bamboo couch, place a cushion on the ttom and carry the sufferer for a week to reach the edical missionary," he said. "We allow the relaes to stand at the door of the operating room. This to conquer superstitions.

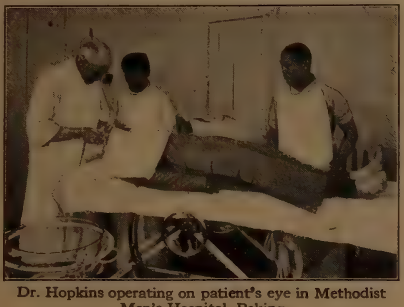
"Then comes the wonder of the anesthetic, the eping medicine. We hear them talking excitedly nong themselves over the fact that we are cutting e patient and he does not feel pain. They are at his dside when he recovers consciousness.

"If the patient is of the lower class, as is usually e case, he is much affected by the days he spends the hospital after his operation. To lie in a clean d, in a clean room, and have fine women bring him ings to eat and drink—all this to a man who has en used to being cuffed around is a revelation.

"In some hospitals we say a prayer before the eration, but not if we think the relatives of the tient will take it for magic, or the summoning of irits. While in the ward after the operation the tient also has a chance to listen to Christian teachgs, and we try to impress upon his receptive mind e benefits of Western civilization.

"He returns to his little village back in the country tell a wonder story. He is our missionary. I am rry to say we have not the facilities to take advantage of such opportunities. An evangelist sent back with a patient who has been cured could accomplish much in weaning the people from their degrading superstitions and prejudices, but we have not the men to send out. So most of the opportunities are lost.

"In all backward countries cataract is prevalent, due to the neglect of slight irritations of the eye. The lens becomes opaque. By a slight operation with cocaine—another wonder to the natives—we remove the lens. Then eye glasses with the proper artificial lens will restore the sight to near normal. Of course we can cope with only a small proportion of the cases among the teeming millions of the East.



Dr. Hopkins operating on patient's eye in Methodist Men's Hospital, Peking

"Trachoma is an even worse plague than cataract. The eyelids in this disease become granulated and deformed and scratch the eyeballs until the sight is lost. It is difficult to cure, but we do much to alleviate it.

"But perhaps the greatest problem is tuberculosis. Not that its cure in incipient stages is so difficult, but when we tell a native we are not going to give him any medicine and he needs only to keep in the fresh air and eat plenty of good food and rest as much as possible, he smiles incredulously. The white physician evidently is crazy. No medicine and stay in the open air? Evidently the white man is not interested in the case.

"You see, the Chinese believe the evil spirits that cause disease dwell in the winds. Therefore, when ill they draw their beds away from the windows and back into the darkest corners of the room, and then like as not put curtains around it.

"To combat tuberculosis the Young Men's Christian Association and the various church boards which send out medical missionaries have united in a campaign of education, which is the only way to carry on the fight. One part of this campaign is the circulation of thousands of posters showing in parallel columns the careers of Mr. Wrong and Mr. Right.

"Mr. Wrong lives in a dirty house, lets in the flies, does not get fresh air or exercise, and falls ill with the 'old sickness,' as the Chinese call tuberculosis. Mr. Right is seen in the pictures keeping his house clean, eating attractive, well-cooked food from dishes that have been washed, and enjoying the fresh air. The last picture shows a grave, with Mr. Wrong in it and Mr. Right standing beside it."

Dr. Vaughan now has charge of the examinations of candidates as medical missionaries for the Methodist Board. These young men must not only have adequate professional attainments, but show a good physique. They are inoculated for typhoid before going overseas.

The work is done in connection with regular mission activities, but the saving of the soul is never allowed to interfere with the saving of the body. Pagans and Christians are treated alike. Religion is not forced on the patients, who rather are led to admire the methods, the kindliness and the cleanliness of Western civilization, and so are brought indirectly into a receptive frame of mind toward the Gospel of Christ.

One of the most interesting of the Methodist Centenary projects is the establishment of a string of hospital posts among the Mohammedans of Malaysia. The Mohammedans are the most difficult for missionaries to approach of any religion, but the way is often found through the wonders of modern medicine or surgery.

Some more figures for China will show the stage to which the work has been brought. In 1917, the latest year for which figures are available, there were 351 American medical missionaries in China. The surgeons among them performed 29,675 major operations. Of those 4,232 were performed by Methodist doctors, while Methodist hospitals and dispensaries treated 24,133 patients out of 104,418 for all the mission boards.

Dr. Vaughan makes the interesting statement that more people in the world develop malaria in the course of a single year than any other disease; but tuberculosis is the world's greatest plague, as more people are afflicted with it at any given time than with any other malady.

CHANSUNG'S CONFESSION

By WILLIAM NEWTON BLAIR, D.D. Illustrations by THELMA GOOCH

CHAPTER V

Chansung Finds a Friend

AT NOON Chansung paused to rest, tired and hungry, by a deep pool near a small village. The pass now seemed to ascend straight from this village. He could follow with his eye the road, as it zigzagged up the mountain, by the bushes at the side and the rocks piled up to make a bed for the trail.

"How can I ever climb that?" he said aloud to himself as tired people will. "If only I had something to eat!"

As if from the clear depths of the pool below, the answer came back: "Well, well! Is it as bad as that?"

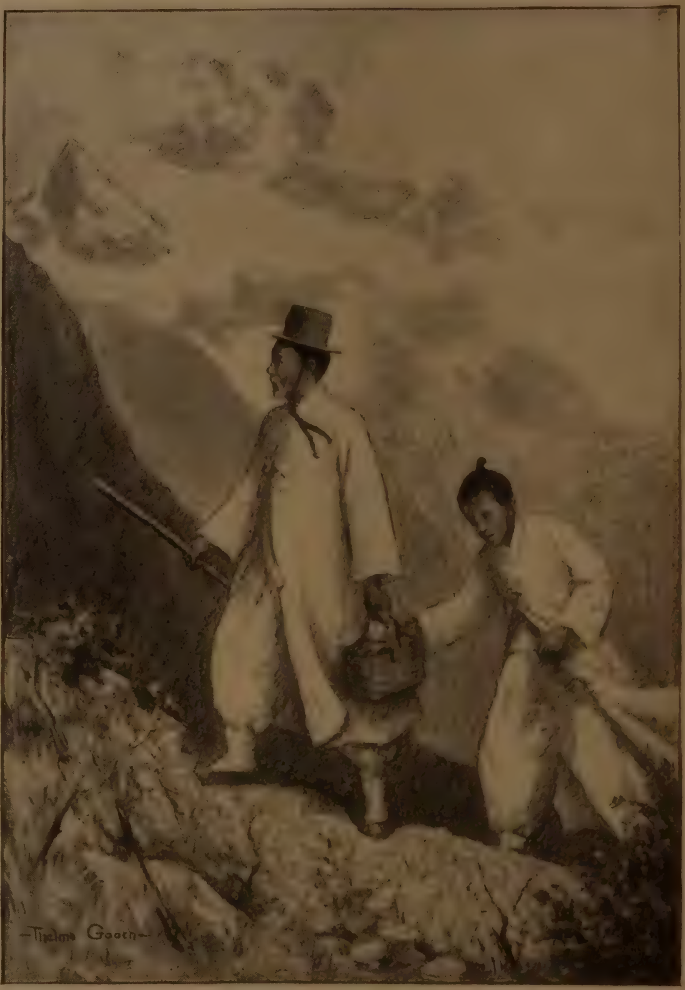
Startled, Chansung nearly fell into the pool. He could see no one from where he sat; but, peering over the edge of the cliff, he discovered an old, gray-bearded man seated under the shelving rocks, enjoying hugely his surprised expression.

"Come here, my lad," he called; "no, not that way—by the path below the rock."

The kindly tones fell like balm on the lonely boy's heart. In another moment he had made his way to the old man's side. A neat enough place it was, roofed over by the shelving cliff.

On the bank was a slender pole and line, with the bobber still floating on the water. At one side was a small fire and fish baking on a wire over the coals. To save his life, Chansung could not restrain his eyes.

The old man chuckled softly, looking him over with a shrewd, appraising glance. "Look at this! A runaway sure—there are no two words about it!" Then noticing the flush that mounted the boy's face, "But never mind, my lad, you are hungry, are you? We will see about the other later. Here, wash your face in the brook and help me set the table. You see, I was not expecting company today or I would have brought more dishes."



Silently they took the road together, climbing slowly up, up, till Chansung's legs grew heavy as lead and his breath, despite his efforts to control it, escaped him in gasps

Still chuckling to himself, he divided the fish into two piles, using flat stones for dishes. From a small basket he produced a bowl of rice and placed it in the middle of the hot dinner.

"We will have to eat out of the same dish, unless you prefer to go without," he said with a twinkle in his eye, as Chansung took his place on the opposite side of the improvised table.

"I'm hungry enough to eat anything," Chansung answered; "but how can I eat your dinner?"

The old man laughed. "Don't worry about that, young man. There is plenty of food for us both, and rice is always better for company. Besides, I had such luck with the trout I was like to have made myself sick if you had not come to the rescue."

Chansung made no further objections. Smiling his thanks, he fell to with a right good will. Both were hungry and no further words were spoken till all was gone.

"Komapsimneta!" said Chansung. "That was the best meal I ever ate in my life. I am so grateful to you, sir, I can not express it!"

"Don't mention it any more. Now we have eaten together, come let us become acquainted. As for me, I am Ne Nyangmok; and what might your name be, please?"

For a moment Chansung hesitated. Was it safe to tell this stranger his name? At the inn the night before he had given a false name; but somehow he could not bring himself to deceive this man who had treated him so kindly.

"My name is Han Chansung," he answered, "and I live at Tai Pyeng Dong in Kang Dong County."

"Yes," said Ne, "and where are you going?" Then, noticing Chansung's embarrassment, he added: "Never mind, my lad! if you do not wish to say where you are going do not answer; but it is plain that you are in trouble. If an old man like me can be of any help to you it would give him pleasure."

Tears sprang to Chansung's eyes and his lip trembled. Overstrained as he was, the unexpected kindness unmanned him. For a moment he could not speak. Then he answered, "Father, if there be a Spirit that cares for lost souls, he has surely led me here. Truly I am in trouble. Till three days ago I was happy in my father's home, knowing no care. You know how the mutangs deceive the people?" Old Ne nodded. "Well, a band came to our village, and Choonwha, my wife—I became a man last spring—was determined to go and see the dancing. We quarreled, and when she abused me and tried to run away I lost my reason and struck her with an ironing-club, and she fell at my feet, bleeding terribly. At first I did not understand what had happened; but when many came and cried that she was dead, I was filled with sudden fear and fled to the hills and lay hid till night, when men came by with lanterns and I heard them say that Choonwha was dead and that the police were coming, so I fled."

His voice broke. "Oh, sir, I have died many times. My father! my father! It will kill my father!"

Losing all control of himself, Chansung bowed his face to the ground and wept as he had wept in the grove. For a while old Ne was silent. Placing his hand on the boy's head, he let him weep on, knowing with the wisdom of years that tears are the best medicine for a broken heart. His heart had gone out to this strange lad with the eyes of a scholar and a face plainly marked with the brand of His only son had died ma ago and a vision of his o came before him as his h on Chansung's head. W his voice was deep with when he spoke.

"There, there, my boy
no more. It is truly a trouble, but you did not in do it. Come, it is gettin and we must be going."

"But where can I go?"
Chansung. "I can never g
to Tai Pyeng Dong."

"No," agreed Ne, "I am
you can not; certainly no
My own house is on the oth of the pass in Su Nai. Yo come home with me tonigh tomorrow we will discus future. Wash your face pool and let us hasten."

Rising, he placed the bowl in the basket and, ren
the string from the pole, waiting for Chansung. Si
they took the road together, ing slowly up, up, till Chan legs grew heavy as lead a breath, despite his efforts t trol it, escaped him in gasps

Old Ne stopped with a
"Let us rest here a while.
must make a better man of You lower-country people poor mountain legs."

"My legs are all right," p Chansung. "I can run fast en on the level; but this pass i tainly a fierce one. My! If should slip where would he la

"As for that," said Ne, "I seen a loaded pony slip on a like this before now and roll to the bottom."

Chansung was interested,
in the wood-gatherers harve
the brush-wood on the mountain side. High up on left a band of cutters sw their sharp, short-handled scyt keeping sure, slow step to t
leader's song:

"Ee-ee-ee-ah! Na-se-ro-ta! ee-ee-ah! This is a blade!)"

After the cutters came binders, piling the brush in b dles as big as a man could ca and binding it fast in the mi with mountain vines and st rope (sakie).

"Twa-yut-ta! (It is finished

"Na-dea-kanda! (Down goes!)"

And the bundle is started sp
ning down the mountain si Rolling and bumping, bound with dry leaves flying, sending a startled pheas kak-kak-kaking through the air, it goes its merry w clear to the bottom and finds its place quite gently last in the long line of bundles that fringe the mountain's base.

At length the ascent was renewed, and after seve pauses for breath the two stood at last on the summ Kai Chun, An Ju and the ocean behind them, and front mountains, mountains, mountains. Chansu never forgot that first view of Tuk Chun. The vall in front lay dark with evening shade, while in eve direction, as far as his eye could see, mountain ran crowded mountain range, mountain peak capp mountain peak, like the view of wind-tossed wav from the topmast of a vessel.

"Yonder," said Ne, "at the foot of that mountai is Su Nai. We must hasten or night will overtake us

Little was said between the two on the way dow
At the foot of the mountain they stopped to rest a fe moments at an inn. Every one seemed to know N

"Who is the lad with you?" asked the innkeepe

"This," said Ne, "is a relative of mine, Ne Cha sung."

Thus was Han Chansung's name changed an though he did not realize it at the time, his adoptio by old Ne was settled.

Darkness had fallen before they turned from th
main road into the little village of Su Nai.

"Do you see the house there by the willow tree asked Ne. "That is my house, and back of it is spring. Su Nai means 'below the water,' you know
You will see the spring in the morning."

They were met at the door by a gray-haired woman whom Ne introduced as his wife, instruct hasten supper as they were both tired and hungry. ving his shoes from his swollen feet, Chansung lad to stretch out on the warm floor, while Ne to the kitchen to tell Nyangsie, his wife, how d found the boy and of his purpose to befriend

CHAPTER VI

The Teacher

HE sun was shining brightly the next morning when Chansung awoke. Old Ne and Nyangsie had been up and at 'or hours, but they had moved softly not to waken their weary guest. ing him stir, Nyangsie came for- and greeted him: "Have you good night's rest? You have had trouble and must be very tired."

ansung looked up into the kind of the old woman, and knew he ound more than one true friend in ai.

lother," he said, "the God of n has surely led me to this place. e committed a terrible sin and together unworthy of your good- "

o, no," Nyangsie answered, "you not talk like that. It will all turn ght some way. Come now, break- s ready. My husband has gone to wer village, and you will want to breakfast before he comes back."

ter breakfast, old Ne having not eturned, Chansung went out to at the spring. Within fifty yards e house, a clear stream of water, feet wide and three feet deep, ed out of a fissure in the solid rock e base of the cliff. Part of the m had been turned into a channel led to a near-by rice mill, the r falling into a box at the end of great wooden beam of the huller. the box was full. With a groan great beam tilted on high, spilling vater from the box into the pool be- Thus suddenly lightened, the beam with a thud, driving its wooden deep into the hulling bowl.

ansung stood for some time watching the beam and fall and wondered why he had never seen a like this in the lower country. So engrossed was hat he did not hear old Ne coming, till he spoke. How are you this morning? I hope you slept well night."

Yes, I certainly did. You have a beautiful place , and I would enjoy stopping with you a long ; but I am more indebted to you now than I can pay, and must be going."

And where, pray, do you purpose going, that you in such a hurry?"

Well," hesitated Chansung, "how far is it to Tuk n City? I suppose I would better go there."

As for that," said Ne, "it is not far, only about miles; but I have another proposition for you. morning I went to the lower village. We have one school for the two villages. That is the olhouse yonder. Our teacher left us two months and we have not been able to secure another. m your looks and what you say, I think you can h school. Anyway, I have recommended you to committee. You can have the place if it suits . Not much salary, to be sure; but your board be furnished, and you can stay on with us if you . What do you say to the proposition?"

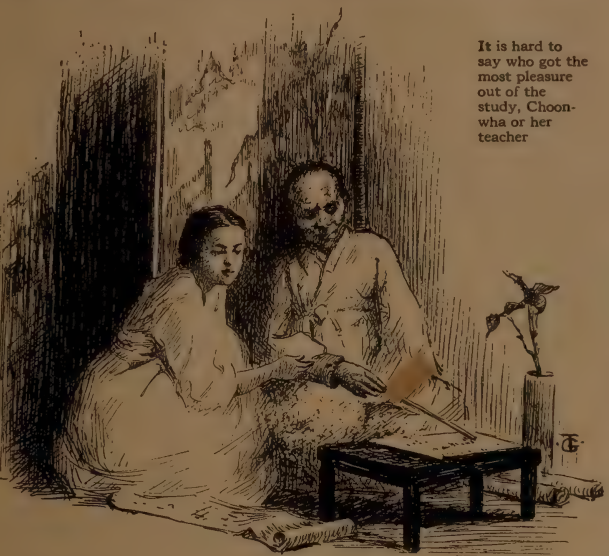
hansung's eyes were moist as he answered: "Why you so kind to me whom you have never known re? It is not possible with words to express my titude. I shall be glad indeed to take the place offer, and earnestly hope I may find opportunity e day to repay you."

o it came about that Han Chansung, or Ne Chan- g, as he was henceforth to be known, was installed eacher in Su Nai. There is no need to tell in de- of the four years which followed—years in which lad grew into a tall, straight-shouldered man like father. As is ever the case with teachers, he learned re than he taught the village children. His smile still the sweet smile of his boyhood. He had the h brow and clean-cut features of a scholar and aker, but there was more in his face and eye than ple kindliness and the marks of a student. His face ected a soul that had known deep sorrow and yet l patiently suffered and found strength in suffering.

Though Chansung's days had been spent in the oolroom, he was by no means a scholar only. He ed the open air and after school hours found plea- e in helping old Ne about the mill and the farm. e mountain back of the house was the home of merous pheasants, and Chansung had early learned shoot these beautiful birds with old Ne's flint-lock e, an art requiring the highest skill of the hunter. ce when a troublesome tiger had infested the neigh- rhood, helping himself at night to the farmers' dogs d young calves, Chansung had gone up the moun- a with old Ne and four others and, standing in line h the rest, had brought the great beast to the und with his own bullet.

In one matter, especially, the whole neighborhood d benefited by Chansung's presence. The spring, flowing so copiously summer and winter, had interested him from the first. He marveled greatly from whence so much water came. What a pity the water could not be put to further use than the running of old Ne's rice mill! If only it could be made to flow through the fields beyond the village, what a blessing it would prove!

The difficulty lay in the fact that the fields were several feet higher than the spring, so that all the precious water was left to run its sparkling way unchecked to join the lower river. Would the water in the spring rise if a bank were built around it? Old Ne and the rest laughed at the idea. If that were possible, why had it not been done long ago? When Chansung answered that somebody had to do everything first, old Ne still objected that it would ruin the rice mill.



It is hard to say who got the most pleasure out of the study, Choonwha or her teacher

"Ruin the rice mill! Not a bit of it!" said Chansung. "If we can raise the water the mill's power will be doubled."

So old Ne gave in, and Chansung was permitted to make the experiment.

There was great excitement in the village over Chansung's plan. Some said it really sounded reasonable; but most ridiculed the idea. Nevertheless, at the village meeting it was decided that every man should help.

What palaver there was the morning the work began! What fiery discussions as to where to begin and where the dike should run! There is no democracy on earth to equal the democracy of an Oriental village. Every one has a right to his own say and uses the right to the limit.

When all were through, Chansung explained his own plan, which was adopted, and the work began. Two banks ten feet apart were to be thrown up from the highest point in the field straight to the spring. The men were divided into bands, six men to a section, and a double shovel was assigned each band. Even three men to a shovel seems ridiculous to the conceited Westerner, accustomed to look down on all things Eastern.

"What a shiftless invention!" he exclaims, till he has seen the shovel work. Then he changes his mind.

The blades of two long-handled shovels are firmly wired together, the handles being steered by the two strongest men in the band. At each side of the double shovel is fastened a strong rope which the other men grasp firmly, two on each side.

"Are you ready?" The shovels bite deep into the ground. "E-e-ah!"—and are dragged forward a foot. "Eek!" With a mighty pull of the ropes the double shovel is jerked clear from the ground and half a wheelbarrow load of dirt is heaved forward the required distance, twenty feet if desired.

"E-e-ah-eek! e-e-ah-eek! - Cha, cha, e-e-ah-eek!" What a college yell it would make!

By three o'clock in the afternoon the dike, all except the last twenty feet by the spring, was completed. All hands gathered for the finish. The water was icy cold; but what of that? Standing knee-deep in the stream, mud and sand were heaved from the bed, and stones and sticks from the sides, and in less time than it takes to tell it almost, the stream was turned and began to flow into the new channel—swiftly at first where the ground was low—and its progress was greeted by wild enthusiasm.

Gradually the bed filled and the water rose slowly, inch by inch, to the level of the spring and stopped. The crowd waited breathlessly, one minute—five—ten; apparently it would rise no farther. The pessimists began to say, "I told you so." But no, it has risen a little more; risen in fact as fast as could be expected in the long, dry ditch. Slowly, inch by inch, the water rose, steadily now, the dry ground having drunk its full.

"Chota! chota! Twagesso! Twagesso!" (Good, good! It will become! It will become!) they cried, and rushed with the shovels to make a path through the field for the rising flood.

They were none too soon. Before they had advanced the ditch fifty feet the water was upon them, and from there on it was a battle to confine the water to the ridge. But forty men worked with might and main, and it was done, enough at least for the present, and the sun setting behind "Alger-yung" turned the muddy water into a golden flood—sure prophecy of better days for old Su Nai and many golden harvests.

CHAPTER VII

Choonwha Finds Comfort

THE days following Chansung's disappearance from Tai Pyeng Dong were full of sadness for all of Elder Han's family, but most of all for the little bride. Though the elder himself never charged the girl with his son's loss, there were others less kind. As day after day went by, and no word came from Chansung, Choonwha's grief was pitiful. She refused to eat and would have died like a broken-hearted bird if the elder had not interfered.

He came upon her one day in the garden weeping her heart out among the flowers. Putting his arm around her he said: "My child, my child, you must not weep like this. How can I bear to lose both my dear children?" and Choonwha threw herself into his arms and wept a long time and was comforted.

"Father, can you forgive me? It was all my fault that we quarreled, and if Chansung never comes back I can not bear to live."

The elder's voice was very gentle as he answered: "It is hard, I know; but we must not despair. I believe he will yet come back; and meanwhile we must help each other, you and I. You know Chansung helped me with my accounts and letters; from tomorrow morning on, I want you to help me."

"Oh, if only I could!" Choonwha fairly trembled; "but you know I can scarcely read. Chansung has taught me a few characters since we were married."

A frown darkened the elder's brow. "It is a wicked custom, this of our people, to educate only the boys. I have always said that if I had a daughter she should be taught exactly the same as her brother." Then with a smile, "But, Choonwha, I have a daughter now; and if you wish we will set up a school together. If I mistake not, you will outstrip all the village lads."

So it was settled. From that time on Choonwha received daily lessons—first in the easy Korean script, then in the Chinese characters.

It is hard to say who got the most pleasure out of the study, Choonwha or her teacher. The girl's mind was exceptionally bright and stored with unused energy. Strange it is so hard for Eastern men to realize that the girls of each generation inherit just as good brains from their parents as their brothers. The one-sided culture of centuries has not developed a one-sided race except in so far as each generation starves its women. Choonwha's eagerness for knowledge was the eagerness of a starving intellect. In the Korean idiom, she fairly "ate up" her lessons.

To be continued

◆

New Attitude Toward Women's Work

THE permanence of women in industry was discussed by Melinda Scott before the conference of governors' representatives which formulated an outline of the bill to be presented to Congress for a permanent system of employment offices. Unanimous approval was given by the conference to a provision for a woman assistant director-general to have charge of matters pertaining to women's employment. Miss Scott, who is special representative of the United States Employment Service, thanked the members of the conference for their action in providing for the statutory position for a woman assistant. "I am glad to have been present at the conference where recognition of the importance of women's work was recognized as you have recognized it," she said. "It shows that you know that women are in industry permanently; that they always have been in industry of one sort or another, at home or in the business world; and that they are now a factor that will have to be reckoned with. It shows that you realize that with 25 per cent. of all the women of our country at work, and something like 60 per cent. of these wage-earning women under 21 years of age, an adequate employment system for the nation must include special provision for them."

OUR EDITORIAL PAGE

The Mind of Christ on Unity

IN a letter from a lay reader, published in another part of this issue, our correspondent invites attention to the progress that is being made on the lines of unity by the great religious bodies of the United Kingdom. In the conferences now taking place the leaders in the religious thought and life of Britain—our friend and contributor Dr. Jowett among the foremost—are straining every nerve to advance the crusade for a united Church. We should like to see this zeal emulated throughout the churches of America, and we believe it will yet be.

It should be kept steadily in view that the mind of Jesus looked forward to the ultimate unity of his followers. He prayed "that they all may be one"—"that the world may believe." Does not this imply that disunion in the church erects an obstruction which interferes with the divine purpose of the evangelization of the world, subjecting it to needless delay? Paul in his day found the Gospel obstructed by divisions, and he longed for the time when they should disappear. We have allowed similar divisions to multiply far beyond anything the apostle could have foreseen. Can the Church face the new era still divided and accept the responsibility for the results? Or will it mobilize its legions, each in its proper place, for united action, "that they all may be one," and that the great objective may be obtained—"that the world may believe?" If unity is to be the price of world evangelization, let us prepare to pay it and pay it gladly.

In the recent British conferences, the discussions have developed practically no material differences in matters of faith. They have come to the point of expressing convictions freely. Men say things at such gatherings which a few years ago would have been startling at least, though they are now accepted as undiluted truth. They declare that the forces of Christianity must be concentrated for service, instead of being dissipated by dissensions and rivalry. If we admit that union was in the mind of Christ, and if we claim to be his followers, then we have no right to keep apart, except for valid spiritual reasons. These have not been found thus far. There are different types of Christianity in the different bodies, but all are true to the great prototype. To prolong disunion is to foster rivalry, misunderstanding, overlapping, to waste spiritual horsepower. And this is indefensible, when it is only by union that success can come.

In a recent address before the Northern Baptist Convention in Denver, Colo., Dr. Faunce declared that the great changes now under way must come either through the Church, or in spite of it. They may come quickly and with little observation; or they may spring upon us like a volcanic outburst and the opportunity for control will be lost. It is time for the Church to act, and to interpret in its action the mind of its great Founder.

The Bolshevist War on Religion

AS THE facts come to the surface regarding the real situation in Russia, the reason for the increasing opposition to the Bolshevists can be better understood. A Stockholm correspondent of the New York Evening Post, writing from personal knowledge and observation, tells of the widespread efforts directed by the People's Commissaries against religion in general and the Greek Orthodox Church in particular. Church dignitaries and parish priests were fanatically persecuted; many were thrown into prison and are still awaiting trial on charges which, if made anywhere save in Russia, would seem absurd. Church buildings have been demolished and the material used in constructing barracks. Some of the famous historic religious buildings are among those destroyed. Decrees were published confiscating church property and compelling marriages, christenings and funerals to be solemnized only by persons authorized by the Soviets. Children unregistered in accordance with the new laws were denied food cards, and their parents were subject to trial by a revolutionary court. In a word, it was clearly planned to rearrange the whole family and social life on an anti-religious basis. Marriages performed by a priest were not legally binding. The "nationalization" of women and children was attempted on a considerable scale, but, being stoutly opposed in many places, was discontinued after a series of sharp conflicts. Numerous priests were executed by the Red Guards on the ground that they had been guilty of political agitation. In many localities church and schoolhouse meetings were strictly prohibited. The Bolshevist leaders in Moscow wrangled for three days over the question whether religion should be tolerated or not, a majority of the speakers taking the ground that as religion is so bound up with ancient racial and political prejudices it is antagonistic to communism. Priests were "fools," and the peasants' worship "folly and weakness." Of course, the question of the truth or falsity of religion was not even considered.

From this lurid picture one may form some idea of the reign of unreason in Russia and the results it has produced. Fortunately it is now likely to be short-lived. It was unthinkable that even the simple peasants would long endure the wild fanaticism that was bent on making wreck of all that made their life worth while. Now, with the driving of the Bolshevists from Moscow and Petrograd, which is impending, and the rolling up of their disintegrating armies by Admiral Kolchak, General Denikine and the Allies, the wave of communistic madness will pass, although Russia must suffer for years to come from the terrible experience she has undergone.

Waste and Wealth

THRIFT is not a hard practicality alone. There may be rich romance in it. Rubbish, waste, useless stuff that men threw away and paid to have carted off to the dump, was the basis of one of the greatest fortunes in England and the stepping-stone to a peerage.

An English manufacturer who died the other day had a career which was one of the most remarkable romances the world of invention and manufacture has ever known. As a young man he was a spinner in Yorkshire, had mastered his trade and owned some mills. One day, when in London, he came across a heap of silk waste mixed up with dirty rope ends, leaves and sticks, all knotted together.

"What is that?" he asked.

"Oh, simply rubbish. It is impossible to do anything with it," was the reply.

But the trained young spinner of Yorkshire knew better. He bought the great heap of waste at a halfpenny a pound, and was laughed at.

For nearly ten years all the profit from his mills went into experimental machinery for the utilization of this waste. Then came the startling announcement that he had produced a machine which at small cost turned the waste rubbish into beautiful fabrics. The result is that today waste silk pours into the great Manningham mills from all parts of the world to come forth worth hundreds of thousands of pounds.

In nature there is no waste. It is only because of man's limitations that the world is littered with what seems to him rubbish. Some day a ray of genius falls upon a dead heap of waste and turns it into gold.

We are apt to look to fiction for our romances; but the richest romances of human life are found in everyday fact.

Educating the Heart

EDUCATION which convinces the mind alone is partial. Only when the heart is instructed is education complete. It is one of the functions of the Church to spread Christian education, not moral instruction, primarily. A man may be moral and not Christian, but he cannot be Christian and non-moral.

The liberty of conscience which makes our diversity of faiths possible also limits our public education to the teaching of moral maxims, unrelated to creed or faith. With the instruction of the public school, reinforced by the school of experience, the average well-balanced mind will be convinced that the Ten Commandments are more than a series of prohibitions; that they are a working plan for a safe, healthy, happy and successful life.

But a life which has no higher basis than the Ten Commandments will still be less than Christian. Christianity has a principle and two additional laws to teach. The principle is that man is a sinner and can be saved from sin only through Christ. The laws are the laws of love to God and neighbor and the Golden Rule of thought for others first. The mind cannot receive these teachings without the comprehension of the heart. The church must spread the teaching, the school is barred to it. How shall it proceed? Education may be by precept or example. Both of these means are available for those who come to church and Sunday school. But only 21,888,521 go to Sunday school (statistics of 1916) and possibly 1,565,908 to church (numbers registered, 1918), and we number 110,000,000 and more. Those who will not hear our precept must be taught by our example.

Christian education, therefore, must be spr
the employer, applying the Golden Rule in lo thinking of wages and comforts before profits;
employee likewise, thinking of honest service income; by the public office-holder, thinking citizen first and his own preferment last; by the bor, seeking an early opportunity for kindness stranger; by courts which put humanity before nicality; by all who know Christ, living the l love day by day before the world. Such eviden Christ's spirit, actuating those who call them Christian, would soon educate the multitude in tian truth.

No amount of precept, not even thousands of books, nothing short of lives in which the truth be read, will suffice for the teaching of Christ to who doubt or deny, who sneer or scoff, or wh moral and think that is enough.

Getting Ready for the League

THOSE who were counting on the prematur mise of the League of Nations must be s what surprised at the signs of life it has g which are evidently accepted by an interested as indicative of a wide range of activities in the future. The nations have confidence in it. Fr and England have chosen their respective men of the organization. Premier Lloyd George and Arthur J. Balfour have let it be known that mean to attend the initial meeting of the Leag Washington in October next. King Albert of gium is also announced as having decided to over with the same object in view. It will be a gat ing of the progressive minds of all Christendom.

The European press, too, is discussing the Le as quite a settled proposition. Besides, Secre Daniels of the Navy Department, in his recent w drawal of the demand for a record-breaking ap priation for a gigantic American navy, has admi that in view of the disarmament program annou
by the League, such a navy would be unnecessar

We still hear of possible imperfections in the C nant, but even these are giving little cause for une ness. Whatever defects are found in the Leag operation during the first years, there will be an time to remedy them; for, if indications are of value, there is no nation likely to venture upon bre
ing the world's peace for a good many years to co

A Great Spiritual Asset

THERE is in our churches one great force church unity and world reconstruction, wh should not be overlooked. The Sunday sch with its 20,000,000 members in the United Sta alone, will furnish the field for the training of leaders of the future. The best offset to Bolshevi in America is sound religious education, such as promote the growth of spiritual motives in the hea of all who are accessible to good training. The ternational Sunday School Association has recen been reorganized and is recognized by every mo ment for Church Unity as the primary force to used in all our campaigns of religious educati Through the Sunday school religious education be extended to the homes and woman's clubs, a the religious element in such organizations as the B
Scouts and the Camp-Fire Girls will be emphasiz
A great many experiments are under way in whi new plans for wider spiritual education are being trie and eventually the present average Sunday sch program of one inadequate thirty-minute lesson week will be replaced by a course of instruction whi will lay a real foundation in both spiritual knowled and Christian character.

It is interesting to note, by way of contrast with t twenty-six hours a year of religious instruction in o Protestant Sunday schools, that the Catholic par chial schools give 350 hours yearly and the Jewis schools 150 hours. Week-day schools for religio instruction and Vacation Bible Schools are a part the answer to Protestant inadequacy. In spite of t admitted inadequacy, however, the American Sunda school has been so efficient in furthering religio knowledge and inspiring to better living that educ tional and religious leaders in Japan, Russia, Gree Germany and Austria are now looking to Americ and the American Sunday school for ideals and pla upon which to base a similar work in those countrie Sunday school leaders are sure that the best metho of making effective the League of Nations will be organize an International League of the Sund schools of the world, with their 35,000,000 membe imbued with the international Christian spirit.

Heavy Hauling on the Farm

The modern way by which the farmer can help pay his county tax—and build good roads at the same time.

E more valuable a product becomes the greater the loss caused by delay in s transportation from producer to market. With crops and other farm icts at their present prices, the farmer who must still rely upon the two-and-ıalf or three-mile-per-hour horse to carry his grain to the shipping point is g valuable time which could be devoted to the harvesting of additional crops. ıus the motor truck can be used as a valuable adjunct on almost any farm h would otherwise require the services of four or more horses. Certainly the which boasts a tractor for plowing, cultivating and harvesting is of a size progressiveness which would not tolerate horse transportation of its mechani- raised crops, and a truck is it the economical supplement to the tractor.

Perishable crops can command a higher price in the market if they have been transported by the high-speed, easy-riding truck.

A motor truck is as much a part of the scene on a modern farm as is a hay rake or a silo, and has a wider usefulness.

But aside from its work on the highway as ıeans of hauling produce to market a truck serve a very real purpose within the con- s of the farm itself. Over fairly hard and l fields it can haul loads of hay or agri- tural implements. On farms of large size it be used advantageously for carrying hot als to the hands in the fields, and for trans- ting them to and from their work.

ven the dairy farmer whose crops are sumed on the premises, as it were, finds motor truck a wonderful time and money er in the transportation of his milk to the way. The added speed and carrying acity over that offered by a two-horse n enables the farmer either to make ier deliveries, or to postpone his milking . The time thus saved means much in e days of scarcity of farm hands, and yet average farmer is only just beginning to lize the many and varied uses to which a tor truck may be put in saving time and money on the farm.

The farmer with heavy timber on his land can well afford to hire a motor truck of greater capacity than that needed on his farm.

HEAR THESE FIFTEEN LITTLE PLEADERS

Fatherless and Motherless Chinese Waifs Who Are in Need of Christian Foster Parents—A Real Opportunity for Service

THERE are many thousands of Christian Herald readers who are heartily interested in missionary work. They love to aid it by every means in their power. Many of those earnest souls have felt the strong tug of the mission field drawing them and have desired above all things to be among those who obeyed the Master's injunction to spread the Gospel throughout the world. Yet among those who have felt this desire there are comparatively few who could accept the call. Many circumstances combine to prevent this. It is, however, within the reach of every one to have some representative in the field—a "substitute" at the front—in the great battle for world righteousness.

Such an opportunity is presented today in the appeal from the Christian Herald Industrial Homes at Fukien, in China. Many of our readers are already familiar with the wonderful story of the founding and development of this missionary work. Nearly ten years ago Miss Emily S. Hartwell, a consecrated American, the daughter of famous missionary parents, laid the foundations for the Homes in faith and prayer. From the outset the work prospered until it became the largest Christian orphanage in China.

Hard times have fallen upon the Asiatic republic. Since the beginning of the great war China has passed through a severe and long continued crisis. Civil war has raged in many provinces; the noise of guns and the sounds of conflict could be heard even at the mission stations. Food of all kinds was high and scarce. Miss Hartwell fought her battle bravely.

Lately she has been planning an extension of the industrial work in the Homes, by which the children in their care could be under the direction of a skilled American industrial instructor. Her aim has been to give these poor Chinese waifs and castaways the best possible training for the battle of life.

Many of the young inmates of the Homes have been virtually adopted by American patrons, but there is a considerable number still unprovided for. It is in their behalf and for the good of the work generally, that the Christian Herald today is appealing to its readers for patrons for those whose portraits are printed on this page. The cost of maintaining a boy or girl at the Fukien Homes, assuring a Christian education and a practical training in the kind of self-supporting work for which the child is best fitted, is $25 a year. This, we need hardly explain, is the very lowest figure that can be quoted under present conditions.

We ask our readers to look carefully over the list below, and see whether they cannot feel in their hearts the desire to have one of these little people for their spiritual foster-child, with whom they can be in communication, and in the molding of whose life and character they would have a potent influence. It is a sacred trust to have in your keeping the welfare of a child, and to feel that the heart of your protégé responds to your love and generosity. As soon as your protégé is capable of writing, its letters will come to you as its benefactor. Regular reports of the progress of each child will be sent to the individual patrons. Thus the bond of spiritual friendship will become a strong and delightful one. Experience has shown that it establishes a tie that is hard to break, and which is a source of the greatest heart satisfaction to the patron.

We must tell you, however, something about the children themselves.

Ding Sen Hua, a boy aged eight, is a little Christian lad. His mother, who is dead, was a member of a Christian mission and a teacher. His father is sick and incapable of making a living. The boy is really bright and good, likes to study and works well.

Ding Bek Chiong is a boy of eleven. He has no parents, his father having died of cholera; his mother died years ago. Ding is bright, honest, fond of study, has good health and works well.

Ding Huo De is thirteen years old, and reported by his teacher as being "a very good boy, healthy, and good in his studies." His mother died of plague, father an invalid.

Uong Ing Sing is a bright little fellow, with excellent health and fair in studies. He is honest, which is a good characteristic among boys of his age. Parents are dead.

Ling Ciong Kuang, aged eleven, is fatherless. His mother is living, but has four children and cannot support the family. Ling has a good record in study, work and health.

Ding Sen Hang, a little fellow of seven, is also fatherless. His mother cannot earn food enough for her little family. The boy is bright and honest and likes study.

Ling Hung Bing, nine years old, is good, bright, not very strong, but quick at studies. Both parents died of plague and he has no relatives. His father was an opium smoker.

Ling Muk Cu, aged nine, is an unusually good boy, excellent health, quick at studies, and full of promise. He is fatherless and his mother is unable to support him.

Iek I 'Ne is seven years old. His father, a farmer, was drowned. Mother also dead. The boy is bright, though yet too young for serious studies. Very impressionable child.

Ling Hieng Chang, nine years, is a good boy, sound in health and capable at studies. Both parents died of plague.

Ding Ing Guong is eight years old. His father is a bed-ridden invalid, and the family are extremely poor, even for Chinese. The boy is good and promising.

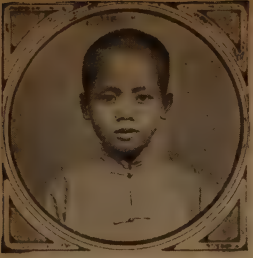
Ngoi Song Duang is a boy of ten, well-dispositioned and good in his studies. He has neither father nor mother, brothers or sisters. He is very bright and lovable.

Ding Ung Ching is nine years old, a bright, good lad, in excellent health and quick at his studies. Father dead and mother so poor that she cannot support him.

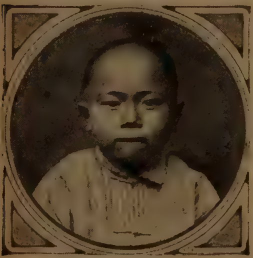
Ding Dung Sing, eight years, is an earnest student, healthy and with a good disposition. He is bright and honest. Father dead, mother unable to support her family. Ding is in the Home's school.

Iong Sa Ko is in his twelfth year, a good lad, healthy and an earnest student. He is bright and honest. Father dead, mother living, but cannot support her other children.

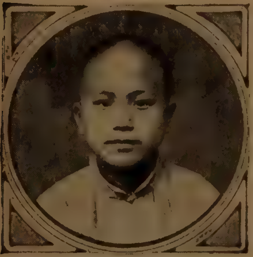
Any reader desiring to become a patron of one of these protégés can do so by sending us a postal or letter, indicating choice and giving full name and address of the writer, also the name of the little one chosen. When your choice is made, a photograph of the child accepted will be sent to each patron. All remittances by patrons should be sent direct to the Christian Herald, which will forward them to the treasurer of the Homes.



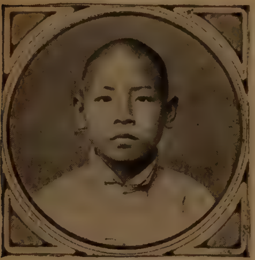
Ngoi Song Duang



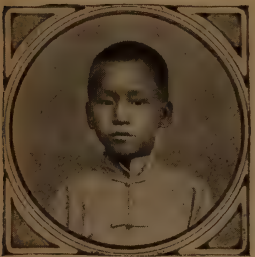
Ding Ing Guong



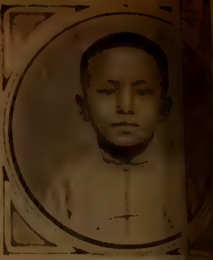
Ling Ciong Kuang



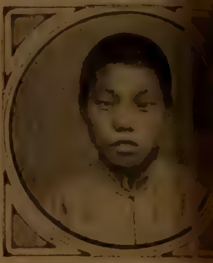
Ding Bek Chiong



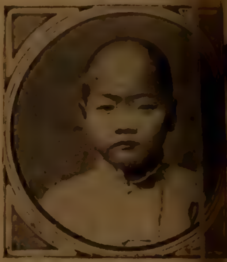
Ling Hung Bing



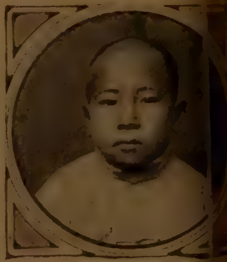
Ding Dung Sing



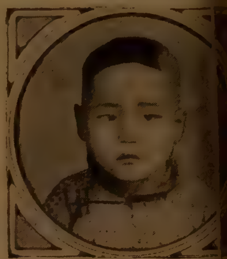
Uong Ing Sing



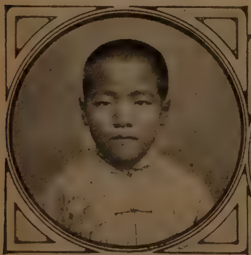
Ding Sen Hua



Ding Sen Hang

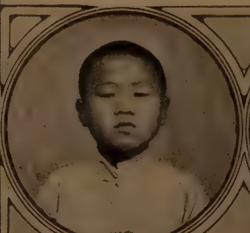


Iek I Ne

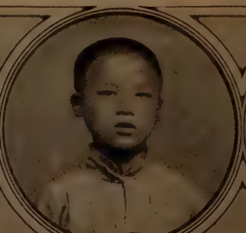


Ling Hieng Chang

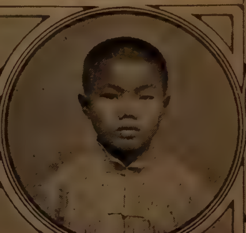
Ling Muk Cu

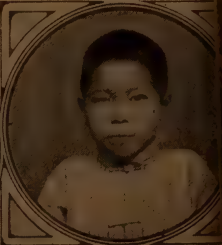


Iong Sa Ko



Ding Huo De





Ding Ung Ching

FOR ALL THE FAMILY

The Care of the Baby

By ELIZABETH FITZHUGH

The Eyes

AFTER the bath the baby is partially dressed and wrapped in a small blanket while his eyes are washed. This is done with a solution of boric acid. A small piece of absorbent cotton is dipped into a cup of the solution and a drop is squeezed from it into the eye. The lid and es are washed carefully with the damp cotton, ng care not to rub the lashes into the eye. A piece of cotton should be used for the other eye. not allow the drop to fall into the eye from too t a height. The boric acid solution is made from teaspoonfuls of the powder to one pint of boiling er. Pour into a bottle and cork with cotton until as cooled.

The Mouth

healthy baby's mouth is not washed before the h come, but when this is necessary (in case of ill- s) great care should be taken not to injure the deli- gums. The little finger is thoroughly scrubbed h soap and water, then washed in boric acid and pped in a piece of sterile cotton. The cotton is n dipped into the boric acid and used to wipe gently inside of the cheeks and the gums. The small ntity of boric acid that may be swallowed will do child no harm.

The Nose

The baby's nose is cleansed once a day, usually in morning after the bath. One end of a wooden thpick is wrapped with a small fluff of cotton to m a slender swab, with the sharp point well cov- d. This swab is dipped into a solution of boric id and inserted in the nostril to remove any mucus dust. A separate swab should be used for each stril.

The Bath

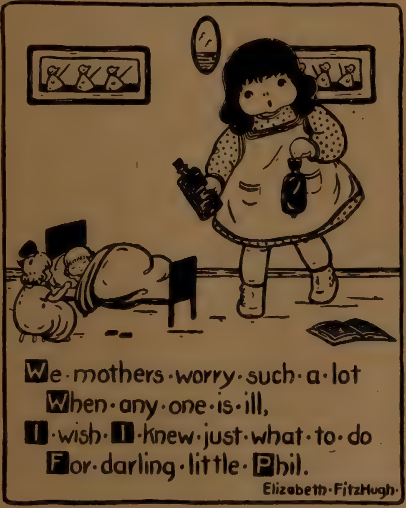
The bath is usually given in the middle of the morn- g before the second feeding and nap. The water ould be from 98 to 100 degrees Fahrenheit. This is sted with a bath thermometer.

The child is held across the knees on a bath apron large towel, with his head at the left. His face, rs, and scalp are washed before his shirt and band e taken off. A little soap should be used on the alp; when this has been rinsed off, and then dried, e shirt is removed and the little body soaped. He then lowered into the water and held on the mother's ft hand with his head and neck on her arm. When e is lifted out, the right hand grasps the little ankles, ith the index finger held between them. The child held on the lap and patted dry with his own soft ttle towel. Powder need not be used profusely. A ttle may be applied in the creases, but only after the kin is thoroughly dry.

Women at Men's Work

ONE of the conditions resulting from the war which is adding to the big problem of unemployment, has been made the subject of a study st issued by the New York Industrial Commission d prepared by the Bureau of Women. It shows e condition in twenty-six communities, where over irteen thousand women are employed in 117 plants, placing men who went to the war. In a majority the plants the labor is such as requires strength s well as skill. Sixty-six per cent. of these women re paid less than $15 a week, 1,500 receiving a lower ge than $12, and about 200 getting somewhat over $20. Women whose productive ability is reported as more than that of the men whose places they took, receive from 48 to 96 per cent. of the men's wages for the same work, while others less capable in production get from 50 to 88 per cent. Only in a few plants do they receive equal pay for equal work.

When these women took over the men's jobs, it was a war necessity. That they are doing their work well is not questioned; but if they are doing as well as has been claimed, according to the views of the unions they should receive men's wages. Of those women who were dropped only two-tenths of one per cent. were discharged to make room for returned soldiers and sailors. These figures are instructive and suggest exploitation. Further, they give a very low estimate of the patriotism of employers who hold so lightly the value of the service rendered by our men at the front. These employers have all too soon forgotten that it was their battle which the men left their jobs to fight.



The Greater Foe

ALTHOUGH our visible opponent in the World War was Germany, our most treacherous enemy was disease. In every great war an army faces two opponents—the forces of the foe drawn up on the battlefield, and the silent foe of disease, which watches its opportunity and launches its attacks unawares. The former, with his various machines for human destruction, is met only at intervals in open battle, but the hidden enemy is the grim specter ever present, lurking vigilantly through the camp and barracks, and gathering its victims while they slumber in hospitals, by tent-fire, or on the field. Of these enemies, centuries of warfare have proved that, in prolonged campaigns, the open enemy claims 20 per cent. of the total mortality in the conflict, while the silent foe, disease, is responsible for the remaining 80 per cent. In other words, out of every 100 men who fall in war, only 20 die from bullets or wounds, while 80 perish from disease, which is, in most cases, preventable.

One Aid to Appetite

By LAURA A. KIRKMAN

"WHAT!" exclaimed Mrs. Experienced Housekeeper; "having boiled cod, mashed potatoes, cauliflower and rice pudding all in one meal?"

"Why not?" asked Mrs. Young Wife.

"Because color in a meal counts more than the average person realizes," explained the older woman. "Physicians and dietitians tell us that if we relish a meal, we can digest it more easily; when food is attractive to the eye, our digestive juices flow more freely. And a meal that is all of one color is not tempting.

"If you think about this a little, you will see that it is true. Such a menu as you are planning now is insipid—all white. If you must have those four dishes all in one meal, you should serve the fish with parsley to provide a green note; bake the potatoes in their skins to give a brown note; serve the cauliflower as a salad with sliced hard-boiled eggs, dressing, and lettuce leaves; and put a dab of currant or raspberry jam on each portion of the rice pudding when dishing it out. Now, wouldn't you rather eat the meal with these changes than without them?"

"Indeed I would!" realized Mrs. Young Wife.

The Grandchildren

I AM very glad that I can bear testimony to the love of my grandchildren, of whom I have many (twenty-six).

The grown-ups are so dear and loving, and the little tots are so sweet, and nothing pleases them more than when grandmother will tell them little stories of her own childhood, and it is pleasant when I stop to hear them say, "Please tell us some more, grandmother."

When reading the article in a recent number of the Christian Herald on this subject, I wondered if we grandmothers do not sometimes bring unkind remarks upon ourselves. We do not always remember how different life appears to the young and healthy boys and girls who gather around us, and the infirmities of age are apt to make us impatient and unlovely in their eyes; but even that God's grace can conquer. For many years it has been my daily prayer that I may not be cross and crabbed in my old age, and I find His grace sufficient in all things. I would not be without these precious young ones; a childless old age is sad indeed. Thank God for the grandchildren.

GRANDMOTHER S.

Wilmington, Del.

What to Do With a Boy

WHAT to do with a boy? Mankind has no older problem, and no other by and large that so often looks profoundly baffling to the worried individuals who try to solve it—with all due respect for young persons of the other sex, for children of a gentler sex must on the whole be more tractable.

One thing to do with a boy is to put him in the Boy Scouts.

Answers to Questions

Can mold be removed from walls?—H. B. To remove mold or mildew from walls or ceilings, apply with a whitewash brush a solution of one pound of chloride of lime dissolved in a pailful of water.

How can I remove stains from piano keys?—H. B. M. Use oxalic acid, and afterward rub the keys white with a soft piece of cloth wet with alcohol or with cologne water. Expose the keys to sunshine on bright, sunny days to bleach them.

Swoboda To-day

Creator of Conscious Evolution

A Remarkable Personality

Swoboda, himself, is perhaps the most perfect example of what Conscious Evolution can accomplish. As Swoboda gains in years, he grows younger in enthusiasm, younger in vitality, younger in health; he is becoming stronger, more energetic, more confident, more dominant and more alive by capitalizing his creative powers through Conscious Evolution. What Swoboda is accomplishing for himself, you too can accomplish—every individual can accomplish, for every individual is governed by the same laws and principles, and every individual has it within himself to make use of these laws and principles. Swoboda's mind and body are so alert and so active that in his presence one feels completely overpowered. His personality dominates everything with which it comes in contact; yet Swoboda is real!—there is absolutely nothing mysterious about him. He knows not what fatigue is—he is a tireless worker. He delights in making sick people well and weak people strong. He loves his work because he feels he is of benefit to humanity—making a better, more vital, more potent race of men and women. Swoboda is not only a mental superman, but a high powered physical dynamo, an unheard of combination.

SWOBODA means freedom—liberty—independence and SWOBODA aims to give these symbols of evolutionary states a new, higher and ultimate meaning.

In addition to SWOBODA'S amazing power of mind and body, his predominating characteristic is his intense sincerity.

Swoboda's discoveries are your opportunities

Daily Results:

"A year ago I was down and out financially and physically. I was a wreck. Conscious Evolution gave me power of mind and health. I am to-day better than ever and I am more prosperous than ever. Naturally I am a believer in the Swoboda idea."

"Your system makes me feel like a different person. Every one whom I have ever met who has tried it out, has the same thing to say about it. Was talking to a man to-day whose wife is a Swoboda enthusiast."

"Your system is direct, simple, scientific, effective, and makes one feel so invigorated. As an athlete and a physician, I endorse Conscious Evolution unreservedly. It is and more, what is claimed for it."

"Conscious Evolution has given me surprising results. I expected good results but I am surprised."

"Conscious Evolution sent a message of energy, health and power through me in twenty seconds, which has been increased from day to day."

"I feel very much better. You did me more good in three weeks than four doctors did in sixteen months."

"Your course has been of great benefit to me. I am able to do a great deal more work with less fatigue. My pleasures are also increased; all work seems a pleasure now."

"When your first letter of instructions reached me I was tired and blue. I read it and saw the 'light.' My blues disappeared. I used my energies for about ten seconds, and my tiredness left me. Conscious Evolution is increasing my every power of mind and body as I wish and as you promise."

If I Could Me

IN less than one minute you can easily a quickly demonstrate to yourself that you a only half as dynamic, well, strong, energeti brave, and authoritative, as you may be, ar that you are only half as forceful, dominan self-reliant, daring, and courageous as yo should be, and that you are but half as pro gressive, masterful, aroused, powerful, an creative, as you easily can become throug quick evolution.

Why Be Satisfied With Inferior Li

Why be satisfied or content with inferior vitality, inferior hea inferior energy, inferior digestion, inferior heart power, infe lung power, inferior nerve power, inferior brain power, infe memorizing power, inferior reasoning power, inferior sens power, inferior scheming power, inferior business power, infe conscious power, and inferior personal power? Why not att the vital power of supremacy?

Perfect and Vital Health

Conscious Evolution can give you perfect health in your nerv system, perfect health in your heart, perfect health in your lun perfect health in your stomach, perfect health in your digesti system, perfect health in your liver, perfect health in your k neys, perfect health in your muscles, perfect health in your bra and thus Conscious Evolution can give you perfect health every cell, in every tissue, in every gland, and in every organ, well as perfect health in your blood.

How to "Get There"

Regardless of how old you are—regardless of your years—you can grow young in body, younger in spirit, younger in ambition and younger in every cha acteristic that gives greater living power, greater earning power and great pleasure power. You can gain thinking power, reasoning power, healt power and pleasure power, as you may desire.

Why Miss the Super-Pleasures?

Why not enjoy yourself as others enjoy themselves who are more highl alive and who have super-energy, super-health, super-vitality and supe powers of every character? Why deny yourself the keenest of pleasures Why miss the extreme joy of life? Why miss the super-pleasures?

How to Gain What You Want

The way for you to gain what you want is by increasing your power of min and body evolutionarily, so as to compel conditions to yield to you superior and irresistible energies. Conscious Evolution is the easy and sur means of making yourself supreme.

ou Face to Face

More Daily Results:

"I indeed realize what physiological gladness means. My sensation of physical enjoyment is wonderful. It seems too good to be true. It is something as I felt when I took my first trip to the Bermudas, where nature has combined the blending of dainty coloring so exquisite that nothing short of fairyland can describe it. This is how Conscious Evolution causes me to feel."

"I can honestly say that the benefits I have received from Conscious Evolution cannot be measured by any payment of money, and I can say unhesitatingly that your system far exceeded my fondest hopes."

"I could see the tremendous reality and possibilities of Conscious Evolution in less than half a minute's direction of my energies into creative channels."

"Conscious Evolution has changed me from an invalid into a tireless human machine."

"I would not consider trading the benefits I have received from Conscious Evolution for gold."

"As a student of physiology and histology, I at once recognized the feasibility of Conscious Evolution."

"Ten seconds from the time I started Conscious Evolution, I felt myself more alive and energetic."

"I have used Conscious Evolution for a few weeks, and I find myself marvelously improved in both body and mind. Conscious Evolution is wonderful, and the world will be brighter when men and women everywhere grasp it."

"I owe my rise from the position of a country insurance agent to virtual head of one of the largest insurance companies of the world entirely to the power of personality Conscious Evolution has given me."

Swoboda 26 Years Ago

From a sickly youth Swoboda made of himself a magnificent physical specimen of the human race. This was just the beginning—his greater evolution was yet to come

hese Rare and Amazing Books Explain Conscious Evolution

Write for these books—not because Conscious Evolu-on has meant so much to 325,000 other men and women, t because there is scarcely a prominent family in the ountry that hasn't at least one member a pupil of Swoboda, it because they contain valuable ideas for you.

Conscious Evolution is being personally used by many of he most prominent physicians and by such men as Charles Hughes, Woodrow Wilson, the Rockefellers, the Vanderbilts, the oulds, the Huntingtons, the Cudahys, the Swifts, the Armours and cAdoos for advancing themselves in energy, health, vitality and ower of personality.

Write for these books because they mean so much to YOU in multiplied ving power, earning power and personal power. They are big books lled from cover to cover with vital facts about yourself and how you an acquire the degree of perfection in body and mind that you so uch need. They explain the dangers of excessive deep breathing, xcessive exercise, and excessive muscular development. CON-CIOUS EVOLUTION and THE SCIENCE OF LIFE show how to ouble or even treble your power of mind and body; not by edious, prolonged study, but by a simple and quick process of nergization which raises the very level of your life and mental powers, hrough harnessing your internal "CREATOR."

CONSCIOUS EVOLUTION and THE SCIENCE OF LIFE supply the key to ominant personal power, dominant business power, dominant success power, ominant mental power and dominant will power. They show how to change our aimless and fruitless attitude into ambition, inspiration, enthuiasm and the highest success by putting your internal "CREATOR" to work or you. These books show how to amazingly increase your power of vill and personality, as well as your power of body, for every action and for very purpose and process.

Conscious Evolution is a new science, and no one can afford not to know at east the simple facts about it. These facts show how Conscious Evolution vercomes weak will, poor health, feebleness of mind and body. They show ow to overcome the inferior, pleasureless, feeble and unsatisfactory life, by iving the means to the successful, superior and abundant life through activatng your "CREATOR."

Conscious Evolution also shows how to arrest the aging of the body, and how to remain oung, energetic, vigorous, well and active all the days of your life, through self-re-creation.
hese books are absolutely free and there is no obligation now or after. These books are yours to eep, that you may attain a higher understanding of yourself and of evolution and the means to higher existence.

Even if you gain but one idea through CONSCIOUS EVOLUTION and THE SCIENCE OF IFE, these books will be of great help to you.

Just write your name and address on this corner and tear it off and mail it, and you will receive he books free. Attend to this to-day. You will surely forget about it if you put it off until to-morrow.

ALOIS P. SWOBODA, 2307 Berkeley Building, New York City

Conscious Evolution must not be confused with Darwinian evolution or Physical Culture. Nor should Conscious Evolution be confused with Oriental or Hindoo philosophies, auto-suggestion, self-hypnosis, gymnastics, or mere physiology, anatomy, histology, theosophy, morphology, medicine, pathology, exercise, New Thought, Christian Science, calisthenics or psychology.

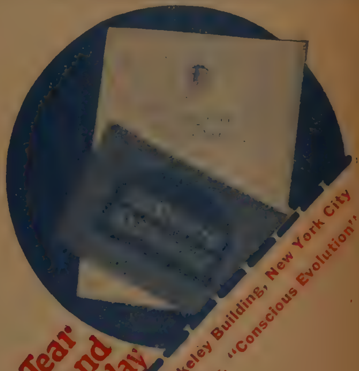
Conscious Evolution is not an occult science, nor a metaphysical science, nor a divine science, nor a spiritual science, nor a material science, nor is Conscious Evolution a symbolic science, nor a mere hoping, wishing, longing and dreaming philosophy.

Conscious Evolution must not be confused with any present day philosophies or sciences of a material or mental character.

Conscious Evolution cannot be understood by physicians, psychologists, physical culturists, philosophers, chemists, cosmologists or biologists of the present day.

Conscious Evolution is a new and original science, an exact science, a demonstrable science—a science of the evolution of and through Conscious Energy—a science of the Ultimate.

Conscious Evolution is the beginning of a new evolutionary era for the human race.



Tear out and mail to-day

ALOIS P. SWOBODA, 2307 Berkeley Building, New York City

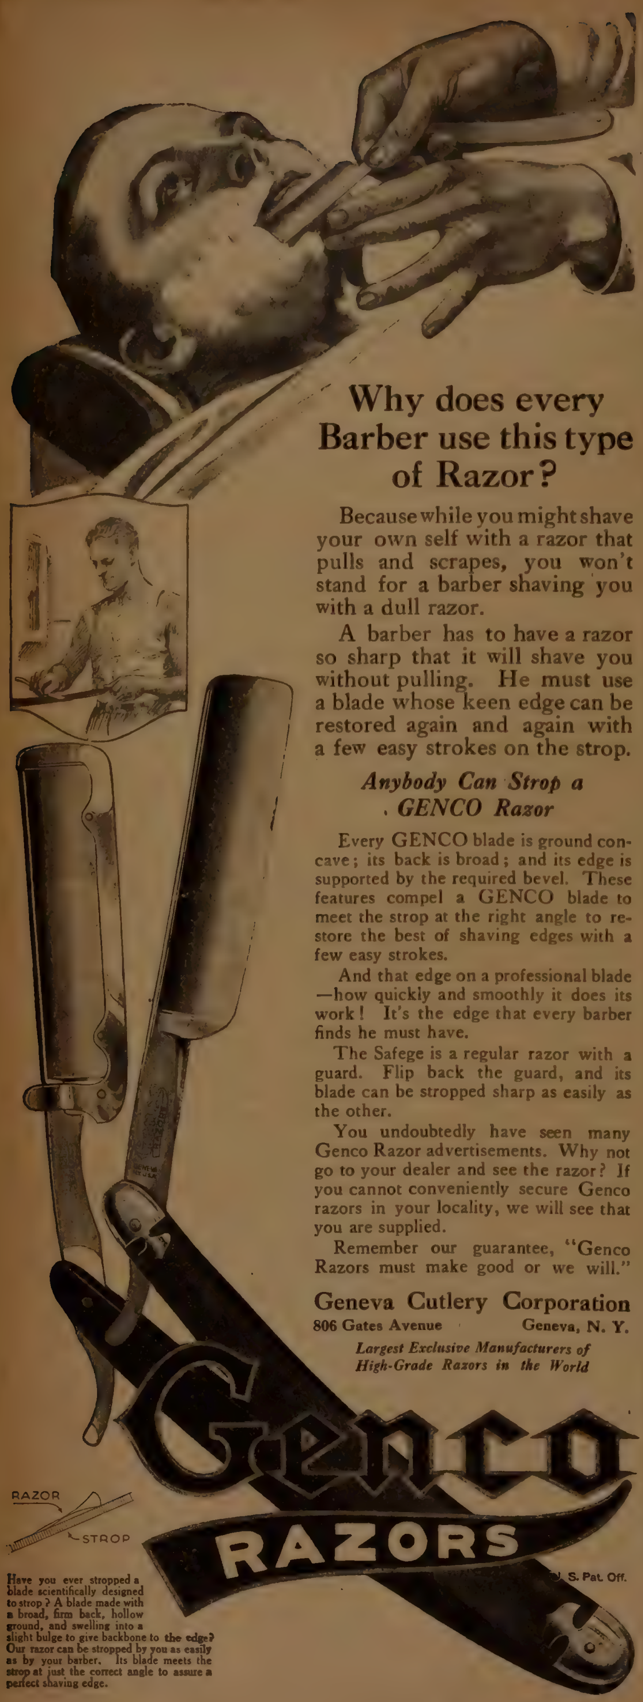
Please send me the free copyrighted books, "Conscious Evolution" and "The Science of Life."

Name

Address

City

State



Why does every Barber use this type of Razor?

Because while you might shave your own self with a razor that pulls and scrapes, you won't stand for a barber shaving you with a dull razor.

A barber has to have a razor so sharp that it will shave you without pulling. He must use a blade whose keen edge can be restored again and again with a few easy strokes on the strop.

Anybody Can Strop a GENCO Razor

Every GENCO blade is ground concave; its back is broad; and its edge is supported by the required bevel. These features compel a GENCO blade to meet the strop at the right angle to restore the best of shaving edges with a few easy strokes.

And that edge on a professional blade—how quickly and smoothly it does its work! It's the edge that every barber finds he must have.

The Safege is a regular razor with a guard. Flip back the guard, and its blade can be stropped sharp as easily as the other.

You undoubtedly have seen many Genco Razor advertisements. Why not go to your dealer and see the razor? If you cannot conveniently secure Genco razors in your locality, we will see that you are supplied.

Remember our guarantee, "Genco Razors must make good or we will."

Geneva Cutlery Corporation
806 Gates Avenue Geneva, N. Y.

Largest Exclusive Manufacturers of High-Grade Razors in the World

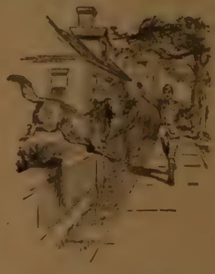
Have you ever stropped a blade scientifically designed to strop? A blade made with a broad, firm back, hollow ground, and swelling into a slight bulge to give backbone to the edge? Our razor can be stropped by you as easily as by your barber. Its blade meets the strop at just the correct angle to assure a perfect shaving edge.

Its Master's Uniform



WHEN Henry R. Waltrup, a St. Joseph, Mo. boy, went away to the army training camp last July, his Scotch collie dog was inconsolable. It sat sorrowfully on the front porch of the Waltrup home, gazing down the street, from early in the morning until dark—changing its position only to occasionally run about the lawn, and from door to door of the house, as though seeking to get a trace of its master.

Then one day Henry came home for a brief furlough—came home in his smart new uniform, and with a soldierly bearing and step which transformed him in the eyes of all his friends—save that one which loved him, but could not speak the language of men. But the collie could show its welcome. When it first espied Henry leaving the street car two blocks away, it gave a start, then stood for one moment as though transfixed. Then a short, sharp bark of joy came from the dog, and the next instant it had leaped from its sentinel's post upon the porch, raced madly across the lawn, cleared the fence at a bound and was just a streak of happy dogism as it flew along the sidewalk to meet its soldier.

The vigor of the dog's welcome almost swept the young warrior from his feet—but there were tears in his eyes, and there was a tremor in his voice, as he patted the leaping, whirling, barking dog, which seemed to have lost its senses in its paroxysm of delight.

For several days young Waltrup remained at home, leaving at the end of his furlough in the night. The dog was not about, and after a mournful search of the house and grounds next day, the animal settled down to its old task of watching the street from the verandah.

But things did not go well with Henry. The great epidemic of influenza came on, and he was one of its early victims. For days he lay sick in the camp hospital, and at last his eyes closed wearily upon earth, and his spirit fled to regions of peace, where the call of th trumpet does not penetrate.

The body was sent to the dead home, arriving in the night in c of a company sergeant. The after making sure that the rema his comrade reached the careful of the local undertaker, repaired hotel to obtain a little rest. The fc ing morning he we the home of the boy. As he appro the house, the sen dog on the porch pr up its ears, as it done every time a in uniform enterec street. When the geant opened the of the Waltrup pre and entered, the bounded from the p and went into a tr port of joy as it comed the weare that familiar garb.

All the time the geant remained at house of mourning dog was aquiver with excitement happiness. It was with difficulty the collie was kept out of the house, when the soldier appeared the dog dar attendance upon him. It was neces to shut the poor animal up in the ga when the hour for the funeral arri However, after the return of the mou ing household from the cemetery, dog was released. The sergeant ca back to the Waltrup home to say go by to the bereaved family, and t left the house to take his train and turn to camp. The dog followed to the street car, and would not driven away. At last it was necess for neighbors to hold the collie while sergeant boarded the car—after a such as a deeply-touched man co but bestow upon a poor dumb brute whom he was unwillingly causing pa As the car sped away, the collie strugg desperately to free itself. When t trolley was no longer in sight, the d permitted itself to be led back to t Waltrup home—and there upon t lonely porch it resumed its faith vigil for the master who never cou come again.

Seed Dropped by the Wayside

HOW a chance seed of truth, falling in an obscure place, unknown to the sower, may take root and grow, producing a hundredfold, is shown in a story told in a letter from Mrs. Elizabeth F. Brewster, a Methodist missionary in China.

A Chinaman who could not read or write, while on a journey dropped into a roadside house to rest. It proved to be a Christian preaching-place. He was impressed by what he heard, and when he afterward passed that way he dropped in again and again. He told his friends of the new cult, but they scoffed at the idea of any good thing coming from the land of the barbarians.

He finally decided to invite his neighbors into his house to hear the wonderful story that he had heard at the roadside preaching-place.

He went to the village letter-writer and ordered a sign, "Heaven Doctrine Hall," which he put over his front door.

But the new doctrine needed a literature, and that the illiterate apostle was unable to produce. However, he remembered that the laws of the new religion were ten in number, and he racked his brain to recall the commandments which he had heard recited in the preaching-place. The result was another job for the sign-writer, who drew up a tablet to be hung in the Heaven Doctrine Hall:

1. One God.
2. Don't use mud and wood to make gods.
3. Don't use God's name lightly.
4. Six days work, one day rest.
5. Honor your parents.
6. Don't kill.
7. Don't commit adultery.
8. Don't steal.
9. Don't bear false witness.
10. Don't covet.

One more visit to the preaching-plac to refresh his memory and gather i spiration, and he held his first servic His neighbors crowded in to see wh new thing he had to say. His stock Christian doctrine was limited, but made up in fervor, and the truth a pealed to the spiritual hunger of h hearers. In a few weeks he had gath ered a little flock of believers.

Then the congregation began to fe the need of a trained preacher. The had one of their number prepare a pe tition and went to the preaching-plac where their leader had first seen th light. They crowded into the office o Rev. W. N. Brewster, Methodist missionary, since deceased, and handed him the petition. When the missionary saw the hall and the abbreviated Decalogue a tear stood in his eye, but a look of great joy shone from his face. "We will send you a preacher," he said. Like the "certain disciples" whom Paul found at Ephesus, who knew only John's baptism, these disciples were then and there baptized into the name of the Lord Jesus.

◆

The International Institute

THE International Institute is a center where foreign-born women are taught those things which are necessary to attain American standards. San Francisco has three such centers and Los Angeles two, and 262 workers are engaged in this service in thirty cities, among which are New York, Cleveland, Buffalo, St. Louis, Syracuse and St. Paul.

"Is Your Daughter Safe?"

By ALBERT SIDNEY GREGG

Superintendent American Civic Reform Bureau

UNSCRUPULOUS men are ever on the alert to get control of ignorant, foolish and defenseless girls for moral purposes, and as a means of ome defense" every mother should e that her daughter is fully informed out such matters. White slavery and ce thrive because of over-confident, gligent parents and uninstructed rls.

Virtue is sometimes distressingly ind. "Good people" need to be enghtened about this supremely import- it matter. Very little progress will be ade until more fathers and mothers y aside their false ideas and face the cts. The forewarned girl is the forermed girl.

Vice profiteers set all sorts of cunning nares for the purpose of trapping girls. hey insert deceptive advertisements in aily papers, offering desirable positions t large pay; they lie in wait for possible irl victims on trains, interurban cars, t depots, in moving-picture shows, lance halls, theaters, rinks, and churches; they impersonate ministers, deaconsses, Salvation Army workers, and re- pectable old men and women. They perate so cleverly that, very often, evil s not suspected until it is too late for he victim to escape.

A striking instance of such activities recently developed in New York during the trial of a man charged with white slavery. He was induced to tell how he trapped the girls.

"All we have to do," he said, "is to keep an eye on the little towns around New York, and find out when a girl decides to go to the city to get a job. Girls in small towns are always eager to go to the big city for that purpose. When they arrive we are waiting for them. It's a good graft."

Such activities are not limited to the little towns in the vicinity of New York. Every town and village throughout the country has its stories of girls gone wrong. It is so common that many people are no longer shocked. And that is the terrible part of the whole terrible business. A very small proportion of these cases ever gets into court or into print, for the reason that the victims seldom "come back," and if they do they shrink from exposing their misfortune to public gaze. Without the testimony of the victim, the officials cannot prosecute, and thus many a vice profiteer is reluctantly allowed to go free.

After studying this question for years, it is the deliberate conclusion of the officials of the American Civic Reform Union, with headquarters in Cleveland, that sex education is essential to the destruction of white slavery and the promotion of purity.

"A girl who is ignorant of her own sex nature, and of her proper relations with men, is in peril," says the official announcement. "She will more easily become the victim of a white slaver or a libertine than will the girl who has been judiciously instructed by a wise mother, or by the reading of standard books.

"A boy who is early taught the sanctity of his own body by father or mother or by books is less liable to waste his strength and character in vice than is the boy who grows up in ignorance or learns from vile companions."

With the foregoing conclusions in view, the American Civic Reform Union is developing a system of Welfare Circles throughout the United States the object of which is to promote sex education among young people of both sexes, expose methods of white slavers, trace missing girls, and prosecute men who lure girls into vice.

A Welfare Circle is started by appointing a woman to serve as leader. This leader is supplied with a set of approved books dealing with the subjects indicated, which are loaned among the young people and their parents. There are several advantages in this plan. It enables any woman with average ability to do the work. She is not required to be an expert in social reform. All that is required of her is to see that the books are kept moving. The books are the property of the Union and are merely loaned. Each leader is expected to see that the entire set is read by at least one hundred people.

This plan avoids all the objectionable features of public oral teaching or class-room instruction. There is no opportunity for profitless talk. If a girl who is reading the books comes across things that she does not quite understand, she is expected to ask the leader, and if the leader cannot answer them she may write to the superintendent of the Union. This plan is also a great aid to parents, for the reading of the books will in a large measure accomplish the same results as parental instruction. The books are adapted to both boys and girls, and may be read with profit by parents. They are by experts and unobjectionable. No charge is made for the books by the Reform Union, and additional books will be supplied to any leader if desired. It is a simple, practical, effective plan for safeguarding girls from vice, and for promoting purity among boys and young men.

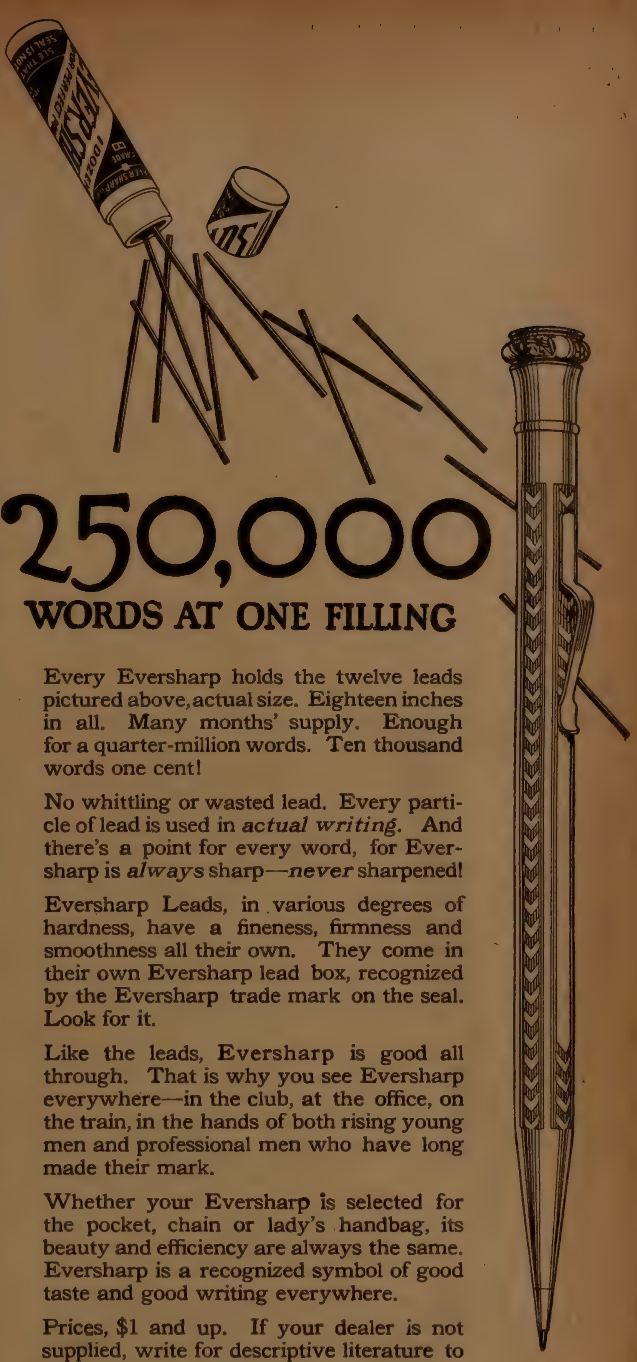
Welfare leaders are now at work in a number of states, and it is the purpose of the Reform Union to appoint leaders as rapidly as they can be found. The books are in circulation in stores, factories, business colleges, offices, high schools, colleges, clubs, and church societies. Numerous instances have been reported by leaders in which they say they have found many well-raised girls of the 'teen age who were utterly in the dark as to the subject matter of the books, and who were eager to learn about such matters. In one college the girls formed a secret society for the purpose of circulating the Welfare books, and by the time they were through eighty girls had been reached. One leader makes a specialty of seeking out servant girls, and finds them receptive and eager to learn. Still another selected a business girls' organization as her field of operations. One active young woman circulated her books in a biscuit factory where she worked, and in which women of all ages were employed. She reported that many of the older women were as eager to read the books as were the younger girls. It seems that they were all in need of the light. Some of the leaders have enlisted other women as leaders, and so the system has been expanding on the endless chain principle.

Back of the Welfare Circle System is a central management that finds the leaders, supplies the books, and obtains reports. More than that, special help is available for leaders who need it.

It is estimated that there are ten million girls in the United States between the ages of twelve and twenty-four, and about the same number of young men and boys. They are the nation of tomorrow in the making, and they should be protected from everything that may injure them in any way. Many parents are doing their full duty in the matter of instruction, but there are thousands of girls who are neglected, or who, because of death in the family or of poverty, have been forced to battle for a living alone and without help. Men who prey on virtue choose defenseless girls as their possible victims. Such girls deserve the aid of the strong, and for such we plead.

One cannot with a clear conscience, evade the duty of making an effort to safeguard girls on the plea that unfortunate girls are themselves largely to blame for their troubles.

Natural modesty is not a sufficient protection against guile, false lovemaking, deception, drugs or force. There must be understanding and a right purpose as well as modesty. If a girl has a mother who is indifferent the mother should be aroused, and if she has no mother, or is away from home exposed to temptation, it is the duty of those who are wise and strong to help protect her.



250,000 WORDS AT ONE FILLING

Every Eversharp holds the twelve leads pictured above, actual size. Eighteen inches in all. Many months' supply. Enough for a quarter-million words. Ten thousand words one cent!

No whittling or wasted lead. Every particle of lead is used in actual writing. And there's a point for every word, for Eversharp is always sharp—never sharpened!

Eversharp Leads, in various degrees of hardness, have a fineness, firmness and smoothness all their own. They come in their own Eversharp lead box, recognized by the Eversharp trade mark on the seal. Look for it.

Like the leads, Eversharp is good all through. That is why you see Eversharp everywhere—in the club, at the office, on the train, in the hands of both rising young men and professional men who have long made their mark.

Whether your Eversharp is selected for the pocket, chain or lady's handbag, its beauty and efficiency are always the same. Eversharp is a recognized symbol of good taste and good writing everywhere.

Prices, $1 and up. If your dealer is not supplied, write for descriptive literature to aid in selection direct.

THE WAHL COMPANY
1800 Roscoe Street Chicago, Illinois
EASTERN OFFICE: Astor Trust Bldg., 501 5th Ave., New York
BERT M. MORRIS CO., 444 Market Street, San Francisco, Cal.
Western Representatives for Eversharp Pencils and Tempoint Fountain Pens
CANADIAN REPRESENTATIVES:
Rowland & Campbell, Ltd., Winnipeg, Manitoba

The symbol of perfect writing—the mark of Eversharp Pencil and the Tempoint Pen.

DEALERS: Write today for catalog and interesting proposition on Eversharp and Tempoint.

EVERSHARP ALWAYS SHARP—NEVER SHARPENED
Right-Hand Mate to the famous Tempoint Pen

MAIL COUPON AT ONCE FOR THIS BIG FLAG

YOU WILL NEED IT TO UNFURL WHEN THE BOYS COME HOME

4th of JULY, VICTORY CELEBRATIONS, etc.

SEND NO MONEY—SEE THE FLAG FIRST

SIZE 4x6 FEET

Double Stitched Stripes

Brilliant Colors

Illustration is an actual photographic reproduction. Pole is NOT included.

WE GUARANTEE THIS FLAG

to be satisfactory. Do not hesitate to send at once for one before they are all gone. Last year we distributed 35,000 of these flags—and did not receive a single complaint. At that time it was impossible to fill all orders—owing to government restrictions. Consequently thousands of late orders were cancelled. As soon as these restrictions were lifted, we ordered another consignment—but could obtain only a limited quantity. Several months are required to make these big flags—so we cannot quickly obtain another supply when these are gone.

NOT A SINGLE COMPLAINT FROM 35,000 OF THESE FLAGS

WHAT could be a more glorious sign of welcome and unlimited pride in our soldiers than this large, brand-new, brightly colored flag waving triumphantly over your home?

Victory days are now here. Every week thousands of khaki-clad heroes are returning to our shores from the battlefields of Europe. The grand old flag has a deeper meaning to each of them. Home and flag are inseparably linked in their hearts. Show them that their flag is your flag. There never was a time in our history when Old Glory could be more appropriately and proudly displayed than right now. The CHRISTIAN HERALD offers here an opportunity to secure one of these big 4 x 6 foot flags, large enough for church, school or home.

VICTORY celebrations are coming thick and fast. Holidays—special meetings—and reunions require the display of Old Glory! Fly this brand-new flag in vivid colors, to show your patriotism.

We make it easy for you to secure this splendid large flag

By placing an order for thousands of these flags, we were able to purchase them at a considerable reduction. We will give you the benefit of this saving and have made the terms so liberal that all may take advantage of this offer.

Send No Money Now

Merely Fill Out Blank

We want you to see what a really wonderful value this flag is and will send one to you, all charges prepaid by us, for you to examine. If, after five days, you decide not to keep the flag, return it at our expense, and you will be under no obligation. You need not purchase it unless convinced of its value. But, if you decide to keep the flag, send $1.00 within five days after its receipt, and $1.00 a month for three months, a total of $4.00. This pays for the flag and also for your subscription to the CHRISTIAN HERALD for one year (subscription price alone $2.50). You will receive 52 issues of the CHRISTIAN HERALD and the flag. If at present a subscriber, your subscription will be extended one year from the date of expiration.

If you want one—and you surely will—fill out the coupon and mail at once. You must act quickly to get the benefit of this offer, which will be withdrawn as soon as our present stock is gone, as we cannot replenish our supply except at an advance in price. Don't delay. Send the coupon today.

SEND NO MONEY—MERELY FILL OUT COUPON

CHRISTIAN HERALD, 1899 Bible House, New York, N. Y.

GENTLEMEN:—Send me, all charges prepaid, for examination, the large American Flag. If I decide to keep it I will send $1.00 within 5 days and $1.00 per month thereafter for three months, a total of $4.00, for which you are to send me the Christian Herald for one year (52 issues). If I do not keep the flag I will send it back within five days at your expense. I incur no other obligation in mailing this coupon.

Name__________________________________

Address________________________________

(A single cash payment of $3.50 can be made if preferred.)

LOVE

ational Sunday School Lesson for June 22. I Cor. 13.

reatest Bond Between Men and Nations

ev. George D. Allison, Ph.D.

COME today to the study of the greatest word in Christian speech, to the central doctrine Christian teaching. Christian how sublime a thing it can be! d how these Christians love one !" was the exclamation of pagan- en Christian love was a new thing world. "One loving spirit sets on fire," was Augustine's pro- or the spread of the teachings of nto all the earth.

that love is hard to define. It ny diverse applications and forms ession. It may be very firm and evere on occasion, as well as win- nd gentle. It is based on the in- on of a great ideal. It is grounded evolence toward all, not passive wishing" but forthreaching "well- ." It is an attitude of the soul, given to the life by genuine affilia- ith Christ. Paul in his wonderful to love in First Corinthians has us its very atmosphere and spirit. Christian world still has need to of the apostle that one can have iposing array of the virtues and niss utterly the supreme grace of ord Jesus, which is his legacy— e one another as I have loved you." rosity, morality, culture, eloquence, sacrifice—each, as he points out misses its truest being without Jesus uses love in his key-utter- as his master-word, just as we see it is the key to his life and charac- "Thou shalt love God and thy ibor" summed up law and prophets im. We in turn see that his life be summed up in like terms. "As other that ever lived, he loved . and his neighbor."

The Sources of Love

We love him because he first loved From the ministry of our Saviour flowed age-long bounty of Christian iousness in self-giving. One might add a complementary saying to this iliar one, namely, "We love others ause he first loved us." When the ental delegates at the Chicago rld's Fair were asked what most im- ssed them in the great city, they l, "The wonderful free hospitals, and ll House." Where Christian love never penetrated there are no won- ful free hospitals, and no settlements ong the poor wholly devoted to their lift and their well-being. In far-off dia or China the new convert to ristianity feels his heart "filled with e to every living thing!"

Christian love not only takes its rise m the personality of the Master, but draws its power from his conception of e Father. His closest friend summed Christian theology in the phrase God is love." For Jesus so portrayed d that love is not merely one of his tributes, along with power, wisdom, , but that love is his very essence, ich makes his power a loving power, wisdom a loving wisdom, and his niscience fundamentally a loving praisal of his creation.

Paul in another place gives us a olden Text of love which shows what t of ground in a human heart is con- nial to this fruitful plant. "The end the charge is love, out of a pure heart d a good conscience and faith un- igned" is his injunction to his follower mothy (I Tim. 1 : 5). Without puri- of motive love is hopelessly compro- ised; indeed it cannot function at all. d men need to be converted, to get "new heart," before they can be ex- cted to look upon their neighbors in hristian love. An uneasy conscience fatal to the Christ-attitude to life; it eeds suspicion and self-protection and ecks every truly loving impulse before comes to fruition in deeds, in life. d "faith unfeigned"—ah, that is es- ntial, because love to men is based so on a recognition of value in them and in their friendship. Without faith in men one cannot continue to serve them in love. Jesus had faith in people, and in all sorts of people. He believed in them, he believed really that God Almighty cared about them, even the least, and so of course he loved them. "Jesus loved Martha, and her sister, and Lazarus," and Peter and James, and so on through the whole list of all whom his life has helped. Pure-mindedness, right-living and faith are the soil in which love grows wondrously.

Love is the ground of assurance in our salvation. "By this we know that we have passed from death unto life, because we love the brotherhood." Where love is, there is God. "There is my blessed assurance; I make mistakes, I blunder, I say the wrong thing, I give way to temptation, but thanks be to God I love! I love men, my brothers. How poorly I show it! How foolishly I conceal it! How sinfully I fail in living it! Yet I love men and it gives me the sense of God's presence."

Love Near and Love Far

Christian love sweetens and hallows every relationship. We use the expression Christian family, and unconsciously realize that Christian love revolutionizes even the universal relationship of husband and wife, of parent and child, of brothers and sisters. See what Christian love does in friendship, from the group of names inseparably linked with Paul's in the New Testament to the deep lasting groupings made in every town in America by a band of people whose common tie is their loyalty to Jesus in the fellowship of a church.

But the constraining love of Christ is not based on mere propinquity. By its power men really care about the destinies of myriads beyond the seas, men whom they have never seen or known. One can see in the discussion of the League of Nations, that Christian love impels men to consider the welfare of other lands than their own and makes them predisposed to some such rearrangement of human affairs. On the other hand considerable, though not all, of the opposition comes from men who have not the Christian spirit, whose patriotism is such a narrow thing that we fear its core is in self-interest alone.

Christian love of country is a noble and holy thing. It is far removed from jingoism and spreadeagleism. It is not blind to the nation's sins, but longs for the realization of her highest ideals. It can not say, "My country right or wrong," but says with a more thoughtful patriot, "My country: when she is right to keep her right, and when she is wrong to make her right."

But Christians from the beginning have been world-patriots too. They learned it in the Lord's Prayer, "Thy kingdom come." They corrected the ancient Jews' narrow nationalism with the prophetic spirit which was in Isaiah when he said, "It is too light a thing that thou shouldest be my servant to raise up the tribes of Jacob and to restore the preserved of Israel; I will also give thee for a light to the nations, that thou mayest be my salvation to the ends of the earth."

Our topic is timely. The lasting bond between nations as between individuals is not mere contract and agreement, still less is it economic interdependence and trade; it is essentially that mutual respect, mutual forbearance and mutual well-wishing which are involved in Christian love. Without Christian love the League of Nations will fail as the old belligerent nationalism has failed. The hope of the world is in the spirit which sent Paul on the first missionary journey, which sent Livingstone to Africa and Judson to Burma, which dictated the return of the Boxer indemnity to China.

And there is but one test of Christian love. It is not by the creed men say, nor the hymns they sing, nor the speeches they make, not even by the money they give away. "By their fruits shall ye know them."

Heat will not break Havoline Oil

THE heat created by a burst of speed or the pull up a long, steep hill will not break Havoline Oil.

The character of Havoline Oil never varies. It is as uniform as anything can be, never differing even occasionally from its fixed, highly corrected standard of lubrication for motor cars. It spreads a constant, protecting film on hot cylinders and in crank bearings that prevents the ravages of friction.

It is refined and classed so carefully that there is a grade of Havoline Oil fitting exactly the requirements of your passenger car, truck, or tractor.

Your experience or our printed matter will tell you the grade best suited to your need.

Havoline greases are compounded of Havoline Oil and pure, sweet tallow, clean to handle and correct in body

INDIAN REFINING COMPANY, NEW YORK
Incorporated
Producers and Refiners of Petroleum

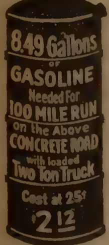
HAVOLINE OIL
REG. U. S. PAT. OFF.
"It makes a difference"
COPYRIGHT

Concrete Roads and Gasoline

11.78 miles per gallon of gasoline on this concrete road. This is over double the mileage obtained on the earth road opposite.

5.78 miles per gallon of gasoline on this earth road—less than half the mileage obtained on the concrete road opposite.

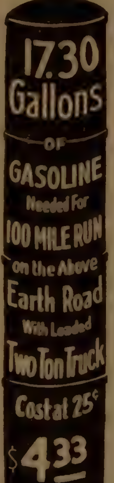
Why Spend $2 $1 will do



Tests made last September at Cleveland, Ohio, with five 2-ton White trucks carrying full load, showed that on an earth road in fair condition, gasoline consumption was twice that on a concrete road.

The diagrams to the left and right illustrate the relative quantities of gasoline and its cost, used by one truck in making a 100-mile run under the same condition of load over the two roads pictured above. Think what 5,000,000 motor vehicles would save in gasoline alone if they always traveled on concrete!

Since one gallon of gasoline will carry you twice as far on a concrete road as it will on an earth road, why waste the other gallon?



You pay the price of good roads whether you get them or not—and if you pay for concrete roads they pay you back.

Let's Stop This Waste!

Illinois, Pennsylvania and Michigan have voted big, road bond issues to do away with the mud tax. Many other states and counties are going to do the same thing.

When You Think of Roads—Think of Concrete
When You Ride—Ride on Concrete

Write our nearest District Office for free copy of "Concrete Pavements Pay for Themselves" and "Facts About Concrete Roads."

PORTLAND CEMENT ASSOCIATION OFFICES AT ATLANTA, CHICAGO, DALLAS, DENVER, DES MOINES, DETROIT, HELENA, INDIANAPOLIS, KANSAS CITY, MILWAUKEE, MINNEAPOLIS, NEW YORK, PARKERSBURG, PITTSBURGH, SALT LAKE CITY, SEATTLE, ST. LOUIS, WASHINGTON

PAVE THE ROAD—DOUBLE THE LOAD

THE DAI

J. H. Jowett, D.D., Charles M. Sheldon, D.D., Rev. Edwin V

Knowledge of the Spiritual Sky

SUNDAY. Luke 12:56. "Ye can discern the face of the sky and of the earth: but how is it that ye do not discern this time?" These folk were weather-wise. They had the garnered lessons of experience. When they saw a cloud rising in the west they knew that it meant rain. When a wind blew from the south they were sure of heat. The two things always went together. One brought the other. They came in unalterable sequence—west wind and rain, south wind and heat. And so the weather-wise could discern and interpret the face of the sky and they acted accordingly.

But our Lord declares that there are multitudes of people who can put two and two together and read the significance of the skies who seem to be dull and unschooled in the discernment of moral and spiritual weather. For here, too, clouds and south winds have a certain fixed significance. Happenings do not travel alone without any train or sequence. Nor are they chaotic, appearing in one relationship today and in an opposite relationship tomorrow. In the moral and spiritual skies a north wind does not fitfully change its character and come laden with tropical heat; nor does a south wind confuse all reckonings and become the chilling servant of arctic snows. The relationships are constant. The same cause and the same conditions produce the same effects. But Jesus Christ says many people are not learned in moral and spiritual issues. They are not impressed by their unalterable order. They are often more concerned about their journey to market than they are about their journey to Zion.

It is an imperative necessity that we recognize the imperious presence of law and order in the spiritual world. When we pass from the material heavens to the spiritual heavens we do not pass from law to accident, and from constancy to caprice. The nineteenth Psalm puts them both under one divine sovereignty. It opens with the material heavens: "The heavens declare the glory of God, and the firmament sheweth his handiwork." It closes with the spiritual heavens: "The law of the Lord is perfect." J. H. J.

The New Service Flag

MONDAY. Dan 12:3. "And they that are wise shall shine as the brightness of the firmament; and they that turn many to righteousness as the stars for ever and ever." "When the boys are all back, what will you do with your service flag which has hung on the church wall during their absence?" asked one minister of another.

"We intend to let it hang there as a historical memory, but we are planning to make another flag to put beside it."

"What is that?"

"A new flag of service, the missionary flag. We have already ten of our young people who when the war broke out were serving in missionary lands. One of them was in north China, two in India, three in Japan, one in West Africa, one in the Philippines, and two in the Caucasus. We have also eight student volunteers, who are preparing themselves to go into missionary or medical service."

"Our plan is to make a flag which will show the hemispheres. On the surface of these hemispheres we will sew silver stars, one for each of our missionaries, putting the star on that part of the earth where each worker is serving, with his name. Then as fast as our young people enter missionary service we will add stars to correspond with the others.

"In addition to that we will organize classes in our Bible school to make special study of each one of these mission fields, write and receive letters and missionary material from the particular worker in the field, and fro ime time give missionary progr as a pageants illustrating the work n the fields. In that way we hope o ke alive the heroic spirit in our c rch.

"It is the business of the ch h, no the material war is over and ivers peace promises to put an end phy cal fighting, to educate the y g me and women to the truth that e stmen in the army of God is just as essar and heroic as enlistment in e w with Germany. The missio y fl will occupy a place of honor by e sid of the flag of war service." C. M. S.

Hope

TUESDAY. I Thess. 5:8. "An for an helmet, the hope of sa tion." The helmet protected the rior's head, so hope removes fear an trem bling, making the Christian oldie strong in the confidence of tory. Hope is half the battle; it is the inspiration of music to marc s; it helps to lift one's eyes to th hills, whence cometh our strength. Hope beholds the power within th veil, where the Forerunner dwelleth, there the anchor of hope holds. Hope fused to look on the dark side, seein only light and liberty beyond. Hope ever studies the lesson of retreat, bu ever moves forward, following the bec ming beam of heavenly shining. Hope the angel of the inventor and disc er, as well as of the soldier and Chr an. When men lose hope, they fain and perish. Then the dynamo is b ten, the fire is dead, the light has gon ut.

Therefore we are saved by ope. Christ is in the soul as a present er- ience and a glorious hope of imm al- ity. We are more than conqu rs, thrilled with this divine expect n. Hope makes us more and more lik m in resurrection life and spotless be y.

The Beloved John is called the a le of love; Peter and Paul, of hope; J s, of faith; but all are one in Christ. e is the anchor, faith the cable, and e the Rock of Ages.

Hope is the helmet crown on the of the other graces. He who hath hope purifieth himself even as C is pure. He dwells already in the ginnings of his inheritance. The fl of hope from his helmet crest illu the dark valley; in age and feeble the battle is over, the fight is won; has enabled you to keep the faith win the crown as morning dawns on shining shore of the haven. Let protect the head with hope, for i where thought dwells, where plans made, will decides, conscience dire and reason works. Losing the h we lose all; for head and heart are E. W. C

The Judgment of This Worl

WEDNESDAY. John 12: "Now is the judgment of t world." Set that decision, framed the first years of the Christian era, this year of this era. It is as accura now as then, and more appropria History is the most satisfying comme tator on the Scriptures. Let time alo and it will supply the real exegesis the Book of God and the cryptic sa ings of Christ. People strain and fr and sweat about whether these are t last days. 'Tis a humorous folly. course these are the last days earth h had, but it does not follow they are th last days it will have. God publishe his own almanac in his own time, where fore we need not extemporize an al manac. There will be a last day, final Judgment Day, when "small an great shall stand before God, there to give an account for the deeds done in the body" (how sublime and awe-full a declaration that is! Not all Grecian literature knows any such stupendous affirmation); and we do witlessly to infer that there is no other day of Judg-

EDITATION

William A. Quayle, Professor W. H. T. Dau, C. C. Albertson, D.D.

We are told better. He-Who- said explicitly "Now is the judg- of this world come." That day ays on us. Each day is Judgment

l to us in our vast times peopled wars and riots and shadows of ution, comes such an age of judg- as since the day of the Christ- ation has not been witnessed. ce Conference sits in judgment on ations. They omit Mexico and any from a roster of right peoples. sit and measure out justice, or rying to do it. They are writing a sword for a scribe "The nation sinneth, it shall die," and "Now e judgment of this world come." d, utterly forgotten for so long as ve seemed to have slipped from the ory of God, is having its case ad- ated. Armenia is beginning to (thank God, for she has not smiled so long I had thought she had otten how to smile). Palestine, the Land, the Land of God, is breaking of the thrall of wicked polygamist key to have the right as a Christian and should be kept for the lovers Christ and not solely for Moses' iples. And shameless Germany is g bidden to leave the room where lization assembles. Now is the judg- t of this world apparent, and it s not require a prophet to declare t in the light of this visible, audible, sent-day judgment there is set a day which God shall judge the world.

his thing is as certain as the rising the tide. W. A. Q.

"This Great and Wide Sea"

HURSDAY. Psalm 107 : 23, 26. "They that go down to the sea in ps." "They mount up to the heaven, y go down again to the depths." The in its immensity, wild wastes and explored depths is full of mystery. w many went out with the tide the st few years and never returned again! ey sleep in the depths of the deep e sea, while millions of homes are solated. They rest from their labors they rise with us in the deathless e.

Some have said prayers and dropped reaths of flowers over the sea where e ship went down, while the minor oan of solemn music from the rolling aves and winds joined in the funeral nthem. Only a plank is between us nd those invisible, mysterious depths here lie unconfined our dear ones. What revelations the sea could make of s unsearchable riches, argosies of treas- re, Westminster Abbeys of the loved nd great!

The ocean mirrors God as grandly as ny object in the natural world. No yndicate disputes your right of way cross its waters. "Whosoever will ay come," is the sea's free call to all ationalities. God's path is in the reat waters. He goeth before thee; is love is measureless as the great deep nd as munificent. The sea bares its ast bosom to the sun, that all climes ay be blessed with the mists of the orning, the verdure and beauty of ield and forest. Without the ocean he earth would be a planet of barren ock. Christ is the sun of righteousness, hining upon the ocean of God's love.

E. W. C.

Hearers and Doers

FRIDAY. James 1 : 22. "Be ye doers of the Word, and not hearers ly." As a rule, we regard it as a hope- l sign when a person reads his Bible t home and begins to go to church. y these acts he places himself at least within the reach of the means of grace, nd as we have the promise that the Word of God never returns void, but eing quick and powerful always effects he Lord's purpose, we are confident hat good will result to such a person. James does not discount our confidence, but directs and shapes it so as to insure its realization. When he warns us not to be hearers only he evidently approves of hearing, and nothing is more foreign to him than to speak slightingly of Bible-reading and church-attendance.

Occasionally we meet with people who claim that they can be as good without as within the Church. They will cite to us instances of church members who show by their conduct that their church-going has not benefited them, and they will ask triumphantly: Now what good is there in going to church? In one respect such critics are useful to the church: they prove by their very carping that they expect to see good results from a person's church-attendance. They know what church-going is for, and their criticism merely serves to quiet their own conscience, which reproves them for not doing what they know they ought to do.

But our attention is drawn to these unhappy church-goers for another reason. While they are doing the church some harm, they inflict greater harm and misery upon themselves. The apostle says, they are "deceiving their own selves." They imagine they have accomplished the all of Christianity by the mechanical act of going to preaching and sitting through the service in the attitude of attentive listeners.

Preaching is not an end in itself, but only a means to an end. No one ever came to relish his faith until he began to practise it. Our convictions are put to the test when we begin to live up to them. It is then that we come to realize what a great and good thing the Word which we have heard really is. The better doers we are, the better hearers we shall be.

W. H. T. D.

Seeking the Kingdom

SATURDAY. Matt. 6 : 33. "Seek ye first the kingdom of God and his righteousness; and all these things shall be added unto you." The parables of the lost sheep and the lost coin were evidently designed to call attention to a phase of the kingdom of God which we often ignore, namely, the elusive quality of it. The kingdom of God is something which must be sought. The shepherd sought his sheep and the woman her coin. The kingdom of God does not come to us. We go to it. We must search to find it. It does not lie upon the surface of things, obvious and visible. The primary emphasis in this verse is upon the verb "seek." It is an interesting word in the original. One of its various meanings is, "to beat a bush for birds under cover." Hunters know what that means, what care, what adroitness, what keenness of sight and quickness of motion.

Jesus never puts the seeking of spiritual ends in opposition to the seeking of temporal good. He was a thoroughly practical thinker. He saw life clearly and as a whole.

Henry Drummond gives us the suggestive phrase, "first things first." Some things must always come first or nothing turns out right. To those who think truly and who seek to live on a high plane, mere physical life never comes first when thought of it is in competition with care for the deeper things of life, such as honor, conscience, trustworthiness, love, truth, character. The kingdom of God is the kingdom of righteousness and peace and joy. We seek the kingdom when we labor to establish righteousness and peace and joy upon the permanent basis of justice, brotherhood and good will. This is the kingdom we are to seek. We are to seek it with humility. We are to seek it in unlikely places and among unlovely people. We are to seek it when we would rather seek something else. We are to give preference to the things which God prefers. This it is to seek the kingdom and to seek it first.

C. C. A.

There's Comfort in Every Step

UNITED STATES RUBBER COMPANY
US
RUBBER SYSTEM
AND ASSOCIATED COMPANIES

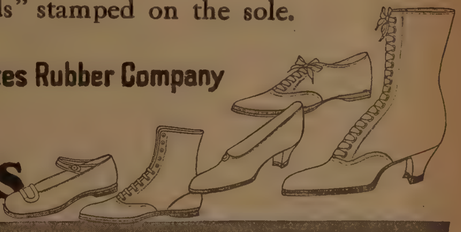
Every woman who knows Keds will agree that they combine style with unusual comfort. They're so light and restful, so good-looking, so suitable with their wide range of styles for every summer occasion.

Indoors and outdoors, these canvas rubber-soled shoes are the vogue—for lawn parties, sports, outings, street and home.

In Keds, you get unmistakable value. They're quality shoes through and through.

Ask for Keds at any good shoe store. You should be able to obtain just the style you want and for each member of the family. Look for the name "Keds" stamped on the sole.

United States Rubber Company



Keds

"Get Wise, Dad, Wear B.V.D."
Copyright U.S.A. 1919 by The B.V.D. Company.

Many a young fellow has taught his father the cool comfort of B.V.D. Have you?

B.V.D. quality can only be obtained in B.V.D. Underwear

If it hasn't this Red Woven Label

MADE FOR THE B.V.D.
BEST RETAIL TRADE
(Trade Mark Reg. U.S. Pat. Off. and Foreign Countries)

It isn't B.V.D. Underwear

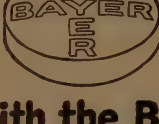
B. V. D. Coat Cut Undershirt and Knee Length Drawers, $1.00 the Garment

B. V. D. Sleeveless Closed Crotch Union Suits (Pat. U. S. A.), $1.75 the Suit

THE B. V. D. COMPANY
NEW YORK

Copyright U.S.A. 1917 by The B.V.D. Company



Genuine
Bayer-Tablets of Aspirin

An unmarked tablet is like an anonymous letter—seldom honest, sometimes dangerous and always a thing to beware of.

TABLETS
Tin pocket boxes of 12
Bottles of 24
Bottles of 100

CAPSULES
Sealed packages of 12
Sealed packages of 24
Sealed bottles of 100

Marked with the Bayer-Cross for Your Additional Protection

Aspirin is the trade mark of Bayer Manufacture of Monoaceticacidester of Salicylicacid

EARN EXTRA MONEY

The Christian Herald needs additional representatives to procure renewal subscriptions. Experience not necessary. A special proposition is ready for those who wish to build up a business of their own. You can put your whole time on our work—or you can work during spare hours. Send a postal today for complete information of our special offer to agents.

AGENCY DEPARTMENT, Christian Herald, Bible House, New York, N. Y.

The German Fleet's Sea Pr

By REV. ALEXANDER ROBERTSON, D.D., Veni

SCAPA FLOW has come into public notice because it was during the war the headquarters of the British Grand Fleet, and because it is there that now the German Fleet is interned. It is a sheet of water, about twelve miles square, lying among the southern islands of the Orkney group, which again lies, as every one knows, to the north of the mainland of Scotland, only separated from it by the Pentland Firth. The Orkney Islands are some sixty in number and are scattered up and down forty square miles of sea; but when one is among them it is the sea more than the land that fills the mind. Thus, when an Orkney boy was asked by a school inspector: "What is an island?" he answered: "A bit o' the sea with no water in it!"

But it is not only the extent of sea that strikes one in Orkney, but the extent of sky. When I used to live in Orkney, and had friends staying with me in my manse in St. Margaret's Hope, South Ronaldshay, the windows of which commanded a full view of Scapa Flow, they often gave vent to exclamations like this: "Well! I never saw so much sky at one time in my life!" This wide expanse of sea and sky, unobstructed by any obstacle, is an outstanding feature of Orkney scenery. But it is not only the extent of sea and sky that impresses one; it is also the beauty of both. I have sailed over every bit of Scapa Flow, and have been at times pretty sorely beaten about by wind and wave in the little packet-boats—for there were no others in those days. Going up the Flow to attend a presbytery meeting at Kirkwall one winter's day, when a storm suddenly burst upon us, and the waves were breaking over the boat, I remember a fellow passenger saying: "Well, there's one comfort, it can't be worse." Still, even in storm and tempest, sea and sky in Orkney were often grandly beautiful, especially in the eyes of those looking at them out of a window. But it is in the "lang, lang days of summer," when it is never dark—when Orkney resembles the New Jerusalem, for "there is no night there"—that sea and sky are dressed in inconceivable loveliness. I have seen beautiful sunsets in Italy and charming reflections of sky coloring on the waters of the Mediterranean and Adriatic, but they were of short duration. The sun sank quickly deep down below the horizon and they were gone. But in Orkney, in summer time, the sun simply skirts it, and hardly goes out of sight at all. It makes but a short shallow arc below the horizon and is up again; so the sunset glories last for hours. Visitors looking at them across Scapa Flow of a June evening could rarely be persuaded to go to bed. Its wide expanse of water would lie before them like a burnished mirror, reflecting all the rainbow tints of the overarching sky. These colors would gradually soften as the sun dipped into the sea, but they never faded away. They enabled one to watch the sun's progress as it traveled slowly eastward, and the light grew fainter, but never so weak that we could not read with ease a small printed book at a north window. Then about midnight it would begin to strengthen and brighten again and "shine more and more unto the perfect day." A story is told of two Scotsmen, who, arriving in Orkney one evening, adjourned to a restaurant for supper and thought they would sit there till dark. They sat all night, and when told it was the next morning, their astonishment was amusing. "This is a rare country," cried one; "daylight all night!"

NOW, what exactly is Scapa Flow, and where is it? As I have said, it is a great inland sea among the southern islands of the Orkney group, separated from the mainland of Scotland, the Caithness coast, by the Pentland Firth. It is sheltered on all sides from the storms of the Atlantic Ocean and the North Sea, but, as I have already hinted, it has its own storms often severe enough. It is a flow; that is to say, there are strong, swift currents running through it by channels or which connect it with the Atla and the North Sea. On its w it is bounded by the mountain of Hoy, beyond which there i till America is reached. Hoy a wall of rock to the Atlanti which beat continually its Standing clear of its precipit is a huge stack of rock, which two legs and so was called the of Hoy. It is a famous landn I was always glad to get past going to Orkney from Thurso, I knew the worst part of the vo over. This was the route taken Kitchener on his ill-fated vessel

To the north and east, Scapa bounded by what is called the n of Orkney; to the south it is bou South Ronaldshay, with its s bay and village. The name of lage, "St. Margaret's Hope," round the bay, with my old chu manse on the high ground be sounds romantic. It is so nam Margaret, the "Maid of Norwa grandchild of Alexander III of S She was betrothed, as a child, to of King Edward I of England, a on her way to his court when h was driven by bad weather to ta ter here, and here she died, and it was buried in the Cathedral in Ki

THE only entrance to Scapa F big ships is by the Pentland Fir posite John O'Groat's House. B not always easy to enter, owing strong current running in the fi have seen a sailing vessel, caught current, carried through from th lantic to the North Sea, then, wh tide turned, carried back again t Atlantic, and once more back ag the North Sea. As an Orkneyma to me, as we once watched the r tide: "It gluffs (frightens) the gers." But while big vessels can enter the Flow by the Pentland smaller ones can do so by the "sou of which I spoke, although all entr and exits are difficult.

A curious thing is that all the p churches are built on the seashore, no windows toward the land, or few, but with a splendid outlook on sea. I have been told that this wa arrangement to enable the peopl look out for boats in distress. The lowing story is told of a minister in S Ronaldshay. When preaching, he the people were restless and always ing seaward. First one man w quietly pop out and then another. knew what it was—a wreck. And s stopped and said: "Brethren, that is fair. I shall pronounce the benedict and then. . . ." He did so, and down the pulpit stairs and out to wreck before the members of his fl had recovered themselves. But all t is a thing of the past, for, as I have sa the people are comfortably circu stanced. There is no real poverty n and they are kind and hospitable. O the door of a proprietor's house w carved the lines:

"Come, good folk, and make good che
All civil people are welcome here."

The Orcadians are also eminent moral and religious. When I liv there the Lord's Day was well kept a the churches well attended. In outl ing districts cottage meetings for t aged and feeble, who could not walk the public Sabbath services, were fr quently held. The people know the Bibles well, and the children are diligen ly instructed in religious things.

Now that the war doings in Scap Flow have brought Orkney prominent before the world, perhaps more trave ers than ever may pay the islands a vis during the "lang, lang days of summe and among them not a few from acro the Atlantic. It is the nearest Britis land to America, I should think, an perhaps the day may come when a bo from Boston, or New York, may p into Kirkwall Bay in June when "the is no night there," and when sea and sk are wrapped in inexpressible lovelines

avelers’ Troubles in Wartime

By W. D. MURRAY, of the Y. M. C. A. Mission traveler of today is learning w difficult it is to move about ring war-time. In the first is hard to get out of America, for port is issued unless the appli- ows to the satisfaction of our nent that his going abroad is for efit of the people whose country oses to visit. This obstacle the on of the Y. M. C. A. to the Near easily surmounted, for we were ing to take to the great cities out e helpful influences of our organi- Our passports were readily d.

our troubles had only begun. It t hard to get from Liverpool to n, even if it was February, and a ge of coal made us ride five hours eated cars. (We found the same ge in our London hotel, so that ed for a week in an icebox, unable o get hot water.) But it was not y to get out of London as it was t in. Everybody in authority d to know why we were anxious to Paris, and after we told them were slow in issuing our permits. ly they said we could leave on a cer- day and go by a certain route. then, when we reached the rail- station, the superintendent insisted our tickets were not good on the train that connected with the only However, we went on that train. of us carried an embarkation card ng, in addition to name, destina- etc., “This card should be supplied eu of a nominal roll) to each officer, ant officer, N. C. O. or man, or ian embarking under military au- ity not forming a part of a unit, t, or party, before leaving for his for any journey involving a sea age.”

HE same thing happened in Paris. We got into the city all right, but d it difficult to get a place to sleep, realized that we needed fat pocket- ks if we expected to eat anything ing our stay. But to get out of is—“there's the rub.” Application l to be made to the General Head- rters of the A. E. F. This ultimately ulted in a Movement Order for each us. In it the “Commander-in-Chief the American Expeditionary Forces” lers William D. Murray, an American, n in New York City on the 17th of ly, 1858, a “militarized member of Y. M. C. A.” to go from Paris to nstantinople, between February 18, 19, and May 18, 1919. We discov- d that trains ran occasionally through ly and that we might find a boat at rrento that would land us in Con- antinople some day. We were very ppy, therefore, to learn that the mous Oriental Express was on the ad again; but, alas! it ran only twice week and was for diplomats and offi- rs, and cost over $100 for the three ys' journey. We made our applica- n, nevertheless, to the Ministry of ar, for it is for the present a military ain—and after the usual delay a docu- ent was received which stated “M. illiam D. Murray, Américain, Mission l'Y. M. C. A., est authorisé à occuper: place No. 15, wagon No. 1 de Paris Bucarest.” And a very comfortable ace I had in “No. 15 in wagon No. 1.” e Swiss Consulate had been given a t of the passengers, so that when we ached the border the authorities saw o were passing through their country. Austria-Hungary we were not per- itted to leave the train.

PPARENTLY there is no effort, as yet, to make connections; conse- ently we were not surprised to learn, en we reached Bucarest at midnight, at our train for Constanza had de- rted fifteen minutes before our ar- val! The next train would probably , they told us, two or three days later. turned out to be a wait of only forty- ht hours. This time we found a poor tle remnant of a railroad, with rolling ock that surely cannot roll much nger. Our sleeper was without heat, ht or water, and we carried our own food. While we did not dine in great style, we certainly ate costly food. For our eggs we paid thirty cents apiece, and our half-pound of tea we bought for five dollars! When we reached the Danube, we found the Huns had destroyed the bridge, so that we had to be ferried over. It was with a good deal of satisfaction, however, that we stepped upon the opposite shore, for now, within one week, we had crossed three famous rivers: the Marne, the Rhine and the Danube. A long slow ride in a dilapidated car brought us to Constanza on the Black Sea, only to find that our steamer had sailed four hours before our arrival, and no one knew when there would be another. But by and by, after a couple of days, a boat from Odessa called at our port, and we were off again. This was a beautiful sail of two nights and a day, in a vile little box of a stateroom. This ship, like all the others we have seen, showed the neglect incident to war. Finally, we dropped anchor in the Golden Horn, and after frantic efforts to secure our patronage, a good-looking Turk brought us and all our baggage safely into the great city of Constantinople.

HERE we lingered, ever eagle-eyed for a steamer going to Smyrna. But none appeared, and it began to look as if we were permanently located, unless we retraced our own steps. In the meantime, workers of the Near Eastern Relief Expedition had arrived, and with them were some missionaries bound for Smyrna. This led the obliging Consul-General to put at our disposal a submarine chaser, manned by a fine set of American boys. They carried us over the Sea of Marmora delightfully to Banderma in Asia Minor. We were evidently a new species, for the people turned out en masse to receive us. There was nothing like the Manhattan or the Astor in Banderma, but the express train ran only once a week, so we could do nothing but make the best of it, which we proceeded to do, visited by successive delegations of Turks, Greeks and Armenians, each with his own story to tell to Americans. Finally the night came when our train was to leave. Besides ordinary coaches, there were two sleepers, occupied by our ladies, a coach de luxe in which we men passed a sleepless night, and a good though small diner. Bright and early one Sunday morning we found ourselves in Smyrna, and were heartily welcomed by the missionaries.

DAY by day we looked for a boat for Athens; again and again we said good-by to our new-found friends. At last it was announced that the good ship Barlotta would sail at 6 A.M. on Tuesday. We were called in our hotel at 4, and reached the ship at 5.30, only to find that a slight collision the day before had made it necessary to have an investigation and we would not depart until Wednesday! This looked like a guess, but we did get away after spending forty hours on board tied to the buoy.

We had agreed with ourselves that if we were to finish our proposed tour of inspection in the allotted time, we could only give three days at the utmost to Athens. But now ten days have gone by and here we are, idling away these precious hours in a most expensive hotel—the only one in the city in which we could find rooms. We were fortunate in finding on our arrival that a tramp freight steamer would sail for Port Said just at the time we wanted to go, and that the captain would let us put up our camp beds in the saloon. This looked like a regular picnic, but alas! when we went to the British consul to get our permit we discovered that we had to wire the British authorities at Cairo! This, of course, we did instanter. A week has gone by and we are still waiting for the word from Egypt which will permit us to proceed; and when it comes, then we must find a steamer.

Athens, Greece.

STEPHENSON
SOUTH BEND

Porous, Elastic-Knit Cotton for Comfort

For this summer insure cool comfort by wearing Stephenson form fitting, elastic-knit Cotton Union Suits or Two-Piece Underwear.

Made on Double Spring Needle machines, this thin, light fabric permits easy body movement without binding, absorbs perspiration without getting sticky.

And it is cleaner to wear; your body is fully protected against dust without discomfort to you

Fabric knitted on Double Spring Needle machines is porous. It allows the body to breathe freely through the pores. Body moisture is rapidly evaporated and you do not have the feeling of "hot weather fatigue" that comes from a less porous fabric.

Stephenson Cotton Union Suits are made in full length sleeve and leg; quarter length sleeve and three quarter length leg and also in Athletic Style.

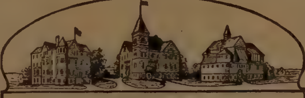
For men accustomed to the athletic type of Underwear, Stephenson Double Spring Needle Cotton Athletics afford a new idea in underwear comfort. All styles of Stephenson Underwear made in Special Stouts for Heavy Set men.

Overshirts for Sports or Work

Wool overshirts for Sports, Fishing, Tramping or Work are the choice of men who know. Stephenson Wool Overshirts, made in all sizes, cost half as much as flannel and wear twice as long.

Ask your dealer to show you Stephenson Wool Over-Shirts.

STEPHENSON UNDERWEAR MILLS
South Bend, Indiana



Learn Photography

Good-paying positions in the best studios in the country await men and women who prepare themselves now. For 25 years we have successfully taught

Photography, Photo-Engraving and Three-Color Work

Our graduates earn $25 to $75 a week. We assist them to secure these positions. Now is the time to fit yourself for an advanced position at better pay. Terms easy; living inexpensive. Largest and best school of its kind. Write for catalog today.

ILLINOIS COLLEGE of PHOTOGRAPHY
Box C.H., 970 Wabash Avenue, Effingham, Illinois

GORDON

Theological, Missionary, Religious-Educational College course. Graduate School of Theology (3 year). Collegiate and advanced degrees. Two year collegiate training course. Interdenominational, evangelistic. New, fireproof buildings, with dormitories. Organized religious work. Self-support. Catalog. Nathan R. Wood, President. GORDON BIBLE COLLEGE, Boston, Mass.

Skin Tortured Babies Sleep After Cuticura

All druggists; Soap 25, Ointment 25 and 50, Talcum 25. Sample each free of "Cuticura, Dept. M, Boston."

Ocean Travel ON THE Inland Seas!

Magnificient D & C Lake Steamers are in Daily Service, Detroit and Cleveland, Detroit and Buffalo; four trips weekly on the Coast Line to "America's most beautiful island"— Mackinac. On D & C Steamers you can always keep in touch with your affairs by wireless.

Detroit and Cleveland Navigation Co.

Philip H. McMillan, Pres., A. A. Schantz, V. P. & Gen. Mgr.

Send 3c stamp for booklet to

L. G. LEWIS, Gen. Pas. Agent, 9 Third Avenue. Detroit

Jingle Contest

If you can write a jingle,
--One that sets the blood a-tingle,
To sail the waters blue, with pleasant skies-- Come now married folks and single,
With the winning jinglers mingle,
And wear a brooch of gold--for that's the prize.

Five gold "Sea Goddess" Brooches, jewel-set for women, will be awarded the best jinglers. The twenty-five next best efforts will be rewarded with brooches of lesser value.

Jingle Contest Closes July 1
Mail to "Jingle Editor"

Detroit and Cleveland Navigation Company
Detroit, Mich.

© B & B 1919

Wives of Doctors
Don't Have Corns

Doctors all know Blue-jay.

It is made by a surgical dressing house whose products doctors use.

Doctors' wives, when a corn appears, apply a Blue-jay plaster. The pain stops instantly. The corn is forgotten.

In two days they remove the plaster, and the corn is gone for good. Hardly one corn in ten needs a second application.

Millions of others do likewise. People who know the facts don't pare corns now, or pad them, or use old, harsh, mussy treatments.

They don't use methods, long discredited, made by unscientific men.

Try Blue-jay on one corn. Learn how instantly the pain stops. Watch the corn disappear.

Try it tonight, and from that moment you will simply laugh at corns.

B&B Blue=jay
The Scientific Corn Ender

Stops Pain Instantly Ends Corns Completely
25 Cents—At Druggists

BAUER & BLACK Chicago, New York, Toronto
Makers of Sterile Surgical Dressings and Allied Products.

(995)

Last Year's Hat Made Good as New With

Colorite
REG. U.S. PAT. OFFICE
COLORS OLD & NEW STRAW HATS

GRATEFULLY said by millions of women last year and to be said by millions more during 1919. Make up your mind to save the price of a new hat and still have one that will look as good as new—so fine that even your intimate friends won't know it isn't new. Colorite is the magic liquid that comes in a bottle with a brush for applying. Water-proof and durable, dries in thirty minutes, and can be applied by anyone. Don't be fooled by imitations, insist upon Colorite. Buy by the name. Directions on each box for mixing to obtain most any shade.

Can also be used for coloring Satin, Silk and Canvas Slippers, Basketry, Leather Hand Bags and Belts.

Sold by Drug and Department Stores throughout the United States and Canada. Buy by the Name COLORITE from your dealer.

Sent postpaid for 30c if your dealer cannot supply you. Be sure to name color you want.

16 Colors to Suit Your Tastes

Jet Black
Dull Black
Cardinal Red
Yellow
Navy Blue
Cadet Blue
Victory Blue
Sage Green
Cerise
Burnt Straw
Brown
Violet
Lavender
Old Rose
Gray
Natural

CARPENTER-MORTON COMPANY
Established 1840
Makers of the Famous Economy Products
83 SUDBURY STREET BOSTON, MASS.
Canadian Distributors: A. RAMSAY & SON CO., Montreal.

The Apocalyptic Psalms

By JAMES M. GRAY, D.D., Dean Moody Bible Institute,

THIS article is a kind of supplement to a previous one entitled, "Where John Found His Thousand Years." That was intended as a reply to those who object that the doctrine of a Millennium is comparatively recent, and that for the most part it is based on a single reference in the Apocalypse of John.

It was shown that while the word "Millennium," or a specific reference to the "Thousand Years," is found nowhere else than in the Apocalypse, yet the period itself, though otherwise identified, is found in Scripture again and again. A particular passage dwelt upon in proof was "the Little Apocalypse of Isaiah" 24 : 21–23; but, as was stated, that passage could be duplicated in several other books, in Ezekiel, for example, Hosea, Micah, Joel. And not only in the prophets, but in the books of Moses, and very especially the Psalms.

As a matter of fact, the real key to the interpretation of the Psalms, taken as a whole, is the Millennium.

Dr. John Urquhart, the Biblical scholar of Edinburgh, and later, we believe, of Melbourne, who maintains the above view, regards the whole book of Psalms as formed of a combination of twelve sections. Each of these sections, in his view, contains a continuous recurring story of the establishment of God's Kingdom on earth, in which Psalms of complaint and pleading on Israel's part are followed by those of jubilation for deliverance. In some of these jubilations the whole earth join.

These twelve sections are indicated to Dr. Urquhart by the following jubilant Psalms: 10; 18; 24; 30; 48; 68; 76; 85; 100; 118; 136; 150. To quote him further: "In the first cycle of ten there is progress from the announcement of judgment (1), and manifestations of Christ (2), through his rejection (3–7), suffering and ascension (8), the waiting and persecution of his people Israel (9), to the consummation of all things."

This analysis may not commend itself to all, but it is interesting and provocative of thought. The main point, however, that the Psalms, or a certain part of them, are Millennial in their final application, has the support of no small number of scholars. For example, the five Psalms closing with the 100th are styled by Professor Binnie, "Songs of Millennium."

"What is it they celebrate?" asks Dr. West in his Studies in Eschatology; to which he replies, "the glorious Kingdom of the Messiah, the Kingdom restored to Israel after the Second Coming of Christ to judge the nations."

II

THERE follow a few illustrations of these Psalms.

The second Psalm was mentioned on an earlier occasion. Its opening verses found a partial fulfilment in the crucifixion of Christ, as we learn from Acts 4 : 25–28; but it is evident even on a cursory reading that the later verses were not thus fulfilled. Christ was not set as King upon the holy hill of Zion at that time, neither is it true as yet that he has received the nations as his inheritance. And when he does receive them, it will not be in the peaceful way of conversion by the preaching of the Gospel, but in order to judge and rule over them in punitive might. For this reason it is that in the Psalms the kings and judges of the earth are exhorted to submit to him, with the alternative of his wrath at his Second Coming.

The ninth Psalm we have also mentioned. Its opening song of praise is explained by the defeat of national enemies whose name perishes with them. But at this moment the Lord is seen sitting as King in Zion, judging the world in righteousness, a refuge for the oppressed, and the object of praise among all peoples. It is clear that Israel is speaking in verses 12 to the end, making her complaint against the persecuting Gentiles, expressing her confidence in God, and testifying by faith to her ultimate salvation and triumph.

Take the eighteenth Psalm. Its clearly Messianic character on to accentuate its Millennial ap because it represents the Messi day of his power, when Israel made the head of the nations has subdued the people under (verses 43, 47).

The twenty-ninth Psalm dep strikingly the judgment on the f nations under the leadership Antichrist; and, as is said by th of "The Roman Empire in Pro
"the very length of the battl indicated in agreement with t and clearer description in Rev. 1

Proceeding further in the bo can read the thirty-seventh P in the light of prophecy witho ceiving its ultimate reference Millennial age? That its con words found application in own time, and for that matter i generation of the saints until the goes without saying. Never consider only one expression, fo
the Psalm again and again, the re to the land:

"So shalt thou dwell in the lan
"Those that wait upon the Lor shall inherit the land" (R. V.);

Even a slight acquaintance wi
Testament prophecy will associat promises with Palestine in the b time of Israel's restoration—still fu

As the thirty-seventh is the of the Holy Land, so the forty-fi
the Psalm of the Righteous King, the intelligent Bible student a not only to Christ, but to him as h his Bride are seen reigning ove Millennial earth.

"The fiftieth Psalm," says
"opens with the advent of Chri judgment." He is shining out of (Jerusalem), the perfection of be
He has come and is not keeping sil
He is devouring his enemies.
judging his people and gathering saints. He is testifying against I and showing her the way of salva

The fifty-fifth Psalm is a vivid resentation of the sufferings of I in the coming hour of her tribula Wickedness and deceit are in the of Jerusalem. The Antichrist is power who had broken his cove with her, and she is pleading for de erance because of oppression."

Psalm sixty-eight, "A Prayer the Removing of the Ark," and wh is quoted in Ephesians as having application to the ascension of Chr has only to be read in the light of tain chapters of Revelation to be ce fied to as the great "War Hymn of Conqueror of the World Power."

Psalm seventy-two is so clearly M sianic and Millennial as to require argument. He is judging his peo with righteousness and the poor w judgment. He is breaking in pieces the pressor. All nations are serving him.
has dominion "from sea to sea, and fro
the rivers unto the ends of the earth
The whole earth is filled with his glor

Psalms ninety-six and ninety-sev are filled with praise and honor to h
name in that day. These are th
"Psalms of the Whole Earth" as th thirty-seventh is that of Palestine:

"Sing unto the Lord, all the earth.
"Fear before Him, all the earth."
"Say among the nations that th Lord reigneth."
"Let the earth be glad."
"He cometh to judge the earth."

Finally, to quote West again, "th set time to favor Zion as it stands in th prophetic outlook, Psalm 102 : 13–22, demonstrably the 'end time,' when th Angel of Jehovah, the Lord himself throned on the clouds, comes with his holy angels to appear in his glory and build up Zion." He has heard the groaning of the prisoners, and he has come to loose the children of death.

We thus see that David is singing i concert with Moses, with Ezra, with Isaiah, with Micah, and with the whole company of prophets, evangelists and apostles, the one glad refrain concerning that "blessed hope and the appearing of the glory of our great God and Saviour Jesus Christ" (Titus 2 : 13).

India's Struggle with Famine

Continued from page 663

e on their earnings (averaging nth), but not now.

e leaving Bombay, on April 14, United States, Dr. Hume, the n and organizer of the famine work, wrote to the Christian : "The following was arranged committee as the division of ast cable remittance ($10,000). st allotted 10,950 rupees to the missions in Western India, to a similar sum was allotted from rst remittance. Then allotments 0 rupees each were made to five ts in other parts of India, namely, njab, the United Provinces, the l Provinces, Behar and Orissa, e Deccan. The balance is held for distribution after hearing from affected areas. One behalf of the f thousands whom you and your ous readers are relieving in these ssing days, I thank you all and our heavenly Father."

IA, notwithstanding all the missionary work that has been done is yet one of the greatest aggrega- of heathen to be found anywhere world. To this appalling fact, acng to Dr. James M. Taylor, who ust returned from a tour in that try, the physical misery and sick- of India is largely due. Imagine can a city of 175,000 souls without dern sewerage system. At certain ns, on the recurrence of the great hen festivals, they bathe in their d river, the Ganges, and drink its waters. Eighty per cent. of the le of India, Dr. Taylor tells us, are diseased. Sometimes there are as many as two million of these wretched heathen bathing on such occasions at different points in the stream, many of them suffering from ailments that are practically unknown in other lands. When their rites are ended they flock back to their villages, spreading the germs of sickness.

This is how Hinduism operates as a disease-breeder. There are few hospitals in India, and the state of the population may be imagined. Wherever there are missionary stations the medical missionaries have their work cut out for them on a very large scale. These stations are zones of comparative health and efficiency, and they cooperate with the government in fighting back disease with excellent results. But the problem is still a vast one. To cleanse India, Dr. Taylor declares, "she must be cleaned soul and body. She must get a clean religion. Christianity means health in India." It is a country in which there are 65,000,000 who have never had in their lives enough to eat, and in famine times, such as are now prevailing, millions must perish for lack of food unless relief comes. This is the battle the missionaries are fighting. Food, medicine and the Gospel will save multitudes and are saving them even as we write. Every dollar you send to India is a wonderful help in such a crisis. The $50,000 which the Christian Herald readers have already sent to the Relief Committee will mean life and hope for twice that number of natives who might otherwise perish. This is the greatest need in the world today, and its appeal to Christian America is irresistible.

Additional Contributions to the India Famine Fund

Gordon	$5.00
C W Hill	5.00
W R Dunn	5.00
R W Townsee	5.00
rican S S Union	5.00
Iis Name, St. Jo- ph, Mo	5.00
lotte Miller	5.00
& W H Emerson	5.00
s Flora Clark	5.00
ubscriber, Almont, lich	5.00
ry & Bertha Confer	5.00
as much, Hancock, Vis	5.00
a Johtz	5.00
H R Bishop	5.00
s Nettie Gore	5.00
L McCarty	5.00
& Mrs C A Smith	5.00
s J W Rowlands	5.00
Leavitt	5.00
s John J Lariner	5.00
s Caroline G Cristy	5.00
s A E Latter	5.00
s L P Hanby	5.00
nes Murray	5.00
netie Levin	5.00
rence & Douglass	5.00
borah J Russell	5.00
e Evergreens, Wis	5.00
Bliss	5.00
r & Mrs S M Kirk	5.00
iss E W McLouth	5.00
ay Eldredge	5.00
ice Wilson	5.00
C Young	5.00
& H E Turner	5.00
I McPhee	5.00
r & Mrs J C Drake	5.00
L Wood	5.00
V M	5.00
C, Denver, Colo	5.00
ev J T Wilson	5.00
elestia A A Burchard	5.00
rs Helen Chapman	5.00
rs George W Johnson	5.00
E Mitchell	5.00
G Paine	5.00
argaret Elliott	5.00
iss M Eisenhart	5.00
rs Mary Hull	5.00
P Shade	5.00
rs Eliza D Knoblough	5.00
ella D Scott	5.00
Friend of the Christian Herald, Phila, Pa	5.00
Mrs H Marymeker	5.00
Mrs A A Suver, Ore	5.00
Friend, Iowa	5.00
Mrs O F Abbott	5.00
Mrs F P Milson	5.00
Mrs Lucy A Farnbull	5.00
Mrs Mary E Moors	5.00
T D, East Orange, N J	5.00
Fannie F Parker	5.00
Mrs M E H, Braceville, Ill	5.00
Jeanette Sanford	5.00
Mrs M E E, Pa	5.00
Mrs C T Wheeler	5.00
Mrs S B Martin	5.00
Mrs Alexander	5.00
H M Butler	5.00
Mrs L McConnell	5.00
Mr & Mrs Lamater	5.00
Mary A Belden	5.00
The American Sunday School Union	5.00
Mrs C. D Smith	5.00
Delila Miller	5.00
John D Van Delinder	5.00
Mrs H D Agrebe	$5.00
Roy Temple	5.00
Mrs J R Williams	5.00
G B Strong	5.00
Mr & Mrs L G DeCamdy	5.00
Andy R Miller	5.00
Mrs L H Witte	5.00
Mrs A H Schroder	5.00
Mrs Lucy M Sparls	5.00
Belle Krier	5.00
Mr & Mrs C O Olson	5.00
Mrs L W B Kimbale	5.00
Mrs Charles Moffatt	5.00
H J Barnward	5.00
A W DeJecur	5.00
Mrs M M Holmes	5.00
Miss H L Peckham	5.00
A F Richmond	5.00
Four Friends of Honewood, Ills	5.00
Lena M Rigly	5.00
Mr & Mrs J N Goozen	5.00
Charles H Willey	5.00
Mrs Lettia L Fiske	5.00
A Friend, Ausly, Nebr	5.00
S E Stadford	5.00
Mrs S P Register	5.00
Mrs E J Brooks	5.00
Mrs H Riste	5.00
Thos A Warder	5.00
F Hunter	5.00
Helen L Harrison	5.00
Evelyn J Barton	5.00
Emily Johnston	5.00
Otto Jonaston	5.00
Miss Ellen C Oaks	5.00
Mrs Elcina McKee	5.00
Haby Rogers	5.00
Mr R W Chapman	5.00
N E L, Lyndon, Kas	5.00
Mrs B H Peterson	5.00
Mrs C T Morrison	5.00
A T Cornwell	5.00
Alice M Bemiss	5.00
——, Lakefield, Minn	5.00
Charles Saline	5.00
Mrs D C Shiphear	5.00
Mrs E C Mathews	5.00
Lydia M Ickler	5.00
Mrs Wm H Davis	5.00
E B C & E H B	5.00
E R Baicey	5.00
N Gibson	5.00
Mrs Crocker	5.00
Mrs Louise Arthur	5.00
Mrs M Chapman	5.00
Miss Alice Y McGinnes	5.00
C M Fork	5.00
Mrs F H Marnelins	5.00
Mrs Anna Fitz	5.00
Mrs George H Butterway	5.00
Verne S Ellis	5.00
Mr & Mrs G A Williams	5.00
Mr & Mrs G H Latimer	5.00
W B Schaeffer	5.00
G A Wehe	5.00
Miss Esther E Sloan	5.00
Gerret Eenigenburg	5.00
M McKiemass	5.00
Friend, Petersburg, Va	5.00
M S Thomas	5.00
Mrs Annie Berre	5.00
Mrs M VanUlick	5.00
Mrs C Maguren	5.00
B Brown	5.00
Mission Society Reformed Ch. Sandusky, Ohio	5.00
Mrs J V Yoder	3.00
Ellen Stiele	3.00
Miss W A Macleure	3.00
Mrs W A Bartholomew	$3.00
Miss Lillian Crodkett	3.00
Mrs Olive E Wood	3.00
Gertrude Cranor	3.00
Mrs O W Nuckols	3.00
Jennie S Sosonen	3.00
Lydia V Joseph	3.00
Mr & Mrs G Edw Dalrymple	3.00
"The faithful workers" class of the Sparta First Ch. New York	3.00
Ella Ickers Robins	3.00
Friends, Rustburg, Va	3.00
Mrs M M Bradly	3.00
J H Stanford	3.00
Mrs C Stitzer	3.00
Mary K Ault	3.00
Mrs George Wright	3.00
Mrs W H Standley	3.00
Mr & Mrs Alomyo Taylor	3.00
V N Heaton	3.00
G A Wagner	3.00
Miss Minnie Clewell	3.00
M A H, Sheffield, Mass	3.00
J E White	3.00
Mrs C C Steetman	3.00
Mrs W R Dotson	3.00
C H Copeland	3.00
Mrs E V Carpenter	3.00
Mrs W W Moore	3.00
Rushton Bro	3.00
Mrs H Ban	3.00
Miss Alice M Brown	3.00
Mrs E Cross	3.00
Mrs Cynthia	3.00
L J Corly	3.00
Mrs E S Brook	3.00
Mrs M A Grant	3.00
Mrs Ellen M Hollman	3.00
Mrs Elizabeth Kelle	3.00
Harriet Hulson	3.00
Mrs Wm Hutton	3.00
Mr & Mrs H A Alson	3.00
Mrs W H Weaver	3.00
Lettie S Miller	3.00
Mrs James Monroe Lown	3.00
Frances B Ogg	3.00
Wm Zimmerman	3.00
Mrs D L Barackman	3.00
Mrs Cornelia V Miller	3.00
A Friend, Harlam, Iowa	3.00
G R O W, Class	3.00
Nellie L Tober	2.50
A F, Brooklyn, N Y	2.50
M J Thompson	2.50
Mr G W Bloomfield	2.50
Mr Abraham Kimberby	2.50
Mrs Lena Munch	2.50
Mr Jesse H Watts	2.50
Mrs Lora Sprague	2.50
George Madison	2.50
Gale Forest Reinertsen	2.50
Mr & Mrs W L Hanlon	2.50
Mrs John Sorby	2.50
Mrs T M Houston	2.50
Mr & Mrs J R Ebulle	2.50
Miss E L Austin	2.00
E P Emmons	2.00
Franklin P Shermerkon	2.00
H K Colter	2.00
Mrs Grace Andrews	2.00
——, Pasedena, Cal	2.00
Mrs Clara E Searles	2.00
S E C, Wanseon, Ohio	2.00
Mrs Fred Dennis	2.00
A H S, Sudlersville	2.00
Mary E Miller	2.00
Jonathan Brown	2.00
Mrs Jos Simon	2.00

DU PONT AMERICAN INDUSTRIES

Challenge Cleanable Collars
Save Laundry Dollars

They eliminate constant collar costs and upkeep. They give you all the style, snap and comfort of the average collar with the added advantage of being instantly cleaned when soiled. Perspiration, dust and grease proof—non-wilting. Fine for motoring, sport, dress or business.

Look them up. If your dealer can't supply you write us. State size and your favorite style and send 35 cents for sample.

THE ARLINGTON WORKS Owned and Operated by
E. I. DU PONT DE NEMOURS & CO.
725 Broadway, New York, 21 East 40th St.
THE ARLINGTON CO. OF CANADA, LTD.
Toronto, Ont.
BRANCHES MONTREAL AND WINNIPEG

When in Atlantic City visit the Du Pont Products Store

DU PONT

Is your farm large enough for a tractor like this?

Or will a smaller $750 tractor do all your work?

A tractor can save money on every farm—if it is properly selected—or, it can prove a total loss if not intelligently handled and not adapted to the work at hand.

It is the business of the Motor Service Bureau, recently organized by The Christian Herald, to help its readers choose the tractor best suited to their needs.

If you will give us complete information called for on the following coupon, we will give you unbiased expert advice free of charge.

THE CHRISTIAN HERALD (Motor Service Bureau)
Bible House, New York, N. Y.

Coupon

Please recommend the size and type of tractor for use on my farm. The following information may be of use to you:

No. acres on which tractor can be used .... Nature of land ....

Kind of crops ....

Distance to railway or other distributing point ....

Automobiles or trucks owned by me ....

Make of tractor preferred ....

Approximate investment available for purchase of tractor ....

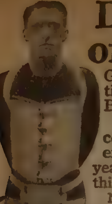
Price of gasoline .... Price of kerosene ....

Check which of the following power works tractor would be used for:

Silo cutting ..... Stump pulling ..... Wood sawing ..... Threshing ..... Dredging .....

Name ....

Address ....



Deformities of the Back

Greatly benefited or entirely cured by the Philo Burt Method.

The 30,000 cases successfully treated in our experience of over sixteen years is absolute proof of this statement.

No matter how serious your deformity, no matter what treatments you have tried, think of the thousands of sufferers this method has made well and happy. We will prove the value of the Philo Burt Method in your own case.

The Philo Burt Appliance on 30 Days' Trial

Since you run no risk there is no reason why you should not accept our offer at once.

The photographs here show how light, cool, elastic and easily adjustable the Philo Burt Appliance is—how different from the old torturing plaster, leather or steel jackets. To weakened or deformed spines it brings almost immediate relief even in the most serious cases. You owe it to yourself to investigate it thoroughly. The price is within reach of all.

Send for our Free Book today and describe the nature and condition of your trouble as fully as possible so we can give you definite information.

PHILO BURT MFG. CO.
207Y Odd Fellows Bldg., Jamestown, N. Y.

The MIRACLE of MILK

Drinking Your Way To Health

You know in a general way that milk is good for you. But if you knew what a precious life-giving fluid it really is—if you knew the almost miraculous results it produces for those who drink it intelligently, you would be truly amazed. For anemia, indigestion, constipation, any difficulties of the stomach, liver, kidneys, heart or bladder, Bright's disease, rheumatism and many other ills for which physicians have no reliable remedy, the right use of milk almost invariably overcomes the trouble. For instance, feet and hands that are usually cold and clammy, become warm and life-like a few days after beginning this marvelous self-treatment. Bernarr Macfadden, the famous physical culturist, in collaboration with Dr. Sanford Porter, the milk diet specialist, has written a book of priceless value entitled: "The Milk Diet. How To Use It."

You May Have It Free

It will be a revelation to you. Send us a three months' subscription for PHYSICAL CULTURE MAGAZINE at the regular price of 50c and we will mail you the book at once. PHYSICAL CULTURE MAGAZINE should be part of your reading every month. Its inspirational articles on Health, Hygiene and Success-Building will be of great value to you in many ways. To more broadly circulate this unique magazine, we will send it to you for 3 months for 50c and include Mr. Macfadden's above mentioned book free. Write TODAY.

PHYSICAL CULTURE PUBLISHING CO.
119 West 40th St., Dept. 17C, New York City

$1 a Week pays for the Black Beauty

Send No Money

Ship'd on Approval Freight Prepaid

Don't buy an ordinary bicycle. Get the Black Beauty—factory direct; wholesale price. Magnificent wheel Strongest, raciest in all cycledom. Five-year guarantee.

18 Exclusive Features

See the wheel before paying a cent. Get our Catalog; select your model. 20 Styles. We ship at our own risk. Keep or return. No waiting to save up money. Months to pay—small amount on acceptance, then $1 a week.

Sundries Get our factory prices first. Lowest in the country. Tires, lamps, horns, etc. Everything for cyclists. Free Sundries Catalog.

HAVERFORD CYCLE CO.
Dept. 146 Philadelphia

FREE Beautiful New Catalog in colors

"DON'T SHOUT"

"I hear you. I can hear now as well as anybody. 'How?' With THE MORLEY PHONE. I've a pair in my ears now, but they are invisible. I would not know I had them in, myself, only that I hear all right.

"The Morley Phone for the DEAF is to the ears what glasses are to the eyes. Invisible, comfortable, weightless and harmless. Anyone can adjust it." Over one hundred thousand sold. Write for booklet and testimonials.

THE MORLEY CO., Dept. 752, Perry Bldg., Phila.

ORNAMENTAL FENCE

6 Cents per Foot and up. Costs less than wood. 40 designs. All steel. For Lawns, Churches and Cemeteries. Write for free Catalog and Special Prices.

Kokomo Fence Machine Co. 499 North St., Kokomo, Ind.

Seeking the Lost in South Africa

Natives' home in South Africa

ONE day, en route to an appointed service, we mounted a high hill, coming in view of a new section of country off over the mountains, in a river valley. Natives who were with us said there were many people living all through that area, but no missionary or native evangelist worked among them. How our hearts longed to get over there! But it was some distance over the mountains to reach the people, and there were already so many preaching-places and calls for the services of the missionaries that it seemed almost impossible to take up more. Still we felt we must go.

As it neared noon we reached a kraal in the valley. Only one person greeted us. Where were the others? All farther down the valley, attending a beer drink. So on we went in the direction of the gathering. We came into an open space in which was the kraal where many were gathered at one of their heathen orgies. A native man coming out of one of the huts to stir food cooking in a large iron pot presented a face demoniacal in appearance, and it took us not long to understand we were in a region where Satan reigned, and where, though the beauties of nature surrounded us, man, as always where Satan rules, was vile.

The service was m the usual kraal service, heathen women, of counted twenty-eight, usually attentive. After ing was over, we knew go. They knew it, to heathen young woman, shall never forget, seeme to let us depart. As I hands with her, she held and said: "Oh, I am not ing, Nkosazana, I am not I know the story is tru how can we become Chris you only come once?"

Yes, my heart respond could they?

I told her we would try again, then tore myself aw heart too full for further

It was my last long tr the senior missionary has seen the place was not left without To her many burdens she added Within a year there were fifty tians, and now a native evangelist most of his time to that section.

LUELLA M. NEW

Traveling Men As Teachers

THE numerous plans for Americanization evidence the determination of our people to teach and preach, and, let us hope, live Americanism, so that men of all races and faiths, native or foreign born, shall be influenced to the end that greater patriotism, greater unity will result.

I seek to utilize as teachers the half million traveling salesmen of the nation. These men are wide awake, yet conservative. They are interested in the stability of our present economy and generally speaking are averse to dangerous "isms."

One of our leading financiers speaks glowingly of the effect upon the salesmen themselves, and upon the nation in time, of the influence which would proceed from the half million roadmen taking up one phase weekly of an important subject, in political economy for example, and passing the information along as occasion required, and then six or seven weeks later taking up another feature of our national stability for discussion.

Traveling salesmen are among our most influential citizens. They have a large and loyal acquaintance everywhere they go. They make every nook and corner of this country from once a week to three or four times a year and in the aggregate must know quite well ten million people. They meet merchants and their clerks as well as many of their customers, railroad men, hotel keepers and clerks, as well as innumerable people outside of this category.

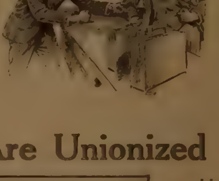
These men will become a tremendous educative force if backed by an organization which will send them weekly through their employers, and at the latter's cost, leaflets on Political Economy, Sociology, Sturdy Patriotism, and the very fundamentals of our national beliefs.

These leaflets should be prepared by experts, arranged in the most attractive manner and contain nothing antagonistic to labor, to religion or to political parties. Such a leaflet service can be made of vital importance to the welfare of the nation, for it will give these travelers a treme amount of valuable informatio everything pertaining to broad, conservative, constructive citizensh

Concrete facts of the saving sa society can be put up in brief, assimilable shape, and these men broadcast the information in a wor ful way.

I do not mean that these men wi out laden with leaflets for distribu though of course they could pas their own leaflets where advisable.

A big committee it must be could arrange and be responsible these leaflets, and the President self might well be interested in selection of its members.



Let me quote one opinion of ma that of the Hon. P. P. Claxton, C missioner of Education: "If the pro kind of leaflets be prepared tra ing salesmen can be m helpful. They have portunities which ot people do not have mold sentiment and rect opinion. An edu tor and statesman s that drummers did m to unite North a South after the war th any other agency.

J. W. HAMILTON.
St. Paul, Minn.

Beggars of China Are Unionized

BEGGARY in China is much more than a recognized calling with its own peculiar technique. It is similar to a guild or labor union, with the labor left out. The beggars of a community are organized under a head man, who does not himself beg, but lives on the spoils of office. The great mendicant fraternity in China includes the lame, halt, leprous and blind, and those constitutionally opposed to work.

These famished wretches are wholly dependent upon alms. If they are not voluntarily supported, they steal. The custom of alms giving is so ancient, and the beggars so numerous, that the authorities are not able to mitigate the evil. The belief that generosity to beggars reacts favorably upon the giver has also helped to keep the business in a flourishing condition.

The head man is a mediator between his beggar band and the townspeople. He demands a high tariff from the shopkeepers and merchants as the price of exemption from annoyance by beggars. Thus insured, the business man pastes a red label on his window, which indicat that for a certain period h not to be approached for alm

Typical Chinese beggars

Stopping funerals and othe ceremonious occasions wit clanging bells and loud cries wa formerly a common trick o beggars. Chinese beggars d not often solicit alms at privat houses, but only from shop keepers and people in the stree

The social system which ha encouraged beggary in the past is undergoing such rapid changes that it promises to be no longer regarded as a necessary and respectable calling. Protestant missions are trying to correct the causes which make beggars. They are preaching the gospel of work, and through an extensive system of hospitals and dispensaries are making over the unfit into self-supporting citizens.

Medical schools are training the Chinese for effective medical, surgical and nursing service. Thirteen hospitals and thirtee dispensaries will represent the contribution of the Methodist church toward building up the health of the sick and suffering. An appropriation of $6,635,968 will be spent in China.

Young People's Topics for June 22

Toilers of India

Christian Endeavor Topic. Isa. 40 : 18-31.

INDIA groped after God and got idols; she struggled for a civilization and got caste; idols and caste induced superstition and poverty, and India got ignorance and hunger. Christian missions offer India the living God in place of idols, brotherhood in place of caste, education in place of ignorance, and self-support through intelligent labor instead of poverty. Today, through the Mass Movement, India is accepting Christ practically by villages, but over much of India the missionaries are just now ministering to bodily rather than to soul-hunger. It is comparatively easy to reach the mind when you have relieved the cravings of the stomach.

India has famines because she has religiously held to antiquated methods which were bound upon her by caste. Christian truth puts caste aside, and the modern tractor is helping to win India to Christ by plowing the subsoil, both of land and customs, where for centuries the Hindu has only scratched the surface with a crooked stick. The Indian is learning to let machinery work for him. Irrigation is following behind the tractor, and the hand labor released by the machine is flocking to factories, while the youth of India is being gathered into schools. Another influence, too, is helping to break down caste and lead India to industrial efficiency and liberty. The missionaries say that the intense interest in the movies sets aside caste and that, with an interesting picture running, a chance touch of another caste goes unnoticed. Caste is the great impediment to Christ in India. Thus invention helps evangelization, and the movie and the tractor both minister for God.

Christianizing the Social Order

B. Y. P. U. Topic. Luke 4 : 14-21.

ANYTHING to be Christian must be like Christ or done in his spirit The social order is a complicated structure. Its foundations were laid in feudal tenure, property rights and inheritance. Gradually through the years the spirit of Christ has been modifying the social order, making it more Christlike. The ballot, first granted only to lords and landed proprietors, was widened until at last the vote has become the prerogative of all citizens.

Democratic government is a product of the spirit of Christ. Education, once available to princes, is now free and almost universal in the Christian world. Even pagan governments now see the value of free public schools. The mind, too, is freed by the spirit of Christ; liberty of thought, of expression, of conscience are Christian in essence and intent. If some now abuse them, the situation can be met if Christ rules. Slave labor has been freed by Christ and freedom here has so far developed that the slavery is now to a degree reversed. The manufacturer of today takes orders from the unions. This gives the worker a chance to exemplify the spirit of Christ as he would have the boss understand it. If society is to be wholly Christian, it can not tolerate hunger, drunkenness, want, injustice or unequal opportunity. American civilization today is Christian in its main elements; it should be our task to make it wholly Christian.

The Art of Building Character

Epworth League Topic. I Cor. 3 : 10-17.

(This topic was treated in the issue of March 15 as the Christian Endeavor and B. Y. P. U. Topic for March 23.)

A Layman's View of Church Unity

TO MANY of us it may seem that the process of virtually transforming the world—the passage from world-strife to world-brotherhood—is a long and dangerous one. We are apt to forget that the mightiest purposes may be apparently slow in development. Take, by way of illustration, one aspect of the present situation: The Church Unity question. It has really been under discussion for many generations, and acutely so for something like a century.

If we regard the thing with the eye of faith, and the conviction that God is overruling, and will bring his own purposes to pass in due time, we can view the stages of progression and retrogression with equanimity.

"Yes," some one interrupts to remark, "but is it not expected that we should take some step in the matter ourselves? Does not God love to be helped?" True, and sometimes that help is best rendered by silence and inaction.

At a recent conference on Christian Unity, one of the speakers told about other conferences which he had attended on the same subject, where the addresses were little more than a "beating of the air"—futile and ineffective. He asked concerning the impulse the war had given to the Unity idea: "What has been the end of it all? Are the Church and the men to say 'good-by' They will not be brought into the Church so long as we maintain our present conditions." Then, with a sudden inspiration, he added: "To me the only conclusive point is the testimony of Scripture and the mind of Christ. . . . St. Paul says, 'one Spirit, one body,' with many members with diverse operations. Much more urgent and solemn are the words of our Lord, spoken on the eve of his Passion and death: 'That they all may be one'—'That the world may believe'—a visible union, a condition for the realization of Christ's purpose for the world."

This is the ultimate arrangement, and what does it imply? Does it point the finger of accusation at those who, by perpetuating disunion, postpone the carrying out of the divine purpose—"that the world may believe"?

That prolific writer, H. G. Wells, in one of his latest books describes a situation similar to that which existed when God gave permission to the evil one to try Job to the uttermost. In these latter days in which we are living, dire things have happened which might well be interpreted as a test to prove that there was still a residue of good in man, notwithstanding all the disbelief of the pessimists. Job emerged from his trials with stronger faith. The divine spark in the hearts of men has not been extinguished but strengthened by the ordeal. We commend this illustration to the churches and their leaders.

New York City. F. R. D.

Christian Education

Continued from page 662

atmosphere of their young souls was not permeated with Christianity from a babe. They knew not the Sacred Writings. All they knew was discussions of the latest and most thrilling shows, the fields that offered the highest wages, the fashions recently displayed, the fame of our athletic heroes and the varied accomplishments of the men of the world. Why are boys and girls irreverent and careless in church and Sunday school? One reason is because it has not been fashioned into the fiber of their being, from the cradle up, to reverence God and all that pertains to God. Their religious training is often left till later years, and to other hands than those of the parents.

Is a Christian education necessary? Then let us never forget that it begins even before the child is born in the preparation of the Christian home.

The burden of right training for youth rests not simply upon our schools and Sunday schools and churches, but upon every one of us, for the foundations of right training are laid in the godly home before the child ever sees the school or Sunday school or church.

Our 6% Certificates Are Always at Par

For 24 years our 6% Two-Year Time Certificates have been worth 100 cents on the dollar plus interest. Issued for $100 or more—Interest checks mailed -annually—We pay 5% on Certificates ble on demand. First Mortgage secur- ack of all our investments.

rite for the Booklet, "6% and Safety."

THE CALVERT MORTGAGE CO.
Calvert Bldg., Baltimore, Md.

DAYS FREE TRIAL

and freight prepaid on a new 1919 "RANGER" bicycle. Write at once for our big catalog and special offers. Take your choice from 44 styles, colors and sizes in the famous "RANGER" line.

Marvelous improvements. Extraordinary values in our 1919 price offers. You cannot afford to buy without getting our latest propositions and Factory-to-Rider prices.

Boys, be a "Rider Agent" and make big money taking orders for bicycles and supplies. Get our liberal terms on a sample to introduce the new "RANGER".

TIRES, equipment, sundries and everything in the bicycle line at half usual prices. Write Today.

MEAD CYCLE COMPANY
Dept. H 71 Chicago

EROLUX
Ventilating
RCH SHADES

sform your porch into a cool, outdoor room at small ex-. They shut out heat and but let in cooling breezes. her shades like them.

nd For This Book—Free

ll show you how others have made orches cozy, attractive, home-like give you valuable suggestions for ying your porch.

HE AEROSHADE COMPANY
akland Ave., Waukesha, Wis.

YOUR FUTURE

Depends on how you prepare yourself now. Personal power lies in the Art of Expression

Its study will make you more successful and increase your popularity and earning power.

WE TEACH
ELOCUTION
BY MAIL

Whatever your occupation or position, you can improve by our course in Public Speaking, dramatic reading and entertaining, which includes physical culture and voice training. Mothers and teachers can instruct their children to recite.

Graduates receive handsome diplomas.

Send 6c. in stamps for Illustrated Recitation

THE MERRILL SCHOOL OF EXPRESSION
Dept. 10, 2905 Woodward Ave., Detroit, Michigan

Agents: Big Money

For your spare time. Men or women selling guaranteed hosiery. Must wear 12 months or replaced free—all styles, colors and fancy stripes, including silk hose.

Sell for Less Than Store Prices

Often sell dozen pair to one family. Every man or woman, young or old, can make big money selling this quality line. Write for samples. Thomas Hosiery Co.
9324 Elk St. Dayton, Ohio

SH FOR OLD FALSE TEETH

e now pay higher prices whether oken or not. Send now. Cash sent by return mail. ckages returned at our expense if our offer is refused. ighest prices also paid for OLD GOLD JEWELRY, GOLD ROWNS, BRIDGES, DENTAL GOLD, PLATINUM, IAMONDS and SILVER. Send for latest catalog of new jewelry.
d States Smelting Wks., Dept. 120, Chicago, Ill.

dies—Ease Your Feet

Our custom made, unlined, Vici Kid, O'Sullivanized PILLOW SHOES give

PERFECT COMFORT

They are made to order especially for you from measures you send us and we guarantee them to fit perfectly and give you complete satisfaction Restful, attractive-looking, light-weight, durable, and easy as a glove. A postal to us will tell you how W SHOE CO., Dept. C, 184 Summer St., Boston, Mass.

Individual Cups

ry church should use. Clean and sanitary. Trial free.
mas Communion Service Co. Box 150 Lima, Ohio

HURCH BELLS SCHOOL

k for Catalogue and Special Donation Plan No. 86
HE C. S. BELL CO., Est. 1858, Hillsboro, Ohio

BLYMYER CHURCH BELLS

Bring people to church. Their clear, beautiful, sustained, far-reaching tones are a power for good. Your church should have one. Durability guaranteed. Inexpensive. Art catalog & buying plans free.
The Cincinnati Bell Foundry Co. Dept. B51 Cincinnati, O.

NDETS — WONDER MONEY MAKERS

mend leaks instantly in all utensils, hot water bags, etc. Insert and tighten. 10c and 25c a package postpaid. AGENTS WANTED.
Collette Mfg. Co. Box 444-A, Amsterdam, N.Y.

"Here is my First Birthday Present!

"I KNOW you are getting dozens of pretty, useless little fol-de-rols, so I decided to give you something practical.

"And I want to tell you, daughter, that raising a baby is a mighty practical job. It's not at all like playing with a French doll. There are just two things necessary - proper feeding and a smooth, clean, comfortable skin. Baby will attend to the appetite, but when it comes to cleanliness the little thing is helpless. But if you use plenty of Mennen Borated Talcum every time you wash him, it will prevent chafing and the torture of raw scalded skin."

Mennen Borated Talcum Powder has made comfortable the babies of several generations and has never yet irritated the most sensitive skin. The original Mennen Borated formula gives it unusual soothing and healing qualities.

Mennen Talcum is now sold in a new large-size, economical can, containing more Talcum for the money than you could buy before the war.

MENNEN
BORATED
TALCUM POWDER

MENNEN TALCUMS
with the original borated formula include
Borated, Violet,
Flesh Tint, Cream Tint
Talcum for Men

Trade-Mark

THE MENNEN COMPANY
NEWARK. N.J. U.S.A.
Laboratories: 42 Orange Street, Newark, N. J.
Canadian Factory: Montreal, Quebec
Sales Agent in Canada:
Harold F. Ritchie & Co., Ltd., Toronto, Ont.

½-Pint for ½-Dollar

Save oil money by buying 3-in-One Oil in the big 50c household size, larger than pictured below. An economical purchase because it contains eight times as much 3-in-One as the One Ounce (trial size). A safe purchase because 3-in-One never gets gummy—never becomes rancid. A wise purchase because

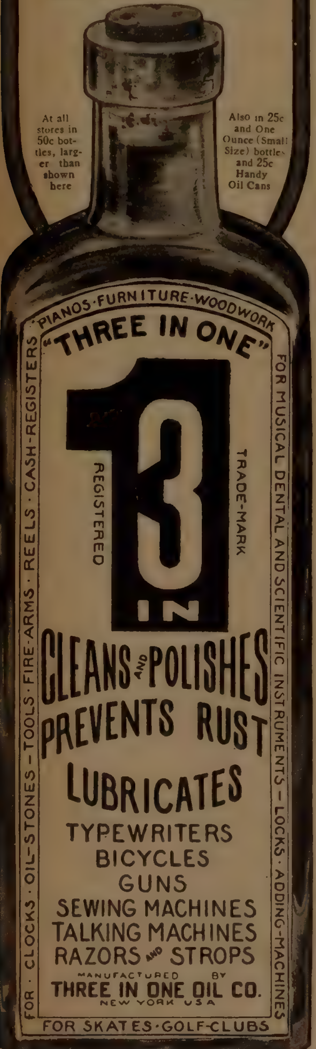
3-in-One is the universal household and office oil. Has 79 distinct uses. Lubricates all light mechanisms—typewriters, adding machines, cash registers, sewing machines, guns, fishing reels, automatic tools, etc. Cleans and polishes all veneered and varnished surfaces—nothing else so good for fine furniture. Prevents rust and tarnish forming on nickeled and other metal surfaces—needed in every bathroom and kitchen.

3-in-One stops auto spring squeaks—without even soiling the hands. Use it on razor blades and strops—makes shaving easier and better. See many other uses in 3-in-One Dictionary.

FREE Liberal sample of 3-in-One Oil and Dictionary of Uses—both sent free for the asking.

Three-in-One Oil Co.
165CG Broadway, New York



At all stores in 50c bottles, larger than shown here

Also in 25c and One Ounce (Small Size) bottles and 25c Handy Oil Cans

OUR MAIL-BAG

NOTICE

THE editors of the Christian Herald vill be glad to answer any question addressed to the Mail-bag provided it be of general interest and not merely personal. No attention will be paid to anonymous letters nor to those written with lead pencil.

Questions and Answers

READER, East Liverpool, Ohio. "In recent numbers of the Christian Herald I have read several articles on Church Unity and the new condition of the church following the war. These writers have not yet touched on the one vital point, and that is the church's long-neglected missionary help to the Jews—'first,' and this will have to take place before the church will prosper. 'They shall prosper that love Zion.' I cannot understand how any set of ministers, Bible students, and Bible teachers can overread this last commandment of Christ's just before his ascension (Luke 24 : 47) 'And that repentance and remission of sins should be preached in his name among all nations, beginning at Jerusalem.' Every Sabbath you can hear announced from the pulpit: 'Offering taken up today for the missionary work among the people of this or that mission field,' but rarely a word about the work among the Jews. Israel will be converted, but the Church will have no glory in it."

Inquirer, Alexandria, Va. The reason the Gospel will be preached on the earth after the Church is translated is that people will then be on the earth whom a gracious God desires to save. They may not be added to the Church as the Lamb's bride, but salvation from sin and being added to the Church are not identical in all the ages.

Rev. Lawrence P. Bogle, Waynesville, N. C., route 2, writes: "There is a community in my pastoral charge where a library of good religious books would do incalculable good. The section is some twenty-five miles from a railroad, no telephone line, etc., the most isolated and shut-in section of the Western North Carolina mountains. The people are intelligent and of fine native ability. I should be glad to get friends here and there to send a book or books for this worthy cause."

D. P. J., Coopersville, Mich. Reuben was the firstborn of Jacob's children (See Gen. 29 : 32), the son of Leah. There is no statement to show how much older he was than Joseph.

Anxious Mother, Lewiston, Idaho. Those who would drag you away from the simple faith of your father and mother, for no better reason than you have stated, are enemies of your soul's peace. The other matter at issue is a controversial one and not vital.

J. M. J., Frankfort, Ky. 1. When the King James version of the scriptures was made, the earliest known manuscripts indicated the beginnings of written history to have been about 4,000 years B.C., and this number was placed in the margin of the Bible. Later researches have carried our knowledge of former civilizations back to at least 6,000 years before Christ. Just how long man lived on the earth before he attained to a written language, through which he could leave a record, can not be known, but scientists have estimated about 200,000 years as the length of time in which the earth has been habitable. 2. It is generally accepted that Job's disease was a form of leprosy, but the duration of his affliction cannot be determined. 3. We do not know what the forbidden fruit was. It is referred to as an apple but the word may mean something different from the apple of today. At any rate it was a fruit of disobedience, and this fruit, tasted today, is equally potent to drive us from our Edens and to bring us to the bitter labors of repentance. 4. According to Josephus, Solomon was fourteen years old when he became king of Israel. 5. The Bible says Saul talked with Samuel. God spoke to Saul through the magic of the witch and the appearance of Samuel. He may have sent Samuel's spirit to bear the message. 6. David meant that when we die we are dead and that, for the physical man, death ends all knowledge. 7. The Bible does not indicate who the two witnesses are to be. Possibly they are to be chosen when the time comes. They will testify of Christ during the time of the terror of the beast and will help to keep alive through the tribulations the faith of the saved. The two hundred and three score days is probably a rhetorical expression indicating a considerable period of time. 8. Death means dissolution, the separation of the spirit from the body, and the return of the body to its physical elements.

B. S. D., Tollhouse, Calif. 1. The passage you want is found in Job 14 : 14, "If a man die, shall he live again?" This is one of the questions put by Job to his friends who were discussing with him, and it carries with it the implied answer that there is a hope that he shall live, though not in the present order of life; so he was satisfied to wait the divine will when God would raise him from the grave. The language he uses in the same verse, "All the days of my appointed time will I wait till my change comes," refers not only to the conscious life here, but to the sleep of death, however long and deep it might be. As to Job's larger hope and faith, read chapter 18, verses 25 to 27. 2. For passages that imply recognition in heaven, see II Sam. 12 : 23; Phil. 3 : 20; Heb. 12 : 1; Matt. 17 : 3; Rom. 14 : 12, Luke 16 : 23; Rev. 6 : 9; I Thess. 4 : 13–18; Heb. 13 : 17; Matt. 8 : 11; Eph. 3 : 15.

J. I. K., Henderson, Ky. When Adam and Eve transgressed, they feared the anger of the Lord and sought to hide from him. So long as we remain unforgiven of our sins, our fear of the Lord will continue to be the fear of the culprit. When, however, we seek to serve God the fear is transformed to reverence and a desire to live nearer to God and to serve him acceptably. In this sense the word stands for practical piety. Under the Christian dispensation, the term "the fear of God" has come to mean a complete consecration, in which the only fear is the fear of sin.

Mrs. I. L. C., Damascus, Ohio. 1. Both Cyrus and Artaxerxes helped the Jews in the restoration of Jerusalem and the Temple. 2. King Saul's home was at Gibeah, in the tribe of Benjamin. He was anointed king at Mizpeh and established his kingdom at Gilgal. 3. King Ahab of Israel was probably the most wicked king in the history of the Jews. 4. Aquila and Priscilla saluted Paul at Corinth. 5. The Nazarites abstained from wine and all products of the vine. 6. The sons of Aaron were commanded to wear head coverings of the type we call bonnets.

O. V. R., Duane, Minn. 1. Arbitration of the boundary dispute between Chile and Argentina began in 1898 and ended in 1902, and the statue of Christ was erected on the crest of the Andes on March 13, 1904. 2. Ole Hanson is the son of an immigrant couple who came to this country from Norway to obtain greater freedom. Mr. Hanson was born in Wisconsin and went to Seattle sixteen years ago.

M. F., Brooklyn, N. Y., writes: "How old is religion?" It is as old as the human race. Excavations made by archeological investigators in Egypt, Babylonia and other ancient lands, reaching back approximately 7,500 years, contain indications of the worship of things held sacred. Sun, moon, stars and even animals have been worshiped. The ancient Sumerians, one of the earliest races of whom we have any trace, had their priests and temples. Babylonian inscriptions, dating back thousands of years, indicate that religion was then common to all nations round about, although it was all heathenism and had many varieties. Wherever we find traces of mankind we meet evidences of heathen worship. In Gen. 4 : 26 it is stated that in Enos's day men first began to "call on the name of the Lord." Yet long before this there doubtless were forms of religion and objects of worship.

Reader, Indianapolis, Ind., asks: "Who was Okwawa, whose skull is mentioned in the Treaty of Peace as to be restored by Germany?" Okwawa was an African potentate, or sort of sultan, and a great warrior and "magician" (wise man) according to the standard of greatness among East African tribes. When Germany occupied that part of Africa, at a time when the Dark Continent was being largely divided up by the European powers, one of the German dukes took away a large number of skulls from the new colony, including the skull of Okwawa, which had been greatly venerated and even worship were sent to Germany, probably fo purposes. The act showed utter di the feelings of the natives, but it w teristic of Germany. Now the na get their "sacred" relic back throu lies, who will undo as far as possible
lessness of the Germans.

Reader, California, and C. T. H stock Ill. We think you have mist meaning of the passage: "Come ye among them and be ye separate." T not to those holding in common w Christians the vital truths of the faith and striving to lead Christian to those who denied these essentials a professing to be Christians, gave the li professions by their words and acti far as the group of sects which you m concerned, when they reject the Christ and the Atonement, they reje the essentials and cannot be amal with the true Church. This has be very clear in Christian Herald articl times.

C. T. H., Woodstock, Ill. We rega absolutely right for this nation to cast i weight and influence in the scale in b righteousness and justice in the worl entrance into the great war was tant to a declaration of this character. Th come a time in the history of any man, nation, to cast all narrow consideratio and give his whole strength and the r of his power and influence to some eff is clearly a call to his soul. With res your suggestion that we may have to monarchical governments to keep th nations in subjection, it is quite clear fr repeated statement by the President, as from the attitude of this nation itse moreover, from the straightforward d tion in the League of Nations Covenan no such contingency, even if it should can be considered as making it Am duty to serve along lines which would solutely opposed to the spirit and princi our republic. We carried into the w ideals of freedom and liberation, of the of self-government, or self-determi which means the freedom of choice, and principles are the very basis of the Lea Nations. Any course opposed to them be a clear violation of the covenant.

A. R. C., Bloomington, Wis. Mark 1 is the culmination of a declaration by regarding the resurrection life. The Sad who denied the resurrection tried to question that would make a future l least complicated. Jesus swept clear their human limitations in his decla that the resurrected soul is free of earthly ditions and that the God of Abraham, and Jacob, the God of Israel, is a God living. That is, those who have faith i live hereafter. Mark 13 : 31 is a declarat the eternal value of truth, the words of C All things material will some day pass but truth is indestructible and the wor Christ, or his Gospel, will live throug eternity.

Beautiful 20-Piece Set Genuine ROGERS Silver Nickel Tableware FREE!

We want every family to have this beautiful set of Rogers Guaranteed Silver Nickel Tableware. Won't corrode. Guaranteed to stand fifty years' every day use. Beautiful up-to-date violet pattern. Attractive high grade tableware in every way.

How to Get Tableware Free

Here is my plan: Tear out this ad—write your name and address to show you accept our offer, and we will send you ten $1.20 packages of Wilbur's Poultry Food Tonic, with two packages extra ($2.40 worth) to offset the freight. Sell these twelve packages among your friends and neighbors. They buy it readily. They know and use our products. Keep $2.40 for your trouble and send me $12. On receipt of this $12 we will send you ABSOLUTELY FREE—THIS SPLENDID SET OF TABLEWARE. So tear out this ad, sign name, address and silverware is yours free.

E. B. MARSHALL CO.
61 Marshall Bldg. MILWAUKEE, WIS.

Name……………………………………
R. F. D. or Street……………………………
P. O………………………… State…………

THE CHRISTIAN HERALD is published weekly by The Christian Herald, at the Bible House, Fourth Avenue, 8th and 9th Sts., New York City. The Officers are: Graham C. Patterson, President and Treasurer, Bible House, N. Y. City; Geo. H. Sandison, Vice President, Bible House, N. Y. City.

SUBSCRIPTION PRICE, $2.50 a year in advance. Remittances should be made in the safest manner available. Make checks and money orders payable to The Christian Herald.

FOREIGN POSTAGE.—For copies mailed outside the United States, Canada and Mexico, add one dollar a year to subscription price.

CHANGE OF DATE.—It takes at least two weeks to change the date, after your subscription is renewed.

EXPIRATION OF SUBSCRIPTION.—The date on the wrapper indicates when your subscription ends.

CHANGE OF ADDRESS.—It requires three weeks' time to make the change. Give both old and new address.

LETTERS should be addressed, THE CHRISTIAN HERALD, Bible House, New York.

Entered as Second-class Matter at the Post Office Department, Ottawa

Special Notice to All Christian Herald Readers

OUR SPECIAL CLUB LETTER

WE have just completed mailing to each member of the Christian Herald family our special club letter and full details showing how readers of the Christian Herald may work together in joining a money-saving club and reduce the cost materially to each and secure a great educational work that should find a welcome place in every home.

If any reader of the Christian Herald did not receive a copy of this important letter please write and ask for details of the New World Encyclopedia Club offer as the club must close without delay.

THE NEW WORLD ENCYCLOPEDIA
VOL. I A-CLAR
VOL. II CLAR-GOUT
VOL. III GOUT-MINN
VOL. IV MINN-SCHI
VOL. V SCHI-WATE
VOL. VI WATE-ZYM APPENDIX
THE CHRISTIAN HERALD

THIS ILLUSTRATION IS GREATLY REDUCED FROM THE ACTUAL SIZE OF THE BOOKS

FREE OF CHARGE THE CHRISTIAN HERALD WILL FURNISH FREE OF CHARGE to each member of the New World Encyclopedia Club a very valuable and timely supplementary volume to include

A SPLENDID SERIES OF WORLD MAPS IN COLORS

with the latest corrections as defined by the Peace Conference

A FULL ACCOUNT OF THE PEACE CONFERENCE

and other world events of general interest together with a series of superb portraits and pictures of

The COMMANDERS of the ARMIES and NAVIES of the ALLIED NATIONS

THE GREAT LEADERS OF THE ALLIES

THE SURRENDER OF THE GERMAN FLEET OF WAR VESSELS

and stirring pictures taken from actual photographs of

THE VICTORIOUS HOMECOMING OF OUR SOLDIERS AND SAILORS

More than two hundred eminent scholars, educators, scientists, inventors and explorers have contributed to the vast fund of valuable information found in the New World Encyclopedia. The condensation of the available material into six convenient volumes without loss of essential details was no small task. The result is an encyclopedia of the world's knowledge for the busy man, woman, student or child, shorn of all superfluous matter and of quick and easy reference.

The NEW WORLD ENCYCLOPEDIA is printed on a high-grade, substantial book paper and is bound in durable Art Cloth with artistic gold title backs. The color illustrations are printed on special coated paper according to the most approved color reproduction processes. Each volume is 5¾ x 8 inches in size, 1¾ inches thick. The set is packed in a heavy corrugated container, insuring safe delivery.

THE COST OF A POST-CARD WILL BRING YOU full particulars of this splendid offer. Will you please write to-day if you have not already joined the club.

THE CHRISTIAN HERALD, BIBLE HOUSE, NEW YORK

New Stomachs for Old In 48 Hours

By R. S. Thompson

THOUSANDS of people who suffered for years with all sorts of stomach trouble are walking around today with entirely remade stomachs—stomachs which have been remade in from 48 to 72 hours! They enjoy their meals and never have a thought of indigestion, constipation or any of the serious illnesses with which they formerly suffered and which are directly traceable to the stomach.

And these surprising results have been produced not by drugs or medicines of any kind, not by foregoing substantial foods, not by eating specially prepared or patented foods of any kind, but by eating the plainest, simplest foods correctly combined!

These facts were forcibly brought to my mind by Eugene Christian, the eminent Food Scientist, who is said to have successfully treated over 23,000 people with foods alone!

As Christian says, man is what he eats. What we take into our stomachs today, we are tomorrow. Food is the source of all power, yet not one person in a hundred knows the chemistry of foods as related to the chemistry of the body. The result is we are a nation of "stomach sufferers."

Christian has proved that to eat good, simple, nourishing food is not necessarily to eat correctly. In the first place, many of the foods which we have come to regard as good are in reality about the worst things we can eat, while others that we regard as harmful have the most food value.

But perhaps the greatest harm which comes from eating blindly is the fact that very often two perfectly good foods when eaten at the same meal form a chemical reaction in the stomach and literally explode, liberating dangerous toxic poisons which are absorbed by the blood and circulate throughout the system, forming the root of all or nearly all sickness, the first indications of which are acidity, fermentation, gas, constipation and many other sympathetic ills leading to most serious consequences.

And yet just as wrong food selections and combinations will destroy our health and efficiency, so will the right foods quickly create and maintain bodily vigor and mental energy. In my talk with Eugene Christian, he told me of some of his experiences in the treatment of disease through food—just a few instances out of the more than 23,000 cases he has on record

One case which interested me greatly was that of a young business man whose efficiency had been practically wrecked through stomach acidity, fermentation and constipation, resulting in physical sluggishness which was naturally reflected in his ability to use his mind. He was twenty pounds underweight when he first went to see Christian and was so nervous he couldn't sleep. Stomach and intestinal gases were so severe that they caused irregular heart action and often fits of great mental depression. As Christian describes it, he was not 50 per cent efficient either mentally or physically. Yet in 24 hours, by following Christian's suggestions, as to food, his constipation was relieved, although he had formerly been in the habit of taking large daily doses of a strong cathartic. In five weeks every abnormal symptom had disappeared—his weight having increased 6 lbs. In addition to this, he acquired a store of physical and mental energy so great in comparison with his former self as to almost belie the fact that it was the same man.

Another instance of what proper food combinations can do almost overnight was that of a man one hundred pounds overweight whose only other discomfort was rheumatism. This man's greatest pleasure in life was eating. Though convinced of the necessity, he hesitated for months to go under treatment, believing he would be deprived of the pleasures of the table. He finally, however, decided to try it out. Not only did he begin losing weight within a few hours, regaining his normal figure in a matter of weeks but all signs of rheumatism disappeared, and he found the new diet far more delicious to the taste and afforded a much keener quality of enjoyment than his old method of eating, and wrote Christian a letter to that effect.

But perhaps the most interesting case that Christian told me of was that of a multi-millionaire—a man 70 years old, who had been traveling with his doctor for several years in a search for health. He was extremely emaciated, had chronic constipation, lumbago, and rheumatism. For over twenty years he had suffered with stomach and intestinal trouble which in reality was superaciduous secretions in the stomach. The first menus given him were designed to remove the causes of acidity, which was accomplished almost overnight. And after this was done he seemed to undergo a complete rejuvenation. His eyesight, hearing, taste, and all of his mental faculties became keener and more alert. He had had no organic trouble—but he was starving to death from malnutrition and decomposition—all caused by the wrong selection and combination of foods. Almost immediately after following Christian's advice this man could see results, and after six months he was as well and strong as he had ever been in his life.

These instances of the efficacy of right eating I have simply chosen at random from perhaps a dozen Eugene Christian told me of, every one of which was fully as interesting, and they applied to as many different ailments. Surely this man Christian is doing a great work.

I know of several instances where rich men and women have been so pleased with what he has done for them that they have sent him a check for $500 or $1,000 in addition to the amount of the bill when paying him.

There have been so many inquiries from all parts of the United States from people seeking the benefit of Eugene Christian's advice and whose cases he is unable to handle personally that he has written a little course of lessons which tells you exactly what to eat for health, stre h and efficiency. This course is published by e Corrective Eating Society of New York.

These lessons, there are 24 of them, cont actual menus for breakfast, luncheon, and ner, covering every condition of health and si ness from infancy to old age and for all occu tions, climates, and seasons.

Reasons are given for every recommendat based upon actual results secured in the thor's many years of practice although techni terms have been avoided. Every point is plained so clearly that there can be no possil misunderstanding.

With these lessons at hand it is just as thou you were in personal contact with the great fo specialist, because every possible point is thoroughly covered that you can scarcely thi of a question which isn't answered. You c start eating the very things that will produce t increased physical and mental energy you a seeking the day you receive the lessons, and yo will find that you secure results with the fir meal. This, of course, does not mean that com plicated illnesses can be removed at one mea but it does mean that real results can nearl always be seen in 48 hours or less.

If you would like to examine these 24 littl Lessons in Corrective Eating, simply write Th Corrective Eating Society, Department 346 443 Fourth Avenue, New York City. It is no necessary to enclose any money with your re quest. Merely ask them to send the lessons o five days' trial, with the understanding that yo will either return them within that time or remi $3.00, the small fee asked.

The reasons that the Society is willing to send the lessons on free examination without money in advance is because they want to remove every obstacle to putting this knowledge in the hands of the many interested people as soon as possible, knowing full well that a test of some of the menus in the lessons themselves is more convincing than anything that can possibly be said about them.

Please clip out and mail the following form instead of writing a letter, as this is a copy of the blank adopted by the Society, and will be honored at once.

CORRECTIVE EATING SOCIETY
Dept. 346, 443 Fourth Ave., New York City

You may send me prepaid a copy of Corrective Eating in 24 Lessons. I will either remail them to you within five days or send you $3.

Name...

Address.....................................

City...

State...

Christian Herald

ol. 42. No. 25. Published weekly at ew York City by The Christian Herald.
opyright, 1919, The Christian Herald

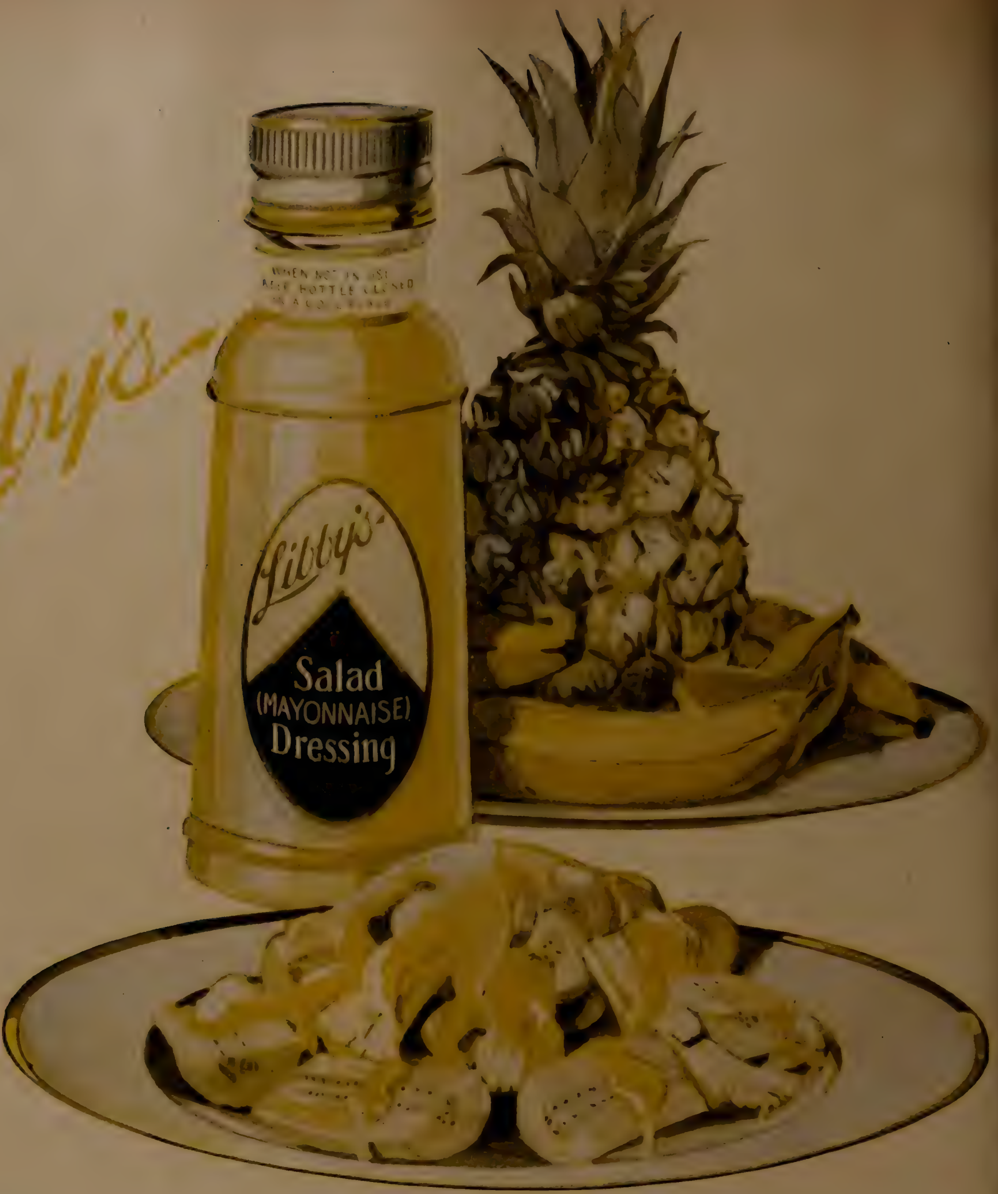
$2.50 a Year NEW YORK, JUNE 21, 1919 Ten Cents a Copy

Entered as Second Class Matter, January 25, 1909, at the Post Office at New York, under the act of March 3, 1879

Photo by Clarence Purchase

The brook runs past the stolid stones with swirling, carefree laughter;
And, in the branches overhead, a gay breeze follows after!

Libby's



Equal parts sliced banana and pineapple m with Libby's Salad Dressing makes this g looking, better-tasting salad. The acid of pineapple brings out the flavor of the ban and the dressing brings out the flavor of t

Makes simple salads into new food delights

Take any simple salad — a fruit or two, a plain combination of vegetables, or just a bit of cool, crisp lettuce — and serve it with Libby's Salad Dressing.

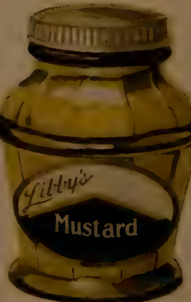
And when you've tried this once — you'll ask for a "Libby-dressed" salad often.

The secret lies in the remarkably pleasing flavor of this dressing, in its richness and piquancy. It is the result of many months of experiment by the famous Libby chefs, a perfect blend of the choicest olive oil from old Spain, rich-yolked eggs, flavory vinegar, rare spices from India, and England's famed mustard seed.

Order a bottle of Libby's Salad Dressing today; your grocer has it or will gladly get it for you. Begin tonight to enjoy the salad delights made possible by Libby's Salad Dressing.

Libby, McNeill & Libby, 1005 Welfare Bldg., Chicago

Libby, McNeill & Libby, of Can., Ltd.
45 E. Front St., Toronto, Ont., Can.



Libby's Mustard — made from English Mustard Seed and pure India spices—always uniform in flavor and color. Try it on meats, and on sandwiches

Was $100

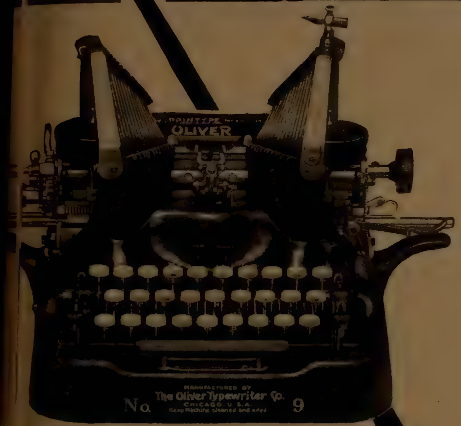
SAVE $43

Now
$57

By Being Your Own Salesman

Try the Oliver for Five Days at Our Expense



This Simple Plan Makes It Easy to Own an Oliver

This sales plan is a legacy of the war, which taught us all new economies—ones we won't forget.

By reorganizing our method of distribution, we were able to make a radical reduction in price.

We did not change the famous Oliver an iota. The machine we now sell for $57 is the identical one formerly priced at $100—our latest and best model.

During the war we learned that it was unnecessary to have great numbers of traveling salesmen and numerous, expensive branch houses throughout the country. We were also able to discontinue many other superfluous, costly sales methods. You benefit by these savings.

Pre-war extravagances were ended. And our plan of selling made simpler. We send the Oliver to you for free trial, so that you may judge it, in solitude, without being influenced.

No Money Down

Merely send us the coupon. We ship an Oliver to you. Try it for five days. Then, if you agree that it is the finest typewriter at any price, merely send us $3 per month, until the $57 is paid.

If you do not believe that this is the greatest typewriter opportunity, return the Oliver to us, express collect. We even refund the outgoing transportation charges. You have not placed yourself under any obligation to buy.

When the Oliver comes to you, you will admire its many advancements—all the refinements made possible during 24 years of typewriter-making. A finer typewriter is impossible.

The coupon below gives you the opportunity to be your own salesman and save yourself $43. Note that it brings EITHER an Oliver for Free Trial, or further information. Check it accordingly.

The Oliver Typewriter Company
546 Oliver Typewriter Building, Chicago, Illinois
Canadian Price, $72

Only $3.00 Per Month

not buy or rent any typewriter until you the Oliver. A five days' trial will help you . Besides saving you $43, we make the payeasy. We ask no advance payment. But merely r month until the $57 is paid.

not confuse this offer with those for second-hand built typewriters. Our $57 Oliver is our brand new ical Model 9, formerly priced at $100. It has not been ged in the slightest.

Over 700,000 Sold

vers are in use all over the world. Some of the large concerns e United States using Olivers are: U. S. Steel Corporation, win Locomotive Works, National City Bank of New York, ond Match Company, Pennsylvania Railroad, Hart, Schaffner & American Bridge Company, Encyclopedia Britannica, Otis Ele- Company, Bethlehem Steel Company, Boston Elevated Railways, York Edison Company, and a host of others of equal importance.

d thousands of Olivers are used by individuals—every business is repre- d among our users. And every profession.

u can depend on this wide use of the Oliver as a guarantee of its worth.

No Finer Built

xamine the Oliver carefully. It is built in a model factory with a heritage of Only the finest materials are used. And this accounts for the prolonged the Oliver, its durability, its inbuilt service. It is simplified in construction uilt to withstand the hardest usage. The Oliver in war service proved e design and construction.

ou can't buy a better typewriter at any price.

ail the coupon now, for either a Free Trial Oliver or further information.

THE OLIVER TYPEWRITER COMPANY,
546 Oliver Typewriter Building, Chicago, Ill.

☐ Ship me a new Oliver Nine for five days' free inspection. If I keep it, I will pay $57 at the rate of $3 per month. The title to remain in you until fully paid for.

My shipping point is ....

This does not place me under any obligation to buy. If I choose to return the Oliver, I will ship it back at your expense at the end of five days.

☐ Do not send a machine until I order it. Mail me your book—"The High Cost of Typewriters—The Reason and the Remedy," your de luxe catalog and further information.

Name ....

Street Address ....

City .... State ....

Occupation or Business ....

OUR MAIL-BAG

NOTICE

THE editors of the Christian Herald will be glad to answer any question addressed to the Mail-bag p ovided it be of general interest and not merely personal. No attention will be paid to anonymous letters nor to those written with lead pencil.

Questions and Answers

MRS. W. O. T., Lime Spring, Iowa "As I read in your editorial page of April 26, the piece entitled, 'The Day of the Common Man,' I saw a statement in regard to the British Prime Minister David Lloyd George, where he is called a Welsh coal-miner, and one time a plain member of the proletariat. I love the title 'workman,' and Mr. George is and always was a great worker, but he was never a coal-miner. The coal mines are in South Wales. Lloyd George was born at Manchester, England. His father was a schoolmaster, or what we call in this country superintendent of schools. He died when David was only three years of age, leaving him and two other orphans in the care of the most beautiful of mothers, a true example of the type that rocks the cradle and rules the world. Shortly after her husband's death she went back to Wales, their former home, to live with her brother, Mr. Richard Lloyd, and, he like his sister, was one of the best of humanity, so they looked well to the needs of the three little ones. Mr. Lloyd was the village shoemaker and one of the village people. He was also their preacher, and he studied law in order that he might help his nephew David. He used to lead him by the hand when the boy was too small to go alone to the sanctuary. They say that Lloyd George can quote most of the Bible today. That was the kind of a home the future Prime Minister was raised in. He himself preached the Gospel many a time when a young man."

A missionary at Lajas, Porto Rico, writes: "Is it possible for our mission church to obtain as a gift a second-hand little organ from any church or Sunday school or individual Christian in the United States? Such an organ will help very much to spread the Gospel in the different preaching points of a large rural field."

We shall be glad to send the name and address of the missionary to any interested church or Sunday school or reader of this paper desiring to help this missionary in his work.

Two ministers, one in Maine and the other in Illinois, who became acquainted through the medium of the Mail-Bag, and became friends and co-workers, are planning to establish a Faith-Witness Rest Home for tired Christian workers. They would be glad if any one knowing of a suitable Home and grounds in a warm, dry, temperate climate would communicate with Rev. George Tester, Elmhurst, Ill.

B. M. Guthrie, Okla., writes (1) referring to the fact that Rousseau long ago proposed a League of Nations, and adds: "But we can go back much further. In II Chron. 16 : 2–3, we read that there was a league between Asa and Benhadad, king of Syria, also between the latter and Baasha, king of Israel." Such leagues occur all through history, but they do not run in any sense on parallel lines to the League of Nations. (2) There is no absolute evidence found anywhere showing that Paul was ever married, although some authors have accepted it as a probability, as the Sanhedrin, of which he was a member, was composed of heads of families.

N. B., Indianapolis, Ind. It was Motley the historian who suggested that the landmarks of world progress and civilization were these: the alphabet, the laws of Sinai, the successive eras of intellectual advancement in Egypt, Greece and Rome, the coming of Christianity, Magna Charta, the printing press, the Reformation, the mariner's compass, and the discovery of America. To these can be added steam, electricity in the telegraph, telephone, electric light and wireless. And now we have the conquest of the air, which has assuredly come, although it will take time to develop. The triumph of the American aviators is entitled to be regarded as the latest of the great achievements of human ingenuity.

Reader, Philadelphia, Pa. The present Federal law of 1919 affecting child labor places a ten per cent. tax on the products of establishments employing children regardless of whether their products are shipped into another state or not. The age limit of fourteen for work in factories, mills and similar establishments, and sixteen years as a limit for the age in mines and quarries, also an eight-hour day and no night work for children between fourteen and sixteen, were fixed by the child labor law of 1916.

Mrs. J. M. S., Carbondale, Pa. There is no law which bars any man from the Presidency on account of his religion.

D. M. S., Clements, Kan. Any one who objects to giving the returning soldiers, who fought their country's battle for righteousness and democracy, a public welcome in the church, is sadly out of key with the attitude of the whole nation in such matters. All over the land our brave boys are honored, and nowhere more than in the churches. In scores of metropolitan churches it is the same. Such services are regarded as a high patriotic duty, a public expression of thankfulness to God for his goodness in sending our dear ones back to us safe, after all the sacrifices they have made and the perils they have undergone. Such occasions are marked by patriotic music and addresses, and also by decorations in honor of the returned heroes. It might be agreeable to all if you could arrange to have your patriotic service of welcome in the church, and then, if you so planned, to serve light refreshments in the schoolhouse, if not too far apart.

THE SHEEP

WHERE the first star gleams in the faint pink sky,
On the valley the shadows creep,
One by one toward the house draw nigh
The woolly white band of the sheep.

One by one they cuddle low
Where the cottage lamplight gleams,
As near as they may to the friendly glow
And they give themselves to their dreams.

When the wind is cold with the evening dew,
And the firelight's warm and deep,
My arms are safest and best for you,
As the cottage is for the sheep.

HELEN EDGAR SHULTZ.

R. S. P., Redbarn, Ark., writes: "After reading 'Ruined Royalties' in your issue of recent date, I take my Bible and turn to Dan. 7 : 9. It seems to me that this is the time the prophet foresaw. The fiery stream (see 10th verse) issued and came forth before him; this was certainly the case while our armies were in action, and thousands of thousands of our soldiers engaged in battle, and ten thousand times ten thousand (100,000,000, the population of the United States) stood before him."

Our correspondent's suggestion is ingenious, but hardly convincing. There are many surprising conclusions to be reached in dealing with prophecy. We would refer the writer and others interested to Dr. Gray's articles which appeared in the Christian Herald, and which present the most widely accepted views of the great authorities on the subject.

Reader, Norwood, N. Y. "I am for Church Unity. There ought to be a united Church to fight all sin and conditions leading to sin. Brotherly love must dominate and it is only by cooperation that this can come about. We must have common spiritual interests. The Church must combine the teaching of religion with the practice of love, good fellowship and communion. We should have a united Church, under a single name, preferably the Church of Christ. We need grace more than creeds. A great idea, I think, would be to have a service flag for members. I read of some such plan in the Western churches. Each church should have a brotherhood and sisterhood for social privileges and fellowship—the real thing, no half interest affair; a social place for every one. The young people ought to have their church club also. All the churches should go into the highways and byways and get at the people who are down. If the power of Christ became our daily talk, and the Bible our daily study, this old earth would revive like a wilted flower under the soft spring rain, and send forth its fragrance and beauty to cheer all people along the path of life."

W. H. Winton, Rochester, N. Y., writes: "One of the most notable active men in service in this city was Alexander B. Lamberton, for many years President and Commissioner of Parks. On May 24 he died in his eightieth year. When he was president of the Chamber of Commerce he raised the money for the first park concerts. While president of the Park Board he gave much time to people's entertainments, among them the water carnival, annual Indian festival, and winter sports. The conservatory bearing his name at entrance to Highland Park was a gift to the city from his sister-in-law, Mrs. Mary A. Starbuck. Before the playgrounds came into city control, he donated a large number of books to them. A year ago he wrote to the mayor of Rochester: 'I am too old to fight in the ranks or in the trenches, but not too old to cheer our boys and hurrah for universal democracy.'" This is the story briefly sketched of the career of a public-spirited Christian gentleman and all-round American citizen.

Reader, Birmingham, Ala. It is only when the full text of the Peace Treaty is submitted and its terms examined in detail that a reasonable and legitimate conclusion can be reached as to its acceptability. Our representatives have had a large share in its construction, but the nation has a right to pass upon a document of such importance, not through a summary, but with the complete text at hand. We must see what we are asked to approve; we must know the full extent of the grave responsibilities we are expected to assume. It may be that it is susceptible of amendment, which would make it more satisfactory and more in accord with our own conception of our duty as a nation. We believe that the document will suffer nothing by the Senate's ac rather that it will gain in acceptab

An Iowa pastor writes: "These ar times. Pastors are in a great and I guess everywhere, to kno to adjust themselves to meet p ditions, some of them putti
'stunts' in their church progra
the people to the house of God.
ever, does not seem to draw then need in this country is a big rev preachers, if we can find a man
—I mean a man of God, who the part of John the Baptist, the day of Pentecost. The pe were so hungry for the p as they are right now. A preachers are steering c
Word and do not preac people do not go to ch
the people to be blam
I am seventy-one and o occasionally now. I an of Foreign Missions, bu realize that there are fif unsaved in America. I time for the Church in t States to wake up and d serve the heathen and u
our own door."

Our friend is nobly trying these years of ripe experience work the most fruitful. The today is one that calls for th of the consecrated energy of t church. This would be great by a union of all the Gospel such a district as he describes.
evangelist (who might be through the secretary of the nominational Association of lists, Winona Lake, Ind.), wou less prove a valuable aid, sh churches decide to make a unit

B. N. S., Centerville, Md., to the inquiry of D. D. McI.
us that "the Tuckahoe India inhabitants of the Eastern Maryland, where they are c
orated in Caroline County by T Creek. The Maryland Histo
ciety can supply data regar
Tuckahoes, now considered
A. E. R., Tottenville, N. Y., butes this information: "Th Tuckahoe is a derisive name ap western Virginians to the na tidewater sections of that state, who Indians or not. Tuckahoe is an India given to a vegetable eaten by the American Indians"

Miss M. E. J., Fort Wayne, Ind.
Foch is a Frenchman and a Catholi

I. E. A., Chester, S. C. 1. Scapa is the inland sea formed by the Orkney north of Scotland. 2. The Almanach de contains, in addition to the usual cal etc., found in other almanacs, a direc
the governments of the world. 3. The R changed the name of their capital fr Petersburg to Petrograd because the name was German (the burg or fortress of and Petrograd is its Russian translation French name Strasbourg is simply the G name Strassburg spelled with French
4. The spelling Serbia is considered mo rect than Servia, as it comes nearer native name Srbiya. Habana is the S name of the city which we call Havan Haakon is the king of Norway. 6. The of T. G. Masaryk, president of the C slovak Republic, is pronounced as if Mah-sah-rick, with the accent on th syllable. 7. We have no office exactly sponding to that of premier, whose ten office depends on the approval of his p by the parliament. The difference be our President and an English king is th king has to choose as premier the leader dominant party, while our President can does, choose a cabinet from his own part

Miss M. C. W., Philadelphia. The Fiume is pronounced as if written fee-oowith the accent on the oo.

A member of a Social Service Epis Guild, in Texas, has recently asked us to lish as an appeal the question "Who and is the Christ to you?" We do not kno what purpose the question was asked, wh our friend's faith was wavering, or wh she sought material to convince those w doubt was stronger than her argument.
any readers of the Mail-Bag wish to an
the question we will see that the answer forwarded.

Miss L. C., Stillwater, Okla. The case mention may relate to the absolute accu of the records of the church in question.
is a matter which if capable of being pro at all, could only be accepted after b passed upon by a competent court which sufficient evidence before it. No court wo rule that the records were "infallible."

THE CHRISTIAN HERALD

AN ILLUSTRATED NEWS WEEKLY FOR THE HOME

SUBSCRIPTION $2.50 PER ANNUM
PUBLISHED 52 TIMES A YEAR

GRAHAM PATTERSON
Publisher

GEORGE H. SANDISON
Managing Editor

VOL. 42—NO. 25. PRICE 10 CENTS
OFFICES: BIBLE HOUSE, NEW YORK

AMERICA FIGHTS ANARCHY

ONG live the social revolution! Down with tyranny!" Thus ended the circular, headed "Plain Words," and signed Anarchist Fighters," which was l on June 2, in quantities, in the borhood of simultaneous midnight attacks in eight American cities, letails of which were given in last 's issue.

torney General Palmer quickly up this challenge. The whole nment organization for the deon of crime was reorganized. Wil- J. Flynn, former head of the Secret ice, was called to Washington and d at the head of the Bureau of stigation of the Department of ce. The Secret Service of the sury Department, under William Ioran, was instructed to cooperate ery way with the Bureau of Investi- n; the best detectives on the bomb ds in the various cities were de- ed and placed under Flynn's com- d, and a systematic search was n for the perpetrators of the crimes the secret sources of anarchy. The e and Secret Service had the names 0,000 persons, mostly of foreign a, who were known to be in sym- y with the principles of anarchy Bolshevism.

n June 9, the sum total of accom- ment made public was the probable tification of the man who lost his in placing the bomb at Attorney eral Palmer's home in Washington, the arrest in Pittsburg of two or- izers of the I. W. W. who were known vor violence. One resisted arrest and other remained in hiding for several s. One of these men was thought to w something about the construction he bombs used in Pittsburg and in ladelphia. A secret meeting place located near Bessemer, Pa., in which ies of the "Plain Words" circular and erial for bomb making were found. rrests of known Bolshevists and of sons caught expressing antagonism to the govern- t, were freely made in every city where the Reds e congregated. A great many of them are for- ers, principally Russians; few are naturalized, the whole Red movement bears conspicuous evi- e of its foreign origin. Its main element is an r disregard of the genius of American democracy of the power of the free ballot.

ttorney General Palmer, on June 2, issued a state- nt as follows: "The outrages of last night indicate ing but the lawless attempt of an anarchistic ele- nt in the population to terrorize the country, and stay the hands of the government. This they e utterly failed to do. The purposes of the de- ment of Justice are the same today as yesterday. e attacks by bomb throwers will only increase extend the activities of our crime-detecting forces. are determined now, as heretofore, that organized e directed against organized government in this ntry shall be stopped."

enators and Representatives took immediate ps to strengthen the laws against anarchy and establish fitting penalties for terrorism. The sub- mmittee on propaganda of the Senate Committee vestigating Bolshevism began the preparation of astic legislation. Senator Walsh of Montana intro- ced a bill imposing heavy fines and imprisonment r displaying the red flag or distributing literature vocating violence against the government. Senator ing of Utah declared his intention to present bills aking it a capital offense to transport bombs, or to long to an organization advocating the overthrow government. Senator Edge of New Jersey attacked e problem from the other direction, introducing a providing for a commission to devise a policy of er cooperation between employers and employees.

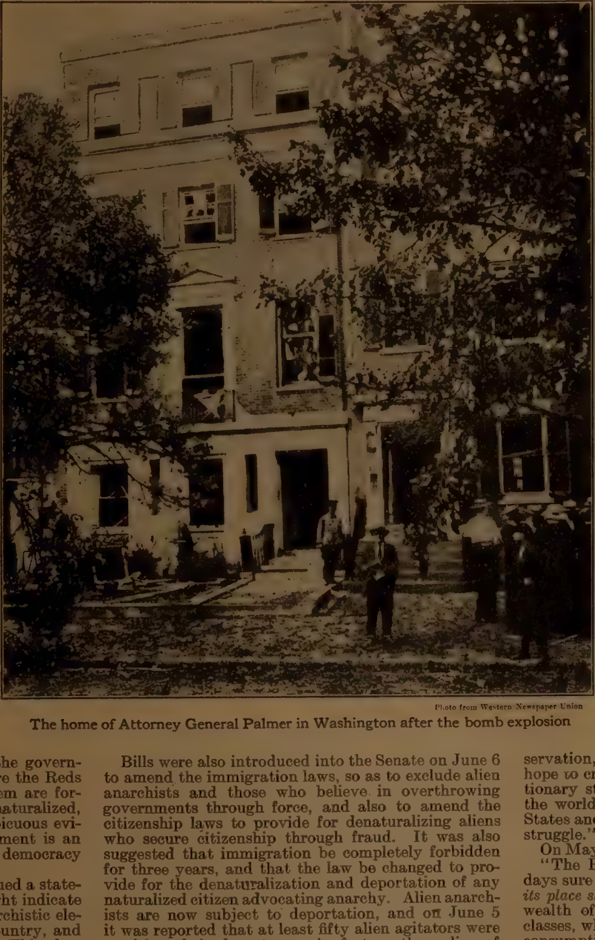

Photo from Western Newspaper Union

The home of Attorney General Palmer in Washington after the bomb explosion

Bills were also introduced into the Senate on June 6 to amend the immigration laws, so as to exclude alien anarchists and those who believe in overthrowing governments through force, and also to amend the citizenship laws to provide for denaturalizing aliens who secure citizenship through fraud. It was also suggested that immigration be completely forbidden for three years, and that the law be changed to provide for the denaturalization and deportation of any naturalized citizen advocating anarchy. Alien anarchists are now subject to deportation, and on June 5 it was reported that at least fifty alien agitators were awaiting their departure. As fast as the police of the various cities rounded up the reds, those found to be aliens were held for investigation.

On June 9, trails were being followed in Pittsburg, Philadelphia and New York. The man killed in Washington was an Italian from Philadelphia. It was thought he had only recently arrived here. There was evidence that he had been in Bessemer, Pa., recently.

IT IS freely charged that the whole terrorist movement in this country is backed by the Russian Bolshevist government, and is a part of their world-wide propaganda campaign for the overthrow of bourgeois governments and the freeing of the oppressed proletariat, the workers and farmers.

The campaign is conducted largely through the foreign language press, mostly Russian, Hungarian and Yiddish, although the Scandinavian press is not untouched by this influence, and papers in more than a score of languages are involved. Besides the press there are some 500 agents traveling about the country preaching the power of the proletariat and the glories of Bolshevist Communism. The organization back of these agents is the Russian Workers' Union. Its constitution states that "Present society is divided into opposite classes, on one side the workers and farmers, submerged in poverty, but who have created by their own labor all the riches of the world; on the other side, the rich, who have confiscated all these riches." . . . . "The struggle between these classes is not finished at the present time, and will end only when the laboring masses, organized as a class, will come into possession of the riches of the world through forceful social revolution.

"Having accomplished such change and at the same time having destroyed all the institutions of sovereignty and government, the class of the despoiled shall proclaim 'The Society of Liberal Functionaries,' endeavoring to satisfy the needs of every separate individual, who in return would give the society his labor, talents, and accomplishments.

The Red press in some cases extolled the perpetration of the bomb outrage and in others charged that the police had placed the bombs to bolster up the cause of the bourgeoise and make possible radical restrictive legislation. There was a threat of new outrages on July 4, but the authorities were confident that the arrests already made and in prospect would prevent them.

IN a recent issue of the Russian newspaper, Novy Mir, of which Trotzky was an editor when in New York, under the caption "Revolutionary Strike Movement," there appeared an editorial from which the following translated excerpts are taken:

"A spirit of revolt spreads larger and larger over the working masses of the entire world. Neitherthreats nor curses of the high priests of the bourgeoisie society are capable of holding back the pressure of proletarian masses. . . . The American bourgeoisie is listening to the thundering peals of the coming storm and, obeying the instinct of self-preservation, resorts to the arsenal of old measures in hope to crush the movement." . . . But the revolutionary strike wave extending more and more over the world is raising the working class of the United States and will teach him the European methods of struggle."

On May 29 the following appeared in Khlieb i Volia: "The Bourgeois society is nearing the end of its days sure enough. The day of its doom is nigh! And its place should be taken by Anarcho-communism. The wealth of the world was built up by the working classes, who should also have part in distribution and consumption of the fruit of their labor."

The following appeared recently in Robitnyk: "The Russian workmen have got rid of the bourgeoisie. And we will get rid of them today or tomorrow. Only more work, more courage! Our fate is being made here—our own and that of our children. We are not going to struggle for 'democracy,' we are struggling for bread, for a warm corner in a house! We struggle in order to be able to use the fruits of our labor.'"

Der Kampf, Yiddish, also published in New York, recently printed an article captioned: "Lenine or Wilson?" in which the following appears: "Lenine and all his adherents fight to form a socialistic order in the entire world. Therefore they call the workers of all countries to a revolution.

The Daily Forward, a Yiddish paper, printed on March 23 the following: "War is war, and there can be no talk of moral strategy, neither of right nor sympathy. It is a fight for life or death."

"Can you wonder that poor, ignorant men explode bombs or send them through the mails when they are fed on such stuff as this?" asked a government official.

PEACE MAY COME THIS WEEK

IT APPEARED probable on June 9 that the terms of the treaty of peace with Germany would not be altered, but that addenda would be attached providing for early admission of Germany to membership in the League of Nations, reducing the time of Allied occupation of German territory and placing the time for the report of the reparations commission within a few months instead of in May, 1921. It was also possible that the people of upper Silesia would be permitted to vote on their future national allegiance, and that, should they decide for Poland, Germany would be assured a percentage of the product of the coal mines.

The various commissions were hurrying their reports, and it was thought that the answers to all the German notes would be ready by June 11 and that the treaty might be presented to the Germans by the thirteenth, with a possible demand for signature before the twentieth.

The terms of the peace treaty with Austria, except the final boundary section, were presented to the Austrian delegation at St. Germain on June 2. The Austrian Premier made an excellent impression upon the Allied delegates by the courtesy with which he replied to Premier Clemenceau's brief address, and by the frankness with which he accepted for Austria her share of the burden of war.

Dr. Renner presented Austria to the Peace Congress as a new republic, hating the horrible crimes of 1914 committed by the former government. He declared that Austria was completely in the hands of the Allied commissioners and asked for a disposition that would insure Austria's national, political, and economic existence. He stood to make his address and spoke in the French language.

The terms of the treaty proposed reduced Austria to a state of from 6 to 7,000,000 people in a territory of 5 to 6000 square miles. Austria being required to recognize the complete independence of Hungary, Poland, Czechoslovakia, and the Serbo-Croat-Slovene state, and to guarantee the rights and liberty of racial minorities within her borders.

The Austrian Foreign Minister on June 7 declared that the peace terms presented to Austria meant the death of the country by starvation, reducing it to 4,000,000 mountaineers and 2,000,000 city dwellers and placing outside its boundaries all the mineral, manufacturing and agricultural wealth and industry of the old Austria.

© Underwood & Underwood

The Great Hog Island Shipyard, biggest in the world, where five 7,800 ton ships were launched on May 30. Each derrick in the front row stands between two ways. In all our shipyards in May we completed 136 vessels of 768,025 deadweight tons and launched 137 ships of 705,958 tons. America is now building twice as much shipping as all the rest of the world.

The Week in the World's News

WIRES RETURNED TO OWNERS. Postmaster General Burleson, on June 5, while committees of both houses of Congress were preparing legislation for the return of the telephone, telegraph and cable systems to their owners, by executive order, restored to the companies the control of operation of the systems, retaining for the government the control of rates and finances. His order provided that charges for service and the rates of wages established under government control would continue, pending further action. Assistant Postmaster General Koons told the Interstate Commerce Committee of the House, on June 5, that the government operation of the systems had cost about $1,000,000. He recommended that the increased rates established by the government be continued for one year, and that future changes in rates and wages would be subject to the authority of the Interstate Commerce Commission and be regulated together. It was suggested that the action of the Postmaster General was impelled by a threatened strike of the commercial telegraphers for recognition of the union. The strike, on June 2, began in Atlanta because of the reported discharge of men who had joined the union. President Konenkamp of the Commercial Telegraphers Union immediately on learning of the Postmaster General's action putting the men under his jurisdiction back into the position of employees of private concerns, extended the Atlanta strike to the whole southeastern division of the country, and issued a call for a nationwide strike to begin June 11, thus restoring the condition which compelled the government to take over the wires in the first instance.

The Supreme Court of the United States on June 2 declared that the Federal Government, under the war powers conferred by Congress, was given complete control of the railroad, telegraph and telephone rates both within the states and interstate commerce.

LABOR ON STRIKE. Over 2000 former soldiers were reported on June 4 as supporting the Winnipeg strike. On the same day in Toronto a great mass meeting in support of the metal workers' strike and of the demand for laws providing the 44-hour week was held at Queen's Park. The soldiers in Winnipeg finally turned to the support of order and the government, and declared that the only union they would recognize was the Empire, the flag and the Union Jack. They also offered their service to help the mayor in safeguarding life and restoring normal conditions. As a result of the soldiers' stand the Central Strike Committee was reported to be considering the calling off of the strike.

The Paris tramways were completely shut down on June 3 by a walk-out of the employees, but charges in the press that labor agitation was pro-German were reported to have assisted in the prompt return to normal conditions.

Buenos Aires on June 4 had been for a week without newspapers, publishing having been completely stopped by a strike of publishers against restrictions on the liberty of the press resulting from the union rules.

In Toledo, Ohio, on June 3 a clash between the workers and strikers developed into a riot in which two men were shot to death and twenty-five injured. The situation was quiet on June 4.

EXPOSING THE SECRET. Senator Borah and Senator Lodge created a considerable sensation in the Senate on June 3 by declaring that they had seen or been offered the full text or the peace treaty with Germany, which had been kept secret by order of the State Department. On June 4 Senator Hitchcock introduced a resolution providing for an inquiry into the manner in which the secret copies of the text had reached unauthorized persons in New York. Senator Johnson had previously introduced a resolution calling upon the State Department for the complete text. The Senate, on June 6, adopted both Senator Johnson's resolution and Senator Hitchcock's. There was a report that the German Government was mailing copies of the complete treaty to each American Senator and representative.

The text of the treaty was not made public in England or France. The text reached the Senate through newspaper sources on June 9 and was ordered printed in full in the Congressional Record. The President in a cablegram opposed publicity as a breach of faith with our Allies.

COAL MINERS KILLED. Black powder on the last car of a mine train carrying miners to their work, at Wilkes-barre, Pa., was set off by sparks from a broken trolley wire, on June 5, and flames from the exploding powder enveloped the train and its passengers in a sheet of fire. Eighty-four men were killed and forty-two others burned, half of them probably fatally.

DR. MOTT DECORATED. Secretary of War Baker, on June 4, awarded a distinguished service medal to John R Mott, General Secretary of the Y. M. C. A., to Raymond Fosdick, Chairman of the Commission on Training Camp Activities, and to John J. Burke of the National Catholic War Council.

WILL END FOOD CONTROL. The American members of the Supreme Economic Council were quoted on June 3 as feeling that there would be no necessity of continuing beyond this fall the centralized control of food distribution in Europe. Careful estimates have indicated that the crops of 1919 will be sufficient to feed the world. The meat supply was held to be ample. Figures secured by the Council indicated that since the beginning of the war Europe had lost 18,400,000 cattle, 39,500,000 hogs, and 8,600,000 sheep.
production of Europe in 191 about 65 per cent. of the no duction before the war. A American rye and wheat sur be needed to balance crop sh Europe.

JAPAN DISCIPLINED MISS
Peking dispatches of June 4 that considerable excitement caused throughout China by t that Japanese authorities had rarily closed the Presbyterian School at Tsing Tao and had the principle for anti-Japanes ties. Dispatches also reported cott of Japanese goods to be s and some shops
tung offering goods for sale h
attacked. The J boycott is bei
tered, by the throughout
The authoritie been unable t
it, as the symp
the public is w
students.

KOLCHAK AN OGNITION. In to a proposal f
Council of Four t ognition woul
granted his R Government if h agree to call an
by the result of stituent Assembl recognize the righ
dependent states,
in the territory
former Russian E
Admiral Kolcha
said, on June 6, t
made a favorable
The military act
the week in Rus
sulted in little cha
the situation.
forces were advancing in Tran
casia and Kolchak Siberians maintaining a steady pressure a the Reds along the Volga front.
time, behind the Siberian army's normal living conditions were restored, a large wheat acreage being planted and recruiting army of liberation was going on briskly.

BRINGING HOME THE BOYS.
ing the month of May the reco 320,000 troops returned home reached. Up to May 31—1,04 soldiers have been brought home, total of 2,276,299 have been de ized. The total of casualties up to date was 294,886 for the Army and together. On June 3, 1600 men o 339th Infantry, about one-third o American forces on the Archangel in Northern Russia, boarded trans for home.

NICARAGUA ASKS TROOPS.
claring herself threatened with inv from Costa Rica, where a rebe against General Tinoco's unrecog government had failed, the govern of Nicaragua on June 9 asked United States to land forces to pr Nicaraguan sovereignty. Under agreement with us the Nicaraguan A numbers only 500 men.

HUNGARIAN REDS DEFEAT CZE
Hungarian Bolshevist troops d
Czechoslovak troops across the r Neutra north of Budapest in fight ending June 7. The defeat stirred u new wave of patriotic fervor in Prag the Czech capital, and prompt attem were expected to reverse the decis
The Hungarian Reds were stirring the Slovaks against the Czechs. Me while certain villages near the Aust frontier had resisted Hungarian authority and a massacre of 3,000 p sons including women and children reported at Kolnhof, a resisting vill which was burned.

Mary A. Livermore

Lucretia Mott

May Wright Sewell

Lucy Stone

Laura Clay

WOMAN SUFFRAGE WINS

The Fight of a Century Results in Passage of the Susan B. Anthony Amendment

ENFRANCHISED women of today, freed from the shackles of political inequality, were fortunate in having for forerunners many strong, sweet and remarkably endowed women. And in the hour of triumph for the woman's cause, the grateful multitude turn to those heroic pioneers who blazed the way that the world might be "wider for women and happier for humanity." Millions of loyal hearts will forever cherish the names of those who bore the brunt of the battle for woman's freedom and complete equality.

Clara Barton

ACTION by Congress on equal suffrage—subject of fight of a century's duration—ended June 4 in adoption by the Senate by a vote of 56 to 25 of the historic Susan B. Anthony constitutional amendment resolution—two votes more than the necessary two-thirds.

The proposed amendment, adopted by the House by a vote of 304 to 89, May 21, as the first act of the new Congress, now goes to the States.

Ratification by three-fourths of the legislatures is required for its incorporation in the Federal Constitution.

The suffrage amendment adopted by Congress is the one originally drafted by Susan B. Anthony in 1875. It reads:

"The right of citizens of the United States to vote shall not be denied or abridged by the United States or by any State on account of sex."

Loud applause, unchecked by the presiding officer, swept the Senate chamber when the final vote was announced following two days' debate.

President Wilson's signature, it was stated, is not necessary, although the resolution will be sent to him as usual, and may be signed by the executive. It will be certified to the States by the State Department.

Nobody knows who was the first woman suffragist in America. Possibly it was Ann Hutchinson, a godly woman who in the seventeenth century was cruelly persecuted for daring to "preach the gospel to men," or Mistress Margaret Brent (owner of a large estate in Maryland), who demanded a voice in colonial affairs.

The first suffragist in our newly formed Republic was undoubtedly the lovely and brave Abigail Adams, who asked for larger liberty for women at the close of the American Revolution.

Among the women leaders who first raised their voices in behalf of women was Mrs. Emma Willard, the famous pioneer teacher of Troy, New York, who a century ago applied to the state legislature and secured permission to open the first institution in the United States offering "higher education" to women.—the Troy Female Seminary.

During the first half of the nineteenth century there appeared a number of notable women who had had the vision of woman's broader field and of the need for utilizing the latent powers of women in community service and uplift. Chief among these were the Grimke sisters of South Carolina, who freed their slaves in 1828 and entered heart and soul into the abolition campaign in the North. This was then an extremely unpopular cause everywhere; and the Grimke sisters met with savage persecution.

Another early woman suffragist and abolitionist, Mrs. Abby Kelley Foster, was pelted with bad eggs and mobbed in Providence, R. I. She and the Misses Grimke were the pioneers who more than any others, it is declared, made it possible for women who followed to enjoy the right of free public speech.

Lillie Devereux Blake

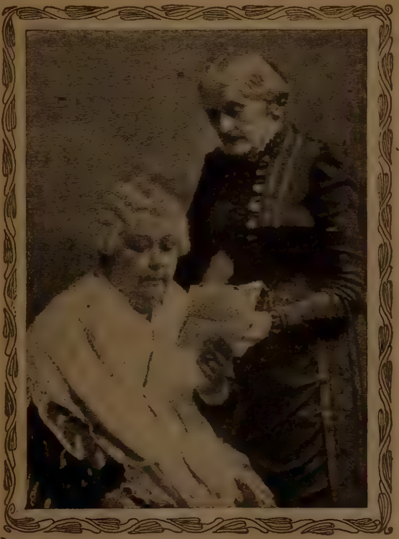
The oppressive conditions under which women suffered in all countries and the need of larger freedom were graphically depicted by Lydia Maria Child in her "History of Women"; Catherine Beecher with her sister Mrs. Harriet Beecher Stowe of "Uncle Tom's Cabin" fame were also early brave pen champions of woman's cause.

The first address given by a woman before a state legislature was that in Michigan by Mrs. Ernestine L. Rose, who with Mrs. Paulina Wright Davis in 1836 had tried to circulate petitions in New York for property rights for married women and secured but five names.

Jane H. Spofford

A ringing appeal for equal rights for women was that of "Women of the Nineteenth Century," published in 1845 by Margaret Fuller (d'Ossoli), who had sadly shocked public taste in Boston by sitting down in a public library to read a book.

The general public received a stirring arrest of thought when in 1848 that historic call for the first Woman's Rights Convention was issued, bringing in the limelight the noble figures of Mrs. Lucretia Mott and Mrs. Elizabeth Cady Stanton and their able co-workers, including Mrs. Abigail Bush, Mrs. M. A. McClintock, Mrs. M. C. Wright, and Mrs. Emily P. Collins, who formed the first local woman suffrage society in the world (at South Bristol, New York) that year.



Susan B. Anthony and Elizabeth Cady Stanton

Among these noted pioneers too was Lucy Stone, graduated in 1847 from Oberlin College, where she was told that one of the professors would read her graduating essay, as it would be "indelicate" to read it herself before a promiscuous audience, an offer which she declined and the essay was not read. A leader among the women who first protested against paying taxes because "Taxation without representation is tyranny," was Dr. Harriet K. Hunt, who in 1850, after fifteen years' practice in Boston, was refused permission by the medical students at Harvard University to attend medical lectures, as had been done in Geneva, N. Y., in the case of the first woman physician in the world, Dr. Elizabeth Blackwell, who was graduated from a medical school in 1848.

High in the galaxy of the pioneer suffragists who faced ridicule and calumny for the ideals of a true democracy were Amelia Bloomer, first promoter of sensible dress (called "bloomers"); Rev. Antoinette Brown Blackwell (who was ordained a pastor of the Congregational Church at

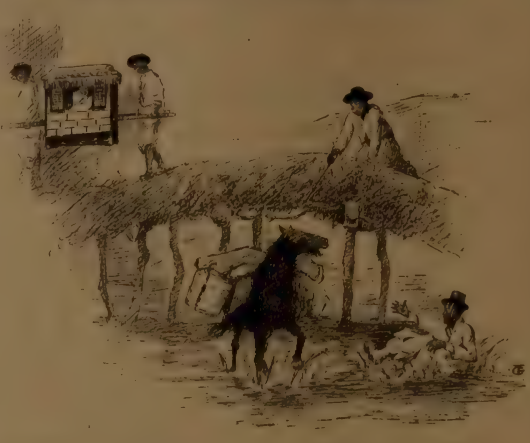
Cont'd on p. 705

Anna Dickinson

CHANSUNG'S CONFESSION

By WILLIAM NEWTON BLAIR, D.D.

Illustrations by Thelma Gooch



Old Pak, taken off his guard, was thrown backward, . . . landing in a sitting posture in two feet of mud and water

CHAPTER VIII

Chansung's Mother

THE new interest which came into Choonwha's life was not shared by Songsie, Chansung's mother. She had never gone to school in her girlhood, and it was too late to begin. Her home duties filled her life, and since the birth of her only son all her thoughts and hopes centered in him. After the Korean custom, she was known as "Chansung's mother," and gloried in the title.

She had never been very strong, and the shock of Chansung's disappearance broke her spirit completely. For months she did little else but visit various shrines around Tai Pyeng Dong and even at distant places, offering much good rice and pig meat in her sad effort to induce the spirits to restore her son.

The Elder had little faith in all this; but refrained from interfering. He knew it would be useless. Korean women may seem downtrodden, but when they really want to do anything it is quite impossible to stop them.

It may have been these visits to the shrines and the consequent exposure that brought on a distressing cough, or the disease may have been lurking for years in Songsie's breast waiting a favorable opportunity; certainly the fatigue of body and distress of mind aggravated matters.

She had been afflicted with rheumatism for years. As the weather grew colder, this trouble increased. The pain in her limbs and the racking cough at night made sleep almost impossible, and Chansung's mother failed so rapidly that the elder was alarmed. Dr. Ko was sent for.

"She needs a change," said the doctor, "Take her to the hot springs for ten days and see if the water will help her."

Choonwha went along to care for the sick mother, and old Pak, the gate-keeper, to assist in making arrangements. The springs lay thirty miles to the north, so they started early.

It seemed to Choonwha that she had only fallen asleep when she was called in the morning. It was barely three o'clock; yet it took strenuous work in the kitchen to get the fires going and cook the beans for the pony that was to carry the pack and the rice for the family and have breakfast served before daylight.

The mapoo, or horseman, that old Pak had secured was the most hopeless specimen Choonwha had seen; but his horse appeared in good condition. Old Pak evidently knew his man and had insisted on his bringing his horse the previous evening; otherwise, Choonwha surmised, they would hardly have gotten off by daylight.

The loading of the pack proved a formidable undertaking. The pony had been resting for two days and was surcharged with life and the devil. It took three men, one at the head and one on each side, and even stronger language than usual, to load the animal.

First a heavy padded saddle blanket was thrown on the pony's resisting back and then the wooden pack-saddle. The baskets of provisions and bundles of clothes were roped to the pack-saddle, the weight divided so as to balance the pack as nearly as possible. Last of all the bedding in a clean blue taryon or cover, was thrown carefully over the pack, making a comfortable seat for old Pak if ever he could mount the fiery animal.

After much advice this way and that, old Pak finally took his stand on the rice-hulling block and the mapoo endeavored to lead his pony as near to the block as possible. One would have thought the block was a wild beast, at least a bear or a tiger, the way the pony objected to nearing it. Neither blows, nor coaxing, nor strong language made any difference; he simply balked, and old Pak had to follow Mohammed's example. While the pony's head was twisted to one side and his eyes covered, he made a sudden spring, a friend assisting at each leg, and lo, he was seated on top of the pack before the pony knew what had happened.

Choonwha and Chansung's mother rode in low chairs, or rather curtained boxes, between long carrying-poles, with two chair-coolies to each chair. The curtains at the front were thin so they could see out a little, though no one could see them.

It was a long, tedious journey to the two women seated cross-legged in their cramped quarters; most tedious of all when they stopped every few miles before some inn for the coolies to rest and refresh themselves with sool or Korean liquor.

Old Pak on his comfortable perch enjoyed the trip more than any one else; that is, he did till an accident happened. In the course of the morning they came to a small stream some twenty feet wide and a foot and a half deep. It had been cold enough the night before to freeze a fringe of ice at the edge. There was a narrow humpbacked bridge made of dirt and cane stalks over a framework of logs. The chair-coolies took the bridge without question; but the mapoo hesitated. In the middle of the bridge was a hole only partially concealed by a flat stone, and he was afraid to try to lead the pony ove should have plunged into the stream the pony through the water; but the was icy cold and, as Choonwha had sur he was not much of a mapoo. Inst going into the stream himself, he clim the bridge and attempted to half lea drive the pony across.

Under ordinary conditions it migh worked; but the pony's ire was still bu He had been outwitted in the mornin was looking for trouble. When he the white shell of ice at the edge, h tated.

"Eedeyah!" (Go on!) yelled the map

Pony took a step forward. Crack we ice, and biff went the pony clear to th dle of the creek in a bound. Fortunate pack rope was strong and held; but ol taken off his guard, was thrown back His long coat floated in the air as his described a circle, landing the old m little roughly to be sure, but in proper s posture, in two feet of water and mud.

The mud was soft and no bones broken. Choonwha, looking back fro chair, was convulsed with laughter; old Pak failed to see any humor in the tion. His fine, white, freshly starched was ruined and his dignity completely tered.

Choonwha had thought the mapoo know all the strong language there She soon discovered that old Pak knew Standing on the bank in his dripping ments, he poured out the vials of his upon the mapoo till even that hard rascal was frightened.

"I have done exceedingly badly," he "but this pony is a ——" and he so to divert old Pak's attention from hin by abusing the pony in such fashion Choonwha changed her mind again and cluded that after all the mapoo had the vantage.

"Let me help you on again," said mapoo in his most obliging manner; but Pak would have non it, and marched ahea all his outraged dig and dripping garm to the inn where t were to stop for din

Choonwha did not how it was managed; old Pak's clothes loo dry at least when t started again two ho later. She surmis however, that the clot had been dried und neath the mat on the kan floor while old lay curled up in a b rowed comfort.

They arrived at t hot springs as nig was falling and fou lodging at one of the in located near the sprin Songsie began her trea ment the next mornin A large shed had be built over the sprin which flowed from t solid rock so hot that was impossible to bat near the opening. T shed consisted of tw rooms formed by a hig partition in the middl The water was divide so that it flowed abo equally into the rock basins hewn out on bot sides. One room wa used by men and the other by women.

The water was famous and sick folk assembled i large numbers. Some with stomach troubles cam merely to drink the water, but most were bather Many had rheumatism like Songsie; some had grievou sores; others had various skin diseases.

Everybody seemed to have utmost faith in th water. The only consideration seemed to be to ab sorb as much of it as possible. Some sat in the ho water almost continuously from morning till night edging so near the steaming inlet that their bodie actually looked parboiled. Songsie was able to tak the bath only a few hours at a time, and spent th intervals between lying on the hot floor of h room closely wrapped in quilts to prevent catching cold.

Choonwha was interested at first in watching th strange sight, but she soon grew weary of seeing and hearing so many sufferers who seemed to think and talk of nothing else but their maladies. The place was oppressive and she was glad when the ten days were over and they returned to Tai Pyeng Dong; glad too because the water seemed to have helped Songsie.

The benefit, however, was not permanent. The cough persisted. Day by day Chansung's mother

NOTE BY THE AUTHOR

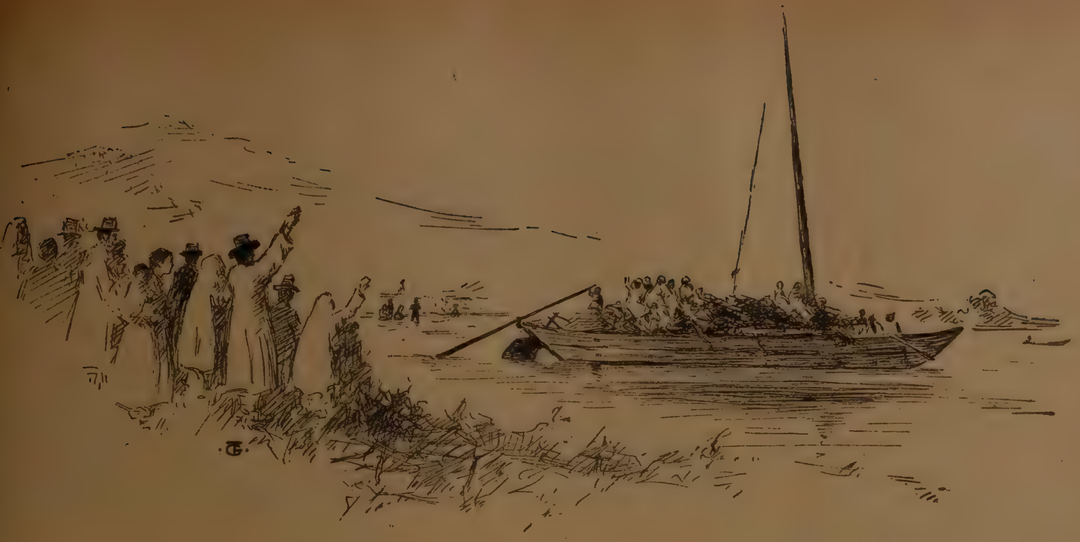
IT SEEMS almost providential to me that I should have been led to write a story nearly two years ago portraying intimately many of the men who are now prominent in the present movement in Korea, and that the story should be given to the public just at the time when the whole Korean Church needs our help and sympathy.

You will be interested to know that "Elder Kang," described in this story as the beloved leader of the great church in Pyeng Yang, whose eyes were opened by the missionary doctor, is none other than Kil Sunchu, the famous pastor of the Central Presbyterian Church in Pyeng Yang, the greatest orator and most influential man in the Korean Church. Reports from Korea state that Pastor Kil was one of the thirty-three signers of the Korean Declaration of Independence and the man who read that Declaration before a great assembly of his countrymen in Seoul the first day of last March. After the meeting was over the thirty-three signers of the Declaration of Independence went to a restaurant in Seoul and ordered dinner, first telephoning to the chief of police that they were all gathered in one place, requesting if they were to be arrested that the police come quietly and take them away so that there would be no bloodshed. An hour later they were taken to prison in closed carriages.

"Pastor Mo," the missionary pastor of the Central Church, to whom "Elder Kang" went for advice about Chansung, whose office door was blocked with Korean shoes, is Dr. Samuel A. Moffett of Pyeng Yang, whose residence was recently searched by the Japanese police.

I changed the names in the story because a part of the narrative is fiction; but in the present circumstances I have no objection to your giving this information to the readers of the Christian Herald.

WILLIAM NEWTON BLAIR.



At last the boat was ready to start. Choonwha and the other women and children were seated high on the load of sweet-smelling pine boughs. Elder Han and many others stood on the bank to see them off and to wish them a safe journey weaker. The white plague had laid its hand her in one of its swiftest forms.

he struggle did not last long. Spring was just nning its contest with winter, driving the snow the open fields and compelling it to hide in kets and behind stone walls; the ice in the river slowly melting; the pussy-willows were preparing leck themselves in down in token of the change was coming, when the great change came to nsung's mother.
hey buried her on the hill overlooking the river.
Elder walked behind the bier clad in deepest urning, looking so sad and broken that Choonwha got her own grief in sympathy for him.

CHAPTER IX

THE TRIP TO PYENG YANG

THREE years passed swiftly by, happy growing years for Choonwha, in spite of Chansung's continued absence. At first the Elder had expected ansung to return, and, when he did not come back, austed every means of locating his son. Word had n sent to every magistracy in the province and even far-off provinces; but no news of the lost boy ever ched Tai Pyeng Dong. Chansung had disappeared completely as if the earth had opened and swal-ved him.
The Elder bore his sorrows with outward fortitude, t he aged rapidly. In his loneliness, the daily less came to mean even more to him than to Choon-
a. Their companionship became a sacred thing rare beauty. To Choonwha it had meant a new rld and a new life, and she repaid the Elder with the wealth of her girl's affection. The Elder his part came to lean on Choonwha more and re and drank his daily strength from her fresh ung life.
At the first New Year season after Chansung's dis-pearance, the Elder said to Choonwha, "You know e custom of our people. Tomorrow is the New ear and tonight we must prepare the sacrificial feast the ancestors of our house. If Chansung were here night, he would bow down before the ancestral blet. I have no other son to worship with me, and, cording to our ancient custom, it is your privilege
take Chansung's place."
They prepared the cakes of rice bread with wine d meat and waited with all the household till midght. Then the Elder took the trays of food and, tering the tablet chamber, drew back the curtain
d placed the offering before the shrine. In silence e prostrated himself on the floor, worshiping the ng line of ancestors of his house.
When he arose, Choonwha took his place, filled with e and dread of the spirits of the dead which she be-ved were gathered before her.
Thus, every year, Choonwha assisted in the New ear sacrifice, and in every way more and more came take the double place of son and daughter in Elder an's home.
The summer she was nineteen Choonwha made her st trip to Pyeng Yang, the capital of the province.
ong boats loaded with grain and wood went from Tai yeng Dong to Pyeng Yang and still more distant aces continually. Choonwha had heard much of e great city with its high wall facing the river and ndreds of boats crowding the waterfront. Always when a Tai Pyeng Dong boat left for Pyeng Yang, she had wished that she too might go, but no good opportunity had offered.

Now the longed-for day had come. Her cousin, Yungpok, whose husband had moved to Pyeng Yang had sent her an invitation to visit with them in the city. A friend of Elder Han's was going to Pyeng Yang in his own boat with several friends and their families, and there was no reason why Choonwha should not go; so the Elder gave his consent.

At last the boat was ready to start. Choonwha and the other women and children were seated high on the load of sweet-smelling pine boughs. Elder Han and many others stood on the bank to see them off and to wish them a safe journey. The steersman took his stand on his high box and seized the huge rudder, forty feet long.

"Nai-mel-le-rah!" (Shove her off!) he cried, and the boatmen pushed the boat off with their poles and sprang to their oars—long clumsy oars they seemed—one on each side, with two men to an oar.

"May you abide in peace," Choonwha called to her friends. "May you go and return in peace," they shouted back to her.

Slowly the long boat creeps to the middle of the river seeking the current. At first they move scarcely as fast as a man can walk; but presently the boat begins to feel the pull of the rapid. Already the roar of the rapid is in their ears. The banks draw nearer and slip by faster. The boatmen are rowing now with all their strength. "E-e-ah! e-e-ah!" The long boat is fairly jerked forward.

Up on the pine load the excitement is tremendous. Some of the children are frightened and cling to their mothers' skirts; others shout with delight.

"Sit down there," yells the steersman.

With the speed of a locomotive the boat takes the rapid. The banks dash past. Ahead is a great rock near the middle of the stream with white spray foaming above it.

"Oh, oh, we are going to strike it!" cries one of the women; but the steersman knows his business. With a mighty sweep of the long rudder he suddenly turns the boat in her course.

"Nai-melleo! Nai-melleo!" he cries, and two of the strongest men of the forward crew drop their oars and, seizing the long poles, push the nose of the boat, as she flies, out into the deep water, and already they are far past the rock and entering the quieter water at the bottom of the rapid.

There were more than twenty such rapids between Tai Pyeng Dong and Pyeng Yang, some a full third of a mile long. Between the rapids the river widened out into a deep, slow-moving stream from a quarter to a half mile wide.

They passed many villages, each with its quota of women washing and children playing at the river's edge. There were fishermen at all the deep places patiently sculling their little skiffs with one hand and fishing with the other. Here and there great flat-bottomed ferry-boats were crossing the river, loaded to the water-line with men and cattle returning from some market.

Every mile of the way was full of interest for Choonwha; but she enjoyed most of all shooting the rapids. Even the great Tiger Rapid with its roar heard for miles and its high dashing waves that threw spray in their faces and so filled the boat that one man had to bail hard to keep the boat from swamping—even then Choonwha was not so frightened but that she enjoyed being frightened.

With shining eyes and wind-kissed, rosy cheeks, she made as pretty a picture as one might hope to find in any land. Did she know that she was beautiful? No doubt she did; but she had been too busy these years to think much about herself. Her mind was pure and sweet as an unspoiled child's. Who would have guessed from her girlish appearance and her intense enthusiasm over the ride that she was probably the best-educated young woman in that part of Korea, and had passed through some of life's hardest trials?

As they neared Pyeng Yang the rapids became less frequent. The river widened out till it became a great lake.

"When we pass yonder cliff," said the head boatman's wife, who had been to Pyeng Yang several times before, "we can see the city."

It seemed to Choonwha that they would never reach the cliff. The wind was not against them and there was almost no current. Some of the men were for tying up to the bank and waiting for the wind to die down. Choonwha was almost ready to weep.

"Can't we go on, sir?" she appealed to the head boatman. "I have never been in Pyeng Yang before, and it will be so difficult in the dark."

Whether it was the sweet face of the girl or his own desire to hasten, her appeal decided the matter. "Go on, go on," he cried. "Who told you to quit rowing?"

Slowly they overtook the cliff; slowly, oh, so slowly, they rounded the bend; and there in the distance was the city of Pyeng Yang, just as Choonwha had read about it in her history, just as she had seen it in her dreams. The great wall which ran from Peony Point along the waterfront stood unbroken as far as her eye could see. She could make out gate after gate in the distance. Below the cliff they had entered another rapid and were swiftly approaching the city. What a clatter the women made at their washing, and what a fleet of boats tied side by side with masts so crowded that they looked like a leafless forest!

"What gate is that?" Choonwha asked breathlessly, as they came in full view of a great gate, three stories high.

"That is the Great Union Gate," her traveled friend answered.

"And look at that! What is that great building on the hillside?"

"That is the worshiping-place of the Jesus-believing people."

"My!" said Choonwha; "there must be lots of them."

"Yes," said the boatman's wife, "there are, and my husband says they are not so bad as some folks say they are. At first when I came to Pyeng Yang, I was frightened. I had been told, you know, that the white-eyed foreigners kill little children to make medicine; but they don't really. They have several sick-houses where sick people go to be cured. The doctors are kind; but I don't think much of their medicine."

"I know little about them," said Choonwha. "The Elder says their teaching is very foolish. It may suit the Westerners; but why do they trouble our people? The wise doctrines of Confucius and Mencius are the best doctrines for us as they have been for our fathers."

To be continued

What the Chautauqua Means to Ameri

By C. COURTENAY SAVAGE

OVER in the big field where the boys play baseball Saturday afternoon, a big white tent made its appearance one Monday morning in late August. At the entrance a knot of children grouped themselves to watch the arrangement of the tent and its grounds, the bolder of them offering to help put the straight-backed chairs in place, while more experienced hands fixed the lights, or trimmed the platform with flowers. Not quite so eager, but still showing a keen interest in the proceedings, are the older folk, the hitching-rails testifying that a great many of the farmers from the surrounding country have driven into town with their families.

A circus? No; something more worth while than a few hours of gaudy entertainment. A circuit Chautauqua which educates, amuses, uplifts. A week of daily meetings which will stir the loyalty of the community, reassuring addresses by men who fought for democracy, all trending toward constructive nationalism and a neighborly comradeship. There will be good professional music, and community "sings" with every one joining in the songs they like best.

By the big city dweller the Chautauqua idea is often wrongfully regarded as something to laugh at. Nothing could display greater ignorance. The Chautauqua, no matter if it be in a small town with a tent seating less than a thousand people, or in a big community where five thousand gather, draws the inhabitants of the town and outlying districts into closer contact than they have known for a year. Friends will meet, and the community-builder, as they call the man who stays through the entire meeting, will try to inspire the town to a general interest in what is best for its future development.

JUST as soon as the tent is finally secure, and the chairs and platform in place, the Chautauqua is ready to open. The man who has been busy at the guy ropes washes his hands, and goes out to the waiting groups of boys. The boys, if there has been a previous Chautauqua in the neighborhood, greet him with beaming smiles, for they know that during the morning and afternoon, if there is no session, they will be taught things that they have not had the chance to learn in their schools. Athletics, gym stunts, how to be a Boy Scout, and what the Scout movement stands for, are all taught during the week.

The young ladies who gathered daisies for the platform and arranged chairs are equally busy. One of them is telling stories to the small children. Another is giving a practical helpful talk to the older girls and their mothers, instilling a womanly courage into the hearts of her hearers; and at the same time a practical farm man, probably an agricultural professor, is having an informal and semi-scientific talk with the farmers, explaining some new agricultural process.

Such work as this, however, is all incidental to the big features of the meetings.

Each night after the chores have been done, and when the moon has risen over the top of the church steeple, the lights of the tent flare out, and the men and women press inside. The chairs are comfortable, and the big platform draped with an American flag seems to arouse at once a spirit of enthusiasm. By eight o'clock the speaker has made his introductory remarks, and the men and women are listening intently to the feature of the evening. It may be a college professor who is talking, it may be a great statesman or a settlement worker, but whoever it is that speaks is delivering a message, expounding facts that these people will be able to incorporate into their own lives and be benefited by so doing. The reconstruction work in Europe and among returned soldiers is extremely popular this year.

In the past, Ulysses S. Grant, James A. Garfield, William McKinley, Theodore Roosevelt, William H. Taft and Woodrow Wilson have all delivered addresses at Chautauqua meetings. Judge Ben Lindsey of the Children's Court at Denver, Jane Addams of Hull House, Chicago, Maud Ballington Booth, Dean Walter T. Sumner, the Rev. Dr. Newell Dwight Hillis, Thomas Nelson Page, author and statesman, Frances E. Willard and Susan B. Anthony have been, or are, popular. Famous singers have poured out their golden notes, and a good laugh is always included in the program.

A children's parade in Kansas. The girl in the foreground is a college undergraduate, and the little girls have s
the morning listening to her stories

IF IT is a serious discourse the first night, then the second will be something less serious, but equally uplifting. Perhaps the stage will be trimmed with tree boughs, and a dramatic company will give Shakespeare's "As You Like It," or there may be an orchestra with a soloist. No matter what the performance, whether humorous or otherwise, it is sure to be worth while. Ibsen, Grieg music, the Vice-President of the United States, a quartet, or even a troupe of educated animals, they all have a lasting effect. One of the principal ideas of the Chautauqua meetings is to amuse the people, give them a taste of life different from their everyday existence; but the motive underlying this so closely as to be practically of equal importance is to leave behind a spirit that will uplift each hearer as he goes about his daily work. Fine motion pictures illustrating life in far countries are popular with Chautauqua audiences.

Athletic stunts all help the boy in his development, and are taught by the young men. At the right of the picture Judge Ben Lindsey of the Children's Court of Denver is watching the human pyramid

The original Chautauqua was the idea of a Methodist minister, John H. Vincent, who later became Bishop. In 1874 he proposed to establish a non-denominational summer camp institute for Sunday-school workers, and a friend suggested that he hold the meetings in the woods at Chautauqua, on Lake Chautauqua, New York. This place was well known for the large camp meetings that had been held there, and on August 4 of that year the first class was held. Tents were used for the housing of those who came to the meetings, and a great many of the sessions were held out of doors. Besides the speakers a number of entertainments were planned, music, fireworks, a balloon ascension, and panoramic views.

IT IS interesting to know that a series of temperance meetings, following a lecture by Mrs. J. W. Willing, led to a convention later in the same year, at which the National Woman's Christian Temperance Union was organized.

The Chautauqua meeting each year quickly became an institution. Chautauquas sprang up all over the country, until today it is estimated that approximately four millions of people attend such n ings each summer. There were over three thou meetings held last year, ranging in length from days to two months. When the Chautauqua Ins tion became popular, and its work became know was estimated that considerably over a thou local Chautauquas started, but of late years t have given way to circuit Chautauquas which c into a town and make all arrangements for the m ings, from raising the big tent to the hiring of the essary "talent." Through these bureaus it is poss to obtain better speakers to entertain than most s towns could afford if working independently.
circuit Chautauquas can offer a long list of eng ments, while a local meeting can only offer one, the price of the lecture plus the train fare is apt t large. Some of the larger towns, ranging in the nei borhood of 30,000 people, have found that they support a local Chautauqua. The business men together and finance the enterprise, and the talen obtained in the open lyceum market. The Chaut qua is not regarded as a method of making mon but as a community uplifter.

It is an easy matter to bring a Chautauqua t town, and a proof of the good they do is the fact t they go back year after year. Season tickets are so the price generally being $2 for an entire week.

It was once asked of a well-known Chautauq manager if there was not a great reaction in a to after the meetings were over.

"We leave so much behind us that there isn't chance for a reaction," was the quick answer.

ONE Chautauqua company resolved to leave public playground as a permanent deposit every place it played that summer, and the preside of the company offered a prize of two hundred dolla to the town in Kansas that should make the best civ improvement during the year.

Surely there is no more "American thing in Ame ica" than the Chautauqua. One very late develo ment of the idea is the manner in which the unive sities of the West have taken up the matter of reac ing the towns that are remote and small in popul tion. The University of Minnesota and the Unive sity of Wisconsin have, for example, sent out circu Chautauquas conducted for the good of the peop in very small towns, places of less than five hundre inhabitants. In addition to the professor of economi who tells the farmers and their wives how to get th best out of their homes and their fields, the Colleg Glee Club and Dramatic Clubs, these college Chau tauquas run their agricultural experimental car o
the siding, and give practical demonstrations.

"If you ever doubt that the Chautauqua meeting bring a community spirit that means loyalty to neigh bors and country," said a famous lecturer, "I wis you could have arrived with me in a little Kentuck town at the close of a Sunday afternoon session o the Chautauqua. The manager of the meetings me me at the station, and we drove to the outskirts o
the town, where whole families of mountaineers ha erected tents and were spending the week. The afternoon service had been out of doors with the big tent and a grove of pines as a background. As we climbed down from the wagon the manager stopped short.

"'Listen!' He lifted his hand.

"A song floated toward us, bursting into volume. It was 'The Star-Spangled Banner.' When the voices had swelled to a climax and suddenly stopped, a new refrain started. This time it was the 'Doxology,' and every bird in the heavens seemed to take up the refrain."

California Goodwill Industries headquarters in San Francisco

Goodwill printing shop, Boston. A big job business is done here

NOT A CHARITY BUT A CHANCE

PROJECTS in thirty-two cities to aid the "down-and-outers" by giving them work at a living wage characterizes the pending entrance of the Methodist Church into the industrial field. It has already entered that field in Boston, San Francisco and Cleveland through its Goodwill Industrial Centers and will open twenty-nine more centers in other cities

NO MORE interesting development of policy and practice has been noted for years in any denomination than the ding entrance into industry of the thodist Episcopal Church. It is puny undertaking upon which this ly is launching, but an industrial erprise which will have branches in rty-two cities, will employ about ,000 men and women for varying iods in the course of a year, and will pay to them aggregate of approximately $2,100,000 in wages ery twelve months.

These figures are based on maximum operation of thirty-two branches of the industry. The enterise that holds such possibilities is the "Goodwill dustrial Center." These institutions recruit man wreckage—the down-and-out, the unfortute, the handicapped, and the misfits—from the ums and poorer sections of cities, and put them to ork salvaging waste material and wreckage systeatically collected from the better-class homes of the mmunities.

Morgan Memorial Methodist Episcopal Church Boston has the oldest and most fully developed oodwill Industry. This parent enterprise occupies o large buildings, six stories high, with 8,000 uare feet to a floor. Goodwill bags, made of uneached cotton, are distributed to well-to-do people roughout the city, who fill them with cast-off clothg, shoes, and almost anything else they want to get d of. Broken furniture, household appliances and l sorts of damaged domestic equipment furnish the raw material" for the industry.

All articles, on their receipt at the Goodwill buildgs, are first fumigated, then sorted out, then assigned the different repairing departments, where they are on made "as good as new." During the year 1916, ore than 100,000 garments were repaired, 500,000 ieces of furniture, and 50,000 pairs of shoes.

More than $54,000 was paid out in wages, and more han 5,000 destitute people found temporary, decent mployment to tide them over hard times.

A regular staff of 125 workers are employed as clerks the various workshops, and also as chauffeurs and ookkeepers. A School of Handicraft has been deeloped for the benefit of those who know no trade nd have no skill in any line of work when they first ome to the establishment.

Clothes-repairing in industrial building, Boston

The industries are not run for profit. All income goes into equipment, wages, training of the workers, and the relief of the poor.

In San Francisco is another noteworthy example of the Goodwill Industries, founded by a Methodist pastor and his wife about two years ago. This institution, starting out with a capital of only $1,000 and using only waste products from well-to-do people, took in during the first year more than $27,000, paid out in excess of $15,000 in wages and $12,000 for equipment and supplies, and increased its store sales from $441.03 to $1,704.29. By the end of its second year it expects to report an income of $50,000, while the amount paid out for wages will probably have increased to $25,000 or $30,000.

The Goodwill Industries of Cleveland have just moved into new and greatly enlarged quarters in a building formerly occupied by a social settlement. This enterprise operates in much the same way as the ones in other cities. A whole battery of sewing-machines is kept going all day long, repairing or making over the old clothes brought in from the city's homes. Women do this work. A large number of men are employed at the shoe-repair benches and machines, in the carpentry shop, and in sorting out the new deliveries of raw material.

"Not a charity, but a chance," is the slogan of this center.

It describes itself as "a school of handicraft for the handicapped."

But more than this, like its replicas in other cities, it is incidentally a home for the homeless. The upper floors of the building are given over to dormitories, social rooms with large homey fireplaces, showers and bathrooms and a few single rooms.

By a carefully worked out merit system the people in the institution may attain to higher and higher levels both figuratively and literally. As they get back their self-respect or self-confidence, or whatever the quality that they have lost, they are permitted to move up floor by floor and finally to occupy the most desirable quarters in the place.

In addition to the cities already named Goodwill Industries are in process of organization for Los Angeles, St. Louis, Cincinnati, Denver, Brooklyn, Philadelphia, Chicago, Buffalo, and Pittsburg. It is expected to put them into thirty cities.

Golden Chance for Real Merit

By CHARLES GRANT MILLER

THIS unprecedented period of industrial reconstruction and readjustment carries less cause for anxiety to the man who is down than to the man who is up. In the swift shifting of conditions the man of secured wealth or position finds new worries, while the man of abilities finds boundless new opportunities.

Shake a barrel of apples and the sound ones will come to the top. And in this great industrial shake-up the man of right heart and keen mind will find his chance.

He who has not succeeded as well as he would have liked has now less cause or time than ever for the cavil of discontent or resistance to the advance of industrial peace and progress. Now is his golden moment to apply heart and brain and muscle to the best opportunity at hand.

All we could ask is equality of opportunity. That we have and always have had. If any come into life with real advantages it is not the chap born with a gold spoon in his mouth and who puts in his time sucking that spoon, regarding its possession as success in life. No. Balancing all his blessings are those of the youth born with nothing in his mouth but a sharp appetite, who learns early that success comes only of keen competition in brain and brawn. While the rich-born is dawdling in enervating luxuries this youth is solving the mysteries of life and mastering the secrets of advancement.

The world offers opportunity for any sane ambition. The rest is up to you. You are capable of experiencing only such worldly wants as the world can supply. The world holds everything that you can need for material success and happiness. But the world won't give them for the mere asking or for striving that is half-hearted or half-headed.

Energy and intellect can accomplish anything within reason. Your possibilities, with these, are practically without limitation. Nature is bound to do her part. The elements of your success or your failure are not in her, but in you.

The best places in all lines are ever open. The pearly gates of success ever swing readily upon their silver hinges for him who will rightly apply the golden key of intelligent effort.

The young man who idly waits for his "lucky chance" to turn up will always be waiting in disappointment. All chances worth having are created. To him not fitted for them they are not chances at all. The man must come prepared to the opportunity, as the steel to the flint. The man of soft iron may be cast against the flints of life quite as often as is the man of steel, but he never strikes the fire that the man of steel does; he is merely worn away against the very edge of opportunity.

Let us, then, get out of the glooms, cheerfully bind up the wounds that nature has inflicted upon us, extract wisdom from experience, and the best we can, strive onward and upward, physically, mentally and morally, sure that the sun will continue to shine, that the showers will continue to refresh the earth, and that our harvest of happiness and success will depend on the seeds we sow and on the faithfulness with which we tend our everyday tasks.

A Journey with the Evangelists

A SERMON BY REV. FRANCIS E. CLARK*

TEXT—Acts 8:4. "They that were scattered abroad went about preaching the Word."

HOW interesting it would be if we could all have a personally conducted journey with the apostles Peter and John, and with Philip the Evangelist! It would be an event of a lifetime to sit at their feet for five minutes. Even to meet them in a crowd, to grasp their hands, to have time to beg for an autograph, would be a story to hand down to one's great-grandchildren.

If we will study carefully the eighth chapter of the book of Acts, we may journey with them to one of the most interesting countries in the world; we may hear them speak, note their motives, study their methods, see them rebuke a presumptuous materialist, see a new word born into the world's vocabulary, witness a case of genuine instantaneous conversion, and behold the convert immediately seal his covenant with God by baptism.

All this and much more we may find in this rich chapter. How God uses the wrath of man to praise him is here wonderfully illustrated. Saul was a very useful man even before his conversion—useful in spite of himself. He promoted in a remarkable way by his persecutions the cause which he hated and persecuted. He "made havoc of the church," we are told, "entering into every house and haling men and women, committed them to prison; therefore they that were scattered abroad went everywhere preaching the Word."

That "therefore" is very significant. If the early Christians had been allowed to stay in their peaceful homes, they might have vegetated in useless comfort as many a Christian today settles upon his lees. But God had better, though harder, things for them in store. If Paul had not been such an exceedingly violent persecutor, the Christians would not have been scattered abroad, at least not so early in the history of their faith.

But God would not let the followers of his Son remain at ease in Zion. Thus he used St. Bartholomew's Day to scatter abroad the faith of the Huguenots. Thus the persecutors of Peter Waldo and his followers, meaning to exterminate them, only dispersed them and made them a power for a thousand years in Italy. Thus our Pilgrim Fathers were scattered abroad, far abroad, and by God's grace founded a mighty nation.

But these exiles also did their part. Scattering abroad is not of itself sufficient to achieve a great result. The exiles to Botany Bay and Van Dieman's Land and to the Guianas, who left their country for their country's good, never founded an empire. Only God's witnesses have accomplished such things. Like those early disciples, persecuted Christians in all ages that have been scattered abroad "went everywhere preaching the Word."

So did those scattered by the Roman persecution; so did the followers of John Huss and the Waldensians and the Pilgrim Fathers. God may stir us up as the eagle stirreth up her nest, according to the striking simile of the prophet; but the eaglets must use their wings if they would fly. Those persecuted for righteousness' sake must be witnesses for God if they would make the truth for which they stand to fly abroad.

Saul, by his furious persecution, seems to have removed the center of Gospel propaganda for a time from Jerusalem to Samaria, the modern city of Nablous, where the remnant of the sect of the Samaritans still say "in this mount ye ought to worship." Philip seems to be the chief spokesman of the scattered group, and to have had at first remarkable success. "Unclean spirits," at the command of the Master as uttered by Philip, were cast out; the lame and the paralytic were healed; "the people with one accord gave heed unto the things which Philip spake," and "there was great joy in that city." So great was the effect of Philip's preaching and miracle-working that even Simon the sorcerer, who for a long time had bewitched the people, believed and was baptized. We need not suppose that Simon was a thoroughly bad man, utterly insincere. We are distinctly told that he believed, and Philip thought well enough of him to baptize him with the others. To be sure, he has given to our language an ugly word, "simony," the offering to buy or sell spiritual gifts for money—a foolish offer by whomsoever made, for such gifts can never be bought or sold, any more than God himself can be bargained for.

"'Tis only God can be had for the asking;
'Tis heaven alone that is given away."

By this time Peter and John had come upon the scene. The church at Jerusalem had heard the amazing news that the Samaritans, the hated, distrusted Samaritans, had received the Word of God, and so, thinking perhaps that the revival was superficial and needed guiding, sent Peter and John to see about it.

They found the Samaritans interested believers of the message, even baptized believers, but without real spiritual insight or power; so they laid their hands on these errant Christians, and through their influence the greatest and best of all miracles was performed, and they received the Holy Spirit.

"Ah," said Simon to himself, "this is indeed wonderful. This is beyond everything I can do. I must obtain this new power."

We may well believe that his mistake and sin are due to the gross ignorance of a thorough materialist. He had been impressed by the Gospel message; believed in a certain way, but he was not quite persuaded that the miracles were not tricks of the trade. He could perform miracles himself; at least he had made the many people whom he had bewitched believe it. He had always taken money for his miracles, and since men are apt to believe that others have no higher ideals or motives than themselves, why should not the apostles do the same?

Peter realized that strong measures must be taken to cure such ignorance and heresy, and the stinging rebuke sprang to his lips, "Thy money perish with thee! Thou hast neither part nor lot in this matter. . . . Repent therefore of this thy wickedness, and pray God if perhaps the thought of thine heart may be forgiven thee."

How like Peter—fiery, impetuous, uncompromising Peter! Did he remember how his Lord and Master had rebuked him for a worse sin, though not in hot words of reproach? Did he remember how J Caiaphas' judgment hall had turned and looke him with speechless love and sorrow in his Perhaps so. He may have added to his w denunciation words of tenderness and helpful that are not recorded. At any rate, Simon se have been deeply affected, for he answered, "P me, that none of these things which ye have come upon me." We know nothing more of th mer sorcerer. We may charitably believe th was a true repentance, unto eternal life.

The Church of All Nations

THE picture shows part of the Seavey Seminary Settlement, and part of the main office building, Shawmut Avenue and Osborne Place, Boston, Mass. The front was erected on Bedford Street for the Church of the Saviour, in the forties. In 1854 the Second Church moved into the building uniting with that church, and in 1874 the stones were taken down and removed to Copley Square, where they stood until 1912. In 1912 the stones were again taken down and replaced here for the front of the Church of All Nations. A part of the stone was used for the Fred Seavey Seminary Settlement.

The narrative of this rich chapter returns ag Philip, but we find him now in a different p Palestine. The "angel of the Lord" this tim him southward from Jerusalem to the Gaza roa

How vividly were these roads and these towns impressed upon us as recently we read of G Allenby's triumphant march from Egypt th Gaza, where he tarried for a little, to Jerusalem then north past Samaria and Nazareth and the Galilee to Damascus and Aleppo!

Philip was evidently led by the Spirit to tak journey to the south that he might meet the Ethi eunuch who had the charge of all the treasur Candace, queen of the Ethiopians. He had be Jerusalem to worship, and was evidently a Je proselyte. He was returning to his own count state, and was riding in his chariot, reading prophecy of Isaiah.

Philip must have been a winning as well as a and ready man. Few of us, I imagine, would have the zeal and courage to run after a man who sitting in his own carriage reading a book, in ord explain that book to him. But he must have proached the "man of great authority" with tact courtesy; for, far from resenting the seeming intru the eunuch welcomed him and at once invited evangelist to get in and ride with him.

Then Philip explained the Scriptures, and effectively that the eunuch was ready to give up Jewish faith, and to say with all his heart (the condition that Philip imposed as a prerequisite baptism) "I believe that Jesus Christ is the So God." Doubtless Philip saw that this was more t a confession of the lips. The Ethiopian's creed, sh as it was, was the credo of his heart, and at once was baptized by the eager evangelist.

It is interesting to note how early Christian became a missionary and a cosmopolitan religi The Jews had no dealings with the Samaritans, the religion of Jesus very early had intimate deali with them, compelling faith and obedience. T Ethiopian had to go to Jerusalem to worship in Jews' religion. The religion of Jesus caught with him on his return journey to his own count Yet this was all before Peter's great vision of the sh let down from heaven and his epochal journey Cæsarea, from which we usually date the opening the non-Jewish world to Christianity. The missio ary spirit of Christianity was born with it.

There are not a few important truths in this chapt for us who are called to be missionaries of Jesus as true Christians are. We are scattered abroad in the days, not by persecutions, it is true, but by circu stances no less compelling; and we should rememb that we are thus dispersed and that Christia are found today in every land, for the san supreme purpose that Philip and Peter and Jo were sent to Samaria, and Philip afterward to t Gaza road.

Again we are taught to improve our opportuniti and to make them if they do not come to us. Th Ethiopian did not come to Philip. Philip ran af the Ethiopian. Neither did the Samaritans com to him or to Peter and John; they went to th Samaritans.

Once more, no man is hopeless in the view of a true hearted missionary. Simon the sorcerer was about a hard a case as the apostles could have tackled, bu even he soon said, "Pray for me." The eunuch was black man, of a totally different race from Philip, an a great man as well; but the evangelist's nerve an courage did not fail him when he ran after the Ethiopian's chariot.

This is the spirit and the courage that sent the early missionaries to the "hopeless countries"—Carey and Judson and Martyn to India, Morrison to China Paton to the Hebrides. This is the spirit and courage which should today control and master every missionary, who is simply "one sent," a word which stands for every true-hearted follower of the Lord Jesus Christ.

---

*Founder of Christian Endeavor.

Mont-Lawn's Gates Ready to Open

By Margaret E. Sangster

MONT-LAWN has never looked so beautiful as loes this year. The ce is radiant with joy of early sumr, thrilling with the and music of June me. Perhaps it ked more than ever nderful to me beuse it was the first of American coun that I had seen ice leaving the devasted and broken eadows of France and lgium; perhaps it s just the lure of the een grass and the dding trees and the w flowers that crept to my heart and ade my soul want to ng.

It seems as if the ppiness of a world peace has centered Mont-Lawn. For ace is the keynote the Children's Paraise this year—not a uiet peace, but a robbing, exultant eace! The whole lace seems aglow ith it; every tiny lade of grass seems atingle with a uperb contentment.

I have seldom seen the home without hildren in it. Only once, I think, did journey up to Mont-Lawn when the lace was empty. And that other time as in March, when the gaunt trees ere stretching shivering arms to a ray sky. The Home then was a little are and a little lonely. But when I aw it this year, flooded with the wonder f the June sunlight, it seemed neither are nor empty. It seemed a gorgeous ream waiting to come true.

They have made some changes in the place; every year there are some changes or the better at Mont-Lawn. They have planted beautiful grass—a hardy New Zealand variety that is used on golf courses—on the playground, and new cement flower boxes border the also new cement walk. Some of the underbrush and shrubbery has been cut away from the open space in front of Fort Plenty, and now one can look, quite unobstructed by drooping branches, down into the heart of the blue Hudson. Pink phlox and wonderful hollyhocks have been planted in front of each cottage; geraniums are flourishing in each flower bed.

I went with the caretaker through the row of waiting cottages. They were filled with a bustle of preparation, for painters and plasterers and carpenters were busily working upon walls and floors and moldings. I could see dusty places growing into dainty cream-colored stretches of wall; I could see dull woodwork being transformed into a clean white. Many of the little white beds had been recently installed; they fairly chuckled with newness.

I went through the cottages happily, and as I went I imagined to myself that I could hear the drowsy murmur of little children saying their good-night prayers and later creeping into slumberland. I said something of the sort to the caretaker.

"Yes," he told me in answer, "they'll be here now in a few days!"

"They'll be here in a few days!" It was in the air of Mont-Lawn, that sentence. "They'll be here in a few days!" I could almost see their little shadow forms playing under the wide trees—I could hear their happy voices calling, in imagination, as they scrambled over the grassy playground and through the bushes. In back of the Children's Temple, where the sand-boxes and the tiniest swings are, I could, by half shutting my eyes, glimpse the toddling figures of the smallest tots that come to the Children's Paradise. The temple itself, mysteriously glad with its beautiful stained-glass windows and its mellow sunlight, seemed to hold the echo of joyous voices, singing.

Friends of mine, I'll never see anything so radiantly lovely as Mont-Lawn is this year—not outside of a real heaven. There was a quality about the place that made me want to stretch my arms wide to embrace it. I wanted to pat the soft grass, to stroke the velvety flower petals, to imprison the yellow sunlight in my cupped hands. I wanted to wander across the grounds with the gay little breeze.

I wanted to be a child again, and, more than that, I wanted to be a child who could, in a few days, see the opening of Mont-Lawn. For I think that this year, coming almost straight from the shell-shattered villages of Europe to the complete, peaceful little village set above the Hudson, I could understand how the place looks to the children who see it with eyes that have been accustomed to the pitiful squalor of the slums.

Mont-Lawn is ready to open its doors. And now that the heat of the summer is making the city like a furnace, the children of the city, who will visit Mont-Lawn, will surely think that they have been transported to a promised land. For Mont-Lawn, set upon its hill over the Hudson, seems half-way to heaven—in appearance. In reality it is a good deal more than half-way!

Just to Be a Child Again

JUST to be a child again—to skip across the lea;
To hear the whisper of a breeze, the droning of a bee;
Just to be a child again, to pull the star-like flowers,
And watch the sun creep through the sky and mark the passing hours.

Just to be a child again . . . and summer on the way;
Just to be a child upon a gorgeous holiday;
Just to feel the grasses bend beneath one's joyous feet;
Just to breathe the country air, as fresh as dew and sweet!

Just to be a child again—and Mont-Lawn opened wide;
Just to be a child to stand athrill and wonder-eyed,
With hands outflung upon the edge of a bright holiday;
Just to be a child again—and summer on the way! M. E. S.

LOVE IS INDEED BLIND IN KOREA

LOVE is blind in Korea, for bride and groom never see each other before the wedding ceremony. Even then the bride doesn't know what she is getting, for her eyes are sealed with rice paste. In many parts of Korea which have been untouched by Western civilization the ancient marriage customs still prevail.

A professional go-between is besought by the young man's father to find a suitable bride for his son. The marriage broker, who has made a fine art of his profession, chooses a girl, and negotiations begin. If the girl measures up to the expectations of her future mother-in-law, the two fathers sign the engagement contract.

On the wedding day elaborate feasts are prepared in the homes of both bride and groom. The groom, arrayed like a prince, rides to the house of the girl, where for the first time he beholds his bride. She is dressed in fine raiment and her face thickly powdered, the pallor relieved only by a spot of red paint on either cheek. With her eyes still sealed, she drinks the ceremonial wine, is placed in a sedan chair, and follows her husband to his home. Thereupon begins for her a life of submission to her parents-in-law and husband.

Korean bridegroom's procession en route to bring the bride to her future home

The wild goose, symbol of marital fidelity, is always carried by one of the groom's attendants in the wedding procession, and is supposed to insure a long and happy married life.

Self-determination for young people in the matter of choosing life companions is one result of Christian missions in Korea. Educated Korean girls today select their own husbands, and child marriages are much less frequent than formerly. Another relic of barbarism, a cash transaction, which virtually amounted to the purchase of the bride, is being abandoned.

The development of the Korean woman is one of marked steps in missionary progress in the Orient.

Formerly even without a name of her own, she has come up through education to a position of respect and self-esteem. She readily embraces Christian teachings and adopts them in her family life.

As a convert she is steadfast and an active influence. Many a missionary has found his first opening in a Korean community through conversion of a woman.

Through the Christian development of girlhood and womanhood, Korean marriages and family life are being elevated to a high standard.

OUR EDITORIAL PAGE

Postage on Subscriptions

BECAUSE of the added cost of mailing, incident to the new zone postage rates which will become effective July 1, we are compelled to change our established policy of one price throughout the United States, and to add the postage to the price of the Christian Herald. We can still under the new rates mail the paper for $2.50 to subscribers east of the Mississippi. But after July 1 we must charge an additional fifty cents, for postage, on all subscriptions from Minnesota, Louisiana and states west of the Mississippi River. This increase is made reluctantly, under pressure of a law whose inequity and economic absurdity may, perhaps, be the more quickly grasped by you who are penalized because of the distance to your homes. Powerful, and not always scrupulous, business interests have forced this zone idea upon the country by a species of misrepresentation. We expect next week to tell you this story more fully. We trust that the new Congress will shortly take action to restore a more equitable and less discriminatory rate for second-class mail. Congress responds readily to public opinion. A letter to your Representatives and Senators will help the cause of repeal.

Pity and Forgiveness

A READER of the Christian Herald in Nebraska writes us asking a question which has doubtless been in the minds of many other readers at the present time: "Shall we feed Germany? I know we are enjoined by Christ himself to feed our enemy." Yes; our right attitude toward Germany is to feed her hunger, as a duty we owe to humanity. We may feed even an unreconstructed enemy. In the long experience of the Christian Herald in relief work during times of great suffering, the gifts of our readers have gone not alone to Christian sufferers, but to Moslems, Hindus and heathen as well. They were to us as the hungry multitudes whom Jesus fed.

By feeding the hunger of Germany, we may be instrumental in leading her people to the very point over which she still hesitates—the point of being led to see in its true light the pitiless and cruel course she has followed. Realization may lead to regret, regret to repentance, and repentance ultimately to forgiveness. We can and should be willing to forgive our enemy also, but all forgiveness is conditional upon repentance. In the present case, the offense having been committed against both God and man, the offender can expect forgiveness only as she repents and asks to be forgiven. She has sinned grievously against humanity, and it would be presumptuous for any nation to forgive, until the offender has shown at least some measure of repentance for her sin, which has caused the death of millions of human beings. We should, however, be willing and ready to forgive when tokens of repentance appear. And even now, we may give expression to the desire that she may be brought to repentance, and we can pray for it. Forgiveness is a gift of God's free grace, but it does not come unsought or undesired by the sinner.

So we can feed Germany's hunger and pray that her eyes may be opened, and then await in the spirit of forgiveness for what may follow.

Hunting Down the Bombers

JUST one month after its Mayday dispatch of bombs through the mails, the forces of anarchy have repeated the experiment by attempting to excite terror in eight American cities simultaneously. As in the first instance, the bombs were meant mainly for men who had been prominent in the administration of justice or in legislation. It is probable also that the latest attempt was intended to strike terror in the ranks of both capital and labor at a time when our near neighbor, Canada, was in the throes of a gigantic labor strike.

There is not the slightest evidence to associate either of the two bombing experiences in the United States with labor; on the contrary, these incidents have shown both workers and employers alike that the terrorists are foes of the whole nation, and both are firmly united against the forces that have flung down the challenge of dynamite at a time when our people have been congratulating themselves on the fact that the economic burdens of war are being overcome, and when the future is bright with hope.

Those men who engineered and carried through this desperate deed were not in any sense connected with the workmen of America. It was a Bolshevist challenge, pure and simple, a part of the campaign of terrorism which has caused such misery in Europe. It has been charged that it was inspired from Moscow.

Every good American hopes that the real conspirators in this plot to murder the officials of law and justice may be discovered and dealt with as they deserve. It is not a crime against individuals only, but against the whole nation, and it deserves the swiftest and most rigorous punishment. Bolshevism has run its evil course in other lands and has failed. It cannot get a foothold here. Its apologists, who would seek to crown it with virtues it does not possess, should be made to understand that it will not be tolerated in any form on American soil. Nor must it be permitted to establish fresh breeding-places here.

Vacation Plans

THE day is here when dominie and people turn their minds to the place and manner of the summer vacation. No event of the year is more important than the fortnight or month which we call our "vacation." It is our one opportunity to get away from the daily round of our appointed tasks, to see new scenes, meet new people, develop new talents and acquire new inspirations. The minister may easily win such a widened vision on his holiday that his leadership among his people will gain in power throughout the year. The church member, too, may so plan that, along with fresh air, fresh scenes, athletic exercise and new companions, there will be added a new understanding of God's plan and purpose for his life, a new outreach toward the infinite, a new sympathy for the human.

As we study time cards and summer resort advertisements, shall we not study also the spiritual advantages of the place we choose for our holiday? Many people find, year by year, that they gain in mind, in body and in spirit by spending their vacation at Ocean Grove or Lake Geneva or at one of the many summer conferences.

But if we chance to spend our vacation elsewhere than in a definitely religious atmosphere, we can nevertheless make it a spiritual blessing by seeking out such religious services as may be near by.

A few years ago at a resort in the Catskill woods a small company found Sunday at hand. There was in the company a deacon and a minister as well as members of several denominations. There was also an empty schoolhouse where the neighbors sometimes had preaching. The deacon decided they should have a Sunday service. He asked the minister to preach, but the minister said he was on vacation and preferred not to. So the deacon preached, and they had a wonderful service which was remembered for years, remembered so thankfully that, every year, on his vacations the deacon was asked to preach. Save room for God in your vacation.

The Canadian Strike

IN REVIEWING the great labor strike in Canada—which has attracted considerable attention here—the Montreal Witness makes a very straightforward presentation of facts which are essential to a clear understanding of the situation. The trouble began in Winnipeg, when the metal trades went on strike partly because the three leading concerns in that trade refused the demand for an eight-hour day and an increased hour wage, but principally because of the refusal to recognize their union. The labor councils of several cities delayed the strike, in the hope that the three firms would accord the recognition desired. Citizens' committees were formed to attempt the reconciliation of interests, and even members of the Dominion Cabinet tried to bring the bodies together. Argument and influence were alike unavailing. The three strong corporations took upon themselves the responsibility of closing the door to conciliation, and thereby precipitating the strike.

What followed can be briefly stated. Many other trades responded to the appeal of the metal trades for a sympathetic strike. Even men employed by the public utilities—water, gas, electric service, street cleaners, tramway men, postal employees, telegraphers, pressmen and stereotypers, and the city police—voted to strike. But even this widespread combination of labor, which affected a large part of Canada, was refused a hearing by the three corporations. There was nothing of Bolshevism in what followed.

Winnipeg, where the strike began, formulated its grievances and brought conditions to light which are of interest to others as well as Canadians. It was charged that the government was indifferent to the situation. Its food controllers did not control. It gave titles to profiteers. It suppressed intelligent newspapers that published the truth. It gave contracts to its patrons, and it was impervious to p and indifferent to crying public need. This is a strong arraignment of Canada; yet, says the ness, "almost nothing of this shocking indictme be denied." What rankled deeper still was the s ness of wealth. The wage-earner measured his i against the evidences of luxury, the appeals to fa and luxury in the newspapers they regarded a moral in their encouragement to waste at such a Further, the knowledge that millions were made on war necessaries aggravated the situ The Witness quotes this as the Winnipeg wo view: "During all these fearful years, the came richer and the poor poorer, and with the inc of wealth, the arrogance of the wealthy incre Wealth made them mad for still more wealth, they became callous and indifferent to the nee the people." Capital and labor will get tog again in the Dominion, but the eyes of our Can friends have been opened. They will see to it such reforms are made, and made promptly, tha experience of the last few weeks can not be repe The lesson is one also which Americans may very take into consideration on our own account.

High Prices Must Come Down

IN THE face of nation-wide protests, high price all kinds of foodstuffs are maintained and profiteering game goes on as a continuous formance. Appeals to municipal, state and fed authorities pass unheeded. The cost of living sh have gone down with the close of the war; bu has risen instead, and the tendency is still upw with no sign of being relaxed. Bread, meat of kinds, milk, eggs, butter, all remain at altitudin prices, inaccessible to the multitude.

After bearing many privations unmurmuringly four years, the people are entitled to be reasona protected against such a situation as now exi Promises have been made of lower food prices, they have never been kept. A fractional drop day is restored the next. Whichever way pendulum swings, the profiteer wins and the c sumer loses. During Food Administration days had a few interesting illustrations of the punishm of profiteering when fines were imposed and sell licenses suspended or canceled. Now there seems be no check anywhere to the rapacity of the offend Congress, occupied with other measures, has d little if anything to alleviate the situation. St legislatures and municipal authorities have follow this illustrious example. They have left the peo at the mercy of the profiteers.

It is time that our municipal authorities took the whole subject of extortionate food prices and something to check the carnival of plunder. a people, we are wonderfully patient; but patien has ceased to be a virtue in the present instance.

Our Children's Paradise Ready to Ope

ONE of the joyous events of the summer is t annual reopening of our Children's Home Mont-Lawn. Since it was first opened 1894, something like 50,000 children have pass through its gates and enjoyed a glorious ten day outing among the piney woods and the spreadi lawns on the slopes of the Rockland Hills. Ne week the gates will be flung wide open again to we come the first contingent of the summer army of litt folks who come from the alleys and tenements of th great metropolis. This year the enrolment of appl cants has been unusually heavy, owing doubtless t the hot wave. But the sweltering tenements are for gotten as soon as our little guests reach the Children Paradise. They come from homes of poverty, wher the pinch of want has been keenly felt, especially dur ing the war. They have no other chance of a fresh air outing save through the generosity of the reader of the Christian Herald.

Their young hearts are full of gratitude, for the know that the beautiful Home to which they are in vited has been wholly a work of love, created and maintained for their sake by thousands of God's peo ple all over this land, who love little children and wh find both pleasure and blessing in providing a summe outing for the waifs of the tenements. If you have not been a patron of Mont-Lawn in the past, we would urge you to give yourself that pleasure this year. It will make your own holiday all the more enjoyable to know that you have provided for the comfort and physical well-being and enjoyment of one little child.

Our Mont-Lawn booklet is now being issued, and any reader who wishes a copy can obtain one by sending us a postal with name and address.

Wave of Evangelical Revival

The Philadelphia Conference and Its Significance to Christians Everywhere

By JAMES M. GRAY, D.D.

A NO time during the past twenty-five years, or, say, since the lamented death of D. L. Moody, s ch a wave of evangelical testimony iety swept over our land as is ing over it today. This is not o disparage the evangelism which, the outbreak of the war, knew no nent; for just now the reference to Mr. Moody as an evangelist, a Bible teacher and practically the ator and organizer of the popular Conference idea.

e old Niagara Conference of forty ears ago, which was the mother of odern Bible conferences in Amer- nay have given Mr. Moody the but that conference was for teach- lmost distinctively, while Mr. ly's passion always was for the e. The Northfield Conference of -wide influence and blessing was, is, a people's conference. The ly Bible Institute of Chicago, has kept pushing the conference through the country since the of its founder, is essentially a e's institute, a spiritual democracy e natural intake and outgo is one the Bible conference plan.

A. C. Gaebelein, himself a strong teacher and conductor of confer- somewhat after the Moody type, the present phase of the move- from the International Prophetic erence held under the auspices of Moody Bible Institute in Chicago, uary, 1914. That was at the thresh- of the war, and he regards it as ing a providential relation to evan- al thinking and acting during that g period.

ie next great conference was that Philadelphia in May of last year, , to the astonishment even of its noters, the spacious Academy of ic was filled every day, necessitating flow meetings to accommodate the le. Then followed the one at negie Hall, New York, last Novem- and came still another in Chicago, ebruary of the present year, when teaching gathered round the theme, angelism and Vital Christianity r the War."

HIS which has just closed in Philadelphia, and which was called a orld Conference on Christian Funda- tals," the second in the series in city, opened really on Sunday ning, May 25, with an evangelistic ting conducted by Paul Rader of cago, and concluded on Sunday ning, June 1, with meetings of similar racter in different parts of the city. nday and Tuesday of the week were oted to sessions on the correlation of le schools, evangelical colleges, semi- ies and academies, religious maga- s and periodicals, interdenomina- al foreign missionary societies and le conferences.

he speakers on these days were L. Pettingill, Dean of the Philadel- a School of the Bible; President as. A. Blanchard, of Wheaton Col- , Illinois; Chas. G. Trumbull, Edi- of the Sunday School Times; Orson Palmer, Home Director of the Africa and Mission, and W. B. Riley of nneapolis. The teaching part of the ference, which really began on Tues- evening and gathered around the damentals of the Christian faith, intained the standard of the year vious both in strength and power.

It was noticeable that the speakers, teachers as they preferred to call m, were drawn from about every tion of this country and Canada and m wide distances apart. W. H. iffith-Thomas, A. B. Winchester and W. Philpott represented the Domin- R. A. Torrey came all the way California and W. B. Riley from inneapolis; Brothers Massee and le, from Ohio; Paul Rader and the iter, from Illinois; the South was resented by Dr. Pettengill, whose church is in Wilmington, Del., and Dr. Guille of Tennessee; New Jersey and Pennsylvania by Drs. Chafer, McNeely and Munhall; and New York, by Drs. Scofield, Haldeman and John Roach Straton.

THE scheme of the conference tallied splendidly with the general subject as announced, and from Tuesday evening until Saturday evening the daily topics marked a progress of doctrine suggesting the schedule of a theological seminary of the old school or the contents of a volume on Systematic Divinity. First came four addresses on the authority and inspiration of the Bible; then two on the Being of God and His relation to man in creation and regeneration; next in natural order, the Person of Christ and the Person and Work of the Holy Spirit, and following these, Satan's personality and power as leading up to the doctrine of sin. The consideration of the nature, extent and effect of sin logically introduced the teaching of the Atonement, sanctification, grace, and God's redemptive plan, together with the nature, mission and destiny of the Church.

On Friday evening Dr. Haldeman gave a great address on "Why I Preach the Second Coming of Christ," which was the forerunner of the plan of the last day of the conference, the same being devoted to prophetic and eschatological subjects, including the resurrection and future retribution.

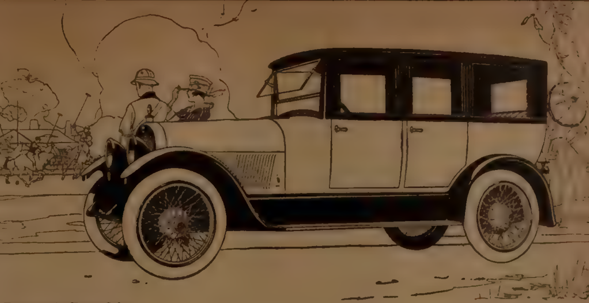
The readers of the Christian Herald will agree that such a program is unusual in these days. When they reflect that hundreds and thousands of men and women crowded into the large place of assembly to listen to it for hours with the deepest interest, the remark at the beginning of this article will seem justified that we are in the midst of an evangelical revival such as we have not been visited with for a long while.

Nor were these all local people by any means, a census revealing that not a few came scores and, in some cases, even hundreds of miles thus to feed on the bread of life and to drink deep out of the wells of salvation.

Of course there were overflow meetings, and of course the Gospel singing was a marked feature, for wherever "Charley" Alexander leads, as his old friends love to call him, the hallelujahs are awakened with songs new and old.

IT IS a fact of importance that this conference is only one in a chain binding together the evangelical spirits in our churches and stimulating their lives and energies literally from the Atlantic to the Pacific. The Moody Bible Institute holds two conferences at summer resorts in Maine this summer, and another is being planned for the Pacific Coast in the Autumn. The Christian Alliance does a valuable work in the same way. Dr. Riley, who within a year or two has been unusually stirred with the value of these gatherings, is personally conducting others in Newark, Buffalo and Grand Rapids. Mr. Gaebelein, Dr. Leon W. Tucker, Mr. Lewis Sperry Chafer, and other Bible teachers working independently have their time occupied almost continuously. Doctors W. H. Griffith-Thomas and A. B. Winchester, of Toronto, have as much as they can do in this kind of service outside of their regular responsibilities in college and pastoral work. Dr. A. C. Dixon is returning from England and, with Dr. Torrey of Los Angeles, will soon be available in the same way. Dr. G. Campbell Morgan of London has taken up a connection with the Bible Training School of New York and doubtless he also will be more or less foot-loose.

Pastors or committees desirous of such a conference in their community may feel at liberty to address the writer at the Moody Bible Institute, Chicago.



The new series Haynes Sedan—seven passengers—twelve cylinders—cord tires—five wire wheels standard equipment—Price $4000.

This Advertisement Copyrighted, 1919, by The Haynes Automobile Company

THE NEW HAYNES SEDAN
AN ALL-SEASON, ALL-PURPOSE CAR

THE four factors of car character—beauty, strength, power and comfort—are exemplified in the new series Haynes Sedan. It is the result of the Haynes organization's twenty-six years of creating cars of known character.

Noted coach builders fashion the bodies after the ideals of Haynes originators. As is proper and in keeping with the atmosphere suggested by a closed car, the body styles are finished and fitted with that rich simplicity which reflects the good taste of the owner of such a car.

Upholstered in genuine mohair velvet, with the rare Mount Vernon pattern carried out in the silver fittings, with frosted rosette light-dome and quarter-lights, with silver trimmed vanity case and smoking case of solid mahogany—the new series Haynes all-season Sedan displays that quiet elegance which appeals to the fastidious and discriminating patrons.

There is a demand for the new series Haynes which is requiring our best efforts to meet. We urge you to make early reservation of the Haynes you select.

The Haynes Automobile Co., Kokomo, Ind., U. S. A.

NEW SERIES "LIGHT SIX"
Open Cars
Touring Car—7 Passenger	$2485
Roadster—Four doors, 4 Passenger	2485
Closed Cars
Coupé—4 Passenger	$3100
Sedan—7 Passenger	3350
Limousine—7 Passenger	4000
Wooden Wheels Standard Equipment

NEW SERIES "LIGHT TWELVE"
Open Cars
Touring Car—7 Passenger	$3250
Roadster—Four doors, 4 Passenger	3250
Closed Cars
Coupé—4 Passenger	$3800
Sedan—7 Passenger	4000
Wire Wheels Standard Equipment

A new catalog, beautifully illustrated, will be sent on request. Address Dept. 623

1893—THE HAYNES IS AMERICA'S FIRST CAR—1919

YALE SECURITY

One key does it all

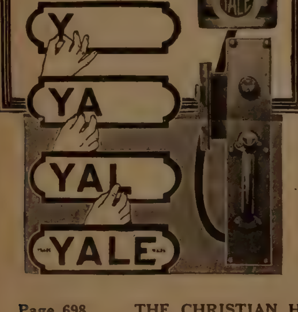
With the Yale Cylinder Master Key System every individual lock on your estate—each with its own individual key which will pass that lock and no other—is placed under the control of a single Master Key which will operate every lock, even though they number hundreds and many types.

THE Yale Cylinder Master Key gives the owner instant and complete control of every lock—on entrance and interior doors, gates, garage, boat house, cupboards, cabinets, barns and other outbuildings; down to the padlocks on automobile tire racks, feed bins or store houses.

Correspondence is invited.

The Yale & Towne Mfg. Co.
9 East 40th Street, New York City
Chicago Office: 77 East Lake Street
Canadian Yale & Towne Ltd.
St. Catharines, Ont.

The Yale Cylinder Master Key System is a perfected development of the makers of Yale Night Latches, Door Closers, Padlocks, Builders' Hardware, Bank Locks and Chain Hoists.



Dramatically Wrong

By MARGARET E. SANGSTER

THERE are certain moments that should be dramatic—certain moments that should stand out supremely from other moments. There are times that should be crowded to the brim with thrills, just as other times should be flat and gray-colored. There are incidents that hold all the elements of extreme comedy or of unbelievable tragedy; incidents that may almost change a life.

And yet oftentimes those moments that should be dramatic are not dramatic. Oftentimes they are stolid; almost dull. A man at the turning-point in his career says or does the commonplace thing. In moments of great joy or equally great heartbreak folk do not speak epigrams. They are casual.

I once heard the story of a man who had committed a crime and who was to be hung in punishment thereof. The night before the hanging he sent his lawyer, as a last resort, to appeal to the governor. And then he sat in his cell waiting.

He waited for a long time, his head in his hands. After a while the lawyer returned, walking slowly. "I'm sorry, old chap," said the lawyer gently, "but I saw the governor at nine o'clock and he said that he wouldn't do anything."

In a story or a play the condemned man would have said something dramatic. He would, perhaps, have leaped to his feet and cried in agonized tones,

"Not that!" or "How can I bear it?" But he did not rise to the occasion. He only said dully, without lifting his head:

"Nine o'clock?"

Real life is that way.

MY TRIP through France was full of dramatic moments. It was all athrob with new emotions and sensations. But the moments that I looked forward to as the big moments were curiously quiet—and not a little disappointing. I got my thrills at unexpected times, from the sight of a broken doll beside the battered homestead; from the ache in a black-robed woman's voice; and the sound of violin music that I heard one night coming from a shattered house in a devastated village. My thrills came at the sight of a blind soldier playing an accordion, a legless man praying in Notre Dame, and a dear familiar face smiling unexpectedly at me in the wilderness of a foreign city.

I had looked forward to my first glimpse of France with an almost fanatical eagerness. France—the land of dreams—I had visioned it so often! But my first real sight of it, save for a few harbor lights, was not at all the thrilling experience that I had expected. As we steamed up the river to Bordeau I stood, with a group of eager watchers, beside the rail, and looked at the fields stretching along the sides of the river. They were very green, those fields, even though it was winter time; and though I was almost breathless with the wonder of reaching a promised land, that vivid green was the only thing that I could quite comprehend.

"I never saw grass like that!" I exclaimed stupidly.

One of the men—a newspaper man from the Middle West—answered me. "You ought to see the grass that we grow in Kansas!" he said.

On the way to the outer circle of the American troops in Germany

My trip to the farthest outpost was equally undra was with the Army of Occupa one of the boys volunteered to to the edge of the outer circle
It was a very cold day in Febr day that we chose expedition, and we w
open car—crossing t
at Coblenz and g
through Ehrenb Mantabaur and Neutershausen, in and very cold line.

I was nearly p
when I reached th circle. We swung bridge and past sentry. We swept sharp incline and
And as we stopped,
who had brought m
"You're in hailing
of the German arn told me. And then,
squarely around in his
looked critically into

"My, but your red!" he ejaculated.

The thrill was gon
wanted to slap him!

MY FIRST trip
American batt was made in the c
of three professors. W out to the battlefiel government car—al
highway that the army had marched d
desperation just befo khaki troops turned th
defeat into a pæan of v

We went rapidly do road. And then at l came to a stretch of highway with great felled along the sides
And,

"Just below here," guide told us, "the Ge were beaten back."

Nobody said anythi a moment. And then the professors spoke.

"I wonder," he ques
abruptly, "Why they down the trees
barrier, I suppose?"

Another of the professors la scornfully.

"Not at all," he said. "It was to camouflage the road!"

And they argued about it for the half hour as we went past Belleau V and Vaux, and at last into Châ Thierry!

There was an incident not u that. It was time that a ce wealthy wo went out with party to see devastated vill
On the way ou
passed a ce
battleground,
in the center of battleground
guide pointed a certain moun

"There are hundred men bu together in grave!" he tol
in a hushed voic

Nobody spoke a long, tragic ment. And the last the wom
raised her eyebro

"Not reall
she said. Abru
she struck the
of a small frivol
slipper out fr
under her sma
Paris-built skirt.

"I got cove with mud at the l
stop!" she mourn

After Hearing Music Coming from a Devastated Farmhouse

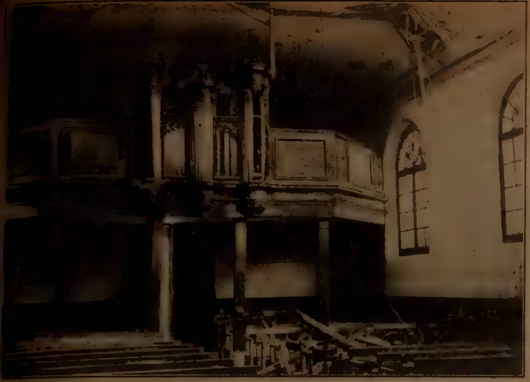
JUST a little wisp of song played softly in the twilight,
Such a happy little song—and oh, the dusk is gray!
Such a joyous little song, and oh, the night is coming—
Coming with the bitter chill that marks the death of day.

Almost like a dance it is, it holds no hint of sorrow,
Almost like a waltz it is, to set the pulse athrill;
Not a hint of tears in it—and oh, the night is coming—
Coming like a purple shroud across the purple hill!

Sad the little farmhouse is, the doors swing on their hinges,
All the windows look like wounds, pitiful and bare,
And a shell has torn a gash in the broken roof of it,
But the music lilts along like a happy prayer.

Do pale ghostly fingers play on a ghostly violin?
(War has swept the countryside of the songs it knew!)
Merry is the little tune—not a wistful questioning—
Merry with a rosy thrill of a dream come true.

Just a little wisp of song played softly in the twilight,
Such a happy little song—and oh, the dusk is gray!
Such a joyous little song, and oh, the night is coming—
Coming with the bitter chill that marks the death of day!



Present state of Protestant church and organ in Monnsaux (Aisne)

French Protestantism in the Making

WHEN the roll was called of the French Protestant pastors and theological students summoned to the colors during the war, it was found that e hundred of them had been killed. And the churches to which these men d ministered were destroyed or damaged to the extent of $2,000,000. The mbership everywhere has been diminished by losses in battle, and peace ings to them the burdens of devastation and chaos, especially in the more osperous churches of the northeast.

EVEN as La Belle France, radiant with heroism and a passion for liberty, has won the ardent affec- io of America, so also does French estantism lay claim upon the love of rican Protestants for her marvelous ifastness of faith and purpose igh centuries of bitter persecution, oyalty during these days of devas- n when so many of her leaders, so y of her resources have been de- ed, and for the courage with which nters the conquest of the immediate re. Probably in no land has Protes- ism a brighter immediate oppor- ty than in France, no longer a Ro- Catholic country, no longer since eligious impulse created by the war d of freethinkers or irreligious peo- but hungry for just the kind of mes- that democratic, liberty-loving, e-teaching Protestantism can bring. ich Protestants have even today a onal influence out of all proportion heir numbers and resources; and to inspiration of a marvelously heroic ory they have added a vision of the ire that is challenging the admiration e whole Protestant world.

rotestantism in reality began in nce before the Reformation. So in- sely devoted to freedom has been the nch people (Franci, "free from trib- ") that even during the Middle Ages church followed the dictates of the ular conscience more liberally in nce than in other countries. And study of the French Bible estab- ed in the hearts of the people the au- rity of the Sacred Word. Jacques èvre's Commentary on the Pauline istles, published in 1512, was the first ortant evangelical book in France, l had a great influence on Martin ther before he ever nailed his theses the door at Wittenberg. Lefèvre's tings and the French New Testament ped to bring about a great spiritual ival among all classes of people. e period from 1512 to 1523 has been led "the golden age of the French formation." In 1523, there began th the burning of Jean Vallière at the ke, that long series of persecutions d martyrdoms that made the name guenot a synonym for the highest roism.

Protestants were largely active on the le of the French Revolution, and their hts were gradually expanded through e years that followed. During the cond Republic their synod in 1848 gan the discussion of the separation State and Church, which was finally ought to pass in 1906. And in the t years of the twentieth century the formed Churches of France found themselves vastly stronger in numbers, thoroughly evangelistic in spirit, but also rapidly becoming a socialized church.

At the outbreak of the Great War, French Protestantism numbered in its membership one in every sixty of France's population, one in every twenty-five in Paris. Subdivided into different bodies, the Union of Evangelical Reformed Churches, the Union of Reformed Churches, the Union of Free Evangelical Churches, besides the Evangelical Lutherans, the Evangelical Methodists, the French-speaking Baptists and about thirty independent churches, it was and is, in unity of spirit and effort, one great movement. In its home missions, its Bible societies, distributing 15,000,000 Bibles in the last century, its evangelical missions, like the great McAll Mission founded by Robert McAll in 1872, now having thirty-one stations and reaching thousands, its foreign missions, located chiefly in French provinces, in its hospitals, its fifty orphanages and as many homes for the aged, Protestantism has shown a virility and aggressiveness that is remarkable. Add to these its use of the press, its efforts through the Y. M. C. A., Y. W. C. A., Blue Cross (Temperance) Societies, Boy Scout troops, Thursday School for children of the streets and the Foi et Vie (Faith and Life) movement for the study of social and philosophical problems, and we get somewhat of the scope of their influence in French life.

When the war came, Protestantism responded in full measure, and upon the rolls of its churches and in the mournful ruins of many of its temples are recorded the impact of devastation, ruthless and wanton. The miracle is that there is no evidence of defeat in the spirit of the membership, which flames more brightly than ever. In the face of a providential opportunity for Protestantism at last to come into its own in a large way, its members face reconstruction with brave hearts but meager finances.

In Belgium, Protestantism is less influential and smaller than in France, but has suffered even more greatly proportionately during the war. Just as the people of the two invaded nations have been drawn together more closely by the war, so too the Protestants of France and Belgium are making common cause in the campaign for reconstruction. And just as America with her great army and vast resources came to the relief of both while they were in the hands of the Germans, so American Protestantism is called upon by her leaders to bring to both the relief so vital to aggressive work during the years before them.

CARL F. PRICE.

Puffed Rice

Is whole rice in the form of airy, toasted bubble

Puffed Wheat

Is whole wheat puffed to eight times normal size

Corn Puffs

Is pellets of toasted hominy puffed to globules

Try the Other Bubble Grains

Most of you delight in one Puffed Grain, we think. But there are three of them, each with its own enticements. Serve them all.

As breakfast dainties it is hard to choose. All are toasted, flavory bubbles—flimsy, crisp and delightful.

In bowls of milk Puffed Wheat is a favorite. And it means whole wheat made wholly digestible—the supreme supper dish.

With berries mix Puffed Rice or Corn Puffs. So in candy making or as garnish on ice cream. And so for between-meal tidbits, doused with melted butter.

All Are Steam Exploded

All are made by Prof. Anderson's process. All are shot from guns. All have every food cell blasted, so digestion is easy and complete.

All are food confections, delightful in their texture and their taste.

These are the queen foods, and summer brings you countless uses for them. No other way of serving cereals compares with this bubble form.

Use them to make whole-grain foods inviting, and to make the milk dish popular.

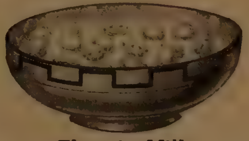
Puffed Wheat Puffed Rice and Corn Puffs

Each 15c, Except in Far West

Summer Servings

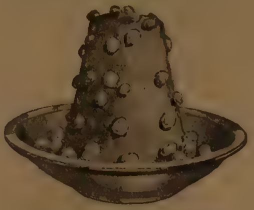
Mix With Berries

Or serve with cream and sugar, or with melted butter.



Float in Milk

Puffed Wheat and milk is a matchless combination.



Use Like Nut Meats

On ice cream or in home candy making.

Crisp and Butter

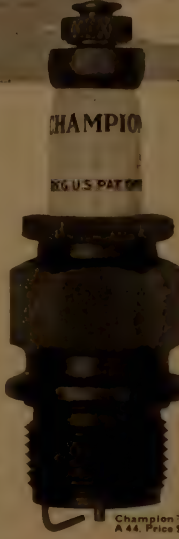
For hungry children to eat like salted nuts.

The Quaker Oats Company

Sole Makers

(3129)

Champion Dependable Spark Plugs



Champion ⅞-18
A 44. Price $1 00

Dynamometer Test Guarantees Dependability

IN the Dynamometer Department of our laboratories, daily tests duplicate the varied work spark plugs must perform.

These tests show the greater resisting power of our famous No. 3450 Insulator together with our patented asbestos gasket construction.

Extreme care in manufacture, close inspection and rigid production tests are added factors which enable Champion Spark Plugs to stand up and keep going better and longer.

Buy Champion Spark Plugs now and make sure the name Champion is on the Insulator and the World trade mark is on the box and avoid substitutes.

Champion Spark Plug Company, Toledo, Ohio
Champion Spark Plug Company, of Canada, Ltd., Windsor, Ontario

Help the muscles to come back!

One of the most remarkable things about the human body is its recuperative powers—but to come back it needs care, not neglect.

Tired and weary muscles if given a good rub with Absorbine, Jr. will be fresh and strong in the morning, ready for another strenuous day's work.

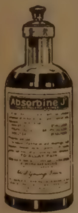
Absorbine, Jr.
THE ANTISEPTIC LINIMENT

The very next time you over-exert yourself, or find an unaccountable lameness in your muscles, or stiffness in your joints, stop at your druggist's on the way home and get a bottle of Absorbine, Jr.

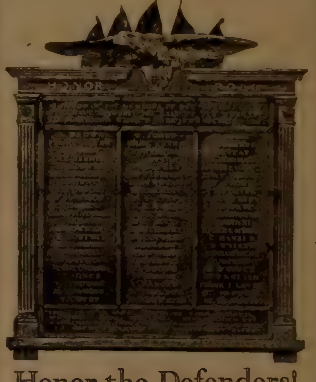
Give the affected parts a good stiff rub, using a few drops of the liniment in the palm of the hand, and see how different you feel in the morning.

$1.25 a bottle at your druggist's, or postpaid. Good-sized sample bottle sent on receipt of 10c in stamps.

W. F. YOUNG, Inc.
5 Temple St., Springfield, Mass.



You can be quickly cured, if you
STAMMER
Send 10 cents coin or stamps for 70-page book on Stammering and Stuttering, "Its Cause and Cure." It tells how I cured myself after stammering for 20 years.
Benjamin N. Bogue, 5505 Bogue Building, Indianapolis



Honor the Defenders!

Handsome and enduring—a Michaels Bronze Memorial Tablet is the most fitting recognition of the service and sacrifice of the defenders of their country. Designs available for churches, fraternal orders, municipalities, commercial and industrial organizations. Exclusive designs prepared for special purposes. We cooperate with monument builders. Write stating where and how the tablet is to be erected and the number of names it is to contain. Ask for designs, Selection No. 24

THE MICHAELS ART BRONZE COMPANY
CINCINNATI, OHIO.
Modelers and Mfrs. of Bronze Tablets, Ornamental Bronze for Public Buildings.

PATENTS Send sketch or model for preliminary examination. Booklet free. Highest references. Best results. Promptness assured. Watson E. Coleman, Patent Lawyer, 624 F St., Washington, D. C.

SIX SILVER PLATED SPOONS FREE with first order for one pound of our Best Tea. Remit us $1.00 and we will ship Spoons and Tea by parcel post. Satisfaction guaranteed or money refunded. Other premiums, Lace Curtains, Tea and Coffee Percolators. For particulars write. M. McGUINNESS, 675 HUDSON ST., NEW YORK

THE DAIL

J. H. Jowett, D.D., Rev. Richard Braunstein, C. C. Albertson, D.D., Ch

The Courage of Patience

SUNDAY. Titus 2 : 2. "Sound in patience." If the measure of our spiritual attainments was to be inferred from the measure of our patience, what likelihood would there be that many of us would be marked for distinction? Are there many or are there few who are brilliant in patience? I mean the patience that can keep steadily on the appointed road when nothing particular is happening. I mean the patience that can go on farming when crop after crop has failed. I mean the patience which can turn to the plow again when the reaping-machine has gathered little that is worth having.

There is the courage of patience in the midst of material adversity, the patience that can remain cheerful even when the environment is gloomy. In one of his suggestive letters James Smetham has this significant word: "When Job said, Though He slay me, yet will I trust in Him, no wealth could enrich him after that. He had reached his climax. To learn the art of protracted patience—this is better than thousands of gold and silver." And how such patience shines! What a witness it offers to the sustaining powers of grace! Its background of adversity is like the dark velvet cushion on which a diamond rests and which makes the radiance of the jewel flash out with extraordinary brilliance. Whiteness is superlatively white when we find it in the streets of Sardis. "Thou hast a few even in Sardis who have not defiled their garments."

There are some people who have the courage of their convictions, who have not the courage of patience when their convictions are not yet attainable. It is one thing to assert a principle in an atmosphere of hostility, but it is a greater thing to remain true to the principle through the long years when it cannot yet be crowned.

Then there is the royal patience that can endure petty irritations. It is one quality of patience that can quietly face the fiery darts of the evil one, but I think it is a finer quality that can be calm under his pinpricks. Many of us can be calm in the midst of some tempestuous crisis who cannot endure the rasping rudeness of a daily annoyance. Perhaps the supreme test of patience is just here. It is not whether we can face the tornado and sing at midnight, but whether we can tolerate the stings of the common nettles which grow by the traveler's way. Perhaps it is the little worries that reveal the quality of our spiritual blood. We need to be very healthy if we are to be regal when irritabilities abound. J. H. J.

Love and Duty

MONDAY. Gal. 5 : 22. "But the fruit of the Spirit is love." There is much fruit of the Spirit, but love is mentioned first. Love is the motive power of eternal values. Henry Drummond said, "Love is the greatest thing in the world." Jesus was Love incarnate. He preached love and illustrated love with his life. Love is synonymous with God. Love is not like God. God is not like love. "God is Love." Love is a greater word than duty. Duty goes the first mile. Love goes the second mile. Duty fills the letter of the law. Love fulfils the spirit. Sinai represents the one. Calvary represents the other. Love is not extravagant, does not surrender judgment and sanity in excess of things done, but it means that no one has fulfilled the law of Christ who does only what decency and law require. It means that love does not stop at the first mile of things required, written down on the program, in any table of commandments, but forthspringing from the heart, which, keeping the law, forgets it in a gathered momentum of joyous doing for others along innumerable miles of noble endeavor. Duty uses such words gitimate," and "I have done all required." Love says, "I mus Rome also." Duty is a keeper lations and an observer of ordi
Love does this also and does Love goes out of the beaten tra barks on high adventure, forgets a glorious remembering of other good measure, packed down, over. Duty lends. Love gives.
lends its time. Love gives itself

The Garment of Prais

TUESDAY. Isa. 61 : 1-3.
*Lord hath anointed me . . .
unto them . . . the garment of pr
the spirit of heaviness.*" Perhap is no more difficult duty enjoine us by the Scriptures than to "rej the Lord alway." Most of us i that cheerfulness is a matter o perament. It is so, in part, b wholly, and not as largely as we
It is more than most of us ima matter of viewpoint. A great co was asked why all his church mu so cheerful, and answered, "I c make it otherwise. When I think God my heart is so full of joy th notes dance and leap from my Dr. F. B. Meyer once testified t was first led into the Christian the abundant cheerfulness of one young friends who had recently his heart to God. Ill health may the vision and darken the horizon sincere believer in God, but no
there is every reason why we wh adopted the Christian view of li of the universe should wear perpe the garment of praise. It requi faith to rejoice when all goes well.
faith is given to us to make it p to rejoice even in the presence versity. Why does a sailor lear art of navigation if not to serve h
the day of surging seas and rent and bare masts?

Should we not rejoice that it is ble for us always to rejoice? Has i occurred to us to be thankful for t fulness? The garment of praise the habit of praise, for we wea habits like garments. One who ha recently gone over into the Better try has said: "Happiness is not posit like a coal-bed, which after drawn upon for years shows sig giving out; the experience is rath immeasurable supply which only a a growing capacity to use it greatest debt is to those brave s who, striking the rock of hardest have found living waters gushing even from its flinty wall. When w rejoice in hardship, rejoice in the of calamity, rejoice in approaching or death, when we can rejoice in spi losses or crosses, we advertise the e tial soundness of the universe." Wh in the depths or upon the height upon life's level plain, the Spirit o good God, whose presence with u plains all mysteries and compen for all absences, bids us and help rejoice with joy unspoken and glor
The heavens are not black. B rays of hope stream up from the hor
Let us hold steady until the Day dawn and the shadows vanish away
C. C.

The Positive Note

WEDNESDAY. Heb. 2 : 10. "
Captain of their salvation."
world needs Leadership. And it not need to grope after it. Jesus is supreme Leader of the hour. He is only safe Person to follow in all th that make for real life.

A good follower of Jesus is a g leader of other people.

If your world is on fire, it is a time to stop and organize yourself i a fire department. That should h been done long ago.

EDITATION

, D.D., Rev. Edwin W. Caswell, Prof. W. H. T. Dau, Bishop W. A. Quayle

a question mark is straightened becomes an exclamation point. aid to Jesus, "What is Truth?" aid to the world, "I am the '

ndamental truth is good for all l conditions, and all people.

t never built a college, a church, tal, a business, or a career.

ything worth dying for is worth or.

u have never found Jesus your- u cannot lead anyone else to Him.

stianity is made up of affirma- Believe," "Do," "Go," "Love," ' "Pray," "Act," "Save." my sheep," Jesus said to Peter. Acts" of the Apostles saved the not their dogmas.

e is no place in the creed of the an for guesswork. He says with it of absolute conviction, "I that I have passed out of death e!"

sitive faith in the Creed of Jesus nly thing that will save the world haos, bring order out of the po- confusion, feed the starving, re- ct the nations, and start the forward into the path of future nd happiness. All other formu- the welfare of the world are in- nt and superficial and temporary.

C. M. S.

he Hail of the Mariners

RSDAY. Psalm 107 : 30. "So bringeth them to the desired ha- It is customary in passing ships ocean, to cry out, "Whither ? Where from? Under what Such words of friendship are ng on the wide, wild billows of the It is said that it is customary for English Christian sailor to hail mpanion English vessel with the "494, sir." Immediately the s received, "6 farther on." The ng of the signal is that in the sail- ymnbook, 494 is Fanny Crosby's "Blessed Assurance, Jesus Is ' and 6 farther on, or No. 500, is Be With You Till We Meet " We are all sailing over life's and may well follow the example sailors and sing our welcome and ll as we come and go, passing each in the great work of life. We are nd for one haven, one city of God. e citizens of the same heavenly y, under the guidance of one Cap- lood relatives of our Father's fam- Have we not every reason for be- iendly, cheering each other on- remembering that 'Jesus reigns o'er thee, Calm land beyond the sea!"

are voyaging over the ocean of nging Truth. "He hath founded ousness upon the seas and estab- it upon the floods." The earth of changes, but the sea is ever the like sunlight and air. Man trusts aters as he floats his commerce all oceans; so he should trust the f divine Truth. There are no les upon its brow, no age or fickle- n its movement. From everlast- everlasting, it is the same. many are drifting over life's without captain or compass, liable ay to strike rocks, bergs or shoals, rey of fogs, storms and darkness! mber that the old ship Zion never passenger, for it bringeth them desired haven!

E. W. C.

Justice and Love

IDAY. John 1 : 29. "Behold the amb of God, which taketh away the the world." We behold sin working est effect, and at the same time we ercy achieving its greatest triumph n. We view together the sternest e and the greatest love. The fin- the inspired interpreter points to the sacrifice on Calvary as the expiation of the world's guilt. This Jesus is the Lamb of ancient prophecy and the counterpart of Israel's scape-goat: he alone is the sin-bearer and sin-remover.

Lord Jesus Christ, thou innocent Lamb of God, without blemish and without spot, thou didst suffer for us, the just for the unjust. Thou didst not shrink from the shameful death of a criminal, in order to restore us to the favor of God. For our disobedience thou wast obedient unto death, even the death of the cross. Thy precious blood cleanses us from all sin. Thy death secures us against the death everlasting. O faithful Saviour, how can we sufficiently thank, praise and honor thee for the love and mercy which thou hast shown us? We shall, as long as we live, confess thee the patient Lamb of God that taketh away the sin of the world. Our sins are among those which thou didst bear: we too caused thy death by our vain conversation received by tradition from our fathers. Though this knowledge is humiliating to us, cause it to become fruitful to us as a warning against fresh sins. Let the daily remembrance of thy pains and agony assure us again and again that thou hast made our peace with God, and prompt us to crucify and put to death in ourselves all carnal desires and evil affections of our corrupt old nature. Aid us by the example of thy suffering to bear our own cross after thee without murmuring, and thus glorify thy meekness, patience, resignation, and reliance upon our Father's help in our own lives. Finally, give us strength to conquer death by virtue of thy death, and not fear the grave, for thou hast hallowed it to us by thy burial, and hast given us the promise that, because thou livest, we shall also live and be with thee forever. Amen.

W. H. T. D.

The Ultimate Authority

SATURDAY. John 6 : 47. "Verily, verily I say unto you." John Henry Newman, that master of English, left the Church of England because he wanted authority. He came to the Pope to give him end to his quest for assurance and authority. He fondly hoped for a final word to stay his fears, quiet his perturbations and bring the needle of his compass to a perfect rest. He fled from doubt and came to petrifaction. It is one of the saddest of all sad human stories. "Appologia pro Sua Vita" is a distressing book because it rehearses the story of a man afraid of himself who is in quest of the Fearless Land, and who gained only the Land of Self-Deception.

It is curious how a fine mind like that of Newman can lose itself in the marsh of the Tiber when it can find itself in the crystal current of the River of God.

"But spite of fears, pride ruled my heart" is a plaintive phrasing of "Lead, Kindly Light." We sing it; howbeit it is scarcely a brawny hymn. It is a helpless hymn, the hymn of a lost bird and a wounded bird. It will not beat against the tempest. The storm birds revel in the storm and fly into the winds' worst fury. We do not whimper our doubts but rise through them into the giant solace and definite comfort of Christ's "Verily, verily I say unto you." What is the seat of ultimate authority? The word of Christ. "All power," said he, "is given unto me in heaven and in earth." That suffices. We want no more. He knows. He is the God of things as they are. What he made he understands. Therefore, with him "is neither variableness nor shadow of turning." He keeps straight on. And with him in that elect companionship we arrive. We steady our nerves in the authorization of him whose word wakes the dead and bids the sleeper rise. "Verily, verily I say unto you"—that is our refuge and hiding-place. We need ask no other. Here we reach certainty.

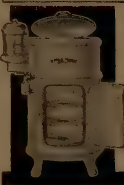
W. A. Q.

It's POSTUM!

Surprisingly like a high-grade coffee in flavor and looks, but wonderfully superior for comfort and health. POSTUM contains no caffeine.

Children may drink it freely.

Let Me Cut Your Ice Bills



Let me send you a beautiful White Frost 30 days' trial. I'll pay freight. Send it back at my expense if it doesn't save ice, keep foods colder.

White Frost SANITARY Refrigerator

Steel built, cork insulated, white enameled. Round. Revolving shelves. Noiseless cork cushioned doors, new drinking water cooler, move-easy castors. $6.50 down, pay as you use. Deal direct with manufacturers, save money, get extra value. Write for catalog. H. L. SMITH, Pres.

White Frost Refrigerator Co.
Dept. W-5 Jackson, Mich.

Don't Wear a Truss

MR. C. E. BROOKS

Brooks' Appliance, the modern scientific invention, the wonderful new discovery that relieves rupture, will be sent on trial. No obnoxious springs or pads.

Brooks' Rupture Appliance

Has automatic Air Cushions. Binds and draws the broken parts together as you would a broken limb. No salves. No lies. Durable, cheap. Sent on trial to prove it. Protected by U. S. patents. Catalog and measure blanks mailed free. Send name and address today.

C. E. BROOKS, 498 State St., Marshall, Mich.

SMITH BROTHERS'
S. B.
COUGH DROPS.
S. B.
Stamped on each Drop
POUGHKEEPSIE, N.Y., U.S.A.
Reg. U. S. Pat. Off.
TRADE
MARK
S.B. COUGH DROPS

Warning! Keep your children away from other children with coughs. There's no excuse for a cough, not so long as you can buy S. B. Cough Drops. They relieve coughing, and often prevent sore throats and colds. Pure. No Drugs.

Drop that Cough

SMITH BROTHERS of Poughkeepsie

FAMOUS SINCE 1847

Wash Your Clothes 30 Days With the CASCADE STEAM WASHER
As Easy as Rocking a Cradle.

Now you can wash the daintiest sheer silks, as well as heavy woolens, as though by magic with the Cascade Steam Washer. No rubbing of clothes—boiling water, live steam, and boiling hot soap suds do the work. Sterilizes as it washes; separate boiling unnecessary

Easier on You and Your Clothes

Finish the largest wash in an hour. A few turns to each batch and clothes are ready to rinse. Cylinder revolves so easily it can be turned by a child. Nothing to get out of order—easy to understand. Use on coal, gas or other stoves. Easy to clean.

Do away with the fatigue, labor and tired aches of wash day; spend less time at the tub, more time for other work and the children.

Wash 30 Days at Our Risk

Get your Cascade Steam Washer now; if not satisfied after using 30 days simply return it; You Take No Risk. Will quickly pay for itself through the saving of money, clothes and the added comfort. Write for literature and direct factory price. Agents wanted.

H. M. Sheer Company
Dept. 20 Quincy, ILL.

Weigh what you Should

If thin, build up. If burdened with excess flesh, reduce! Have an attractive figure. You CAN—as sure as sunrise. Let me explain how 87,000 refined women have done this; how you can do it. Simple, sure, effective. All in your own room—in a surprisingly short time.

Be Well
Without Drugs
I build your vitality so that all sorts of physical ailments are relieved by Nature's methods—no drugs nor medicines. I strengthen your heart, teach you how to stand, to walk and breathe correctly. I have spent 16 years at this work—leading physicians endorse me. My booklet telling how to stand and walk correctly is free. Shall I mail it to you NOW? If later you desire my services you will find the cost most reasonable. Write me.

Susanna Cocroft
624 S. Michigan Ave., Dept. 18, Chicago

Miss Cocroft is nationally recognized as an authority on conditioning women as training camps have conditioned our men.

ROUGH ON RATS
DON'T DIE IN THE HOUSE

A United States Department of Agriculture bulletin says: "The best bait usually is food of a kind that the rats and mice do not get in the vicinity. The bait should be kept fresh and attractive and the kind changed when necessary."

"Rough On Rats" mixes with any food. It rids premises of pests—quickly, thoroughly, cheaply. Get it at drug and general stores. "Ending Rats and Mice", our booklet, sent free; WRITE.

E. S. WELLS, Chemist Jersey City, N. J.

Delivered TO YOU FREE

Your choice of 44 styles, colors and sizes in the famous line of "RANGER" bicycles, shown in full color in the big new Free Catalog. We pay all the freight charges from Chicago to your town.

30 Days Free Trial allowed on the bicycle you select, actual riding test in your own town for a full month. Do not buy until you get our great new trial offer and low Factory-Direct-To-Rider terms and prices.

TIRES LAMPS, HORNS, pedals, single wheels and repair parts for all makes of bicycles at half usual prices. No one else can offer such values and such terms.

SEND NO MONEY but write today for the big new Catalog. It's free.

Rider Agents Wanted

MEAD CYCLE COMPANY
Dept. H-71 Chicago

KIDDER'S PASTILLES Standard relief for (Inhalation.) ASTHMA All Druggists, 50 cts., or trial size for 2c. stamp. STOWELL & CO., 50 D Main St., Charlestown, Mass.

CHURCH BELLS SCHOOL
Ask for Catalogue and Special Donation Plan No. 85
THE C. S. BELL CO., Est. 1858, Hillsboro, Ohio

Alvin York, Man of Might

SERGEANT ALVIN C. YORK has been designated by many authorities the author of the greatest single piece of heroism of the war. He has been awarded the Distinguished Service Medal and the Congressional Medal of Honor. When he returned from France the Tennessee Society of New York City went down the harbor in a banner-decked boat to bid him welcome. He was taken to a suite at the Waldorf-Astoria and all New York exerted itself to make his stay a pleasant one.

Sergeant Alvin C. York and His Tennessee Home

In the Argonne Forest on October 8, 1918, York—then a corporal in Company G, 328th Infantry, 82nd Division—killed between twenty and twenty-five Germans, captured 132, including one major and three lieutenants, and silenced thirty-five machine-guns, thus breaking up an entire enemy battalion which was preparing a counter-attack against the Americans on Hill 233.

All but seven privates and York of the company of sixteen men that had started out under the command of acting Sergeant Bernard Early at six o'clock that October morning had been killed or wounded when Alvin York's single-handed battle began. Machine-guns rained their bullets on them from before and behind. Six of the Americans had to guard prisoners already captured. One of them was so placed that if he came to York's aid he would be instantly killed. The steady hand of the Tennessee corporal at his trigger alone stood between them and capture or death.

To Pastor R. C. Pile and the congregation at the Possum Trot Church, back at Pall Mall, Tennessee, in the valley of the Three Forks of the Wolf River, where York is second elder and the leader of the singing, the heroism of the sergeant is attributed to something more than human power. In the little white church on the hill several years ago, the towering, flame-headed young mountaineer "got religion." It is a vital, all-enveloping, everyday sort of religion that they get at Pastor Pile's little church.

When Alvi was drafted i army on Nover 1917, he was a entious objecto of the member Possum Trot were conscienti jectors. When away to Camp Georgia, he we a troubled con Captain E. C. forth, his super cer, helped to his doubts. It that he read to thirty-third cha Ezekiel. "Son speak to the chi thy people, and to them. When a sword upon if the people of t take a man o coasts, and set their watchm when he seet sword come the land, he the trumpet warn the people Then wh heareth the sound of the trump taketh not warning, his blood upon him."

Alvin York is a silent man. all that his interviewers could do him to answer "Yes" and "N questions. He did not seem to c talk about his exploits.

"I did the best I could and th all I could do," and "I couldn't d thing else but fight," were about expressions he would make.

"I am going to be a preacher, Sergeant York when the interv managed to ask him what he int to do in the future.

Entertaining Our Troops in France

IT does seem a bit strange in Paris, but more like home, when the itinerant, hastening from city to divisions in the provinces, finds a man from the R. T. O. checking baggage and hailing from Terre Haute, Indiana! So much has already been said about the achievements of the doughboy here that it would be supererogation to add words about the wonderful work he has accomplished in this cosmic conflict. Never should he be forgotten! And the generous program outlined and now enforced by the Y. M. C. A. to amuse, entertain and instruct deserves especial mention.

One at home does not realize the uncertainty of the mails—the long delay in forwarding letters to the moving soldier, and the rumors which, like a contagion, sweep through the army. Naturally the men become despondent—and great numbers, held at ports of debarkation in rain and mud, feel keenly the loss of genial surroundings and the comforts of civil life. It is a fact that the majority of our boys are from the smaller towns. They are not sophisticated, and the evident need of amusement is apparent to every one.

The Entertainment Department of the Y. M. C. A., located at 10 Rue d'Elysée, where Charles M. Steele is director, comprehends a most diverse organization. At the present time, from three hundred and fifty to four hundred entertainers are working in the ninety-three different units or companies. Of these, twenty-six were sent across by the "Over There Theater League"; forty-one Americans, made up mostly of talented amateurs and some professionals, were recruited by the Entertainment Department in New York, and twenty-six French companies were organized in France. Some of these units are musical, some vaudeville and a few are dramatic.

One of the most interesting sections is devoted to soldier talent. Divided in halves, one is in charge of Mr. Joseph Linden Smith, who trains, coaches and produces. The other, in charge of Carl J. Balliett, is devoted to the important task of securing detail soldier talent from the army to the Y. M. C. A. A recent army order makes it permissible for generals in charge of divisions to detail entertainers in the army who can be used to better advantage than in routine duties. An important supply provides free of charge supplies t field—musical instruments, sheet etc. Twelve French seamstresses employed for the Christmas ente ments and routine work. Over Santa Claus costumes were mad the holidays.

The development of soldier t through the coaches is a most impo part of this work. The boys alway entertainments put on by thems The function of the Y. M. C. A. ducer is to organize them. Ther sixty of these producers now in field. The entertainment units done splendid service during the p of training. They have worked i open air, in sheds, in shell-bat buildings, dug-outs, churches, city army barracks, Y. M. C. A. huts German theaters captured by armies. In general they have show finest spirit. Many who at home every convenience, in France their own baggage, sleep in all sor billets and yet keep cheerful under big impulse to serve the boys.

PERCY WEADO

Northfield's Summer Plans

THE Northfield season opens this year with an event of unusual interest, the Commencement and Fortieth Anniversary of Northfield Seminary. D. L. Moody lived to see his educational ideas worked out to success. For twenty years the founder watched the growth of the school and was succeeded by his equally devoted son, W. R. Moody. Under the latter's wise leadership, Northfield Seminary has more than trebled its equipment and greatly increased its contribution to the religious life of the church and nation. Following this celebration come the various Conferences and summer schools which came into being because of the vision and faith of the great evangelist.

In platform, personnel and work outlined for study, the Northfield season was never more promising than this year. A constantly increasing number of people are discovering that Northfield has claims as a recreational resort as well as a religious center. Both summer and winter, the town is hostess for people who seek rest alone and go away having found it. Northfield is in every way as much a place of physical and mental rest and recuperation as of spiritual meditation and uplift.

CHURCH FURNITURE Pews, Pulpits, Chairs, Altars, Book Racks, Tables, Desks—EVERYTHING. The finest furniture made. Direct from our factory to your church. Catalog free.
DeMoulin Bros. & Co. Dept. 54. Greenville, Ill.

ANGEL FOOD CAKE Eight inches sq Five inches hig
I teach you to make them Also other cakes. They $3.00 per loaf—profit $2.00. My methods are ori and different. Never fails Particulars free
Mrs. Grace Osborn, Box 63, Bay City,

WE PAY CASH FOR OLD FALSE TEE
Don't matter if broken. Also cash for old gold, silver, pl inum, dental gold and old gold jewelry. Will send cash return mail and will hold goods 10 days for sender's approv of our price. Mail to MAZER BROS.
Dept. 241---2007 So. 5th St., Philadelphia, Pa.

GENERAL AND LOCAL AGENTS Enormous profit ing DUO guara products. Easy sales at every house. All or spare Outfit free. DUO CO., Dept. W84, ATTICA, N.

Christian Herald Prayer League

hristians are urged to unite with members of the Prayer League prayer at the noon hour. Also is at liberty to send a request for r an acknowledgment of answered thereby becoming enrolled as a of the Prayer League.

ARE reminded by a recent letter from a member of the Prayer League in Fort Worth, Texas, statement of the Saviour that ther knoweth our needs before him." This member had so nswers to prayer and the Lord n so good to her that she felt it e presumption to ask him to ossible a little pleasure trip depended upon the receipt of due her. She thought about it a al, but did not make the matter t of prayer. However, in good e money came and she was able lge in the desired recreation. t us this merely as an incident of in which the Father had led her the years, so that she was able vith assurance that God answers er in Maryland writes us in great , earnestly seeking prayer for the of two afflicted women; one vith age, and the other paralyzed, suitable home may be found for Another friend asks for prayer son who is a minister, that his ay be blessed by the spirit of And another asks earnest prayer salvation of her brother.

parent Prayer League of the Mission is pleased to read the f a friend at Newburg, Ind., who an interest in our prayer, said: 35th year of my history is now half finished. I am desirous of my soul enjoy the Lord at eve- me, and especially that I may inners the way to the victorious We know of no better assurance at evening time than the tread- the victorious way.

ember of the Prayer League in , Miss., who was inspired by the Miracle of Answered Prayer Hallimond, asks the League to arnestly that his faith may be hened and that he may recover artial paralysis.

ery pathetic letter came to the League early last week. A member o had been suffering severely was at last to undergo an operation as resort. She wrote from the l just before going on the operat- ble asking us to pray that God f would operate through the of the doctor and that, if it were will, she might be restored to ttle girl has written to us also that we pray for her that the re which was once hers might be back to her. She writes that she sick, but that she never sees one hour. We do not know what the re is she has lost or whether it be hat it be returned, but we will ask he members of the League to pray od's love may give her either her pleasure or something so much r that she will be glad that the r was taken away.

ery personal letter came from a in Illinois who writes that she the church at seventeen years of nd at twenty-six was married to a man, who died almost four years She is now sixty, and is greatly ned by the fact that during the ears of her husband's life, when he n invalid, she was very unkind to nly awakening to the true nature acts after he had passed on. She says that though she reads the and prays, she is horrified over the dness to one who was entitled to e love of her heart; and that she ld God all about it and asked for eness without getting peace, or ut being relieved from her remorse ast sins. She confesses also the ence of this sin of unkindness in fe today. She says: "God made did not make myself, and if He me, then am I not his child? I am his child and he loves me, ught there not be something to tell me that my sins are forgiven? If Jesus were right here I would kneel at his feet and tell him everything and ask him to help and advise me, but he seems so far away." Is it not possible that our friend is letting her remorse and her present sin stand between her and the forgiveness which Christ is so ready to give to those who come to him in true repentance? He has said that he is ever near those who call upon him. The only thing that can come between us and him is our own unworthiness and our lack of complete faith. We would ask all the members of the League to pray that this burdened heart in Illinois may find in the love of God the peace she seeks.

A minister friend in New York asks the prayers of the League for his sick wife, who he says "has a fatal malady, but God can cure her. She is a rock-bottom Christian."

M. B., Buchanan, Mich., writes to tell how much comfort she finds in the noon hour of prayer in the thought that thousands everywhere are also praying. She says her faith is strengthened by the hour of prayer, and she asks prayer that a dearly beloved friend, ill and alone in a big city, may be restored to health and happiness.

Among other requests for prayer for self or others 88 are for bodily healing; 36 for spiritual blessing; 14 for guidance in financial matters; 10 for healing of the mind; 3 for restoration or improvement of sight; 6 for restoration or improvement of hearing; 6 for cure of the drink habit; 3 for cure of the tobacco habit; 1 for cure of the gambling habit; 7 for reconciliation or restoration of estranged friends or families; 1 prays for enemies; 1 asks prayer for employment; 1 for a plentiful harvest in Montana; 1 asks prayer that a path may be opened up for Christian work for the writer's father, who is an old minister; 4 ask prayer for the granting of an unspoken request. One asks prayer that the Sabbath may be more generally observed. Twelve ask prayer for the granting of various desires and needs. One asks prayer for the return of a backslider.

Nineteen ask prayer for the conversion of friends or relatives; 9 parents ask prayer for the conversion of their children; 4 wives request prayer for the conversion of their husbands; 1 husband asks prayer for the conversion of his wife; 4, for the conversion of brothers, and 1 for that of a sister. One asks prayer for the conversion of self.

Prayers are asked for revivals and reforms at Kendall, Wash.; Plainview, Texas; Bushton, Kan.; Chino, Calif. (that a young Sunday school superintendent may be blessed in her work); and at Abilene, Texas.

Acknowledgments of answered prayer have been received from B. W. S. Louisa, Va.; Mrs. A. S., Weiser, Idaho; Mrs. A. L., Berkeley, Calif.; Mrs. J. K., East Sparta, Ohio; H. C., Wakarusa, Kan.; Mrs. J. B. B., Chariton, Iowa; Mrs. A. V. B., Boone, N. C.; Miss E. R. S., Hagerstown, Md.; M. B., Collbran, Colo.; D. R., Veedersburg, Ind.; In Christ, Vardin, Miss.; Sincere Believer in Prayer, Hackensack, N. J.; L. C., Fall River, Mass.; Reader, Chino, Calif.; L. P., Huntington, W. Va.; In His Service, Los Angeles, Calif.

◆

The Conscience and Concessions

UNDER this suggestive title, Dr. Alfred Williams Anthony, D.D., LL.D., executive secretary of the Home Missions Council, has gathered together the strands of interest in and resistance to Christian Unity. He shows how disunity came to be, and traces the movement toward Unity, outlining the forces behind the movement and the forces that might be expected to resist or impede it. The book ends with a clear exposition of those matters in which the individual conscience may make concessions for the good of society and the Church. The book is one that should prove helpful to ministers and laymen. Fleming H. Revell Company publishers. Price, $1.50.

Pure Coffee

The reason why people drink 1,000,000 cups of G. Washington's Coffee every day, is because

G. Washington's

COFFEE

is the highest grade of pure coffee. It is not a substitute. It is absolutely pure. That is the explanation of its delicate aroma. Makes delicious iced coffee.

Ready when you pour on the water —hot or cold.

G. Washington's
PREPARED COFFEE
MADE IN THE CUP AT THE TABLE
ABSOLUTELY PURE SOLUBLE COFFEE

Went to War! Home Again.

Is your farm large enough for a tractor like this?

Or will a smaller $750 tractor do all your work?

A tractor can save money on every farm—if it is properly selected—or, it can prove a total loss if not intelligently handled and not adapted to the work at hand.

It is the business of the Motor Service Bureau, recently organized by The Christian Herald, to help its readers choose the tractor best suited to their needs.

If you will give us complete information called for on the following coupon, we will give you unbiased expert advice free of charge.

THE CHRISTIAN HERALD (Motor Service Bureau)
Bible House, New York, N. Y.

Coupon

Please recommend the size and type of tractor for use on my farm. The following information may be of use to you:

No. acres on which tractor can be used .... Nature of land ....
....
Kind of crops ....
Distance to railway or other distributing point ....
Automobiles or trucks owned by me ....
Make of tractor preferred ....
Approximate investment available for purchase of tractor ....
Price of gasoline .... Price of kerosene ....

Check which of the following power works tractor would be used for:

Silo cutting ..... Stump pulling ..... Wood sawing ..... Threshing ..... Dredging .....

Name ....

Address ....

The Training of a Father

By DR. DAVID STARR JORDAN
Chancellor, Leland Stanford Junior University

FATHERS are quite as hard to train as boys, and from experience all along the line I have come to the conclusion that fathers and boys alike will mostly go their own way, in the long run getting "what is coming to them."

But it is in the power of the father to help a boy to realize his best instead of his worst tendencies and possibilities. To this end a father should be sympathetic and patient, helping the development of whatever natural taste or genius a boy may have. Virtue is never negative, and a boy is held from idleness or vice by giving him something better to work at. If a boy has a real love for some study or for some worthy line of work, encourage that. It marks the way out from temptation. A boy needs in his development sympathy rather than financial help. His ideals need strengthening, not his purse. To have money to burn will ruin all those who burn it. It is hard to raise a boy who is rich and knows that whatever he wants is his for the asking. He is likely to be content with what money can buy, and it cannot buy very much that is worth having. It can help in many things, but a mere aid is not the thing itself.

The father can promote the plain virtues of sobriety, honesty, tolerance, and kindliness. The most effective way of teaching these virtues is for him to illustrate them in himself—to show how righteousness looks when it is lived. Occasionally a father successfully proves his point by becoming the awful example. But that is not the best way, and right living can be most effectively taught, not by precept but by practice. And remember always that right living is a positive thing. It is not secured by inhibitions. "Don't, don't, don't" never leads to anything worth while. Don't say to boys: "Keep off the grass. Keep out of the dirt. Keep away from the slums." Rather indicate places it is better to go to: "This way to citizenship; this way to science, to art, to a worthy profession."

It is worth while to remember that the boy is the germ of what the man is to be. You cannot change his nature much, but you can develop the best in him till it overshadows the worst. The life of a man at forty will be what was in his heart at twenty-one.

And a father may say to his boys something like this, which in one way or another I have said to thousands of boys in this and other countries:

"Your first duty in life is toward your afterself. So live that your afterself—the man you ought to be—may in his time be possible and actual.

"Far away in the years he is waiting his turn. His body, his brain, his soul, are in your boyish hands. He cannot help himself.

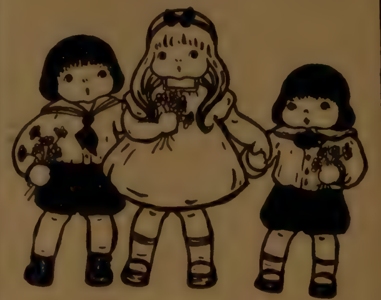
"What will you leave for him?

"Will it be a body unspoiled by lust or dissipation; a mind trained to think and act; a nervous system true as a dial in its response to the truth about you? Will you, Boy, let him come as a man among men in his time?

"Or will you throw away his inheritance before he has had the chance to touch it? Will you turn over to him a brain distorted, a mind diseased; a will untrained to action; a spinal cord grown through and through with the devil-grass we call wild oats?

"Will you let him come, taking your place, gaining through your experience, happy in your friendships, hallowed through your joys, building on them his own? Or will you fling it all away, decreeing, wanton-like, that the man you might have been shall never be?

"This is your problem in life—the problem vastly more important to you than any or all others. How will you meet it, as a man or as a fool? It is your problem today and every day, and the hour of your choice is the crisis in your history."



·A·SURPRISE·

We've·picked·these·pretty posies
And·now·we're·on·our·way
To·give·them, with·our·hearts'
best·love
To·Mother·dear, to-day.

·Elizabeth·FitzHugh·

The World of the Child

By Harriet Frances Carpenter

WHILE visiting a school I overheard this dialogue between an unimaginative teacher and a small boy who was helping to remove some cobwebs from a cabinet in the classroom:

"Spider-webs are very beautiful, aren't they, Miss Andrews?"

"Hold the pan higher."

"All spiders aren't bad spiders; some spiders are good spiders, aren't they, Miss Andrews?"

"Watch what you are doing."

"I know a story about a spider Miss Holmes told a story to her class about Robert Bruce and the spider—"

"When?" severely. The child hung his head. "If you loiter at her door again, I'll keep you in." A sullen look appeared on his face and the work was continued in silence. After he had left the room she turned to me and said: "That boy gets sulky spells. Oh, he likes nature work and stories, but I never could tell a story."

Upon my suggesting that stories stimulate the imagination, she held up her hands and with a look of horror declared: "Imagination! You don't have to stimulate children's imagination. The trouble is they have too much!"

She was unable to reconcile her adult mental attitude with a child's outlook.

A little girl, as she ran up and down the steps of a broad terrace surrounding a house in the country, kept saying to herself: "It's just like an old castle! It's just like an old castle!"

"Nellie," commanded her father, "don't do that! You'll fall."

"She is always falling," he explained to his hostess.

"Does she hurt herself?" asked the lady.

"No, but she might, she is so awkward. She gets worse all the time."

His little daughter manifested a lively imagination, but he did not understand how to make it of use in de restraint and poise.

Live with children and one world of perpetual imagination way can we more easily con child's acts, form his habits, thoughts, than along this av approach to his mind. Repr adroitly be given by a playful s
the fancy.

"Poor Patsy!" murn
father, shaking his hea heedless little son, a stur
five, stumbled and fell re during a short ramble in a "Poor Patsy! One would look at him that he had n eyes, but they are just be

The next day, running
ously to meet me, this sa fellow stumbled over a st and got up saying good-h ly: "If Daddy was here me I had beads for eyes
heedlessness was soon c
by this jest.

"The flowers are aski
Patsy doesn't take his fe leave them at home when h to see us," I suggested when he trampled my sno

"What do the flowers sa
he whispered as he quickl
ed the offending membe
the bulb bed and looked w into my face.

"They say, 'Thank you,
I replied. "'If you keep y on the paths you may bri with you when you com
garden.'" And so a rebuke ed its end without creating onism.

Sometimes it happens th
dren lose the sense of disc tion between fact and fancy
we should clarify their ide out implanting a sense of

It was discovered that a truthful child was begin make misstatements, evidently the purpose of deception, but through confusion of thought.
read him an account in a news
a dog that put his paws on the wheel of an automobile, while hi sitting beside him changed the g saw to the essentials of running
He made no comment at the t his imagination seized upon t
A couple of months later he told he had seen a dog running a car Avenue.

"His master was with him," sponded.

"No, not that one; this dog wa
He changed the gears himself."

Shortly afterward he wanted t what a cocoon is. I began the of the Caterpillar and the Bu
"Don't tell it that way—don't said' and 'he said'—just tell m broke in. So I told him the facts development of the chrysalis as and definitely as possible. Whe finished, thinking this a fitting tunity, I explained the differen tween fact and fiction, telling hi we should let people know w what we told was really so, or story or joke.

The following incident shows hi
ner of applying my careful def
He told his aunt that he had se squirrels running toward each oth branch of a tree. They had mouths filled with nuts, and they fast that they "bumped heads knocked the nuts out. After an tive pause he added: "That's a
I made it up! Now this is r
And he repeated a simple inciden squirrel carrying away the walnu
he had laid on the ground to dry.

Some children naturally mak distinction between fact and without assistance. One of my companions usually explained his sentations where they might n obvious, so that we lived in a w
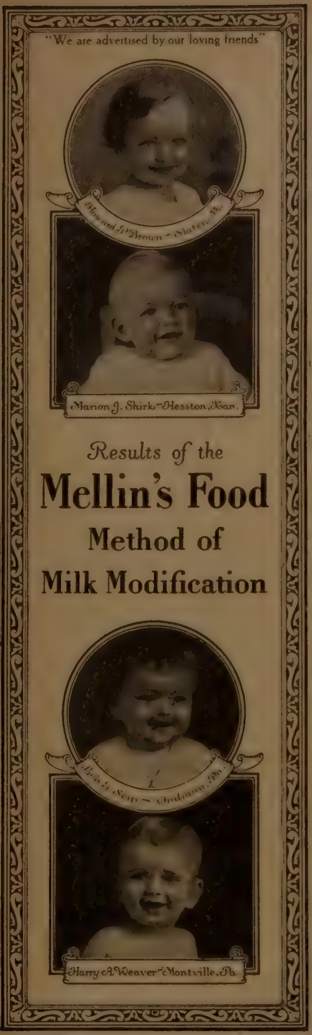
"pretend" without any deception.



"We are advertised by our loving friends"

Marion J. Shirk—Hesston, Kan.

Results of the Mellin's Food
Method of Milk Modification

Harry A. Weaver—Montville, Pa.

Become a Nurse

IF YOU cannot spend three years in hospital or are past hospital age limit, send name and address on postcard for yearbook explaining the C. S. N. Home-Practice Method of studying trained nursing. State age.

The Chautauqua School of Nursing
341 Main St. Jamestown, N.Y.

"DIVINE LOVE and WISDOM"

By EMANUEL SWEDENBORG, explains clearly and rationally the operation of Divine Love and Divine Wisdom in the creation of the universe, including man as the chief end of creation. Big 618 page book sent without further cost or obligation on receipt of 5 cents. 5c

THE AMERICAN SWEDENBORG
PRINTING & PUBLISHING SOCIETY
Room 757 3 West 29th Street, New York

CLEARS Cuticura
SOAP AND OINTMENT QUICKLY REMOVE PIMPLES AND DANDRUFF SAVES
THE SKIN
THE HAIR
SAMPLES FREE. ADDRESS "CUTICURA, DEPT. W, BOSTON." SOLD EVERYWHERE

CASH FOR OLD FALSE TEETH, DISCARDED JEWELRY, ETC.

Mail us useless false teeth, (with or without gold fillings), discarded or broken jewelry, watches, magneto points—anything containing gold, silver or platinum—and we will send you the full cash value by return mail (and hold your goods 10 days pending your acceptance of our remittance.) Dun and Bradstreet References.

OHIO SMELTING & REFINING COMPANY
202 Lennox Building, Cleveland, Ohio

'oung People's Topics for June 29

o: lty to Church and Country

n Endeavor, B. Y. P. U. and Ep- or League Topic. Matt. 22 : 15–22

O ALTY is the highest expression f love. We love Christ. The hurch is the company of those ve been saved through his blood. ot merely an assemblage of the it is the organized force through the world is to be brought to As loyal Christians we must, re, be ready for any service that t forward the work of the church, y sacrifice that will glorify our We must oppose sin, we must l righteousness, we must shun omise, we must live our faith day y, minute by minute. We must e distressed, comfort the sorrow- ide the weak and have ready the for the repentant. We must be ians always, ever on the job, pres- d performing.

alty to country requires an equal of constant readiness to serve. ls for the same passionate allegi- or the same willingness to sacrifice wn comfort for the good of the a. Loyalty may mean the trenches, nely patrol, the dangerous post, a grave; but for every one called for his country a thousand are to live for her. And living for her s obedience to her laws and sup- of every effort to make her laws . It means resistance to every of corruption, political, financial, or moral. It means active effort to clear the national life of every obstacle to freedom of thought, of conscience and of opportunity. The man who is loyal will not be blind to national defects, but he will not listen in silence to one who defames his country's good name. The loyal man will strive in every lawful way to improve our laws, but he will not tolerate the agitator who counsels violence. The loyal man will realize that in America all men are equal, and that the attempt to establish class consciousness among us is disloyal and un-American, but he will so serve his fellows and his nation as to do everything in his power to prevent the forming here of mutually antagonistic classes. We are all Americans, whether we came of Puritan blood, or have but taken out our first papers; whether we receive an income or earn wages. We can all have a greater, a better, a healthier, a happier, a more powerful America if we all stand and work together, all truly loyal to the best, brightest and freest flag that flies.

◆

COURSES in religion and religious education, including Sunday school methods, will be given by Columbia University in co-operation with Union Theological Seminary during the summer session, which begins July 7 and continues until August 15. For information address Frank D. Fackenthal, Secretary, Columbia University, New York City.

Woman Suffrage Wins

Continued from page 689

Butler, N. Y., in 1850), and "the st Roman of then all," Susan B. ony, who died in 1906 at the age years after leading the suffrage s through thick and thin for over century, and who lived to see the of woman's advancement placed a permanently progressive plane. ong other well-known leaders of ast half of the nineteenth century the able Mrs. Mary A. Livermore assachusetts, teacher, orator and nthropist; Mrs. Zerelda Wallace her of General Lew Wallace, author Ben Hur"); the eloquent Anna inson; the alert Mrs. May Wright ll, founder of the International cil of Women; Clara Barton, the rence Nightingale of America, der of the American Red Cross; Julia Ward Howe, author of the ttle Hymn of the Republic" (who wittily called "the bridge between ety and Reform"); Mrs. Belle A. sfield, the first woman lawyer, itted in 1869; Alice and Phœbe and other founders in 1868 of the sis Club, New York City; Mrs. a Lockwood; Dr. Mary Walker; Frances E. Willard, founder of the ld's W. C. T. U., who pleaded that stian temperance women should be n the power to vote against the ized drink traffic.

has not availed that doctors boy- ed women physicians, that pulpits unced women ministers, that judges ned upon women lawyers, that the t to vote on matters of public con- had been denied.

he foundations laid by the early advocates were strongly and securely laid, and building upon them, with persuasive sweetness and forceful persistence, women finally have won the glorious privileges of full citizenship to be used as a powerful leverage in still higher and holier work for humanity.

JANE A. STEWART.

◆

Sing a Song of Sweet Corn

SING song of sweet corn,
  A garden full of chard,
Four and twenty egg-plants
  Growing in a yard.
When the crops are gathered
  The folks can have some lunch;
Isn't succotash a dish
  To set before the bunch!

Father's tending beets and chives,
  Saving us some money;
Mother's out among the hives
  Taking off the honey;
The kids are in the garden
  Pulling out the weeds.
Don't we get a lot of food
  From half a peck of seeds?

◆

Our Motor Service Bureau

DO YOU know that our Motor Service Bureau offers expert, unbiased advice not only as to the type of tractor best suited to meet your requirements, but regarding trucks and trailers as well? The Bureau is proving to be immensely popular among our readers and an ever increasing number are taking advantage of it's service offer, finding it of real value and assistance to them in the purchase of any form of power equipment for the farm.

THE CHRISTIAN HERALD is published weekly by The Christian Herald, at the ible House, Fourth Avenue, 8th and 9th Sts., ew York City. The Officers are Graham C. atterson, President and Treasurer, Bible House, . Y. City; Geo. H. Sandison, Vice President, ible House, N. Y. City.

SUBSCRIPTION PRICE, $2.50 a year in ad- ance. After July 1, 1919, an additional charge of o cents a year for zone postage will be required on ll subscriptions west of the Mississippi, including innesota and Louisiana. Remittances should be ade in the safest manner available. Make checks nd money orders payable to The Christian Herald.

FOREIGN POSTAGE.—For copies mailed outside the United States, Canada and Mexico, add one dollar a year to subscription price.

CHANGE OF DATE.—It takes at least two weeks to change the date, after your subscription is renewed.

EXPIRATION OF SUBSCRIPTION.—The date on the wrapper indicates when your subscription ends.

CHANGE OF ADDRESS.—It requires three weeks' time to make the change. Give both old and new address.

LETTERS should be addressed, THE CHRISTIAN HERALD, Bible House, New York.

Entered as Second-class Matter at the Post Office Department, Ottawa

1869-1919
50TH ANNIVERSARY—FIFTY YEARS OF PROGRESS

HEINZ
OVEN BAKED BEANS

Heinz Baked Beans are an ideal hot weather dish.

They tempt the appetite because they look inviting and taste good.

They take the place of too much meat and do it at far less cost.

Heinz Baked Beans are choicest beans baked in real dry heat ovens.

The rich tomato sauce for which Heinz is famous adds a flavor that makes them truly delicious.

To get real baked beans, order by name. Say, "Heinz Baked Beans."

Some of the 57

Vinegar | Spaghetti
Tomato Ketchup | Olive Oil

four kinds

All Heinz goods sold in Canada are packed in Canada

HEINZ
BAKED BEANS
WITH PORK AND TOMATO SAUCE

MAIL COUPON AT ONCE FOR THIS BIG FLAG

YOU WILL NEED IT TO UNFURL WHEN THE BOYS COME HOME

4th of JULY, VICTORY CELEBRATIONS, etc.

SIZE 4x6 FEET

Double Stitched Stripes

Brilliant Colors

Illustration is an actual photographic reproduction. Pole is NOT included.

WE GUARANTEE THIS FLAG to be satisfactory. Do not hesitate to send at once for one before they are all gone. Last year we distributed 35,000 of these flags—and did not receive a single complaint. At that time it was impossible to fill all orders—owing to government restrictions. Consequently thousands of late orders were cancelled. As soon as these restrictions were lifted, we ordered another consignment—but could obtain only a limited quantity. Several months are required to make these big flags—so we cannot quickly obtain another supply when these are gone.

NOT A SINGLE COMPLAINT FROM 35,000 OF THESE FLAGS

SEND NO MONEY—SEE THE FLAG FIRST

WHAT could be a more glorious sign of welcome and unlimited pride in our soldiers than this large, brand-new, brightly colored flag waving triumphantly over your home?

Victory days are now here. Every week thousands of khaki-clad heroes are returning to our shores from the battlefields of Europe. The grand old flag has a deeper meaning to each of them. Home and flag are inseparably linked in their hearts. Show them that their flag is your flag. There never was a time in our history when Old Glory could be more appropriately and proudly displayed than right now. The CHRISTIAN HERALD offers here an opportunity to secure one of these big 4 x 6 foot flags, large enough for church, school or home.

VICTORY celebrations are coming thick and fast. Holidays—special meetings—and reunions require the display of Old Glory! Fly this brand-new flag in vivid colors, to show your patriotism.

We make it easy for you to secure this splendid large flag

By placing an order for thousands of these flags, we were able to purchase them at a considerable reduction. We will give you the benefit of this saving and have made the terms so liberal that all may take advantage of this offer.

Send No Money Now

Merely Fill Out Blank

We want you to see what a really wonderful value this flag is and will send one to you, all charges prepaid by us, for you to examine. If, after five days, you decide not to keep the flag, return it at our expense, and you will be under no obligation. You need not purchase it unless convinced of its value. But, if you decide to keep the flag, send $1.00 within five days after its receipt, and $1.00 a month for three months, a total of $4.00. This pays for the flag and also for your subscription to the CHRISTIAN HERALD for one year (subscription price alone $2.50). You will receive 52 issues of the CHRISTIAN HERALD and the flag. If at present a subscriber, your subscription will be extended one year from the date of expiration.

If you want one—and you surely will—fill out the coupon and mail at once. You must act quickly to get the benefit of this offer, which will be withdrawn as soon as our present stock is gone, as we cannot replenish our supply except at an advance in price. Don't delay. Send the coupon today.

SEND NO MONEY—MERELY FILL OUT COUPON

CHRISTIAN HERALD, 1899 Bible House, New York, N. Y.

GENTLEMEN:—Send me, all charges prepaid, for examination, the large American Flag. If I decide to keep it I will send $1.00 within 5 days and $1.00 per month thereafter for three months, a total of $4.00, for which you are to send me the Christian Herald for one year (52 issues). If I do not keep the flag I will send it back within five days at your expense. I incur no other obligation in mailing this coupon.

Name________________________________

Address______________________________

(A single cash payment of $3.50 can be made if preferred.)

Response to God's Love

national Sunday School Lesson for June 29. Phil. 3 : 7-14

A Quarterly Review

Rev. George D. Allison, Ph.D.

IR past twelve lessons have dealt with great teachings of the Bible regarding God and his children. studying the references to the , the Son and the Holy Spirit we ght lessons on the principles of ian character-building in the light n's sins and his possibilities in Jesus. To many of our teachers view of the quarter is a tedious ninspiring task. But it ought not e. There are numerous methods erest and profit, beginning with sting of the topics on the black- and finding a key-verse or a tell- ustration for each. Since so much New Testament is from Paul, one readily make this particular re- study of his letters to find the ex- ons of his belief regarding sin, re- nce, faith, obedience and the other studied. However, even that is rge a field, and I for one will make view lesson a reading and study Philippian letter in the light of uarter's work.

A Group of Redeemed People is letter is written by an evangelis- issionary to the members of a h he had founded years before. are hints in the letter of more fre- t visits and letters than we know ing about from the brief account founding of the church. It was a ssful church, where the fruits of Spirit were being made manifest. e seems to have been little tendency eological argument, which was so ful in some other of the early hes. The practical side of religion emphasized, and it was their de- to minister to the poor and the per- ed. Paul does not evidence anxiety t them as about some others. They is "joy and crown." In words of beauty he reminds them of the essentials of the faith in which were making good progress, and them sound advice as to the prac- of Christianity in life.

is a heart-searching experience for cher or a pastor to read this letter ghtfully, asking himself or herself ch are the feelings of Christian love soul-winning interest which he or as in the class or in the parish. Our p of redeemed children of God, per- just a half-dozen boys or girls—are so precious to us as these to Paul? e we them "in our heart" and do we g after them in the tender mercies hrist Jesus"? If we have the spirit hrist, those whom he has committed our instruction in righteousness be our joy and crown.

pter I. Prayer and Abounding Faith

he first eleven verses are written in spirit of glad and thankful prayer. beautiful it is! Do we ever feel that in sitting down to write to d ones? Or have we grown at once prayerful and less appreciative? ntless sons and daughters ought at t to write a letter to mother or father inning with Phil. 1 : 3, 4: "I thank God upon all my remembrance of always in every supplication of e on behalf of you all making my plication with joy." It is a striking g that Paul could not keep his yers out of his letters. If one spends e time or thought in prayer there is likelihood of one's prayer-life rflowing into other lives. But a rich full prayer-life does reach out and hold of other lives with its spirit. d do you notice what it is he seeks them from the Father? And "this y, that your love may abound yet and more in knowledge and all cernment; so that ye may distinguish s that differ; that ye may be sin- and void of offense unto the day Christ; being filled with the fruits ighteousness." He is sure of their e! So he prays for their more in- gent and discriminating faith, and of course for the practical expression of their religion in conduct.

The second part of the chapter is filled with an equally joyous and eager expression of trust in God. He reassures them about his imprisonment, which is only another illustration of his doctrine that all things work together for good. Yes, the Gospel has made progress through his bonds! If that is so, why, faith anticipates only blessing in the changing scenes of life. The future is in God's hands. To die is gain, for it means to depart and be with Christ. Even if he is annoyed by some whose very preaching has an element of strife in it, he has faith to believe that Christ's name will vindicate itself, and he will rejoice that Christ is preached. So he closes the chapter with an appeal to his friends to justify his unbounded faith in them by their manner of life, their unity and fearless zeal.

Chapter II. Christ Our Pattern in Humility and Obedience

The second chapter is a great exhortation to unselfish obedience to the divine will. Paul points to the self-emptying Christ as the Christian's model. Every true Bible-lover should know by heart Phil. 2 : 5–11, beginning "have this mind in you which was also in Christ Jesus." The mind of Christ, according to Paul, was dominated by humble obedience to the will of the Father.

Then Paul does a very gracious thing. He speaks at length of two sincere followers of Christ whom they well knew. He points them out as living examples of the obedient faith which he is preaching. He did not arrogate to himself alone the task of setting the Christian example, but gladly recognized and commended it in others. I like to think of Timothy as the brilliant young ten-talent man who had laid all on the altar of service, and of Epaphroditus as a man with perhaps but one talent but equally devoted and blessed of God side by side with Timothy. The greatest of us and the least of us need the grace of God and the spirit of obedience.

Chapter III. Progress by Repentance and Persistency

Paul has now portrayed the Christian and his Lord, and he goes on to sketch the method of the Christian way. First of all, he places an absence of self-confidence, whether based on nationality, family or personal gifts. There must be sincere penitence for our faults and a great trust in Christ as Saviour and Captain. The power of his resurrection and the fellowship of his sufferings were the mighty elements in the building of the character of Paul himself, and he would have his friends know the secret of his success and share it. Counting all things but loss for Christ, the Christian must be indefatigable in pressing on in the Christian way. It is a path that brightens as we journey if we are faithful.

Chapter IV. Details of Christian Practice

As often, so here Paul closes with a summary of Christian graces presented in a way to encourage us to achieve them. He urges unity and forbearance upon Euodia and Syntyche. He gives the Philippians his watchword, "Rejoice in the Lord always." He counsels against anxiety, which can be avoided by thankfulness and by laying all our needs before God. He advises the pursuit of a thoughtful life in memorable phrase (Chapter 4 : 8), which also we should know by heart. Then in his tactful way he thanks them for the gift they sent and opens up to them the secret of contentment, without which some of the finest flowers of the Christian spirit cannot blossom:

"I have learned, in whatsoever state I am, therein to be content. I know how to be abased, and I know also how to abound: in everything and in all things I have learned the secret both to be filled and to be hungry, both to abound and to be in want. I can do all things in Him that strengtheneth me."

Borden's
EAGLE BRAND

June Nativity

portends a sympathetic nature and an abiding love of domesticity. Girls born between June 21 to July 21 also make excellent nurses.

The Next Generation of Mothers

The baby girl of today is the mother of tomorrow. Upon proper nourishment in infancy depends to a large extent her health and welfare in future years.

Since 1857, millions of babies have been raised on Borden's Eagle Brand—the standard infant food when Nature's own nourishment fails. Eagle Brand has brought them safely through 61 hot, sultry summers.

Prepared from rich, wholesome cow's milk, Eagle Brand is uniform everywhere and obtainable everywhere. At groceries and drug stores—economical—hygienically sealed.

BORDEN'S CONDENSED MILK CO.
Established 1857
Borden Building New York

GAIL BORDEN
EAGLE BRAND
Gail Borden
BORDEN'S CONDENSED MILK CO.
NEW YORK, U. S. A.

Send for new booklets
"The Message of the Months"
"Baby's Biography"

"Be sure the Eagle is on the Label"

FLOWERS FOR TARDY PLANTE

A bed of Cannas with a border of Dusty Miller planted in late June will flower profusely throughout September and until late frosts

Petunias succeed well under late p and will yield a glorious harvest colors until severe winter weath

A tangle of Asters, Nicotiana, Petunias and Marigolds, all thriving in spite of tardy planting

IN THE early spring many enthusiasts are prevented by various reasons from getting their planting activities under way, and at the coming of June deem it altogether too late in the season to accomplish any sort of a satisfactory flower display.

As a matter of fact, however, the month of June is not too late for planting or garden-making, and one may have a very desirable blossoming display from seed sown even the latter part of the month. Indeed, some varieties of plants germinate their seeds and thrive better when planted in the thoroughly warmed earth common to June than when seeded throughout the fickle, changing, climatic weather of April and May.

The Portulacca should never be seeded until June. Failure with this plant is more often due to the fact of too early planting than to any other cause. Portulacca needs even heat to germinate successfully, and when the seed is planted in the cold, wet ground of early spring the seed usually rots before germinating. The Portulacca is a brilliant, showy, low-growing, old-fashioned annual, possessing a host of good points recommending it to favor. It succeeds in almost any condition of soil, and when given an open, sunny location will spread a continual sheet of glowing, beautiful color from mid-July until frost. It is best to seed Portulacca where the plant is to remain if quick blossoming results are desired; the plants, of course, being checked in growth when transplanted.

Excellent results with Asters will follow late seeding. Indeed, it has been my experience again and again that Asters sown in June mature blossoms equally as early as those from May-planted seed. When the flowers are unfolded somewhat later, however, the effect produced is just as exquisite, and perhaps is far more appreciated because the display is delayed. Asters revel in sunshine, though they thrive well in partial shade. It is advisable to sow seed in a shaded location, transplanting when the little plants have attained their second pair of leaves. Care should be exercised during the operation that the seedlings be given protection from glaring sunshine, and that they be not allowed to suffer from lack of moisture. Watering after sundown is best for all seedlings.

Calendula, Marigold, Petunia, Escholtzia, Candytuft, Alyssum, Nicotiana, Pansy, Four-o'clock, Nasturtium, Mignonette, Cosmos, and Cornflower are all desirable, attractive annuals which may be safely seeded throughout the month of June, and any or all of them may be depended on to perfect a beautiful flower display throughout the coming summer months.

There are, besides these annual plants, four invaluable planting varieties belonging to the "bulbous" class that seem especially designed by nature to meet the needs of the tardy planter: Tuberose, Gladiolus, Dahlia and Canna. Bulbs of the Tuberose set in June give far better results than when planted earlier in the season; this plant, like the Portulacca, needing even temperature to perfect strong root-growth to mature its wealth of blossoms. The exquisite flowers, unfolded in September, are wax- appearance and are heavily w with that intoxicatingly sweet p that wins for them ever a covete in most planting schemes. The of this plant are inexpensive. should be planted about six deep in a sunny though sheltere tion.

The Gladiolus is wonderfully beauty and variety of color, an not be equaled, perhaps, for flowers. Gladiolus bulbs ma planted any time throughou month and indeed well into the of July with perfect assurance gorgeous flower showing will foll August and September. Such should be set from six to twelve deep and a foot apart, and wh possible given good, rich soil a open, sunny location.

The Dahlia is yet another v that is better planted in June earlier in the season. It will t better for late planting and yield a h harvest of blossoms. This plant is no longe stricted to the small range of color common to th fashioned type, but under the careful cultivati recent years possesses a richness of color and va of form that make it a valued factor in plantin every kind. Dahlia bulbs should rest a foot de the soil and occupy either a sunny or partially sh location. Dahlias revel in porous, rich soil and erous moisture.

The Canna is a grand variety for late plantin quiring the same treatment as the Dahlia, wit exception that its bulbs need be set no more tha inches under the soil. The Canna attains a gr of some four to six feet if given rich soil and full shine, and makes a stunning color showing throug the fall months.

In providing all of these grand flowering varie evidently Dame Nature was determined that no should be left out, so take heart, tardy planter, on your garden togs, and begin planting.

Adeline Thayer Thomso

A YEAR OF AIR MAIL

THERE has passed a year of Aerial Mail Service between New York, Philadelphia and Washington, and regular service over a second aerial route, that between Cleveland and Chicago. One year of air mail has demonstrated the feasibility of the plan from the commercial point of view as well as others.

What was so lately a marvel is now an everyday affair. The ships ply their way through the skies every day but Sunday with the regularity of clockwork, and rain, snow or sleet, thunder and lightning may come and blizzards may tie up traffic on terra firma, but the Air Mail pilots keep to their course.

Though the war in the air resulted in many deaths among our aviators abroad and in American camps, the Aerial Mail Service has been singularly fortunate, for not a single fatality has occurred in the entire first year of operation among the regular members of the staff. Recently one or two accidents occurred, but the avia were so skilful in management of machines as to avoid serious injury and now back in the service.

One of the six original mailplanes which have been used in all kinds of weather for a year

The fact that the six original mailpla used, with their engines, have survived year's service, flying in all kinds of weat is a significant fact, and shows someth about the commercial feasibility of plan. These planes flew in storm and s shine, rain, hail or snow, and in some v high winds, and the aviators often h exciting experiences in passing throu violent thunder storms. The postal service closes its first year of operati with a record of 200 flying hours in the l of several of these planes and 14,000 mi of flying per plane. The service transport by air a grand total of over 200,000 poun of mail, or about 8,000,000 letters. T New York to Washington flight has be reduced from 3 hours 10 minutes to 1 ho 58 minutes.

Edward Hale Brus

THEODORE ROOSEVELT

THE MAN AS I KNEW HIM

By FERDINAND COWLE IGLEHART, D.D.

of the Editorial Staff of the Christian Herald

am for the square deal"

DOCTOR IGLEHART has written for the Christian Herald (to publish in book form) his appreciation of Theodore Roosevelt, from an intimate friendship of many years. The Doctor cooperated with the Colonel back in the strenuous days when Colonel Roosevelt, as Police Commissioner of New York City, made the saloons obey the law on Sunday closing. Dr. Iglehart has given a valuable and entertaining work and honors in this appreciation the memory of a great personality who has left a warm spot in the hearts of all Americans.

Dr. Iglehart has written on Col. Theodore oosevelt as he knew him The Author says his preface that he counts the intimate nd personal friendship of Col. Roosevelt for ie last twenty-four years as one of the high- t honors, joys and blessings of his life. In iis book he tells a fascinating story of the areer of Col. Roosevelt lany of the Colonel's lifelong friends have ladly furnished the Author with addresses be included in the work on Theodore oosevelt, among whom may be mentioned:

FROM EARLY BOYHOOD TO HIS DEATH

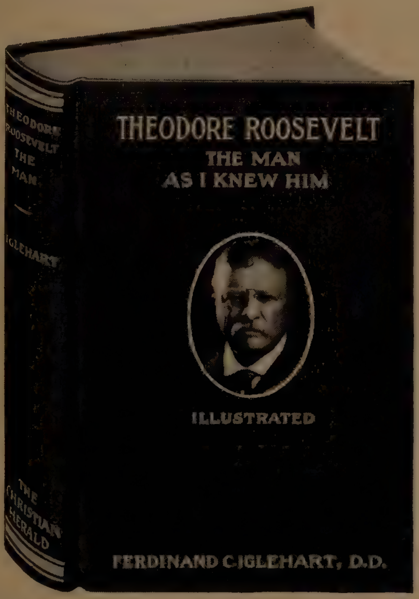
Dr. Albert Shaw, Editor of the Review of Reviews.
Hon. Josephus Daniels, Secretary of the Navy.
Judge Charles E. Hughes, late U. S. Supreme Court.
Hon. Chauncey M. Depew, late U. S. Senator.
Bishop Luther B. Wilson of New York City.
Dr. Lyman Abbott, Editor of the Outlook.
Will H. Hays, Chairman of the Republican National Committee and others.



THE BOOK will be printed on fine book paper and will include 16 pages of illustrations on plate paper. There will be nearly 400 pages, in 31 chapters. The binding will be fine cloth embossed in gold. Size 5x7¼ in.

HIS was the Strenuous Life of Student, Author, Traveler, Soldier, Sportsman, Athlete, Explorer, Statesman, Orator, Politician and President.

AGENTS WANTED

THE CHRISTIAN HERALD will be very glad to appoint agents to represent this timely book. Many members of the Christian Herald family will know of some worthy persons who could act as agents (men or women). Tell them to write for liberal terms and handsome agents' outfit and start taking orders right away.

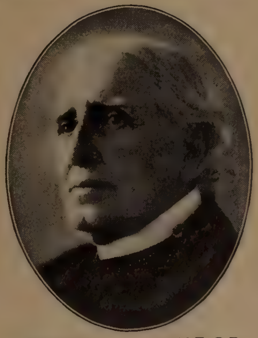
Many are making a success of it now.

There Is a Place in Every Home for This Beautiful Memorial Volume

The Best Loved Man Since Lincoln

THEODORE ROOSEVELT Was The Man Who Told the World how our Great West became the Heart of Our Country. He was the man who put the fighting edge on Our American Navy. He possessed a most wonderful element of power and applied it most admirably.

THE CHRISTIAN HERALD was four years old when Theodore Roosevelt began his public life. The two have run parallel for thirty-seven years, incarnating the same family virtues, home-spun honesty, broad charity, faith in the Bible, activity in the Christian life, and both devoted to the public good. The author of this book emphasizes the mental, moral and religious qualities that made the hero good and great, and the unselfish devotion of his life to his country. We ask our subscribers who, irrespective of denominational creed or political affiliation, count Mr. Roosevelt as a model, to help us in the widest possible circulation of this volume by sending for a copy of the first edition. Thus our whole Christian Herald Family will be enlisted in this message of morals, patriotism and religion.



FERDINAND C. IGLEHART, D.D.

SEND NO MONEY NOW — We do not want any money now. This splendid book will be ready for delivery shortly. We would, however, like to have a post card from as many Christian Herald Readers as possible stating that they will take a copy when ready at the price of $1.50 a copy, postpaid. This will give us a good idea of how many copies to make for the first edition. We will notify all who order when the edition will be ready.

THE CHRISTIAN HERALD, - - BIBLE HOUSE, - - NEW YORK

"I was astounded at my new power over men and women. People actually went out of their way to do things for me they seemed EAGER TO PLEASE ME."

The Secret of Making People Like You

"Getting people to like you is the quick road to success—it's more important than ability," says this man. It surely did wonders for him. How he does it—a simple method which anyone can use instantly.

ALL the office was talking about it, and we were wondering which one of us would be the lucky man.

There was an important job to be filled—as Assistant-to-the-President. According to the general run of salaries in the office, this one would easily pay from $7,000 to $10,000 a year.

The main requisite, as we understood it, was striking personality and the ability to meet even the biggest men in their offices, their clubs and their homes on a basis of absolute equality. This the firm considered of even more importance than knowledge of the business.

YOU know just what happens when news of this sort gets around an office. The boys got to picking the man among themselves. They had the choice all narrowed down to two men Harrison and myself. That was the way I felt about it, too. Harrison was big enough for the job, and could undoubtedly make a success of it. But, personally, I felt that I had the edge on him in lots of ways. And I was sure that the firm knew it, too.

Never shall I forget my thrill of pleasure when the president's secretary came into my office with a cheery smile, looked at me meaningly, handed me a bulletin and said, "Mr. Frazer, here is the news about the new Assistant-to-the-President." There seemed to be a new note of added respect in her attitude toward me. I smiled my appreciation as she left my desk.

At last I had come into my own! Never did the sun shine so brightly as on that morning, and never did it seem so good to be alive! These were my thoughts as I gazed out of the window, seeing not the hurrying throngs, but vivid pictures of my new position flashing before me. And then for a further joyous thrill I read the bulletin. It said, "Effective January 1, Mr. Henry J. Peters, of our Cleveland office, will assume the duties of Assistant-to-the-President at the home office."

PETERS! Peters!—surely it couldn't be Peters! Why, this fellow Peters was only a branch-office salesman. . . . Personality! Why, he was only five feet four inches high, and had no more personality than a mouse. Stack him up against a big man and he'd look and act like an office boy. I knew Peters well and there was nothing to him, nothing at all.

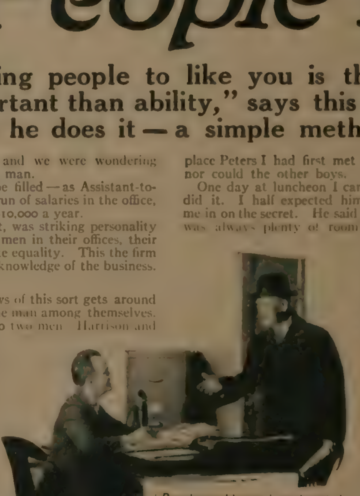
January the first came and Peters assumed his new duties. All the boys were openly hostile to him. Naturally, I felt very keenly about it, and didn't exactly go out of my way to make things pleasant for him—not exactly!

But our open opposition didn't seem to bother Peters. He went right on with his work and began to make good. Soon I noticed that despite my feeling against him, I was secretly beginning to admire him. He was winning over the other boys, too. It wasn't long before we all buried our little hatchets and palled up with Peters.

The funny thing about it was the big hit he made with the people we did business with. I never saw anything like it. They would come in and write in and telephone in to the firm and praise Peters to the skies. They insisted on doing business with him, and gave him orders of a size that made us dizzy to look at. And offers of positions!—why, Peters had almost as many fancy-figure positions offered to him as a dictionary has words.

WHAT I could not get into my mind was how a little, unassuming, ordinary-to-look-at chap like Peters could make such an impression with everyone—especially with influential men. He seemed to have an uncanny influence over people. The masterly Peters of today was an altogether different man from the commonplace Peters I had first met years ago. I could not figure it out, nor could the other boys.

One day at luncheon I came right out and asked Peters how he did it. I half expected him to evade. But he didn't. He let me in on the secret. He said he was not afraid to do it because there was always plenty of room at the top.



"People would come in and write in and 'phone in and praise Peters to the skies . . . he was showered with offers of fancy figure positions."

What Peters told me acted on my mind in exactly the same way as when you stand on a hill and look through binocular glasses at objects in the far distance. Many things I could not see before suddenly leaped into my mind with startling clearness. A new sense of power surged through me. And I felt the urge to put it into action.

Within a month I was getting remarkable results. I had suddenly become popular. Business men of importance who had formerly given me only a passing nod of acquaintance, suddenly showed a desire for my friendship. I was invited into the most select social circles. People—even strangers—actually went out of their way to do things for me. At first I was astounded at my new power over men and women. Not only could I get them to do what I wanted them to do, but they actually anticipated my wishes and seemed eager to please me. But let me tell you some of my experiences:

One of our biggest customers had a grievance against the firm. He held off payment of a big bill and switched to one of our competitors. I was sent to see him. He met me like a cornered tiger. A few words and I calmed him. Inside of fifteen minutes he was showering me with apologies. He gave me a check in full payment, another big order, and promised to continue giving us all his business

For certain reasons it became necessary for the firm to obtain a signed letter from a prominent public man. Three of our men had tried, and failed. Then I was given the job. I felt I had been made the "goat." But I got the signed letter, and with it an inside tip which enabled us to land a prize order about which our competitors are still guessing and wondering.

Then trouble sprang up at one of our factories. The men talked strike. Things looked ugly. I was sent to straighten it out. On the eve of a general walkout, I pacified the men and headed off the strike. And not only this, but ever since then this factory has led all our other plants in production.

I could tell you dozens of similar instances, but they all tell the same story—the ability to make people like you, believe what you want them to believe, and to do what you want them to do. I take no personal credit for what I have done. All the credit I give to the method Peters told me about. We have told it to lots of our friends, and it has enabled them to do just as remarkable things as Peters and I have done.

Which reminds me: One of my wife's close friends moved to another town where she was a stranger. My wife of course knew of my method. She told it to her friend with the idea that it might be of assistance to her in meeting new people. It helped her so wonderfully that in a very short time she won the close friendship of many of the "best families" in the town. Everyone wonders how she did it. But WE know.

BUT YOU want to know what method I used to do all these remarkable things. It is this: You know that everyone doesn't think alike. What one likes another dislikes. What pleases one offends another. And what offends one pleases another. Well, there's your cue. You can make an instant hit with anyone if you say the things they want you to say and act the way they want you to act. Do this and they will surely like you, and believe in you, and will go miles out of their way to PLEASE YOU.

You can do this easily by knowing certain simple things. Written on every man, woman and child are signs, as clearly and as distinctly as though they were in letters a foot high, which show you from one exactly what to say and to do to please them—to get the what you want them to believe—to think as you think—t what you want them to do.

Knowing these simple signs is the whole secret of you want out of life—of making friends, of business and so ment. Every great leader uses this method. That is leader. Use it yourself and you will quickly become a lea can stop you. And you will want to use it if for no other to protect yourself against others.

WHAT Peters told me at luncheon that day was this Blackford's 'Reading Character at Sight.'" I did how I learned to do all the remarkable things I have told

You have heard of Dr. Blackford the Master Charac Many concerns will not employ a man without first gettin ford to pass on him. Concerns such as Westinghouse Manufacturing Company, Baker Vawter Company, S Company and many others pay Dr. Blackford large an advice on dealing with human nature.

So great was the demand for these services that Dr. Bla not even begin to fill her engagements. So Dr. Black plained the method in a simple seven-lesson course entitle Character at Sight." Even a half hour's reading of this course will give you an insight into human nature and people which will surprise you.

Such confidence have the publishers in Dr. Blackfor "Reading Character at Sight," that they will gladly sen on approval. Send no money. Merely fill in and mail The complete course will go to you instantly on approval prepaid. Look it over thoroughly. See if it lives up to made for it. If you do not want to keep it, then return transaction is closed. And if you decide to keep it—as you —then merely remit Five Dollars in full payment.

Remember, you take no risk, you assume no obligation. course goes to you on approval. You've everything to ga to lose. So mail the coupon NOW, while this remarka mains open.

"In a very short time she won the close f ship of many of the 'best families' in

FREE EXAMINATION CO

Independent Corpora

Publishers of The Independent We

Dept. B-356, 119 West 40th Street, N

You may send me Dr. Blackford's C seven lessons entitled "Reading Char Sight." I will either remail the course within five days after its receipt, or send in full payment of the course.

Name. . . . .

Address. . . . .

. . . . Christian Herald

1-cent stamp on this notice, and it will be placed in the hands of our soldiers, sailors or marines.
NO WRAPPING -NO ADDRESS
A. S. BURLESON, Postmaster General.

Christian Herald

$2.50 a Year NEW YORK, JUNE 28, 1919 Ten Cents a Copy

A baby's first smile is the dew on a flower
That opens its eyes in the dawn's golden hour.

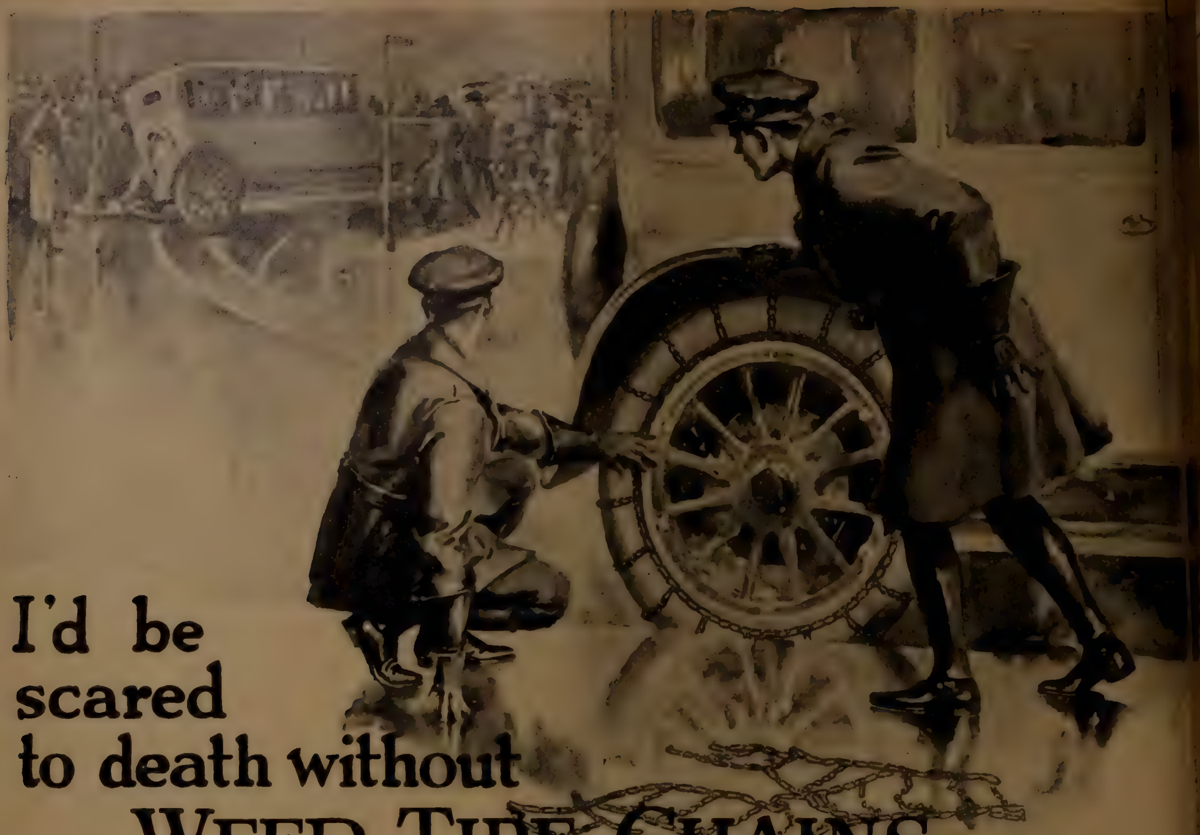
Vol. 42. No. 26. Published Weekly at New York City by The Christian Herald. Copyright, 1919, The Christian Herald.

FOR THE MAKING OF MEN
By Hon. Franklin K. Lane

THE DOUGHBOY'S POINT OF VIEW
By Margaret E. Sangster

OTHER SPECIAL FEATURES: Persecution of Missionaries in Korea —How One Community Found Itself—Prohibition Movement in Japan

Entered as Second Class Matter, January 25, 1909, at the Post Office at New York, under the act of March 3, 1879.



I'd be scared to death without WEED TIRE CHAINS

Take Warning

Put on your WEED TIRE CHAINS
When the roads and pavements are slippery and uncertain.

"When I've got them on the tires I know where I'm at — but when I leave them off I don't know what's going to happen.

"Look at that fellow over there—see! He didn't put on his chains. Took a chance—thought he was some careful driver. He got what was coming to him —a dished wheel and a nice big bill for repairs. Lucky nobody was hurt.

"Did you ever notice that us fellows who know our jobs—taxi drivers and paid chauffeurs—hardly ever have an accident because we have learned to be careful and never take chances. But look out for the average driver. He is inclined to be "stuck on" his driving. Hits it up—cuts corners—neglects his brakes—doesn't anticipate a skid. He gets into trouble himself and other road users don't feel safe when he is about.

"I'd be scared to death on slippery, greasy pavements and muddy roads if I didn't have Weed Tire Chains. Bet your life I don't take any chances.

"At the first drop of rain I haul them out of the tool box and put them on all four tires. Then I'm dead sure of myself—I know where I get off at.

"Weed Chains prevent an awful lot of accidents"

EVERY "WEED" IS GUARANTEED

American Chain Company, Inc.

BRIDGEPORT ACC CONNECTICUT

In Canada: Dominion Chain Company, Limited, Niagara Falls, Ontario

Largest Chain Manufacturers in the World

The Complete Chain Line—All Types, All Sizes, All Finishes—From Plumbers' Safety Chain to Ships' Anchor Chain

THE NAME WEED ON EVERY HOOK

THE CHRISTIAN HERALD
AN ILLUSTRATED NEWS WEEKLY FOR THE HOME

SUBSCRIPTION, $2.50 PER ANNUM
PUBLISHED 52 TIMES A YEAR

GRAHAM PATTERSON
Publisher

GEORGE H. SANDISON
Managing Editor

VOL. 42—NO. 26. PRICE 10 CENTS
OFFICES: BIBLE HOUSE, NEW YORK

Across the Atlantic in Sixteen Hours

THE air above the sea, tamed by American Naval fliers has been ered and subdued ritish officers. Cap- John Alcock, pilot, Lieut. Arthur W. n, navigator, land- their two-engined rs-Vimy biplane at en, Ireland, June 15 .40 A.M., British nertime, 16 hours 12 minutes after ng Newfoundland, land miles at about miles an hour.

hen the London y Mail offered a of $50,000 for the non-stop transatlan- flight, the longest stop flight of the perfect machine nade was scarce half distance from New- dland to Ireland.

The triumphant Vickers-Vimy bomber, which spanned the North Atlantic in a single flight

© Keystone Photo News

every flier since the days of the Wrights has seen in the broad bosom of the ntic a standing challenge that would some day be taken. The game attempt arry Hawker and the successful flight of the NC-4 focused .the attention of world on Newfoundland, where Alcock and Brown—the latter born in Britain merican parents—were busily putting together their big machine. But Al- k and Brown were not alone in the limelight. Captain Raynham, whose Martin- plane was wrecked in the attempt to dispute the crossing with Hawker and ve, his plane rebuilt, was anxiously awaiting a new navigator. Major Brack- principal pilot of the giant four-engined Handley-Page, had run a neck-and- race with Alcock in the setting up of his machine and was about ready to t; and two other machines were en route from England.

or a week Newfoundland and the world awoke in daily expectation that the set would see either Alcock or Brackley awing. Both had had their trial flights, machines were tuned up, only the weather was contrary. But Alcock chafed er the restraint of caution, and on June 14, in spite of a forty-knot westerly , which forced him to take off up-hill and at a most serious disadvantage, he ged and pleaded with the representative of the builders, declaring that it better to be defeated by a mishap than by failing to try. At last he prevailed r all objectors, the machine was set for the start, and then they were off, at 10 P.M., New York time.

eading directly into the gale, the stanch machine slowly began to climb. It red the edge of the starting field at only 100 feet and disappeared over a little ll. They thought she was down, but Alcock was making the fight of his life using his skill as a pilot, all his resource and wit, and soon he was 200 feet up, ile the gale tore and twisted at the gallant plane. Then for eleven minutes he out of sight and then, out over Conception Bay, he gained altitude enough to turn and was off on his course with the gale on his tail helping him along at forty knots every hour. He headed straight for Galway Bay in old Ireland.

The watchers saw the daring Vimy disappear. Then followed an afternoon and a night of deep anxiety. Although the machine carried wireless, the latter had proven defective in tests, and apparently failed completely. Not a word was received as the long hours passed. The week of anxiety about Hawker, in which he was practically given up for lost, was well in mind, and the world waited anxiously for word from air or sea or land to tell the tale of the latest adventure.

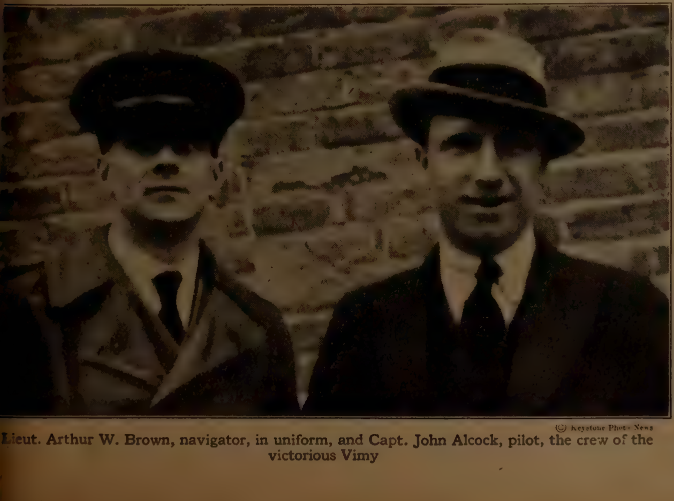
And at late breakfast-time on Sunday, June 15, the word came to the British. The wireless station at Clifden sent the news that the voyagers were safe in the bog near the station. At first, still remembering the early reports of Hawker's success, Britain doubted and hoped it was true; but official confirmation soon swept doubt away. The King sent his congratulations to Alcock and Brown, and London and Manchester, the latter Alcock's native town, prepared receptions commensurate with the feat performed.

The trip was a long fight with fog and mist in which favorable winds were about the only assistance vouchsafed by nature. For the rest, it was a battle between adverse conditions and indomitable human will. Up to 11,000 feet they climbed to get above the fog, and once they found themselves upside down near the sea.

Captain Alcock thus told the story of the flight in a message to the Daily Mail:

"We have had a terrible journey. The wonder is that we are here at all. We scarcely saw the sun or the moon or the stars. For hours we saw none of them.

"The fog was very dense and at times we had to descend to within 300 feet of the sea. For four hours the machine was covered in a sheet of ice, caused by frozen sleet. At another time the fog was so dense that my speed indicator did not work, and for a few seconds it was very alarming.



© Keystone Photo News

Lieut. Arthur W. Brown, navigator, in uniform, and Capt. John Alcock, pilot, the crew of the victorious Vimy

"We looped the loop, I do believe, and did a very steep spiral. We did some very comic stunts, for I had no sense of the horizon.

"Winds were favorable all the way, northwest, and at times southwest. We said in Newfoundland we would do the trip in sixteen hours, but we never thought we should. An hour and a half before we saw land we had no certain idea where we were, but we believed we were at Galway or thereabouts.

"Our delight in seeing Eastal Island and Turbot Island, five miles west of Clifden, was great. People did not know who we were when we landed and thought we were scouts on the lookout for the Vimy.

"We encountered no unforeseen conditions. We did not suffer from cold or exhaustion, except when looking over the side. Then the sleet chewed bits out of our faces. We drank coffee and ale and ate sandwiches and chocolate. The flight has shown that the Atlantic flight is practicable. It should be done not with an aeroplane or a seaplane but with a flying boat.

"We had plenty of reserve fuel, using only two-thirds of our supply. The only thing that upset me was to see the machine get damaged."

Coming in sight of the wireless tower at Clifden out of the fog in which he had been flying, Captain Alcock circled about the wireless aerials, seeking a place to land unharmed. He saw what appeared to be a smooth stretch of meadow and landed to find it a bog. The machine partially buried itself in the soggy ground. Brown was dazed by the shock of landing and Alcock was temporarily deafened. The crew of the wireless station rushed to the assistance of the fliers.

While all England was hailing the newest heroes of the peace, in the war taught conquerors of the air, the British and American Navies were preparing for the transatlantic flight of the great rigid dirigible the R. 34. It was expected that she would leave England about June 20, landing at Mineola flying field. She will not be able to remain long in America, as the Navy has no hangars big enough to house her.

PEACE OR WAR BY JUNE 23

GERMANY, on June 16, faced the great decision. The reply of the Allied and associated powers to Germany's plea that the peace offered her was one of might and not justice, was in her hands. There were some concessions, but in the main the original Treaty stood and Germany could sign and have peace, or refuse to sign and have war. General Foch had all the plans ready for an immediate advance into Germany of Allied forces on Monday, June 23, if Germany should default. Both he and General Pershing were on the Rhine on June 16. But all the evidence pointed to a prompt signing after the submission of the final Treaty to the German National Assembly at Weimar.

In completing the reply to the Germans, the Council of Four was augmented by one, the addition of Baron Makino, making it a Council of Five. The changes agreed upon were reported to have been largely in line with President Wilson's earlier suggestions, but to have been the result of the application of Lloyd George's moderated point of view to Clemenceau's stubborn adherence to the original agreement. The changes made in the Treaty were said to affect so many paragraphs, the intent of most of them being clarifications of the previous drafts. There was not time enough for a complete rewriting, so the Germans were given an original copy with the changes written in in red ink. With the modified copy of the treaty there was handed to the Germans a covering note, signed by Clemenceau which answered the various German contentions point by point. The Germans were told in effect that they failed to understand the position in which Germany stood before the public opinion of the world which considered her an international criminal.

The German delegates were notified that they had until June 23 to sign the treaty and there was a feeling of confidence in Allied circles that the Treaty would be signed within the period allotted. The stage was being set for the final ceremony in the Hall of Mirrors at Versailles. While the changes being made in the Treaty were not made public in detail, it was announced that the final Treaty would be published on the day of presentation to the Germans. The rewriting of the Treaty made the draft already published in this country practically worthless. It was suggested that the changes to be made would provide for an earlier report, within four months, on the total amount of reparation to be paid by Germany, and that a provision would be made that the interests of German industry should not be subordinate to the payment of reparation. It was also suggested that provision had been made either for the withholding of Northern Silesia from Poland or for a plebiscite under Allied supervision.

Germany's plea for admission to the League of Nations was reported to have been answered by a provision for her admission in October, in time to participate in the first meeting of delegates, provided she had then established a stable government, signed the Peace Treaty, and loyally executed its provisions.

The situation in Austria, on June 12, indicated that there was a possibility that the present Austrian republic would give place on June 15 to a Bolshevist government. Austria was said to be completely discouraged by the terms of the Peace Treaty offered her and to be negotiating with Hungary.

German Methodists, in convention at Berlin, on June 13, adopted an appeal to their American and British brethren asking their cooperation in behalf of a peace in keeping with the fourteen points.

© Western Newspaper Union

Fair telegraph strikers picketing the Western Union headquarters in New York City

The Week in the World's News

FEDERATION OF LABOR CONVENTION. Whatever may be the forces of discontent and the numbers of the proponents of radical and untried theories, America has in the American Federation of Labor one certain and tried element for steadiness and progress. Although there are radicals in the ranks of the Federation, the leaders, Samuel Gompers, Frank Morrison and others have always been able to keep the great organization of American labor in the path of conservative effort to win necessary rights by legal means by working within our laws.

The executive committee of the Federation in its report declared the Peace Treaty not perfect, but the best yet produced, and endorsed the League of Nations Covenant, expressed satisfaction with the labor section of the Treaty, but recognized in it a compromise between American standards and foreign necessities, and condemned militarism. The report recommended a democratically organized militia and government ownership of railroads, and urged the prohibition of immigration for two years and restriction thereafter to the number that American industry can assimilate. The report declared that it was "essential that the workers should have a voice in determining the laws within industry and commerce equivalent to the voice they have as citizens in determining legislative enactments which govern them."

The total membership of the unions in the Federation was given as 3,260,000, an increase during the year of 826,449. A broadening of the field of the Federation from the purely operative trades to the quasi-executive and brain workers was evidenced by the admission to the Federation of the Federal Employees Union, which includes scientists and government experts. Teachers and journalists were already affiliated. Prohibition was taken up early and the dry element proved unexpectedly large the resolutions for light wine and 2¾% beer being adopted by a vote of about 20 to 4, with the Western delegates from prohibition States standing firmly against the personal liberty argument. On June 14, Mr. Gompers was heard by the Senate Committee on Judiciary. He declared light wine and beer necessary to a contented labor situation, expressing the belief that absolute aridity would develop a large measure of discontent. For whiskey he had no good word, but he pleaded for such a modification of prohibition in the legislation for the enforcement of the prohibition amendment as would permit the lighter liquors. On the same day the delegates from the convention, 10,000 strong, with bands and delegates from New York, Baltimore and other eastern cities, flag bedecked and marching to national airs, paraded to the Capitol in Washington to give visible embodiment to Mr. Gompers' protest.

On June 13 a resolution was introduced calling for a ballot of local unions "to ascertain the sentiment" upon the question of recognition of the Russian Bolshevist Government. The resolution declared that the workers of Russia were endeavoring to establish a government of, by and for the workers, and that the capitalists of the whole world were seeking to annul their efforts by every conceivable underhanded method. The resolution was expected to develop a heated controversy.

A great move forward, toward wider liberty and a purer democracy was made on June 13 when the convention voted unanimously to admit the 2,000,000 negro workers of the nation to the various local unions on equal terms with the whites, and to recognize unions of negro workmen. The remarkable record of the negro soldiers in France was held to have given the last necessary proof of the right of the black citizen to every advantage and opportunity enjoyed by his white fellow-citizen.

AMERICANS CHASE VILLISTAS. Villa forces or 10 occupied Guadalupe, Mexico, 32 miles east Paso, Texas. The Villa forces, 1400 to 1600 stror well equipped, were reported to be planning an a on Juarez across the Rio Grande from El Paso. were a few skirmishes on June 13 and on Ju Villa forces entered Juarez. The battle cont ll day, many bullets landing in El Paso. In or abate the danger 3600 American troops, late the crossed the border and drove the Villistas away Juarez, returning in 24 hours with seven priso One American was wounded.

TO SEPARATE LEAGUE AND TREATY. Senator of Pennsylvania on June 10 introduced into the S a resolution which declared the Senate was d concerned over the draft of the treaty of peace impressed by the fact that its provisions app calculated to force upon us a far-reaching cove inimical to our free institutions. That it was its pose to make us part of the League of Nations un plan which the people of the United States h neither had time to examine nor opportunity to press an opinion upon or to form a deliberate j ment. The resolution asked that the treaty of p be so drawn as to leave the question of the accept of the League of Nations optional, and pledged if the freedom and peace of Europe were again thr ened by any power or combination of powers, Ame would come to the rescue. The Knox resolution held to serve notice on the Peace Confer that the American Senate would probably ratify at once a treaty containing the League Nations covenant. Some Republican Senators h opposed the League, others desire a nation-w referendum on it.

Senator Knox's resolution was reported favora to the Senate on June 12 by a vote in the commit of 8 to 7. As reported the resolution was without final paragraph, pledging the United States to part pate with her present Allies in resisting a future thr against the peace of world. The resolution w received in the Senate a placed on the calendar discussion beginning Ju 16th. The line up in favor the resolution and against was not entirely along par lines, Senator Hitchco claiming that at least eig Republicans were against while Senator Knox was co fident that as many Dem crats would join with t Republicans to pass it. was evident that the resol tion would not be passed e cept after an extended deba and that it would not com to a vote before the signing the Peace Treaty, if Senat Hitchcock could prevent i Failing to bring the resol tion to a vote friends of th resolution were expected t attempt to enforce closur for which they have n enough votes, but which, i the attempt, might develo the relative strength of th friends and opponents of th League of Nations. Fai ing to achieve a record vot by this means, those oppose to the resolution were re ported to be considering th preparing of another Roun Robin which, if it bore the sig nature of more than one-thir of the members of the Senate would be at least an indicatio that the Peace Treaty includ ing the League of Nations covenant would meet ob stacles in the Senate before its ratification. Chairma Hayes of the Republican National Committee, o June 13, declared the question of peace and the League of Nations was an American issue too great to be a partisan issue and he pledged the Republican party t approach the question from the standpoint of th highest patriotism.

WILL HELP IRELAND. The United States Senate having passed a resolution requesting the Peace dele gation to use every effort to secure a hearing for the leaders of the present Irish republic, it was reported in Paris on June 11 that President Wilson would do all he could informally to secure presentation of Ireland's cause to the Peace Conference.

The American Commission on Irish Independence, authorized by the Irish Race Convention at Philadelphia, who went to Ireland at Lloyd George's request to study conditions, reported that within the last few months ten citizens had been killed b

Continued on page 730

FOR THE MAKING OF MEN

The Job for the Man

LEXANDER D. CHIQUOINE, JR.

TODAY army transports at Atlantic Coast ports are unloading ten thousand soldiers; the same number have been disembarking daily for and the same number will step on the f "God's country" every day until And from forty-five hundred to five and of each ten thousand comes the ion: "Where do we go from here? e can we get a job?"

the same time there are thousands of oyers, from the proprietor of the little r store and the small farmer to the industrial plant, who are ready and ng to employ returning fighters. To the question is: "How can we get in with the kind of men we want?"

ere probably are enough employment ings in the United States now to take of all our released soldiers, sailors and workers—and each day new employ- t opportunities are being created by resumption of peace-time industries. the problem of placing the several mil- fighting men and munitions workers is greatest problem before this country, use the individual man and the par- lar job must be brought together. The must be found as rapidly and in the e great numbers as the men return.

in one center there are several thousand men looking for work, although an- r has a shortage of labor, you have ertheless a serious unemployment situ- n. In our great industrial centers in mal times large numbers of men, willing ork, have walked the streets in fruitless ch of it, while jobs went begging be- se the men did not know of the existence of these jobs, or rather of their loca- n. And now, with 300,000 soldiers nthly returning to their home shores with as many more war workers being charged, the situation frequently vailing in pre-war days is many es amplified.

ur employment problem, then, is gely one of redistribution of labor. requires the most intensive can- s of every community for immedi- employment openings. It re- ires transfers of labor, using the m in its broadest sense, from an ersupplied section to one where rkers are needed. It requires a id and comprehensive gathering information as to the localities to ich workers may go and find em- yment.

Through the United States Em- yment Service of the Department Labor and with the cooperation the welfare organizations, the urches, and other voluntary agen- s interested in aiding the return- g fighter and munitions worker, the vernment is solving the problem. get in touch with the soldier who ust find new work is the simplest rt of its task; to get in touch with e employment opening is the most ficult. The soldiers' end of the tional employment program is rela- vely easy because the United States mployment Service is now auto- atically in touch with virtually ery man who needs assistance to job.

The soldiers' carding system which as been in operation about two onths, has the effect of making ore difficult the other side of the lacement operation—the reaching f employers. This automatic and omplete contact with the great number of men who ust find work—from 1,000 to 10,000 cards are eing received and distributed by the Service daily —makes it necessary that a corresponding number f employment openings be located, and while the oldier is required to fill his questionnaire card, the mployer can be reached only through appeal and olicitation.

It is necessary to keep before each community the ecessity for coordinating and centralizing all public nd private efforts to help soldiers to employment hrough the medium of these offices and bureaus. hen the armistice was signed and the initial demobil- ation orders were issued, it was patent that much arm would result if each government department and elfare or other organization started to place soldiers ndependently. Placements on religious, fraternal or other lines would have caused duplication and conflict of effort, and confusion to both employers and soldiers.

Increase in the percentage of men needing help—and there are still a million men in France—makes more imperative than ever the continuance and extension of the work. When the Sixty-fifth Congress adjourned last March without passing the Deficiency and other appropriation bills, the United States Employment Service found itself unable to finance more than 50 of the 700 offices it was then operating, and those of its emergency soldiers' bureaus which were not supported by community funds. But while the representatives of the people had failed to provide for the machinery that was placing the returning soldiers, the people themselves saw to it that the Service was not seriously curtailed, and within a week outside funds were raised to keep most of the offices of the service in operation until the expected extra session of Congress could act.

The present Congress is being asked to appropriate the necessary funds for the continuance of this national effort to help our returning men to employment, and the average American citizen who has had or has some friend or relative in the army takes it as a matter of course that the money will be forthcoming. Yet there is an effort now being made to prevent the granting of a single cent by the government to help put the men who risked all back into profitable employment. This opposition comes from private fee-charging employment agencies, to whom the jobless soldier and war worker mean a fat revenue—the foulest kind of profiteering and exploitation of the men who made America safe—and from a reactionary element among employers which maintains "blacklist" employment agencies—that is, agencies which endeavor to see that a union worker cannot obtain employment simply because of his union affiliations.

In the work of the United States Employment Service the country has its best bulwark against an invasion of Bolshevism from Europe. It is undoubtedly true that America as a whole has too much "horse sense" to be a fertile field for Europe's social sickness; but widespread unemployment breeds misery, and misery fosters Bolshevism and other perverted forms of social unrest.

We have had clearing-houses for money and commodities, but until eighteen months ago there was none for labor. Truly, as Secretary of Labor Wilson recently said, "It is time to be as much concerned with the human being as with the products of the human being." The growth of the fee employment agency system is a striking demonstration of the need for a public system. For years many millions of dollars have been annually reaped by private agents from men and women needing employment and from employers needing labor. But why should a man or woman have to pay for the privilege of getting work?

Besides the human aspect of the question, a public employment system, free to employer and employee, placing workers in the jobs which they are qualified to fill and where they will stick, will increase the industrial efficiency of America. Our efficiency has been greatly handicapped by our enormous labor turnover—the shifting of labor from one job to another; and unscrupulous fee-charging agencies have deliberately encouraged this shifting, for the more persons seeking employment and the oftener the change, the larger are their returns. Some agencies make secret arrangements with foremen and others with the power to hire and fire so that after a man has paid his fee and been placed in a job he is discharged and forced again to seek the private agency and pay another fee.

It is said that in 1917 the private employment agencies in New York State alone made $6,000,000. Contrast with this the fact that during the last eighteen months the United States Employment Service placed between 4,000,000 and 5,000,000 workers at a cost to the whole country of but $5,500,000.

The "man in the street" and the progressive employer welcome the idea of the public employment system. The latter sees it is a sound national investment. He sees the benefits of an organization which will prevent sectional unemployment, matching surplus with shortage; gather information as to labor conditions in all parts of the country; examine applicants and place the right man or woman in the right job; afford the unskilled worker, the skilled worker and the highly trained man and woman an opportunity to exchange services for compensation without charge; reduce the economic waste that has resulted from the enforced idleness and dependency of cripples, old men and other "handicaps"; and give vocational guidance to the juveniles, the workers of the next generation.

Truly an efficient public employment system, strictly neutral as between employer and employee and between union and non-union workers, is one of those things which will make America "a better place to live in." And thinking men and women will see to it that the system now available is not lost.

YOUNG AMERICA

The Dallin Statue

THE MAN FOR THE JOB

By Hon. FRANKLIN K. LANE

Secretary of the Interior

LOOK on that boy. He has thrown off his coat and his sleeves are rolled back. He is ready for work. See his outstretched arms, and look into his handsome face. He is standing once more on American soil and is saying, "This land is mine. I have seen other lands and have fought for their safety. I have seen their life and learned the ways of their people. I know their spirit and I have seen their struggle. But they are not for me. This land is mine."

Look at the smile on his lips; not on his lips alone, but radiating from every line on his face. See the light of hope in his eye and the pride in the carriage of his head. With arms widely spread he looks upon America and all the affection and pride and loyalty of his manly nature express themselves.

He had done his task abroad and his sleeves are rolled back ready for the great challenge of this country. He is Young America. He knows that this is not a land of ease. He does not ask Fortune to drop her golden apples in his lap. He is willing to work. He has found his way through barbed wire and the mazes of the miry trenches to gain his objective in the struggle of war, and he can do as much in the struggle of peace.

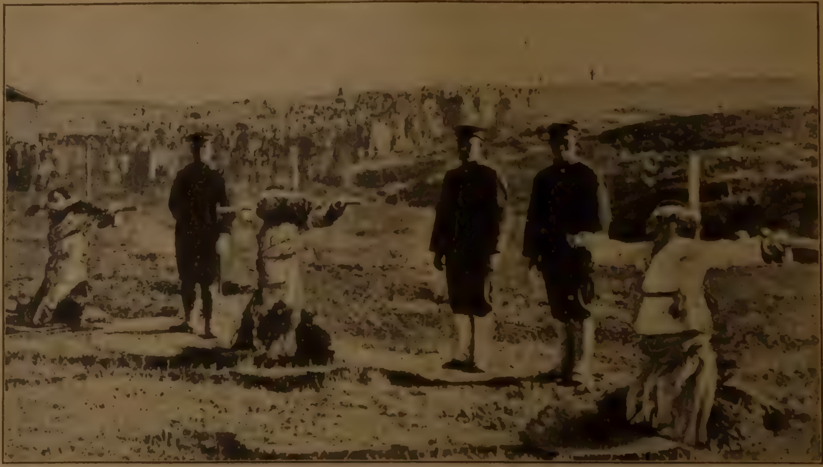
Here he is free, his own master. He can see himself rise as others have risen and he is eager to get into this new struggle. For before him lies a land that is as young as he is, his very mate.

He is upstanding; he does not slump into dejection because this is not the best of all possible lands; his head is high, his frame is firm, his hands are strong; and, again be it noted, his sleeves are rolled back, he will make this land what his heart wants it to be. Remark that there is no cunning in his look; he can play the game square, and one can see that he will ask what he is willing to give. He has no wings; firmly his feet are planted; he knows well the difference between fancy and fact. His eyes do not look into the sky, but straight into yours, for you are his brother and comrade in the making of America.

MARTYRS TO THEIR FAITH

Christians in Korea Suffering Unspeakable Persecutions—Churches Burned and Innocent People Tortured and Slaught

MANY letters have come to the Christian Herald from friends confirming the very worst reports of inhuman methods used by the Japanese gendarmes in their efforts to suppress the nation-wide attempts of the Korean people to call the attention of the world to their condition and desire for independence by peaceful, entirely unarmed demonstrations. We would publish the names of these writers, but the missionaries in Korea have asked us not to do this, est it bring greater trials upon them and the Korean Church.



Korean revolutionists a minute after their execution by Japanese soldiery. The victims were placed in a kneeling position, their arms extended and attached to the arms of a rudely constructed cross. With their eyes bandaged and their heads and bodies securely tied to the upright of the cross, they awaited the firing squad. Japanese soldiers kept back a large crowd of sympathizers and curious spectators

Terrible Torturings

AN AMERICAN long in Korea, whose name is well known in American religious households, boldly signs his letter mailed at Pyeng Yang and adds, "You are at liberty to make such use of this letter and my signature as you see fit." We publish the facts he sends, but withhold his name:

"Japan's treatment of the Koreans during the last two months alone is sufficient to convince the most skeptical. Neither age, sex nor rank receives any immunity from her blood-stained hands. Her police courts are a veritable annex to hell. Their system of torturing is carried on with a finesse that would put a Bluebeard to shame. Burning with hot irons, scalding, hanging by the thumbs, the backs of the fingers beaten until the pain is beyond human expression, the back hammered with an oval-shaped stick until the flesh becomes as described by an American doctor who has treated many cases, 'the flesh is just like a moistened cake of shredded wheat, but the skin never broken.'"

Beaten on the Cross

FOLLOWING is an extract from a letter from a reliable source in Korea:

"One of the most distressing of the stories of brutality, for reasons of religious sentiment, is that told by some of the seminary men, who were released from prison after a severe beating which was administered after they were securely strapped to wooden crosses, their captors saying, 'Your Jesus, that you are so fond of telling about, suffered upon a cross. Now you can have a chance to suffer the same way.' Those who saw the men after their release testify to their being so beaten and bruised that they could scarcely move.

"At least one church in the territory has been burned by Japanese. Furniture has been broken up, windows smashed and Bibles torn up, and in one instance burned in a bonfire.

"The uprising has spread to all quarters of the peninsula and out into the remote mountain places. Every day brings reports of things that have occurred in country places. Those who are commissioned to carry news and instructions to other places keep quiet and well out of the way until their day comes, and then they disappear to turn up at the appointed place to lead the demonstration there. Very often these leaders and messengers are women. They have played a leading part in the whole affair.

"Naturally, students have been among the first to be enlisted, and in Seoul especially girl students are mentioned as leading in parades and demonstrations. The government schools are not a whit behind the private schools in these matters and are a surprise to their instructors, it seems, who felt so sure their methods were making loyal Japanese of their students.

"The woman whose mouth was slit because she 'talked back' in jail has two sons who are in jail, too. The police, exasperated, said to her, 'You fierce old woman, you have been teaching your sons such a spirit. No wonder they are in jail now.' Her reply was, 'Would that I had a dozen sons to suffer for their country.' As a Sunday school teacher in our north church here she was especially noted by those in charge as one who always kept the attention of her class so well that no passer-by ever got a glance from them, a thing not at all easy to do where the students have not been trained to attention by early education and are easily distracted. She could find things in the Bible to keep them listening, and now she is using these same things from the Bible to comfort her fellow prisoners and to perplex her jailers. Would that she could convert them as did Paul and Silas at Philippi."

Plea of Korean School Girls

THE following letter, dated Korea, March 10, 1919, has been sent to President Wilson and the Peace Conference:

"Insomuch as the members of the Paris Peace Conference are giving attention to the correct principles and the rights of all men, we, the children of Korea, before God earnestly entreat you to help and comfort us. We girls have been shamefully treated and have suffered much disgrace, but to whom can we cry to redress our wrongs? Where can we go for help? If we cry out to the winds, who is there to pity us?

"We have heard that now the people of all lands are asking for liberty, and we also, the people of Korea, men and women, boys and girls, have come out to declare the oppression we have suffered and to cry out for the independence of Korea.

"Yet for this, without justice or humanity, we have been beaten and imprisoned, have been cursed and cut down with swords and iron hooks, pierced with bayonets, dragged by the hair and our homes destroyed. On Sunday we have not been allowed to meet in our churches: in the country when asked if we are Christians and we answer "yes," we have been struck, beaten, many have been killed. But we have only held up our empty hands to heaven with a cry for our country and for liberty and right.

"Gentlemen, will you pity us and recognize the independence of Korea? Will you stop this terrible persecution and unjust treatment by Japan?

"This letter may not be able to reach the Peace Conference. Oh! but will some one, any one who reads it, be moved by our distress and tell them of it? Forgive the mistakes of our childish letter. We have no power and no man to go to, but we believe in God that he may move you to hear us. Amen.

"One other thing, some of our people have not been able to stand against the cruel force of Japan (now and in the past) and have been made to sign a paper asking for the union of Korea and Japan. It is not true, but a trick of Japan.

"Mr. Wilson, President of Great America, we look on you as a father. Hear our Declaration of Independence and tell it to the world, is our prayer."

Missionaries Investigate

THE facts reported to the governor-general of Korea deal with an atrocity of the first magnitude, the particulars of which have reached .Tokyo and the outside world.

The missionaries who investigated were a party of ten, who visited several villages which had been burned by the Japanese gendarmes and soldiers, the villagers being out of their home not permitted to
with them any whatever of value.
they owned was stroyed, and the
ers, young infants
old men and wo
have been hiding i hills, afraid to retu
the site of their fo homes, and without ter, food or coverin
their bodies at n
Among these ref
in the hills are wounded ones, w wounds have per gone unattended,
many cases of b
poisoning setting in.

In the course of investigation, the sea
ers for facts reached village where the church had been
stroyed by fire.
gendarmes and sold marching into the
lage, had summoned
men of the village to tend a meeting in church, where they told certain orders w be read to them. T gathered unsuspect
into the little building, some fifty or more.

As soon as the men had all been gathered toget
the soldiery opened fire upon them through the o windows, after having surrounded the building.
ley after volley was poured into the gathering, u
the floor was covered with moaning heaps of dead wounded men.

To complete their work, the surviving women
the village told the missionaries, the soldiers ente the building and bayoneted all the men whom bullets had not killed, while t women who had approached the bui ing to learn the fate of their husba were likewise bayoneted and th bodies thrown among those of the m
Then kerosene was poured upon t dead, and the bodies and the chu building consumed by fire.

When the advance guard of the vestigating party reached this pla there were two bodies still left in smoking ruins, the others having b raked out and disposed of out of sig

Burning Churches and Schoo

THE following are extracts from letter just received from a f eigner living in Korea, and speak some events in detail that have be mentioned in recent telegrams fro Korea. The letter was sent April 1 1919:

"We now have reliable informati from the country of the terrible wa the Japanese soldiers have been trea ing the people who have made demo strations for independence. Christia homes and churches are particularl picked out by the soldiers for viole treatment. The church at Pangsa in Wiju was burned to the ground f
no other reason than that some of th Christians from that church had mad
a demonstration three miles away.
(Another missionary reports fifte churches wrecked in this district.
"The house of the chief officer of th church was also burned. A few Ko reans were shot incidentally with th burning. The sexton's house w burned. Another church at the next station, Sam hadan, was also set on fire, but because of the tile ro it did not burn well, and the Christians put the fir out after the soldiers left."

An American in Korea writes, April 9: "A re port has just come that in one city, from which letters have been sent, they are making it very hard for the missionaries, even hinting at deportation unless they stop giving out the truth: One American has been arrested and imprisoned here. The following are some of the things that I have actually see with my own eyes:

"Small schoolboys knocked down and cruelly beaten

Continued on page 729

TEMPERANCE IN JAPAN

By GRACE H. HONDULINK

THE history of temperance in Japan is the story of how God has worked through his church to drive out drunkenness, revelings and such like works of the flesh. Not until Christianity came to Japan was there temperance agitation. The Japanese, in their intense patriotism, may tell you that some of the old emperors o discourage the use and manufacture of strong by their subjects, but any one who knows any- of Japanese history must conclude that these ttempts at prohibition were half-hearted indeed.

ditions that have come down to present- pan, customs holy and hoary with age, s the imperial gifts of sake (beer) cups se whom his majesty delights to honor; nnual birthday party of the emperor, which the sake cups are carried home as nirs; the marvelous lacquer sake bowls, n the shimbokukwai (parties) of ancient -all these are but a few of the proofs that the coming of Christianity strong drink eely used by high and low alike.

first temperance society in Japan was ized in 1875 in the Kaigan church of hama. The Kaïgan church was the first h organized in Japan, and was fathered e Rev. Dr. James H. Ballagh, who bap- the first Christian convert, and who today oldest missionary in the country, rejoic- see his children and his grandchildren e third generation in the same work. In the Japanese Christians were still only s in Christ, and we read that the society out because many members failed to keep ledge.

1886, the first W. C. T. U. round-the- l missionary came to Japan, and then s began to happen. On November 10, the Yokohama society was resurrected reorganized, so that it lives today, and on De- er 6 the first Woman's Christian Temperance n in Japan was organized in the Nihonbashi ch of Tokyo, with twenty charter members, h was soon followed by other Unions.

a result of the coming of Miss Jessie Ackerman, second W. C. T. U. missionary, the Japanese ament woke up with a jolt one day, confronted wo petitions, signed by members of the Kyo Fu i (W. C. T. U.) speaking for the womanhood of n. Even more startling than the fact of petitions their subject matter. They desired, these pre- ptuous women, that laws be enacted to the effect a woman convicted of a crime should have no severe punishment than that of a man for the e offense. The second petition asked that the rtation of Japanese women for evil purposes be ibited. Innovations, these, and the Parliament nptly and completely ignored both. Year r year for twelve years—oh, the patience of nese womanhood!—this petition was pre- ed, before it finally passed.

nce those days America has sent others of best as W. C. T. U. missionaries to Japan— nen like Clara Parish, Kara G. Smart, Ruth ncis Davis and Flora E. Strout, builder sof the on, whose works stand as their best memorial.

he Hon. Taro Ando, president these many rs of the Japan Temperance League, says onditions today: "Temperance sentiment apan is still primitive and temperance or- ization is still in its infancy." This Japan nperance League was formed twenty-one rs ago, and, like the Anti-Saloon League in erica, unites temperance workers of all ieties and beliefs in the common fight against anese sake and "foreign" wine, champagne, sky and beer. The number of local temper- e societies is now slightly over one hundred, a membership of about 12,000. Of this nber, nearly seventy societies are W. C. T. U. h about 2,800 paid-up memberships. The vest and most active societies are found in Japanese colonies in Manchuria and on the ific coast in the United States.

The League employs a traveling evangelist. v. K. Miyama, a veritable John the Baptist this land of Salomes many and Herods not a . Another telling witness is the Kuni No kari (Light of our Land), a monthly maga- e edited for the League by Mr. Ando, of ich 83,400 copies were published last year. W. C. T. U. has its own magazine, Fujin impo (Woman's Herald), with a monthly cir- lation of 2,600 copies; while the circulation the children's paper (Shonen Shimpo) has en in two years from nothing to 7,000.

Not a doll, but a pupil at the Mission School at Hiroshima, Japan

IT IS hard to connect such a dainty, quaint little maid with drunkenness and long hours of labor. Yet there are many little maids just as quaint as she who spend their childhood in Japanese factories. They seldom reach womanhood, for the long hours of work, poor food, and lack of fresh air and exercise are too much for the hardiest little flower of Japan.

Mission work has already begun to have its effect on conditions in factories whose owners are Christians. As the teachings of the great Lover of children gradually permeate the land, Japan will undoubtedly adopt laws for the protection of its women and children from these two great burdens of industrial life.

Decorated children's display on Gautama's Birthday (April 8) at Hibiya, Japan

Among the many departments of the Temper- ce League in Japan, relief work occupies a much ger place than it does in America. Japan poor country—Governor T. Inouye has made statement that in Tokyo alone there are 700 families who earn less than thirty-four ts a day—and therefore, whenever a portion of Japan is overwhelmed by fire or flood or famine or earthquake or sword, the suffering of the common people is beyond our comprehension.

In 1891 the League sent a physician and two nurses to care for the earthquake sufferers. So valuable was the service they rendered that the Imperial Government offered the League a beautifully lacquered winecup in recognition of its services, which was, of course, declined with reasons given. After the great storm in 1917, over 10,000 pieces of clothing were gathered, washed and mended at W. C. T. U. headquarters in Tokyo, and sent to Tsukijima, where was the greatest destitution.

During all recent wars, the organization has engaged in civilian relief. In the Russo-Japanese war, the W. C. T. U. became widely known for the comfort bags furnished to the Japanese army and navy. The War Department refused to take comfort bags, except through this organization, and every bag was inspected, provided with Christian literature, and packed to comply with the exacting demands of the War Department. Donations poured in from societies and individuals of all classes of society. The ladies of the Imperial household sent several hundred bags, and at the national convention in Tokyo, the W. C. T. U. received nearly three hundred richly beautiful bags, given by ladies of the Court, through Marquis Tokudaiji, chief Chamberlain. When the bags were opened, they were found to contain, among other things, boxes of cigarettes. Consternation filled the hearts of the workers. Not daring to insult these high-class people by refusing to accept the bags, or by taking out the cigarettes, the local superintendent very bravely and frankly explained to the Marquis that it was against W. C. T. U. principles to use tobacco or liquor in any form, and asked that she be permitted to remove the cigarettes and put something in their stead. A young son and daughter of the Marquis, who had heard her request, told her that they would themselves do what she asked, and in order that the bags might be formally presented before the convention adjourned, they sat up all night, making the change.

The government held one little Japanese woman personally responsible for every comfort bag sent out —Mrs. Kaji Yajima, veteran woman educator and head of the W. C. T. U. since its organization; that wonderful woman, eternally young in spite of nearly fourscore and ten years in a land where womanhood grows old before her time. She was decorated by the Emperor at the coronation ceremonies in 1916, and received a small wooden sake cup, in spite of the fact that she with two others had visited Count Okuma to protest against the custom of giving sake cups.

At the present time, the Purity Department is probably the most militant branch of W. C. T. U. work in Japan. Since 1888, the temperance forces of Japan have presented petitions asking that concubinage be abolished. In 1916 they began an agitation against geisha appearing in public, and also for abolishing legal prostitution in Japan within the next six years. There is a vast army of nearly 100,000 publicly licensed prostitutes and geisha, for whose degrading service the nation is paying $27,250 a year. For every nominal Christian in the churches of Japan, the government has licensed one active woman of evil influence.

Japan needs temperance work, per se, as never before in its history. Although one may have lived many years in the largest cities of Japan, and never have seen a drunken man on the street, except during the festivals, still it is stated on good authority that probably from one-half to three-fourths of the adult male population of Japan goes to sleep every night under the influence of liquor. Traveling throughout Japan, one comes to abominate the all-too prevalent billboard, blatantly advertising Kabuto Beer, Kirin Beer, and other varieties of strong drink. The Japanese annual consumption of liquor is nearly fifteen quarts per person. Large breweries have grown up to supply not only Japan but the entire Orient. Before the World War Japan was sending six hundred gallons of beer per month to India. She now supplies more than ten times that amount. The liquor tax in 1917 poured into the imperial treasuries $50,000,000. The latest government figures show that the value of liquor used annually by the army and navy exceeds $140,000. One of the higher technical schools of Japan has a special course to train young men to become brewers.

That the temperance forces know how to labor and to wait—very much wait—is evidenced by Hon. Sho Nemoto, of the House of Representatives. Every year since 1907 he has introduced a Juvenile Temperance Bill, prohibiting the selling of liquor to minors for their own use and punishing offenders with a fine of five dollars. This bill passed the House for the tenth time in February, 1918, but year after year it is thrown out by the House of Peers.

The Keeping of the Heart

A COMMUNION SERMON BY REV. CHARLES CARROLL ALBERTSON*

TEXT—Prov. 4 : 23. "Keep thy heart with all diligence; for out of it are the issues of life."

IN THE Holy Scriptures the term "heart" everywhere is used to represent the inner nature, the moral quality of man, the seat of purposes and passions, of loves and hates, of choices and determinations. In this sense it is used in the verse, "As a man thinketh in his heart, so is he." Perhaps the word character more nearly than any other stands for the whole content of the word heart in its Biblical meaning. Character, it has been said, is what we are in the dark. Reputation is what we are in the light.

Reputation is precious—far more so than some people think. "A good name is rather to be chosen than great riches." It was "a decent respect for the opinions of mankind" that prompted the fathers of our Republic to explain their course in the Revolution. So, had this proverb said, "Keep thy good name with all diligence," it had been wise counsel.

But there is something worth so much more than reputation that the text advises us to keep it "above all other keeping." Indeed, the advice is even stronger than it reads with this phrase thus intensified. It is an exhortation to guard it above all other guarding. Then it must be either a treasure of which we may be robbed, or a disputed territory upon which an enemy looks for a chance to dispossess us. It is both. The heart—character—conscience—whatever we may call it—is at once a possession and a position, a treasure and a fortress; perhaps we do well to say it is a treasure in a fortress.

"KEEP it," says the proverb. Give up all else, if necessary, but keep this; for out of it are the issues of life. Keep thy body, for out of it are the issues of health. Keep thy mind, for out of it are the issues of knowledge. Keep thy purse, for out of it are the issues of wealth. Health, knowledge and wealth—are not these the issues of life? We must find out how God thinks of life. How does he think of it? Look at Christ. Get his definition of life. It is not length of days. He threw away his life as a little thing. It is not culture. It is not houses and lands. He had none. The only tax he had to pay was a poll tax. What did life mean to him? It was a word as wide as humanity, as long as immortality, as high as heaven's Great White Throne. To him life had eternal meanings; life here on earth was in fact a "cross section" of eternity.

Out of the heart are the issues of life. Destiny is of the heart. How necessary then to keep it, to guard it! But we cannot guard it alone. Can one man guard the Kohinoor? A company of British guards is ever around the case that contains it, in the Tower of London. Great treasures must be greatly guarded. None of us can keep his own heart. Many have tried and failed. Out of our failures, our moral failures, we are driven to God. He is a great Keeper. That is one of his many names. Our hearts are among the things we commit to him "against that day." Against what day? The judgment day—the day that shall reveal the secrets of all hearts.

BUT a kept heart does more than commit itself to God. It subjects itself to oft inspection. It prays, "Search me, O God, and know my heart: try me, and know my thoughts; and see if there be any way of wickedness in me, and lead me in the way everlasting." This word "search" is a very intens
It means "to dig deep." Does God need to deep" into our hearts to know us? No; he kn inwardly and utterly; but we can know ourselve by his searching. "In thy light shall we see l says the Psalmist. "Know thyself" was the sophical adage of Thales. How can we know our so well as by subjecting ourselves to the sear light of God?

It is easy to deceive one's self as to his true state. There is a species of self-deception tha the quality of self-hypnosis. There was Sa Pepys, an officer in the Admiralty under Charl
When he died, people said of him he was a goo zen, a faithful officer, a moral man of many admi qualities. But he left a diary written in short and a century and a half after his death it wa coded, and what a revelation it was! He had wr down his secret as well as his open deeds, sp nothing. He never meant that it should be rea any other eye than his own. He made bare his h and with all his estimable qualities as an officer o Crown, his heart as he reveals it was both selfish sensual. One cannot help wondering if ever h viewed that record, and if so, how he escaped loathing and disgust. How mean and sordid it l in print! He was a good reporter of his own inner but did he ever look at it with judicial mind? It good thing for us often to sit in judgment on ourse
And this we can not better do than in the spirit seeks to acquire God's viewpoint and God's judg of the heart.

"There is now therefore no condemnation to t that are in Christ Jesus." No condemnation? means no judgment! Is it so? Is our judgment passed when we pass from death unto life in Ch
It is, and it is so because they who are in Christ d submit themselves to God's judgment.

IS THERE any process so searching as that w attends the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper? is in a sense an inspection. Here we present ourse before the Great Commander. He knows whe we are in soldierly habit and soldierly attitude.
knows how adequately or inadequately we equipped. To prepare for the Sacrament is itse sacrament of heart-searching.

But it is more than an inspection. It is more t a searching. This Sacrament, spiritually employ is an act of heart-separation. Call it an act of he cleansing. We bring here tempers we cannot k with us here; dispositions; prejudices; mental moral obliquities. There is a sense in which Lord's Table is a place of surrender. We may m it such today. We brought to this place burdens should no longer bear, thoughts that are poison our lives, memories that "blight and burn." If keep these, we cannot keep our hearts, and our hea we must keep by God's help, and in Christ's presen above all keeping.

---

*Pastor, Lafayette Avenue Presbyterian Church, Brooklyn.

The Pilgrim Years

By Arthur Wallace Peach

THE years on quiet sandals go
So softly we are not aware
Until in summer's singing vales
We find the snow is everywhere.

We grieve for treasures of our youth
The years forever bear away
Beyond our speeding feet or hail
Into the Hills of Yesterday.

We grieve until our thresholds ring
With tread of glad, new-coming feet,
And find that years bring recompense
For all of youth that vanished fleet.

They give their treasures to our care—
Immortal treasures of the heart—
And never down the ways of youth
We see their eager feet depart.

This is the truth abiding taught
By pilgrim years grown kind and gray:
Far richer are the gifts they bring
Than treasures that they bear away!

A Little Child Shall Lead Them

THE church was filled to its utmost capacity with people, the galleries as well as the body of the building having every seat occupied. The songs had been sung with a will and the evangelist was pleading earnestly with the people, when a little laddie moved out of a seat that was about a dozen feet from the altar. He came up the aisle and stood in front of the preacher and held his little hands up over his head to stop the preacher's words.

"Please, sir," he said, "do you think the Lord Jesus would save a little girl six years old?"

The evangelist paused in his address of pleading with the audience and looked at the little fellow; and in such a place and before such an audience, he did look such a tiny little fellow.

"What is that you say, my little man?" asked the evangelist, kindly.

"Do you think that Jesus would save a little girl six years old?" he repeated.

The evangelist hesitated. The people were watching with keenest interest and many tried to hear the child's plea. The sturdy little fellow, with a great, unselfish thought in his heart, had apparently completely forgotten the audience and thought only of his sister's need.

"Do you think that Jesus would save a little girl six years old?" he repeated, as the astonished evangelist tried to grasp the situation.

Turning to the great audience, the evangelist told them what the child had asked. "What answer shall I tell him?" he demanded. "What shall we tell this boy? Will Jesus receive a little girl six years old?"

"Yes! Yes! He will! He will!" came from all over the house, until the whole audience seemed to be thrilled with the thought of pressing home the answer.

"Yes, my little man," said the evangelist, speaking directly to the boy. "Jesus said, 'Suffer the children to come unto me, and forbid them not, for of such is the Kingdom of Heaven.' The people here say that Jesus will receive you and, with all my heart, I say to you, Yes, Jesus will receive you or a little girl."

The little fellow turned around and went back to his pew. He took a little girl, smaller than himself, by the hand and led her to the altar.

Turning over the meeting to his helpers, the evangelist came down to the altar and knelt beside the two children. Lovingly and tenderly he taught them to pray:

"Gentle Jesus, meek and mild,
Look upon a little child.
Pity my simplicity,
Suffer me to come to thee.
Fain I would to thee be brought,
Gracious God, forbid it not.
In the Kingdom of thy grace,
Give a little child a place."

The truth sank into the young hearts and tears gladness wet their faces.

Then an unusual thing happened. Parents enter the aisles and came forward to the altar. The bra little boy, pleading for another soul, had awaken other hearts, and friend sought friend. The hear of the people were touched.

Truly, again "a little child shall lead them
Where human eloquence and wonderful singing ha failed, the simple, unselfish plea of a child led t way.

A wonderful work of grace was performed in th place. A real spiritual life entered the worship the church people, and many souls were led into t marvelous experience of being "born of God."

E. RYERSON YOUNG.

William F. Doughty

Carroll G. Pearse

Laura B. Sanderson

Dr. Robert J. Aley

Luther L. Wright

EDUCATION FOR DEMOCRACY

Great Moral and Social Problems Facing the Educators of the Country—Fight Against Illiteracy and Ignorance

A Department of Education

BACK of the introduction of the Towner Bill is the humiliating knowledge that there are 1,500,000 native-born whites and 2,250,000 native-born colored citizens who have not acquired the beginning of good citizenship—the knowledge of reading and writing.

And this army of 4,000,000 native-born who cannot read and write is swelled by at least as many more foreign-born—presumably future citizens—who cannot read and write.

We have a Department of Agriculture which attends to the development of the soil of America.

We have a Department of Labor which devotess itelf to the devising of means and methods to promote the interests of the working men and women of the country.

We have also Departments of the War and the Navy, of the Interior, and so forth.

But unlike any other great nation on earth, to say nothing of the very smallest of nations, we have no Department of Education.

That omission is no mere accident. It is an affirmation of our belief, hitherto held, that education is not a matter to which the nation should pay any greater attention than that implied by the existence of a Bureau of Education in the Department of the Interior.

It is an expression of our belief, hitherto held, that the education of the people is a matter that should properly concern only states and municipalities, and that it is beyond the purview and the responsibilites of the national government.

Is it not high time to give to education the dignity and standing it requires?

At least it is time to think about it very, very seriously.

Great Educational Meet

A GREAT revival of public education is heralded by the annual convention of the National Education Association lwaukee, Wis., June 28 to July 19, which calls public attention vital needs as well as to the great h of our colossal system of pub- ucation in this country.

er twenty million children are ed in the public schools of the d States. But these are only 75 ent. of the total number of chil- of school age (five to eighteen) who ought to be in school. The ge daily attendance is but fif- millions for an average school of less than eight months of ty days each. And the bulk of acy in the country is still very , there being over 5,500,000 per- ten years of age and over unable ad and write, more than half of n are white.

he great problem of moral educa- still faces our educators. A large entage of our population are still without rvised play. Less than half the teachers had adequate preparation for their work. ols are not sufficiently utilized in public ice. Schoolhouses and equipment are still nitary and deficient, especially those of try schools, in thousands of which a single her is required to teach twenty to thirty es a day. The average annual salary for ublic school teachers is less than $700, and expenditure for public education (which hes the grand total of over six hundred mil- dollars per year in the United States) is less five dollars per capita in twenty-five States. indergarten and manual training schools e been introduced only within the past quar- century. Education is a constantly chang- process in all its methods and phases, yet ain fundamentals have been recognized and blished: that education is life, a growth n within; that instruction is a scientific cess; that sense perception, not processes of nory, form the basis of training; and that all ning must involve the development of person- bility and character to fit for citizenship.

pon these foundations are being built the erstructure of various types in a definite eavor to meet the needs of children individ- ly and collectively, among the latest experi- nts being the Wirt system of study, work and y schools.

No one of the seventeen departments of the tional Education Association holds more in- uctive sessions than that of Manual and Vo- ional Arts, whose aim is the training of the lled workman; for education, it is conceded, st consider the problem of the mill, the store d the workshop, and give it due weight.

The 1919 meeting is an open forum for the mmercial and manufacturing interests of the ntry, the object being to let those interests licate in a democratic way what they expect the public schools.

The teachers' contribution in a democratic ciety is the timely theme of an "all-teacher sion"; and another session is appropriately given er to the nation's greatest welfare agencies cooperat- g with the public schools.

Secretary of the Interior Lane weighing a school child

Both the French and the British Ministries of Edu- tion are officially represented by Professor Fenil- rat of the University of Rennes, to support the pop- ar campaign to make our national Bureau of Edu- tion a full-fledged government department with a secretary in the Cabinet, as is the case in France and Great Britain.

The organization of American Education for the development of democracy in the United States and in the world is the comprehensive theme of the convention.

One of the signs of the times is the encouraging growth of the high school and the increased demand for more and better high schools shown in the organization of junior high schools to relieve the pressure during the first two years of secondary education. Three elements are now recognized in the high school work—academies, business, and manual training.

"The call to citizenship is a call to the exercise of liberty under law, a call to the limitation of liberty by law, and a call to the pursuit of justice not only for one's self but for others," declares the National Education Association, in support of its contention that the public schools of the United States should now recognize more fully than ever the training of American youth for citizenship.

Education a National Duty

AT THE opening of the extra session of Congress Representative Mann Towner, of Iowa, introduced a measure of the greatest importance in the upbuilding of America.

The framers of the bill have embodied in it their solemn conviction that the national government ought to take up, organize, coordinate and reinforce the fight against illiteracy and ignorance in the United States.

Proof of the inability of States and municipalities to deal unaided with the problem is revealed beyond the possibility of negative argument by the fact that there are in the United States 4,000,000 adults—not foreigners, but native born!—who cannot read and write, and who in consequence cannot possibly take full participation in the life of this great democracy.

Mr. Towner's bill provides for the recognition of the importance of this problem by the creation of a Department of Education, of equal rank, power and responsibility with the Departments of Agriculture, Commerce and Labor.

It appropriates $100,000,000 to enable the proposed Secretary of Education to aid the States in the struggle against ignorance under a carefully worked-out scheme of state and national cooperation.

This bill has the hearty support of such representative bodies of American citizens as the National Education Association, representing the 700,000 teachers of the country; the American Federation of Labor, representing millions of workers; and practically every woman's organization on the continent.

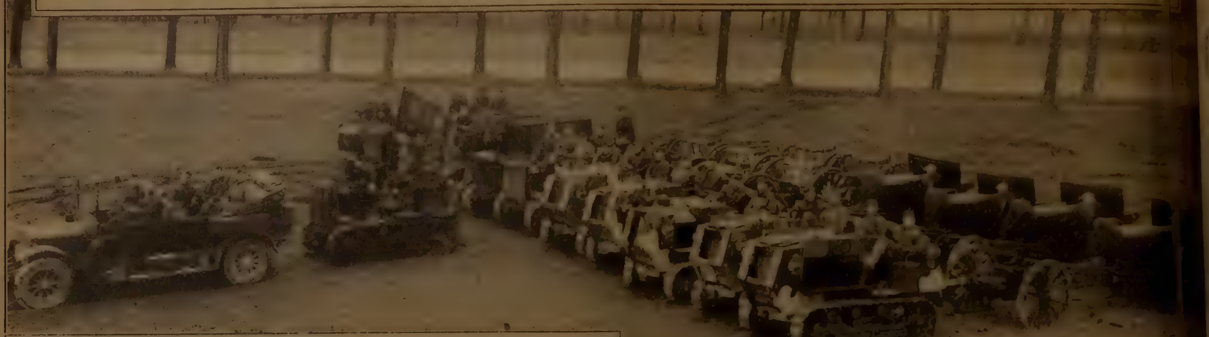
Citizenship Classes

FOREIGN pupils are pouring into citizenship classes in Illinois cities and towns at the rate of, at the very least, four hundred and sixty-eight a week.

Think of the exultation of a State University in which such rapid growth as this should take place! Yet this citizenship study is of infinitely more moment to the welfare of the country than any mere college training could possibly be. For, in the case of the citizenship classes, practically all the knowledge of the real purposes and ideals of this country are gained through these schools for the foreign-born.

In no state in the Union has more energetic, more unremitting work been done for the education of foreign residents than in Illinois. In Chicago alone over two thousand five hundred of the government textbooks have been obtained, and to Springfield 250 new textbooks were sent during the week already mentioned. They are issued only to declarants, who naturally, do not comprise the whole of any class. Sometimes the same book is used by many students. It may be owned only by the candidate for citizenship.

A MODERN SWORD OF DAMOCLES



This tractor and gun hung suspended one thousand feet in the air above a Rhineland village

A motorized battery of field artillery. The nine tractors, four trucks an touring car replaced two hundred and four horses together with seventeen w harness and equipment. This photograph was taken immediately after th tery had successfully forded the river shown in the rear

Thrilling Experience of American Artillerymen Atop a Rhineland Cliff

ONE thousand feet in the air and directly over a small German village of perhaps three hundred souls there hung suspended some seventeen thousand pounds of steel, iron and wood requiring but a small impulse to send it crashing down the precipitous cliff on a death-dealing voyage of destruction. This menace to life and property was the result of two things, primarily: the shelving away of a rocky mountain footpath from underneath an American fieldpiece of the heaviest type in use during the war by the Allies, and, secondarily, to the skepticism voiced by the artillery brigade commander of our most famous division as to the efficiency and power of the tractors with which one of his regiments had been recently equipped. For, intervening between disaster and the unconscious inhabitants of the village far below, was one of these same tractors. Not one of the huge leviathan-like tanks which the British developed and used with terrifying results to the Boche, not one of the monsters perfected by Uncle Sam which rumbled along over shell-torn roads carrying on its capacious lap a howitzer of large caliber, nor even one of the two-man tanks, the so-called "Whippets," which scurried along over fields, through the barbed wire, across trenches and into leveled villages, harrying the retreating enemy in much the same manner as its canine counterpart does the small animals of the fields in happier times. It was none of these, but just the common or garden variety of tractor, which interposed itself and arrested the downward plunge of this huge mass, one of the type which is well known in farming communities throughout the world—the machine from which the others were developed and rendered into engines of war.

A dozen mud-begrimed, perspiring artillerymen toiled valiantly to rescue the gun from its perilous position. Hours passed during which various expedients were tried. Holdfasts to which were attached powerful chain tackles were rigged; direct side pulls with other machines were attempted; even the revetting of the mountainside was resorted to; but all were found inadequate to the task of dragging the inert, cumbersome mass back to the semblance of a path which reached, at a point a few hundred yards farther on, to the summit of the highest peak in the Rhineland. At this height the foliage and underbrush had ceased, and the soil, rocky and lacking the necessary binding, had proven unable to withstand the enormous weight placed upon it, shelving away from underneath the narrow-tired wheels of the gun. All his well-calculated maneuvers having resulted in naught but failure, the young lieutenant in charge saw visions of a speedy transfer to that Nemesis of all line officers, the S. O. S. or Service of Supply, an important and necessary branch of the service, bu rear and holding no interest nor reward save th est and least appreciated work of the entire A

The situation was not only desperate, but w increasing miring of the piece due to the cont shelving of the ground it was momentarily bec more dangerous to those below. All other m suggested having been tried and found inadeq cope with the task, it was determined to stake thing on the faith we had in the sturdy little m itself. Holding tackle and braces, which hac rigged to prevent further slipping of the gun cast loose, and with another machine at the re ing as a sort of a drag guide, power was appl the little "45" farming tractor and, notwithsta the fact that the axle of the piece was now r on the ground and in such a position that fifty could not have moved it, in a few moments a difficulties were at an end, the gun not only ha solid ground but continuing merrily on its way t mountain top.

The conditions met with during this maneuver such as never confronted an American artiller either before, during, or after the war. It was a tion rather difficult to visualize to the reader, but understood by the men of the regiment, to whor possibilities in tractors not only in war but more cially in peace were forcefully presented for per the first time. This incident aroused a vast am of enthusiasm throughout the brigade, and res in the winning over to the support of the moto tion of the field artillery of the American Army gruff oldtimers of the "horse outfits," men wh often unequivocally opposed to any and all inn tions, strong in their prejudices, and who, like general whose skepticism inspired the maneuver quire to be shown. Incidentally, the young lieu ant in charge of the maneuver was tendered a di by his fellow officers, who unanimously predicted ure for the attempt, but who, "having come to remained to cheer."

GARNER PALME

An Aged Saint on Christian Unity

I AM a retired Presbyterian minister, in my eighty-second year. I have been for some time a regular reader of your paper, through the courtesy of my daughter. I have been surprised and immensely pleased at the splendid work you have done for the suffering of Europe and Asia. I have also been interested in the discussions concerning the League of Churches, or the Unity of the same.

There are many shades ot opinion in regard to the teaching of Christ on this subject, and nearly all are based on the Gospel of St. John 10 : 16: "Other sheep I have, which are not of this fold: them also I must bring, and they shall hear my voice; and there shall be one fold, and one shepherd." This is from the King James version of the New Testament. But the translation is wrong.

The following is the correct translation of John 10 : 16: "Other sheep I have, which are not of this fold (aulee): them also I must bring, and they shall hear my voice; and there shall be one FLOCK (poimnee), and one shepherd." "They shall hear my voice" in the sense of heeding and obeying, and after they have so heard they are joined to the Christian flock, the Church of God, and become an important part. Aulee is never translated "flock." Poimnee is never translated "fold," according to Liddell & Scott's Greek Lexicon. This view is entirely harmonious with other teachings of Christ, for instance: in St. Mark and Luke, ninth chapter, the disciples came and reported a man casting out devils in Christ's name, and they forbade him, because he did not walk with them. Jesus said, "forbid him not," showing us that the outward form of worship or service is of no importance whatsoever; if he has the right spirit, he is a part of the Christian flock.

In John 4 : 24, in the conversation with the woman of Samaria, when she appeals to him for the proper place of worship, whether at Jerusalem or Mount Gerizim, he says to her, "Woman, the hour cometh, and now is, when ye shall neither in this mountain, nor yet at Jerusalem, worship the Father. God is a Spirit: and they that worship him must worship him in spirit and in truth." He thus makes the Christian religion of universal adaptation, and wherever the true spirit of Christ is, the worship may be in any mode or way chosen.

The individual conscience is the most sacred faculty of manhood, and we should follow the example of our Saviour in dealing with it. It cannot be coerced by any threats or suffering whatsoever; and if forced for a time into a cast-iron form of worship, it will rebel against it and leave it.

A month or two ago, a prominent priest in this city published an article in one of the morning papers in which he spoke sneeringly of the "Ba of the Sects." The Roman Church for nearly a th sand years tried to compel uniformity of worshi they failed. The "babble" is entirely harmless sends no one to the torture chamber or the st This so-called "babble," if properly understood not a reproach but is the glory of the Protestant se The creeds of these sects vary from extreme Cal ism to extreme Arminianism, and the form of gove ment varies from the absolute monarchy of Rome the extreme democracy of the Congregational a Baptist churches. Now, admitting all these shades belief and different forms of worship, it is the gl of the sects that the Christian religion has univer adaptation, and whenever there is the right spir the form of worship may be at any time, in any pla or under any circumstances. Let us then be care how we try to force the conscience into one exter organization.

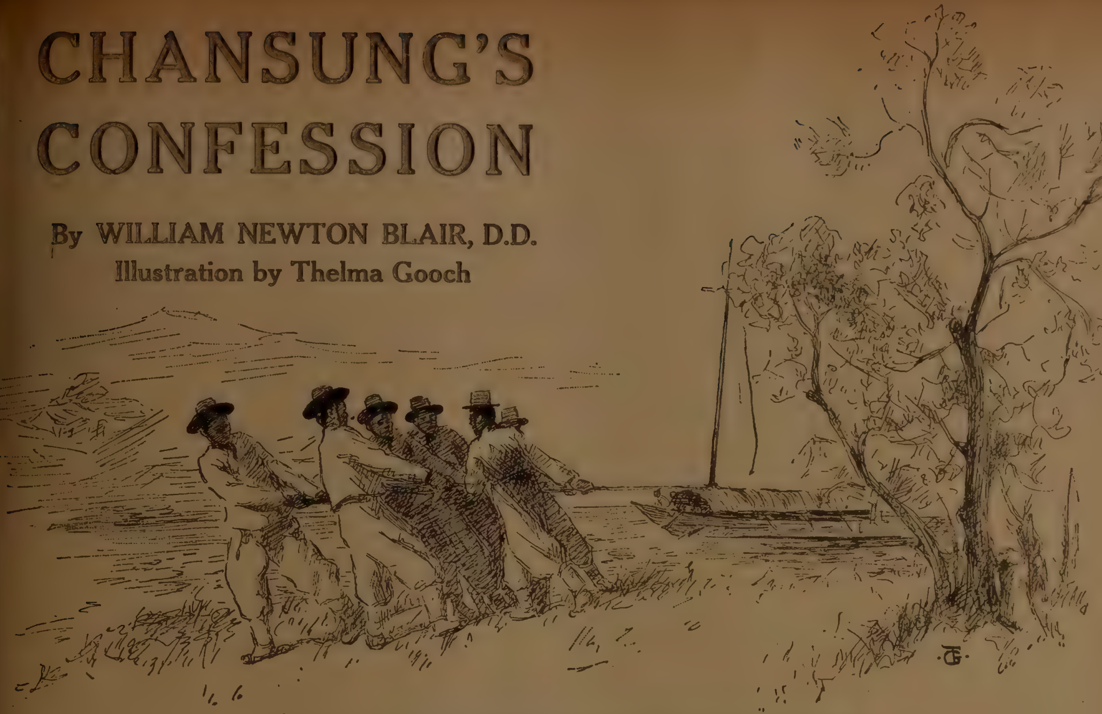
We should heed the teachings of our Saviour and t terrible lesson of history on this subject. It is entire proper and a Christian duty to encourage denomi tional courtesy and cooperation in matters essenti and to discourage all vain competition and unholy rival envy and jealousy, among our churches. In essentia let us seek unity; in non-essentials, charity.

Denver, Colo. FREDERICK ALLEY

CHANSUNG'S CONFESSION

By WILLIAM NEWTON BLAIR, D.D.

Illustration by Thelma Gooch



In still water the boat moved steadily forward, but in the rapids every inch was a contest

CHAPTER X

IN PYENG YANG

THE evening dusk had fallen, deepened by the smoke of ten thousand supper fires which hung like a cloud above the city, as the heavily laden boat from Tai Pyeng Dong finished its journey and found a vacant landing in front of Pyeng Yang. The boat, pulled by the current, swung its long length against the bank, and in a few moments all were safely ashore.

One of the boatmen offered to carry Choonwha's bundle and to show the way to her friend's home, and they were soon in the narrow streets filled with people and evening smoke and smells. A Westerner would have thought little of the low stores and their display of wares, and even less of the smells; but to Choonwha's eyes the shops seemed grand, and the odor of frying salt fish filled her with delicious hunger.

They stopped before a huge gate, on which her guide hammered, calling lustily. Inside two white geese set up a harsh clatter, and in another moment Yungpok herself threw open the gate and was leading Choonwha in with a happy welcome.

What a visit they had that evening and far into the night! First, Yungpok must know all the village news, where each of her friends was and how they prospered. At last she spoke of Chansung, very tenderly, because she knew the wound in her friend's heart had never healed.

"And you have never heard one word from Chansung all these years?"

"No," said Choonwha, "not a word; and there are many who say he is dead; but I cannot give up hope. Anyway, I shall never marry again as long as I live. Oh, Yungpok, you know how splendid he was, and how I loved him! I think of him continually, and," she faltered, "when I see you here and your home and your children, my punishment is more than I can bear."

For a while she wept quietly in her friend's arms. Then Yungpok said softly, "Choonwha, dear, I want to tell you something. You are right when you speak of my happy home and children; but I have a greater blessing still which I want you to share with me. I have learned to believe in Jesus since coming to live in Pyeng Yang, and I cannot tell you how happy I am. You did not know; but for a time I, too, had a great trouble. My husband came under the influence of wicked men. He lost fully half his money gambling, sometimes he came home drunk at night and beat me; and sometimes for days he did not come at all, and that was worse still.

"I do not know what would have become of us, but one day a wonderful thing happened. I was waiting for him late one night, dreading his coming, yet anxious for him to come. At last I heard him at the gate, and he was singing a strange song. He came straight to me and said, 'You poor girl! How unhappy I have made you! but it is all over now. I became a Christian tonight, and with God's help I will never drink or gamble again.' And, Choonwha, it was true! He had gone with some friends to the big church on the hill and heard all about the doctrine and decided to be a Christian that night. He has kept his word and is so kind to me and the children. Do you wonder that when he told me who Jesus was, that he was God's Son, who came to earth and died for all the world, I was glad to believe in him? And oh, Choonwha, you must believe in him too!"

Choonwha was deeply moved. "I am so glad for you that it is so; but as for me, I am afraid I can never be a Christian. I am the only child the Elder has, and he would never consent to my believing."

Yungpok did not urge the matter further. "Anyway, you must go with me to see the church and the schools," she said.

"Yes," Choonwha answered, "I shall be glad to do that."

The next few days were wonderful days for Choonwha. She and Yungpok visited the shops and markets together; she saw the three great gates and stood afar admiring the governor's quarters. One day they visited the hospital outside the West Gate and the school for girls. Choonwha was amazed at all she saw; but the houses of the missionaries and the little foreign children playing on the grassy lawns interested her most of all.

"Would you like to visit one of the missionaries' homes?" asked Yungpok.

"Would I?" Choonwha exclaimed. "If it were possible indeed I would."

So that very afternoon they went together to Pastor Sa's house.

"I know all the foreign ladies," Yungpok explained proudly; "but we will go to Pastor Sa's house, because they have the most children."

How pretty the home looked, and the yard full of flowers! Yungpok led the way to the front door and gave a loud rap.

"Why did you pound on the door?" asked Choonwha in surprise. Yungpok laughed.

"Because you have to if you want to get in. It's the Western custom. You know, all their customs are different from ours."

While Choonwha was still wondering at this, a step was heard inside. The door was opened by a very strange, very tall-looking, foreign lady.

"Why, Yungpok, I am so glad to see you! Come right in."

They passed through a small hall into a large room full of so many strange things that Choonwha was bewildered and hardly realized that Yungpok was speaking of her to the foreign lady till the lady turned to her with a smile and said:

"So you are Yungpok's girlhood friend from up the river, and you came to Pyeng Yang on a boat? Yungpok has told me, and I am so glad you have come to my house."

At first Choonwha felt too strange to answer more than a murmured "Thank you"; but Lady Sa, or Sa Puin, as Yungpok called her, soon put her at ease.

"Is this the first time you have been in a foreign house? It is? Well, would you like to see our things and how we live?"

Without waiting for an answer, she began to explain the sitting-room stove and the hanging lamp, Yungpok eagerly assisting with the information that the tall box in the corner was a musical instrument called a punggum.

"Won't you play just a little for us, Puin?" Yungpok begged; and Sa Puin sat down and made her fingers go so swiftly over the white keys that Choonwha scarcely noticed the music, so interested was she in the flying fingers.

Next they passed into the dining-room, where Choonwha marveled at the many white dishes in the cupboard and the long table in the center of the room.

"The Westerners don't eat like we do, each at his own table," Yungpok volunteered. "They eat all together at one table, even the Puin and the children."

They visited the kitchen and saw the big stove that cooked things inside, and finally the bedrooms with their odd iron beds, and before they left the Puin took them into the nursery with an injunction to be very quiet, and showed them a dear little foreign baby sleeping all by itself in a crib.

"Just think!" Yungpok whispered. "They let the baby sleep alone, even at night. That does not seem right, does it? It doesn't seem to hurt the foreign babies, though."

Sa Puin heard and smiled, but knew it was useless just then to try to prove to her two young guests what she had striven for years to impress upon her Korean friends, that it was far better both for mother and child for baby to sleep in his own little bed near by than to lie all night in his mother's arms. Centuries of custom and habits of thought are not overthrown in a day, or in two days either.

Before they left, Sa Puin gave Choonwha a pretty red-bound Bible, saying, "This is God's Word. I want you to take it home with you and read it, will you?" Choonwha promised, for the Puin had completely won her heart.

While they were saying good-by, four children came racing up the path, followed by a tall man with a reddish beard.

"Three of these are our children, just home from school," explained the Puin. "We have one more too young to go to school, who is over at Pastor Pang's house playing this afternoon."

As the children entered, the Puin spoke to them in her foreign language, and they came forward, one by one, and greeted the visitors, to Choonwha's delight, in excellent Korean.

Continued on page 726

OUR EDITORIAL PAGE

God's Way With the World

THAT the great changes the world is now undergoing should be reflected in the literary output of the time, was a foregone conclusion. Books dealing with the subject continue to multiply. The mind of authorship has turned largely to serious things and many writers of note have dug deeply into the causes and effects of the world struggle. One of the latest volumes, "The Consuming Fire," by Harris Elliott Kirk, D.D., is of special interest as setting forth tentatively what may be regarded to some extent as a moral philosophy of the war.

Three impressions are indicated by Dr. Kirk in his preface: the first is that the world struggle has demonstrated on an unprecedented scale that there is something radically wrong with human nature, which our progress, our independence and our civilization have proved unable to remedy. The outcome has revealed to us the monstrous power of evil, and caused us to suspect that the control of life, even under enlightened governments, is not wholly in man's power.

Another impression is that the successful issue of the war was "due to the power of moral principle over intelligent self-interest and material efficiency." The conflict ultimately developed into a contest "between moral principle and organized evil."

The third impression, which promises to become clearer and stronger as time advances, is that the moral enthusiasm which sustained the Allies and the United States "was the direct outcome of the influence of Christianity on Western civilization. . . . It has been a holy war—the principle of righteousness against the spirit of evil. It has released multitudes of people from the tyranny of autocracy and made the world safe for democracy; but if this is to be a successful experiment, democracy must derive its sanctions from faith in God."

These impressions or convictions are kept steadily in view, the author's argument being that to make social readjustment after the war effective, the high moral principle must be kept dominant, and made more active than ever, since the religious motive is fundamental to all the rest. He finds in the eighth century B.C.—in Isaiah's time—a striking parallelism between social and religious conditions in Judea and those in America today. In both cases, the morale of the nation which fought for righteousness was sustained to the victorious close by its religious faith. Assyria, like the Teutons, while able to harm and weaken the nations, was herself doomed in the end to destruction. She had been used as an instrument of purgation for God's permissive disciplinary purpose. As for Judah, Isaiah believed that she would go through the fire and come out of it refined and beautiful, while Assyria would not live in the consuming fire—a fire in which only the really righteous can live. His mission, therefore, was to arouse the Jewish nation to its danger and to the urgent need of a return to righteousness. "Come now and let us reason together" was a call to the national conscience and for the amendment of the national and individual life.

To make its victory complete, Judah had a national duty to perform. The nation was devoted to riches and material benefits, loving pleasures and extravagance, dwelling in homes of luxury, given to money-worshiping, to neglect of the poor, to pride, haughtiness and optimism, with abounding confidence in itself, and forgetful of an overruling God. Its religion had become a dry formalism, from which all fervor and true devoutness had died out. Judah must forsake its materialism and return repentant to God, "to the old simplicity of life and faith, and he would sustain them."

The experience of those far-off days is being repeated on a grander scale in our own times, and the great principle involved is becoming clear to minds that seek understanding. Now, as then, there are found many who still scoff at spiritual interpretations, saying: "Things will go on as before." It has been so in every great crisis of world change since the race began. There was the sin, universal and rampant, and the warning frequently repeated, and lastly the climax. It is God's way with the world.

In all the nations, the changed order is replacing the old, which is felt to be passing away. This new order seeks mercy and peace with justice. These can only be attained by repentance and a return to God, whose laws have been neglected, his authority ignored, his ordinance forsaken.

The Church has before it today the greatest opportunity it has ever known for faithful and efficient service. Let it take courage, and tell to the world the plain truth that God is waiting for man's repentance, and that if the nations sincerely return to their spiritual allegiance, they will find that his ways are ways of pleasantness and all his paths are peace.

Community Service

BEFORE the war we lived in carefully fenced-in plots. We had our church, our club, our lodge, our circle of friends. There were other people in town, some of them very pleasant people, but we were satisfied, and so were they, and an adequate civic consciousness was absent. But the war brought us together. It knocked down our social fences. In Liberty Loan canvasses we united. We worked together for the Red Cross, we combined our forces for the War Work Council, we joined hands to give an adequate send-off to our boys and our girls as they started off for France and the great adventure. Civic, town, community consciousness, feeble before, developed tremendously. In the neighborhood of the camps and the munition works and the shipyards, social service centers established to bring a bit of home to the soldier or the lonesome worker became pivots upon which swung the social life of the whole community. People found out the joy of unselfish service and the value of recreation under proper control.

Now the war is gone. But the community consciousness continues. It is manifested in a growing desire for some center in each neighborhood or community where people can get together, discuss vital questions, enjoy wholesome games, indulge the desire for recreation under proper guidance, and inspire the community life toward better ideals.

The Church is the one organization best fitted to meet this situation. It requires self-sacrifice to serve others, and the spirit of Christ impels to self-sacrifice. It requires spiritual vision and sympathy, and these are part of the mind of Christ. It requires ability to stick through disappointment and to keep on because of conviction, and only faith gives power for this. It requires a love and a power above the human to make community service really serve, and this comes only from God.

The Church should make community service a part of its ministry. If it does not, some secular organization will step in and the Community House will be filled and the church deserted. But the Church must act as a unit. If we go back into our denominational preserves and rebuild our sectarian fences, we shall lose most of our opportunity for Community Service.

The Peace Treaty

WE HAVE the Peace Treaty at last. Comparison with the cabled summary reveals no startling discrepancies, and indeed little if anything to warrant the suggestion that something was purposely concealed which might prove objectionable to the American view. The text, however, makes the matter clearer in places where the summary was not sufficiently explicit. The reparation demanded of Germany is now seen to be milder in terms than the cabled reports imply. It is provided that any further change or reduction of the terms can only be affected by a unanimous vote of the Reparation Commission. All questions of reducing the indemnities, or of extending the time of payment, are left wholly at the discretion of the Commission, whose vote must be unanimous. In the event of a disagreement, the Allies, through their representatives, will decide the question by arbitration.

Of the total Reparation Fund of marks, twenty billions will be paid before May 1, 1921, forty billions between 1921 and 1926, and forty billions at a date left to be specified by the Reparation Commission. It is distinctly set forth in the Treaty that a written undertaking, covering this later payment, is to be executed by Germany and delivered to the Allies, but not until the Allies are first satisfied that provision has been made for meeting the interest and sinking fund obligations. This leaves it optional with the Allies to exact the full final instalment of the indemnity with interest at such time and manner as they may see fit, after having taken the condition of Germany into account. These are wise and humane provisions. Besides, in the full text of the treaty, considerable space is devoted to the arrangements for trade with Germany. The latest news is that the treaty is to be recast, with the probability of modifications on which the Allies are said to have practically agreed.

The Covenant of the League of Nations forms the first section of the Treaty, following the long list of "high contracting parties." Neutrals are not included in the list. Nor is any mention made o Austro-Hungarian, Turkish or Bulgarian governm which will doubtless be dealt with in separate tr

Europe wants peace. The whole world is hu for it. Our own people, who did so much to wi war, have favored the League of Nations from beginning, and rightly regard it as the found stone of humanity's hope. We look to the wisdom justice and the reasonableness of Congress to ju the nation's expectation. Failure to do this wou an international calamity.

Kerensky as a Prophet

IT MAY be admitted that Alexander Keren the first Provisional Premier of the Russian public, who was driven from power by the Terror two years ago, knows something about Bo vism. It broke down his government, sought his and forced him into exile. He witnessed its rise, c into personal contact with its leaders and knew t plans, but was powerless to overcome their plots. an interview with a correspondent of the New Y Evening Post, Kerensky gives us an interes glimpse of conditions in Russia today, and what se like a prophetic look into the future. Bolshevism dying out rapidly there, he declares. It will be g before next winter. The power of the Reds is bre ing up; the armies of Lenine and Trotzky are fa away. Soon they will disappear and then will c the White Terror—the rule of the reactionaries. Th will be more horrors, but not for long. Then masses, after seeing the excesses under reaction, want neither Red nor White. At that moment th will become sane and be willing to accept a sane lead The prophet did not indicate upon whom their cho might fall, but the reader might easily conclude was thinking of the possibilities of his own return power.

Kerensky's observations on America were equa emphatic. There isn't a single chance of Bolshevi in the United States, he said, when told that who page newspaper advertisements warning of the dang had been printed. Our rich "parlor Bolshevists" regarded as mere talkers. "Bolshevism cannot gro in a land where people are well fed and generally co tent as they are in the United States," he declare "Bolshevism is a disease of tired and exhausted n tions. You are quite perfectly safe from such a di ease in America." In Russia even the peasants hav already abandoned Bolshevism.

Kerensky may be right—he probably is. He know Bolshevism as it is in Russia. All the American Bo shevists are in Russia now, he says. There is still bunch of would-be Bolshevists, ardent sympathizer and imitators here, who should be sent to Russia t keep them company.

The Judicial Faculty in History

RUMOR-MONGERS and gossips here, when no busily engaged on other lines, devote a good deal of attention to the President. Since h went to Paris to attend the Peace Conference, he ha been the central figure in many remarkable stories the latest, however, being highly interesting and fairly probable. It is to the effect that he will make hi future home on the Pacific coast. A thirty-acre tract in a delightful and salubrious location, overlooking the city of Santa Barbara, is said to have been purchased recently by ex-Secretary McAdoo. This, so the story goes, is to be divided into two estates, with two independent homes, one of which will be that of Mr. Wilson. In this retreat, far from public distractions and the cares of state, he will devote himself to producing a "History of the Great War." The only weak point in this pleasing story is that the President himself, with characteristic good sense, has not a word to say one way or the other. He may know nothing about it.

As for the suggestion of literary work, history is rarely written close on the heels of the events of which it treats. No great historical work has ever been produced until a period of time has elapsed sufficient to permit calm and impartial treatment and a philosophical view, long after the storm and strife have passed over. The true function of the historian is a judicial one, which can only find its legitimate field of exercise when events have become sufficiently remote to get the true perspective. No one knows this better than President Wilson himself, who is expert in his own field and is not one to be hurried into a task prematurely. Under favorable conditions, a history of the world-struggle from his pen is sure to command world-wide attention.

HE DOUGHBOY'S POINT OF VIEW

What the American Soldier in Europe Thinks of Things as He Actually Sees Them

By MARGARET E. SANGSTER

American soldiers in Germany whiling away the time in an army garden

"ANYWAY," said the doughboy, as we walked up the steep cobble-paved street toward the house that we were bil- in, "anyway, you're not seeing E. F. from the back seat of a ine!"

"ou mean—?" I questioned, ing at his arm. For the cobble- were slippery with ice.

"good many people have," an- the doughboy. "They eat at ficers' mess, and live in the best and talk—well, down to us. hen," he added, "you're sort of nt."

idn't know at the time whether it compliment or not, that "you're f different." It wasn't until later, I came to the summing up of s, that I realized the value of ng innocuous. Folk say and do any things when they think your of proportion will not expand to ppreciation of them!

e Doughboy was speaking again. ou're living in the same house some of us are living in," he chuck- "you're eating the same food that at (you can understand now why called mess!). You can't play nd with the officers while you're ng with buck privates! And so re getting the Doughboy's real t of view—not a lot of the con- ation that's handed out to the lic."

was in Germany, then, with the Army of Occupation. And, because of other in that army, I had been turned loose by the s bureau, and allowed to go anywhere, within nds, that I wanted to. It was a unique experience girl, and my brother, with a sense of the dramatic, taken me at once to the little town that he was ioned in, and had arranged with the billeting of- r to have me stay in the same German house that and four boys lived in.

WAS the first American girl, not in uniform, that the boys in that town had seen since they left the tes. And they'd seen, up to the time of my arrival, ghty few girls in uniform. They were home-hungry, -hungry. They wanted to talk, as one of them told , "to anybody with skirts on." And they did talk! Out of the trenches they had been taken, most of them; out of a life of uncertainty and mud; of cold, and sudden warfare, and as sudden death. They had been taken out of a life that was uncomfortable, dangerous in the extreme, but still an active life. And they had been set down in a little mountain village to fight what one of the boys told me was the hardest battle of all—the Battle of Waiting. They had been put there—quite free from danger and the worst of the discomforts. But—

"Why," a corporal told me, "we'd rather be in the trenches any day. This monotony is worse than expectin' to be killed. It's worse, almost, than bein' killed! We know what we're goin' to do tomorrow, and the next day, and the next. We know—well, approximately, what we'll do next week—and next month!"

"If they'd only"—it was another doughboy—"tell us when we were going home, we wouldn't so much mind. If they'd say, 'You'll start next Christmas,' it would kind of relieve our minds. But sitting around thinking, and snapping at each other, and panning the army, is about all we've got to do these days!"

"When I"—it was a slim chap (a rather well-known musician he is in civil life)—"when I came over I loved my country and respected the army. Now I only love my country. And if they don't get me home —soon—" he paused meaningly.

"Dick's got temperament," said the corporal, in an aside, to me. "Besides, he hasn't been havin' any mail lately. An' th' only fiddle in town belongs to a Hun lady an' he can't borrow it without bein' pinched for fraternizing. Can you beat it!"

Dick was talking again.

"I'm sick of being ordered around by fellows I would lick if we were back in civies," he murmured darkly. "I'm tired of drinking coffee without milk, because enlisted men shouldn't have milk in their coffee! I'm tired of wasting time when I've got a job that I want to get back to! I'm tired of wanting to go to a party—and not a girl in a hundred miles to take to that party! I'm tired of the army and the caste system of the army!"

And I've since heard a good many other doughboys paraphrase Dick.

Marine in silent prayer before a crucifix on an old tombstone

DURING the actual fighting the doughboy's point of view was very different from his peace-time viewpoint. For he was too busy to think of dancing, and jobs back home, and girls, and caste systems. But now that the real work of war is over he has plenty of time to think. And he does.

The soldiers in the American army are ever so much younger than the soldiers in any other army. They are just boys, many of them. Their boyishness, and the fearless courage that is part of extreme youth, was an asset in the trenches. But out of trench life their discontent and restlessness, also a part of youth, is not an asset. They lack the philosophy and nonchalance that the other armies of occupation, made up of older men, are showing.

And then, too, our army is different from other armies in that the enlisted man and the officer come from approximately the same station in civil life. In the French army, the officer is of a certain aristocracy; in the British army education is the great factor. But in the American army, two men who belong to the same class in the same college are often thrown together in the same company, one as a buck private, the other as, perhaps, a lieutenant. Naturally, when the lieutenant has to exert the authority that is a definite part of his rank, he becomes unpopular, to some extent, with the private, who speaks angrily of the growing "caste" system.

"Trouble is," an old regular army man told me, "there ain't one-tenth of our army that oughter be soldiers. They ain't temperamentally fitted for th' job!" And he was right.

To be temperamentally fitted for the job of soldiering in its time of inaction one must have more tolerance than the average American boy possesses. One must also have an all-embracing sense of humor and an infinite resource.

FOR the job of soldiering is a humiliating job, very often. It's hard, because you haven't a bar or two on your shoulder strap, to be kept out of the good hotels and restaurants where real food is served. It's hard to have to hold the stirrup of a chap who you feel treats you as a social inferior—when you aren't. And it's harder to run the errands of another chap who was not the cleverest man in the home school. If you have a sense of humor it's funny, but—

For a good many days, there in Germany, I "palled around with buck privates." I walked with them, I talked with them, I ate with them. One of them gave me his room in the German house that we were billeted in; one of them lent me his woolen greatcoat because the mountain air was chilly. They bought me candy from the army commissary and gave me their photographs. They were my playmates and my comrades.

But by palling around with them, I "couldn't play with officers."

One night I was out walking with an enlisted man. It was too dark to see collar and shoulder-strap insignia—too dark to see anything but the vague outlines. And so it happened that every man who passed us saluted. The chap who was with me laughed, albeit mirthlessly.

French refugees returning to their homes

"They think I'm an officer," he laughed. "Know why? 'Cause they see I'm with a girl. I s'pose they think a private shouldn't have a girl!"

And so, when certain newspapers talk about the blissfully contented doughboy who, with thirty-eight dollars a month—minus an allotment, and insurance, and liberty bond money—is having a great adventure; when they talk about the doughboy who doesn't want to leave the excitement of peace time army life for the commonplace existence of a home, I—I laugh.

AND yet I listened to a certain discharged doughboy yesterday. He was entertaining the womenfolk of his family with a recital of Bolshevistic and anarchistic ideas that had to do with army life.

"Oh, Harold!" said his mother; "you mustn't talk like that. What if anybody heard you? What—"

"What'd I care?" growled the doughboy.

And then a neighbor woman was announced. She had come in to welcome back the returned hero, and her voice was gushing as she said—

"You've had a wonderful experience, Harold, haven't you?"

And without the flicker of an eyelash that doughboy answered back:

"Yes, ma'am! Say, I wouldn't've missed bein' there—"

THE BIBLE AND NEWSPAPER

Conducted by FERDINAND C. IGLEHART, D.D.

World Anti-Alcohol League

WITH a view to carrying prohibition to all parts of the world, temperance workers, assembled recently in Washington, D. C., for the annual national convention of the Anti-Saloon League of America, organized the World's League Against Alcoholism. Four presidents for the new organization were elected, as follows: Lief Jones, London, England; Dr. Robert Hercod, secretary of the International Temperance Bureau, Lausanne, Switzerland; Dr. Howard H. Russell, Westerville, Ohio, founder of the Anti-Saloon League, and Emil Vandervelde, Brussels, Belgium. Ernest H. Cherrington, of Westerville, Ohio, was elected general secretary, and instructed to open permanent offices for the body in Washington. Miles Vokes, of Toronto, was chosen treasurer. Countries expected to be represented in the league were said to be Canada, Mexico, Japan, Scotland, Ireland, England, France, Belgium, Denmark, Switzerland, Australia, New Zealand, Sweden, Czechoslovakia, Italy and the United States. Under terms of a constitution adopted, meetings of the League will be held once in three years, the first coming probably next October in Washington. Delegates to the Anti-Saloon League Convention adjourned their sessions after passing resolutions in support of a world campaign against liquor and against proposals to relax war-time prohibition enactments. It is expected that war prohibition will stand, and that the plan for 2.75 per cent. beer will fail. The United States, after having set a good example, now enters upon the great task of driving the curse of drink out of the world, following this injunction: "Abhor that which is evil; cleave to that which is good." (Rom. 12 : 9.)

Waste in Wheat Threshing

THE Agricultural Department of the United States has learned that at least thirty million bushels of wheat are lost each year in the process of threshing, and is instituting a remedy for this waste. It asks the farmers of the country to watch and save the good grain that is thrown away with the chaff. There was a good deal of waste in primitive times in cutting the wheat, and gleaners passed after the reapers to save as much of the waste as possible. One of the most beautiful romances of sacred history grew out of this gleaning in the wheat fields. "So she kept fast by the maidens of Boaz to glean unto the end of barley harvest, and of wheat harvest." (Ruth 2 : 23.)

Spiders Stop the Cables

IT WOULD hardly be thought that so little a thing as a spider or so frail a thing as its web would be able to cut off the electric current and in a certain sense to tie up the hand of human industry, and yet this was the case. A paper in Buenos Aires, on May 27, told of the paralyzing of the cable communications with the United States and the interior telegraphic routes between Brazil and Chile by great spider webs which, wrapped around the wires by the wind, attracted moisture and caused short circuits. A large force of linemen was said to be following the wires across the pampas, to remove the accumulated webs. Insects sometimes interfere with men's communication and transportation. A hive of bees recently made its home in a telephone box and stopped the entire "hello" business of a village. Locusts in their craving for vegetation have covered the railroad tracks so thickly as to smear the rails with their dead bodies and slow up the cars. Such pure and beautiful and innocent things as white snowflakes have clogged the wheels of the mountain engine and stalled the train in the snowdrift. There are little faults and sins that stop the electric current and prevent the communication of man's soul with God and with his fellow men. Big sins, of course, are easily seen and can be guarded against, but the little ones, such as white lies, etc., often seem only like the gauze of a spider's web. From the earliest times the spider has been busy weaving its web. There is this reference to it: "The spider taketh hold with her hands, and is in kings' palaces." (Prov. 30 : 28.)

Navy Observes Sabbath

JOSEPHUS DANIELS, Secretary of the Navy, has just issued an order enjoining the strictest observance of the Sabbath in the navy. It is this: "In order to insure a proper observance of the Lord's Day in the navy of the United States, and to provide the officers and men with rest and recreation so essential to efficiency, the following order will be carried out: Hereafter all commanding officers and others officially concerned will see to it that aboard ships and on shore stations to which they are attached, no work of any character whatsoever is performed except works of necessity. This order will be construed as embracing target practice and drills of every character, inspection of ship and crew, clothing inspection, issuing of small stores, and all other ship activities that violate the letter and spirit of this order. No vessel of the navy shall begin a cruise on Sunday except in case of emergency. In order to insure the regular performance of divine services aboard the vessels of the United States Navy and at shore stations, it is further ordered that in no instance shall secular work be allowed to interfere with the holding of divine services, and that every possible assistance and encouragement be given our chaplains in the conduct of such services. A suitable compartment or room shall be designated for this purpose, and properly rigged for the occasion, and orderly quiet be maintained throughout the ship during divine services. The ship's band shall always be made available for use at divine service. When there is no chaplain attached to his ship or station, the commanding officer will arrange for and give every possible assistance to any naval chaplain in squadron, or adjacent or available, who might be able to come aboard for such purpose. In case it is impossible to secure the services of a regular navy chaplain, it is directed that commanding officers, when practicable, invite competent clergymen from ashore to come aboard and conduct religious services." This order is not a surprise to those who are acquainted with Secretary Daniels's moral and religious character and courage. Mr. Lincoln commanded the universal respect of the church people in time of the Civil War when he issued an order that in the army except that which solutely necessary should cea order of President Lincoln and S Daniels is based on this one of Commandments. "Remember bath day to keep it holy." (Ex. 2

Plea for Our Nation's Children

By MARGARET E. SANGSTER

THE summer sweeps on the city, baking each sun-parched street,
Saying with fevered shrillness, "I am the heat, the heat!"
And the children gasp on the pavements, dying as flowers die,
With their sad eyes raised in a wordless prayer to the blazing bitter sky.

But over the tumbled billows that toss where the sea-winds blow,
The men who have died in battle are sleeping where poppies grow;
And clear o'er the miles between us, the miles that are flecked with foam,
Their voices come through the stillness, bringing the message home:

"We who have died to save you," these are the words they say,
"We who have met the future, going the swiftest way,
We who have fought unflinching, we who have bled for truth,
Speak for our nation's children—plead for our country's youth!

"You who would do us honor, you who would make us glad,
Give to some wistful baby, give to some little lad,
Give them the lives they cherish, give them the lives that we Laid on a flag-draped altar—fighting for liberty.

"They are the ones to carry onward the lance we bore,
They are the ones to follow paths that we trod before;
They are the lighted torches left for the blind who grope;
They who must take our places, they are the nation's hope!"

* * *

The summer sweeps on the city, baking each sun-parched street;
But side by side in the meadows, under the golden wheat,
Our heroes dream of the future, and their dreams creep over the foam,
Breaking through death's own silence, bringing the message home.

Hudson Bay Bird Ref

THE Province of Quebec, Can just passed a law setting a Gaspé Reserve, or a series of r for the protection of migrato fowl and other birds. This pro be one of the largest and most e refuges of the kind in the wester sphere. Mr. John M. Clarke in says of these reserves: "Three areas are embraced within this tive provision, all of which are the county of Gaspé: 1. Percé the picturesque and brilliant D Island which lies a few rods off th of Percé village. Its bird colony stituted of the herring-gull a crested cormorant. 2. The ea north cliffs of Bonaventure which lies three miles out from Here is probably the largest su colony of the gannet with its cust associates—the kittiwake, razorbi puffin, guillemot, and murre. T takes over the entire face of th cliffs where the two colonies o island are located, and also a belt ten feet back from the edge of the
3. The celebrated but now som depleted colony of Bird Rock, nor most of the Magdalen Islands, 124 out to sea from Percé, in the he the gulf." The late Colonel Roo established fifty-one of these bi serves. There are three reasons nations should establish these bir uges. First, there is the economi son, the wise protection of bir food supply, and as an insect de and a preserver of the orchards, and forests. Second, there is esthetical reason in the beauty
God has made and which belongs beauty of nature. The third is the reason to protect the helpless, har creatures from man's cruelty and and woman's vanity in her per adornment. God has established uges for the soul just as Canada
United States and other countries prepared paradises for the birds.
refuge is thus referred to: "Sure shall deliver thee from the snare o fowler." (Ps. 91 : 3.)

Greatest War Hero Captu

SERGEANT ALVIN C. YORK, greatest war hero, who killed tw
five Germans and captured one hun and thirty-two, was himself captu not by the Huns, but by Miss G
Williams, whom he married on Ju at Pall Mall, Tenn. The marriage a decidedly romantic one. There no tickets of admission, no ushers; t was no processional, no organ; the mony was not performed in a chur at home, but out of doors in a g
under the green trees. Old-fashio fragrant roses were in abunda Everything was conducted in the plest manner, with multitudes of n bors gathered in a semicircle about bridal pair. Governor Arthur H. R
erts of Tennessee performed the m riage ceremony. It is said that Fent County had never seen such a pr wedding or had such a happy time.
bride was a native of that county,
it is said had never been out of it u
she went with her husband on t
honeymoon to Salt Lake City. C
gress had voted Sergeant York a me and just before the ceremony was p formed Governor Roberts commissio him as a colonel on his staff.
nation will wish them the greatest p perity and joy. Marriage is used in Scriptures as a symbol of Christ's lation to the Church: "Come hither, will show thee the Bride, the Lam wife." (Rev. 21 : 9.)

DAILY MEDITATION

lowett, D.D., C. C. Albertson, D.D., Rev. Edwin W. Caswell, Bishop William A. Quayle, W. W. Bustard, D.D., Prof. W. H. T. Dau, Charles M. Sheldon, D.D.

Incapable of Feeling

NDAY. Eph. 4 : 19. "Past feeling." That is a condition of most deadly impoverishment. To be incapable of noble emotion! I do mit the impoverishment to inca- of sorrow and still less to the in- to shed tears. There is often leep feeling where tears are never There is a dry type of emotion, and ften most poignant and profound. at present I am thinking of the condition, when the capital of feeling begins to shrink and the s brought into a state of emotional uptcy. For instance, there is the eeling which registers the distinc- etween right and wrong. It is not uch a mental discernment as a l sense. It is a kind of spiritual e which tests and discriminates the l qualities of moods and actions. man drench his moral palate with g doses of disobedience, and it will lily lose its refinement, first of all ning incapable of relishing the su- tive things, and then mingling good ad together in a common insensi- ess. The soul becomes past feeling. d pre-eminently is all this true of oblest sense of the soul, our feeling od. We cannot define this sense. annot describe it. It is "a sense me of Something far more deeply fused." It is the feeling of a Pres- . In the Christian life it is the fel- hip of the Holy Ghost. And this sense can be drugged. Sin does it. erlessness does it. Carelessness it.

ho is there among Christian be- rs who has not known how some rgiven sin has clouded his sense of the whole day long? The deteri- ion begins in a distaste for the things race, an aversion to Communion, if the sin be continued it will cul- ate in insensitiveness, and we shall er miss the presence of the Lord. shall have become past feeling.

ut it is the glory of our great Saviour He can vitalize benumbed senses. can restore withered limbs. He can e the dead. He can break the bonds ealed springs. J. H. J.

Our Many-Titled Lord

ONDAY. Acts 5 : 31. "Him hath God exalted with his right hand, to a Prince and Saviour." Advocate, liverer, Governor, Mediator, Prince l Saviour—these are among the many es by which Jesus Christ is known. at is the implication concerning one o bears so many titles? It must be personality is very great and his racter very manifold. The great- s and manifoldness of our Lord's racter are apparent when we per- ve how those who attempt to describe n struggle with words in their en- avor to do justice to their theme. hat is the meaning of this word Prince? the margin it is translated "Author" d in the Epistle to the Hebrews it is dered "Captain." If we think of sus Christ as the Author of our sal- tion we are at once reminded of his rnity. If we think of him as the Cap- in of our salvation, our minds appre- nd his leadership. In the death of r. Roosevelt we have lost a great der. His appeal to the great masses men was in good degree due to his litancy. He attacked corruption, in- ciency, indifference to national ideals. n nothing is a prince so princely as his ability to draw to him men of wis- m and power. In nothing is a cap- n so worthy of the name as in the cognition of the courage of his com- des. Remembering the age in which sus lived and the unpromising human aterial he had to deal with, when we front his influence on earth, we see is not only a very Prince, but the ince of princes, and, as Donald Hankey called him, "The Master of all good life."

The classic sense of the word "Salvation" limits it to deeds of prowess which delivered people from circumstantial peril. The Christian sense of the word is vastly deeper. It implies a reforming, and more, a revolution in the inward nature of man, hence in his habits and character.

Saviour is the best title to describe the office of our Lord among men as individuals. His truth is changeless, his beauty ageless, his grace endless. He is the same yesterday, today and forever, and any man may know him who wills to do the Father's will. C. C. A.

A Very Present Help

TUESDAY. Psalm 50 : 15. "Call upon me in the day of trouble; I will deliver thee, and thou shalt glorify me." This was the text of Scripture that comforted Robinson Crusoe when cast upon a desert island, alone and helpless. It was the means of his conversion, his salvation from despair and his future reliance upon the divine Being. What Defoe pictures in his matchless story every sinful, shipwrecked soul experiences who finally comes to prayer and to trust in the Son of God. Think of the multitudes of outcasts in the deserts of sin in our great cities. They are broken in mind and spirit, friendless, homeless and forsaken. Would that all might, like Jerry McAuley and Hadley, gather strength enough to call upon the Lord, who is able to deliver them. "Look unto him, all ye ends of the earth." Look and live, look and fall toward Calvary's Cross, and you will rise again in hope and happiness.

It is your loving heavenly Father who speaks to you, saying, "My child, call upon me in your day of trouble. I am your Redeemer; I am the Lifter up of the fallen; I will deliver you and you shall glorify me!" Therefore, roll your burden on the Lord who careth for you. Your mighty Deliverer is honored in your confidential pleading, in your full surrender, in your risen life in him. You may glorify him in your body and spirit, which are his. You may reflect the beauty of his holiness and tell the wonderful story of his love. Oh, can it be that you shall help to glorify God? You shall increase the brightness of his shining in the hearts of lost ones. You shall lead souls into his kingdom who shall shine as the stars forever. Hear him whisper to thee, a poor lost sinner, "Thou shalt glorify Me!" Shall it be so? E. W. C.

The Perennial Word

WEDNESDAY. Acts 12 : 24. "But the Word of the Lord grew." Those early Christians were fairly submerged with the energy of life and the wonder of it. This saying is a gush of surprise, a bird-song of spring. This wonder lifted in song. They saw a splendid new energy putting out bud and leaf and flower. Blossoming and fruiting were gloriously simultaneous. It was all so wonderful that they could not manage to talk about it. They meant to tell and they started to tell, but the talk eluded them and flashed into song. "The Word of the Lord grew."

We do well to regard this steady quality of the Word of the Lord. All seasons and countries and occasions are to it spring. No winter winds slow the saps of this amazing growth. Here is a new vitality, a supernatural vigor. We dare not be so slow of heart as to balk at the supernatural now. We have a tragical inculcation in the denial of the supernatural. Germany denied and defied the supernatural and wedded herself to the natural, and the horror of what Germany is and has wrought bites into the very granite as if it had been wax. The materialistic doctrine of the natural leads always the same way. When men in their infatuation with the words of men bring voluble denial to the priority and possibility and preciousness of the Word of the Lord they are not far from a very bitter hell—the hell of Germany.

The supernatural is logical to such as walk under the light of the stars and beside a baby's cradle and along the way where lovers loiter and where great hearts pass. So far from being scared at the supernatural we should be scared to death if we do not perceive the supernatural. "The Word of the Lord"—truly that is what our deeps of spirit hunger for. The word of man—the Dickens and Shakespeare and Milton and Lincoln and Ruskin and Browning and Wesley and Paul men are wonderful, but only because they are echoes of "the Word of the Lord." They are intimations. They are echoes; but the thunders that set those echoes flying are from behind the stars.

"The Word of the Lord grows." But it is the present tense. Put this passionate saying of the Acts of the Apostles in the present tense, in the right-now tense. "The Word of the Lord grows mightily and prevails." W. A. Q.

The Marks of Christ

THURSDAY. Gal. 6 : 17. "I bear branded on my body the marks of Jesus." Almost everybody is wearing some kind of a badge or uniform these days, some mark by which they can be distinguished, perhaps for money they have given or for service they have rendered.

The apostle Paul wore his badge, of which he was not ashamed, for he had suffered much for the truth he believed and the Christ he loved. These marks were not wholly of a physical nature simply in his body; they were also a matter of the soul and had to do with the spiritual life.

The first mark is an implicit obedience to the will of God. Christ said, "I came not to do my own will." Every Christian must reach that place where he can say the same thing, for obedience to the will of God is a badge of true discipleship. It still remains for the Christians to learn that the great test of love for Christ is obedience to the will of God.

The second spiritual mark is forgetfulness of self in the salvation of others. Jesus had a great passion for lost souls. He was willing to lose himself in saving others.

The minister, Sunday school teacher and Christian must all learn to love with the love that Christ had, and, inspired by that same great passion which possessed Paul, endeavor to live for others. Nothing less than the Calvary love will be sufficient if we are going to help the poor, lift the fallen, minister to the sick and save the lost.

The third spiritual mark is sacrificial living and giving. The way a man lives determines largely the way in which he gives. Sacrificial living and giving has become a law of life.

No great cause has ever been won without the shedding of blood, and only as we lose ourselves can we save ourselves and others. W. W. B.

The First Joy

FRIDAY. John 16 : 22. "I will see you again, and your heart shall rejoice." The enemies of Christ had had their little day of joy on the day when the Lord was crucified. But their glee over the success of their wicked scheme was ephemeral. They had sealed Jesus' grave, to prevent fraud; but the grave opens. White-robed messengers from heaven take up their position at its mouth. Dazed soldiers are rousing themselves from a sudden stupor, and scamper off panic-stricken to the city. There is a hurried meeting of the Jewish church dignitaries. "Hush!" they say to the soldiers. "Do not tell it aloud! If you must say anything, lie that his body was stolen." Oh, what a catastrophe!

But the news is out, independent of the soldiers. Women are hurrying into the city with the wonderful tidings. Peter and John hasten to his tomb to investigate. And now he meets them in person, the very Christ, their Master, and his sweetly solacing greeting, "Peace be with you!" falls like a heavenly benediction on their drooping spirits, and revives them as the dew of a May morning revives a parched flower. And now there goes up a shout of joy throughout Jerusalem and Judea and Galilee. The craven disciples are becoming dauntless heroes; they begin to speak boldly in the streets of Jerusalem. The forces hostile to Christ are lapsing into a state of sullen, spiteful, impotent rage; but the story of the living Christ is starting on its career of conquest throughout Asia and Europe.

Thus after the brief night of weeping there came to the disciples an endless morn of song. The echoes of that first joy have been reverberating through the centuries. The joy of the Lord has proven the strength of his people: they keep it up in the face of all the opposition which they must still face from all who love not the Lord Jesus. This joy, Jesus has said, no man shall take from them; they will take it with them to heaven and sing their songs around the throne of the Lamb. W. H. T. D.

Personal Value

SATURDAY. Matt. 10 : 31. "Ye are of more value than many sparrows." The first thing done to him after he entered the state prison was to take his finger prints.

By that he could be identified in any part of the world, no matter how long he might live. His finger print would never change.

At night in his cell he dwelt with bitterness on this fact. His finger print was born with him. He could be found out as a criminal anywhere and at any time by that personal mark born in his body.

Next morning in the prison chapel the chaplain spoke of the value of a human being. And among other things he said:

"When you come here your finger prints are taken as a means of identification. But I want you to think of your finger print as a measure of your tremendous personal value in the sight of God. Your finger print is your own. It will never be reproduced. It has been reckoned that to have enough people in this world to realize all the possible combinations of finger prints would require 2,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000 years." (The chaplain put these figures on a blackboard.) "It simply means that no two people will ever have the same finger print.

"You are, each of you, of tremendous value. God himself never creates two men exactly alike. Your soul like your finger print is distinctly your own. Do yourself no harm. Make the most of yourself, for you are created a personality which Christ came to save."

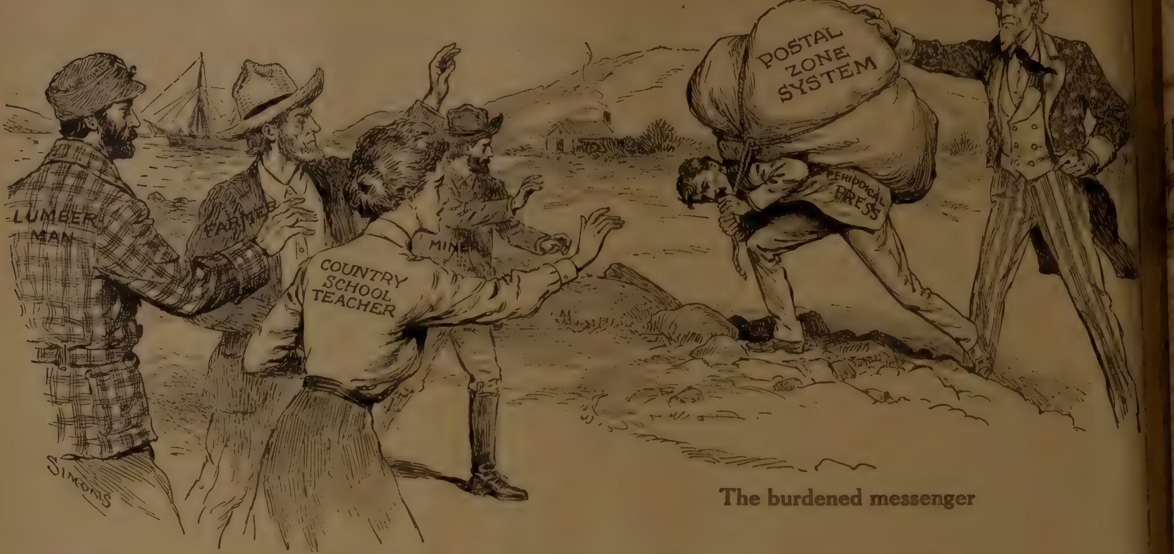
The man dated from that hour a new life. He is still serving out his time, but hope and courage beat high in his heart. He says every day, "I am worth more than all the world. I am a distinct person by the grace of God. When I get out of here I will make the most of that which God has made so much of."

Let every person regard himself as a remarkable person because he is the only one of the kind. The greatest thing about an individual is his personality. The greatest thing an individual can do is to develop and guard that which is his own possession. The finest thing about each person is himself.

C. M. S.

THE DANGER ZONE OF IGNORAN

The Zone Postage Law Threatens Every Channel of National Information



The burdened messenger

TO LAY a hand upon the Post Office is to touch every citizen and every American home.

The function of the Post Office is a tremendous and vital social service. It transmits information, furthers education and develops citizenship. It brings the remote Americans on the frontiers of Alaska or on the lonely farms into constant contact with the events of the world, the latest products of man's thought, and the stories of human progress.

The Post Office is not a business enterprise whose activities can only be extended when they are profitable and must be decreased if they show a loss. It is a social service to all, upon which our very civilization and national homogeneity are dependent.

It costs our government five dollars and eighty cents to deliver a letter to a whaling ship winter-bound off Point Barrow, within the Arctic Circle. It costs vastly more to deliver a letter to a lone school teacher on the Texas or Dakota prairie than it does to send a letter from one end of an Eastern city to another. Our Rural Free Delivery system to farm homes costs over $52,000,000 a year to maintain—or one-sixth of the entire expense of our whole Post Office—and it is the most vital and valuable service in the whole Post Office Department.

But this is the great American postal principle of equal and cheap postage to every American, without regard to any accidental remoteness from the center. This principle of equal postage to all was established over half a century ago, and included newspapers and periodicals—because the printed news of the progress of the world is of essential importance to a well-rounded and balanced standard of American citizenship and intelligence.

The foregoing covers all the postal principles involved in the present great public question of what is known as the "Postal Zone System." In brief, shall we have equal postage to all, or shall we abandon it and have penalty postage according to remoteness?

THIS Postal Zone System was revived in the haste and confusion of war legislation two years ago. It divides the country into eight postal zones; in each zone there is levied a heavily increased postage charge upon the newspapers and periodicals sent from the first postal zone, the zone nearest the place of publication. Under this vicious and un-American postal zone law there is imbedded in each magazine a zone penalty postage increase at a rate of from 50 to 900 per cent., depending, of course, upon how distant is the zone in which the reader lives. This matter of the zone law, therefore, is basically a question of the American right to equal postage to all homes in our country, irrespective of their accidental distance from any point.

It is a revival of an archaic and discredited postal zone system, the last vestige of which was abolished by Abraham Lincoln in 1863; a system that has been condemned by every United States Postal Commission in the last half century.

President Wilson, when governor of New Jersey, vigorously and publicly condemned even a flat raise in postage rates on periodicals—and the higher rate of the postal zone system is therefore even more to be discredited. The Hon. Charles E. Hughes, the great Republican leader, has condemned it as a "looking-backward and walking-backward measure."

It might be interesting, in passing, to note what the public press of this nation has been doing in some directions and what enmities it has aroused.

It will be recalled by every reader of these pages that it was the periodicals and newspapers of this country that for years fought the express monopoly, and demanded a parcel post.

The periodicals and newspapers of this country have always attacked public wrongs. They have exposed quack patent medicines, opium and alcohol-dosed remedies, baby-killing soothing syrups, outrageous swindles in mines and oil wells, crooked get-rich-quick stockjobbing schemes, and the lawless activities of the unscrupulous liquor interests. These are some of the enemies in discreditable circles raised by newspapers and periodicals in the last fifteen years.

It was the press which exposed the horrible child-labor conditions—and our national home periodicals will not cease this campaign until the abominations of child-labor are legislated out of existence. Have American national periodicals enemies? Indeed they have, God be thanked!

It was a Congressman from a State that has the most scandalous child-labor conditions of any State in the country—as proven by United States official records—who introduced the postal zone law and who jammed it through Congress.

Evil and corruption and viciousness dread nothing more than the nation-wide publication of their rascalities. They want secrecy, they want restricted circulation of fearless mediums that will not keep silent about the evils through which crooked business profits.

But aside from the desire of the enemies of nation-wide circulation of periodicals, there is a basic principle involved in the revival of this discredited postal zone system, in this abandonment of the policy of equal postage to all home circles, that demands the most serious attention of all thinking citizens.

FOR over seventy years, ever since the United States Postal Commission of 1844 made its historic postal report, the basic American postal principle has been that cost of service was not the controlling consideration. In other words, that the postal service was a function of citizenship, a function of information and education, of such vital importance to our nation that the postal cost should be determined on the lowest possible basis; and that the postal service should be extended throughout our entire nation irrespective of cost and upon an equal basis to all homes. It is on this sound principle that Americans in the Arctic Circle receive a letter for two cents that costs five dollars and eighty cents to deliver, and that, before the revival of the zone system, they got their publications without postage penalty.

It was on this former equal-and-non-cost postal theory that the Rural Free Delivery was established—almost a total loss viewed as a commercial enterprise, but a splendid and sound profit as a matter of education and citizenship. It was on this former basis, now abandoned, that "cost" had nothing to do with the importance of postal service, that the free-in-county delivery of local newspapers was estab and has been maintained.

But now this principle has been abolished. have gone back seventy years in postal history revived the mistakes of the past. There has now established by the successful arguments of the ba of the postal zone system, the theory that the c service determines the postage charge.

The figures of the Post Office as to costs are a in the light of their own contradictions. It i necessary to detail these here. The following ar official figures of Post Office costs:

In the report for last year, the Post Office De ment states that it costs 1.4 cents, per piece, on free delivery routes. The country press and far are heavily dependent on the rural delivery. country newspapers run approximately ten to pound; this means that the country newspaper will have to pay fourteen cents a pound for its po cost. But in addition to this the First Assistant master General states that the overhead on e pound of that same mail is 3.8 cents per pound, w must be added. So that, on this new cost basi postage, the country papers will have to pay ne eighteen cents a pound for the transmission of papers through the mails. They will be forced to lect this from their rural readers.

The country press of this nation has not realize importance of this revival of the cost-determinin postage-charge theory. Nor have they realized that is the essential principle involved in the revival postal zone system. There cannot be one postal p ciple and postage penalty for a weekly paper like Christian Herald and another postal principle postage penalty for a weekly newspaper in a sma community. Take this to the editor of your l paper—or write him and send it; get him to rea and get him to think about it.

IN PASSING the Zone law, with its resultant pe izing of the periodical press, Congress made capital blunder of acting upon a wrong principle, un wrongheaded advice, and thereby inflicted an injus upon what all civilized governments regard as one the most efficient aids in educational and indust progress.

And now the country is beginning to grasp the t situation. For many years a very large proportion the American people has viewed the periodical, wee or monthly, as an indispensable thing. It has hel the people in a thousand ways. It has been devel ing the spirit of true Americanism among them, and this sense doing a valuable service to the nati Besides, it has proved itself a business-maker on a la scale.

There is no more important duty of citizenship, these troubled times, than to preserve the freedom the circulation of our great national and local pre The long-established American basis of equal posta to all homes and readers in our nation, no matter h distant they may accidentally happen to be, is a vi principle based on the firm business truth that t safety of a democracy is best insured by the wide possible discrimination of thought and news. A informed nation is a saved nation.

HOW AMERICA'S GIFTS HELPED INDIA

Grateful Missionaries Testify to the Life-Saving Value of the Famine Relief Fund

DURING the past week a number of letters have been received through the India Relief Fund Committee in Bombay, telling of conditions in a very large part of the famine area. These show that the operations of the Relief Fund thus far, besides being welcome, have been productive of better conditions in many places. vident, however, from the general tone of the that the hardest struggle is that which must n the next three months.

. Charles B. Hill, chairman of the Christian l Famine Relief Committee, writing from a Camp, April 24, says: "On behalf of our com- I write to thank you very cordially for the onal gift from your readers for the relief of the e-stricken people of India. I am calling a meet- the committee to meet in Bombay on April 25, appeals from the various famine-stricken dis- will be considered and the money sent so gener- by the Christian Herald readers will be dis- ed to the needy places.

'e are making an appeal in India, chiefly ad- d to British merchants and others in the com- l centers."

ssionary R. I. Bisbee, writing of famine condi- in the Godhra District, says: "Our Christian unity in this district, which includes the Panch ls, is very poor. During the years when rains gularly, they were able with difficulty to make meet. Most of those this side are farmers. As , when the first few showers of rain fell, they put oke upon the necks of the oxen and started out ow. The fields were sown and the plants began rout, when the sun came out with deadly heat the young plants died. people had spent a great of money, which did not nt to anything. A month by and the clouds began ther again, and the rain all in light, occasional ers, so that the peo- vere encouraged to plant .

ut the rain ceased, and the withered and dried up efore, leaving the people less, facing high prices famine.

n account of war condi- , the price of grain at the nt time is two and one times as high as during the t famine. This, coupled the fact that the laborer ives now just about the daily wage as years ago, that even then the people a very hard time to make meet, makes it evident thousands are now going tarve, unless help is ex- led quickly.

The condition of the cattle rrible. They are dying all ut, and daily loads of hides seen going by our mission galow on their way to the nery. The people are strip- the leaves from the trees eed the cattle. It is esti- ed that 75 per cent. of the le will die.

I received word the other that the people at Sandas- —about eighteen miles away—were having a hard e of it, so I visited the place. I never realized ore to what dire misery human beings can be re- ed! These people are farmers, but because of the s falling there have been no crops and so they have doing whatever work they could find in order keep soul and body together. Now there seems e no work at all, and many people have left. But e remain in this village about fifty souls—mostly people and children—who are actually starving eath. I went into their homes and found abso- nothing to eat. The people are eating leaves roots. There are five blind and deaf people in village, and they were piteously crying for food. ought forty pounds of rice and made arrangements ed them. I don't think they will live long, as they are so weak. When the Christians here pray 'Give us this day our daily bread,' they pray with an earnestness such as I have never heard before. Think of people unable to sleep because of hunger, and no food in the village with which to satisfy them! And no one to turn to for help! My heart aches for the thousands who will starve the next three months.

"We have thus far received from the Christian Herald Fund 287.13 rupees, which we have expended as follows: Corn for the destitute Bhils, Rs. 100; corn for the poor of the Godhra community and circuits and children of our day schools, Rs. 153.2; corn for Christian natives at Ode, Rs. 27; corn for feeding the poor children at Ahema, Rs. 9."

Missionary C. H. Thorne, Church Mission House, Girgaum, Bombay, writes: "I have a grateful remembrance of the splendid way the Christian Herald helped us during the last famine of 1901-1906. I was in charge of the Aurangabad Orphanage during part of that time, and we were the thankful recipients of help from you that saved many a boy and girl from death, and gave them back to a life of health and happiness. The children of that time are now men and women, living good and useful lives.

"In this present famine period we have had not only the misery of insufficient food to contend with, but a time of distress marked with awful sickness and mortality. Influenza followed by cholera, which swept away thousands, filled the people with alarm, and this terror added to the mortality. In some cases whole villages were so affected that gradually, as the disease advanced, it became impossible to bury the dead. The survivors were so weak and emaciated that they could only throw the corpses into the rivers. At last none were left, and the village was completely wiped out.

"Yet the Christians have been wonderfully preserved. This has been largely owing to the whole-souled devotion of the missionaries and the Indian clergy, who toiled night and day carrying food and medicine to the sick, caring for the widows and orphans, and nursing back to life and health those it was possible to save. The boys of our orphanage also have surprised us by their helpfulness. Going off to distant villages with medicines and food, trudging many miles along the hot and dusty roads, and at last arriving with the needed help, they filled the hearts of our people with thankful praise.

"One of the sad features of this visitation has been the passing away of a number of our workers in the mission, preachers and schoolmasters. This, I fear, has been owing in a certain measure to want and overwork."

Missionaries at Ahmednagar, India, with a group of natives to whom relief supplies have been distributed

A report from Aurangabad, up to the middle of April, discloses the famine conditions there. The relief work of the Church Missionary Society was then supporting 200 to 250 persons, mostly widows and their children, who would starve but for the aid received. It is quite likely that some of these may remain a charge on the mission for a considerable period, and many of the children will have to be taken into the orphanage, being entirely destitute. Of thirty destitute women, twenty-two are widows who are now employed as helpers in the relief work. The whole population, says the report, "is in desperate need of clothes. Few can earn more than enough to keep body and soul together. The missionaries are working until they are practically at their last ounce of strength; yet they cannot go away and leave these sufferers to starve."

Another missionary from the Bhil country says: "The money sent to us from the Christian Herald Famine Fund has been of great service. None of it has been spent on material, but all has gone direct to the sufferers. Prices are still rising and Indian corn—which is the principal food of these people—is almost unobtainable. There is not a field plowed nor a crop set for miles around us. I can only hope that some more relief may come. It is terrible to feel that one's own people cannot get enough to last more than a month for food alone, and how people with big families manage is more that I can understand."

A missionary from Nasik, western India, writes that he has a large orphanage and cannot get money to feed the children. Another, from Manmad District, writes: "Practically all the people in our little congregation are feeling the pinch of hunger and are insufficiently clothed. There are thirty poor Christian widows in Yeola alone, and great numbers of children who stand in dire need of food and clothing, and this in addition to the usual sick and infirm and the aged, unable to work. I am distributing in personal relief the money apportioned by the Fund to the starving and destitute, with small doles to families who cannot support their children. I imported a wagon of Australian wheat to sell to poor Christians at three annas a pailee, below bazar rate in the district. I am keeping twelve boys—waifs and strays—in a little boarding-school at Yeola, and others are daily asking to be taken in."

Rev. R. A. Hume, who has been chairman of two great Famine Relief Committees, and who resigned the chairmanship of the Bombay Committee recently, being succeeded by Rev. Charles B. Hill, has arrived from India. Dr. Hume hopes to be able to tell the story of India's suffering to church audiences and other meetings during the next few months, if his health permits. He is still feeling the effects of the overstrain of the last few months, when he was head of the India Relief Committee. Any letters to him from churches and religious organizations may be addressed to the care of the Christian Herald.

The following additional contributions to the India Famine Relief Fund are acknowledged:

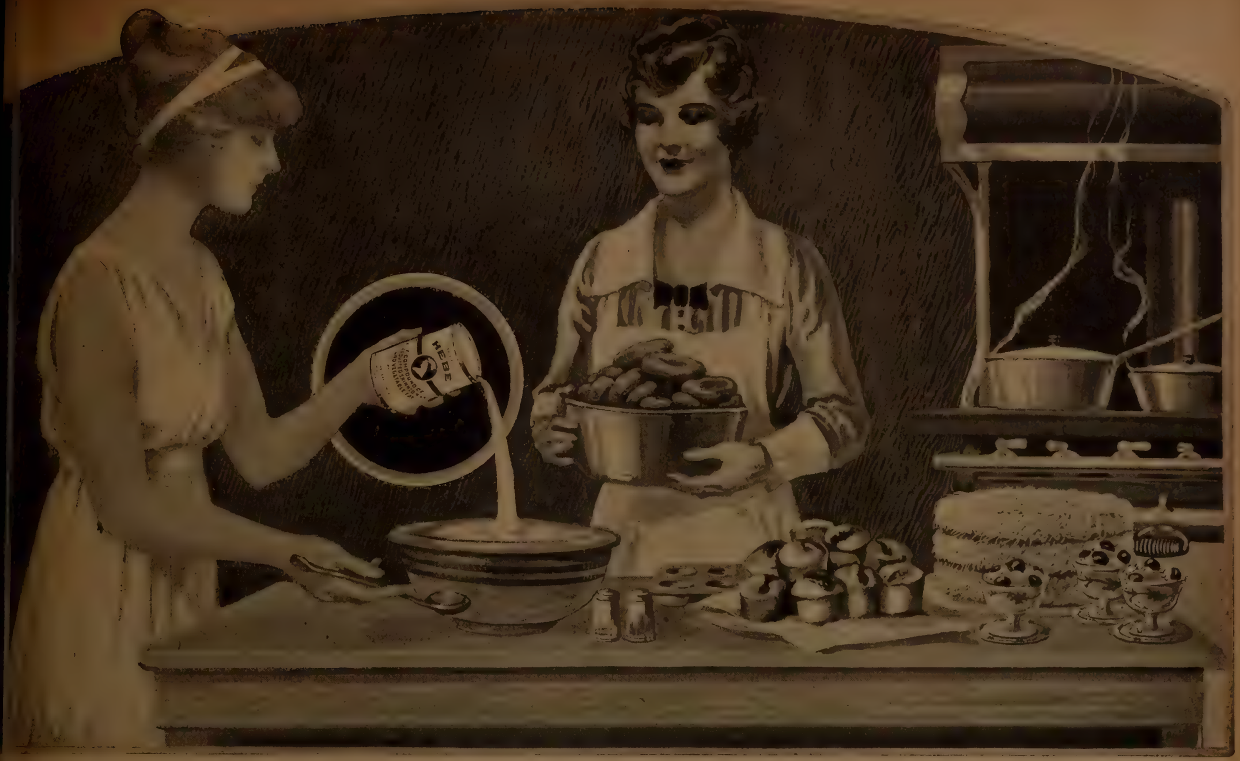
O H Allen	$2.00	Miss Elma L Bulette	$2.00
Mrs L E Clark	2 00	Deltha A Johnson	2.00
W L Zalman	2.00	I R Noel	2.00
Mrs L S Carson	2.00	Mrs Emma Briwer	2.00
——, Philadelphia, Pa.	2.00	Ida B Brandom	2.00
Mrs W S Oswego, Kans.	2.00	Mrs Emma Allen	2.00
Mrs R Plaff	2.00	Mrs William Mason	2.00
Mrs Mae Toft	2.00	Mrs E S Hickman	2.00
Mrs M J Killmer	2.00	Mrs Elizabeth J McCoy	2.00
S A C, Timber Lake, S D	2.00	Belle Martin	2.00
A Subscriber, in Glendale	2.00	H J Hayes	2.00
J C Rescher	2.00	Albert Siler	2.00
W O Petty	2.00	Mrs Herrick & Mrs Patchen	2.00
A Subscriber, Petersburg, Va.	2.00	A Friend, Runnels, Ia.	2.00
A D Clark	2.00	Mrs Martha A Jones & Daughter	2.00
Mrs W E Roberts	2.00	T J Robinson	2.00
Mr & Mrs B L Hill	2.00	A Friend, Upper Darby, Pa.	2.00
Agnes E Jones	2.00	J Y Johnson	2.00
Mrs Elma L Elliott	2.00

Gifts to the Christian Herald Fund for India Famine Re

J C Huntoon	$2.00
Miss Mary R Bill	2.00
Mrs M A Finfrock	2.00
Mrs Austin	2.00
C S Swink	2.00
Passaic Friend	2.00
S N Ward	2.00
Mrs Z P Jourdan	2.00
Mrs M A Webb	2.00
Samuel Smoyer	2.00
Mrs Eugene Pendleton	2.00
Effie B Copper	2.00
Mrs E Hartman	2.00
Mrs J E Bowman	2.00
Stephen L Coffin	2.00
Mrs Helen Auld	2.00
Mrs J W Robertson & Elsie	2.00
Clara Jacobson	2.00
Mrs Edger F Bell	2.00
Annie McHattie	2.00
Mrs Harry Wormuth	2.00
Mrs F Francis	2.00
Mr & Mrs Dean W Kelsey	2.00
Mrs Joe Stewart	2.00
Mrs Menger & Sister	2.00
J A Rohver	2.00
Esther Maines	2.00
Wm Johnson	2.00
Mrs C L Gronard	2.00
Mrs Fannie O Hellyer	2.00
Mrs Eddie Hayes	2.00
"One Who Cares," Yonkers, N J	2.00
H T Blackinton	2.00
I M M, Boston, Mass	2.00
A Friend, Scottsville, Va	2.00
A Friend, North Brookfield, Mass	2.00
J L Blistine	2.00
Mrs L A Ham	2.00
Mrs A M Bristol	2.00
A Friend, Sudlersville, Md	2.00
A Friend, from Morrisville	2.00
E R Jevens	2.00
Mrs Robert P Smith	2.00
Mrs H B Johnson	2.00
Mrs G L Baxter	2.00
Wm Littrell	2.00
Mrs P W Hayes	2.00
Mrs Sarah Woodworth	2.00
A Friend, Meshoppen, Pa	2.00
Charles A Farr	2.00
Mercy C Peters	2.00
C D Youngman	2.00
L F Crafts	2.00
Mrs Amanda Gibbs	2.00
D B Chaffee	2.00
Mr & Mrs Joel Kinns	2.00
Anna E Ibig	2.00
Mrs A N Mourse	2.00
Mrs Coslett	2.00
Hebron Friends	2.00
Mrs E C Hancock	2.00
N E Shoe	2.00
George M Bryan	2.00
Lillian O Hair	2.00
Edgar E Thomas	2.00
N. P Christensen	2.00
Mrs F N Hartwell	2.00
Mrs A C Pease	2.00
Louise Hoffman	2.00
J J Nagle	2.00
A Friend, Grand Rapids, Mich	2.00
Mattie Crosby	2.00
J B Rutherford	2.00
A Friend, Lakeville, O	2.00
Mrs B M Soule	2.00
E P Beers	2.00
Mrs John Smith	2.00
Mrs Frank E Parsons	2.00
Mrs A E Mead	2.00
Belle Hopkins	2.00
Mrs O W Chelsey	2.00
Julia E Kemp	2.00
Mrs H Stutzman	2.00
Mrs Lillie Woodard	2.00
Mrs D W Corwin	2.00
S A W, Nowvick, Ohio	2.00
Mrs Gertrude West	2.00
F Bellonny	2.00
Gertrude White	2.00
Ella L Peck	2.00
Mrs J C Hall	2.00
Mr W S Hutchinson	2.00
Hettie Rangt	2.00
Jacob B Seitz	2.00
Mrs Julia Caskey	2.00
Two Readers, Sycamore, Ill	2.00
E H Frary	2.00
E T R, Urbana, Ohio	2.00
Mrs Blemker	2.00
Mrs Jas Waters	2.00
Mrs Carrie Bloomquist	2.00
Peter Jensen	2.00
S Shaver	2.00
D D Doam	2.00
A Subscriber, Tiffin, O	2.00
Mary E Howard	2.00
Effie M Tassett	2.00
Mrs Carrie M Paynes	2.00
A Friend, Taunton, Mass	2.00
Rosa Shuman	2.00
Maney C Naught	2.00
Mrs W G James	2.00
A Subscriber, Minneapolis, Minn	2.00
Mrs J E Cornett	2.00
Emily & Sarah Evans	2.00
L C Mack	2.00
Mary J Williams	2.00
Miss L K Watkins	2.00
In His Name, Princeton, Ind	2.00
A Friend, Ohio	2.00
Mrs H C Rowland	2.00
Mrs E O Lewis	2.00
E K Behring	2.00
Mary Scofield	2.00
Mr & Mrs C R Lose	2.00
G M Knox	2.00
Mr & Mrs W H Wrede	$2.00
A Friend, Middletown, N Y	2.00
Olive Bergner	2.00
Mrs J N Bonesteel	2.00
Mrs Hawe Wilson	2.00
In the Fathers' Name, Center Lowell, Me	2.00
"Old Ontario"	2.00
Mrs M I Kirkpatrick	2.00
Elsie Gray	2.00
Mrs Mary Burns	2.00
L F Taylor	2.00
Miss L Wynm	2.00
Mrs Belle Richardson	2.00
Mrs J F Keeber	2.00
Lulu A Avery	2.00
Mrs Emma Bennett	2.00
Mrs H S Sechrist	2.00
Mrs E W Lewis	2.00
G W Luther	2.00
Mrs L Cobb	2.00
Mrs C Uelson	2.00
Mrs M C Bain & Mrs Maude Hill	2.00
Mrs M C Bain	2.00
Miss Maude Hill	2.00
Mrs O L Luther	.60
Rev W H Newton	2.00
Mrs Ira Yoger	2.00
Mr & Mrs C P Cady	2.00
M Wellman	2.00
Mrs H T Steele	2.00
Mrs F S Krapff	2.00
A Friend, K B	2.00
Mrs C M Justice	2.00
A Christian Herald Reader, Lebanon, O	2.00
Miss C L Chapin	2.00
Friend, Bristol, R I	1.00
C F Little	2.00
Friends, Sidell, Ill	2.00
J W Sprinkle	2.00
Geo Summer	2.00
Mrs N P Fleming & Daughter	2.00
J L Miller	2.00
C Weaver	2.00
William P Metcalf	2.00
Mrs J A J	2.00
F J Wilson	2.00
A Friend, Taftville, Conn	2.00
Mrs D M Stiles	2.00
Mrs John Sickles	2.00
Mrs V J Henderson	2.00
Mr & Mrs C E Carner	2.00
M C Goddard	2.00
Mrs John L Budd	2.00
Mrs C F Schumacker	2.00
Mrs Alice Puckett	2.00
Herriett Ruth Farmer	2.00
Mrs Mary E Gates	2.00
Mrs Daniel Searles	2.00
Mrs John B Niles	2.00
Eva E Chaddock	2.00
E A S, Syracuse, N Y	2.00
Mrs J D Johnson	2.00
Mrs J W Appleby	2.00
Mrs J Cochrane	2.00
Mrs E Zook	2.00
Marge Boone	1.50
B Smith	1.50
Mrs L T Smith	1.50
Mrs Thomas Sissons	1.50
Agnes A Coombes	1.50
Stella S Pope	1.50
Mrs C W Hagley	1.50
Mr & Mrs R O Dye	1.50
C F Barnes	1.50
Mrs E E Fitzgerald	1.00
E M New	1.00
B F Orr	1.00
Mrs B Richardson	1.00
Mrs W W Gonnest	1.00
N J Dixon	1.00
Mrs Lydia Daub	1.00
Mrs S E Chandler	1.00
Mrs Elma Snyder	1.00
Mrs R G Samuel	1.00
Mrs Wm Balcom	1.00
E M Buck	1.00
A Friend, Conde Lobean R P O	1.00
Hattie Cook	1.00
A Friend, Ala	1.00
Mrs Wm Stryker	1.00
A Friend and Reader, Troy, Ohio	1.00
L Mazer	1.00
Mrs S Hoge	1.00
Mrs H M Wright	1.00
Mrs Bettie Kneece Dreber	1.00
C P Ward	1.00
Mr & Mrs C f C	1.00
A Subscriber	1.00
Mrs Mary Burns	1.00
Mrs J W Ruff	1.00
Mary C Temple	1.00
Eligh Hall	1.00
Mary Alice Fox	1.00
Mr Placidia Thomas	1.00
Mrs E H Mead	1.00
Malvina Johnson	1.00
Mrs J A Rillig	1.00
Mrs George Smith	1.00
Mrs J S Magor	1.00
Florence Backus	1.00
J C Tregear	1.00
Mrs S A Bacon	1.00
Mrs G R Baker	1.00
Alfred Gorry	1.00
A Christian Herald Reader, Ambrioge, Pa	1.00
Mrs Rachel Felske	1.00
L A Struble	1.00
Mrs M M Rehm	1.00
Agnes Dickson	1.00
Mrs John Miller	1.00
A Friend, in Nebraska	1.00
Miss E V Fair	1.00
Mrs S T Bryant	1.00
Mary A Rich	1.00
Miss A Humuth	1.00
Mrs W C Carpenter	1.00
H A Fulton	1.00
Mrs D E Dhormley	$1.00
Mrs A H Anderson	1.00
George Bohn	1.00
Helen M Baker	1.00
Mrs D A Haney	1.00
Mrs N Dought Ford	1.00
Mrs J S Austin	1.00
Mrs W T Moore	1.00
Mrs R A Ginnell	1.00
Mrs Anna Taylor Bull	1.00
Mrs W Y Stoppard	1.00
E L Tanner	1.00
R A Forbes	1.00
Julia Gunn	1.00
J R Pott	1.00
Nina Crane	1.00
Anne Ward	1.00
A Friend, New Hampshire	1.00
Mrs S B Stringfield	1.00
Mrs E A Moss	1.00
A B Newell	1.00
In His Name	1.00
Mary Garnett	1.00
—, Marksboro, N J	1.00
Mrs Eliza J Trask	1.00
Mrs Cathren Davies	1.00
Q B C, Virginia, Ill	1.00
—, Boulder, Colo	1.00
—, Bowling Green, O	1.00
Mrs A W Rothenberger	1.00
Mrs L M Ryan	1.00
Mrs Alma Ackerty	1.00
Mrs F L Moore	1.00
Misses C A & E A Childs	1.00
Mrs S H Campbell	1.00
Matilda J Baker	1.00
L M Baker	1.00
J H Langesland	1.00
J Albert Holm	1.00
M E Dobyns	1.00
Mrs E A Lawrence	1.00
Clara Cecelia Gempf	1.00
Mrs L Murray	1.00
—, Knoxville, Tenn	1.00
Helen Thompson	1.00
A Friend, Rittmen	1.00
—, New Haven, Conn	1.00
Mrs A T Davis	1.00
A Friend & Subscriber, Waukee, Iowa	1.00
A Friend, M D, Winchester, N Dak	1.00
—, Waltham, Mass	1.00
Johanna Dork	1.00
C E Wallace	1.00
Mrs J W Merrill	1.00
S A Condim	1.00
A Widow, Jersey City, N J	1.00
Evelyn Garrigue	1.00
Mrs W M McCarthy	1.00
Mrs Lucy M Gilbert	1.00
A D G, Lebanon Spgs, N Y	1.00
Mabel C Artly	1.00
In His Name, Pawtucket, R I	1.00
Mrs T J Moore	1.00
Harriet M Moore	1.00
Nancy M Moore	1.00
Jean Hicklen Craig	1.00
Mart A Craig	1.00
H R H Attica	1.00
B P Cox	1.00
In His Name, New York	1.00
Mrs W T Barnes	1.00
A Friend, Trenton, N J	1.00
Mrs S D Cornelius	1.00
L B D, Wisping Winds, N Y	1.00
Mrs H L [illegible]	1.00
Mr & Mrs C P Ward	1.00
Neil Campbell	1.00
Mrs Mary Merrill	1.00
James J S Lisman	1.00
Helen R Bacon	1.00
F L Randall	1.00
A Friend, Saginaw, Mich	1.00
——, Cass City, Mich	1.00
Mrs Carl Gere	1.00
Carrie Rowe	1.00
Mrs J C Bladsell	1.00
C A Laird	1.00
Mrs Al Brown	1.00
Mrs H M Bagley	1.00
Emmeline Asmand	1.00
Carl Oberg	1.00
Mrs Richard Smith	1.00
V A Cushman	1.00
Mrs C I Cook	1.00
Mrs Maggie Brill	1.00
A Friend, Illinois	1.00
Mrs W C George	1.00
Mrs L E Bennett	1.00
A Reader of the Christian Herald, Oakfield, Ohio	1.00
A Friend, Danbury, Conn	1.00
Mrs W W Groop	1.00
Mrs H F Foiefubor	1.00
——, Arlington Heights, Ill	1.00
Mrs Julius	1.00
Mrs L B Evans	1.00
Elsie B Pershing	1.00
M F N, Pittsburg, Pa	1.00
"One who has never suffered from hunger," Boston, Mass	1.00
A W Canady	1.00
Mrs G G Clark	1.00
Mrs E A S, Linglestom, Pa	1.00
George W Estill	1.00
Mrs Lydia Houghton	1.00
A Reader	1.00
In His Name, St. Petersburg	1.00
Mrs Mary E Tawney	1.00
A Friend, New York	1.00
A Friend, Norwich, Conn	1.00
Mrs Rubright	1.00
Mrs W C West	1.00
Mrs B Trubel	1.00
Mrs Annette Conly	1.00
Mrs Darnius Davis	1.00
Mrs Eunice Wood	$1.00
Mrs. Frank Wiborg, Pa	1.00
Mrs W A Calhoun	1.00
Mrs S N Dawson	1.00
Mrs S Ostmont	1.00
M D Rahway	1.00
Jessie Gardner	1.00
M A Woodward	1.00
A Friend, Evestis, Fla	1.00
Mrs C P Hartwegson	1.00
A Friend, Winchendon	1.00
Mrs William Evans	1.00
Miss E N Smith	1.00
Mildred Finley	1.00
Mrs Frank Mackenzie	1.00
Mrs Fannie Fox	1.00
Jennie L Laceg	1.00
Mrs Anna Howarth	1.00
T H Workman	1.00
Jane Carey	1.00
S Bridgewates	1.00
Isabel Frages	1.00
Mrs A Hallowell	1.00
E E Waltham	1.00
Wm G Johnson	1.00
Mrs G W Spaulding	1.00
George Wondard	1.00
Mrs J Schant	1.00
Mrs H Weier	1.00
Mrs J Ernisch	1.00
Mrs C S Kinghorn	1.00
Mrs Grace Sprague	1.00
Mrs S E Joy	1.00
Mrs C W Thompson	1.00
Mrs C R Kinghom	1.00
Nellie Brown	1.00
A Friend, Rose, N Y	1.00
Miss M E McDoell	1.00
Mrs Chas Strong	1.00
A Friend, Union Broome Co, New York	1.00
Mrs G Westerwood	1.00
Estella Henderson	1.00
A Friend, Sioux Falls, S Dak	1.00
Margaret Brown	1.00
Miss Caroline Bond	1.00
Miss E T Kyte	1.00
Mrs Lewis Adgate	1.00
Edward A Finch	1.00
Mrs J P Stewart	1.00
Grace M Howes	1.00
A Friend, LaConner, Wash	1.00
M Medford, Hillside, Mass	1.00
A Reader of the Christian Herald	1.00
A Friend	1.00
A Friend, Selvla, Ala	1.00
Reader, A, Litchfield, Penn	1.00
A Friend, Crosby, Ala	1.00
A Friend, Manchester, Vt	1.00
Mrs Grace M Swift	1.00
Mrs Elizabeth Hinkle	1.00
Miss Lela Dickson	1.00
I Shurt	1.00
A - Shut - in - King's-Daughter, Peekskill, N Y	1.00
Ben Alexander	1.00
Mrs L C Wood	1.00
Miss Anne V De Janette	1.00
Mrs W T Hanes	1.00
Mrs Zora L Calhoun	.50
Mrs Dora Spencer	.50
Mrs Florence Coldwell	.50
Mrs D R Rockwell	.50
Mrs W G Parcell	.50
Martha A Ames	.50
Mrs Margard	.50
Mrs R V Sprague	.50
Mrs C W Sprague	.50
Mr Chas W Ingalls	.50
Carleton Kinghorn	.25
Presbyterians & friends of Christiansburg, Va	130.00
Mrs J J Callahan	4.00
Mrs C L Hibbard	7.00
Mrs W H Pierce	.50
Mrs Emma C Hendra	9.00
Miss M W G Carper	9.00
Mrs Peter Swanson	30.00
Anna C Boyer	35.00
Mrs M E Dole	40.00
Julia Herzog	12.00
August Stewig	12.00
Marion M. Wood	6.50
Mrs George Brooks	7.00
Mr & Mrs Charles W Murphy	6.00
W E Phillips	6.00
Miss Bertha Roberts	.75
J E Jayne	5.10
F M Fritz	7.00
Mrs George W Pease	4.00
N Buchanon	7.50
Rev & Mrs C H Stickle	125.00
Mrs F C McClintock	4.00
Lucy Charles	4.00
Laura D Brooks	250.00
A Friend, Mass	30.00
Mrs E A Clabough	9.00
Mrs F B Turden & Friends	8.00
Mrs M G Wallace	8.00
Mrs H A Ward	.75
Mrs Croswell	1.65
S E W	2.12
Mrs T F Maynard	35.00
Miss Maud L Miller	30.00
Mrs John Richards	3.50
Sunday School at Silverton, Ore	5.50
Mrs A J Gamble	22.00
Mrs Emma A Every	7.00
Mrs Geo Bechtel	6.00
Elizabeth M Hess	8.00
Walter Hess	.10
Mrs A C Han	7.00
Mrs W W Jones	7.00
E & S, West Union, O	6.00
Weimer Sunday School	12.00
Miss G Moen & Mrs Wm Wallace	7.50
Mrs Paul Beck	2.25
Jas S Horner	3.60
Mrs J A Kimer	$4.00
Rose E Briggs	2.75
Mrs W M Grubb	2.75
Hjalmer A Rude	4.00
Mrs John Kohnke	4.00
John Westwood	4.50
——, Arlington Hts., Ill	.55
A Reader of the Herald	1.24
Mrs Mary Laidlaw	28.15
Eva Tawzer	44.00
Mrs A L Carpenter	2.90
Mrs Anna Wagner	12.00
Miss Edith Nichols	4.00
Mrs J Cox Runkin	2.00
Mrs M L Hill	6.00
Sallie E Hudson	4.08
Eva Spansler	12.00
Miss M E Gardner	11.32
Owen E Thomas	6.00
Otege Christian S S	28.00
E B Kemp	70.00
B L Wyman	4.00
C E Society	31.25
Miss Ina Eby	6.00
Wm Rouse	7.00
Junior Red Cross of the Yellow Branch School	7.50
Mrs F C Schuttler	15.31
Miss Marion Pitts	8.00
E R Eckert	7.00
Mrs Fred M Killits	6.00
Miss Clara Hamphill & the Anderson Boys	3.50
Mr. Belle McCormick	4.00
Mrs G F Kauffman	13.00
Annie B Randall	6.00
The Odell Guild, Odell Ore	39.25
Mrs Anna Gunther	6.50
Mrs Sarah Burnham	7.00
Miss Julia Scott	10.00
Mrs C R Traver	15.01
Sarah A Thayer	7.00
Mrs Joshua B Bowles	13.00
Frances Cayaden	1.06
J M Thomas	4.00
Mrs R F Whithey & Iva	4.70
Mrs Daniel Kauffman	4.00
Miss Elisa F Roszel	50.00
Effie B Davis	40.00
J A McRae	3.50
Maggie Evans	4.00
E Moore	3.50
J W Manning	40.00
Jessie Burbridge	12.00
Cora Hamilton	8.00
Mrs J Cluff	18.00
Fred Baur	2.02
M A R, Elizabeth, N J	4.00
Bert Benton	30.00
Henry Leyh	42.50
Mr & Mrs J E Norvitt	6.00
Charles Hutchman	6.00
Mrs A W Ritter & Mrs C E Warner	6.00
Mrs W E McCarthy	21.40
Mr & Mrs Geo Radmore	4.00
Altoria Club—YWCA	4.00
Miss A K Hoersch	30.00
Mrs E G White	2.35
Jennie Drake	.50
Mr & Mrs Chas Philips	50.00
Carl L Hanson	50.00
Mrs A G Irvin	50.00
Ben Chester	50.00
Mrs Clara Cook	50.00
E B Andrews	50.00
Frank I Johnson	50.00
F G Feaster	50.00
J E Green	100.00
Nellie Bunner	100.00
D R Freeman	20.00
Mr & Mrs D T Allens	20.00
H A Krause	20.00
Mrs D R Branch	20.00
Mr & Mrs F M Williamson	20.00
E M Dunn	20.00
C H Davis	20.00
Nels G Berkahder	20.00
D K Hyatt	20.00
Mrs Ellen Buren	20.00
Mr & Mrs J E Nichelson	20.00
H D Calhoun	25.00
Minnie Weisenberger	25.00
J A Althouse	25.00
N B Atascaderi, Cal	25.00
Jennie Veon	25.00
S E Lewis	25.00
Mrs Henry Gerwig	25.00
Mr & Mrs W Waikens	25.00
Mrs Jeff Gilespie	25.00
Miss Mary C Abrams	25.00
Miss Harriet E Abrams	25.00
A E Same	25.00
H A Cravell	25.00
G W Gensemer	25.00
W A Staley	25.00
H Bowvell	25.00
Wm Sayer	25.00
Mr & Mrs Louis Brandt	25.00
M F Sureth	25.00
Wm R Knox	25.00
Julia Collins	25.00
Mr & Mrs Homer Conner	25.00
Miss Nellie B Foster	25.00
Mrs Geo H Smiley	25.00
Miss Grace De Frust	5.00
C F Cissna	5.00
Mr & Mrs D H Phelps	5.00
Mrs George S Lazell	5.00
Mr & Mrs Denman	5.00
Mrs Hattie Shaff	5.00
Thomas C Maxwell	5.00
Lydia J Willahan	5.00
Mrs J B Curry	5.00
F Z Miller	5.00
Mrs. Charles Fisher	5.00
Mrs Wm Robb	5.00
D B Jewitt	5.00
Emma Cadwallader	5.00
Mrs Lydia Walker	5.00
George N Estill	5.00
Mrs George Draper	5.00
J L Boyd	5.00
C D Gearhart	5.00
Bethany Mite Society	5.00
Howe M Borpis	5.00
John Klompenhouser
J C Farquhar
Mrs Hopkins
The Downers, Grove
K Vlot
A Subscriber, New Y
Mrs Jennie Graham
Miss A Wilkins
G L Carter
Mr & Mrs L E Dudly
E A Ives
Mrs J H McCarthy
Mrs D J Duke
Mamma N Miller
Alice E Nutt
Mrs W W Sears
Flora B Detrick
A Wolfenberger
Mrs J H McCarthy
A F Strong
Mr & Mrs W E Watts
Mrs Catherine Matz
Miss A Smith
Mr & Mrs W I Crafts
Mrs O J Little
Anna Closs
Marie L Bergmer
——, A Friend, Wis
A Reader, Marshaltown, Iowa
A Reader, Edmund, W
Mrs A S, Jerseyville, I
Jennie G Sunenville
A F Hillman
Hope Gilman
Mrs P Gilfellen
Clara B Lind
Mrs E J Glendening
Pearl Cook
Mrs Joe Hedrick
A Friend, Brockport, N
V C Miller
Mrs P NauPensen
Violette E Waldo
Mrs George W Chadwi
Mrs Harriet H Ash
Nora Massey
——, Spokane, Wash
R A Davidson
Mr & Mrs Watts & fami
A Williams
M M Utterback
Sadie Batho
Mrs J B Shaffer
Rufas White
Mary A Yeats
Mrs Herrick
Mr & Mrs A C Neal
Ella G Kipp
William Gorsuch
Mrs Ben Yoder
Mrs Jane Poole
A Friend, Cedar Falls, Ia
Paul K Frymyer
Mrs Alice Thompson
M W Thayer
C P Peirce
Elen Herman
Aksola
Mrs Charles D Lames
Mr & Mrs Loren Campbell
Earl D Cowles
Sarah E Willeson
W N Oles
Mrs C Louise Adams
Mr & Mrs J V Blakelidge
Mrs J C Edden
Mr & Mrs Gleason
Sarah B James
Mrs James Vanas
Mrs Frances Campbell
Wm C Kannedy
Mr & Mrs G S Kusman
George C Newboldt
H Frank Harman
Cartherine L Weinhart
Hattie Bunoughs
Mrs Gerrit Jansma
Mrs Phodo Ford
Mrs Wm Baker
Mrs H J Seicus
Mary B Van Voorhus
Mrs Charles Helling
Mrs A R Eddy
Mrs M C Fuierheim
Peter Jeuni
Adolph Erkel
A Subscriber, Los Angeles, Cal
N P Smith
John Grant
Simon Kallenmeyer
C Averill
——, Pacific Grove, Cal
Mrs F Dunn
——, Los Angeles, Cal
John Le Davis
Sadie E Brown
Mrs A B F
L E Lanly
Mrs D R Acheson
Geo S Jeffrey
L D Yeargon
A Blanch Ludwig
L M Figger
James Matchett
Clara E Raymond
M B White
Mrs F L Hubbell
A Reader & Friend
Mrs Callie Baker
Mrs J R Rasmerssen
Mrs G W Booth
Mrs C L Stringer
Mrs S J Niles
Mrs Sebert Jones
Isabella Seaton
Mrs H Cothill
Joseph Tole
Grace W Shaffstall
J T Tarbex
Mrs E A Cederberg
A C Lowe

Additional acknowledgme in subsequent issues of the Chr tian Herald.

Send All Gifts to the India Famine Fund, Christian Herald, Bible House, New York Cit



HEBE

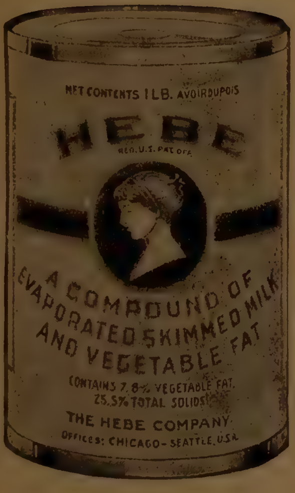
—the new food product has a distinctive place in the home

It is a compound, consisting of evaporated skimmed milk enriched by pure, edible cocoanut fat, scientifically combined so as to form a wholesome, nutritious and economical food product for use in—

Cooking—Baking—Coffee

Hebe makes soups, sauces and gravies, creamy and rich—to biscuits, breads, cakes and puddings, Hebe gives a quality of lightness, delicacy and smoothness that is most delightful—for desserts it whips up wonderfully.

Just try Hebe—you'll find that it makes everything you cook more tasty. It not only improves the flavor and consistency, but being rich in protein for tissue building, fat for fuel and carbohydrates for energy, it adds to the food value of the dishes prepared.



NET CONTENTS 1 LB. AVOIRDUPOIS
HEBE
REG. U.S. PAT. OFF.
A COMPOUND OF EVAPORATED SKIMMED MILK AND VEGETABLE FAT CONTAINS 7.8% VEGETABLE FAT. 25.5% TOTAL SOLIDS
THE HEBE COMPANY
OFFICES: CHICAGO-SEATTLE, U.S.A.

Delicious in Coffee, Too!

—and remember it is economical—it is convenient. Hebe is produced in modern plants located in the country amid wholesome surroundings—put up in hermetically sealed tins and sterilized.

Include Hebe in your grocery order today. Send for a copy of the Hebe Book of Recipes, address—

The Hebe Company

Home Economy Dept., 2603 Consumers Building, Chicago

© 1919 T H C.

Hot and Flavory
In Two Minutes

Two-Minute Oat Food
Already 3-Hour Cooked

"I'm Ready"

Think of it—a hot, super-cooked oat dish ready in two minutes. Housewives for a hundred years have wanted such an oat food.

Not merely cooked, but super-cooked. We cook the oat grits three hours by live steam at higher than boiling heat.

Not merely good, as oat food always is, but extra-good. This high-heat cooking gives a new, exquisite flavor.

½-Cup — 4 Dishes

After cooking we evaporate the oats. This preserves the food and flavor. Stir one-half cup in two cups boiling water and you have four big dishes of a most delightful oat food, seemingly just cooked.

Now this supreme food—the food that everybody needs—is quick, well-cooked and uniquely delicious. You have waited all your life for such a dish. Get it today. Price, 15 cents.

The Quaker Oats Company

(3106)

Rider Agents Wanted

Everywhere to ride and exhibit the new Ranger "Motorbike" completely equipped with electric light and horn, carrier, stand, tool tank, coaster-brake, mud guards and anti-skid tires. Choice of 44 other styles, colors and sizes in the famous "Ranger" line of bicycles.

DELIVERED FREE on approval and 30 DAYS TRIAL. Send for big free catalog and particulars of our Factory-direct-to-Rider marvelous offers and terms.

TIRES Lamps, Horns, Wheels, Sundries, and parts for all bicycles—at half usual prices.

SEND NO MONEY but tell us exactly what you need. Do not buy until you get our prices, terms and the big FREE catalog.

MEAD CYCLE COMPANY
Dept. H-71 CHICAGO

YOUR FUTURE

Depends on how you prepare yourself now. Personal power lies in the Art of Expression

Its study will make you more successful and increase your popularity and earning power.

WE TEACH
ELOCUTION
BY MAIL

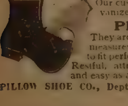
Whatever your occupation or position, you can improve by our course in Public Speaking, dramatic reading and entertaining, which includes physical culture and voice training. Mothers and teachers can instruct their children to recite

Graduates receive handsome diplomas.

Send 6c. in stamps for Illustrated Recitation

THE MERRILL SCHOOL OF EXPRESSION
Dept. 10, 2905 Woodward Ave., Detroit, Michigan

Ladies—Ease Your Feet



Our custom made, unlined, Vici Kid, O'Sullivanized PILLOW SHOES give

PERFECT COMFORT

They are made to order specially for you from measures you send us and we guarantee them to fit perfectly and give you complete satisfaction. Restful, attractive-looking, light-weight, durable, and easy as a glove. A postal to us will tell you how.

PILLOW SHOE CO., Dept. O, 184 Summer St., Boston, Mass.

CHANSUNG'S CONFESSION

Continued from page 717

"And this is Sa Moksa (Pastor Sa)," said Sa Puin as the tall man entered, and paused a moment to greet each with a pleasant, "Are you in peace?" before he passed to his study.

Choonwha could hardly wait till they were alone outside to give vent to her emotion. "Oh, isn't it just lovely—the house, I mean, and all the pretty things; and the Puin—isn't she a dear? No wonder you all love her! And to think of all the horrid lies our people tell about the foreigners. It is shameful!" To all of which Yungpok agreed.

The next day was the "Lord's Day." Yungpok had risen early and dressed the children in their Sunday best before the morning rice. Prayers were longer this morning than usual, Yungpok's husband reading and explaining the lesson the Christians were to study at the morning service. Choonwha followed the reading in her own red Bible.

Soon the great bell behind the church began to ring, and she and Yungpok and the children started up the hill together.

"This first hour is just for women," Yungpok said. "The men meet later."

And truly enough, there were no men present. A different foreign lady presided. Yungpok explained that Sa Puin attended another church in a different part of the city.

At first all the women sang together and the foreign Puin prayed. Then they all divided into classes and studied the day's lesson.

Choonwha sat with Yungpok but heard little of what was said, so interested was she in the great building and all that went on around her.

In the afternoon the meeting was quite different. The church was crowded, the men occupying one wing and the women the other. On the platform high at the front were seated some ten Korean elders and foreign pastors.

A Korean elder named Kang preached. Yungpok told Choonwha that this man was now assistant pastor, but that he would soon graduate from the seminary and be installed pastor of the church.

Before the sermon, one of the foreign pastors came forward and led the singing. What a voice he had! It rang through the church like a trumpet:

"Je — sus loves me! this I know,
For the Bi—ble tells me so."

How the people sang! A thousand voices, old and young; the school children especially fairly split their throats with the chorus;

"Yes, Je — sus loves me! Yes, Je—sus loves me!
Yes, Je—sus loves me! Yes, Bi—ble tells me so."

Elder Kang's sermon was very interesting, though much of it was new to Choonwha and beyond her comprehension. He told many simple stories which made his hearers sometimes laugh and sometimes cry.

Choonwha understood very well when he said that God was good and loved all his children with more than a father's love—that all the trouble and sorrow on earth was caused by sin, and that the greatest sin of all was not to love God; yet God loved men still and sent His Son Jesus to die in men's stead, and that all who believe in Jesus God will forgive and bless.

CHAPTER XI

Choonwha's Decision

CHOONWHA knew in her heart that it must be true. She had borne her burden of sin so long that she would gladly have laid it down that day; but as she listened a picture of an old man with a proud, yet kindly, sorrow-lined face came before her. Elder Han had been more than a father to her. He would never be a Christian. Choonwha knew that if she came to believe in Jesus it would break the Elder's heart, and she left the church deeply troubled.

The boat began its return trip to Tai Pyeng Dong early the next morning. Only once before they parted did Yungpok refer to the subject that lay heavily on her heart.

"What have you decided, Choonwha? Are you going back to Tai Pyeng Dong a Christian? Oh, how I hope you are!"

Choonwha answered, "If only I could; but it is too hard; it would break the Elder's heart, and he would drive me from his home."

"As for that," said Yungpok, "we must pray for him too. God can change the hardest hearts. No matter what others do or say, each of us must do what is right; and always remember, dear, if you should be driven out, my home is yours."

Thus they parted. Once more the men were at the oars, rowing hard against the current crossing to the other side. The brushwood had been sold and in its place the men had built a small house with mats for the return trip, which would take two days.

Reaching the farther bank, all the men but two went ashore and began pulling the boat up stream with a long rope securely tied to the boat's mast. In still water, the boat moved steadily forward; but in the rapids every inch was a contest. Choonwha forgot her trouble then and crowded forward with the rest to watch the battle. How the men's muscles stood out as they toiled at the rope, leaning far forward and fighting for every inch! The mast creaked and bent. Every timber in the long boat seemed to move and groan in pain, and over all was the roar of the rushing flood and the spray in their faces.

Once the rope broke and the water grew strangely still as the boat swept down with the current, losing fully two hundred yards before the steersman could force its prow to shore, where the men held it fast while the stern swung around like a whip in the current.

Choonwha knew this was dangerous and paled with the other women. When all was over she looked down at the Bible in her hands, for she had been reading it all morning, and almost unconsciously lifted her heart in her first prayer of gratitude to God.

The return trip to Tai Pyeng Dong was made without further accident. Elder Han and most of the villagers awaited them at the landing and Choonwha recommenced her life in the Elder's home apparently where she had left it. There were no Christians in Tai Pyeng Dong, and Choonwha was relieved to be able to read her precious new book alone without being forced to any open decision. She had seen much of the Christian life in her few days in Pyeng Yang, and in the simplest fashion began to imitate her friends in speaking her thoughts to God as she read her Bible, scarcely realizing that she was praying. The only outward sign of the change that was being wrought within was her increased devotion to the Elder and greater thoughtfulness in helping others.

So the days moved swiftly on, as happy, peaceful days will, and the old year was gone and Choonwha awoke to the fact that her testing time had come. The cakes for the New Year sacrifices were being prepared. The Elder relied upon her to sacrifice with him, and she could not, for her decision had been made, not in one day, or in one hour, but in all the days and hours since her return from Pyeng Yang. Choonwha realized now that she had long been a Christian at heart. She could not sacrifice without sin against God. She must choose where she would stand. No longer, like Nicodemus, could she be a believer in secret. But oh, it was hard! Death itself would have been easier for this loving-hearted girl than to say the words she knew would pierce the Elder's soul. Truly, she thought, Jesus brought not peace, but a sword when he said: "He that loveth father or mother more than me is not worthy of me."

Far into the night she fought the battle and found no peace or victory till Yungpok's parting words came to her memory: "We must pray for him too. God can change the proudest heart. No matter what other do, each of us must do what i Kneeling in the darkness, sh out her soul in prayer for the E committed herself to God, and l ness became light.

The next morning she sou Elder in his room. His face lit saw her coming. "What a wo is!" he thought; "both son and ter to me!"

Coming to his side, Choonw her hand upon his head. " you know that I love you. Not world would I disobey you or ca grief; but I cannot sacrifice You did not know, but Yung become a Christian and I lea believe in Jesus while I was in Yang."

For a moment the Elder sat dazed; then his face paled. "W you mean, child? You know no ter of mine can be a Christian. let me hear you say such words But come; you are sick, I an Never mind the sacrifice tonig will go in alone this year."

"No," said Choonwha, "I a sick and you must not misunde I have become a believer in Jes cannot sacrifice, because I kno wrong."

Quick anger flushed the Elder's face; but he controlled himself w effort. "What strange talk is Surely you cannot mean that you low foreigners and their nonse my love and my home!"

"Oh," cried Choonwha, "you it too hard! God knows I lov better than my own life; but, fat must obey God. Father, O fath not turn away!"

The Elder's voice sounded st and hollow; "Then choose betwe and this nonsense. You canno here and be a Christian."

Once more Choonwha's face turned toward Pyeng Yang. time she rode in a chair instead o boat. Then she went gaily away t holiday in the city. Now her swam with tears so that she scarcely see the dear home she leaving. She had hoped against to the last that the Elder would re but such proud spirits as his may b but know no relenting.

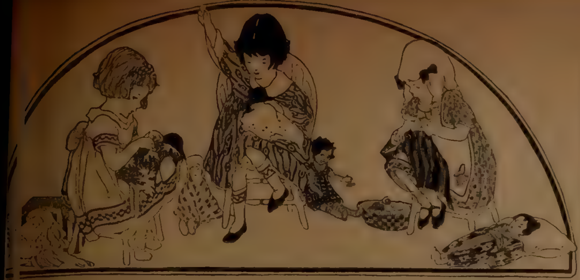
Without a word he had seen her paring to leave, and at the very last busied himself at his desk, refusing to look up when she came to say g by. It was not only that he hated despised the foreigners and their trine; but the thought that Choon could choose them rather than him had given her a father's love was r than he could bear.

Choonwha found a welcome in Py Yang. Except for the constant thou of the Elder's loneliness and suffer she would have been completely ha in her new home.

One day she and Yungpok wen see Elder Kang. To Choonwha's prise she found he was almost bl Choonwha wished to join the ch and had decided that she ought to Elder Kang about her past life, and great sin she had committed in qu reling with her husband.

The Elder was deeply moved at story of a great life tragedy so sim told. He was interested, too, to le from Yungpok that her friend posses so unusual an education. Was it po ble, he asked, for Choonwha to as in teaching the girls? Trained teach were almost impossible to secure, a it would be a great blessing if Choonw could help in the school. Choonw gladly consented. Work was just wh she needed. At first she taught o Chinese to the older girls, being hers ignorant of the modern subjects int duced into the Christian school; but h quick mind readily mastered the oth branches. With some assistance fr one of the missionary ladies, she w able in less than a year to teach eleme tary arithmetic and geography, and h become the most valued teacher in t Pyeng Yang Girls' School.

To be continued



A Missionary Sewing Circle

'he Spirit of the Children's Games

By Marie K. Chaffee

MOTHER, may we play 'carpenter'?" a little four-year-old asked one morning.

rtainly, boys," was mother's And soon Robert and two of his s were hunting down cellar for pieces of wood to make a table. had made tables of paper and oard, so why not of wood? Of mother had to help them ham- he nails in tight, but the boys the wood and fitted the pieces ier.

n mother sang and acted with the kindergarten Carpenter Song!

3usy is the carpenter,
At his work he stands.
)h, the wonders he can do
With his skilful hands!
Sawing, now, the long, long boards
Shorter soon he makes;
And the rough is quickly smoothed
When the plane he takes.
—EMILIE POULSSON.

was a delightful morning for the and for mother also, and the dinner came all too soon.

om that time on the carpenter shop in that family, keeping the boys y and happily occupied for hours stretch. They soon came to realize the house they lived in was the of men who toiled busily every and they became much interested new house which was being built in neighborhood and which they ed as often as possible. Then, too, boy's imaginations were wonder- developed, for they were really enters. They would leave their k and go home for the noon meal, ring their luncheon in boxes to eat ng the pretended noon hour. And ight they would shut up shop, put y all tools carefully and go home to r families.

he action of these games is easy to gine and the children delight in it. seen little Italian boys work so l over an imaginary forge and anvil ; their hands became red from exertion. There are other games of a similar nature, such as the Miner, the Shoemaker and the Fireman.

It seems to me the importance of the trade games cannot be emphasized enough. Froebel said a hundred years ago, "What the child imitates he begins to understand," and how important that he should feel the honor we owe to them through whose labor we are blessed with food, clothing and shelter! By devising a series of simple games in which the child imitates the activity of various workmen, Froebel showed how it was possible to guide the play interest of the child in such a way as to implant in him the first realization of the gratitude that is due to labor.

If the mother possesses and fosters such understanding and respect, the influence and good that will result are sure to have far-reaching effects upon the child and the community.

That Word "Obey"

By Marion Harland

"WOULD it be practicable, and desirable for the word 'obey' in the marriage service to be changed into the words 'respond to'? I have understood that the word 'obey' is often eliminated. I believe, with most of us 'respond to' conveys quite as strong spiritual meaning."—E. E. C. (Colorado.)

In my judgment, a better way out of a difficulty that has perplexed hundreds of thoughtful Christian folk was voiced by an eminent clergyman who has joined in the holy bonds of matrimony over a thousand couples during a pastorate of fifty-odd years. He enjoined the woman to be a "loving, faithful and dutiful wife." When questioned as to his reason for the innovation, he said: "The women of today are neither children nor slaves. I will not tempt them to perjury. It is sometimes the duty of a true wife to disobey the mandates of an unprincipled husband. She consults his best interests in so doing."

The point was well taken.

Are Your Children Puny?

SO, the probabilities are that they re not getting the proper food to ce them strong.

s your husband flabby? Maybe he ot eating the victuals that build n and brawn.

s your own energy and strength be- normal? Probably your nourish- nt satisfies your appetite and main- ns your weight at normal but does not ply the elements that produce vigor.

Every house- e every day responsible the repro- tion of the rld's greatest sterpiece, e human dy. She oses the ma- ials which into her own me, that of r husband, ose of her ldren.

The govern- nt has published a book, "How to Select Foods," which tells the housewife just what foods the human body needs, in what proportions it needs them, how much strength-building there is in each, how to get most tissue material for a dollar.

Fill in the attached coupon, writing plainly, mail it as indicated, enclosing a two-cent stamp for return postage, and get FREE this valuable book.

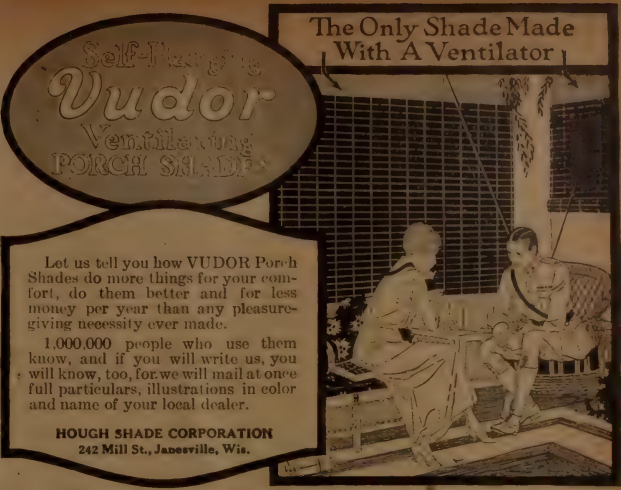
CHRISTIAN HERALD INFORMATION BUREAU
Frederic J. Haskin, Director,
Washington, D. C.

Enclosed find a two-cent stamp for return postage for which you will please send me the book "How to Select Foods."

Name. . . . .

Street Address. . . . .

City. . . . . State. . . . .



Let us tell you how VUDOR Porch Shades do more things for your comfort, do them better and for less money per year than any pleasure-giving necessity ever made.

1,000,000 people who use them know, and if you will write us, you will know, too, for we will mail at once full particulars, illustrations in color and name of your local dealer.

HOUGH SHADE CORPORATION
242 Mill St., Janesville, Wis.

MARVEL COMPLETE

FREE TRIAL

BATH OUTFIT HOT WATER

BIG BATH TUB

No Sewer or Plumbing—Move Anywhere

The Thermotub, combined bathtub and water heater. Gives all comforts of modern bathroom. Full length tub. Plenty hot water quick. Write today. Ask also about our Odorless Indoor Closet and Washstand. Make any room complete bathroom.

HOM-EQUIP NAT'L HOME EQUIPMENT CO.
106 Nat'l Building, Detroit, Mich.

"DON'T SHOUT"

"I hear you. I can hear now as well as anybody. 'How?' With THE MORLEY PHONE. I've a pair in my ears now, but they are invisible. I would not know I had them in, myself, only that I hear all right.

"The Morley Phone for the DEAF is to the ears what glasses are to the eyes. Invisible, comfortable, weightless and harmless. Anyone can adjust it." Over one hundred thousand sold. Write for booklet and testimonials.

THE MORLEY CO., Dept. 752, Perry Bldg., Phila.

Tractors, Trucks and Trailers Can Save Money on Every Farm

If They Are Properly Selected

IT IS the business of the Motor Service Bureau of The Christian Herald to help its readers choose the tractor, truck or trailer best suited to their needs.

If you will give us the information called for on the following coupon we will give you unbiased expert advice free of charge.

Check the machine in which you are interested.

Tractor . . . . . . Truck . . . . Trailer . . . . No. acres on which tractor can be used . . . .

Nature of land . . . .

Distance to railway or other distributing point . . . . Kind of roads . . . .

Kind of crops . . . . Volume or weight of crops transported annually . . . .

Make of tractor, truck or trailer preferred . . . .

Approximate investment available for purchase . . . .

Motor equipment already owned by me . . . .

Name . . . .

Address . . . .

A NEW SONG BOOK WITH A MISSION

Songs of Liberty

Compiled by HUBERT P. MAIN

Songs That Inspire the True Ideals of Americanism

For Community Sings, Patriotic Gatherings, Sunday Evening Services, Colleges, Public and Private Schools, Boys' Camps, Y. M. C. A.'s, Americanization Centers, the American Home, and wherever a clear expression of Americanism is desired.

REAL AMERICANISM A SURE BARRIER AGAINST BOLSHEVISM

Teach the Americans of Tomorrow
- the good old Moody & Sankey gospel hymns you know and love. There is a splendid collection of these.
- the National Airs and Patriotic Songs of our own and all Allied Nations; including the popular War Songs of today.
- the dear old Ballads that remain in our hearts throughout the years. The best of these are included.
- the beloved Melodies of the South, all of which are carefully selected and written to their most familiar tunes.

DON'T UNDER-ESTIMATE THE VALUE OF GOOD SINGING

It is an ever active power for good in the Church, Home, School and Community

SINGING BUILDS CHARACTER AND PATRIOTISM

Send 35c today for a postpaid "HOME COPY" $30 per 100 in quantities, carriage extra.

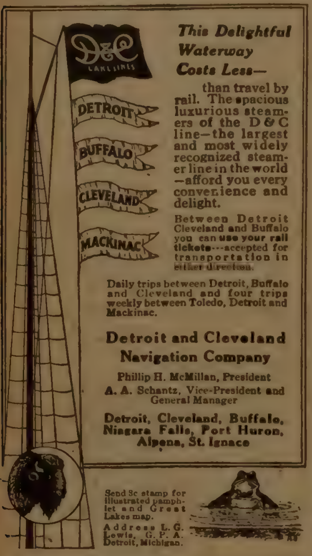
THE BIGLOW & MAIN CO.
Dept. 1B 156 Fifth Avenue, New York
THE PILGRIM PRESS
Dept. 1C 19 W. Jackson St., Chicago



This Delightful Waterway Costs Less— than travel by rail. The spacious luxurious steamers of the D & C line—the largest and most widely recognized steamer line in the world—afford you every convenience and delight.

Between Detroit Cleveland and Buffalo you can use your rail tickets---accepted for transportation in either direction.

Daily trips between Detroit, Buffalo and Cleveland and four trips weekly between Toledo, Detroit and Mackinac.

Detroit and Cleveland Navigation Company

Phillip H. McMillan, President
A. A. Schantz, Vice-President and General Manager

Detroit, Cleveland, Buffalo, Niagara Falls, Port Huron, Alpena, St. Ignace

Send 3c stamp for illustrated pamphlet and Great Lakes map.
Address L. G. Lewis, G. P. A. Detroit, Michigan.

$1 a Week pays for the Black Beauty

Send No Money
Ship'd on Approval
Freight Prepaid

Don't buy an ordinary bicycle. Get the Black Beauty—factory direct; wholesale price. Magnificent wheel Strongest, raciest in all cycledom. Five-year guarantee.

18 Exclusive Features

See the wheel before paying a cent. Get our Catalog; select your model. 20 Styles. We ship at our own risk. Keep or return. No waiting to save up money. Months to pay—small amount on acceptance, then $1 a week.

Sundries Get our factory prices first. Lowest in the country. Tires, lamps, horns, etc. Everything for cyclists. Free Sundries Catalog.

HAVERFORD CYCLE CO.
Dept. 116 Philadelphia

FREE Beautiful New Catalog in colors

BOYS Clear Your Skin With Cuticura

All druggists. Soap 25, Ointment 25 & 50, Talcum 25. Sample each free of "Cuticura, Dept. M, Boston."

EARN EXTRA MONEY

THE CHRISTIAN HERALD needs additional representatives to procure renewal subscriptions. Experience not necessary.

A special proposition is ready for those who wish to build up a business of their own.

You can put your whole time on our work—or you can work during spare hours.

Send a postal today for complete information of our special offer to agents.

Agency Department, Christian Herald, Bible House, New York

The Christian Church—Its Life and Its Wo

International Sunday School Lesson for July 6. Acts 2:37-47 and I Thess. 5:1

By Rev. George D. Allison, Ph.D.

ONCE more the Christian Church is a world center of interest and inquiry. At times in the past it has been fashionable to decry the Church, and occasionally with more or less justification. But in every great human crisis men have turned to the Church in their emergencies as they did during this World War. How the pastors were deluged with the appeals of the government and the welfare organizations! How well the churches responded with men, with money and with practical efforts of the most varied kind. Not only in war-time, however, but through the long steady grind of ordinary life it is the Church of Christ that furnishes the bulk of altruistic service, even in the settlement houses and the public charities that have no organic relation to religious institutions. Besides, the great colleges and the hospitals are the Church's children. Down the ages the Church, despite its ofttime shortcomings, has perpetuated Christ's ministry of healing and teaching and serving.

It is this Church of Christ that is now a present opportunity for the children of your class and of your community.

What a Church Is

We must make our boys and girls realize what the Church is. Most of them think of the church building as the church. It is to them a place rather than an ideal enshrined in the hearts of living men and women. We should teach our children that a church is a group of men and women who are united by a common experience of God and a mutual agreement to help one another and to promote the progress of the Gospel in their community and the world. Here is a more scholarly definition that is valuable: "By the Church of Christ we mean the religious society, tracing its origin historically from Jesus of Nazareth, and finding in him its bond of union in common worship, work and life, in which the revealing and redeeming influence of Christ is perpetuated; and through which, under the influence of the divine Spirit, the Christ life is mediated to the world" (William Adams Brown).

It is plain from this definition that there is a sense in which there is still one Church of Christ throughout the world, and that we can also speak accurately of the various denominations as churches. But usually we mean by "church" a local church in a community. Such a church has essentially a twofold purpose, namely, the culture and development of its members and their children, and the winning of the unsaved and the wayward to Christ. In other words, its ministry is both educational and evangelistic.

It is equally clear that there is one sure test of its genuineness: "By their fruits shall ye know them." The product of the Church is the test of its value as an organization. Far more important than its formal orthodoxy or the affiliation with this or that denominational group is the answer to this searching question: Is it turning out men and women who are Christ-like? A church that is not producing Christians is a liability, instead of an asset, to the Kingdom of God.

Duties and Privileges of Membership

If children are more carefully instructed concerning the object of the Church and their responsibilities when they assume membership, we shall have more efficient church-members. For the most part the Catechisms have fallen into neglect, perhaps because some were very scholastic and "juiceless"; but that lays only the heavier burden on the teacher to make her class an intelligent and useful group within the congregation. The primary duty of a member is loyalty, and his corresponding privilege is blessing. Loyalty dictates his interest in the doings which constitute the life of the Church, his attendance upon its meetings, his participation in its burdens and effort.

Attendance is fundamental. As early as the writing of the Epistle to the Hebrews this had become a problem, "some" forsaking the assembling of the congregation. You cannot have a real functioning church without people coming together regularly for cooperative endeavor. It is true that church-going is very largely a matter of habit, but that makes it all the more necessary for the young to contract the habit. For you as teacher the question is, Are my pupils establishing the habit of fellowshipping in the church? Every pastor knows that a thoughtful teacher can frequently bring the entire class into church together from time to time, while thoughtless or overburdened teachers may not be represented by a single child for a month. If the home is neglectful we must be the more careful. You cannot build up the Christian brotherhood of faith and good works out of empty benches. Get the children into the meetings of the Church.

In our own church the Sunday school encourages attendance so successfully that from forty to seventy-five children have been in morning worship nearly every Sunday this year, constituting fully a quarter to a third of the congregation. The younger leave during the Children's Hymn immediately after the Junior Sermon. They cherish the booklets given as mementoes for faithful attendance.

Every prospective member should be clearly taught his financial duty to the cause of Christ, memorizing Paul's financial policy, which is the best: "Upon the first day of the week let each one of you lay by him in may prosper." This means proportionate, regular giving member should learn to lay offering whether he is present since the expense of the work just the same, and should generously but not rashly. H should be a minimum gift, should supplement from time according to his ability.

But the giving of time and service is still more important might not happen if every member were a real church w

The Church at Work

The main avenues of church are still essentially those of our in the Book of Acts. The prea the Word of God is still a centra despite all the world's criticism pleased God by the foolishness of ing to save them that believe.

The school itself is the Ch work, not, as some still seem to thing apart. The whole church be actively engaged in the read study of the Word of God and of t ress of the world-wide Kingdom. public worship and the class-room as well as the midweek meeting be parts of the school of pray every one may learn how to pra we know not how to pray as we Finally, as at Pentecost, there inspiration and practical help of tian fellowship. It is a glory tod groups of men and women like ou are found everywhere meeting w accord, singing and praising God ing their joys and sorrows, and t seeking first the Kingdom of God.

Rewards for Sunday School Attendar

IN THE Christian Herald of February 22, on the page which carries the exposition of the Sunday School Lesson, there was printed an article about Superintendent Kinzer's reward plan in his Sunday school at Fort Pierce, Florida.

I believe in rewards, and know of one which surpasses the giving of pins, money, picnic parties, etc., and it does not require a great outlay of money, either by the school or the pupil.

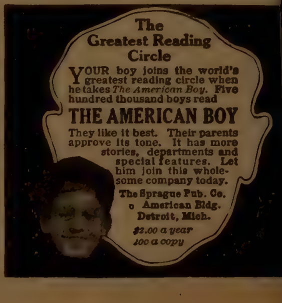
The reward to which I have reference, the foremost Sunday school reward known today, stands for the right principles, builds up character, is the link between the Sunday school and the home, is of no commercial value, cannot be exchanged for something the pupil sees another pupil have, and calls for very little outlay by the school. This reward was originated by the well-known International Sunday school secretary, Mr. Marion Lawrance. Mr. Lawrance saw the great need of stopping the leaks in the Sunday school by getting the pupils to attend regularly, and in order to give them an incentive, but not pay them, he originated a seven-year diploma, and named it, in honor of the founder of the modern Sunday school, Robert Raikes.

Each school using this diploma—and it is now in use by many schools of all denominations, in every state in the Union—sets its own standard, and then awards all who have come up to the requirements of that standard. It emphasizes regular attendance, regular offering, Bible brought to Sunday school, getting new scholars, supplemental or memory work, church attendance, and Bible readings. Some Sunday schools emphasize only regular attendance and offerings. Thus, when this diploma is once adopted, it starts the pupil along the right path, and the school can depend upon his cooperation for a period of at least seven years.

The diploma which is given at th of the first year of faithfulness is inches in size, handsomely lithogra and has six spaces in which to atta embossed seals given for the six ceeding years, one each year. Al pils having earned the diploma anxious to get the second year se tached, and thus the interest inc year after year until the diploma is plete with the six seals.

Sunday school pupils of all ages, ing for the diploma and seals, beco interested that they will forego tri Sunday in order not to spoil thei ord; and not only children, but haired men and women are enthus in earning one of these diplomas, seal. What can be better than to both young and old working on a which binds the school together in b of friendly rivalry? What we nee do is to dignify the work in our Su schools, and put it on a high plane, the pupils will respond, as they li accomplish results, and will be h in the doing of things more or heroic.

MARIE F. RO



The Greatest Reading Circle

YOUR boy joins the world's greatest reading circle when he takes The American Boy. Five hundred thousand boys read

THE AMERICAN BOY

They like it best. Their parents approve its tone. It has more stories, departments and special features. Let him join this wholesome company today.

The Sprague Pub. Co.
0 American Bldg.
Detroit, Mich.

$2.00 a year
20c a copy

Martyrs to Their Faith

ontinued from page 712

iese soldiers. This was not a of arresting them, but savage, ble barbarism.

ers stop and deliberately fire owd of only girls and women simply shouting, 'Man sei.'

nresisting old man of sixty-five unded, kicked and beaten by apanese soldiers.

wd of about twenty schoolgirls quietly walking along the pub- not even shouting, chased by beaten with guns, knocked d shamefully treated.

n dying, shot through the back.

hundred men with torn and lothes, tied together with ropes, jail.

Koreans, so injured that they t walk, tied down on a spring- and brought to jail.

American missionary roughly while standing in his own yard ing on, but doing nothing else. e and many other things I have h my own eyes. Other foreign- seen the same and worse. One magine the reign of terror in all this land, and the punishments tures at the police stations and still more awful story. I have n who were beaten on wooden '

ages of Japanese Soldiers

following letter was sent from mewhere in Korea" on April it gives the latest reliable news missionary in Korea of the ter- utrages now practiced on the people by the Japanese troops: Tyungju the Korean pastor of rch was beaten almost to a jelly soldiers. A patriotic procession t with a fire of death. Fifty-one illed outright on the spot, be- ix others in the hills near by. times more were wounded, and e over twenty have so far died eir wounds. The Japanese would ow any of the wounded to be o hospitals in other towns. There e Korean doctor in Tyungju, a te of the government hospital in He was busy giving first aid, ex- g bullets and binding up wounds, the Japanese soldiers came into ablishment, gave him a bad beat- nashed the doors and windows, out his medicines and broke up his instruments, and he had to flee from the town. The poor Koreans were told to go home and die.

"Christians have been especially picked out for violent treatment. Some of the churches, Christian schools, and pastors' houses have been burned to the ground by these soldiers."

Korean Uprisings Continue

THE Korean Daily News, Seoul, of April 9 and 10 continues to give reports of uprisings of Koreans, students and others, from about twenty different places. These are all Japanese reports, so they give their view.

At Kong Chu, the students of a Christian school came out from their building and began a noisy demonstration. The troops at once adopted severe measures and put the disturbance down; eight students were killed, many others severely wounded, and twenty-seven, with the school teachers, were arrested.

At Tai Chun, at another riot, nine were killed and twenty-one badly injured. At Ul San, eight were shot and eleven badly wounded. At Nam Wan, where several thousand gathered, eight were killed at once and thirty-four severely injured, and forty-two were arrested. At Hatong Nam Hai, Chang Song, Chang Yun, much the same story. One hundred and fifty were arrested at the last place.

Killing of Koreans Continues

A LETTER from an American, dated Korea, April 9, has just been received. He says: "Yesterday at Chai Ryang mission station, there was a great blowout with many killings of Koreans. American mission homes are being searched by Japanese police and soldiers. The Korean enterprise for independence is not abating."

Another report from Unkok-myon tells of a big crowd of five hundred Koreans gathering on April 6, the Japanese soldiers using their rifles. On the same day uprisings took place at Kailyang, and at Anak, in the Whanghai Province in the north. This seems to keep up the former plan of keeping quiet in the South and starting again in the North. Machine guns are now being used on the defenceless, unarmed Korean crowds.

The Korean Daily News reports other disturbances in over a dozen places.

Young People's Topic for July 6 elation to Others. Toward Enemies an Endeavor, B. Y. P. U. and Epworth League Topic.

T be possible, as much as lieth in u, live peaceably with all men." aul knew human nature. He that causes of enmity would ap- He knew that people would take unjustly. He knew just how kerous and impossible folks could he stated the case deftly and . But we are not responsible y for another's wilful misun- nding. What we are responsible ur own heart and the develop- "as much as in you lieth," of the cies of our nature toward fairness, s, justness and truth tempered ve. A man may be as true as and yet as hard as nails, making ies by his uncompromising auster- There are many ways of making ies; but this topic is concerned with what we should do with them e get them. Enemies are a nui- They tell lies about us; sometimes tell truths that we wish hidden; they resist our good intentions; they try to write failure on the record of our dearest plans. Sometimes they embarrass us before others, and sometimes they hate us enough to use force against us. Resistance up to the point of force is best applied by the application of Paul's maxim to overcome evil with good. If the force threatens our life, resistance by adequate force is our duty. But if we are careful to tell only the truth that can be told without hurting, if we give our enemy credit for good intentions when he questions ours, if we take the failure of our plans good-naturedly and promptly begin new ones, if we submit to force when physical danger is not present and reply with kindness, the enemy will soon tire of a one-sided fight and become our friend, or at least only a passive antagonist.

Paul says if our enemy hungers to feed him; in other words, to treat him as we would treat one who was not our enemy. His enmity cannot long survive treatment as a friend. Then when he is sorry and says so and gives evidence of meaning it, we can write his name off our list of enemies and write it once more on our list of friends.

BRISCOE

A car combining style and sturdiness in an exceptionally satisfactory degree, and at an exceptionally attractive price.

□

The motor has made remarkable records, both in power and mileage.

Touring and Roadster Types

BRISCOE MOTOR CORPORATION
JACKSON MICHIGAN
The Canadian Briscoe Motor Company Ltd., Brockville, Ontario

99% BRISCOE BUILT

TRADE MARK REG. U.S. PAT. OFF.
Iron Clad
COOPER WELLS & CO. ST. JOE KNIT SEAMLESS HOSIERY ST. JOSEPH, MICH.
Hosiery for the Whole Family

That is real Japan silk

For sheer beauty, nothing equals the gossamer sheen of pure cocoon silk, propagated in old Japan. That is what this Men's sock is made of. Yet with all this exquisite finish, it is so perfectly reinforced in the foot, by the interweaving of a special twist yarn, that it wears a surprisingly long time. It is a real accomplishment to make such a silken gauzy texture wear so well. And it is a real economy to wear silk hose that gives such wear.

Iron Clad No. 699

Iron Clads are sold by thousands of dealers everywhere. If you don't know of one nearby, order from us—we send package postpaid. Price 85c. Sizes 9 to 11½. Colors: black, white, palm beach, gray, Cordovan brown. Please state size and color desired. Money refunded if not delighted.

Cooper Wells & Co.
222 Vine St. St. Joseph, Mich.

First Lien Mortgage
GOLD BONDS
Netting the Investor 7%

Secured by income-bearing, improved Apartment properties located in the larger cities of the rich and growing South. Existing conditions make interest rate higher than in the North. Secure this higher rate now. When the rate recedes it is then too late Bonds free from normal Federal Income Tax up to 4%. Bonds repayable annually. Interest payable monthly, in advance. Ask for booklet "REASONS WHY" and "MILLER SERVICE, How This Insures and Protects the Bond-Buyer's Investment Interests."

G. L. MILLER & COMPANY, Inc.
126 Hurt Building, Atlanta, Ga.
Also Miami, Florida

6%
Our 6% Certificates Are Always at Par

For 24 years our 6% Two-Year Time Certificates have been worth 100 cents on the dollar plus interest. Issued for $100 or more—Interest checks mailed semi-annually—We pay 5% on Certificates payable on demand. First Mortgage security back of all our investments.

Write for Booklet, "6% and Safety."

THE CALVERT MORTGAGE CO.
683 Calvert Bldg., Baltimore, Md.

Individual Cups
Every church should use. Clean and sanitary. Trial free.
Thomas Communion Service Co. Box 150 Lima, Ohio

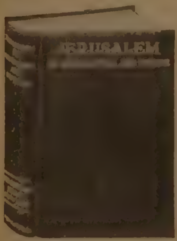
BLYMYER CHURCH BELLS
Bring people to church. Their clear, beautiful, sustained, far-reaching tones are a power for good. Your church should have one. Durability guaranteed. Inexpensive. Art catalog & buying plans free.
The Cincinnati Bell Foundry Co. Dept. B51 Cincinnati, O.

CHRISTIAN HERALD SUBSCRIPTION OFFERS

"Jerusalem—Its Redemption and Future"

IT IS only now that the real story of the Redemption of Jerusalem can be told and it is that story which the Christian Herald presents in the book entitled "Jerusalem—Its Redemption and Future." It tells the story in vivid detail of conditions in the Holy city during the war.

The book reads like the unfolding of a vast drama, one of the grandest ever known. The redemption is not confined to Palestine, but includes all the Bible lands: Syria, Armenia, Arabia, Mesopotamia, the old country of the patriarchs, and even the "Eden Land"—the cradle of the human race. It is a volume which should be in the possession of every Christian man and woman in America, as it is plentifully illuminative of the fulfilment of God's pledge which is being brought about in a remarkable way in our lifetime. Illustrated with fifteen pages of beautiful pictures from the Holy Land.



We will send a copy of "Jerusalem—Its Redemption and Future," postpaid, together with the Christian Herald for one year, for $3.00.

We will send a copy of "Jerusalem—Its Redemption and Future," postpaid, to Christian Herald subscribers, as a reward for sending us ONE NEW yearly subscription to the Christian Herald with $2.50.

"Jerusalem—Its Redemption and Future," separately, $1.00 per copy, postpaid.

"Oh, Money! Money!"

By Eleanor H. Porter, Author of "Pollyanna," etc.

"OH, MONEY! MONEY!" is a romance of a New England Cinderella and a Western millionaire. "If you don't know how to get happiness out of five dollars, you don't know how to get it out of five thousand," says Maggie, the cheery philosopher of "Oh, Money! Money!" and this is the keynote of Mrs. Porter's latest story. Out of a clear sky came three checks to the three Blaisdell families. How each family tried in its own way to get happiness from its unexpected fortune—and failed; and how poor Maggie, without trying and without a fortune, succeeded, is told in "Oh, Money! Money!"

Oh, Money! Money!

We will send a copy of "Oh, Money! Money!" postpaid, together with the Christian Herald for one year, for $3.00.

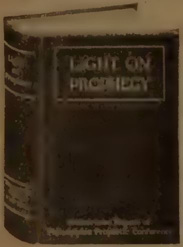
We will send a copy of "Oh, Money! Money!" postpaid, to Christian Herald subscribers, as a reward for sending us ONE NEW yearly subscription to the Christian Herald with $2.50.

"Oh, Money! Money!" separately, $1.50 per copy, postpaid.

"Light on Prophecy"

Report of the Philadelphia Prophetic Conference

"LIGHT ON PROPHECY" links up the prophecies of the Bible with the great events of today and shows conclusively that we are living in an age of prophetic fulfilment. When we set out several months ago to print "Light on Prophecy," we felt that it was a book which our readers would welcome. It held something that very many good people want to know. The result, however, far exceeded our expectations. "Light on Prophecy" has now passed through four large editions, and the demand is still growing. The book contains all the notable addresses on prophecy delivered at the Philadelphia Prophetic Conference, which was the most important gathering of its kind ever held in this country or perhaps in the world.



We will send a copy of "Light on Prophecy," postpaid, together with the Christian Herald for one year, for $3.00.

We will send a copy of "Light on Prophecy," postpaid, to Christian Herald subscribers, as a reward for sending us ONE NEW yearly subscription to the Christian Herald with $2.50.

"Light on Prophecy," separately, $1.00 per copy, postpaid.

Killing a Million Armenians

Ambassador Morgenthau's Revelations

AS GERMANY is now suing for peace, it is important that the world should know some things she has tried to keep secret.

This inside history and much more, all significant and breathlessly interesting, is in "Ambassador Morgenthau's Story." This book tells why the Turks killed 1,000,000 Armenians and fixes on the Germans the responsibility for the atrocities. It reveals the perfidy of Germany's attempt to start a holy war against Christians. It is the kind of a book that keeps one reading on and on. It is entertainingly written, yet it is packed full of authoritative facts. Illustrated with photographs, maps and diagrams. Over 400 pages; cloth bound.

AMBASSADOR MORGENTHAU'S STORY

We will send a copy of "Ambassador Morgenthau's Story," postpaid, together with the Christian Herald for one year, for $3.50.

We will send a copy of "Ambassador Morgenthau's Story," postpaid, to Christian Herald subscribers, as a reward for sending us TWO NEW yearly subscriptions at $2.50 each.

"Ambassador Morgenthau's Story," separately, $2.00 a copy, postpaid.

CHRISTIAN HERALD, 2199 Bible House, New York, N. Y.

The Week in the World's N

Continued from page 710

constables or soldiers and the murderers had gone unpunished. Hundreds of men and women had been imprisoned without charges. At least five men had died in prison, being confined in narrow cells with hands handcuffed behind them, without change of clothing, for days at a time, and fed on stale bread and water. During the winter ice-cold water was poured over them, and many were attacked with pneumonia. Solitary confinement was general, and many of the prisoners became insane. Large bodies of political prisoners were kept without food for days at a time.

Homes were invaded and the occupants cruelly beaten and otherwise maltreated. Children of republicans were kidnaped. Refined women and children were confined with the most degraded characters. Heads of families were jailed, leaving their women and children without support. The educational system had broken down; destitution was rife in Dublin, and Ireland, burdened with taxation and cut off from commerce, was being bled white. The report recommended that a committee of seven members, none of whom should be British or Irish, be named by the Peace Conference to take testimony.

Elihu Root Did It. The Senate investigation of the supposed leak, through which unauthorized persons secured copies of the Peace Treaty, began and ended on June 11. It was found that the copy of the treaty which Senator Lodge had seen was shown to him by Elihu Root, who admitted the fact, and refused to consider it culpable. Mr. Root had received the Treaty from Henry P. Davison, of the firm of J. P. Morgan & Co., who had himself received it in Paris from Thomas W. Lamont. Mr. Davison was entitled to the copy as head of the International Red Cross.

House Cuts Armament. The House of Representatives, on June 11, took action authorizing the reduction of the army, for the fiscal year 1920, to 300,000 men. The War Department had asked for 500,000. The reduction was expected to result in a saving in excess of $75,000,000. The House Naval Affairs Committee recommended an appropriation of $600,000,000, two-thirds of the estimate of Secretary Daniels. The bill as drawn authorized a navy personnel, until October 1, of 241,000 men, after which it will be reduced to 170,000 by January 1, 1920. The marine corps personnel was fixed at 27,400. No new navy construction will be authorized. An appropriation of $15,000,000 was proposed for aviation, which Secretary Daniels declared would prevent any real development of the science of navigation in the air. He said $36,000,000 was the minimum required. France had appropriated $200,000,000 for aviation and Great Britain $330,000,000.

Money for Railroads. The House, on June 10, passed a bill appropriating $750,000,000 for the railroad revolving fund. Director General Hines had asked for $1,200,000,000.

The Wires Unsilenced. The nation-wide strike of telegraphers called for June 11 failed to result in the crippling of the service, which the union leaders had prophesied. The Postal Telegraph reported 20 to 30 per cent. of their men had quit. The Western Union claimed that in the whole country only 175 had left their keys. The union, however, claimed that at least 15,000 men were on strike, and threatened to extend the strike to the brokers' offices and the newspaper wires. In this they failed. Postmaster Burleson declared the strike wholly without justification and traffic at normal proportions, but h order permitting the electric and telephone workers to dea companies as organizations, t ing off a sympathetic strike.

Sultan's Harem Burned.
9 the Yildiz Kiosk, palace of th
Sultan in Constantinople, w to the ground. In this buildi power and glory of the gold Turkey had been manifested.
had seen the play of diplomat and its shadows were eloque sinister purposes of the Subli
There were marple palaces, w terraces, big buildings and s all inwrought with the history o in such a way that the pala sented the empire. The bu
the palace was taken fig
as a symbol of the passing Turkey.

Ultimatums. Notwithstand consequences of Austria's ex with ultimatums, the little pri of Leichtenstein, the smallest Europe, aside from Monaco a Marino, was reported on June 9 notified the Peace Conference would sever communication wit less it was given representation League of Nations. The princi 15 miles long and about 5 mil with a population of about 11,0 no army. The threat to sever co ication, however, was not witho
since the direct railroad rout
Paris to Vienna lies through Le stein. At last reports Leichtenst still on the map and the railro still running, but no rewriting
Peace Treaty had been reported.

Jews Accuse Poles. Lewis Ma head of the Jewish Committee in received on June 8 and expec deliver to President Wilson a d report on the persecution of Je Poles in the city of Vilna. The shows that Polish troops had acte great brutality, driving Jews their homes, separating families, goods and money, and shootin killing indiscriminately. The n of deaths was estimated at 1500.

Will Support Kolchak. The
and Associated Powers in a mem dum signed by Wilson, Lloyd G Clemenceau and Makino, on Jun formally pledged to Admiral Ko their support in his effort to reest an all-Russian government, Ad Kolchak having given satisfa pledges to call a Constituent Asse at the first opportunity, to reco the rights of the various racial g in Russia to self-determination Bolshevists were reported to be enfo universal conscription to raise troo

To Ratify Suffrage Amend
Illinois was the first state to ratify Women's Suffrage amendment
Federal Constitution, Wisconsin
Michigan were close behind, all rati on June 10. The New York legisla called in special sessions, ratified amendment on June 16.

Defer the League of Chur
Representatives of 38 American P
tant denominations in a meeting
Atlantic City, on June 13, failed reach an agreement relative to the of the proposed League of the Chur of Christ. A sincere desire to about a union of the churches evidenced by the delegates of a bodies, but there was no dispos shown to force the proposed unio take the form of a merger into a organization. The question was ferred, to be taken up at another m ing to be called late in November.

ontributions to the Christian Herald Children's Home

T following gifts to the summer work for the children of the poor have eived.

K and	$9.00
Adeline	6.00
Rinehart.	2.50
Russell..	6.00
nman	6.00
rown	6.00
E Chad-	7.50
Magretta	2.50
Dronner-	6.00
Mrs J W in	2.50
E Brush ughters	6.00
rman	.20
aylor	6.00
oy & Ag- Watson	6.00
Mrs G W	6.00
I Doan	3.50
nny-View ers, Jared	9.00
ngan	6.00
Linn	6.00
Glate	20.50
g memory C R B in me	6.00
Sorge	.50
alel	6.00
L Graff	20.00
uglass	6.00
C Thom- r	.20
zgerald	1.50
S and F ford	6.00
Webster	6.00
o Symath..	4.00
Vreeland	2.50
quist	2.50
Mrs D D nsend	6.00
ck	4.00
witt	4.23
Kellogg	6.00
weiler	6.00
Backman..	6.00
McCreath..	6.00
Demebre	6.00
lmot	6.50
M Burley	6.00
ine F Ab-	6.00
Amanda ler	6.00
nd Koebel..	6.00
Gay Green- d	6.00
M Glenn	6.00
Nicholas	50.00
R Solomon.	100.00
yons	100.00
Norton	25.00
Zinn	25.00
n H McGee.	25.00
Young	21.00
memory of her (J E R M E R)	21.00
C Alford	21.00
Weinert	21.00
Hughes	21.00
oomis	21.00
ampton	21.00
diner Coop-	21.00
ierce	21.00
H Beekman	21.00
Rice	15.00
Mrs C E Mc lin	15.00
rubb	15.00
Mrs W B wart	15.00
don Hamers-	10.00
G Gordon	10.00
rown	10.00
n G Trexler	10.00
arson	10.00
angseth	10.00
A L Hunger- d	10.00
er Mac Bain..	10.00
Theodore Pe- a	10.00
nkhans	10.00
beth Hynes	10.00
y Middendorf	10.00
bel	10.00
C Morgan	10.00
P Meeker	10.00
eng	10.00
Harris	10.00
e M Rieger	10.00
Frank Wilson.	10.00
E H Jenkins..	10.00
a L Fillder	10.00
Haynes	5.00
nie Alexander.	5.00
Margaret F elly	5.00
G A Luther	$5.00
J W Thompson	5.00
Robert Smart	5.00
Fred Shunk	5.00
Anna M Rowland.	5.00
J M Johnston	5.00
S W Loughlin	5.00
B B Harris	5.00
S L & Hattie S Buser	5.00
W L Zalman	5.00
Mrs. D H Griswold	5.00
John A Scott	5.00
Miss L Middlekauff	5.00
J J Swan	5.00
Mrs Geo W Johnston	5.00
Mrs J W Ward	5.00
Mrs B E Wells	5.00
Robt A Snyder	5.00
Mr & Mrs Geo Whipperman	5.00
Wm H Wilson	5.00
Dwight Blake	5.00
Julius Heilner	5.00
Mrs A J Fulton	5.00
Dr F C Spates	5.00
Mrs Grace E Johnson	5.00
Mrs O M Brown..	5.00
Mrs E R Rising	5.00
Mrs F Tisne	5.00
Eliza F Thorn	5.00
S Nielson	5.00
A E Wilmot	5.00
Mrs R E Bowers	5.00
Joseph Ludwig	5.00
John Lindermann.	5.00
G H Gosselink	5.00
Mrs Frances Gillespie	5.00
Mrs P A Danison..	5.00
Mrs D A Miller	5.00
H A Teller	5.00
Edward Vollworth	5.00
Dr Annie Jonk	5.00
P. Zimmerman	5.00
T R Hill	5.00
Franeisca S Winstere	5.00
Mrs H Ibach	5.00
Mrs Sallie E Romley	5.00
Chase Bruen	5.00
Elizabeth Comstock	5.00
W. S. Towle	5.00
J. R Porter	5.00
Rev and Mrs T E Hamlin	5.00
O. Charles Meyer.	5.00
Etta Woleben	5.00
S R Russell	5.00
Mrs J B Neff	5.00
I J Chamberlin	5.00
Mr & Mrs F A Carpenter	5.00
Mrs E M Staller	5.00
Wm Herbert	5.00
Ida B Emmons	5.00
Mrs H E Liddle	5.00
Robby A Fisher	5.00
Mrs Anna Brookins	5.00
Mrs Samuel Algeo.	5.00
Dudley T Lewis	5.00
R R Beard	5.00
F Sterry	5.00
J B Remensnyder.	5.00
J W Brown	3.00
Mary L Carr	3.00
Mr & Mrs Arthur Horsfall	3.00
Miss M Bowman..	3.00
J F Patton	3.00
Eugene Cable	3.00
L Wm Krok	3.00
S Morterud	3.00
Alice M Southworth	3.00
Dr & Mrs G W Bass	3.00
Mrs H J Miller	3.00
Elizabeth Hurley..	3.00
Carrie R Maker	3.00
J W Goodwin Jr	3.00
A L Pincolk	3.00
Gretchen Schneider	3.00
P S Crosier	3.00
Eliza Bartholomew	3.00
W O Porter	3.00
Mary G B Early..	3.00
C B Orcutt	3.00
A A Hutchinson	3.00
Mrs Aug C Attenbernd	3.00
Mrs Mary Wikle	3.00
Miss Gertrude I Smith	3.00
Ella M Burnaf	3.00
Mrs Joseph Cordes	3.00
J H Friend	3.00
Jennie R Matheson	3.00
Lizzie Pierson	$3.00
A friend, Morristown, Pa	3.00
Geo W Goodze	3.00
Mrs R L Corner	3.00
—Hampton, Iowa.	3.00
I T Settle	3.00
Mrs Chas G Geller	3.00
Mrs Hannah Davis	3.00
Mrs Byron Gaskell	3.00
W E Ross	3.00
A friend, Stewartville, Minn	3.00
G H Franklin	3.00
Wm Miller	3.00
Clara Leonard	3.00
Reuben Kolb	3.00
Geo A Haskett	3.00
Mrs L H Wieth	3.00
David Woodruff..	3.00
Mrs W G Templeton	3.00
—Corydon, Iowa	3.00
E Ringstead	3.00
David B Jewett	3.00
Jenny E Tearse	3.00
Miss J S Blough	3.00
Mrs A W Reynolds	3.00
Theo L Crow	3.00
Mrs J J Hastings..	3.00
O Dean	3.00
Mr & Mrs C Wellner	3.00
E Parkison	3.00
Miss Mable Atkinson	3.00
Mr & Mrs Monroe Small	3.00
J W Mitchell	3.00
F A Wiegand	3.00
G N Bodlex	3.00
M Estelle Hughes.	3.00
John I Guptial	3.00
J E White	3.00
Mrs Minnie Dueringer	3.00
Rachel M Sweeney	3.00
Mrs & Ruth Holtzman	3.00
Mrs F B Wheeler..	3.00
Grace, Mildred and Louis Ferneman	3.00
Mr & Mrs S G Gibbons	3.00
Mrs S B Dykema.	3.00
Mrs R B Rosenberry	3.00
C J Jacobsen	3.00
Miss Jessie Todd..	3.00
Miss Sophie Monfelt	3.00
Mrs L N Adkins	3.00
Mrs J N Walker	3.00
Mr & Mrs Jas P Easterly	3.00
V W Bayliss	3.00
M E McKeeman..	3.00
Mrs J H Stover	3.00
Mrs Mary Burrows	3.00
Julia Ottaway	3.00
Robert Day	3.00
Mrs L R Simmons.	5.00
Jos S Phelon	3.00
Ann Green	3.00
William A Hawes..	3.00
Mrs Anna Rice	3.00
A J Wilson	3.00
Mr A B Church	3.00
Thomas Simonton	3.00
D F Davis	3.00
Mrs D P Wetmore	3.00
Flora I Goodell	3.00
Theo Schertz	3.00
F L Craig	3.00
John A Reeder	3.00
Mrs Wm J Wood..	3.00
Mr & Mrs W M Wilson	3.00
Charles Hanson	3.00
—, N. Y. City	3.00
Mrs A C Weaver..	3.00
Miss A J Johnson.	3.00
H L Townsend	3.00
Mrs H E Sawyer..	3.00
Miss E L Wright	3.00
Mr & Mrs Alex Hartley	3.00
Mrs U M Wallace.	3.00
Mrs Guy Moore	3.00
D Janrz	3.00
A H Watson, Jr	3.00
Clara Beebe	3.00
Mrs P D Wine	3.00
J J Jensen	3.00
Mrs L H Gray	3.00
William Dobson	3.00
Otto Larson	3.00
Mrs Geo Williams.	3.00
Dr C A Noland	3.00
Margaret A McLawry	3.00
M A S Carpenter..	3.00
Mrs Adolf Liebman	3.00
E M Stiger	3.00
Mrs A B Young	$3.00
A Friend, Plainfield, N. J.	3.00
Wesley C Bergquist	3.00
M J Buechler	3.00
Mrs A C Summers	3.00
Marvel and Wella Colwell	3.00
Mrs Letitia Armstrong	3.00
Mrs Adaline Moessner	3.00
Mrs A H Fey	3.00
J W Stocks	3.00
Miss Ella McKinley	3.00
Esther M Banks..	3.00
Newman Sheldon.	3.00
James Holyer	3.00
Mrs Justina Snyder	3.00
Mrs L C Miller	3.00
M L Gensmier	3.00
Delilah M Wolfram	3.00
Mrs Ella K Stakes	3.00
Nettie P Knapp	3.00
Jas M Paddock	3.00
Mrs Anna Arthur.	3.00
Mr & Mrs S W Hondon	3.00
Sarah L Hayden	3.00
Carrie Thomas	3.00
Mrs Mary Thomson	3.00
Doma Ruth	3.00
Mrs Jessie Owen..	3.00
Mrs J F Berme	3.00
Mrs E McRoberts.	3.00
Miss A F R Latze.	3.00
Mrs L C Gutekruat	3.00
Mrs B J Moore	3.00
Mrs H Rietveld	3.00
Mrs Mollie Bell	2.00
L H Porter	2.00
Sarah Hoffman	2.00
Mrs Lucy B & Mary Atkins	2.00
C G Skustad	2.00
Mrs W W Porterfield	2.00
M Birkett	2.00
Mrs F H Meadsker	2.00
Edwin C Hoker	2.00
Josephine Scheer..	2.00
Charles C. Gill	2.00
Max Schmetterling	2.00
William Goetz	2.00
Lewis Nyguist	2.00
Mr & Mrs John Buehre	2.00
Mrs N H Masters.	2.00
N F Forzly	2.00
Dr N W Williams.	2.00
Otto Norz	2.00
Mrs A and Miss Anna W Kolb	2.00
Mrs P J Nathan	2.00
Mrs S Barrows	2.00
Mr & Mrs R J Fouser	2.00
Hannah I Garrott.	2.00
L M Edwards	2.00
Mrs W S Davis	2.00
Mrs Flora Goodsell	2.00
Elizabeth Ficktel	2.00
Eva Vail.	2.00
Alma Moore	2.00
Mrs Frank Boor	2.00
Mrs W E Bice	2.00
Juliett Cluff	2.00
Nacy Puhitwill	2.00
Miss Hellson	2.00
Friends, Ontario, Calif	1.50
M L Weeden	1.50
N E Reinhart	1.50
T J Smethers	1.00
Mrs B F Langdon.	1.00
R P Schoonover..	1.00
Susan Jennings	1.00
Helen M Bishop	1.00
C M Roam M D..	1.00
P A Rosmussen	1.00
Mrs Clara Snyder.	1.00
C M Stevens	1.00
Mrs Floyd Pope	1.00
W S Evans	1.00
Miss A M Evans	1.00
R W Thompson	1.00
Mary S Willets	1.00
Sarah Wombacher	1.00
Mrs Richard Turner	1.00
Mattie H Sheldon.	1.00
S M Porter	1.00
Jennett Beirghs	1.00

Additional acknowledgments will appear in subsequent issues of the Christian Herald.

nd all Gifts to the Christian Herald Children's Home, Bible House, New York City

How To Get What You Want

A Remarkable System of Personal Efficiency

Taught by Dr. Orison Swett Marden, the world's greatest inspirational writer, who has helped thousands of discouraged men and women to brilliant success

NO matter what you want—whether it be wealth, power, position, fame, health, friendship, or any kind of material success—it is no longer necessary for you to grope for it blindly, uncertainly, wasting your energy and brain power in an unequal struggle against circumstance and environment.

Dr. Orison Swett Marden

There is a sure and certain way of reaching your goal, of attaining your desires, of realizing your ambitions. There has been worked out for your guidance a definite plan of action which if followed intelligently will put you on the road to assured success. So clear, so simple, so explicit are the instructions that anyone can grasp their meaning quickly and put them into practice. A single hour devoted to their study may change the course of your whole life. Many a man who had thought himself possessed of only moderate ability—yes many a self-confessed failure—has suddenly found himself a new man mentally and spiritually, with a wonderful new power of accomplishment, new courage, new ambition and new opportunities for success, simply by following the suggestions given him by Dr. Orison Swett Marden.

What Great Men Say About Dr. Marden's Teachings

THEODORE ROOSEVELT said: "I am so deeply touched and pleased by your editorial in 'Success' that I must write and tell you so."

CHARLES M. SCHWAB says: "Dr. Marden's writings have had much to do with my success."

JOHN WANAMAKER says: "I would, if it had been necessary, have been willing to have gone without at least one meal a day to buy one of the Marden books."

LORD NORTHCLIFFE says: "I believe Dr. Marden's writings will be of immense assistance to all young men."

JUDGE BEN B. LINDSEY says: "Dr. Marden is one of the wonders of our time. I personally feel under a debt of obligation to him for his marvelous inspiration and help."

When such men as these, and a host of others too numerous to mention, have felt so strongly the debt of gratitude they owe this man that they have not hesitated to acknowledge it in writing, surely you also can be helped to develop your latent powers, to fill a larger place in the world, to make a new success of your life.

There is nothing mysterious or difficult about Dr. Marden's teachings. They are clear, direct, personal. You will recognize their truth and their value to you as soon as you read them. And that they may have wide distribution throughout the world they have been put into a book, called "HOW TO GET WHAT YOU WANT" (instead of into an expensive mail-order course costing from $20 to $50) so that they are within easy reach of everyone who reads this announcement. And then there is THE NEW SUCCESS—MARDEN'S MAGAZINE, which every ambitious man and woman should read in connection with the book, as it is brim-full of the success idea and carries Dr. Marden's inspiring message to thousands every month. By special arrangement both the book and a year's subscription to the magazine can now be secured for only $3. Nor is it necessary that you risk a single penny to secure them, as Dr. Marden has stipulated that his book and magazine shall be sent on five days' free examination to every reader of CHRISTIAN HERALD who asks for them.

SEND NO MONEY

All you need to do to secure Dr. Marden's help is to fill out and mail the coupon below and you will receive immediately "HOW TO GET WHAT YOU WANT," a book of 350 pages handsomely bound in cloth, and also the current number of THE NEW SUCCESS—MARDEN'S MAGAZINE, the most helpful magazine in America. Keep the book for 5 days, read it and re-read it, and if you are fully satisfied remit only $3, which will pay in full for the book and a year's subscription to THE NEW SUCCESS. If for any reason you should not be fully satisfied, just remail the book within five days and you will owe nothing. Surely you owe it to yourself, to your family, to your friends, to take advantage of this offer which may open the door for you to wonderful new success. So mail the coupon NOW, thus making sure of getting your copy of the book before this remarkable offer is withdrawn.

Free Examination Coupon

THE NEW SUCCESS
732 St. James Bldg., New York, N. Y.

Please send me "HOW TO GET WHAT YOU WANT" and enter my name for a year's subscription to THE NEW SUCCESS. I will either remail the book within 5 days after its receipt or send you $3.

Name..

Address.......................................

....

Christian Herald, June 28, 1919

Grateful Relief

FOR SUNBURNED SKIN

Apply HINDS Honey and Almond CREAM gently with finger tips or moistened handkerchief; it cools tender, irritated skin at once. By its cleansing, healing, antiseptic action, blistering and soreness are averted. It keeps the skin naturally soft and attractive, regardless of exposure to the weather.

SAMPLES: Be sure to enclose stamps with your request. Hinds Honey and Almond Cream 2c. Both Cold and Disappearing Cream 4c. Talcum 2c. Trial cake Soap 8c. Sample Face Powder 2c., Trial Size 15c. Attractive Week-end Box 50c.

Hinds Cream Toilet Necessities are selling everywhere or will be mailed, postpaid in U. S. A., from Laboratory.

A. S. HINDS, 291 West Street
Portland, Maine

Investors in Forty-Seven States

and several Foreign Countries buy our 6% First Farm Mortgages and Real Estate Gold Bonds. Our investments are of the conservative kind and appeal to those seeking safe, sound time-tried investments for their funds. 35 years' experience. Write for pamphlet "O" and offerings.

E. J. LANDER & CO., Grand Forks, N. D.
Est. 1883. Capital and Surplus $500,000.00

ORNAMENTAL FENCE

6 Cents per Foot and up. Costs less than wood. 40 designs. All steel. For Lawns, Churches and Cemeteries. Write for free Catalog and Special Prices.

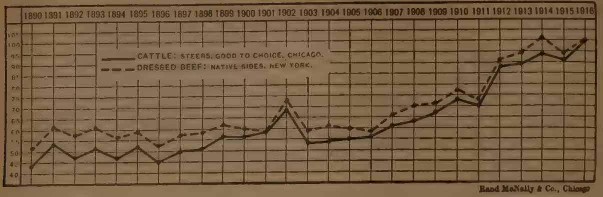
Kokomo Fence Machine Co. 499 North St., Kokomo, Ind.



On looking back to 1890 one sees that every year the packer has been selling meat more cheaply compared to the higher prices he had to pay for cattle. This is the latest chart printed by the Bureau of Labor Statistics. 100 equals 1916 price. War-time diagrams are not published yet

This chart shows why beefsteak is high priced

"I remember when we paid 20 cents for beefsteak," she said. "Now it's tagged 40 and 50 cents a pound."

The housewife wonders who is making money from these high prices.

Could she see the herds of cattle out in the pastures—bringing more than twice as much as before—she would know that a considerable part went to the farmer to encourage production.

A glimpse of doubly valued grain—necessary to fatten live stock—together with high priced farm labor, and other high farm expenses—would largely explain why this was necessary.

World food shortages, high wages, depreciated money, make everything high priced. Meat has not advanced more than other foods.

But throughout the past 30 years of rising prices, the packers, in competition with each other, by handling more live stock, and by eliminating waste, have steadily reduced the spread between the price of cattle and the price of beef. This chart, copied from Bulletin No. 226 of the U. S. Bureau of Labor Statistics, shows it.

As compared with the price of cattle the consumer is paying less for meat, and the live stock producer is getting a larger proportion of the prices received by the packer for meat and by-products.

Service like this, performed at a profit to the packer of only a fraction of a cent per pound, benefits the public. It goes to show that the right men are on the job.

Swift & Company, U. S. A.

Founded 1868

A nation-wide organization owned by more than 25,000 shareholders

OUR MAIL-BAG

NOTICE

THE editors of the Christian Herald will be glad to answer any question addressed to the Mail-bag provided it be of general interest and not merely personal. No attention will be paid to anonymous letters nor to those written with lead pencil.

Questions and Answers

MRS. C. D. S., Paralta, Iowa. "I have been a reader of your paper over twenty years and feel that I cannot do without it. I note the interest you are taking in starving India, and I wonder why you are silent on the needs of almost one-half of our own population. We are confronted with starvation prices for almost everything; worse now than when we were in the war. Surely something is wrong. There must be gambling in foodstuffs. Here I live in the very center of production and pork is $20.30 per hundred alive. The producer receives forty-five cents a pound per dozen for eggs and sixty-five cents for butter. When they reach New York these prices are higher. Almost one-half of our people here cannot afford these necessary articles. If this is allowed to go on, our children will be weak in mind and body. True, they have something to eat, but it is not satisfying, and does not nourish the system properly. They are an easy prey to disease, especially tuberculosis. I believe in charity, in feeding the hungry in other countries, but we should not neglect our own. If gambling in food cannot be stopped any other way, should we not unitedly ask that an embargo be placed upon these articles until food prices are within the reach of our own people? We cannot get any kind of meat here for much less than forty and fifty cents per pound, and a vast number cannot afford meat; yet this same meat is selling in foreign countries for less than we pay. I know you are interested in all good works, so I am writing you to ask if you cannot do something to help remedy this terrible state of things. It is terrible when the life and health of our own people are at stake."

Mrs. M. A. B., Philadelphia, Pa. Some churches still retain the old method of breaking the sacramental bread, while others serve it cut into small portions, the latter form probably being adopted for hygienic reasons. After all, it is the spirit of the ceremonial rather than the form which is to be considered, although we do not doubt that very many prefer the time-honored and reverent custom.

M. S., Oraibi, Ariz. We are told that the evil one at times assumes the aspect of an angel of light in order to deceive men. He uses means, we are warned, that are calculated to deceive the very elect. (See II Cor. 4 : 4 and 11 : 14; II Thess. 2 : 9.) But all his professions are false; all his promises lies. If he should attempt to answer prayer, the answer would be a counterfeit, designed not to help but to mislead and destroy. (See I John 4 : 1.)

J. M., Kansas City, Mo. The Hall of Fame is said to have originated in a suggestion of Chancellor H. M. MacCracken of New York University, who directed public attention to the fact that an American Pantheon was needed. Paris, Rome, London, Munich and many other capitals each had their enduring memorials. Work on the Hall of Fame, situated on University Heights, New York, was begun in 1900. There was no lack of nominations. These were referred to a body of one hundred judges, among whom were college presidents, leading educators, scientists, authors, publicists and members of the Supreme Court bench. J. M. suggests that the time has come for adding new names to the roll of those Americans who have done distinguished service for their country and the world. The great war has brought out the noblest traits of American character, and he holds th most fitting recognition we could accor would be to select a group of the great inscribe their names in the Hall of Mrs. L. W., Kingsley, Pa., suggests year's addition to the Hall of Fame, the of P. P. Bliss and Allen G. Thurman.
hardly needs an effigy in stone, for he sti in his songs, and though these do not often in the newer songbooks, he lives, theless, in the good lives of the son daughters of the men and women wh melodies helped to save from sin and to to Christian work. Among his best-pieces are: "The Light of the World Is J
"What Shall the Harvest Be?" "Who Will," "Hold the Fort," "What Hast Done for Me?" "Go Bury Thy Sorrow," the Lower Lights Be Burning," "Oh
Nothing," "Almost Persuaded," "Onl
Armour-Bearer," "Pull for the Shore," Half Was Never Told," "Dare to be a D
"Seeking to Save," "Arise and Shine,"
Well with my Soul," "Wonderful Wor Life." Thurman was long in public lif served his state, Ohio, and the nation
He was a United States Senator for t years, 1869–1881, aspired to the Presid and was nominated but defeated for the Presidency, running with Cleveland in 18

Mrs. S. E. C., Erskine, Alberta, Ca
The pyramids of Egypt were monun over the graves of kings. The most intere group is at Ghizeh, near Cairo. The G Pyramid, built over the tomb of Cheop considered one of the seven wonders of world. It was originally 481 feet high an base was 756 feet square. It is placed exact relation to the points of the com and this fact, with the exact mathema relation which one of its dimensions bea another, has caused many to believe th was intended as an astronomical observa or to serve some similar scientific pur Cheops, over whose tomb the Great Pyra was built, is thought by some to have l about 2100 years before Christ.

R. D. S., Chaplin, Saskatchewan, Can
When an alien becomes naturalized in United States his children below the ag twenty-one become citizens by virtue of t father's naturalization, and can take up ho steads on government land and exercise other functions of citizenship the same a native-born American. The child of a na alized British-born person can resume Bri citizenship by swearing allegiance to Brit

G. C. H., Chicago, Ill. In the first verses of Isaiah 58, the prophet takes the p ple to task for the insincerity of their worsh while the sixth and seventh verses outline true worship which will be rewarded by Go recognition.

RENEWAL NOTICE

THE subscription price of the Herald is $2.50 a year. In Mi
Louisiana and in the United States we Mississippi, add 50c zone postage.
$2.50 a year. Foreign, $3.50 a yea years, $5.00.
When renewing, indicate with you
tance whether you are subscribing fo our premium books. The following include postage and one year's subscri the Christian Herald: Jerusalem—Its tion and Future, $3.00; Oh, Money!
$3.00; Pictorial Life of Christ, $3.00;
sador Morgenthau's Story, $3.50; L Prophecy, $3.00; Gene Stratton-Porter's
6 volumes, $6.00; Forty Prophetic W
$3.00; American Flag (4 x 6 feet), $4.0
able $1.00 a month, or cash with order.
India Paper Red Letter Bible, $5.00; w uine Morocco Binding, $6.00; Red Lett tament, $3.00.
Send money by postal or express order. Address THE CHRISTIAN H
BIBLE HOUSE, New York.

THE CHRISTIAN HERALD is published weekly by The Christian Herald, at the Bible House, Fourth Avenue, 8th and 9th Sts., New York City. The Officers are: Graham C. Patterson, President and Treasurer, Bible House, N. Y. City; Geo. H. Sandison, Vice President, Bible House, N. Y. City.

SUBSCRIPTION PRICE, $2.50 a year in advance. After July 1, 1919, an additional charge of 50 cents a year for zone postage will be required on all subscriptions west of the Mississippi, including Minnesota and Louisiana. Remittances should be made in the safest manner available. Make checks and money orders payable to The Christian Herald.

FOREIGN POSTAGE.—For copies mailed outside the United States, Canada and Mexico, add one dollar a year to subscription price.

CHANGE OF DATE.—It takes at least two weeks to change the date, after your subscription is renewed.

EXPIRATION OF SUBSCRIPTION.—The date on the wrapper indicates when your subscription ends.

CHANGE OF ADDRESS.—It requires three weeks' time to make the change. Give both old and new address.

LETTERS should be addressed, THE CHRISTIAN HERALD, Bible House, New York.

Entered as Second-class Matter at the Post Office Department, Ottawa

10 Quick Delicious Ways to Serve This Healthful Fruit

HERE are ten ways in which oranges can be served in a jiffy for breakfast, lunch or dinner. Why take the time, especially in these busy days, to prepare more elaborate foods that can't be more delicious? Note the simplicity of these luscious desserts and other dishes. Note also that no cooking is necessary.

Healthful, Too

There can hardly be a more healthful habit than the frequent serving of oranges. Their invaluable salts and acids are excellent aids in the digestion of all other foods served with them.

So don't regard oranges merely as good food alone but as food that improves your entire diet.

California Produces Oranges the Year Round

This year's crop of California summer oranges is the largest in history. More than 7,000,000 boxes of this delicious fruit will be shipped during the summer months; so there will be enough for everybody—and at reasonable prices.

Sunkist

Uniformly Good Oranges

Sunkist Oranges are firm but tender and practically seedless. These features make them easiest to slice, cut or segment, hence best for salads and desserts.

They are uniformly good—sweet and juicy, so you can depend on them. Order a dozen today and begin serving them daily in one of these attractive ways.

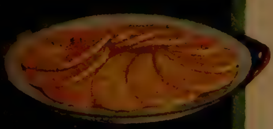
California Fruit Growers Exchange Dept. H-16 Los Angeles, Calif.

A Non-Profit, Co-operative Organization of 8,500 Growers

Also Distributors of Sunkist Marmalade and Sunkist Lemons

Send for "Sunkist Recipes," by Alice Bradley

A beautiful book containing 200 recipes for the use of Sunkist Oranges and Lemons will be sent free on request. This book, by Alice Bradley, Principal of Miss Farmer's School of Cookery, Boston, contains many valuable suggestions. A post card brings a copy. Mail one to us now.

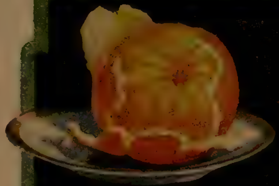


Fine for breakfast or as a salad or dessert—luscious, tender, juicy

Oranges cut up with bananas is a favorite fruit combination—healthful and attractive

Try oranges cut up with apples. Note the flavor of this dish.

Oranges and pineapple is another winning combination



Easy to peel. Eat this fruit between meals. Let the children have it.

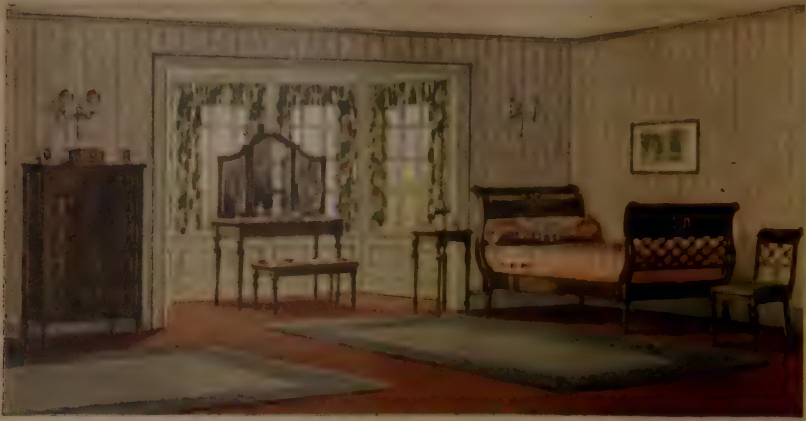
A delicious quick dessert is simply oranges cut up.

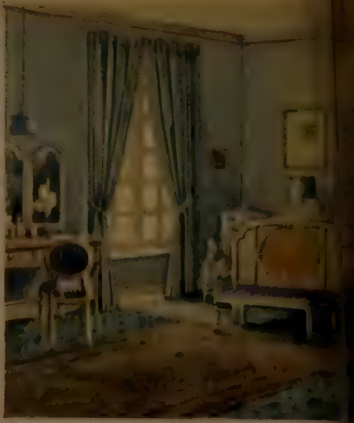
Try oranges with cocoanut. This dessert is preferred by millions.

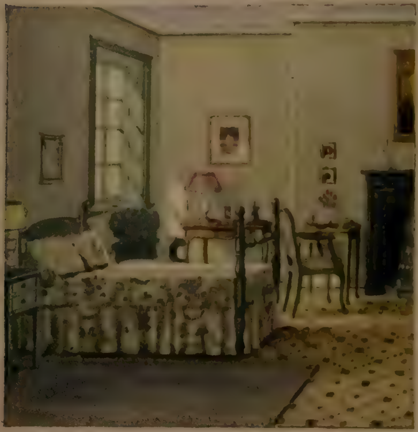
Drink orange juice alone or mix with ginger ale or grape juice.

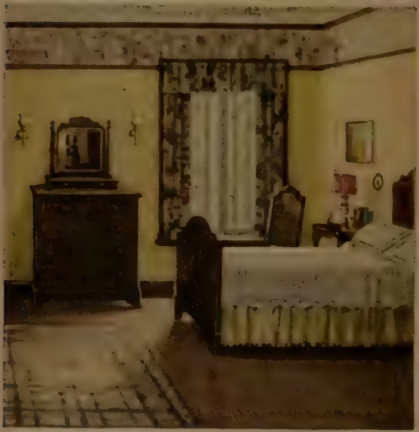
All soft drinks are better when orange juice is added.

The ideal breakfast fruit—appetizing, satisfying. No sugar is required.









Armstrong's Linoleum

For every room in the house

LOOK at these bedrooms. Each is distinguished by fresh, dainty coloring, excellent arrangement, inviting charm and an assured atmosphere of good taste. And in each room the linoleum floor is a perfect match for everything else.

The large bedroom has rose-colored Armstrong's Plain Linoleum; the lower room has Armstrong's brown Jaspé Linoleum. The blue room and the room with the delicate green touches have Armstrong's Carpet Inlaid Linoleum of suitable design—with the colors running clear through to the burlap back.

Armstrong's Linoleum is a practical floor choice because it is durable, economical, comfortable and easy to keep clean. Spend a profitable morning in some merchant's store looking over the Armstrong designs for every room. Have your linoleum laid right by the store expert.

Armstrong Bureau of Interior Decoration

In charge of a thoroughly trained decorator prepared to give personal suggestions about the selection of Armstrong's Linoleum to suit any scheme of interior decoration. No fees. Address: Bureau of Interior Decoration.

"The Art of Home Furnishing and Decoration"

By Frank Alvah Parsons

This new book by the President of the New York School of Fine and Applied Art, sent together with de luxe color plates of fine home interiors, prepared under Mr. Parsons' direction, on receipt of twenty cents.

ARMSTRONG CORK COMPANY, Linoleum Department, Lancaster, Pa.

Armstrong's Linoleum

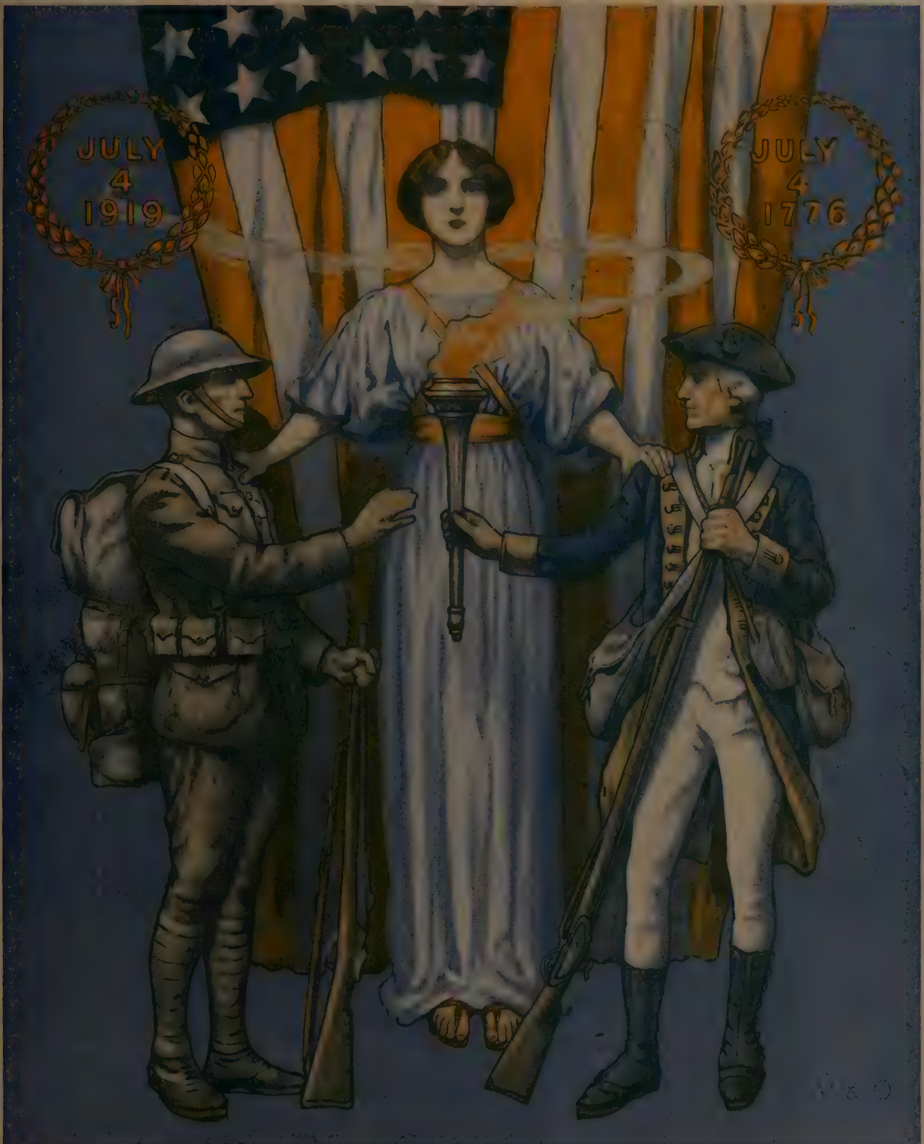
Circle A Trade Mark Reg. U.S. Pat. Off.

For Every Room Ⓐ in the House

NOTICE TO READER
When you finish reading this magazine place a 1-cent stamp on this notice, mail the magazine, and it will be placed in the hands of our soldiers, sailors or marines.
NO WRAPPING NO ADDRESS
A. S. BURLESON, Postmaster General.

Christian Herald

$2.50 a Year NEW YORK, JULY 5, 1919 Ten Cents a Copy
For subscriptions in Minnesota, Louisiana and in the United States west of the Mississippi add 50c. to cover Zone Postage



Its Glow Has Reached Across the Seas

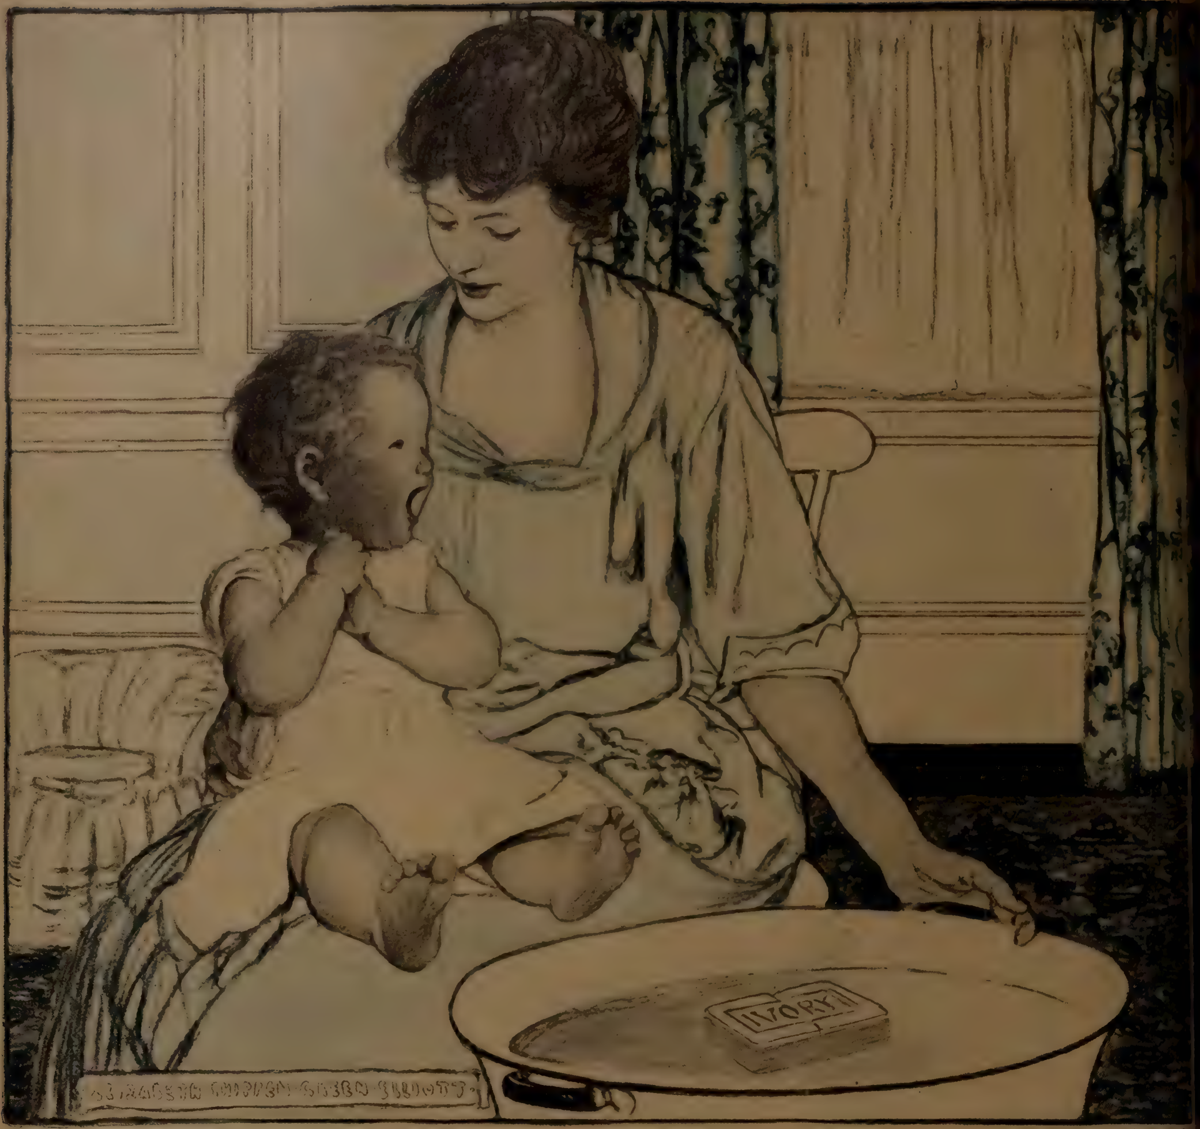
Vol. 42. No. 27. Published Weekly at New York City by The Christian Herald. Copyright, 1919, The Christian Herald.

WHERE THE PILGRIMS LANDED
The Lighting of the Torch that Illumines the World

INDEPENDENCE DAY, 1919
A Poem by Margaret E. Sangster

Many Other Patriotic and Timely Features

Entered as Second Class Matter, January 25, 1909, at the Post Office at New York, under the act of March 3, 1879.



COPYRIGHT 1919 BY THE PROCTER & GAMBLE CO., CI

*B*ABY'S yawns turn into gurgles of delight when he is dipped into the fragrant, bubbling lather of his Ivory Soap bath.

He enjoys the cleansing suds from the top of his yellow curls to the tips of his crinkly pink toes. Ivory always is mild, pure, gentle—never irritates. It is so free from harsh, drying materials that it feels cool and soothing to the most sensitive skin.

You will find Ivory Soap in the bath-tubs of the best cared for babies everywhere—in beautiful nurseries, in spotless, sanitary hospitals, and in modest homes where tenderness and good sense prevail. It is the pure, safe soap for young—and old.

IVORY SOAP. . . . .  . . . . . 99$\frac{44}{100}$% PURE

IT FLOATS

THE CHRISTIAN HERALD
AN ILLUSTRATED NEWS WEEKLY FOR THE HOME

SUBSCRIPTION $2.50 PER ANNUM
PUBLISHED 52 TIMES A YEAR

GRAHAM PATTERSON
Publisher

GEORGE H. SANDISON
Managing Editor

VOL. 42—NO. 27. PRICE 10 CENTS
OFFICES: BIBLE HOUSE, NEW YORK

THE MEANING OF AMERICA

A TIMELY TRIBUTE

By HORACE HOLLEY

IN THESE great days of 1919, America is being rededicated to a broader, more fruitful ideal.

Within six generations our American purpose of political liberty has developed within itself a purpose even bigger, even better and more human—the purpose of economic betterment.

A mightier America has been produced, as the oak is produced from the acorn.

America stands apart from all mankind in that America alone has demonstrated the proof of human progress and human development.

America means that men are graded according to their service, not according to their privilege.

America means that social reality, like moral reality, is permeated and sustained by positive, undeviating law.

America means that a man's brain, character, efforts and ambition can work upon adequate tools and build his dreams in stone.

America fertilizes her children with positive desires for better daily living and gives them a fair reward of spiritual and material life.

Only a decade ago, it would seem, we were devoted to the old, false gods of chance, of bitterness and of strife, the gods that made Asia a narcotic and made Europe a bomb. But the full, free energies we called up to win the War brought us a Victory nobler even than victory over the Hun. America has conquered Poverty. America has conquered Fear. America has replaced the instinct of self-preservation—the instinct of the savage in the jungle—with the instinct of working and playing among our fellows—the impulse of Civilized Man.

THE greatness that America is—the wealth that America has—the further opportunities that America will give—we misunderstand, temporarily and impulsively, because this America of ours is a new standard in the world. We have no ready rule to measure it. Even our highest expectations have been surpassed.

But ask the student of history, the man who knows under what conditions other men lived in ages and nations past. Ask the traveler, he who knows divided Europe, who knows weary, homeless Asia, who knows Africa the ignorant. Compared with all times and all nations else, America is as the clear spring to the stagnant pool, as the steady, wheel-turning river to the arid, sullen desert sand.

Carry this larger meaning of America into our most immediate, most intimate daily affairs. All roads lead sooner or later to the problem of Labor and Capital. What has America done with this world-old problem?

America has solved the problem of Labor and Capital by proving that in the modern community "Capital" has no real separate existence. In America, more and more, "Capital" is merely one form or manifestation of Labor, one tool of Labor, one reward of Labor. The proof of this assertion lies evident enough in any Factory, any Bank, any Store, any Farm. Is the productive value of the Factory machine due to its mere inert metal, or to its design? To its design, of course! So the "Capital" of Factories is really their engineering and their inventive brains—a highly specialized form of Labor, but obviously Labor, as all will agree.

And what about the Bank? Does a bank represent Capital as volume or Capital as velocity? As mass or as energy? As possession or as direction? Here again the answer is clear to all.

Or in the case of the Store: Does the Dealer profit by his goods merely? Or by his service in and by the goods? Compare the Dealer who profits with the Dealer who does not. Is the difference between them due to quantity of goods or to quality of service? The question answers itself.

Last of all, the American Farm. What is a Farm these days but an Out-Door Factory? What is Agriculture in America but Factory methods, Factory appliances turned to the production of food?

Here, indeed, is the very basis of this larger meaning of America as economic betterment. In producing food by machinery, in quantity, under conditions of scientific certitude, America has cut the tree of human Fear at its root. For the source of Fear is the lack of food. And America has food enough and to spare. America can feed the world.

But the American idea that Capital is really a form of Labor can be worked out still further. Since the cause of Capital has become brains rather than privileges, the control of Capital—the reward of brains dedicated to service—is absolutely free to all.

In America the son of a mechanic is as apt at invention as the son of a wealthy broker. A bootblack can arrive at an education as productive as a millionaire. The test is no longer privilege. The test of success in America is service.

THAT is why—even though we do not yet fully appreciate America—we unconsciously reject the Asiatic and the European idea. We find a truer and richer economic development in the initiative of personal brains than in the dictation of government officials. We find a broader and deeper freedom in the natural cooperation of industry than in the unnatural coordination of Socialism. We do not willingly impede the efforts of more ambitious minds than ours, nor lightly deny the reward of more successful ones, because we know that by so doing we may be restricting the opportunities of our own children. Moreover, we know well that these greater efforts and these stronger ambitions are producing advantages in which all can share.

These great days of 1919 are great precisely because we Americans are definitely and permanently breaking with the restrictions of the past.

The stream of human activity is pouring into the sea of social faith. The moment of arrival is a troublous moment. But the confusion in which Americans find themselves this very day is no confusion of weakness, disintegration, failure. It is the confusion of power still unappreciated, still untried.

America can spend what she wants to spend, because America can earn what she wants to earn. In America, better living is not a privilege, much less is it a crime. Better living is our common obligation in the light of the commonwealth we are!

Germany Votes to Sign the Treaty

THE German National Assembly, on June 22, voted by 237 to 138, to sign the Treaty of Peace. The Assembly also voted confidence in the new government of Herr Gustav Adolph Bauer, which was organized after forty-eight hours of intense endeavor by the leaders of the German parties. One cabinet lasted only an hour, being disrupted by the refusal of Count von Bernstorff, former Ambassador at Washington, to accept the Foreign Ministry, and with it the chief post on the peace commission. In the cabinet, as finally organized, Dr. Herman Müller is Foreign Minister, Gustav Noske remains as Minister of Defense, and Matthias Erzberger, leading exponent of the necessity of signing, is Vice-Premier and Minister of Finance. Herr Bauer is a Socialist and has been secretary of the labor unions of Germany, Labor Minister in the cabinet, and a labor delegate to the Reichstag.

The decision to sign followed three days of stormy political discussion. The Vossische Zeitung, although calling the Treaty "unspeakably brutal," probably expressed the average German attitude in an editorial urging the signing of the Treaty, saying: "But despite all that, it is hardly possible that any government conscious of its responsibility will accept the awful consequences of rejection. If we accept, our burden will be intolerable, we admit; and it is impossible, if measured by means of antiquated statesmanship and economy. But even the hardest peace creates the possibility of reconstruction and saves the country from falling to pieces, while rejection would mean a terrible end of everything!"

The Scheidemann cabinet and the peace commission, under Brockdorff-Rantzau, resigned on June 20. At that time the Assembly seemed to have a small majority for signing. All of the parties, except the Independent Socialists, were split on the question; the Majority Socialists and the Catholic Centrists had a majority for signing, while the Democrats, representing the military and conservative classes, were almost solidly against it. The Democrats held out for counter-proposals, demanding a limitation of the indemnity to the 100,000,000,000 marks, offered by von Brockdorff-Rantzau, and refusing to accept the sections admitting Germany's war guilt, and also declining to surrender the Kaiser and others accused by the Allies. A note proposing modifications along these lines was dispatched to Paris on the 22d and was delivered to President Wilson. The President and Premiers Lloyd George and Clemenceau discussed the note for a couple of hours and wired a negative reply.

The Germans then were reported as deciding to sign the treaty as presented, but to declare that they did not sign voluntarily but under pressure of force, and that since the economic and financial terms exceeded the limit of Germany's capacity to meet them, Germany would be unable to accept responsibility for their execution.

In announcing the cabinet's decision to sign the peace terms, Premier Bauer declared to the Assembly: "The Allied and Associated Powers cannot expect the German people to agree from inner conviction to a peace instrument whereby, without the populations being consulted, members are severed from the German Empire, German sovereignty permanently violated, and unbearable economic and financial burdens imposed upon the German people."

The decision to sign was quite evidently the result of German inability to resist, and was possibly aided by the Allied force of 500,000 picked troops which stood along the Rhine, ready to march into Germany and, with the Bohemian and Polish forces, to throw a military ring about the center of Germany, re-establishing the blockade, with all friendly neutrals cut off by the Allied armies. Pressure for signing was also brought to bear upon the Assembly by the people of the occupied territory, who saw the full extent of Allied power, and also by the people of South Germany, Bavaria and Baden, which would be first invaded. The eastern provinces were solidly against yielding, and the people of Silesia were said to be determined to resist with arms any attempt to separate them from Germany.

Because of the time required to reorganize the government and the peace commission and dispatch the new delegates to Versailles, the new German Government asked the Allies to extend the time limit for signing by 48 hours, but the Allied Council refused additional time. As this was written it appeared probable that, before June 25, the historic Hall of Mirrors, where France was humiliated in 1871, would see the once proud conqueror humbled by his written acknowledgment of defeat.

As for peace. With Germany signed up, there still remain Austria, Bulgaria and Turkey. And there are hostilities still to be hushed between Czechoslavs and Hungarians, Czechoslavs and Poles (not active, but quiescent), Jugoslavs and Austrians, Rumanians and Hungarians, Poles and Ukrainians, Rumanians and Ukrainians, and between the Russian Reds and all the races which touch the edges of the Russian chaos. Then there are the Turks, who are still murdering Armenians and resisting Greek advances in Asia Minor; Afghanistan and Britain are skirmishing, and the disposition of the Danube territory, claimed alike by Serbia and Rumania, holds a seed of discord, while Albania is not yet satisfied.

© International Film Service

Villa forces photographed in Juarez when Villa controlled Northern Mexico

The Week in the World's News

Germans Sink Ships. Under the armistice terms, the German High Seas Fleet at Scapa Flow were interned with skeleton German crews, but not surrendered. British ships guarded the exits to the roadstead, but there were no guards on the interned ships. On June 21 the German crews were seen to be leaving the ships in small boats, and the vessels were observed to be sinking. Six German sailors were killed and ten wounded while the British were putting the enemy seamen under arrest. Efforts were at once made to beach the vessels. Of the 50 destroyers, 18 were beached, 4 remained afloat and the rest sank. Of the 9 battleships and 5 battle cruisers, all but one of the latter were sunk, although some were nearly beached and went down in shallow water. The sinking was achieved by opening the sea-cocks and condensers. It was done under plans of Admiral von Reuter in command, who said the Kaiser's orders demanded sinking rather than surrender.

Britain Bars Drys. England appears unwilling to dry her bars since she has prevented, through delaying passports, the invasion of prohibition lecturers, who were planning to begin the International Campaign for a dry world by presenting the advantages of prohibition to audiences in Great Britain. In spite of the action of the government, however, the Anti-Saloon League has begun its work in England, the secretary having rented, for 23 years, a suite of offices in Fleet Street. A representative of the British Government was quoted by a correspondent as declaring that no action by Great Britain, looking toward total prohibition, would be likely to be taken until the prohibition experiment in the United States had been proven a success.

Ratifying Suffrage. The legislatures of Ohio and Kansas ratified the Woman's Suffrage Amendment to the Federal Constitution on June 16.

Twenty-five Millions to Colombia. On June 18 the Senate Foreign Relations Committee was considering a new treaty with Colombia under which the United States will pay Colombia $25,000,000, but will make no apology to Colombia for any share it might have had in the establishment of the Republic of Panama.

For 50,000 Soldiers. The army recruiting service, on June 16, began an eight-day intensive campaign to secure 50,000 recruits for service in all branches of the army and in all quarters of the globe. The campaign was immediately successful, and the recruiting sergeants reported that a large percentage of the recruits were men recently discharged.

To Repeal Daylight Saving. The House of Representatives on June 18 passed a bill repealing the Daylight Saving Act, restoring the clocks to standard time on the last Sunday in October.

Senators Discuss League. Senator Knox, discussing before the Senate, on June 17, his resolution asking that the League of Nations covenant be separated from the treaty of peace, declared that he had no partisan aims and that he was acting purely in the interests of the welfare of the nation.

Senator McCumber spoke in the Senate on June 18 in opposition to the Knox resolution and in support of the League of Nations covenant. He declared that the League was necessary as a means to avert another world war and that the interests of the United States were amply protected in the League covenant. The discussion that followed developed the fact that the resolution could not be passed and it was practically abandoned. Former Senator Root set the opponents of the League of Nations in a new track by proposing that the Senate ratify the treaty, but except such portions as the much-disputed Article X.

Brazil's President Our Guest. President-elect Dr. Epitacio Pessoa of Brazil reached New York on June 20 on the transport Imperator to which he had been transferred in mid-ocean from the disabled French cruiser Jeanne d'Arc. Representatives of the State, War and Navy Departments
the harbor in four destroyer
Dr. Pessoa and receive him as of the United States. He Washington, after which he tour of the principal American

Mexico Must Protect A Following the return of the troops from Mexican soil, aft
the Villistas away from Ju Mexican Government filed an protest against the invasion o ereignty which was answered
American Government thro Embassy at Mexico City by reported to be a strong statem necessity that Mexico assure of foreigners. To insure Ameri
tory against possible retaliatio hands of Villa, the War De ordered troops to every town along the Rio Grande. The 1 Squadron, just returned from was ordered to the Texas fronti air patrol of the border was es
The action of the American tr looked upon as a serious set Villa, who retired to the Ch mountains but, also, as tendin diminish the prestige of the Federal forces, which had been to fully protect the loyal city of Later information gave the A lost in the action as 2 killed, 2 wounded and 8 slightly wounded
Villistas were known to have lost killed and 11 taken prisoner.
23 Carranza was in actual contr
little more than half of Mexico
American State and War Depa were said to have adopted an of watchful preparedness.

To Investigate Pogroms.
ident Wilson was reported, on J to have decided upon a commissi members headed by Henry Morg to investigate the reported pogr
Poland.

Troubled Russia. White
having captured the fortified across the bay from the fortr Kronstadt, and the fortress brought under fire by the Briti French squadron in the Gulf of F
the great naval base, on June 1
on fire and flying the white flag.
Bolshevist troops evacuated the f while seven Bolshevist vessels dered.

The troops of North Russia and kins Cossacks in the south, adv
on June 23, claiming total capture the disorganized Reds of 44,000 p ers and over 150 guns.

According to the French wi service the Soviet Governmen Russia has a new enemy in a m religious movement, rapidly spr among the peasants in the dis around Moscow, which holds Leni be the Anti-Christ foretold in the S ture.

Arrest 6,000 Chinese. In or stop the Anti-Japanese boycott ment, Chinese civil and Jap military authorities in Fuchow, province, were reported, on June have arrested 6,000 Chinese stud

Boy Scout Passes Quota. The of the Boy Scouts initiated on June a million associate members went "
the Top" with more than a million committed to a definite interest i promotion of scouting. Incidentally movement secured a million-dollar for the promotion of its summer gram and placed scouting before th tion in a way never before attempt

Reds Urge Revolution.
meeting held in Madison Square Ga in New York, on June 20, under auspices of the Socialist party and i interests of the Russian Soviet Gov ment, President Wilson was accu through his aid to the Siberian rail out of his emergency fund, to be ducting a private war on Soviet Ru
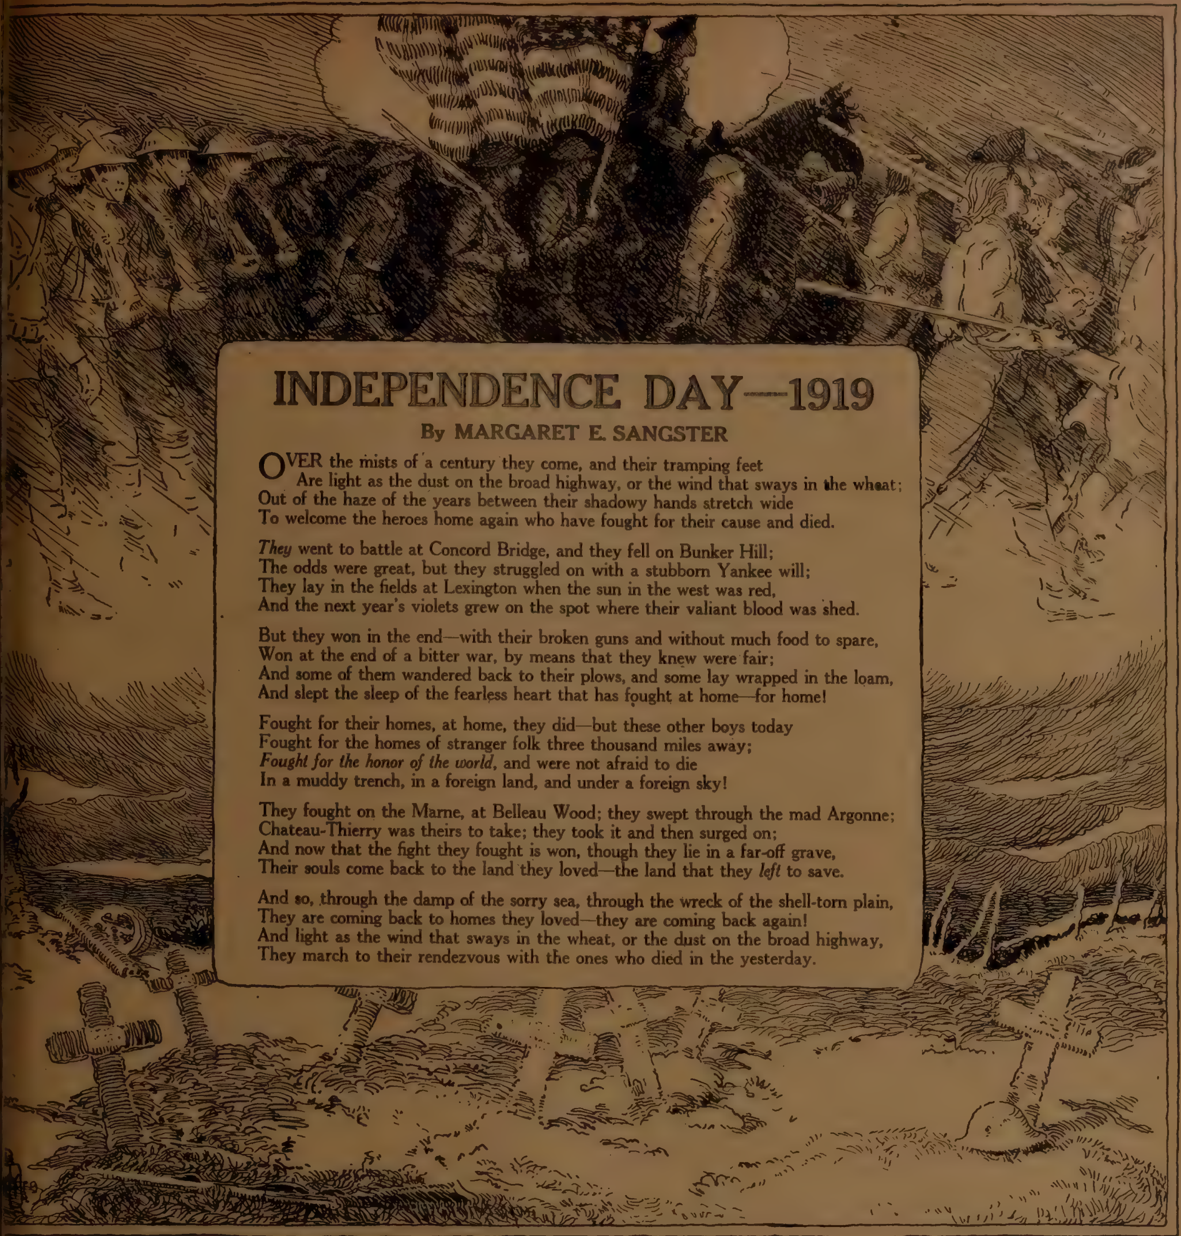
A man and woman who waved red

Continued on page 752



INDEPENDENCE DAY—1919

By MARGARET E. SANGSTER

OVER the mists of a century they come, and their tramping feet
Are light as the dust on the broad highway, or the wind that sways in the wheat;
Out of the haze of the years between their shadowy hands stretch wide
To welcome the heroes home again who have fought for their cause and died.

They went to battle at Concord Bridge, and they fell on Bunker Hill;
The odds were great, but they struggled on with a stubborn Yankee will;
They lay in the fields at Lexington when the sun in the west was red,
And the next year's violets grew on the spot where their valiant blood was shed.

But they won in the end—with their broken guns and without much food to spare,
Won at the end of a bitter war, by means that they knew were fair;
And some of them wandered back to their plows, and some lay wrapped in the loam,
And slept the sleep of the fearless heart that has fought at home—for home!

Fought for their homes, at home, they did—but these other boys today
Fought for the homes of stranger folk three thousand miles away;
Fought for the honor of the world, and were not afraid to die
In a muddy trench, in a foreign land, and under a foreign sky!

They fought on the Marne, at Belleau Wood; they swept through the mad Argonne;
Chateau-Thierry was theirs to take; they took it and then surged on;
And now that the fight they fought is won, though they lie in a far-off grave,
Their souls come back to the land they loved—the land that they left to save.

And so, through the damp of the sorry sea, through the wreck of the shell-torn plain,
They are coming back to homes they loved—they are coming back again!
And light as the wind that sways in the wheat, or the dust on the broad highway,
They march to their rendezvous with the ones who died in the yesterday.

What a Nest Egg Will Do

TEXTILE worker makes a suggestion in connection with government loans which shows how intensive is the study being given by millions of Americans to matters about which they probably thought little before the war—the saving and investing of money, rates of interest, and the capital, not merely for the "capitalist," but for the thrifty average man and By way of making moderate savings furnish security for old age this of thrift, writing in the Textile Worker, proposes a plan. Holders of Bonds and War Savings Stamps should be allowed, he believes, to conese securities up to $10,000 into a new loan, bearing interest at four per first. To encourage further saving, it would be stipulated that in making nversion an equal amount of new bonds or stamps be purchased. He ns that this would stimulate people to save until they were able to make version, and also give them the finest incentive for hanging on to their gov- securities.

made the conversion, the interest on the new bonds would increase ively. After five years it would be 5 per cent.; fifteen years, 6 per cent.; -ve years, 7 per cent.; thirty years, 8 per cent.; thirty-five years, 9 per rty years, 10 per cent.; forty-five years, 11 per cent.; fifty years, 12½ per ty-five years, 15 per cent., after which it would go no higher. Thus, ty-five years, a $10,000 nest egg in such bonds would yield the owner a year.

t sight one wonders how it can be done for the money!

matter of fact, it can't.

But a comparison with annuity rates shows interesting possibilities in another direction. Assuming that a wage-earner of thirty had then $1,000 laid by. If he put it into government bonds paying interest on this progressive plan his interest up to the age of seventy would net him a little more than $40 the first five years, $50 a year the next five years, $60 a year after fifteen years, $90 a year after thirty-five years, and so on. If death occurred at the age of seventy he would have just reached the 10 per cent. period, returning him $100 a year. The total amount received would be $2,570.

But if this same wage-earner had $1,000 with which to buy an annuity from a life insurance company at the age of thirty, it would purchase a little more than $54 a year, beginning at the age of thirty, and running as long as he lived. If he died at the same age, seventy years, the annuity would have returned him a total of $2,160.

Under the annuity plan, of course, his capital would be wiped out at death, whereas under the unique plan proposed by this wage-earner his estate would still own the government bonds.

Two interesting reflections occur in comparing the two plans:

First, the bond plan, whereby thrift is made to provide for old age, does not seem feasible—in plain terms, money is asked to pay more than the traffic will bear.

But, second, the annuity plan is a practical business proposition, open to any one who cares to patronize it, and represents what men thus far have been able to accomplish through teamwork in the funding of money and the averaging of risks.

JAMES H. COLLINS.

Where the Pilgrims Landed

BY

Julia E. Deane

The old burial ground at Plymouth where the early Pilgrims sleep

The Forefathers' Monument

THE three hundredth anniversary of the landing at Plymouth Rock will soon be celebrated. Nineteen twenty is close at hand, and preparations are in the hearts and minds of the people. Thousands of visitors will make pilgrimages to the little town, which will be "all dressed up in its Sunday clothes" to receive them.

Many will go first to the national monument to the forefathers. The town gave the land; contributions from different sections of the country supplied the pedestal, the buttresses and the reliefs; and Hon. Oliver Ames gave the colossal figure which surmounts the whole. The land, a little higher than the surrounding country, was well chosen, for the commanding figure of Faith looks over the ever-changing waters of the bay toward the rising sun. Its dignified pose and serene countenance seem typical of the spirit that led the forefathers to brave the unknown seas and foreign shores of a distant land. As they looked beyond the difficulties of life in their own country and by faith saw in a new land the "freedom, brotherhood and justice" they sought, so, undisturbed by the restlessness of the everyday life at its feet, do the eyes of the sculptured Faith seem to look far beyond the boundaries of sea and shore. The buttresses, each cut from a single block of granite, are large sitting figures representing Morality, Law, Education and Freedom. The reliefs on the pedestal show four historical scenes relating to the Pilgrims: the departure from Delft Haven; the signing of the social compact in the cabin of the Mayflower; the landing at Plymouth; the treaty with Massasoit. The four figures and the reliefs are excellent, the last, in particular, being the result of careful study of detail and effect. But, sculptured in white granite, Faith dominates the whole scene.

Thousands of strangers climb the gentle slope every year to stand at the foot of this memorial and read in the reliefs short sketches of the life of the Pilgrims. But in 1920 thousands more, from every State in the Union, will stand there and will see in the monument a fitting symbol of the abiding faith of the Pilgrims.

Those who come to Plymouth expecting to see a table of stone, or a pyramid, or at least a boulder on which the Pilgrims landed, will be sadly disappointed. To the Plymouthians it is all these in one, but to the visitor it is only a small rock—alas, not on the beach! Fortunately they will find cut on its surface only the date, 1620. Were this immortal stepping-stone in the water, to be reached even by a rowboat, the disappointment would not be so keen; but it stands on "the broad highway," snugly safeguarded by an iron fence and surmounted by a heavy canopy.

But to this historic spot crowds of people come every year. Many of them stand on its well-worn top in memory of the forefathers, but all of them think of that first December landing when that plucky group of men and women stepped on this snow-covered, barren shore. Not a thing of beauty, not even large enough to give an impression of consequence, still Plymouth Rock is absolutely alone in its significance. Standing by its side and looking toward either the sea or the town, the traveler tries to realize in part what the spirit of those Pilgrims must have been to have drawn them hither. Nothing could have taken more courage than to leave country, home and friends and sail across an unknown sea for an unknown land. Nothing could have been more forlorn than the scene that met them when they stepped on the dreary shore of Massachusetts. It is true they had no expectation of finding anything habitable here, ready made—which is a little comfort to those who think of that memorable landing.

But the Rock, insignificant as it looks, and standing among unattractive surroundings, is large in the symbolic sense. As clearly as the figures cut upon its face, the visitor can see in this Rock a memorial of Hope. Faith brought the Pilgrims safely to this country. Hope gave them strength and courage to begin for themselves and for other generations a land for "liberty, equality and fraternity." The response of our boys in the present world war has proved that the hope of our forefathers to establish here a people who would value "mercy more than life" has been fulfilled. The weak of heart were not among that band of Pilgrims. Only the valiant came to America three hundred years ago, and they came to make it

> "The land of youth and freedom, beyond the ocean bars, > Where the air is full of sunshine and the flag is full of stars."

Travelers in sympathy with the Pilgrim ideals will next climb the steps that lead to Burial Hill. Once on the top they will turn naturally toward the sea and imagine that from here the early settlers watched the Mayflower sail away, and again and again watched for its return. Commanding the surrounding country it was here the Pilgrims built their fort and kept a careful watch for unfriendly Indians. Here, too, they laid to rest those who, though possessed of daun spiritual courage, had not the physical strengt endure the severity and privations of the first of the settlement. During the first winter women died than men, though the number o men and women was greatly decreased. Visitors are interested can read on the old slate graves
the names of many famous in the history of Plym

Far from being a dreary spot, this old bur ground on top of the hill is more inspiring than other place in the town. All day long, summer winter alike, it lies in a flood of sunshine.
seems most fitting that the last resting-place o Pilgrims should be near the life of the town, but above it, where the air is sweetest, the outlook
est. The perfect repose of the place suggests Forefathers' spirit and is a memorial of Love—of freedom, love of independent thought, love of fa
It was love that made the Pilgrims place the b of their dear ones close to the fort, in the safest, frequented place. The material memorials ther of the simplest, and the whole effect is restful. B
Hill seems a special place for prayer and thanksgi Seen from here on a sunny day the sparkling speaks of life and courage, while close at hand the shadows rest tenderly on the mounds of the de those dead still honored and loved—for

> "The Pilgrim spirit has not fled,
> It walks in noon's broad light;
> And it watches the bed of the glorious dead
> With the holy stars by night."

Plymouth Rock, whose granite face first felt the Pilgrim feet

Progress in the Philippine

THE April number of the Philip Presbyterian, published quarter
Manila, contains an enlightenin view of the results of Christian work i Islands. Among other signs of progre the news of an ordinance which Mayor ban has ordered to be prepared for the of Manila, forbidding the employme children under sixteen in any labor. T is much opposition to the proposed lation from interested parties, who using the arguments which are so famili us in the United States—that the chil are helping to support their families, the step is too radical, too great a sho
the economic system, etc. A bill introd in the Philippine Senate providing f gradual abolition of the cockpit faile passage by only one vote.

The question of whether national p bition will be operative in the Philippin being raised by the friends of booze, notw standing the plain words of the eigh amendment, "the United States and ritory subject to the jurisdiction there

Bishop Edwin H. Hughes

Bishop William Burt

Rev. Charles Boswell

Bishop Joseph C. Hartzell

Bishop Wm. A. Quayle

A Great Missionary Centennial

METHODIST Churches in all parts of the globe as well as throughout the United States have prepared for their part in the great centennial celebration at Columbus, Ohio (June 20 to July 13, 1919).

That date marked the one hundredth anniversary of the founding of organized missions by the Methodist Church. In 1819 there was organized the missionary society (for seventy-eight years in charge of the missionary operations of the Methodist Church both at home and abroad) which was the first leverage of the world-winning evangelistic work of Methodists everywhere.

Trumpeters for Methodist Centenary Celebration

At the time of the beginning of this original Methodist Missionary Society, the Methodist Church in this country had grown from its small beginnings in 1760 (by Philip Embury in New York City) to a big body of over a quarter of a million members and over 900 preachers, and the first delegated Methodist General Conference had been held in New York City (in 1812) with ninety members. When, in 1904, the General Conference created separate boards of Foreign and of Home Missions, it was found that under their old Missionary Society the Methodist Church had contributed for home and foreign missions combined the large sum of $47,046,496.75, laying the solid foundation for the extensive missions maintained in thirty-five different countries on four great continents today.

Naturally the Centenary Celebration was heralded by a great missionary drive unprecedented in the evangelistic annals of one of the greatest missionary agencies the world has ever known. The Centenary campaign embraced a "Decision Day" in Methodist Sunday schools, which has raised about one-eighth of the great Missionary Centenary total of $105,000,000, the sum that the church as a whole pledges to pay during the next five years.

Definite goals have been fixed by the various missionary groups, the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society, for example, having for its aim 1,000 missionaries, 400,000 members, and a $2,000,000 fund.

With the assurance of the large funds it is planned that equal amounts will be given to the foreign and to home missions. Most of the foreign portion will go to countries devastated during the war, especially the Balkan countries and unchurched districts of the Orient.

Many great congested American cities will benefit, among them Philadelphia, where religious centers are planned among the foreign-speaking people, the colored people, and also a large industrial center at Vine and Sixth Streets, similar to the Morgan Memorial at Boston, where rescue work will be accompanied by opportunities for employment.

The great enterprises proposed (for which means have been successfully secured) herald a new drive (a "selective draft") for workers. It is announced that the expansion of Methodist activities as a result of the Missionary Centenary calls for 53,000 new evangelists of the Gospel—missionaries, ministers and other Christian workers. The plans for the drive include visitation of the colleges, of normal and secondary schools, among Army and Navy men, of the cities in a systematic movement to present the ministry as a life work; the issuing of a call to Methodist ministers for a "Paul and Timothy Covenant" (each to bring in one); and an improvement of conditions for ministers such as minimum salary, established standards of merit and ability, etc.

Rev. J. B. Hiageley, D.D.

Rev. Ezra S. Tipple

Rev. Dr. H. K. Carroll

Col. Elijah W. Halford

The increased opportunity in church service thus created calls for 1,850 new ministers a year for the next four years; 1,250 foreign and 1,400 home men missionaries; 1,000 women missionaries; 250 special teachers in American college faculties; 1,700 trained workers to serve as church secretaries, deaconesses, etc.; and the training of 40,000 young people to become permanent members of local church staffs.

The city of Columbus, Ohio (chosen for its central location), the scene of the final Centenary Celebration (June 20–July 13, 1919), held open arms of welcome to the Methodist hosts. The city councils have offered every facility, including the use of the public parks for camping grounds for one of the greatest camp-meetings ever held in the long and radiant history of the Methodist Church.

From the opening day of praise and devotion to the closing day of prayer and consecration there has been a remarkable series of special days, including "Stewardship Day"; "Africa Day"; "City Day"; "Sunday School Day"; "Labor Day"; "Bible Day"; Allies' Day"; "Peace Day"; "America Day"; "Enlistment Day"; "Farmers' Day"; days devoted to "Americanization," "Reconstruction," "East Asia," "South Asia," and a special "Women's Day" to rejoice in the new era of woman's political equality (just granted by the United States Congress) and woman's widening way in Christian service the world around.

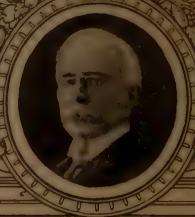
Notable demonstration and music features mark the Centenary Climax celebration in Columbus. Among these are great religious pageants ("The Wayfarer," arranged by Dr. J. E. Crowther, Seattle, Wash.; a patriot pageant on the great oval; a great religious prophecy bringing together all taking part in the service of the celebration, and a children's pageant), for which about 17,000 participants have been trained by musical and dramatic experts from New York and Chicago; and a unique Centenary Celebration Trombone Choir of one hundred instruments (many of which of uncommon size were made especially for this event), which will play daily in the great Coliseum, seating 8,000 (in which is especially installed a great pipe organ); a Zulu band to produce the weird harmonies of the fertile mission field of Africa; and the splendid pageant orchestra.

◆

Christian Unity in Mexican Missions

THE whole trend of Christian work in Mexico today is toward cooperation. A committee was appointed in April, 1918, on the evangelization of the Federal District. This committee was organized on the following basis: A Committee of Evangelization was formed consisting of one missionary and one Mexican minister of each ecclesiastical body represented in the Federal District. A complete and careful survey of Mexico City and the Federal District is planned to discover what sections are most neglected or most needy, to develop the evangelical work in the Federal District, and to occupy as completely as possible the entire field. It was also proposed to avoid overlapping in the planning of new work.

THE LOVE OF MONEY



A SERMON

By

REV. J. H. JOWETT, D.D.*

TEXT—Luke 12: 15. "Take heed, and keep yourselves from covetousness."

"TAKE heed, and keep yourselves from covetousness." That is the text. The story of Ahab and Naboth's vineyard shall be the commentary upon it.

Now, I do not think it is wrong to save money. I do not think there is any moral wrong in the ownership, or in the administration and increase, of wealth. I know there are a few isolated passages of Scripture which, when wrested from their context, seem to indicate that it is a sin for a man either to have or to make wealth; yet the testimony of the Scriptures, taken as a whole, is uniform and unequivocal in the other way. The Bible does not say that money is the root of all evil. That statement is made neither by the Bible nor by our common sense. It is the love of money which has been a root of evil; not the possession of money, not the legitimate use of it, but that fondling love of it which we call avarice, that possession of it which we name covetousness.

Let me say further, I do not think it is wrong for some men to be richer than other men. The fact that men are differently endowed, that they are possessed of different powers, native and acquired, that they are to rank as a gradation of forces, inferior and superior, is proof enough to me that human society was not meant to be flat, level and uniform as a table, but that it was meant to be full of hills and valleys and inequalities of every kind. I am not injured by any man being superior to me, unless he uses his superiority to crush me to the ground. It is the same with money. Mankind is not to be leveled by an equal apportionment of wealth. Such leveling, if done today, would be destroyed tomorrow. There must be, there ever will be, unequal distribution.

I believe, then, it is not wrong for a man to save money. I believe it is not wrong for one man to have more than another. I believe, further, that all the roads to wealth that are right to any man are right to all men. There are some people who reason in this wise: "I am not a member of the church. You are. I can do things which are not permitted to you." No, you cannot! What right have you which is denied to me? I am not bound to do right because I am a member of the church. I am not bound to do right because I am a minister. I am bound to do right because I am a man, because God made me, and has the right to govern me. Moral obligations rest on grounds which are common to you and me, the grounds of common manhood. What then you have a right to do, I have a right to do. What you think your minister has no right to do, you have no right to do. Even so is it with the making of money. All the roads to money which are right to anybody are right to a Christian man.

I say, then, it is right for a Christian man to save money. I say it is well for a man to have the fire of economy, of frugality and of prudence burning in the basement of his life. But fire is only good when kept within bounds. The fire in your home is good so long as you keep it imprisoned behind iron bars. It is bad and destructive when it is allowed to get loose, and to rage among your furniture without control. The fire of frugality, of acquisition, is good when it is hedged in with iron restraints; but if it flame out among your moral furniture, among your moral endowments, and blaze away as avarice, it is fraught with unspeakable destruction.

When does frugality become avarice? When a man comes to love the getting of money more than its beneficent use; when the money-hunger overwhelms every other hunger, and becomes the biggest and all omnivorous appetite of the life. That man is avaricious who has nothing in this life but this fire in the basement, burning fiercely there, growing there unchecked, uncontrolled, reaching up to the higher stories where the treasures are kept—conscientiousness, reverence, benevolence—and overwhelming these in wild destructiveness.

BUT the most characteristic mark of avarice or of covetousness is this: that it is never satisfied. It is hunger which becomes the more fierce the more it is fed. It ever promises to be satisfied with the next feast, but ever after the next feast it renews its appeal for more.

Well, here is Ahab, owner of a palace and all adjoining grounds. Surely his money-hunger, his property-hunger is appeased. No, yonder is a little vineyard. He must have that. It is just needed to complete his belongings by the addition of a garden of herbs. So away he goes to the owner, and informs him that he would like his vineyard for a garden of herbs. The owner meets the request with an immediate refusal. "Nay, nay, this vineyard is sacred ground. It has been hallowed by my father's feet. God forbid that I should give the inheritance of my fathers unto thee!" Now mark the terms of Ahab's offer: "I will give thee the worth of it in money." The worth of it in money! As though everything had a marketable value which can be stated in dollars and cents. That is the first havoc which covetousness creates in human life: it makes men insensible to the delicate sentiments and the spiritual associations which cluster around even common things, and it leads them to estimate all things at the vulgar valuation of the market.

What does that mean? It means that covetousness materializes men, so that they lose the poetry of human life. They look at everything from the standpoint of money, and sum everything up in terms of dollars and cents. They lose touch with those tender spiritualities which clothe ev'en material things with a precious and unspeakable aroma. Covetous men lose their finely-grained sensitiveness; they become coarse and obtuse; they monetize everything, commercialize everything, materialize everything; they drive away all sacred association, and turn the earth into a dismal scrambling-ground for wealth.

WELL, Ahab had come to think that money could buy anything and everything, but in this experience with Naboth he found a quick reproof. He found there was something which money could not buy. There were spheres into which money did not provide the key. Now, that is one of the healthiest things that can happen to a moneyed man: to discover that the power of money is defined, that it has fixed limits, that in many spheres it is a rude offense. I say it is a healthy experience for any man who has nothing but money, and who has come to regard it as the universal key, to find that there are doors which it won't unlock. Repulses of this kind will reveal the stuff and substance out of which the covetous character is made.

Ahab was repulsed; how did the repulse reveal him? "And Ahab came into his house heavy and displeased, . . . and he laid him down upon his bed, and turned away his face, and would eat no bread." Why, the repulse had revealed that he was not a man, but a baby. He stood unveiled as emasculated, all the sturdy fiber of true manliness having been eaten away. Can this be regarded as representative? Is it a fair type of a large class? When they who put their trust in money, who measure everything by money—whose all is their money, and who expect to conquer by their money—when they are repulsed, and their characters are revealed, it is generally found that, like Ahab, they have no moral sturdiness, no firm, quiet principle, but that their inner manhood is destroyed.

How is it in society? How is it in the Church? Is it not almost invariably true that the man who has only one key, and that money, and who has come to think that it ought to open every door, when he is repulsed and finds that there are doors that will not stand ajar to his golden "open sesame"—is it not almost invariably true that, like Ahab, he goes away and sulks? And what does that mean? It means that the fire glowing in the basement of his life has burnt away the fibers of his moral heroism; that some crown jewels of his manhood have been destr that the man has lost his dignity and has bee babe. We cannot have one of the under-pa glowing at white heat without something pr being destroyed. And I say that the under-p of the money-love burns away the masculine subs out of human life. It makes men so that they c stand reproof: they cannot brook repulse. If an confronts them, and refuses to move at the biddi their wealth, their symbol of omnipotence, they tate Ahab in spirit if not in literal truth; "th down upon their beds, and turn away their faces will eat no bread, and are heavy and displea Covetousness unmans men.

LET us follow the narrative a little further. C ousness ignores the rights of others in ord gratify itself. Covetousness is utterly unscrup as to the means by which it gratifies itself. wants Naboth's vineyard. "I must have a g of herbs." "But Naboth has only a small vine It is all he has, while thou hast great wealth, a p with all its surroundings." "No matter, I must my garden of herbs." "But Naboth is in the "Never mind; murder Naboth!"

Is that spirit abroad today in our own m Don't evade the teaching because of that tragic "murder." There are refined methods of mu We can murder men by false witnesses. We can der them by trumped-up stories, by defamatio a suggestive shrug. One business man can m another. That is the spirit of murder which dec to itself, "No matter who goes down, I must be And he who gains his money by the deliberate cru of his brother will stand before his Lord as the b er's murderer. To this disposition does covetou lead a man, to the blind indifference of a cow w will hungrily trample down all the flowers in a cou lane to obtain a single mouthful of grass. To ge garden of herbs, Ahab crushed his brother.

How different is all this from that broad, mag mous principle which Paul lays down to the P pians—a principle which might well form the m of every life: "Look not every man on his own th but every man also on the things of others." trample down another man's garden in order to your own. Don't ignore the rights of othe selfishly claiming your own. That is the Chri disposition, but it is just the opposite to the one avarice creates. Avarice makes men insensibl another's rights. To the covetous man there a rights. He knows no rule but this:

> "The good old rule, the simple plan,
> That they should take who have the power,
> And they should keep who can."

If Naboth stands in Ahab's way—well, down Naboth, despoil his little vineyard, his father' heritance, and turn it into a garden of herbs. " heed of covetousness," for it destroys all a b brotherliness, and shuts his eyes against a neigh right.

BUT even the covetous man must meet with Sooner or later there will ring through his lif indignant voice of the Lord God. Sooner or late come to him the searching question, "Where is brother?" Ahab took possession of the vine which belonged to Naboth, but it was not long b his heart was made to tremble before the voi God, who smote him with this stern inquiry, " thou killed and also taken possession?" Thos terrible words, "killed and taken possession!" whole tragedy is there in a phrase. "We sha have to stand before the judgment-seat of Ch Of Christ! The judgment-seat of Christ! Chr to be the Judge. Turn to his Word and read it, you will know the Judge's heart; his fiery against all injustice, against all extortion, and ag all greed.

How can we avoid all this? How can we avoid bondage of covetousness? Surely only in this w by ever seeking to more and more realize human b erhood in the contemplation of the common fa hood of God; ever striving to attain a character w of the sons of God, by living in the consciousnes "a man's life consisteth not in the abundance of th which he possesseth," not in what he has, but in he is, in breadth and depth of character, in the cious treasure of the heart.

---

*Dr. Jowett's sermons, specially prepared for this journal, appear in the Christian Herald in the first issue of each month.

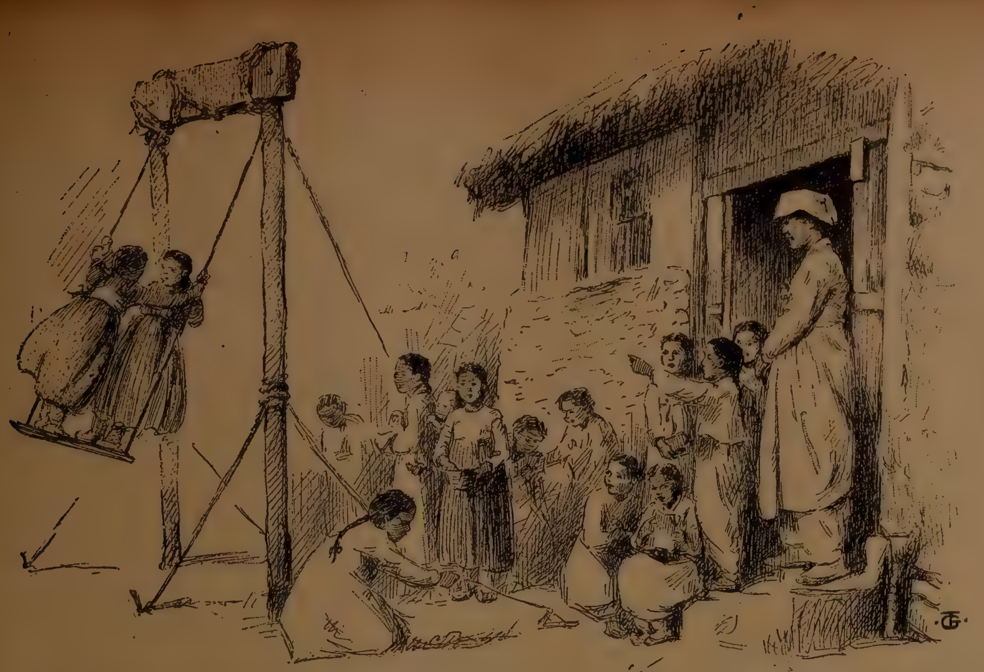
FROM THE DARK

By Arthur Wallace Peach

HOW tender through a quiet room,
When day has passed from sight,
A mother voice that soothes a child
Made fearful by the night.

I have no doubt that we shall hear
In our last lonely night
The music of a friendly voice
That stills our childish fright.

A mother's loving voice can hush
A child's half-dreaming fear;
And we shall know how sweet to wake
And find that He is near.



"What if the rope should break?" said Choonwha to herself; "but they never do. The men who put the swing up know—" She never finished the sentence

CHANSUNG'S CONFESSION

By WILLIAM NEWTON BLAIR, D.D. Illustrations by Thelma Gooch

CHAPTER XII

WITH JESUS

Synopsis of Preceding Chapters

IN THE Korean village of Tai Pyeng Dong (the Village of Great Peace) Han Chansung lived with his young wife Choonwha in the house of his father, Han Chanho, the village elder. During the absence of Chanho, Chansung in a moment of sudden anger strikes his wife, and believing her dead, flees. When Chanho returns he finds his only son gone, and Choonwha takes the place of son and daughter to him and his wife Songsie. Chansung in his wanderings meets an old man named Ne Nyangmok, who takes him to his house and secures for him a place as teacher of the village school in Su Nai. In the meantime Choonwha, under the instruction of Elder Chanho, develops into that rare being, an educated Korean woman. After three years Choonwha goes to Pyeng Yang to visit her cousin Yungpok, who has been a pupil in the Christian Girls' School, and who takes Choonwha with her to visit Lady Sa, or Sa Puin, and Pastor Sa, the foreign missionaries, and to the Christian church, where she soon sees the light.

On her return to Tai Pyeng Dong, Choonwha has to choose between her love for her father-in-law and her new-found love for Christ. She refuses to offer the heathen sacrifice, and the stern Elder drives her from his door. She returns to Pyeng Yang and the missionaries, and becomes a teacher in the Girls' School.

A PRETTIER sight than Choonwha's flock of forty little girls would be hard to find; forty midgets full of life and fun and shy as rabbits; forty little Mongolian faces above a riot of color; forty pairs of dear, brown-black eyes with just a hint of slanting, and behind each little back the same sober-funny braid of heavy coal-black hair ending tly in a ribbon. Such dainty little feet in t, white, starched socks and above the socks a glimpse of padded trousers beneath the ng gowns of white and red and pink! As jackets, every color in the rainbow was rep- nted in this quaint little gathering.

hoonwha loved them all; but little Queenai, pre- s daughter, was a favorite. Of course no teacher ht to have a favorite, and of course every teacher one. In Choonwha's case, her special interest in merry little maid who sat nearest teacher in the t row might easily be pardoned. Queenai's home just across the street from Yungpok's home, re Choonwha had lived since coming to Pyeng g.

ungpok and her husband had often tried to in- e Queenai's parents to become Christians, but had with no success till Choonwha came. Choonwha le friends at once with her little neighbor, and tly won the good will of Queenai's mother.

ueenai was just seven "New Year rice cakes" old. was old enough, however, to understand very what Choonwha taught her of God's love and of . She was eager to accompany her new friend to day school, and after a time Choonwha obtained nission from her parents to take her, partly be- e Queenai begged so hard to go, and partly be- e it was a relief to have some one look after her could be trusted.

y degrees Choonwha succeeded in interesting enai's mother in the "Jesus doctrine," so that she uently went with Choonwha and Queenai to the church on the hill; but not regularly enough to be lled as a catechumen. Queenai's father had no rest in the "doctrine." He was absorbed in busi- and said he had no time to be a Christian. He no objection, however, to Queenai and her mother g Christians.

When Queenai's parents finally consented to their daughter attending the Christian day-school, Choonwha was radiant. This was why Queenai was teacher's favorite, not only because she was a dear, lovable little lady, but because she was Choonwha's "first fruits" which she had won for the Master.

Queenai had been attending the "Jesus Church School" for eight happy months, and spring had come again, and with it the fifth month, fifth day, feast and holiday season.

Korea is often accused of neglecting her women and children. At this season she makes amendment. For four days at least every one tries to give the women, especially the younger women, and children a happy time. Bright smiles and new jackets are in order. Plenty of food and sweetmeats are provided. Under every branching tree a swing is hung and kept going all day long. If a suitable tree is lacking, two tall poles with a top crossbar steadied by huge straw ropes are substituted. A made-to-order tree like this had been erected in the Girl's School yard.

What fun it was! Two at a time, standing upright; first a running start, when "working up" higher and higher with deep breathed "Oo-uh! Oo-uh!" and skilful pulls of arms and legs at just the proper moment, all the time accompanied from below by screamed advice and peals of laughter.

Choonwha stood watching them from the schoolroom door. It was time to begin the afternoon session; but she was reluctant to ring the bell and stop the fun, and Queenai and Pobai had only just begun. She decided to give them a few minutes longer.

How high they went! The swing seemed to stand straight out from the cross-pole. The straw rope stretched and creaked!

"What if the rope should break?" said Choonwha to herself. "But they never do. The men who put the swing up know—"

She never finished the sentence. The swing did not break; but one of the guy-ropes suddenly pulled loose from its moorings just when the two girls were at the highest point, and, left suddenly unsupported, one pole bent far over and snapped at the bottom.

The girls held tight; but the swing, returning, struck the farther pole squarely, and both were hurled violently to the ground.

In a moment Choonwha was in the midst of the frightened group. Pobai got up at once, crying but apparently uninjured. Queenai was unconscious. In great distress, Choonwha carried her into the schoolroom and dispatched several girls in haste to call the church officers and Dr. Yun, the missionary doctor.

Before the men arrived, however, to Choonwha's relief, Queenai revived. Dr. Yun examined her carefully and gave the comforting assurance that no bones were broken. She was kept quiet for a time and then sent home with one of the church officers, and school went on as usual.

Choonwha dismissed school early and hastened to her little friend's home. She was glad to find Queenai sitting up, apparently not much the worse for her accident. She still had a bad headache, and Choonwha prevailed on her to lie down.

The next morning Queenai was worse. A strange numbness filled the lower half of her body and Choonwha was frightened. The girl's parents were greatly alarmed. It looked like paralysis.

"Let me send for the missionary doctor," implored Choonwha. "He is very skilful."

"No," said Queenai's father. "This is serious. I will send for Dr. Sin at once."

And what could Choonwha do? Queenai's father was not a Christian, and her mother's faith was weak. Choonwha had perforce to go to her school and leave the family to care for their child as they would.

Queenai was frightened when she heard that Dr. Sin was coming. She was still more frightened when he looked her over and began his preparations for "healing" her sickness.

"Yes," he said, "it is the beginning of complete paralysis, and we must use the needle and sage fire at once."

Queenai screamed, "Aigo, I shall be killed!" And, half paralyzed though she was, she tried to rise and run from the room; but her parents held her. Dr. Sin worked quickly. Once, twice, fully twelve times, the needle sank in hands and feet and shoulders; not in

Continued on page 743

OUR EDITORIAL PAGE

Prayer the World's Need

DURING these trying weeks, when the world's fate has hung in the balance, the prayers of God's people have been offered in increasing volume that the time of peace might come. Thus they prayed for the triumph of righteousness in the war, and righteousness prevailed. They prayed again that a just and equitable settlement of the issues before the Peace Conference might be reached, and again the answer came. Then, when new difficulties arose, they prayed that the League of Nations might come to pass, and in the face of concerted opposition, it has come to be no longer an idealistic dream but an attainable reality—which, once fairly grasped, may bring great blessing to the world. And they are now pouring out their most earnest supplications that divine wisdom may be given to clear away all obstructions to the last acts of the Conference, and that the sunshine of peace may shine out upon those nations that are still struggling blindly in distress and darkness.

We believe that faith in God and his overruling providence is never without recognition. Prayer is still the mightiest weapon in the Christian armament. "Whatsoever ye shall ask of the Father in My name" is the great promise, and it is abiding and true today. These are the days when strong and rugged faith is needed. Prayer that is not fortified by faith is weak and ineffective. Spurgeon used to say: "Prayer pulls the rope below and the great bell rings above in the ear of God. Some scarcely stir the bell, for they pray so languidly. Others give an occasional pluck at the rope; but he who wins with Heaven is the man who grasps the rope boldly and pulls with all his might." That is the kind of faith that we need today—the faith that will not be denied.

The prayers of the household, of the community, of the churches, of the nations, when offered boldly for a righteous and unselfish purpose, become prevailing prayers. The great heart of Christian America is today praying that peace may descend upon all the nations, reconciling their quarrels, transforming hatred into brotherliness, and bringing them together to the great Source of all blessing, who is ever ready to receive those who come to him in the spirit of contrition and forgiveness.

Above all else, we need to pray for a world revival of Christian faith. All the nations have suffered. The wrongs done to humanity are such as no human power of itself alone can repair. But the same merciful Father who hears and answers every sincere supplication will bind up the world's wounds and change its fears and sorrows into confidence and joy.

The Air Liners of Tomorrow

NOW that the aerial journey across the Atlantic has been twice successfully achieved within a few weeks, and while the plaudits are still sounding, the practical outcome of the feat is already coming under discussion. Many are wondering what is to be the future development of aerial navigation. Many years were required to bring the steam engine, the submarine, the wireless and other scientific triumphs into a form suited to public use; yet almost at a bound the pilots of the sky may take their allotted place in world service. We have already tried experimental mail deliveries by airplane, and now Lord Northcliffe, in congratulating Alcock and Brown, the heroes of the 2,000 mile non-stop flight, has boldly ventured the suggestion that very soon we may see the London morning papers sold in New York in the evening. This is "going some," but these are times in which most unexpected things happen.

What a tremendous advantage it would be to journalism if our air lines of the future, speeding in regular trips daily and nightly, at 150 miles an hour (they have already done 120), could deliver in London or Paris a budget of news and commercial messages within a round of the clock after mailing in New York! It would revolutionize to a very large extent the business ways of the whole world. And yet such a transformation may be nearer than we think. Even as we write news comes of a big financial combination being organized in Europe, with abundant capital and subsidized by several governments, which will be in active operation before the end of the year. It plans to use three types of airships, some of moderate size and high speed to carry express and mails, and a few passengers; others of larger size and high speed, with special passenger accommodations; and a third type with the amplitude of great liners, combining a slower speed with larger carrying capacity. Wealthy travelers who take the Air-Packet Line will be able to cross the ocean over night or travel an equivalent distance over land. Routes and even time tables are already being discussed, including as stopping-points San Francisco, Cairo, Colombia, Australia, Cape Town, Rio Janeiro, and, of course, New York and London. There will be practically as many aerial routes across the ocean as there are now steamship lines. All things point to a surprising aerial development in the near future.

Korea the Martyred Nation

KOREA has proclaimed her independence to the world. Back of her is the history of 5,000 years of freedom. One of the oldest of the nations, with a population of 20,000,000, she clings to liberty and appeals to the free peoples to sustain her in the struggle. We have been accustomed to regard Korea as a heathen nation. Her Declaration of Independence should forever dispel that idea. It is true, she is one of the latest to enter the Christian fold; but her faith and reliance upon God in the crisis she is now facing are such as might put many of our so-called Christian nations to shame.

We quote from her proclamation: "We take this step to insure to our children for all time to come personal liberty, in accord with the awakening consciousness of this new era. . . . This is the clear leading of God, the just claim of the whole human race." This, surely, is not a heathen plea. It is the language of a land that has given hundreds of martyrs for freedom and faith, a land whose Christianity is of the same glorious type as that of the days when brave men went to death with the name of Jesus on their lips, smiling and forgiving, and with the deep conviction that their sacrifice brought victory nearer.

Korea, as her declaration shows, has discovered what many Christians in other lands seem hardly yet to surmise. "A new era," says that document, "wakes before our eyes. The old world of force is gone, and the new world of righteousness and truth is here. . . . It is the day of the restoration of all things, on the full tide of which we set forth, without delay or fear. This work of ours is in behalf of truth, religion and life. Let no violence be done to any one."

Though still but a child in the Gospel, Korea has suddenly become a spiritual example to all the Oriental races, through her splendid fidelity to the faith. Christians everywhere will hope and pray that she may attain full freedom, and that some practical way may open in the near future to that accomplishment.

The Industrial Unrest

"LABOR is conservative," says one. "The working class of the world is infected with Bolshevism," declares another. Reconstruction or revolution—you may believe either, according to the paper you read. The executive committee of the General Labor Federation in France fixed June 14 as the date for a joint strike movement in affiliation with British, Italian and Belgian labor organizations. The plan was for a general strike in all four countries; but it remained only a plan. The strike could not be made general, as the British workers refused to strike; but a great many observers saw in the call the opening wedge of attempted revolution. Also as to France, it was said that the former poilu—who has worked for four years in the trenches at a few pence a day—was not inclined to get excited over a strike called by labor which had drawn 40 francs a day besides being exempt from military duty during the war. The 22,000,000 peasants of France were pictured as immovable from their loyalty by any class appeal, while French labor as a whole, although dissatisfied, would take no action which might nullify the victory so dearly bought. But meantime the Paris tramways, autos, busses and subways were operating indifferently, with society leaders as volunteer strike-breakers, and the federated miners of France were striking for an eight-hour day.

In Italy and Belgium the situation is one of stagnant industry with sporadic strikes. A mob of strikers at Spezia, Italy, on June 12 attacked food shops. England, too, is in ferment; British labor has found itself and British industry is being rebuilt on the foundation of cooperation and mutual control between capital and labor. Still there is a strong dissatisfied element ready for more radical action, and large enough to create uneasiness. In Canada the almost revolutionary strike at Winnipeg flamed up anew and finally resulted on June 17 in the arrest by the police of ten leaders, including four Russian agitators. Montreal on June 17 had 20,000 persons out on strike.

Meanwhile, the United States has had it experiences with the general wave of unres
June 17, fifty I. W. W.'s were under indictm
Kansas City. Over sixty were en route fro Francisco for deportation, and I. W. W. leade being arrested in the Kansas wheat fields whil state was calling for 100,000 more hands. A mittee of the New York legislature investi
Bolshevism had before it on June 13 L. C
Martens, unrecognized ambassador from the R Bolshevist government to the United States.
his associates with their correspondence file printed matter had been gathered in during a state police. It was developed in the eviden Martens was issuing pamphlets, explaining a fending the Russian Bolshevist movement, in was printed a call from Lenine to labor everyw shake off "the shackles of capitalism" and sei power of industry and government and that M was working with Socialists and the I. W. W.
Soviet republic in America.

And then, turning from all this evidence of we see the Reconstruction convention of the Am Federation of Labor at Atlantic City on Ju refusing to dally with Bolshevism and repla resolution recognizing the Soviet government i sia with one favoring recognition only of a gover voicing the popular will, and asking that all Am troops in Russia be brought home. The Fede proved its conservatism, again, on the same da refusing to be stampeded into a vote for a natio strike on July 4 to force a new trial for T.
Mooney. They also voted to hold to our Am Labor Day in September, and not to recognize the hailing day of internationalism and red-anarchy. And, as if to prove its conservatis constructive power, the convention voted to r mend the creation of a Federal Department of E tion, headed by a cabinet officer, to aid in the b ing of illiteracy and the promotion of real Ame ization of aliens into citizens.

American labor is sound. Disdaining anyth the shape of Bolshevism, it leads the way t reconstruction, in which justice and right will antee to every man occupied in industry a full for his toil.

If You Owned a Gold Mine

HOW would you work a gold mine, if you one? Would you listlessly pick at the po dirt of the surface, satisfied to get merely enoug to sustain you?

Would you give to the getting of gold only the hours required by custom, and waste the rest of time?

Would you be a mere surface-scratcher, a time-server, in working your own gold mine?

Or would you eagerly embrace every up-to opportunity and employ every modern means i reach to bore to the heart of your bed of ore and fully work overtime developing your mine and t out gold?

It is no idle question.

You do own a gold mine—yourself—that is less and limitless in possibilities of develop Within yourself you may develop knowledge, abi skill, efficiency, and opportunities that will as pure as gold.

Are you merely picking listlessly at the surfa these possibilities, a few fixed hours a day? Ar digging out of yourself only just enough service t tain you? Are you bringing little to the mint o

There is an up-to-date method, available t to open up the deep, rich vein of your possibilit

Most careers are made or marred in the hours supper.

It may seem that the few hours between suppe bedtime afford small opportunity for education these were sufficient for Franklin, for Lincoln, an countless others who by turning these hours to ad tage through special studies have advanced t selves above their fellows.

These precious hours which so many young thoughtlessly throw away at the end of every will, if used right, give priceless results in incr knowledge, efficiency, higher service and better

Ambition, resolve, effort, purpose, persistency, fidence, courage, skill, vision—the elements of less success—may be manufactured out of this time.

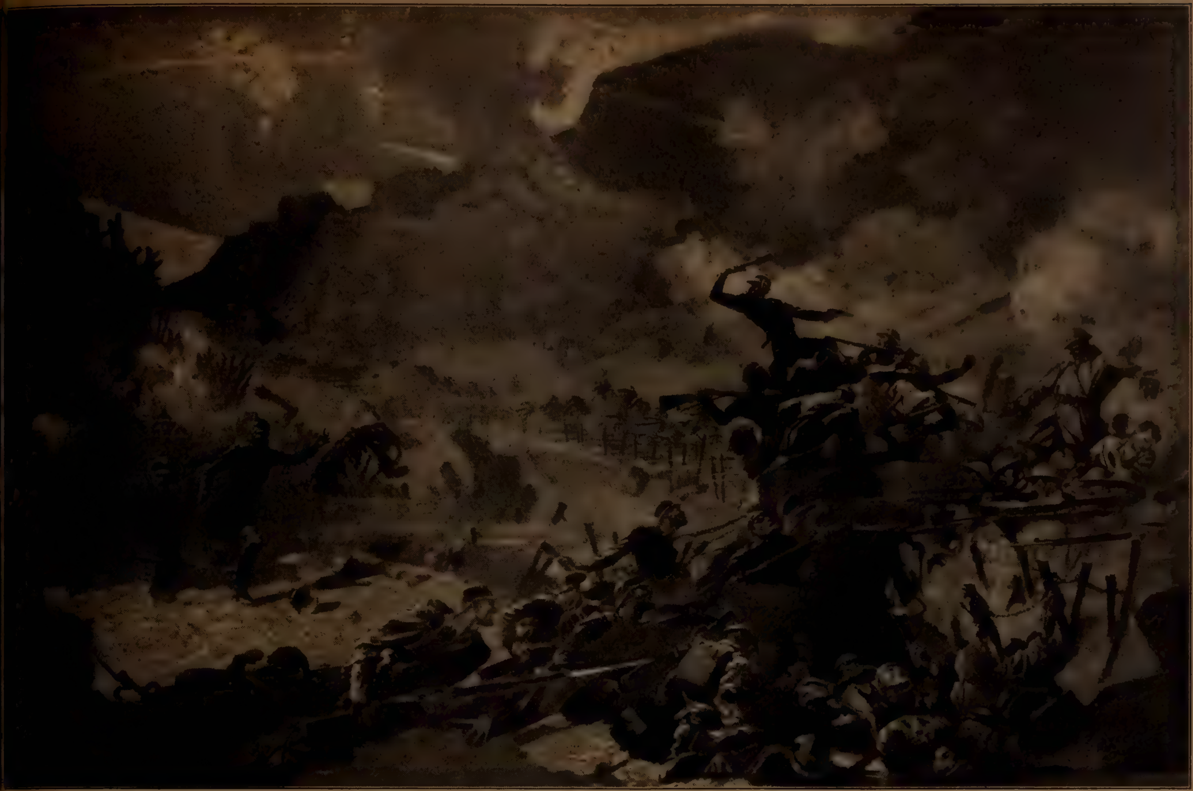
Turn this waste into wealth.

Millions are doing it.

Any one can who will.



The Battle of Verdun—"They shall not pass!"

N THE LATIN QUARTER

By MARGARET E. SANGSTER

THE big army car swung around a crowded corner and stopped at the cross section of a rather commonplace street. The Lieutenant consulted the signboard on the corner, then red to the little red book in his hand.

This," he told me, "is the Latin Quarter—accord- o Baedeker."

Oh," I answered. I was yaguely disappointed. this really—"

ain the Lieutenant consulted the signpost. n he consulted the little red book, and again he e.

This," he said in his most positive tone, "is the Quarter!"

But I thought—" I began.

at once the Lieutenant was laughing.

o did I," he chuckled. "I thought the streets d be full of Apaches—that artists in ks would be standing in every door- I thought that gay little models d be—well, flitting about! I thought there would be a great deal of life and nter."

nd there isn't," I mourned. "It's like any other part of the city—only er."

e Lieutenant shut the red book with ap and slipped into it his pocket. ere's only one thing to do," he told "We'll have to go and hunt for the Quarter. We've heard so much about books and plays and verses that it be somewhere—" With a half sigh he d to the uniformed boy who was driv- he car.

ou can leave us here," he said, a disappointedly. "Unless you know about the Latin Quarter than we do," lded.

uniformed boy broke into a wide heerful smile.

don't," he answered. "I've heard about it, too. And I've never found t yet. I'm beginning to take these with a grain of salt! Paris! You ve me New York any day!"

—" The Lieutenant was militantly the Middle West, and the city he ioned wasn't New York!

William de Leftwich Dodge

AND so we started off to hunt for the Latin Quarter, the Lieutenant and I—the Latin Quarter that every one who reads—every one who has studied French, or is interested in art—has heard so much about. We walked through streets with familiar story-book names, but the atmosphere that we had dreamed of was lacking. The streets were just streets—alive with the fire of Paris, but not more colorful than any of the other streets. We finally sought, in desperation, a restaurant that was mentioned in our guide-book as a particularly chaotic restaurant, a gathering place of the exponents of the four arts, a haunt of the half-world gangsters.

And yet even the restaurant was empty of excitement. It was a picturesque little place, but its picturesque quality was obviously a created one. There were no artists there—there were no poets who scribbled sonnets on dog-eared notebooks. There were no gang leaders—no models. We ate an excellent luncheon served by a waiter who spoke quite perfect English; and then, even more disappointed than we had been, we went out again into the street.

"If we could only see one artist," I told the Lieutenant wistfully, "I'd feel then we hadn't wasted our time. Of course, we've enjoyed this—but it hasn't been a thrilling adventure. And one artist—"

And then suddenly the Lieutenant justified his existence.

"I know an artist," he told me, "who lives somewhere near here. He's an American artist, but—well, he studied in Paris and he's a—a corker. I don't know much about art, but—"

"What's his name?" I questioned.

"His name is William de Leftwich Dodge," answered the Lieutenant. "Do you know anything about his work?"

"Do I?" I answered. I was remembering reproductions of Mr. Dodge's splendid Panama-Pacific Exposition murals—remembering the work that he had done in opera houses and public buildings. "Will he mind if we call on him?" I questioned.

"You bet he won't!" the Lieutenant told me warmly. And so we set off, through the crooked Paris streets, to a certain extra crooked little avenue, in the heart of the Latin Quarter, called the Rue Falguière.

MR. DODGE was busily painting on a huge canvas when we walked unceremoniously into his studio. Even while the Lieutenant was introducing us that canvas fascinated me. It dominated the whole room, made everything else fade into obscurity. The colors of it, which were almost vividly sombre, were startling in their intensity.

"It's—it's wonderful!" I gasped.

The artist, being human, beamed at my quite obvious sincerity. He moved over to his canvas, touched it rapidly with a paint-brush. "I call this picture," he told me, 'On ne passe pas.' It means, in English, 'They shall not pass!' It shows the fighting on June 8, 1916, at Verdun."

Continued on page 750

PLEASANT MEMORIES OF THE BRIGH END OF THE DARK CONTINENT

By DR. FRANCIS E. CLARK, D.D., LL.D.

President of the United Society of Christian Endeavor

AFRICA is very much of an interrogation point in these days. The German colonies—what shall be done with them? The "Cape to Cairo Railway"—when will it be completed? The Mohammedan religion—will it forever oppose Christianity and win half of Africa for itself?

Some prophets declare that Africa is the continent of the future—that as Asia was the center of influence and power for thousands of years, and as Europe has claimed the preeminence for the last two millenniums, a preeminence which she is now sharing with North America, so Africa, with her vast and almost untouched resources, will be the seat of empire when this old planet has rolled its noiseless way around the sun for a few more history-making centuries.

A Christian Endeavor rally in the Arcot Mission of the Dutch Reformed Church. Dr. Clark and three missionaries are in the front row. The one at the left is Dr. W. I. Chamberlain, secretary of the Reformed Church Board of Missions

However that may be, Africa is even today a most interesting continent, with marvels all its own, mighty lakes, tremendous cataracts, magnificent rivers, interminable forests, mines of gold and diamonds that no other continent can rival.

Africa, so far as civilization goes, is a mighty giant, with head and feet of gold and a torso of common clay. For centuries and centuries North Africa was the seat of the highest civilization the world then knew, and the pyramids and obelisks and works of art that remain tell us of the mighty ages when Egypt ruled mankind. Today, under the influence of British rule and American Christianity (for her leading missionaries are American), Egypt is regaining something of her ancient prestige.

But this article has to do with the other end of the continent, settled by the Dutch, conquered by the British, and destined to be the great civilizing, Christianizing end of the mighty peninsula.

My first visit to South Africa was something over a score of years ago. I sailed from Madras, India, for Durban, Natal, in a coolie ship, so-called—a steamer used to transport Indian coolies to the sugar plantations of Natal. It was not a pleasant way to go, but there was no other means of transportation, and "needs must when necessity drives."

Indeed, being the only "European" passenger, I had difficulty in getting a passage on the same ship with my brown-skinned brethren. The agent of the line told me that the quarantine regulations were very strict—that all the passengers he carried must have their clothes burned (their old clothes consisted of a strip of cotton cloth five or six yards long) while a new suit of the same dimensions was given them.

I naturally objected to having my clothes burned, as well as to submitting to examination for unheard-of diseases that afflicted the natives. At last, after unwinding many yards of red tape, the agent gave me a paper which read, "In my opinion Mr. Clark may be permitted to sail without danger to the other passengers," and I was allowed to embark. In my American conceit I had imagined that the danger was all on the other side!

However, the lions vanished as I approached them, and the voyage was by no means as hard as I had anticipated. I was given a cabin, shared only with rats and cockroaches, in the after part of the ship, and messed with the ship's officers, while hundreds of coolies swarmed over the rest of the vessel. The voyage lasted twenty-three days, over unruffled seas for the most part, and I was able to do a good deal of work, writing, among other things, a little book called "The Great Secret," which has had a continuous though not very large sale ever since.

It may be imagined that I was glad enough to hear the watch sing out on the twenty-second night from Madras, "Light on the starboard bow!" and the next day to enter the harbor of the charming city of Durban. A very kindly reception awaited me there, though I could not stay long to enjoy the hospitality of missionaries and other residents, for I had to press on to the Transvaal, where other engagements awaited me.

This was shortly before the Boer War, and feeling ran high between the two races. The Dutch felt that Chamberlain and the British jingoes were pressing them to the wall, and that they must fight to preserve even a semblance of independence. I must say I sympathized with them, as did most Americans and most English liberals.

Endeavor meetings were held not only in Durban but in Pieter Maritsburg, Ladysmith (made famous as a great battlefield in the war that soon followed), Johannesburg, Pretoria and other places. In Pretoria, the capital of the Transvaal, the pastor of the president was interested in my coming and invited me to call on his famous parishioner, "Oom (Uncle) Paul," as he was affectionately called. This I was glad to do, and found the patriarchal old President Kruger sitting on the front porch of his modest cottage, which was guarded by the two famous marble lions which Cecil Rhodes had given him.

He had a week's growth of stubbly beard on his face when I was introduced, while Tante Kruger, a comfortable, elderly Dutch housewife, sat knitting at a window. When the pastor introduced me, President Kruger tapped me familiarly on the shoulder, and shot this rather question at me you one of the that run to th when you get i ble?"

Elka or one-horse conveyance on the Simla route, India

I understood that he referre eminent Americ Hays Hammor was then in p Pretoria, and said to have pu under the prot the British gov when arrested plicity in the raid. Since th Hammond and laughed over th dent's question, has assured me never thought o himself under th flag, but that he the Stars and thinking he w much safer un own banner.

However, by t kle in Oom Pau saw that he was serious. We pleasant conv the good minister interpreting what each of u the other, for Mr. Kruger could not (some sai not though he could) speak or understand Eng

Before I went away he said, "Any one who l Lord Jesus Christ and has come here to tell ab is very welcome to our republic."

The tragic events that soon followed, result bloody and unjust war and the exile of the ol dent, succeeded by a peace which, owing to the ation and justice of the British, transformed time enemies into friends and supporters of the are well known to all.

Shortly after the war closed I was again i Africa, and I am glad to say that the event t brought the Boers and British together on t platform was a Christian Endeavor conve Cape Town. In a Dutch Reformed Churc surprised and rejoiced to see around the w familiar mottoes, "All We Are Brethren," "W to South Africa," "For Christ and the Churc During the meeting the audience united in reci twenty-third Psalm, some in one language a in the other; then we united in the Lord's and, most wonderful of all, we rose and sang old tune of "Dennis" in the two languages harmonized beautifully,

"Blest be the tie that binds
Our hearts in Christian love."

In the audience were Endeavorers who had w British khaki, and many others who had fough the colors of the two republics, some of whom h captured and imprisoned in St. Helena and Ce

In both these prison camps a gracious revi experienced, and many Endeavor Societie formed, until finally some twenty societies, thousand or more members, were found in ea the isle of Napoleon's exile the Endeavor built a little chapel of aloe poles and tin cans being scarce) where an almost continuous meeting was held by the different societies.

Just before they were discharged, two hun the prisoners volunteered for missionary ser Africa, some as evangelistic missionaries, s Christian doctors, farmers and blacksmiths, an received special training for their work un godly Andrew Murray.

One of the young Boers described to me th derful Christian Endeavor meeting of volu "We had all come to love each other in our camp," he said, "so that we were almost sor we were to be set free. One of the fellows sa tears in his eyes (and it means something sturdy young Boer weeps), 'I used to try to ri the young blacks when on the veldt, but now I take the little fellows up on my saddle and tel about Jesus Christ.'"

After leaving the Transvaal I visited the Free State, had an interview with President

Continued on page 749

HAWAIIANS A MINORITY IN THEIR OWN LAND

Chinese, Japanese, Koreans, and Portuguese Outnumber Them. Fertile Missionary Field

THE Hawaiians of romance are today in a decided minority in their home, the group of beautiful and rich mid-Pacific islands.

These fine-looking people are decreasing n numbers. They now make up only one ighth, or 26,041, of the 217,744 people in he land of the ukalele.

About them are growing crowds of Chinese, Japanese, Koreans, Filipinos and Portuguese, who greatly outnumber them.

The Hawaiian of today does not wear a grass skirt, except in musical comedy. He is a quite modern gentleman.

The churches of America believe the Hawaiians should have the virtues of the United States as well as the vices. They are doing an energetic work to make the Hawaiians and the other peoples who have poured into this rich land model Americans.

Koreans are numerous in the American possession of Hawaii. The emigrants of this race are intelligent and prosperous and are increasing rapidly in the beneficent atmosphere of American ideals.

A large proportion of the Hawaiian Koreans are Christians. The Koreans are leaving the Buddhist religion, which still has a strong hold on the Japanese.

In the work among the Koreans there is a comity arrangement among the denominations by which each has a special field in Hawaii. There are twelve Korean local preachers, twenty-nine exhorters and several schools in the Methodist organization alone. The International Sunday School Lessons are printed in Korean.

The Methodists are largely increasing their work in the Hawaiian Islands. New buildings will be erected and numerous American and Korean pastors, women workers, and directors of religious education added.

An attempt will be made to appoint Korean pastors who have been trained in America and speak English.

The Koreans are most grateful for all that is done for them. They say they like the Americans. The little children are attractive and take readily to American day schools and Sunday schools.

Happy groups of Korean children at play in their transplanted home in Hawaii

WEAR-EVER ALUMINUM
TRADE MARK

THE Mount Lawn Home
supported entirely by th
that have recognized the en

The thousands of city children wh health and happiness every sum the Mount Lawn Home drink from sanitary, unbreakable "Wear-Eve minum cups, and the kitchens of the are equipped with silver-like "W Ever" aluminum cooking utensils.

The same reasons that make "W Ever" the logical utensils for use in

The Alum
In Canada "

Home—"The Children's Paradise"

yack on the Hudson, New York is equipped with ear-Ever"

num Cooking Utensils

WEAR-EVER ALUMINUM T.A.C. U.C.O. TRADE MARK

to the generosity of Christian Herald readers because founded and s—is one of the many institutions, including hotels and hospitals, r and real economy of "Wear-Ever" aluminum cooking utensils.

utions make them the most satis- y for use in the home.

Vear-Ever" utensils are the most omical utensils it is possible to buy se they never need tinning, and their ring service saves the expense of antly buying new utensils. Divide cost by the years they last!

"Wear-Ever" utensils are made in one piece from hard, thick, sheet aluminum without joints or seams—cannot crack, chip or rust—are pure and safe.

It now is possible to secure shapes and sizes of "Wear-Ever" utensils unobtainable during the war because of the demands of the National service.

*that wear out with utensils that "Wear-Ever"

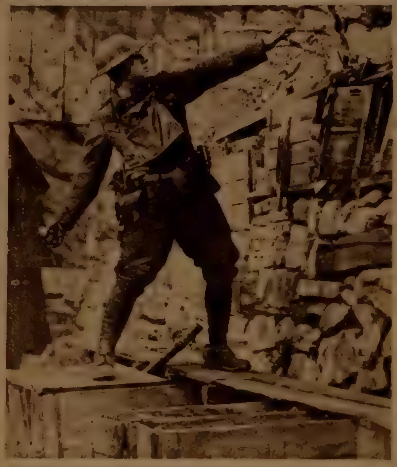
g Utensil Company, Dept. 34, New Kensington, Pa.

s are made by Northern Aluminum Company, Limited, Toronto, Ont.

A FEW OF THE ILLUSTRATIONS FROM "THE GREAT WAR"

THE CHRISTIAN HERALD'S NEW WARBOOK



U. S. Official Photo

How hand grenades are thrown at the enemy in the trenches. American soldiers soon became expert at this superlative kind of baseball

A Belgian scouting party in Flanders making its way over a pontoon bridge, and dressed in the new khaki uniform of the Belgian army, which turned the tables on the Hun

Photo, Underwood & Underwood

EVERY AMERICAN HOME

EVERY American home should have a graphic record of the Great War of 1914–1919. The Christian Herald foresaw this great need months ago, and started the preparation of a History of the Great War. We are glad to announce that Volume 1 is now complete, and is being sent out by the thousands for orders already received. This volume has over six hundred pages, and includes many historical photographs, and is brought down to the date of President Wilson and staff sailing for the Peace Conference.

Volume 2 will follow shortly and will include the terms of the Peace Treaties, numerous important war matters that have come up since the armistice was signed, and a World Atlas in colors, showing the old and new boundary lines, and many additional illustrations. The volumes are sent postpaid on receipt of $2.50 for both. The size of the books is 8 x 5½ inches. These two volumes will be found especially valuable at this time in all American homes. Christian Herald readers are urged to send in their applications for a set without delay.

Address The Christian Herald Book Department, Bible House, New York.

Copyright by C. P. I., from W. N. U.

American observation balloon being brought down to its anchorage

General Pershing decorating Private Nick Connors, Infantry, 42nd Division, with the Distinguished Service Cross, for bravery at Chateau-Thierry

Machine-gun team of an American loon company at work on the Fre front, trying to get an enemy airpl

CHANSUNG'S CONFESSION

Continued from page 739

umb parts only, but all over the ely this would be enough; but no; in mentioned sage fire, and he s kept his word, at least when ing" a patient. Dry, powdered sage as gathered in a little heap on one and set on fire, burning rapidly; on the other hand, and over the as many times as the needle had ome, and Dr. Sin's "healing" was ed. He left to prepare his bill, satisfied that he had done his in a professional manner. And Queenai lay all day so crazed with hat she scarcely recognized Choon- when she came in the evening.

is time Choonwha did not wait for ission. She found Yungpok and her they went for the missionary r.

ars of rage stood in the doctor's as he examined the little sufferer. accident might not have proved he could not be certain; but Dr. "healing" had settled the matter. pleasure it would have been just to administer to Dr. Sin a big dose own medicine! And these stupid ts! He wanted to shake the fa- and shout in his face, "You fool, ave killed her!" Instead, he bent his medicine case a long while, ly producing a box of salve, which ave with directions for its use and the room with as few words as ible.

hoonwha spent all the time she d spare at Queenai's side. The in- d child grew steadily weaker, but the first few days her pain was not . She would lie for hours listening the sweet stories Choonwha read the Bible.

e thing greatly troubled Queenai. mother wept continually, and her er blamed God and the Christians her accident.

Mother, I am not afraid to die," said. "I know I will go right to ven and be with Jesus." But the her refused to answer. "Mother, mother, come here," she said; and n she came, "Now kneel beside me help me pray it. 'Our Father, h art in heaven,'" and clear to end, when she could scarcely speak e a whisper; but the mother's t was full of fear and rebellion and never prayed.

hoonwha was with her little friend n the end came. They were watch- by her side as she breathed heavily, father and mother and several nds and Choonwha.

he breathing changed and Queenai ned her eyes. Her lips moved. oonwha bent over her. "I want ther."

The mother came.

'Mother, promise now before I go; 't you love Jesus?" The mother's t was broken. Sobbing she an- ered, "Yes, yes, I will."

Once more the lips moved with in- asing difficulty. "Father, promise " And the father's answer came in mothered wail: "I promise, I prom- "

Just one more effort. "Teacher, I e you." And she had gone to be with us.

CHAPTER XIII

Heavenly Flower

ANOTHER change in Choonwha's life should be recorded. When the time came for her to be baptized the question of a proper baptismal name was discussed by the session.

"Choonwha, 'Spring Flower;' that is a very pretty name," said Elder Kang, "but there is no Gospel in it. Why not change Choonwha to Chunwha and make her the 'Heavenly Flower'?" to which all agreed. The idea pleased Choonwha herself, and so it came about on the following Sabbath that she was baptized into the church of Jesus as Chunwha, "Heavenly Flower."

"Now kneel beside me and help me pray it."

Absorbed though she was in her new work and life, the thought of the Elder was never long absent from Chunwha's mind. She wrote letter after letter to him; but received no answer, and finally made a trip to Tai Pyeng Dong to plead with him once more.

The Elder looked aged and broken, but his face was still stern and unrelenting. He listened to what Chunwha came to say and answered, "It is as I said before. You can choose between me and the foreigners. So long as you remain a Christian you are no relation of mine."

"But, father, why can not you be a Christian too? God is good."

"Stop!" the Elder interrupted, so fiercely that Chunwha was frightened. "Never say to me that God is good. He has taken away my only son and cursed my dying years with your ingratitude. Let him give me back my children and I will believe that he is good. You have chosen your path. Go your way as you will; but never ask me again to believe in Jesus."

Chunwha was forced to refrain. Sad at heart she returned to Pyeng Yang to give herself more completely than before to her work in the school.

CHAPTER XIV

"The Blind Receive Their Sight."

IN HER position as teacher of the Girls' School, Chunwha met Elder Kang frequently. This remarkable man was not only a gifted preacher but an untiring pastor. So nearly blind that he had to be led from house to house by the hand, he nevertheless kept in closest touch with his great congregation, visiting each home at least once a year and keeping track of the joys and sorrows, the births and deaths and life vicissitudes of more than four hundred Christian families.

The church schools were objects of his especial care. Chunwha continually looked to him for advice, and his help and sympathy did much to lighten the burdens of her new work and the still heavier burdens she was called to hear in the loss of home and friends. She repaid him with sincere and loving gratitude. She was deeply touched by his great affliction, and when, the second year of her coming to Pyeng Yang, Elder Kang's health began to fail and his blindness so increased that he could no longer read even the largest print or recognize his friends' faces, Chunwha and all the Pyeng Yang Christians were deeply distressed.

Dr. Yun, the missionary physician, had a large reputation among the Koreans for his skill in removing cataracts, having operated on as many as thirty-six cases in one year. He had been caring for Elder Kang for some time and had even made a preliminary operation, but Dr. Yun was absent on furlough in America, and Elder Kang's case grew worse daily.

Apparently there was no hope; but these Pyeng Yang Christians had known cases before where human means had failed and God in answer to their prayers had given restoration. So they prayed to God for Elder Kang, and this is how the answer came:

Seven years before, in far off America, a certain doctor, skilled as an eye and ear surgeon, had broken down completely in health.

"You must leave here at once and voyage on the sea," his medical adviser ordered.

He bade good-by to his wife and daughter, not knowing whether or not he would see them again. In the course of his travels he came to the eastern coast of Korea and remained there long enough to become deeply interested in the Korean people.

"If God gives me back my health, I will return to Korea," he said. God gave him back his health, in part at least. When he returned to America, he sent in his application to the Board of Foreign Missions to be sent to Korea as a medical missionary.

"What!" said the Board. "You are nearly forty and hard of hearing, with a wife and daughter. We can never send you."

It hardly seemed reasonable, did it? Yet sometimes the wisdom of men is foolishness to God. Anyway, God put such a desire to go to Korea in this man's heart that he could not be discouraged. He applied again and again, and had his friends in Korea intercede for him. Finally he made the Board a proposition to go to Korea and make the experiment, offering to bear a large part of the expense himself if he failed to succeed as a missionary; and the Board consented.

This man came to Pyeng Yang and began to study the language. He had charge of the hospital in Dr. Yun's absence. From the first he made a practice of never attending to a patient without prayer. The Pyeng Yang Christians watched the doctor's skilful work and marked his dependence on God in prayer, and a new hope rose in their hearts.

"Will you operate on Elder Kang?" they asked. "We have watched your work and know that God helps you."

It was a heavy responsibility, but the new doctor did not hesitate. "Yes, I will," he said, "if you will all pray while I operate."

It was a day long to be remembered in Pyeng Yang. The officers of the church gathered in Pastor Mo's office and prayed while the operation was being performed, and all over the city earnest prayer was made to God for the elder's recovery.

Have you seen it done? So delicate an operation and yet so simple! The keen point of the doctor's lance passes

Continued on page 750

Babies Work An Eighteen Hour Day

Always asleep! That's their work. Sleep stores up health, strength and energy for their whole lives. And, during the first six months at least, that work is all overtime—should be eighteen hours out of the twenty-four.

But a baby's involuntary habits and the extreme sensitiveness of its flower-soft skin cause it to be constantly besieged by endless irritation. Writhing discomfort, all the contortions of distress, destroy that vital sleep.

Kora-Konia quickly cools and heals. Fiery inflammation is soothed away and forgotten. The gently-closing eyelids, the creeping smile, the relaxation of the little limbs into quiet comfort, all tell their own story.

Kora-Konia contains ingredients of recognized medicinal value. It is antiseptic, moisture-resisting, and adhesive for hours, giving lasting relief.

For grown-ups, there is nothing like it to relieve chafing, burns, and skin irritations. Every member of the family will find it a friend.

THE MENNEN COMPANY
NEWARK. N.J. U.S.A.

Laboratories:
Newark, New Jersey Montreal, Quebec
Sales Agent in Canada:
Harold F. Ritchie & Co., Ltd., Toronto, Ont.

MENNEN'S
KORA-KONIA
GERHARD MENNEN CHEMICAL CO
NEWARK, N.J.
U.S.A.

Do You Chafe?

KORA-KONIA will bring you blessed relief.

Send 10c for a Physician's sample. A full size box of Kora-Konia costs 50c.

Two Uses From One Socket

Get two conveniences from single electric light sockets with the

BENJAMIN TWO-WAY PLUG

Makes appliances handier.

At Your Dealer's

3 for $3.50 OR $1.25 EACH

BENJAMIN ELECTRIC MFG. CO.
Chicago
New York
San Francisco

BENJAMIN
NO. 92

THE DAILY MEDITATION

J. H. Jowett, D.D., C. C. Albertson, D.D., Rev. E. W. Caswell, Bishop W. A. Quayle, W. W. Bustard, D.D., Prof. W. H. T. Dau, C. M. Sheldon, D.D.

The Patriotism of the Soul

SUNDAY. Phil. 3 : 20. "Our citizenship is in heaven." And that is our true country. And our relationship to it constitutes our highest patriotism. All other forms of patriotism must bow to this, and from this they must borrow their spirit and their aims. When the earthly citizenship is out of harmony with the heavenly citizenship it becomes a minister of moral discord and disaster. Indeed, patriotism which is harshly divorced from the heavenly citizenship is only a deadly form of selfishness, and it is creative of unlimited bitterness and strife. But the local patriotism which is pervaded by the large inspiration of the heavens is as beautiful as some local rosebush which has breathed in the wider air of the South. In these matters everything depends upon relationship. Our patriotism can be of the earth earthy; or it can be nourished by the atmosphere of heaven.

The patriotism of the soul finds its spirit in heaven. Its temperament and temper are pure and warm and genial. It is like unto "a sea of glass mingled with fire." There is nothing dark about it, nothing harsh and exclusive. Its sense of the individual welfare is governed by the larger interests of the family. Its service of man is done in the spirit of humanity. Its citizenship is of the world, and it seeks the blessedness of the world for which Christ died. "God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son." Our patriotism is a minister of divine health when it is infused with the sacrificial spirit of the Lord.

J. H. J.

The Desire for God

MONDAY. John 14 : 8. "Philip saith unto him, Lord, show us the Father, and it sufficeth us." Among all the needs of humanity, there is none so great as the need of God. John, who wrote the fourth Gospel, knew there were multitudes of thoughtful men in his time who were seeking God, and who, instead of calling him God, were calling him Wisdom, Truth, Light. So John addressed himself to seekers of Wisdom, Truth and Light, and virtually said, "What you seek vaguely, blindly, is here in the form of a Man; open your eyes to behold him. The Word was made flesh." This is exactly what Jesus himself said to Philip in answer to his demand, "Show us the Father." "He that hath seen me hath seen the Father." We sometimes say of a very bad man, a monster of vice, "He is a fiend incarnate." We say of some singer in the hour of her triumph, "She is grace incarnate." Incarnation is a common thing. It is an invisible thing taking the form, and it may be an Infinite Thing accommodating itself to finite proportions.

We all know what a prism of transparent glass will do when a ray of light passes through it. It will divide the light into the colors of the spectrum. Exactly what the prism does for us in the seeing of light in its elements, Jesus does for us in the seeing of God. In a reflecting telescope, the observer does not look at the object at all, but at a mirror upon which the image of the heavenly body falls. Jesus Christ is the personal reflection of the Father, the brightness of God's glory and the express image of his Person, accommodating himself to human vision." C. C. A.

Entire Consecration

TUESDAY. I John 2 : 17. "He that doeth the will of God abideth forever." This text is inscribed upon the tombstone of D. L. Moody. It was the motto of the great evangelist's life. When Mr. Moody visited England, he heard a preacher say, "The world has yet to see what God will do with and through and by the man who is wholly surrendered to him." Mr. Moody exclaimed, "I will try to be that man!" He faithfully kept that resolution, walking in the steps of his Master, obeying his will and becoming the mightiest Gospel minister of his times. The enduement of the power of the Holy Spirit made him a spiritual giant, attracting multitudes into the kingdom of Christ. He preached everywhere about being born of the Spirit and then filled with the Spirit. With him, entire consecration prepared the way for the entire fulness of the Spirit's presence. "Emptied that He might fill me." Other great evangelists have followed in his footsteps: Meyer, Murray, Chapman, Torrey and Billy Sunday.

The Christian world should remember how Christ loved the church and gave himself for it, that he might sanctify and cleanse it and present it to the Father a glorious Church, without spot or wrinkle, before the presence of his glory, with exceeding joy. The only method by which such a victory may be obtained is for each individual member to receive the fulness of the Spirit's power and become a miniature Christ in the world. When this glorious consummation is realized the song universal will be sung, "Unto Him be glory and majesty, dominion and power, now and ever more." E. W. C.

Three Heart Needs

WEDNESDAY. Titus 1 : 4. "Grace, Mercy and Peace." Heart, sit quiet. The hush is on. Thou consultest thy primary needs. Thou requirest not luxuries but necessities. Bed-rock things thou requirest. Heart, in the bush so still that the stars can be heard choiring, what are thy unrevisable requirements? Heart loquitur—"I need grace. I cannot survive by equity. I require pure grace. I must have an attitude of God toward me which will mean kindness, loving kindness, a leaning over me like a mother and a father and a help in me, for me, a might I have not, but must have. I need grace."

The Way to Build

By RAYMOND KIMBRELL

I WATCHED the builder on the wall
Giving the temple form.
To stand in power and baffle all
The wildest might of storm
Each stone he fitted with long care
Before he gave it place,
And then it slowly settled there,
A thing of living grace.

Forth from the temple wall I turned Back to the dusty toil,
Taking the lesson I had learned
Into the hot turmoil:
To do my duties one by one
Just as the Maker willed,
To do the next thing to be done,
This is the way to build.

Heart, is that all? Heart loquitur—"More; I need mercy. I cannot stand on my own behavior. My record is dead against me. I plead not justice, nay, not that. I plead mercy. Mercy, O my God, and lo, mercy is at hand and ready and eager and commensurate. Praise the Lord!"

And is that all, heart? Heart loquitur—"I need peace. I am tattered by the wind: I am raged at by the waves: I am beset like a beleaguered city: I am grievously tossed: I am in the fog and cannot see shore nor sky nor any landing-place: I have no peace: disease smites me: business lashes me: death knifes me: love leaves me. I have no peace. And then— 'My peace I give unto you. It is I, be not afraid. Peace with God through our Lord Jesus Christ.' "

And the happy heart is singing carols like the dawn. "Grace, Mercy, Peace from the Father and Son and Holy Spirit." Praises and Amen. W. A. Q.

The Right Kind of Perfection

THURSDAY. Ps. 138 : 8. "The Lord will perfect that which concerneth me." From this text we can learn:

First. That God will perfect our conception of himself. No two men ever had the same conception of God and no one man ever had a perfect conception of him. The reason for this is that the finite cannot comprehend the infinite nor the human grasp the divine.

Man's conception of God is an ever perfecting one but a never perfect one, but some day God will perfect our conception of himself.

Second. He will perfect our faith in his divine providence. We all suffer from an imperfect Faith. We cannot understand things, so we refuse to believe them.

We now have an imperfect faith in a perf We must have a perfect faith in a perfect G

Third. God will perfect our characters. Th character is its Christlikeness, and in Christ some day perfect our characters and we shall sented faultless before his throne.

Fourth. God will perfect our work. One greatest disappointments, no matter how live, is the realization that we can never fi work we want to do. As the years pass we more and more that the things we once drea doing may never be fully accomplished. We c at the end of a book "finis," but we canno it at the end of a life. We look forward, there that time when God will perfect our work in and when the completeness of all things will b possible because of the Christ in us. W. W

A Living Redeemer

FRIDAY. Rom. 1 : 3,4. "Jesus Christ ou . . . declared to be the Son of God with . . . by the resurrection from the dead." Bef death Jesus had said: "I lay down my life, might take it again. No man taketh it from m I lay it down of myself. I have power to lay it and to take it again." Remembering this stat of Christ, we look to his grave for a conclusive p his deity. If someone were to try to persuade u it was of no consequence whether Jesus rose o we should refuse to listen. Jesus has virtual structed us not to believe him to be the Son of if he did not rise. Our faith cannot rest on a Redeemer; our religion cannot be founded on a less corpse. Without his resurrection the tem our faith must collapse like a building la foundation and cornerstone. His failure to rise have speedily proved the end of the religion whi had preached. In vain would the apostles have out into all the world to preach the Gospel of the cified One, in vain would they have taught and bap the nations, in vain would they have invited m commune at the table of the Lord, if they had not able to point to his resurrection as an indispu fact. If Christ did not rise, the sadness of the w who came to his grave on Easter morning woul the proper mental attitude of every one who rem bers Jesus. He did rise, adding the last and striking pr of to a long line of previous evidence the fact that he is what he claimed to be, the So God and our Lord. W. H. T.

A Human Building

SATURDAY. Eph. 3 : 20. "The power that wo in us." The board of directors of the Young M Christian Association in the town of B. was discus ways and means for continuing its work.

The president of the board was very positive in statement that the situation was hopeless.

"This town is not big enough to support a Y. M A. The building is a dead weight on our hands, costs us nine thousand dollars a year to keep it up addition to the salaries of the secretaries, and we running behind all the time. The business men not support it any longer."

An idea caught the imagination of the board directors and was finally carried out in the town of with these results:

(1) A young man was found who belonged to class of men who regard impossibilities as a challe to do them. (2) The building which had proved su a load to carry was rented out for offices. (3) T new secretary, with one clerk, took an office do town among the other business men. (4) He at o began to move in and out of the multitude and acquainted. (5) He secured a position on the po force as a regular sworn-in officer. (6) He secu play grounds for the children and personally superi tended their games. (7) He got in touch with high school, and organized Bible classes in the sch (8) He reported to the town authorities unsanit and immoral conditions, inspected show and amus ment places, created sentiment for the enforceme of law, and in general acted the part of moral secret for the town. (9) Above all, he organized prayer cles and filled them with the spirit of communion w God.

At the end of a year the directors found these r sults:

"The most successful year we have ever had. Pe haps we have worshiped buildings too much. We ha forgotten that Jesus never had a building to work i

A building is not necessary to redeem the wor A consecrated man is. C. M. S

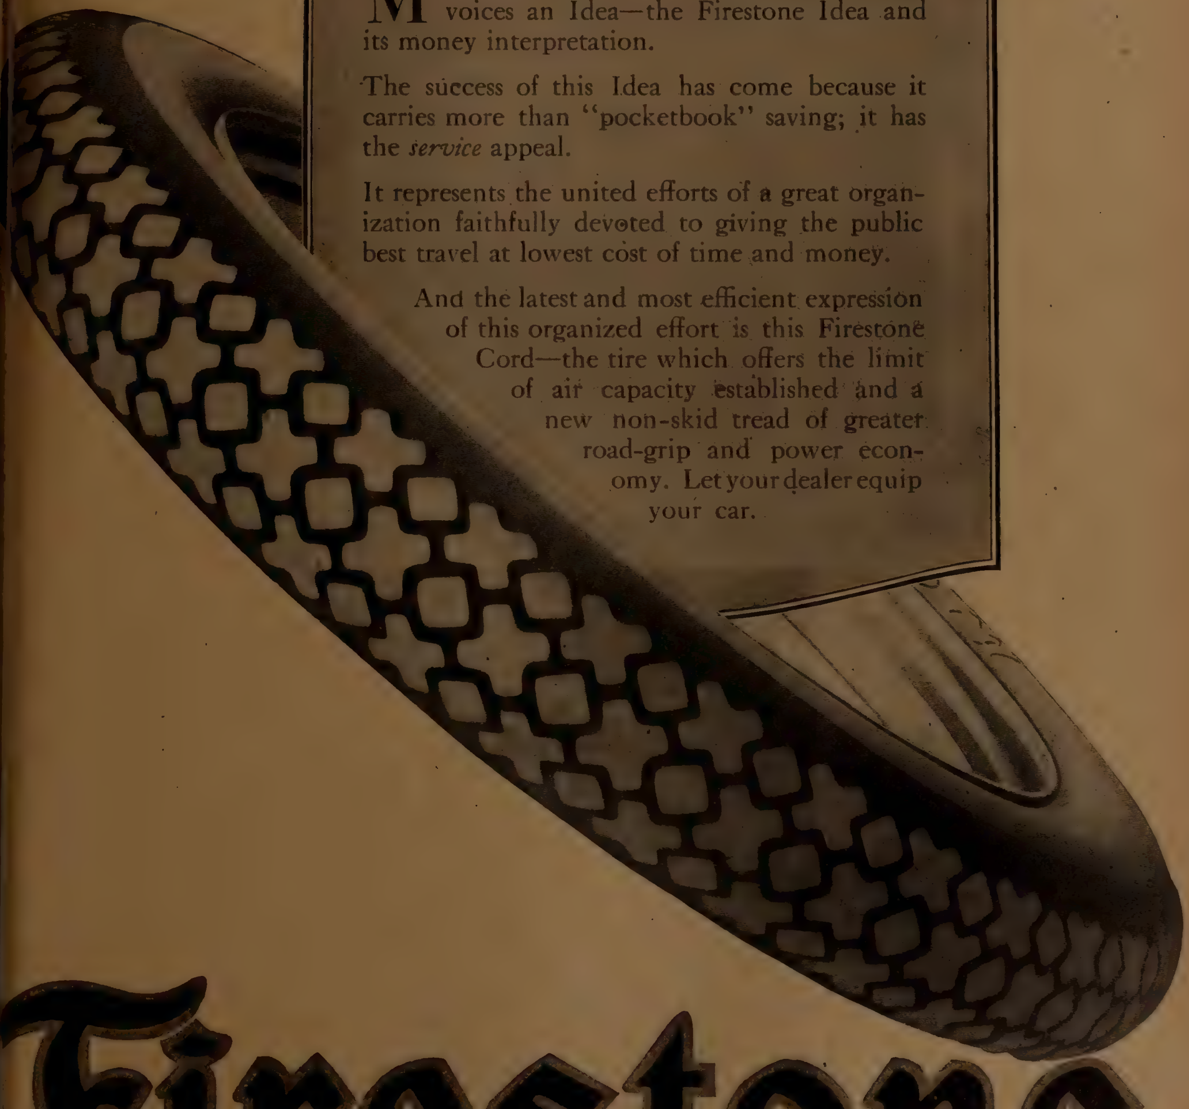
Most Miles per Dollar

"MONEY TALKS" and most miles per dollar voices an Idea—the Firestone Idea and its money interpretation.

The success of this Idea has come because it carries more than "pocketbook" saving; it has the service appeal.

It represents the united efforts of a great organization faithfully devoted to giving the public best travel at lowest cost of time and money.

And the latest and most efficient expression of this organized effort is this Firestone Cord—the tire which offers the limit of air capacity established and a new non-skid tread of greater road-grip and power economy. Let your dealer equip your car.



Firestone

HOW A COMMUNITY FOUND ITSE

The Possibilities of a Federated Church. By REV. W. H. HOPKINS

JUST one block from the public square in Pittsfield, Illinois, are the two church buildings. A year ago each church housed its own little company. On Wednesday nights there was a pitifully small and discouraged prayer meeting in each church. The note of discouragement was strong. On Sunday evenings there were two discouraged pastors and two little and ever waning audiences. The churches were growing smaller and the number of listless, indifferent people in the community was constantly growing larger.

Once a year each church tried to get square with the world. All through the year each pastor faced the discouraging facts and tried to make both ends meet on his pitifully small salary. They were both good men, dearly loved by every one, yet they were powerless in their efforts either to build up their churches or to lead in efforts for community betterment.

Finally both pastors resigned. The war was compelling a new "together spirit" as well as the conservation of coal and effort. It seemed foolish to heat up two buildings for two small companies. Available ministers were hard to find. One or two of the discerning leaders proposed a meeting to discuss the possibilities of federation.

It was a revelation to see how many reasons there were for federation. There was a hearty willingness to make mutual concessions. When they worked out a basis for local church federation every one was surprised to find how few and how small were the necessary concessions. The compact was made July 1, 1918. On September 1 the present pastor came to the field.

He was not drawn to the place. Practically all of his pastoral work had been in the large cities. He had, however, been for years preaching church union. Here was an opportunity to present Jesus in a strong way to a whole community—an opportunity to test out the possibilities of a church federation movement.

In the beginning there were little adjustments to be made. There were no guide posts and no outside inspiration. Then the "flu" epidemic came and closed up everything, before he had learned the names of even the leaders in the work.

Now more than six months have passed. Spiritual results are hard to tabulate. Some things we can see. The way in which these two churches have come together proves that the spirit of God is the real director of the movement.

The audiences have steadily increased. Those who know both churches well say that we are ministering directly to two or three times as many people as attended the two churches previous to the federation. Through the county papers, letters and the printed page we are ministering to a much larger and to an ever increasing number.

In the missionary work of both churches there is going to be a decided increase as well as an ever widening horizon. Both churches will go over the top for the benevolence apportionment. Missionary education in the Sunday school, through a once-a-month presentation, together with an offering for each society, has already gone way beyond our expectations.

Quite naturally the larger gains have been along the lines of community betterment plans. From the first the pastor made good use of the three county papers; aside from the church notes he wrote an article on some phase of community betterment each week. Like most communities of its kind, there were the old jealousies and the old strifes to overcome, but out of united patriotic efforts came the foundation for a new work-together spirit. At Thanksgiving time the church led in a community Thanksgiving, which invited Protestant and Catholic, Jew and infidel. Every organization in the community had a part in the service. It was so good that at once every one said, "We must make it an annual affair." Next there came the uniting of all the community in the noonday prayer for the Allied cause. The church voted it and the mayor called the whole community to prayer. Other campaigns are now on for water works and public improvements in keeping with the times; for wholesome recreation supervised in such a way as to be above criticism; for the extending of the church's influence to the surrounding towns in which there are two or three or more churches where one could do a real work.

The outstanding features of the work are:

A Wednesday evening service in which we have had each week a number of four-minute speakers on different phases of community betterment. These speakers have represented the various phases of community life, both outside and inside the church. For a number of weeks we considered two special topics—"What Pittsfield Has," an inventory of the uplifting forces in the community life, and "What Pittsfield Needs." After a thorough discussion on Wednesday nights these topics were made the basis of a number of addresses by the pastor on Sunday. Later a number of articles appeared in the county papers. As a result we have a Better Pittsfield. In connection with the Wednesday night services we have the once-a-month family church night with the supper, the fellowship and a church business meeting, each committee and each church organiz "What We Have Done the Past Month" a We Expect to Do in the Next Month."

Each supper committee aims to do a work. Each night some mission country is This month we are to have a Japanese tea, Japanese maidens. The whole menu will the missionary eats in Japan. There will be addresses—"What Japan Needs" and " Being Done for Japan in a Christian Way month it will be China or India. These W nights, supplemented by the work on Su giving us a world vision which is helping to community problems. There is less of gossip every one is given something to talk about tomorrow there will be fewer divorces now young people are meeting in a wholesome learning to work together for worth-while

A second outstanding feature of the wo popular Sunday evening service, which is in a touching the whole community life. Every night we have a "Community Sing for ou Every week the program is changed. One had fifty men in the choir, with young ladies a Last Sunday it was a Booker T. Washingto in which we sang the old negro spiritual This week we are to have a "Welcome Ho for our boys who have come home from the w Sunday night brings some new group of peopl week the old Gospel of the risen Christ is to men and women. This is the one great vit around which all else rotates. It is, however Gospel fitted to present-day needs and pre men and women. Since the war it is all thi Our problems are not all solved.

We have gone far enough along the way to the united spirit of a federated church can toward solving community problems. We sured that the federated church has come in to Christ's prayer of the long ago, and that i velous way it helps toward translating into the "I will bless thee, be thou a blessing" o promise made to him who went out as the fi sionary. It takes nothing less than the worl to make a Christian. Our communities ar going to be transformed save as the great visio includes all the world is given to them. Loc lems are met much better when we realize worl The home young people are given larger cons for home tasks as they catch the quickening i of lives dedicated to the great world tasks.

THE WORK-AND-NOT-TALK MAN

THE most unique figure in current world history prefers to be called simply "Mr. House of Texas."

Although the man familiar to the world as Colonel E. M. House has held but one minor political position, the great men of the Entente Allies speak of him as the supreme diplomat and political expert among the statesmen of the world!

Colonel House's rise is generally believed to have begun with his association with President Wilson. The truth is that they did not meet until 1911, after Colonel House was considered a power of the first magnitude in his home state, having elected four governors and one United States senator, besides putting through some important corporation laws which were of immeasurable benefit to Texas.

The only political position ever held by Colonel House was that of chairman of Charles Culberson's campaign when he was elected Governor of Texas. It was Governor Culberson who gave him his much used title, by making him a colonel on his staff.

In his numerous travels abroad Colonel House had met many of the great statesmen of the world. After the turbulent Huerta took his departure so quietly from Mexico on a German cruiser provided by Admiral Von Hintze, President Wilson asked Colonel House to go to Germany, and learn, if possible, what that country proposed to do in Mexico. The United States did not want to interfere in the Mexican muddle, but when Germany showed such an undisguised hand the President was prepared to give warning in a quiet way that there was a power on this side of the water which would say "Hands off!" and suit the action to the implication.

One of Colonel House's most effective means of accomplishing great things is his "work and not talk" practice. He impresses it on every committee, on every secretary—in fact, on every worker who crosses his path. The working of the Peace Conference has been developed through the work-and-not-talk plan devised by this consummate wielder of large bodies of men.

Col. E. M. House, the wizard of the Peace Treaty

He says that many individuals on co create argument and waste precious tim believes that the most capable men sh selected and divided into committees an committees, each concentrating on the best understood by the specialist group nated.

So perfectly did he bring this "wor not talk" gospel of his to Europe dur first American Mission that Lord Nort one of England's delegates, wrote:

"Colonel House has reduced the vast blage of Allied Nations to a series of smal ness committees, and thus 'hot air' was e eliminated at the start. I cannot reve conference secrets, but when I looked gilded chamber where it first met, and r that every man was loaded with speec heart went out in gratitude to the wise C who had dammed the flood. As it was, P Clemenceau in his opening address too than two minutes, and soon our meeting up and everybody settled to work."

There were 150 delegates at that m who arranged a program, appointed comm and were able to adjourn in the space c half-hour!

The United States Treasury, too, will salient evidence of Colonel House's bu ability and care of public funds. In the 1917, on his fourth trip to Europe for ou ernment, at the head of the first America sion which ever sat in European confe Colonel House was accompanied by nine f experts of various fields, and numerous taries. After marvelous achievement th sion returned home, consuming only six time, visiting both Paris and London, a unbelievable small expense to the United of $12,000.

Although Colonel House has been at th of the most important missions sent fro country, he has not received any mo compensation for his services from this or any other government, simply a ing his personal traveling expenses and no more.

ROBY DANENBA

Willard—of Course

Passenger Cars Equipped with Willard Batteries

American Motor Bus
Anderson
Apperson
Auburn

Barbour
Barley
Beggs Six
Biddle

Canadian Briscoe
Case
Chevrolet
Crawford
Cunningham

Daniels
Davis
Dixie-Flyer
Dodge Bros.
Dorris
Dort

Elcar
Elgin

F. I. A. T.
Franklin

Geronimo
Gray-Dort

Harroun
Haynes
Hebb
Hollier-Eight
Hupmobile

Jordan

Kankakee
King
Kissel-Kar

Lancia
Lexington
Liberty
Locomobile
Louisiana

McFarlan
Madison
Maibohm
Mercer
Meteor
Michigan Hearse
Midwest
Mitchell
Moline-Knight
Moore

Nash
Nelson
Noma
Norwalk

Ogren
Owen Magnetic

Packard
Paige
Pan-American
Patterson
Peerless

Piedmont
Pierce-Arrow
Phianna
Premier

Renault
Reo
Revere
Riddle
Rock Falls

Seneca
Singer
Standard
Stanley
Stearns
Studebaker
Stutz

Tulsa

Velie

Westcott
Winton

Commercial Cars Equipped with Willard Batteries

Acason
Acme
American
American-La-France
Armleder
Atterbury

Bartholomew
Belmont
Bethlehem
Brockway
Buckeye

Capitol
Chevrolet
Collier Truck
Commerce
Corliss
Cortland
Cunningham

Dart

Dauch
Day-Elder
Denby
Dodge Bros.
Dorris

Elgin

Federal Fulton
F. W. D.

Grant-Denmo
G. M. C.

Hahn
Higrade

Indiana
International Harvester

Kissel-Kar

Lane
Locomobile

Luverne

Mack
Madison
Menominee
Mercury
Minneapolis
Mitchell
Mutual

Nash
Northway

Old Hickory
Oshkosh

Packard
Panhard
Parker
Pierce-Arrow
Premier

Rainier Truck
Reo
Republic

Robinson
Rock Falls
Rowe

Sandow
Seagrave
Selden
Service Signal
Stewart
Studebaker
S. & S.

Tiffin
Titan

Velie
Vim

Ward-La-France
White
Winther

Willard STORAGE BATTERY

Willard Threaded Rubber Insulation

GIRLS! LOTS OF BEAUTIFUL HAIR

35 cent bottle of "Danderine" makes hair thick, glossy and wavy.

Removes all dandruff, stops itching scalp and falling hair.

To be possessed of a head of heavy, beautiful hair; soft, lustrous, fluffy, wavy and free from dandruff is merely a matter of using a little Danderine.

It is easy and inexpensive to have nice soft hair and lots of it. Just get a 35 cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine now—all drug stores recommend it—apply a little as directed and within ten minutes there will be an appearance of abundance, freshness, fluffiness, and an incomparable gloss and luster, and try as you will you cannot find a trace of dandruff or falling hair.

If you want to prove how pretty and soft your hair really is, moisten a cloth with a little Danderine and carefully draw it through your hair—taking one small strand at a time. Your hair will be soft, glossy and beautiful in just a few moments—a delightful surprise awaits every one who tries this.

Try a 35 cent bottle at drug stores or toilet counters.

Free Book
Containing complete story of the origin and history of that wonderful instrument—the SAXOPHONE

Easy to Play
Easy to Pay

[4]

This book tells you when to use Saxophone—singly, in quartettes, in sextettes, or in regular band; how to transpose from orchestral parts and many other things you would like to know.

You can learn to play the scale in one hour's practice, and soon be playing popular airs. You can double your income, your pleasure, and your popularity. Easy to pay by our easy payment plan.

MAKES AN IDEAL PRESENT

Send for free Saxophone book and catalog of True-Tone Band Instruments.

BUESCHER BAND INSTRUMENT CO.
259 Jackson Street, Elkhart, Ind.

New Wives for Old

A Mohammedan mother and child

In Morocco and other lands where Islam is dominant, feminine attractiveness is measured in direct proportion to weight. The young woman who weighs only a matter of 200 pounds is a poor, scrawny thing who must attain the desirable width and breadth by prayers to Allah and a course of intensive fattening. It is claimed that the women of Meknez, who are proverbially the most beautiful in Morocco, weigh collectively as much as the buildings of the town.

Life is simple for the veiled women of North Africa. Next to growing fat, her chief duties are to wait upon her husband and to bear male children. Rights she has none. The Mohammedan code gives her the position of a plaything if she belongs to the upper classes, and of a slave if she is a peasant. In both cases she is a piece of property to be sold or cast off as pleases her lord and master. The woman of the harem has no amusements save playing with her babies and gossiping with her fellow prisoners. The woman of the laboring class is far more attractive according to Western standards. An outdoor life gives her a magnificent physique, but her beauty fades while she is still in the early twenties.

New wives for old sums up the moral system of the Moslem. He has no scruples about casting off a faithful wife for a younger or more beautiful one. There is no limit to the number of women a man may marry and divorce. In some places a new wife may be purchased for $5 and a divorce secured for the sum of $3. Divorced women, if they are still young, usually remarry, and if children are an obstacle to remarriage they are parceled out among friends or relatives. Since woman has no soul or hope of heaven, education—and education in Mohammedan lands is synonymous with committing the Koran to memory—is wasted upon her. She is ignorant even of the simplest knowledge concerning the care of children. In North Africa three out of four babies die, and contagious diseases are prevalent among eighty-five per cent. of the people.

Back of the romance of walled gardens, the muezzin call, and veiled women lies the terrible realism of poverty, disease, ignorance, and fatalism. At Fort National, where thousands of French colonials were trained for participation in the great war, the Methodist Episcopal Church has been doing mission work to combat the forces of Islam. It has recently purchased new property in Constantine for developing its Boys' Home, and in Kabylis three new plots of ground for children's homes will be secured. Six dispensaries are to be established, and sixty-four native preachers trained for Christian service. Work among women will include training classes in nursing and the care of children. Since Christianity places high value upon womanhood, its penetration into North Africa will lessen the evils of polygamy and divorce—and perhaps open the doors of harems and let the women of Islam look upon the world unveiled.

Young People's Topics for July 13

Denominational History and Principles

Christian Endeavor and B. Y. P. U. Topic. Ps. 44:1-8

In these days, with the spirit of Unity in the air, it behooves us to be certain that our denomination has a sufficient message for the world to warrant its separate existence. Each grand division of the Church of Christ had a valid reason for its primary existence; each has done a creditable share of the work of revealing Christ to men. Each has been led by men whose love for Christ and his cause was sincere and mastering. And for this reason the churches have been drawn together, have made common cause for righteousness in the past, and are today craving a closer unity and the elimination of all possible divisions. In studying this topic let us consider our denominational history, our denominational principles, and the natural direction of our future denominational effort in the light of history and of the present-day conception of Christianity. Let us be sure that we do not mistake prejudice for principle, mere division for devotion or interpretation for valid Scripture.

The Christian and His Recreation

Epworth League Topic. Matt. 9:9, 10, John 2:1-11, 21:1-14

Fun is as essential to a well-balanced life as piety. But fools have ridiculed saints and stern piety has impugned fun. The church of a few generations ago banned all "worldly pleasure," failing to see the good in proper recreation and seeing only the evil resulting from excess or sinful intent. The church of today is reversing the former attitude. It is taking the diversions through which young people normally seek recreation and is guiding and supervising them so that the youth who formerly had his fling before treading the purifying path of piety is finding the church first humanly helpful and then spiritually convincing. The seven-days-a-week church house, ministering to every healthy craving of the growing life of youth and the developing life of maturity, is building up a new spiritual force of praying, serving, sacrificing Christians. Recreation, as far as it is a matter of individual action, must be left to the individual conscience. Those who are consciously seeking to live near to Christ will not go far wrong in their play.

Lift Corns C
With Fing

A few drops of Freezone corns or calluses
they lift off

Apply a few Freezone upon corn or a callus
soreness stops anc
the entire corn o
loosens and can off without a tw
pain.

Freezone removes hard corns corns, also corns between the toe hardened calluses. Freezone doe irritate the surrounding skin. Yo no pain when applying it or after Women! Keep a tiny bott Freezone on your dresser and let a corn ache twice.

Tiny bottle costs few cents
at drug stores—anywhere

Earn Extra Money

THE CHRISTIAN HERALD needs additional representatives to procure renewal subscriptions. Experience not necessary.

A special proposition is ready for those who wish to build up a business of their own.

You can put your whole time on our work —or you can work during spare hours.

Send a postal today for complete information of our special offer to agents.

AGENCY DEPARTMENT
Christian Herald, Bible House, New York, N.Y.

The Pittsburgh Bible Institute Prepares for Gospel ministry a for all forms of Christian work. Tuition is free. T student of little means and even of no means is given opportunity for training. The Institute stands for full inspiration of Scripture; the full Godhead; the Deity our Lord; the blood Atonement; the necessity of rege eration, and the work of the Holy Spirit. It differs fro most Bible Institutes in its teaching on the age
For further information, address
Rev. C. H. Pridgeo
12 Congress Street, Pittsburgh, Pa.

CHURCH BELLS SCHOOL
Ask for Catalogue and Special Donation Plan No. 85
THE C. S. BELL CO., Est. 1858, Hillsboro, Ohio

PATENTS Send sketch or model for pre liminary examination. Bookle free. Highest references. Be results. Promptness assured. Watson E. Coleman, Paten
Lawyer, 624 F St., Washington, D. C.

MENDETS — WONDER MONEY MAKER mend leaks instantly in all utensils, hot wa bags, etc. Insert and tighten. 10c and 25c package postpaid. AGENTS WANTE Collette Mfg. Co. Box 444-A, Amsterdam, N.

asant Memories of the Bright End of the Dark Continent

Continued from page 742

w the members of the legislative ly, some twenty of the most rt men I ever saw. They aver- ver six feet in height and every one bearded like the pard." Presi- tein was a very different man from ent Kruger. He had been edu- in European schools and was ur- nd dignified, while Kruger was in appearance, and narrow and igoted in his views; but he knew ved his people, the Boers, and they him, and trusted him even more hey did his more refined fellow ent.

ger's deep religious devotion and owledge of the Bible, for he could whole books from memory, it was reatly endeared him to his Bible- people. He had been converted y youth by an American mission- o the Zulus temporarily living the Boers, Lindley by name, he always greatly revered, and om a Transvaal town is named. I spoke of him the president said nuch emotion, "Oh, he was a good he was a good man."

as greatly impressed by a visit to ld mines of the Rand near Johan- rg, some of the richest mines ever ered, and to the wonderful dia- mines of Kimberley, the like of the world has never known. must hasten on to Cape Colony, for myself I found the richest of ual treasures in meeting with that me saint of the nineteenth century, ew Murray.

w many have been quickened by ritings! His "With Christ in the l of Prayer," his book on "Humil- and many others I might mention blessed tens of thousands. It was a journey to South Africa to meet a man, and I shall always thank hat I have known him. Who and was he? A humble Dutch min- who preached all his life to a con- tion of Dutch farmers, merchants tudents in the schools of the small of Wellington. His sermons were utch, and his books were for the part translated from the Dutch.

t he was a man of such transcend- piritual power and purity of life, in body, at least when I knew him, mighty in soul, that his winged s from that remote pulpit were l around the world.

e story of the Murray family is h telling. More than a hundred ago the Dutch farmers of South a began to feel that their churches declining because of the ration- and irreligion of the pastors who come from Holland. So, hoping to the tide, they sent to Scotland for eacher who would proclaim the as it is in Jesus.

young minister named Andrew ray was sent out to them. He to Cape Town and there fell in with a young Dutch girl, whom he ied when she was only sixteen, g her to his parsonage in the oasis of Graaf Reinet, in the Karo, or t district of Cape Colony. Twelve ren were born to them, and these ren, I am told, averaged twelve ren each, some of them having e than twelve. Almost all of them me ministers or ministers' wives and hers, and it is scarcely an exaggera- to say that South Africa was gelized by the Murray family.

ndrew Murray the first was a stal- preacher of righteousness and a of great influence, but it was from wife, "Grandma Murray" as she is affectionately remembered, that the dren inherited their marvelous spir- power, for she lived and walked God even while she cared for her t household.

I felt honored to spend a night or two under the roof of that old parsonage in Graaf Reinet, where all those children were born. Many of them became eminent in the religious history of South Africa, but the most noted was the author, Andrew Murray the second. Though deeply spiritual, he was by no means an ascetic, and he was very far from suggesting anything sanctimonious. No man ever gave me a more cordial welcome or spoke in a more hearty strain of cheerful humor. He believed in the Christian Endeavor cause, and for years until his death was president of the South African Christian Endeavor Union.

He was a great educator as well as a preacher and author, and established several schools for girls on the model of Mount Holyoke Seminary, for he had read the life of Mary Lyon, whom he greatly admired. The most important of these schools is at Wellington, where he lived, though others scarcely less useful were established at Worcester, Stellenbosch and the Paarl.

The pioneer teachers in these schools were the Misses Ferguson and Bliss, Mount Holyoke graduates, while several others from the same college have followed them. Financial aid from America has also helped establish these splendid schools. None are more deservedly honored in South Africa than these teachers I have mentioned, and I thank God that America has had so eminent a share in educating and evangelizing the women of South Africa.

My last visit to South Africa, whither I sailed from Australia, was a very brief one and unfortunate in that, the steamer being delayed for a day, I reached Durban too late for the welcome meeting which had been kindly planned while the steamer was in port. In Cape Town I enjoyed the after-the-Boer-War meeting already described, and soon afterward sailed for Southampton on the Armadale Castle, commanded by the most remarkable captain I ever met in all my voyaging. He was the commodore of the Union Castle fleet, one of the greatest British steamship companies, and was always given their latest and largest ship. For forty years he had been a commander, and he never had an accident that so much as scraped the paint from his bowsprit.

But it was as a Christian that he was preeminent. Every morning he conducted prayers on the after deck, and in his cheery voice summoned all the passengers, "Come to prayers, come to prayers." Two or three hundred passengers, a motley array, among them diamond magnates, barmaids from Johannesburg, missionaries and merchants, always obeyed the call. On Sundays he conducted a Sunday school in his spacious cabin for some forty children, and also three other services in the first and second cabins and in the steerage.

I was often by his invitation in his stateroom, and as the watch in the crow's nest called out the hours, "Four bells and all's well," "Eight bells and all's well," he would often raise his hand to heaven and say reverently, "All's well, thank God."

Many times on life's fair days and stormy days I have thought of that scene in the captain's cabin, and have comforted myself with the thought, "All's well, thank God."

◆

What is Man?

BREAK the shells of 1,000 eggs into a huge pan or basin, and you have the contents to make a man from his toe-nails to the most delicate tissues of his brain. And this is the scientific answer to the question, "What is Man?"

To Those Who Want Cleaner Teeth

All Statements Approved by High Dental Authorities

You Must Remove the Film

Your teeth are not rightly cleaned if they discolor or decay, if tartar forms or pyorrhea starts.

You may brush them twice daily, but the great tooth wrecker—a slimy film—is not being ended by it.

The cause of most tooth troubles is an ever-present film. You feel it with your tongue. That is what discolors—not your teeth. It is the basis of tartar. It holds food substance which ferments and forms acid. It holds the acid in contact with the teeth to cause decay.

Millions of germs breed in it. They, with tartar, are the chief cause of pyorrhea. So it is that film, not merely food debris, which the tooth brush must combat.

The tooth brush alone is inadequate. The film is clinging. It gets into crevices, hardens and stays. The old methods of teeth cleaning fail to dissolve it.

Dental science, after many years of searching, has found a way to combat it. Able authorities have proved this fact by convincing clinical tests. Leading dentists everywhere accept it.

This way is now embodied in a dentifrice called Pepsodent. And we gladly supply a 10-Day Tube for anyone to test.

A Ten-Day Revelation

We ask you to try it, to watch its effects, then look at your teeth in ten days. It will change all your ideas on teeth cleaning.

Pepsodent is based on pepsin, the digestant of albumin. The film is albuminous matter. The object of Pepsodent is to dissolve it, then to constantly combat it.

This way is made possible by a new discovery. A harmless method has been found to activate the pepsin. Five governments have already granted patents. The old activating agent was an acid, harmful to the teeth. And pepsin must be activated.

We urge you to prove Pepsodent as dentists prove it—by actual application. See the results, read the reason for them, and decide for yourself about it.

Send the coupon for a 10-Day Tube. Use like any tooth paste. Note how clean the teeth feel after using. Mark the absence of the slimy film. See how teeth whiten as the fixed film disappears.

Do this for your sake and your children's sake. Learn the better way to clean teeth. The results will show you very quickly that this way is right. Cut out the coupon now.

Pepsodent PAT. OFF. REG. U.S.

The New-Day Dentifrice

A scientific tooth paste based on activated pepsin. An efficient film combatant, now endorsed by dentists everywhere and sold by druggists in large tubes.

(185)

Ten-Day Tube Free

THE PEPSODENT CO.,
Dept. 631, 1104 S. Wabash Ave., Chicago, Ill.

Mail Ten-Day Tube of Pepsodent to

Name..

Address..

Primer of Christian Unity

Answers to Vital Questions That Are Stirring the Church of Christ

By H. K. CARROLL, LL.D.

A Small Pocket Volume, 64 Pages, Large, Clear Type. ONLY 10c A COPY POST-PAID

CENTRAL CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH
Topeka, Kansas

I have read Dr. Carroll's Primer on Christian Unity with the greatest interest and profit. I do not see how it could be improved. I went over it again and again, with the purpose of finding something to suggest, and it seemed to me the ground was completely covered. The only thing I could think of was the one thing that will always be necessary before Christ's disciples really come together, which is the supreme love He requires of them for Himself and one another. And that is something that no Council or Conference or Mass Meeting can formulate in a Constitution or By Laws. It must therefore be the aim and prayer of the Christian ministry to create that love in all the different sects. Community prayer circles, Community Service Clubs, Community Bible Classes, and Common united daily service for humanity will help create and sustain the love that alone will make plans and organizations workable. All the Leagues of Nations on paper will never unite the Nations in mutual protection unless there is a real inward and hearty desire to obey the articles on the paper. And the same thing is true of all plans for the Unity of Christian forces.

Please give my hearty thanks to Dr. Carroll for the privilege. I am very sure the Primer will be welcomed with great interest and be specially valuable at the present time. It comes most opportunely.

Charles M. Sheldon

The Primer of Christian Unity should be in the hands of every one who is interested in this greatest of church reconstruction movements. We would suggest that congregations desiring to have their members fully informed, so that they may be able to discuss intelligently the whole question at issue, should take advantage of the opportunity to send in their orders early.

The Price of the Primer Has Been Fixed at 10 Cents per Copy Post-paid

10 COPIES Post-paid, .75 — 50 COPIES Post-paid, $3.00
25 COPIES Post-paid, $1.75 — 100 COPIES Post-paid, $5.00

Book Department, Christian Herald, Bible House, New York

SAVE YOUR BODY

Conserve Your Health and Efficiency First

"I Would Not Part With It For $10,000"

So writes an enthusiastic, grateful customer. "Worth more than a farm" says another. In like manner testify over 100,000 people who have worn it.

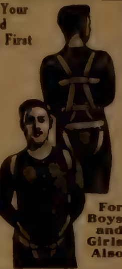
The Natural Body Brace

Overcomes WEAKNESS and ORGANIC AILMENTS of WOMEN and MEN. Develops erect, graceful figure. Brings restful relief, comfort, ability to do things, health and strength.

Wear It 30 Days Free at Our Expense Does away with the strain and pain of standing and walking, replaces and supports misplaced internal organs, reduces enlarged abdomen; straightens and strengthens the back; corrects stooping shoulders; develops lungs, chest and bust; relieves backache, curvatures, nervousness, ruptures, constipation. Comfortable and easy to wear. KEEP YOURSELF FIT. Write today for illustrated booklet, measurement blank, etc., and read our very liberal proposition.

HOWARD C. RASH, Pres. Natural Body Brace Co., 171 Rash Bldg., Salina Kansas

For Boys and Girls Also



MR. C. E. BROOKS

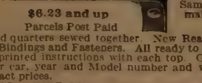
Don't Wear a Truss

Brooks' Appliance, the modern scientific invention, the wonderful new discovery that relieves rupture, will be sent on trial. No obnoxious springs or pads.

Brooks' Rupture Appliance

Has automatic Air Cushions. Binds and draws the broken parts together as you would a broken limb. No salves. No lies. Durable, cheap. Sent on trial to prove it. Protected by U. S. patents. Catalog and measure blanks mailed free. Send name and address today.

C. E. BROOKS, 498 State St., Marshall, Mich.



YOU CAN RECOVER IT YOURSELF
AND SAVE TWO-THIRDS PRICE OF A NEW TOP

Ask for Catalogue No. 59

$6.23 and up
Parcels Post Paid

Ask for Samples of material

New roof, and quarters sewed together. New Rear Curtain, Tacks, Bindings and Fasteners. All ready to apply. We furnish printed instructions with each top. Give us name of your car, year and Model number and we will quote you exact prices.

LIBERTY TOP & TIRE CO., Dept. K, Cincinnati, O.

WE PAY CASH FOR OLD FALSE TEETH

Don't matter if broken. Also cash for old gold, silver, platinum, dental gold and old gold jewelry. Will send cash by return mail and will hold goods 10 days for sender's approval of our price. Mail to

MAZER BROS.
Dept. 241---2007 So. 5th St., Philadelphia, Pa.

Keeps Skin Smooth, Firm, Fresh Youthful Looking

To dispel the tell-tale lines of age, illness or worry — to overcome flabbiness and improve facial contour — there is nothing quite so good as plain

Powdered SAXOLITE

Effective for wrinkles, crowsfeet, enlarged pores, etc., because it "tightens" and tones the skin and underlying tissue. No harm to tenderest skin. Get an ounce package, follow the simple directions—see what just one application will do. Sold at all drug stores.

KIDDER'S PASTILLES Standard relief for ASTHMA (Inhalation.) All Druggists, 50 cts., or trial size for 2c. stamp STOWELL & CO., 50 D Main St., Charlestown, Mass.

Cuticura Soap
IS IDEAL
For the Hands

Soap 25c., Ointment 25 & 50c., Talcum 25c. Sample each mailed free by "Cuticura, Dept. M, Boston."

For the Highest Prices send us false teeth; discarded jewelry, gold, silver, diamonds, watches, gold or silver ores, War bonds and stamps. Cash sent by return mail. Goods returned if price not O. K. Ohio Smelting & Refining Company, 202 Lennox Bldg. Cleveland, Ohio across the eyeball through the cornea and out on the other side, deftly lifting the cornea as it emerges, making a flap with the end turned up. Through this opening a small sharp hook is inserted into the capsule of the lens. Now the speculum is removed and the eyeball pressed gently near the center, and lo, the diseased lens of the eye itself slips gently from its bed and is removed, leaving nature to provide a new and better one.

Chansung's Confession

Continued from page 743

Swiftly but carefully the eye is dressed, the eyelid itself making a perfect covering under the skilfully laid bandage. In less time almost than it takes to tell it, the operation is finished, first the right eye and then the left, and the patient is removed to one of the wards, to be cared for a few days at the hospital before returning to his home.

It was the Sabbath day, one month after the operation. The Central Church was crowded. Elder Kang sat on the platform, his bandage gone. The glasses he wore were huge rimmed ones borrowed from the doctor till his new ones came from America, b was a small matter.

When it came time to read th
ture Elder Kang stood up, and the Bible in his hands found hi

"See, I can read!" he cried.
read from the one hundred an Psalm.

"Bless the Lord, oh my soul, that is within me, bless his holy Bless the Lord, oh my soul, and not all his benefits. Who forgiv thine iniquities, who healeth diseases, who redeemth thy li destruction, who crowneth the lovingkindness and tender merc

As Elder Kang ceased reading Mo arose and said, "Let us si Doxology." And the great b rang with the song that has voic joy and praise of the church thro the ages.

"Praise God, from whom all bl
flow,
Praise him, all creatures here bel
Praise him above, ye heavenly h
Praise Father, Son and Holy Gho

To be continued

In the Latin Quarter

Continued from page 741

The picture represented a battle scene. It was night, and a sharp rain was falling in great sleety drops. Bombs lit up the sky; exploding hand-grenades did strange things to the dark foreground. All in ghastly greens and blues it was painted, greens and blues that were reflected in the hate-distorted faces of the struggling Germans and on the set features of the French soldiers who were holding their trench against attack.

Perhaps the most remarkable thing about the picture was that thing which is technically called composition, and which we who are of the uninitiated speak of as grouping. The interest of the spectator was at once focused on the impressive formation of Germans who were advancing, with strange climbing implements, in a great pyramid-like mass.

"It's—it's wonderful!" I said again.

The Lieutenant was quite full of information. He spoke.

"Mr. Dodge has spent so much time on the battle-fronts," he told me, "that he is well acquainted with every inch of the ground. How do I know? Why, I went with him. This picture is a part of the battle of Verdun. It was made at the point in the line which was called Fort de Vaux. Fort de Vaux was the last point that the Germans captured. Mr. Dodge spent nights there, in the rain, to get the proper lighting effects, and I'll say he got them. He did the same thing all through the Argonne, too; and around Belleau Wood and Château-Thierry. Mr. Dodge could take an examination on that country. He's going to do pictures of all the great battle-grounds. Some day they'll be history."

"So that's why," I turned to Mr. Dodge, "that's why your work is so convincing. And that's why the faces of the men—"

The Lieutenant interrupted. "French officers and soldiers posed for him," he told me. "Men who were there. German prisoners posed for him, too. That's why!"

"I hear," I said, "that they are sending over a group of artists, now, from America to paint battle-fronts. But it seems a little—" I hesitated for lack of a discriptive word.

"You bet it does," said the Lieutenant, "the battle-fields are pretty well cleaned up, now. When Mr. Dodge was out there—well, nobody would have mistaken them for Central Park!"

AND so it was in our search of the Latin Quarter that I made the acquaintance of one of our greatest painters and saw the preliminary sketches of pictures that will one day be, as the Lieutenant said, history. And the picture that I saw in process of construction is the same picture that is photographed on page 741—show the first time to an American aud

It was late in the afternoon th
Lieutenant and I left the studio
we walked back through the Qu
we seemed to catch a gleam th had missed on our way in. We s velvet-jacketed student bargainin a long loaf of bread. We saw a fa tically dressed girl-child laughing a latticed window, and we saw a fu soldier playing a violin in an old way. Somehow the atmosphere we had wished for was there. Som
we had found the Latin Quarter.

And we never guessed, until long afterward, the change was in Good Bonds

Daily Gaining
New Friends

6%
FIRST MORTGAGE BONDS

Each day sees a material number of new names added to our steadily lengthening list of customers.

The name itself — Federal Bond & Mortgage Company — is acquiring greater and greater significance in the minds of men and women with funds to invest.

They look for an issue offered by this Company to possess additional features of safety and it always does.

Mail your request today for "Questions and Answers on Bond Investment"

Federal Bond & Mortgage Co.
90 CH Griswold St. Detroit (225)

BAPTISM

International Sunday School Lesson for July 13.
Matt. 3:13-17 and 28:18-20; Acts 8:26-40

ıe Pledge of Christian Discipleship

Rev. George D. Allison, Ph. D.

S to John the Baptist that the ristian Church owes the symbol ich has been almost universally teristic of initiation into the mem- p of the body of Christ. To be cholars have proved that the Jews his time baptized their proselytes. seems clear that this was a rite emonial purification and might be repeated after ceremonial un- ess. Whereas John used what was ly already somewhat familiar, "outward sign of an inward and al grace," for he preached re- ıce and the remission of sins, and ıis baptism as a sign of a moral and an inner transformation attitude of a life. Therefore it ıite appropriately laid hold on by sciples of Jesus as a vivid and ant way of renouncing sin and ing the principles of the Master. ıs himself was baptized. It is hat he had no feeling of guilt and nce. To him it was a token and of his devotion to the work of ingdom which he had begun on among men. It evoked within n heart a sense of the divine ap- upon his dedication of himself to ission. To thousands untold in lands of the earth has come this joy in a deliberate and public ac- ıce of him and of his Gospel, ı to so many in heathendom it en undertaken with the certainty secution and loss. Jesus' baptism hn is in a way the link between baptism and the baptism of the ian Church, while it is evident ı various branches of that church m is diversely understood.

tism and the Great Commission

second Scripture passage is the Commission, where baptism is ed as the pledge of discipleship. postles were instructed to act as ing officers for the army of the om, and baptism became the mentum" or oath of allegiance at the time of enlisting for ac- rvice. Modern Protestantism has rejected any interpretation of m as in itself regenerative. It is saving ordinance, but a vivid and rable pledge of consecration. Men saved without it and, alas, lost it. Yet it has a tremendous both socially and individually. uld see this in the "war baptisms" liers. One group was baptized Episcopalian chaplain after the ı of that denomination, signing ith the sign of the Cross upon his ad "in token that hereafter he ot be ashamed to confess the faith ist crucified and manfully to fight his banner." Another group was a Baptist chaplain into the waters Marne, there to be immersed in iform, captain and privates, as ge of utter consecration to the of Christ's Kingdom. What an tion to the rest of the regiment! as for the convert himself, bap- arks a red-letter day in his life. s him on record before the world llower of Jesus. It marks a transi- oint from the old to the new. baptisms are conducted in where they may be most memor- the candidate, and most chal- to the spirits of the "rest of the t," to the men and women of ngregation. Besides this it is true here, as in the national service, that every recruit is an appeal to the unpledged to do their duty, to take up their cross. The best sermon many a good Christian ever preaches is proclaimed in symbolism by the evident sincerity of his acceptance of this ceremony of the giving of a life to God. Strong and true comes the answer again and again in our church to the question of the minister, "Dost thou believe in Jesus Christ with all thy heart, and dost thou dedicate thy life to the service of his Kingdom among men?" When the response, "I do," is heard in the solemn stillness, a moral challenge thrills through every soul in the house of prayer.

The Formulas of Baptism

No one knows just how converts were baptized in Jesus' ministry except that "Jesus himself baptized not, but his disciples." What words were used or answered is not recorded. But in the Book of Acts, after the Resurrection, we find that new disciples are "baptized into the name of the Lord Jesus." This shows how central Christ was in all their thought. To him they owed their new-found hope, and he was the all-sufficient ground of their faith. They had become Christians, and "faith in Jesus" was their religion.

It was later and in response to Christ's command in Matthew 28 : 19 that the triple formula came to be used. Jesus himself labored to give men trust in the heavenly Father. In like manner the witness of the Holy Spirit came to be recognized and esteemed. Hence it is now general throughout the Church to baptize into the Name of the Father and of the Son and of the Holy Spirit. Fully interpreted, this triune formula is a comprehensive creed, testifying to belief in God, to the Incarnation and to the Dignity and Value of Man as God's child.

Our Need of Religious Forms

There is a widespread tendency in our time to neglect and ingore both baptism and the Lord's Supper, even by those who do not neglect the public services of religion. Some definitely assert that since it is recognized that these rites are not essential to salvation they should be abandoned as mere hereditary customs. Such overlook the necessity of concrete reminders of spiritual truths. They fail to see the teaching value of these beautiful symbols of the beginning and the sustenance of the Christian life. Besides, it is plain that the great religious groups that are serving the world so largely have been built up not as unorganized and transitory groups of believers, but as religious institutions, having character and continuity. Such institutions always require public ceremonials that picture forth their ideals. No sect that has done away entirely with all forms and ceremonies has multiplied and enlarged its sphere of influence in modern life. Just as the recruit puts on his uniform and takes his oath of allegiance, just as the novitiate dons robes and undergoes initiation in a secret order, just as the marriage vow and the marriage ring have both individual and social value, so the following of Christ in his formal and public dedication of his life is a perpetual reminder of the transformation he demands of every soul.

This lesson should bring to every scholar in our classes not only the meaning of baptism but its challenge to every one who has not yet committed himself definitely to the program of Jesus Christ in the world.

The Soups
That Surprise Connoisseurs

A Van Camp Soup, wherever served, will amaze the connoisseur.

Consider how the flavor is attained. The basic recipe is usually a famous French creation. Some of them won prizes in French culinary contests.

They were brought to us by a noted chef from the Hotel Ritz in Paris. Here he made from those prize recipes the basic Van Camp Soups.

Then Scientific Cooks—men with college training—worked with him to perfect the flavor. They made a study of every ingredient, and fixed a standard for each. They compared sometimes a hundred blends—even 200 on some soups. Thus step by step they attained the summit of soup savor. All of these exquisite soups were made vastly more delightful.

Visitors Came and they were consulted. Experts and housewives were asked to compare one flavor with another. After many months a model soup was evolved, and every step in its production was recorded.

The Van Camp Chefs were then given a formula, specifying every detail. Some of these formulas cover pages. Some deal with as high as 20 ingredients. Thus every soup of that kind is made exactly like the model.

Now you can get at a little price the finest soups ever served. They come to you ready-prepared. You can serve in your own home. in three minutes, a better soup than Paris, Order a few cans to prove this. Compare them with the soups you know.

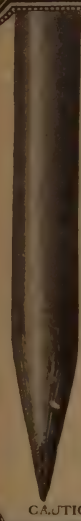
VAN CAMP'S
Soups—18 Kinds

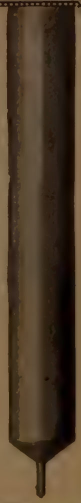
Other Van Camp Products Include
Pork and Beans Evaporated Milk Spaghetti Peanut Butter
Chili Con Carne Catsup Chili Sauce, etc.
Prepared in the Van Camp Kitchens at Indianapolis

Van Camp's Pork and Beans
Baked for three hours without bursting or crisping, with a wondrous sauce.

Van Camp's Spaghetti
A famous Italian recipe perfected like the Van Camp Soups by our college cooks.

Van Camp's Peanut Butter
Made of blended peanuts, toasted, with every germ, every skin removed.





FREE!

TO demonstrate the wonderful advantages of the new Sonora Semi-Permanent Silvered Phonograph Needles we shall be glad to send you a sample free. Write for it or ask your dealer. Note how many times and how beautifully it plays.

INSTRUMENT OF QUALITY
Sonora
CLEAR AS A BELL

Semi-Permanent Silvered
PHONOGRAPH NEEDLES

play 50 to 100 times, replace steel needles and are used on ALL MAKES of steel needle records.

The photomicrograph at the left is the ordinary steel needle after playing one record. Note worn, enlarged point.

The illustration at the right proves there is no perceptible wear when the Sonora needle has played one record.

Sonora needles mellow the tone, are more convenient, more economical and preserve the records.

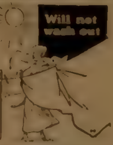
3 Grades—Loud, Medium, Soft
30c per card of 5 40c in Canada
Today send for free sample

Sonora Phonograph Sales Co., Inc.
George E. Brightson, President
279 Broadway, Dept. B, New York
Toronto: Ryrie Building

CAUTION! Beware of similarly constructed needles of inferior quality

GORDON

Theological, Missionary, Religious Educational College course. Graduate School of Theology (3 year) Collegiate and advanced degrees. Two year collegiate training course. Interdenominational, evangelistic. New, fireproof buildings, with dormitories. Organized religious work. Self-support. Catalog. Nathan R. Wood, President. GORDON BIBLE COLLEGE, Boston, Mass.



PAYSON'S INDELIBLE INK

Will not wash out

Outwears any fabric. Will not fade or wash out of linens, cottons, woollens, etc. Put on with common pen. Permanent guard against laundry mistakes. At stores or sent postpaid for 25c.

PAYSON'S INDELIBLE INK CO.
726-728 Henshaw Ave., Northampton, Mass

Tractors, Trucks and Trailers Can Save Money on Every Farm

If They Are Properly Selected

IT IS the business of the Motor Service Bureau of The Christian Herald to help its readers choose the tractor, truck or trailer best suited to their needs.

If you will give us the information called for on the following coupon we will give you unbiased expert advice free of charge.

Check the machine in which you are interested.

Tractor ..... Truck .... Trailer ..... No. acres on which tractor can be used ....
Nature of land ....
Distance to railway or other distributing point .... Kind of roads ....
Kind of crops .... Volume or weight of crops transported annually ....
Make of tractor, truck or trailer preferred ....
Approximate investment available for purchase ....
Motor equipment already owned by me ....
Name ....
Address ....

The Week in the World's News

Continued from page 734

and shouted for the downfall of the United States were arrested. One of the speeches was in Russian and the audience was apparently largely Russian. Rose Pastor Stokes, out of prison on bail, argued for "one big union" as the best means of achieving Bolshevism in the United States and declared that this would be the slogan "until we have captured the Bourgeoise state." Another speaker declared "the time has come when we are ready to end the rule of the capitalist system in the United States. Here in America if the working classes carry on our propaganda and agitate for revolution we can sweep this government out of existence."

Profiteering Alarms British. Alarmed at the rising prices of foods, the British Food Minister, on June 17, stated that the government was giving close attention to the question of retaining and in some cases reimposing the control of foodstuffs.

A New Irish Party. With the Irish question presented to the Peace Conference through the resolution of the United States Senate, and assurances of the British Government that an early attempt would be made to solve the Irish question, it is perhaps significant that there was being formed in Ireland in June an organization called the Irish Dominion League, which believes the Irish republic unattainable and is in favor of the fullest measure of Home Rule along colonial lines.

Italy Rejects Orlando. Premier Orlando of Italy and his cabinet resigned on June 19 following an adverse vote of 259 to 78 in the Chamber of Deputies. Orlando pleaded for a secret session to discuss foreign relations with the government, declaring that he had achieved peace, while maintaining a policy of firmness on all essential points with faithfulness in their duties toward the Allies. The note of faithfulness to the Allies precipitated the storm. In spite of the fall of the cabinet the Rome Government, on June 20, instructed the Peace delegation to accept the Dalmatian settlement proposed by President Wilson and Premiers Lloyd George and Clemenceau.

President Visits Belgium The President and Mrs. Wilson left Paris, on June 17, for a tour of Belgium. They made a trip along the Belgium battle front from Adinkerke, through Ypres, to Ostend and Zeebrugge reaching Brussels at 9.15 P.M. on the 18th.

President Wilson, on June 19, visited Charleroi, received a degree o of Laws at Louvain University
ceived by Cardinal Mercier, entertained at the American at a dinner attended by the Queen.

The President addressed the Chamber of Deputies. He that Belgium, through its defe honor and its heroism under had awakened the conscienc world, and that her cause had li governments of the civilized gether. He said also that the Nations was an inevitable con of the war; the expression of nent resolution which grew the temporary necessities of struggle.

The President saw much of destruction in Belgium, but he gium revived as well in waving grain, in factories resuming wor people bravely facing forwa assured the people of Belgium would do all he could to facili shipment of needed raw materi

Labor in Convention. The tion of Labor in convention at City, after having squelched th element, passed resolutions de the resignation or removal of Po General Burleson, whom they of pettiness and bigotry and of for office; they also condemned a the postal zone system for seco matter. Other resolutions con the courts for usurping power thority belonging to the le branch of government and labor to disregard unjust inj issued by the courts, favored limitation on immigration, an that a law to prohibit immigrat number of years be passed bef League of Nations was adopted, dorsed the League of Nations co
but declared Ireland's right determination. The Federati decided to organize the steel i and voted against the organizat separate labor party continuing political nature of the Federatio
Gompers was reelected President Federation for his thirty-seventh

Riots in Waterbury. Pitch tles, lasting for nearly an hou place, on June 19, between th and brass foundry strikers at bury, Conn. The police used m guns and squelched the riot wh started by pickets interfering wit
ers. A large number of the strike arrested, and all were said to be ers—Lithuanians, Russians, Po Italians.

Do You Want to Know?

MANY interesting questions are received and answered daily by the Christian Herald Information Bureau in Washington.

How can a man who has lost his citizenship by enlisting in a foreign army resume it?—E. N. D. By taking the oath of allegiance to the United States, prescribed by the naturalization regulations, before any court authorized to naturalize aliens, or before any consul of the United States.

How were the days of the week named?—R. S. G. The names were derived from Saxon idolatry. The Saxons had seven deities more favored than the rest. The Sun, Moon, Tuisco, Woden, Thor, Friga and Seater. Tuisco was the sire of the Germans, Woden the god of war, Thor, god of the air, Friga was the mother of all the gods and t of Woden, Seater blessed the ear peace and plenty. The days wer for them.

Are there many disabled soldie securing vocational education?—J
Yes. To date 4,725 soldiers, sail marines have applied. Effort i made to locate every injured man United States and to offer him tional education. All such men communicate with the Federal Bo Vocational Education, Washi
D. C.

ANY QUESTION will be pr answered by return mail when p for reply letter is inclosed. A Christian Herald Information B
Frederic J. Haskin, Director, Wa
ton, D. C.

THE CHRISTIAN HERALD is published weekly by The Christian Herald, at the Bible House, Fourth Avenue, 8th and 9th Sts., New York City. The Officers are: Graham C. Patterson, President and Treasurer, Bible House, N. Y. City; Geo. H. Sandison, Vice President, Bible House, N. Y. City.

SUBSCRIPTION PRICE, $2.50 a year in advance. After July 1, 1919, an additional charge of 50 cents a year for zone postage will be required on all subscriptions west of the Mississippi, including Minnesota and Louisiana. Remittances should be made in the safest manner available. Make checks and money orders payable to The Christian Herald.

FOREIGN POSTAGE.—For copies mailed side the United States, Canada and Mexico, ad dollar a year to subscription price.

CHANGE OF DATE.—It takes at least weeks to change the date, after your subscri is renewed.

EXPIRATION OF SUBSCRIPTION.— date on the wrapper indicates when your subs
tion ends.

CHANGE OF ADDRESS.—It requires weeks' time to make the change. Give both ol
new address.

LETTERS should be addressed, THE CH
TIAN HERALD, Bible House, New York.

Entered as Second-class Matter at the Post Office Department, Ottawa

ONLY A FEW HUNDRED SETS REMAIN OF THE THIRD EDITION OF

GENE STRATTON-PORTER'S NOVELS in 6 Vols.

Order a Set At Once—No More Will Be Printed

A GIRL OF THE LIMBERLOST HARVESTER
FRECKLES
AT THE FOOT OF THE RAINBOW
LADDIE A TRUE BLUE STORY
SONG OF THE CARDINAL
GENE STRATTON PORTER

THE First and Second Special Editions of Mrs. Gene Stratton-Porter's works which we published were quickly taken by CHRISTIAN HERALD readers. A Third Edition, ordered over five months ago, has just been received. The special paper used in this really wonderful set of books is so difficult to obtain, we have decided not to make any further editions. All but a few hundred sets of this third edition have already been taken by CHRISTIAN HERALD readers. Many ordered a set months before we received the books from the printers. This is a final opportunity to procure these books. Those who desire the set of 6 volumes should send in the coupon below at once. No further orders can be filled after the few remaining sets have been taken.

"CLOSER TO THE ALMIGHTY"

is the philosophy of Mrs. Gene Stratton-Porter, the author of "The Harvester," "The Girl of the Limberlost," and other marvelously successful stories—to bring those who read her books "closer to Nature and the Almighty." Mrs. Porter has opened the eyes of thousands to the wonder and glory of the world about them.

Mrs. Porter's stories all have, as a fundamental reason of their existence, the author's great love of Nature. To impart this love to others—to inspire many hundreds of thousands to look for the first time with seeing eyes at the pageant of the out-of-doors—is her gift of rare quality. In writing of "The Girl of the Limberlost," Mrs. Porter said: "This comes fairly close to my idea of a good book. The book can, and does, present a hundred pictures that will draw any reader in closer touch with Nature and the Almighty."

Mrs. Porter's novels are not only wholesome and clean, but they are romantic and cheerful. The people who live in their pages do things and accomplish tasks worth while. Over 3,000,000 copies of Mrs. Porter's books have been sold.

SPECIAL EDITION OF MRS. PORTER'S NOVELS

By a special arrangement with the publishers of Mrs. Porter's works, we procured a special edition of six volumes of the most popular stories by this talented writer. The six volumes were printed from the plates used in the original edition—the type being large and clear and the paper of exceptional quality. The books are bound in fine red cloth with gilt tops; 25 full page illustrations.

At the Foot of the Rainbow

An idyl of central Indiana—a tale of devoted friendship and tender, self-sacrificing love—the friendship that gives freely without return, and the love that seeks first the happiness of the object. The story reaches real heights of endearing sentiment and tender pathos.

Freckles

Few books of recent years have sounded such a new and wholly refreshing note as that which dominates "Freckles." It is a gem, full of beauty and sentiment and well worth reading. It is an outdoor story filled with adventure and pleasant atmosphere.

Song of the Cardinal

A beautiful and touching story of the love of a Cardinal bird for its mate with an appeal to every one who cares for true romance, as delightful for its descriptions of wild life and nature as for its tender human feelings. An exquisite prose-poem, that deserves a place of its own in American literature.

The Harvester

Mrs. Porter has lavished upon this unique romance all the wealth of nature lore and nature love from her years of patient, enthusiastic study. It is a charming blend of love, romance and the hidden delights of the woods and roads.

Laddie, A True-Blue Story

The love story of Laddie and Pamela Pryor, the English neighbors of the Strattons, as told by Little Sister, the youngest of the Pryors, is a genuine "home-story" close to the heart of Man and of Nature.

Girl of the Limberlost

This companion story to "Freckles" has repeated the striking success of that book, which, published over ten years ago, has steadily increased its tens of thousands of readers year by year. It is an exquisitely simple love story which stands for true womanhood, as did "Freckles" for pure manhood. It breathes a message of compassion and strength.

OUR OFFER—SEND NO MONEY NOW

WHILE the edition lasts you can secure this special six-volume set of Mrs. Gene Stratton-Porter's novels at an exceedingly low price and on free examination. This set of six volumes is published solely for readers of the CHRISTIAN HERALD. It may be obtained only in connection with a year's subscription, but we have made the terms of payment so liberal that all may take advantage of this offer.

Send no money now! Merely mail the order blank and the set of six volumes will be forwarded, all charges prepaid by us. If, after five days' examination you decide not to keep the books, return them at our expense and you will be under no obligation. You need not purchase them unless convinced of their value to you and your family. But, if you decide to keep them, send $1.00 within 5 days after their receipt, and $1.00 a month for 5 months, a total of $6.00 in all for the books, and we will also enter your subscription to the CHRISTIAN HERALD for one year. (Subscription price of the CHRISTIAN HERALD alone is $2.50—52 issues.) If at present a subscriber, your subscription will be extended a year after date of expiration. Or you can send the CHRISTIAN HERALD to any one you desire for 1 year. DON'T DELAY. Paper prices and manufacturing costs are going up and it will not be possible for us to publish another edition at this very low price after the present one is exhausted.

----MERELY FILL OUT COUPON----

CHRISTIAN HERALD, 2099 Bible House, New York, N. Y.

Gentlemen: Please send me, on approval, all transportation charges paid by the publisher, a set of your special edition of Mrs. Gene Stratton-Porter's novels in six volumes, bound in cloth, with gilt tops. If I keep the books, I will send $1.00 within 5 days and will pay $1.00 a month thereafter for 5 months, or a total of $6.00 in all, for which I am also to receive the Christian Herald for 1 year. If not satisfactory, I will send the set back to you within five days at your expense. I incur no other obligation in mailing this order blank.

Name ....

Address ....

....

(A single cash payment of $5.50 can be made if preferred.)

Grow “Younger” As Yo

Grow Older

Younger in Body, Younger in Spirit, Younger in Ambition, Younger in Every Characteristic that Gives Greater Earning and Living Power, Greater Thought Power, Greater Pleasure Obtaining Power and Greater Health Promoting Power

THE number of years a man has lived does not tell how old or young he is. A man is as old or as young as his energy, his vitality, his capacity for work and play, his resisting power against disease and fatigue. A man is only as old or as young as his memory power, will power, sustained-thought power, personality power, concentration power and brain power. He is only as old or as young as his digestive power, his heart power, his lung power, his kidney power, his liver power. Age is measured by the age of our cells, tissues and organs, and not by the calendar!

Cultivate the Cells

Everybody knows that the body and brain are made up of millions of tiny cells. We can be no younger than those cells are young. We can be no more efficient in any way than those cells are efficient. We can be no more energetic than the combined energy of those cells.

By conscious cultivation of these cells, it is as natural as the law of gravity that we become more efficient, more alive, more energetic, more ambitious, more enthusiastic, more youthful. By consciously developing the cells in our stomachs we must improve our digestion. By consciously developing the cells in the heart we must increase its strength in exact proportion. By consciously developing the brain cells the result can only be multiplied brain power—and so with every organ in the body.

What we are and what we are capable of accomplishing depends entirely and absolutely on the degree of development of our cells. They are the sole controlling factors in us. We are only as young and as great and as powerful as they are.

There Is No Fraud Like Self-Deception

You may think you are young, strong, brainy, energetic, happy, yet when compared with other men or women, you are old, weak, dull, listless and unhappy. You do not know what you are capable of accomplishing because you have not begun to develop the real vital powers within you. The truth is you are only a dwarf in health and mind when you can easily become a giant through conscious development of every cell, tissue and organ in your body and brain. By accelerating the development of the powers within you, you can actually become younger, as you grow older—yes younger in every way that will contribute to your health, happiness and prosperity.

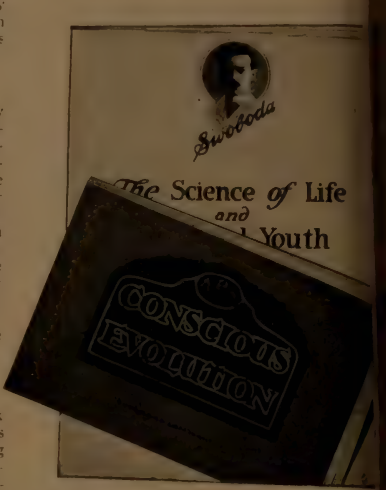
Conscious Evolution—the Secret

Swoboda proves that Conscious Evolution gives energy and vitality to spare, digestive power to spare, self-reliance to spare, and gives many other desirable characteristics to spare. He proves that Conscious Evolution makes people disease-proof, fatigue-proof. He maintains that to possess sufficient vitality and energy and to keep the body in normal health under the most favorable conditions is no more health prosperity than to have only enough money from day to day to meet current expenses. Great reserve health, great reserve energy is what we must acquire if we are to successfully nullify the ravages of time, and to easily overcome every adverse condition and thus enjoy the benefit of our resources, the benefit of our health power and the advantage of our energy.

Beware of Health Poverty

As Swoboda says "there are individuals who seek work only when their last cent is gone. Likewise, individuals live from minute to minute and from day to day, seeking health and energy only as they need them badly. Conscious Evolution is for them—for everyone. It is a simple, scientific and practical system by means of which every part of the brain and body is energized, strengthened, awakened, so that we become possessed of a super health and mentality—the Swoboda kind of health and mentality. Conscious Evolution makes for good fortune by developing the resources and the ability and power of personality.

Strange as it may seem, this revolutionary method of consciously awakening and developing weakened and lifeless cells requires no drugs, medicines or apparatus of any kind. It does not require dieting, deep breathing, excessive exercising, cold baths, electricity or massage. It takes only a few minutes a day, yet so startling is the effect of Swoboda's system that you begin to feel younger, renewed, revitalized, re-energized after the very first day.



WHAT OTHERS HAVE TO SAY

"Conscious Evolution has done all for me that you promi and I am simply radiating good health. I can hardly belie it myself, it has made such a great change in me. I am in bet condition than I have been for twenty years and am cho full of energy and ambition. Tasks that were a burden to in the past are now easy and a pleasure. I have no money burn or throw to the birds, but if you were to offer me o thousand dollars in good hard cash and put me back where was before beginning your system, I would say, 'Nothi doing.' I enjoy the work you have mapped out for me and a impatient to get at it."

"I SHALL BE SIXTY-SIX YEARS OLD NEX AUGUST, and if you were to see me right now yo would say 'forty,' and, as a fact, I am better, stronge and have more energy than the average man at fort I have only you and your system to thank for the things, and I want to thank you from the very botto of a grateful heart for what you have done for m I am a man now in every sense of the word, whereas was only a fraction of a man and rather a small fraction before profiting through Conscious Evolution.'

"The strangest part of it all is that my hearing is greatly improved. The muscles of my shoulders, back and abdomen a immense, and I have forgotten that I have a liver, kidney heart, or any other organs, except my stomach which makes loud call three times a day. I have lost all desire for stimulants

"I AM SEVENTY-ONE YEARS OF AGE, and i three weeks your system has apparently made a ne man of me. I am so enthusiastic over Consciou Evolution that it is difficult for me to control mysel and not do more than you say. I want to thank yo for the interest you are taking in my case. When wrote you for your instructions I was in a very desperate condition. I have never been sorry for on minute that I have written you. On the contrary I want to thank you for what you are doing for me I am getting along fine; I am a wonder to myself It does not seem possible that there could be such a change in any one in such a short time."

"When I tell some of my friends how quickly I was benefite by Conscious Evolution, they do not believe me. They think exaggerate."

"One year ago I was an old man of forty; today I am a youth at forty-one"

"I must state that the principle of your system is the most scientific, and at the same time the simplest I have ever heard. You do not misrepresent one single word in your advertising."

"Just think of it, five weeks ago I was ashamed of my physique; today I am almost proud of it. I am delighted with Conscious Evolution."

"My reserve force makes me feel that nothing is impossible, my capacity both physically and mentally is increasing daily."

"I am very thankful that the LORD directed me to Conscious Evolution through the 'Christian Herald.'"

These Amazing Books Are For You

Swoboda has published for distribution two remarkable books which explain his system of Conscious Evolution and what it has already done. Write for these books—not because Conscious Evolution has meant so much to 325,000 other men and women, not because there is scarcely a prominent family in the country that hasn't at least one member a pupil of Swoboda, including Charles E. Hughes, Woodrow Wilson, Rockefeller, the Vanderbilts, the Goulds, the Huntingtons, the Cudahys, the Swifts, Dr. J. H Jowett—but write for these books because they mean so much to YOU in multiplied living power, earning power and resisting power. They are big books filled from cover to cover with the vital facts about yourself and how you can acquire the degree of perfection in body and mind that you so much desire. They explain the dangers of excessive deep breathing, excessive exercise, and excessive muscular development.

"Conscious Evolution" and "The Science of Life" will show you how you can increase the pleasures of life to a maximum—how to intensify them and how to make your life more profitable, pleasurable and joyous.

"Conscious Evolution" and "The Science of Life" are the A, B, C, of evolution and persistent youth. These books explain Conscious Evolution and the human body as it has never been explained before. They explain the Swoboda theory and the laws of mind and body. They startle, educate and enlighten. They explain as never before the reason for the evolution of the mind and body.

Regardless of how young you may feel, of how efficient you may think you are—regardless of how active energetic and alert you may consider yourself—regardless of how happy, how contented you may pride yourself on being—regardless of how healthy, wealthy or successful you may be, you cannot afford in justice to yourself to miss the interesting and instructive secrets explained for the first time in these startling new books.

A mere reading of "Conscious Evolution" and "The Science of Life" will so fill you with enthusiasm and ambition, that you will not rest until you have yourself acquired the Swoboda kind of health and energy by cultivation and revitalizing intensively every cell, tissue and organ in your own system. Tear out the coupon on this page, write your name and address on it or write a letter or a postal card and mail it today. Even if you gain but one suggestion from them, you will have been repaid a thousand fold for having read them. I urge you by all means not to delay, not to say, "I'll do it later," but to send NOW, while the matter is on your mind. Remember, these books are absolutely free for you to keep—there is no charge or obligation now or later. Write NOW. Address

ALOIS P. SWOBODA, 2316 Berkeley Bldg., New York City

ALOIS P. SWOBODA, 2316 Berkeley Bldg., New York City
Please send me your free copyrighted books, "Conscious Evolutio and "Science of Life."
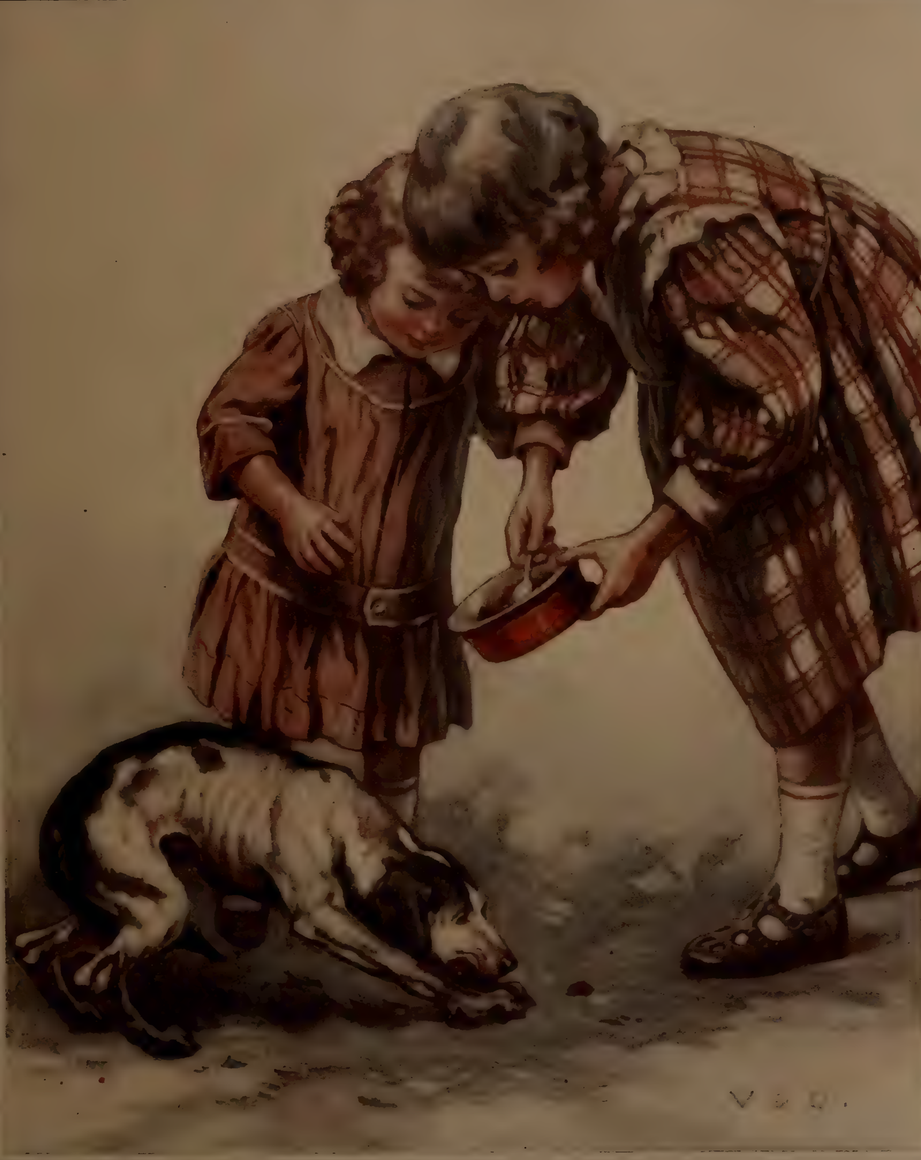
Name ....
Address ....
City ....
State ....

diers, sailors or marines.
NO WRAPPING—NO ADDRESS
A. S. BURLESON, Postmaster General

Christian Herald

$2.50 a Year NEW YORK, JULY 12, 1919 Ten Cents a Copy
For subscriptions in Minnesota, Louisiana and in the United States west of the Mississippi add 50c. to cover Zone Postage



The Wanderer

Vol. 42. No. 28. Published Weekly at New York City by The Christian Herald. Copyright, 1919, The Christian Herald.

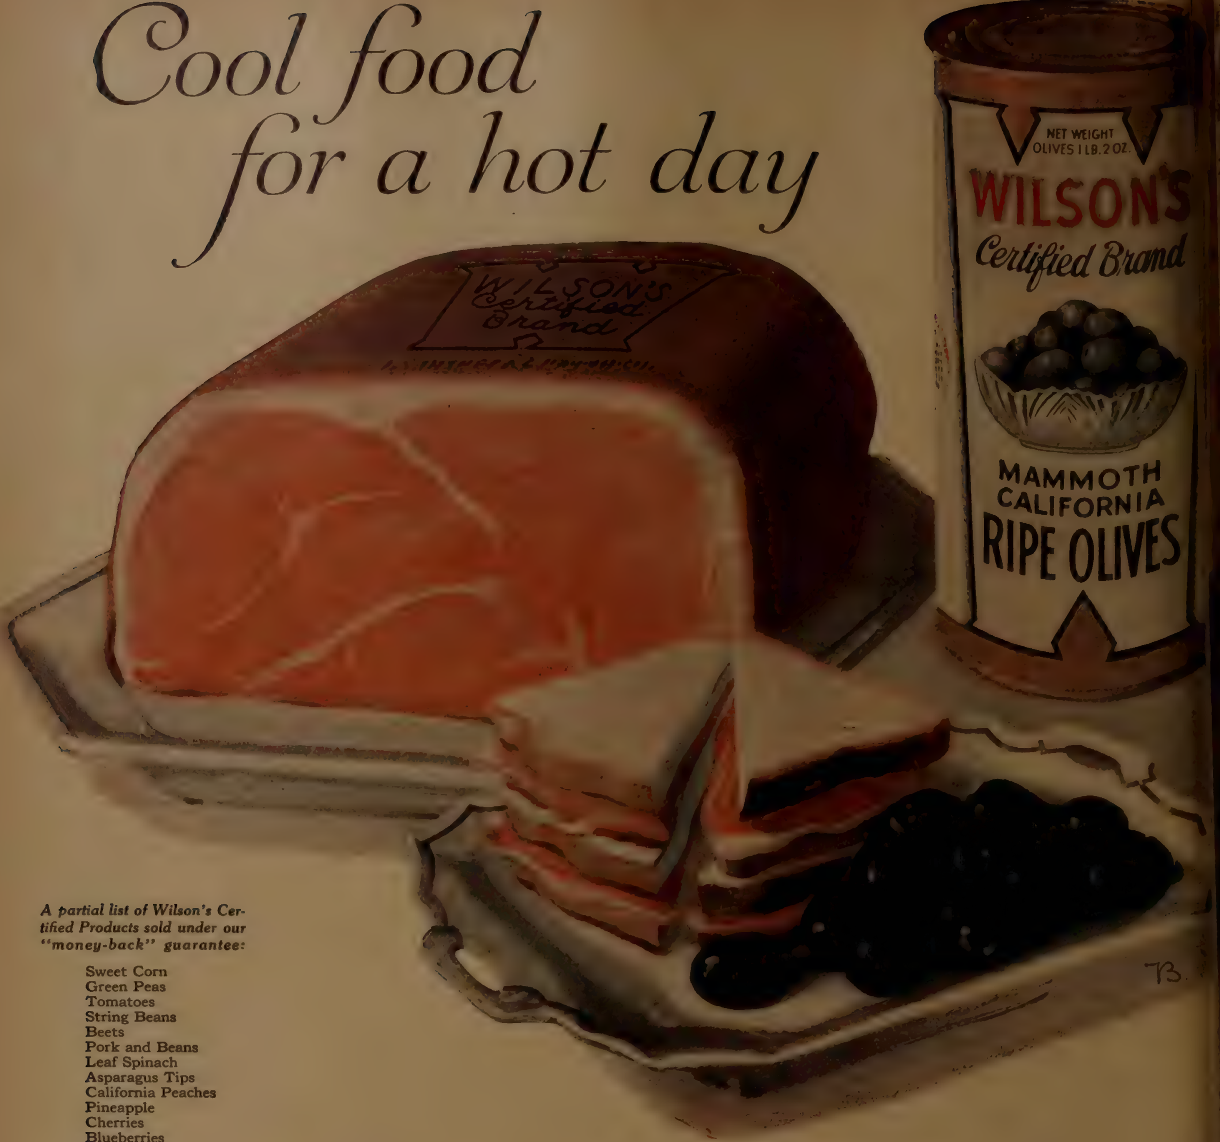
"THE CREED WE LEARNED IN FRANCE"

By a Croix de Guerre Man of the Famous Rainbow Division

AROUND THE FAMILY CIRCLE

Entered as Second Class Matter, January 25, 1909, at the Post Office at New York, under the act of March 3, 1879.

Cool food for a hot day



A partial list of Wilson's Certified Products sold under our "money-back" guarantee:

Sweet Corn
Green Peas
Tomatoes
String Beans
Beets
Pork and Beans
Leaf Spinach
Asparagus Tips
California Peaches
Pineapple
Cherries
Blueberries
Raspberries
Strawberries
Pumpkin
Catsup
Chili Sauce
Jellies
Jams
Preserves
Peanut Butter
Mince Meat
Olives
Sardines
Salmon
Ox Tongue
Veal Loaf
Oleomargarine
Ham
Bacon
Coffee

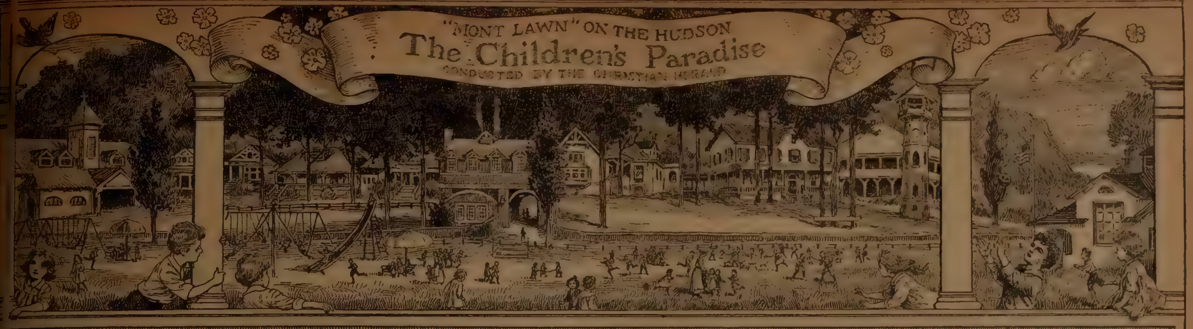
TENDER and tempting, perfectly cooked, Wilson's "square pressed" Certified boiled ham not only gratifies your hot-weather appetite, but it saves time and tiresome work in the kitchen. Each ham is carefully selected, properly boned and trimmed, then boiled by expert chefs. Our exclusive method of pressing the ham squarely gives it the ideal shape for wasteless slicing. Divide the slice and make two sandwiches. Your delicatessen store, grocer or meat dealer will be glad to slice this ham for you—ask for Wilson's Certified square pressed boiled ham.

THE rich, full-ripe flavor of our Certified olives appeals to all. And they "go didly" with sandwiches, salads and all other weather dishes.

All Wilson products are selected, handled prepared with respect. Thoughtfulness, and consideration, such as your own mo would show, are second nature in our org ization. The Wilson label is a pledge promise to you that your purchase must enti satisfy you.

"This mark WILSON & CO. your guarantee"
CHICAGO

The Wilson Label Protects Your Tabl



"MONT LAWN" ON THE HUDSON
The Children's Paradise CONDUCTED BY THE CHRISTIAN HERALD

THE CHRISTIAN HERALD

SUBSCRIPTION, $2.50 PER ANNUM
PUBLISHED 52 TIMES A YEAR
GRAHAM PATTERSON Publisher — GEORGE H. SANDISON Editor
VOL. 42—NO. 28. PRICE 10 CENTS
OFFICES: BIBLE HOUSE, NEW YORK

THE PEACE TREATY SIGNED AT LAST

HE delegates of the nations have signed the Treaty of Peace. On June 28, the anniversary of the mur- at Serajevo which fur- ed the pretext for the war, he Famous Hall of Mir- , where the German Em- was proclaimed in De- ber, 1870, by the grand- er of the imperial refugee Holland, and where later French were forced to nit to humiliating terms, German delegates signed Treaty of Peace. The lace, the diplomatic and erial pomp of earlier rnational agreements, was ing. In this year of 1919 representatives of the ld's democracies met ssed in cilivian clothes, ost the only color being ished by the red-plumed er helmets and red, white blue uniforms, of the nch Guards who formed guard of honor. Picked achments of French, Eng- and American soldiers npleted the guard.

he delegates were seated a dais about a yellow cov- d table, in the form of a low rectangle at one side the great hall. The Ger- n delegates sat at one end rt to the delegates of pan. About 1,000 persons re admitted to the hall spectators, mostly corres- ndents, military chiefs and members of the Peace legations. The Germans entered last and left first, ng entrances and exits different from the Allied legates. On leaving, after signing, they were ac- rded a military salute, but were advised that Ger- ny would be treated as a friendly nation and ations resumed only when the National Assembly tified the Treaty. The Germans protested at what ey considered a lack of courtesy. It was also an- unced that commercial relations with Germany uld be resumed by all the Allies as soon as Germany tified the Treaty.

Premier Clemenceau called the session to order 3:10 P. M., French time, 10:10 A. M., New York ne, M. Clemenceau, announcing that an agreement d been reached and assuring the German dele- tes that the document to be signed was identical ith the copies in their possession, said, "The signa- es will be given now and they amount to a solemn dertaking faithfully and loyally to execute the con- tions embodied by this Treaty of Peace." He then vited the German delegates to sign the Treaty.

The German delegates were followed by the dele- tes of America, President Wilson, Secretary Lansing nry White, Colonel House and General Bliss sign- g in the order of their names above. The British legates then signed, they being followed in order by the delegates of the British Dominions, the French M. Clemenceau signing first, the Japanese, the Italians and then the representatives of the smaller powers.

© Underwood & Underwood

The first entrance of Germany to the Peace Congress. Count von Brockdorff-Rantzau, at the head of the delegation, being announced and introduced to the Allied delegates in the Conference Room at Versailles

The representatives of China withheld their signatures and did not attend the signing. They had offered to sign provided they were permitted to make reservations regarding the Shantung settlement. The Supreme Council did not wish to permit reservations, but was willing to have the delegates make a declaration after signing. This the Chinese delegates felt would misrepresent the public opinion of China and would also be against their own "sense of right and justice." The delegates issued a statement in which they submitted "their case to the impartial judgment of the world."

General Smuts caused some surprise by issuing a statement in which he declared that it would be to the interests of the Allied powers to make the indemnity stipulations of the treaty "more tolerable and moderate;" that some of the territorial settlements would need revision, and that under a more peaceful temper the Allies would find the guarantees required of Germany out of harmony with her unarmed state, and some of the punishments foreshadowed would be passed over "with the sponge of oblivion," when the Allies were in a calmer mood.

The French had provided a supply of quills, in order that every diplomatic usage might be fulfilled, but Lloyd George was reported to have signed with his fountain pen.

It had been planned that the Allied delegates would file out of the hall on to the terraces of Versailles, and witness the playing of the elaborate fountains, but the crowd changed the plan. In fact correspondents reported the arrangements for handling the spectators to have been very inadequate and unsatisfactory. As soon as President Wilson, Premier Clemenceau and Premier Lloyd George descended to the terrace, the thousands of people massed behind the guards broke through and surrounded the three statesmen, struggling, cheering, shouting "vive" for each, and fighting with one another for a chance to shake the hand of one of the makers of the peace. Governed largely by the will of the crowds, the three leaders made their way along the terrace, responding to the acclaim with bows and ready handshakes, smiling and quite as happy as the people who had revised the official plans. Meantime, while the three saw the fountains, the rest of the delegates saw only the crowd.

The session of the Peace Congress ended at 3:45; it was expected that the Austrian treaty would be signed early in July and that settlements with Bulgaria and Turkey would follow shortly after.

Immediately on hearing of the signing, King George cabled a greeting to President Wilson and "the great American People." After referring to the part America played in reviving Allied hopes and winning the war the King thus closed his message: "It is on this day one of our happiest thoughts, that the American and British people, brothers in arms, will continue forever to be brothers in peace. United before by language, traditions, kinship, and ideals, there has been set upon our fellowship the sacred seal of common sacrifice."

Following the refusal by the Council of Three of the Allied Peace Conference to consider any variation in terms, or any extension in time, Dr. Haniel von Haimhausen sent the following note to M. Clemenceau, President of the Peace Conference:

"It appears to the government of the German Republic, in consternation at the last communication of the Allied and Associated Governments, that these governments have decided to wrest from Germany by force acceptance of the peace conditions, even those, which, without presenting any material significance, aim at divesting the German people of their honor.

"No act of violence can touch the honor of the German people. The German people, after frightful suffering in these last years, have no means of defending themselves by external action.

"Yielding to superior force, and without renouncing in the meantime its own view of the unheard-of injustice of the peace conditions, the government of the German Republic declares that it is ready to accept and sign the peace conditions imposed."

By this note Germany officially accepted the terms of the victorious Allies, acknowledging her own guilt and accepting the condemnation of the world of her attack upon its liberties.

. . .

THE announcement of the final acceptance of Germany of the peace terms was received in Paris with great joy, and the boulevards were soon alive with such a throng of merry makers as they had not seen since the fatal day in 1914 when Germany threw down the gage of battle and started the march of conquest which led through fifty-two months of terror and ended in her own defeat.

The Germans had sought not only to gain time but to gain concessions, especially along the line of the colonies, the acknowledgment of war guilt and the surrender of the Kaiser and other German military chiefs. It was only when it appeared impossible to secure any modification that the majority in the Weimar Assembly voted solemnly and sullenly to sign the Treaty.

Dr. Haniel von Haimhausen was at once instructed to sign the Treaty, but while the Allies were deciding whether or not to accept his signature, since his credentials were not those of a plenipotentiary, von Haimhausen announced that he would not sign, and sent his resignation to Berlin. It was reported that his wife had wired him that if he signed the treaty he need not come home. In a conference with Minister of Defense, Noske, regarding the possibility of resistance to the terms of the Treaty, Field Marshal von Hindenburg was reported to have said that Germany would be able to conquer Poland, but could not offer effective resistance in the west.

The new Premier of Germany and President Ebert returned to Berlin on June 25, having a discussion during the whole night of their journey, over the appointment of a plenipotentiary. Premier Bauer on his arrival in Berlin said, "It is not easy to find the right man because the Entente has made certain difficult limits to our choice, but we hope to find a man by tomorrow who will be willing to sacrifice his own feelings for the sake of the fatherland."

President Ebert, Premier Bauer and all of the members of the new German Government, on June 25, issued a proclamation to the German people announcing the conclusion of peace and saying, "As far as it is possible to carry it out, the Treaty must be carried out." The proclamation promises to intercede in the behalf of those territories threatened with separation from the Empire and exhorts the people to realize the need of work and faithfulness to duty for the redemption of the country.

Premier Clemenceau, on June 23, when the note from Germany accepting peace was received, was quoted as exclaiming that they had waited 49 years for this moment. He declared that in these years the mailed fist of the Germans had menaced the world. He reminded the Allies that they still needed to be careful and keep their powder dry because the world was still living on a barrel of that powder.

The new German delegation to the conference including Foreign Secretary Muller, Colonial Secretary Bell, secretaries and expert advisors, left Berlin secretly on Thursday night, June 26, fearing an attempt on their lives. They reached Versailles on Friday evening.

. . .

Travelers back from Germany declared that the Germans were moral bankrupts, and this was held to be borne out by the traitorous sinking of the ships at Scapa Flow, and by more traitorous acts of Prussian officers who entered the German museum in Berlin, secured by deception the French battle-flags of 1870 and of the present war, by the treaty of peace promised to France and already packed for shipment, taking them out into the court before the statue of Frederick the Great, where they saturated them with gasoline and set them afire.

The Council of Three, on June 25, was reported to have decided to demand of the Germans additional reparation to cover the value of the ships sunk in the Scapa Flow.

President Wilson was reported from Paris, on June 27, to be very well pleased with the six months' work in Europe and to consider that the closer accord between the United States and the nations who had been our Allies was worth the long period of negotiation in which it had been built up. The President was said to be satisfied with the results of the conference and to be hopeful of securing ratification of the Treaty without amendment, an outcome for which he expected to make a speaking tour throughout the country shortly after his return. He sailed from Brest at 2:20 P.M. June 29.

The decision of the German Assembly to accept the peace terms having been celebrated as the harbinger of peace, the actual signing was received by the world somewhat quietly, although Paris thronged the boulevards as soon as the booming guns announced the treaty signed.

The churches in all allied countries offered prayers of thanksgiving on June 29, and the press united to acclaim the conclusion of a just peace, while in Germany mourning services were held in the churches and the press, after a last hostile broadside of denunciation, turned to the much more hopeful task of pointing the way of "shackled" Germany to full freedom through the way of sincerity and honest performance of her obligations.

A New Charter for the World

The following address by President Wilson to the American people on the occasion of the signing of the Peace Treaty was given out in Washington on June 28 by Secretary Tumulty:

My Fellow Countrymen: The treaty of peace has been signed. If it is ratified and acted upon in full and sincere execution of its terms it will furnish the charter for a new order of affairs in the world. It is a severe treaty in the duties and penalties it imposes upon Germany; but it is severe only because great wrongs done by Germany are to be righted and repaired; it imposes nothing that Germany cannot do; and she can regain her rightful standing in the world by the prompt and honorable fulfillment of its terms.

And it is much more than a treaty of peace with Germany. It liberates great peoples who have never before been able to find the way to liberty. It ends, once for all, an old and intolerable order under which small groups of selfish men could use the peoples of great empires to serve their ambition for power and dominion. It associates the free governments of the world in a permanent League in which they are pledged to use their united power to maintain peace by maintaining right and justice.

It makes international law a reality supported by imperative sanctions. It does away with the right of conquest and rejects the policy of annexation and substitutes a new order under which backward nations—populations which have not yet come to political consciousness and peoples who are ready for independence but not yet prepared to dispense with protection and guidance—shall no more be subjected to the domination and exploitation of a stronger nation, but shall be put under the friendly direction and afforded the helpful assistance of governments which undertake to be responsible to the opinion of mankind in the execution of their task by accepting the direction of the League of Nations.

It recognizes the inalienable rights of nationality, the rights of minorities and the sanctity of religious belief and practice. It lays the basis for conventions which shall free the commercial intercourse of the world from unjust and vexatious restrictions and for every sort of international cooperation that will serve to cleanse the life of the world and facilitate its common action in beneficent service of every kind. It furnishes guarantees such as were never given or even contemplated for the fair treatment of all who labor at the daily tasks of the world.

It is for this reason that I have spoken of it as a great charter for a new order of affairs. There is ground here for deep satisfaction, universal reassurance, and confident hope.

WOODROW WILSON.

The Week in the World's News

SENATE REPORT ON BOLSHEVISM. The report of the Overman Committee to the Senate on Bolshevist propaganda in America was exhaustive and extremely interesting to those who love America and see in her institutions the greatest promise of the ages for liberty and human happiness. After outlining the program of Bolshevism in Russia, in which nothing was brought to light not already published, the report went on to show the impact of Bolshevism on America. The Bolshevist agencies are said to appeal to the hatred and the lowest instincts of the more uneducated elements of the country reenforced by the criminally inclined who welcome the doctrine of confiscation. The report declares it significant that, in the United States, only a portion of the so-called radical revolutionists accept fully the doctrines of the Bolsheviki, although all are using Bolshevism as a rallying cry. Most of these groups believe in force as distinguished from political action as the instrument for the overthrowing of governments, thus defying the principles of democracy.

In order to present to the country completely the meaning of Bolshevism to Americans the report outlines the probable result as follows: millions of firms, merchants, manufacturers, men employing clerks, bookkeepers, or stenographers would be deprived of the right to participate in the government. Persons receiving interest on borrowed money, rent from real estate, or dividends from stocks, traders, merchants and dealers, all preachers, teachers, priests, janitors, the employees of churches and religious bodies would also be excluded from the governing class. With the franchise denied a large majority of the American people the power of the proletariat would be secure. The cities would have five times greater voting power, in proportion to population, than the rural districts and all land and manufacturing plants and everything coming under the head of property would be confiscated by the government. This would mean that from 3,948,722 farms, or 62$^1/_{10}$ per cent. of all American farms now run by men who own them, the owners would be evicted. In addition there would be confiscated $40,991,449,090 worth of farm improvements, machinery and live stock, 275,000 manufacturing establishments with an invested capital of $22,790,980,000, 203,432 church edifices and 17,805,845 privately owned buildings. The complete control of all banking institutions, the complete liquidation of all life insurance companies, the destruction of religion and the teaching of atheism are part of this grand and glorious scheme.

RIOTS IN GERMANY. On June 25 and 26 food riots were reported in Berlin and Hamburg. In Berlin military authorities retained control, but in Hamburg the police were overcome and a Spartacide government was established. Government troops were sent to the city to restore order and legal government. According to the reports an enraged crowd in Hamburg entered a preserved meat factory and discovered the remains of dogs, cats and rats. The proprietor was badly thrashed and compelled to eat cat and dog meat.

SENATE PASSES THE NAVAL BILL. The Senate on June 26 passed the Naval Bill increasing appropriations by $44,000,000 over the House measure. The appropriation for aviation was increased from $15,000,000 to $35,000,000.

PRESBYTERIANS TO HELP FRANCE. The Presbyterian Church in the United States will spend $50,000 of the money raised in its New Era Movement in the restoration of the devastated churches in the war zone in Belgium. The Churches a tant agencies already establis restored and built up but n funds will be used for prosely

LYNCHING IN MISSISSIPP being trailed for ten days, a was said to have confessed to upon a white woman and who wounded when being capt rushed to the scene of his crim ville, Miss., and his body ashes. Governor Bilbo decl self absolutely powerless to pr lynching.

WAR PROHIBITION IN EFFEC dent Wilson, on June 28, cable could not legally halt the en of war prohibition, but that act as soon as demobilization plete. The decision as to the for the termination of the with the Attorney-General. there were over 1,000,000 me army.

FIGHTING IN RUSSIA. Repor ing London June 24 indicate eral Denikin's army, which making a rapid advance from pian toward the Volga, captu city of Tsaritsin. Denikin is to have freed 70,000 square to have captured 50,000 priso guns, 700 machine guns and 2 motives. By capturing Tsarits kin cut the Volga line of commu of the Bolshevists and separate from Donetz coal basin, the p source of fuel.

While the forces of the Siberia ernment at Omsk were held bac further offensive action and were to retire in some sectors by the materials of war, particularly airplanes and ammunition, the U ian peasant forces, under Petlur driving the Bolshevists before along the Dniester. Dispatc June 27 reported that the Ukr had occupied Odessa and Khers were practically in possession of American troops guarding t berian railway were in action week of June 28, losing two and several wounded, also some oners.

NITTI ITALIAN PREMIER. Facin siderable opposition in the Chamber of Deputies, Signor Fra Nitti, succeeded, on June 23, in fo a ministry in Italy to succeed the government of Orlando. Sr. T Tittoni accepted the portfolio of eign office and was appointed to the New Italian delegation to the Conference. Sr. Nitti, as Premier, the portfolio of the Interior. H that it was imperative for the he the government to remain in The Italian Cabinet was favorab the compromise of the Adriatic que proposed by the other members Big Four.

EARTHQUAKES KILL IN ITALY. E quakes in northern Italy on the of June 27 and 29 destroyed eight lages. 150 persons were reported in and near Florence and 100 other places. Several hundred injured.

AIR HEROES WELCOMED HOME. crews of the United States flying bo NC-1, NC-3 and NC-4, the latter first plane to cross the Atlantic its own power, reached New York the transport Zeppelin, on June 27, were received by five seaplanes, dirigible balloons and a score of and private vessels which went down harbor with relatives and friends.

TO REPEAL ZONE POSTAGE. Rep sentative Mondell of Wyoming, the publican House Leader, on June 27, troduced a bill proposing the repeal the zone postage rates and the resto tion of the flat rate on second-class m matter in force before the war reven bill of 1917 was passed.

RETURN WIRES AUGUST 1. The Co ference Committee, on June 24, report to the two Houses of Congress a b providing for the return of the teleph

Continued on page 775

CHRISTIAN UNITY WITHIN REACH

Eminent Spiritual Leaders Tell How It May Be Attained—The Only Barriers Those of Prejudice

THAT Christian Unity is a duty, that it is practicable and attainable, that it involves only the sacrifice of prejudices, not convictions, that it will confer immeasurable benefits on the world, and that the age demands a new definition of Christianity, are among the opinions expressed in the communications below, which have been sent to the Christian Herald by three of the great leaders in the evangelical churches of America. The denominations which they represent have a following aggregating many millions. Their combined presentation of the subject is in many respects the strongest and most convincing that has yet appeared.

Age Demands a New Definition of Christianity"

Prof. GEORGE W. RICHARDS, D.D.

, Pa., Theological Seminary of the Reformed Church in the United States.

E question at once arises: How much can a lenomination give up and how much must t keep in order to remain Christian? In other words, it is a matter of distinguishing itial from the non-essential, or the transient permanent, elements in Christianity. To ion-essentials would not be sacrifice; to give tials would be betrayal. Furthermore, the to separate essentials from non-essentials confusion, and may end in unjustifiable con- in the interest of Union for mere utilitarian o:.

are the essential, changeless, permanent elet Christianity? The many churches now in are both a result and an evidence of the lable differences of view of essential Christiane past. The founders and followers of each vere justified in their schism only because the rch was presumably patterned, a little more han any other, after the original Christianity lew Testament which it was designed to cond to propagate.

urse, the conception of essentials varied For one it was an institution, for another a , for a third a rite, for a fourth a spirit, as for Papacy or Episcopacy, Lutheranism, Calr Arminianism, believers' baptism by immernfant baptism by sprinkling, the inner light or ten Word. To maintain the one or the other institutions, doctrines, or rites, new churches ganized, each claiming superiority over the ecause of its closer kinship to Christ. If the s of these churches still hold the views of the ls of Christianity held by the founders, they consistently sacrifice institutional, doctrinal listic elements without playing false to their and even to their Christ. For to give up such ls would not only mar the visage of the but retard the progress of the Kingdom.

elieve, however, that the time has come when ns are prepared for a new definition of Chris- a definition which will as naturally lead to s the former conception led to division; a n also which has been slowly worked out in and thought out in theory. It has been felt in the trenches by the soldiers, and more discerned in the school by the scholar. es, therefore, will unite not so much by sacritheir distinctive characteristics as by outthem.

distinction is now made, as never before, beChristianity as life on the one hand, and as an tual and institutional expression of life on the The life consists of fellowship of men with d with one another in the spirit of Jesus Christ. ifests itself primarily in faith (trust) in a ke God, in hope in a Christlike God, in love hristlike God, and in cooperation of Christlike th a Christlike God for the realization of his m of holy love in the individual and national men. To use the words of the apostle, it is iope, and love, begotten by the Spirit of God 1 Christ in the human heart. Christianity is e, no less; this always and everywhere. It is ing spiritual, personal, divine, that throbs soul, flows in the blood, and issues from the of men.

n Christians learn to distinguish religion from y, the life of Christ in men from its transient t necessary forms of expression and modes of on, the Kingdom of God from ecclesiastical inns which are organs for its realization, then eed not sacrifice their denominational distinct one time considered essentials, but they will em aside because they have outgrown them. will have reached a new idea of Christianity as logically leads to union as the old led to as.

ave a Union of the churches, therefore, that is erely external, mechanical, and legalistic, but , organic, and spiritual, men must in some rough the discipline of life, through cooperamoral, social and missionary activity, through y investigation and profound reflection, h prayer and meditation—all of these conby the Spirit of Christ—find the eternal and sential elements of the Christian life which one can comprehend by faith, practice in love, ly attain through hope.

George W. Richards

"Benefits Immeasurable Lie in the Path of Unity"

By Rev. HUBERT C. HERRING, D.D.

Secretary of the National Congregational Council

SPEAKING in general terms, the Protestant churches of America have differed in organization and usage at five points:

1. The relation of the local church to the general body.
2. The nature and authority of the body constituting the chief unit of control.
3. The authority, function and title of officials of oversight.
4. The position of the denomination on the matter of an official creed.
5. The mode of observing the sacraments.

It is perfectly plain that there has been striking progress toward a common position on all these matters. Differences still exist. They are less real than are usually supposed. There are, for instance, no wide divergencies in actual practice between the Methodist, Congregational and Presbyterian communions either as to the freedom accorded the local church or the uniformly recognized obligation of that church to share in an orderly way the common tasks and larger life of the whole communion. In the same way the Presbytery, Association and Conference have moved toward one another in the actual handling of their tasks. The duties of bishop and superintendent are essentially identical, no matter how different they may be in technical definition. The denominations which retain an official creed are each endeavoring to give the largest possible liberty of thought within its bounds, while those which refuse to have a creed are increasingly inclined to make use of certain common symbols of their faith. Although inherited differences in the method of observing the sacraments continue, there is everywhere a willingness to minimize their significance.

All this constitutes an encouragement to press toward Unity. It furnishes a basis on which Unity can be established. It reveals the essential truth of positions supposed to be antagonistic. It is perfectly clear that the independently organized churches would need to accept some form of oversight. But they have already accepted it, and by so doing have shown their sense of the need of it. On the other hand, the churches which have a closely knit corporate life would be obliged to give to the local church a broader freedom than their formularies have recognized in the past. The churches which have an official creed would be obliged to make some change in their requirements of subscription. But this change has already been made in one degree or another. The churches which have no official creed would be expected, in a more specific way, to indicate their adherence to some agreed expression of the Christian faith. Most of them have already done this. As to the sacraments, the majority of the questions which center around this point will be solved by granting larger freedom. Others will disappear through an enlarged spirit of fraternity.

The outcome of the whole process will be, not the surrender of fundamental conviction, which is impossible for honest men, nor the loss of important values; but rather the abolition of technical distinctions and formal regulations, out of which all vital life has gone, and the turning of the total thought, power and prayer of the churches into the main channels of work and worship, whose boundaries are already clearly marked and in the main accepted. No sacrifices worth the mention are demanded. Benefits immeasurable lie in the path of unity. Each communion will gather to itself the accumulated riches of all the communions, and may in turn contribute to the common store its own precious heritage.

H C Herring

"If a League of Nations, Why Not a League of Churches?"

By Bishop JOHN W. HAMILTON

Chancellor of the American University (M. E.), Washington, D. C.

WHAT should we be willing to sacrifice for the sake of the Union of the denominations in a Church of Christ?

There is fascination in the thought and purpose of universal empire: there is irresistible attractiveness in the presence and power of union—"ten men, united in love, are capable of being and doing what ten thousand singly would fail in."

But such empire will only be possible when its subjects are all spiritual souls having spiritual discernment and when they unite voluntarily. That inheritance would be the Kingdom of Christ and of God. It is represented on the earth by the Christian Church. Its membership is invisible. All forms of the visible Church are but approaches to its fellowship.

The Great Head of the Church is constantly seeking the union of his disciples in this fellowship. The branches of the visible Church, which are not ready for the union, do not construe the Lord's prayer, "that all may be one," as favoring coalescence. It is far from manifest, however, that the prayer encourages the quality of separateness that now distinguishes their aloofness.

There is tendency in our day, in all directions, to a singular coalition: it is in the air, the world over. It will not brook the intrusion of prejudice, or unfriendly criticism. Doubtful interpretation of New Testament fellowship will not withstand this growing tendency. It is not reversion to the medieval combinations of "the Holy Roman Empire, too holy to be Roman and too Roman to be holy." But it is the drawing together of kindred communions "recognizing both the unity of the spirit of Christianity and the diversity of its forms," leaving room for "self-expression and self-realization in individual and national life."

It will not be expected that individual identities are to be sacrificed, as in the material combinations of chemical elements. There are Scriptural doctrines that will not be sacrificed for the sake of organic union or even federation. Theists and deists will never mix oil and water. Persons who believe their only justification and salvation is "by faith in a Christlike God" will not consent to forego this faith for one of reliance for salvation upon a mere manlike Christ. Other essentials there are. Methodists would scarcely be expected to coordinate with Mormons in any order of religious communion.

There must then be a religious consanguinity and an agreement upon essentials before a harmonious union is possible.

When shades of doctrine are no longer shadows through long travel into milder climates where the white truth reflects back the pure light under perpendicular sunshine, simply the heirdom of ancestral estates, having clouded titles, should no longer separate and isolate severally the legatees. Arminius and Calvin, for example, have long gone where time is no longer and space is infinite for them to have it out with their differences. Why therefore should Methodists and Presbyterians continue the litigation over their residuary estates? How much difference is there in our day between these denominations over questions of conditional election, universal redemption, salvation by grace, grace not irresistible, and even the falling from grace possible?

Where no differences of fundamentals exist, the sacrifice or compromise is reduced to forms of government with their traditions, ephemeral at best, modes of worship with preferences constantly changing, or where "practice is everything." If States are bound to find some way to a League of Nations, is it not possible for communions to make a way to a League of Churches? Or must they continue only to tithe mint and rue and all manner of herbs, and pass over judgment and the love of God? The determining factor in agreement is to be found in unmistakable membership in the invisible Church.

Let us take time, then, as Dr. Richards has said, "to work out a formula of doctrine, a system of government, a mode of worship and a way of life which will be true to the Christ of the New Testament, to the Christ in us, and to the democratic spirit of the age."

John W. Hamilton

"THE STARS AND STRIPES"

The Newspaper of the American Expeditionary Forces

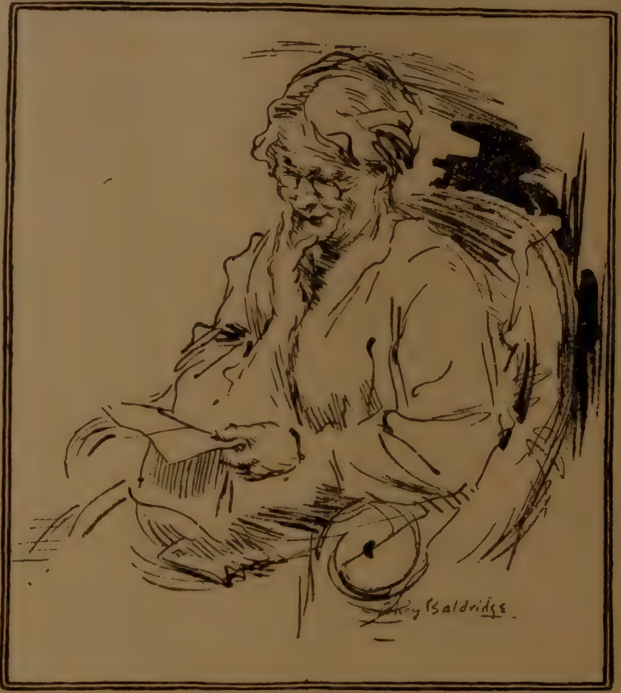
By MARGARET E. SANGSTER

A SOLDIER on duty in a foreign land needs many things that would not, by the uninitiated, be called essentials. Food and clothing, a reasonable amount of water to wash in, and a moderately clean place in which to sleep would be called essentials. Bodily comfort and physical warmth would be considered necessary—personal cleanliness would be advocated. And so on.

To the aforementioned uninitiated the above qualifications would seem quite sufficient. A man with enough food and clothing can get along—can exist. But he cannot live—really live unless he has mental comfort and mental warmth and mental cleanliness to back up those physical conditions.

Mental comfort, mental warmth, and mental cleanliness—they are usually attained and kept in just three ways. The first of the three is by the chain that holds the soldier to his home and his loved ones; the second is by personal contact with real people, and the third is by news—regular news given regularly and in no small quantities.

To the soldier fighting in a trench and to the other soldier who, after the armistice, fought another battle in some isolated town, the first two solutions weren't always accessible. The letters that formed the links in the chain that bound him to his home often went astray—sometimes were months in arriving, and sometimes never arrived. And the real people who had gone to do welfare work Over Seas were not always in evidence in the danger zones, or in the very far places. News was often the only thing that stood between the soldier and absolute mental loneliness. And that news was supplied to them by a newspaper which is today rated as the most successful measure toward keeping up the morale of the American army—The Stars and Stripes, official organ of the A. E. F.



"MOTHER'S LETTER"
Drawn by LeRoy Baldridge for the "Stars and Stripes"

THE Stars and Stripes was started on February 8, 1918, by a little group of men who could see very much farther than most men. The moving spirit in the enterprise was one Captain Guy T. Visnifski, the head of a certain large newspaper syndicate in New York City. About him he gathered men with journalistic ability—some from small papers in Middle Western towns, some from the great magazines of the great cities. His first staff included Lieutenant Grantland Rice, poet and sporting writer, and four other officers with newspaper experience—Lieutenants Ayers, Ochs, Michaels and Wilson. But as the work progressed and the paper grew these officers were almost entirely replaced by enlisted men—making it unique in the history of army-controlled enterprises. The editor of the paper was a buck private, Thomas Ross by name; and the entire printing, editing, and distributing were done by enlisted men.

The Stars and Stripes was published once a week—on Friday. It sold for fifty centimes (about ten cents) and was a regular-sized newspaper of eight pages that contained not only the from all parts of the wo planations and informatio ders from General Headq affected either directly o the fighting, work, or cond officers or men in the Ame

Perhaps the most ex feature of the Stars and St editorial page. It contain columns of splendid edito as an enlisted man who w graduate told me, were re cause of their simple styl guage. "Any one who rea torials could understand said; "they were written d comprehension of the m cated man in the army, and big enough to please the Besides the two columns o the same page contained a poetry, contributed by the published on merit alone columns of letters, humo otherwise, from any man something worth while to w

There was a sporting pag paper for men would be without a sporting page! B teresting to know that d summer and autumn of 1918 was discontinued. The charge of the paper were una deciding that our soldiers we fighting and dying for their that no page in their own ne should be given up to the pr ing of professional athletes not fighting with them.

Of the printed matter in and Stripes it would be har enough complimentary thi came, mostly, from men w or had been in action—me branches of the service from ports and the S. O. S. to the f troops. It published bits cross-sections of home-hungry hearts. As the foreword of book of verse published by t and Stripes said:

"These have all been published in the Stars and Stripes, the official ne of the American Expeditionary Forces. They have come in from the back areas, the ports; they have been written on the eve of battle; the wrote some of them have paid the great price. They are the heart and sou American Army in France. It is their only claim to distinction. It is eno

In telling the story of the Stars and Stripes it would be little short of to pass the staff artists without a word of recognition and appreciation. Baldridge, once of Leslie's Weekly, and Albian Wallgren are names known and loved by every man who has had a part in the war. Baldridge pictures that came out on the editorial or the front page of the paper—W did the half sheet of vividly American cartoons that were the feature of the ing page. Wallgren caught the spirit of the American doughboy as n artist ever could catch it—he was one of them in spirit as well as in actu

Continued on page 775

"Shelling Is Shocking"—a "Stars and Stripes" cartoon

POW ZOWIE
BOWIE
WHILE ACTUALLY UNDER FIRE, IT REALLY DOESN'T BOTHER YOU MUCH, - BUT AFTER —
?
SNAP
—WHEN SOME ONE FLAPS A BLANKET IN BACK OF YOU
OH MOIDER! - ITS GOT ME - ITS GOT ME - ITS GOT ME!!!
IMAGINARY SHELL
HEY, YOU BOOB - GERROUTA TH' WAY!
WHEE-EE.
BUZZ KLANK
BUMP
—WHEN A TRUCK BUZZES UP SUDDENLY BEHIND YOU.
OW-OO!
WHUT TH - ?
BLANG
JANG
KLANG
—WHEN A MESS GEAR CRASHES IN THE SILENCE OF THE NIGHT.
LORDY, EVERY TIME ONE UH THEM SHELLS GO OFF I THINK ITS A BLOWOUT' BOW
—WHEN A TIRE BLOWS OUT.
WOW!
POP
?
—WHEN A CORK POPS. - (VERY SELDOM) (SHRAPNEL?)
KLANG
HAW!
—WHEN YOUR HELMET RINGS THE ALARM.

PIRITUAL AND PHYSICAL REVIVAL AT OCEAN GROVE

OCEAN GROVE has a great program this summer. The season at this religious resort promises to make a record in attendance. One of the features of the Grove which is emphasized more and more is its broad appeal to the spiritually minded of all denominations. This year, loyalty to Christ and country will be a dominant note in vices. Mingling in the big audiences at the acle, the Temple and the surf gatherings are ho represent at least a score of nations; for all find a warm ical Gospel preached, and all he services.

hing services began at the on June 22, the opening sermon y Rev. Charles L. Mead, D.D., ver, Colo., Dr. F. Watson Han- f Drew Theological Seminary, the evening meeting. Dr. has charge of the Young Peo- eeting during the entire season. ss meetings are conducted by E. L. Hyde, of Philadelphia; meetings are held at the foot an Pathway Sunday evenings at lock. Sunday afternoon meet- the North End Pavilion at 4 are led by James F. Mohn, and in the South End Pavilion by gelist E. L. Hyde.

se regular services, however, are a part of the great variety of ual features at the famous old er camp. The Auditorium Bible es will have the popular Evan- L. W. Munhall, as leader. The Seaside Bible rence, August 3 to 10, is also led by Dr. Mun- There will be a notable series of lectures on ual topics, with such well-known speakers as James M. Gray of the Moody Bible Institute, go; Dr. M. J. Kyle, Dr. Charles Roads, Bishop Neely, Rev. T. W. McKinney, D. D., and Dr. Sloan. The Woman's Christian Temperance n has its annual session, beginning July 16, and Vomen's Foreign and Home Missionary Societies July 28 to August 3.

dependence Day has always been a red letter Day at the Grove. This year it was a day marked by the eloquence of many notable speakers, including Hon. William N. Runyon, Governor of New Jersey, who delivered the oration, followed by patriotic addresses by Willard J. Hamilton and Hon. Edward C. Stokes.

July 5 witnessed the beginning of concerts and song recitals, at some of which Anna Case, the celebrated singer, was a leading figure. At the grand concert on July 8, Homer A. Rodeheaver and Robert Matthews had leading parts. On July 12, the third grand concert will be given by a quartet of Metropolitan stars, including Marie Rappold, soprano, Rafaello Diaz, tenor, Arthur Middleton, baritone, and Mary Marsh, contralto.

The Boardwalk, Ocean Grove

July 16 will witness the W. C. T. U. services in the Temple, at which Dr. Anna Howard Shaw is to be speaker. On the following day, the first of a series of illustrated travelogues will be given in the auditorium by Lowell Thomas, the subject being Allenby's conquest of Palestine. These living pictures will attract large audiences.

On August 22 will come the crowning feature of the year, the great Camp Meeting, which is always marked by an ingathering of souls, and which will close on Labor Day. It is hoped that Evangelist W. A. Sunday may be able to be present and take part in these stirring services.

The program includes many other attractive features that will delight those who love these gatherings. Children's Day, July 20, will not be forgotten. There will be a forenoon talk to the boys and girls by Rev. R. F. T. Pierce, New York, and in the evening a Children's Festival, conducted by Mrs. James William Marshall, music, uplifting movies, and other inspirational features.

July 31 is celebrated as Jubilee Day in the Tabernacle in the afternoon, and will include processions to Founder's Park and services under the trees. In the evening there will be an auditorium celebration of the fiftieth anniversary of Ocean Grove, and also one in honor of the building of the first auditorium, twenty-five years ago.

Among the prominent visitors who will be present and take part in the various exercises at the Grove during the season will be Bishop Joseph F. Berry, of Philadelphia, Edward S. Ninde, D. D., of Germantown, Rev. A. Edwin Keigwin, of New York, Rev. Cortland Myers, Boston, Rev. E. E. Helms, of Philadelphia, Rev. F. A. De Maris and Rev. Floyd W. Tompkins, D. D., rector of Holy Trinity Church, Philadelphia. Many eminent lecturers, singers and travelers will contribute to the entertainments, giving a variety which has not been equaled in the palmiest days of the Grove.

Every succeeding summer seems to increase the fascination which Ocean Grove possesses for the religious world. Here the rich and poor may come together and listen to the best preaching and the best music, and have a good, uplifting time generally. In its spiritual features, the Grove keeps up to the old standard, and thousands of victories have been won through prayer and consecration at its gatherings. This year, as in every summer, the close of the season will be celebrated with "a march around Jerusalem," which in itself is an event that would repay a visit. A few days later will witness the formal closing.

Mary Barton Cookman.

Bolshevism and the Sunday School

HE fight of Bolshevism is not alone for supremacy in the world of today. The leaders are after the future. They believe in the principle enun- ed by Dr. John R. Mott, "What you would have ear in the life of today you must first put into the olroom." They propose to train a generation in r principles.

Russia the Bolshevists have opened 9,500 free ols since they came into power. In those schools students are supported gratis, and the principles Bolshevism are taught.

o come closer home, these schools have been inau- ated in different cities of the country. In New k City, as elsewhere, Socialist schools have been intained for many years, teaching atheism and so- istic theories, and it is out of these schools that ny of the Socialist leaders and workers of today e come. But it is only recently that these schools e taken on new meaning and become a menace to American institutions because of their extension the emphasis they place upon the Lenine doc- nes.

n New York City, fifteen such schools are in ekly operation, and there is an announced plan to end them to every assembly district of the city. teen hundred boys and girls from five to seventeen rs of age are being taught in these Sunday schools, ording to the New York Tribune, to "abhor na- al institutions; to idolize Lenine, Trotzky, Rosa emburg and others of their kind; to live up to the tto 'We ourselves,' and to regard as heroes men m the United States government has seen fit to d to prison."

one of these classes, the reporter states, the cher told his pupils that Theodore Roosevelt was a great man, but that Jean Jaurès was; that the at war was an unrighteous war of conquest, but t revolutionary wars were right and democratic. the same class young children talked precociously manifestoes, proletarians, the bourgeoisie and ision of labor. They quoted Karl Marx as glibly the normal child speaks of "The Swiss Family Robinson" or "Little Women." They showed their keen sympathy for the forces of anarchy and Bolshevism. Teachers for these classes are trained every Wednesday night at the Rand School by a Mr. Slavsky, who outlines the movement as "libertarian, free from prejudices, and designed to counteract the sinister influences brought to bear on the children in church and school."

These teachers are avowed Socialists and Bolsheviki.

To indicate the method for spreading Socialism through the training of a generation to these homes, he says: "We are teaching Socialism pure and simple to our pupils here. We don't believe in scientific and theoretical Socialism, but the practical brand. I have come from Russia, where I suffered greatly. I know what I am talking about. The children who come to our classes get the truth without any amelioration. We take up current questions with them, and as soon as they graduate from the kindergarten we train them to be good Socialists."

From the stenographer's report of a session in one of these schools I quote: "Teacher: 'Take the case of Roosevelt! The papers were full of him when he died and now we hear nothing about him. That is not the way with a really great man, like Jaurès. . . . All the moderate Socialists see now that only by revolution can permanent good be effected. . . . What crime is there in being a Bolshevist? You are not ashamed of yourselves for being Bolshevists, are you?'

"Pupils: 'No, we stand for ourselves. We are not ashamed.'

"Teacher: 'It's because Eugene Debs fought against capitalists that they put him in prison."

I have before me the outlines of nineteen lessons by Bertha Matthews Fraser published by the Children's Socialist Schools Committee, Local Kings County Socialist Party, showing the derivation of things necessary for the support of life, the relation of labor to these, contrasts between the working and leisure class as to food, clothing and housing, reasons from the Socialist viewpoint of the inequality of distribution, and the remedy for this inequality. The effect of the contrasts made is naturally to create sharp class antagonism. The remedy suggested in the last lesson is stated: "If we are to escape from the irksome and slavish conditions imposed by the capitalist class, we must create such conditions as will make it impossible for them to appropriate the fruits of the labor of the working class" . . . to make "land and the machinery of production the collective property of the entire people. This Socialism proposes to do."

At the Boston Road Socialist Sunday school recently, a child of not over six years recited these lines, after which the class of 200, all children, joined in the "hymn":

> "A Socialist I am indeed,
>   The name I'm proud to own;
> I've got rebellion in my heart,
>   It's bred in flesh and bone.
> If you could know why I rebel,
>   Just ope your eyes and see
> My countless brothers suffering
>   The ills that need not be.
>
> A rebel I will be!
>   A rebel I will be!
> As long as man shall man exploit
>   On either side the sea.
> While right upon the scaffold lies
>   And wrong upon the throne,
> I'll be a blooming rebel—
>   A rebel to the bone!"

The Sunday school with its membership of 35,000,000 and a world-wide organization is the most important single agency at hand to shape and transform individual character and to make the code of morals of tomorrow. Its three million volunteer teachers are the agents in every land to create right thinking, right character and right relationships.

Frank L. Brown.

Walking with Jesus

A SERMON BY REV. CHARLES W. BAXTER*

TEXT. Matt. 19:20. "What lack I yet?"

THIS is the question that the rich young man asked our Lord, and it is a question that every Christian should consider seriously. It devolves upon us as Christians to examine our lives daily in order that we may determine just what is lacking in them. We shall readily see that we lack several things, but we usually include under that head worldly matters and think of them as essential to life. We must get away from the worldly point of view and dwell upon the things that are necessary for us to be followers of Jesus Christ.

To be a Christian is to be like Christ, and therefore we must think of ourselves as being Christlike, that we may understand just what we lack and see what the text might mean.

Every Christian must realize that he or she is part of the Kingdom of God on earth. The fight to make the world safe for Christianity is our slogan, and we are privates in that vast army of the Church Militant which is ever waging war against the powers of Satan and the forces of wickedness. "Seek ye first the Kingdom of God and his righteousness." If this be our aim, then let us see what may be hindering us from accomplishing this worthy purpose.

We may find ourselves lacking in three ways. First, there is a lack of purpose; second, there is a lack of faith; and third, there is a lack of vision.

WHAT is the purpose of the Church? There are no doubt ideas among Church leaders today that take up or emphasize certain phases of this question. Some think that the church must create social centers in order to be successful; others consider that the Church must try to better society by its leavening influence. Again, you will find individuals who believe that her services must be made attractive and pleasing to the masses, and that the Church should be as a place to go not merely on Sunday, but also on week days.

These are all good purposes, but none would convince a man on the street as to the need of a Church. There may be good in such answers, and there is some good in them; but to get at the real purpose of the Church, we must recall our Lord's command to the apostles, "Go ye, therefore, and teach all nations, baptizing them in the Name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost." The purpose of the Church is to make Christians. So you and I have something more to do than merely to attend public worship on certain fixed occasions. It means that we must begin this work in our own homes, among those under the same roof that shelters us. It is our duty to cultivate an interest in our brothers, sisters, parents and kin, and bring them to have a better realization of God as their Father and of Jesus as their Saviour.

It means that if they are not walking along the right path in life, we are somewhat responsible and partly to blame. It is so easy to neglect those that live with us. We are, in a very real sense, our brother's keeper.

It is the duty of parents to teach their children the Christian truths and make them disciples and followers of Jesus Christ. Parents may send their children to Sunday school, but they should go with them and should not fail to go to church; for when the children grow to the adult age they will feel that they have finished their Christian education. They will in the end merely send their children to Sunday school instead of taking them, as parents ought to do.

"What lack I yet?" That is the question we should ask ourselves after we have done what we think is expected of us. The purpose of the Christian Church is a very wide one, viz.: "to make disciples of all nations." Each has a part in this great work, and we can start in our own home first. After finding our brothers and sisters of the home and bringing them to Christ, let our work extend to our community, neighborhood, and town. The job is not likely to be finished in our lifetime, but we must finish the work that the Father has given us to do.

EVEN children can be valuable workers in the task outlined. How often do we hear of them leading their parents to church! The mother is the patient worker in most homes, who steadily and with little thanks makes her children disciples of the Master. There are also fathers who go with their children to church, and their presence in the house of God impresses the children. Thus, small lives are molded in Christian character.

When we have considered the purpose of the Church, we can realize what we lack. Not only do we have a certain purpose and responsibility, but we should remind others of the tremendous task.

Dr. Hodges in his valuable book, "Christianity Between Weekdays," says: "Men must see our good works; then we may expect them to glorify our divine Master, and our Father which is in heaven. Wherever the Christian religion has ceased to be helpful, men have ceased to believe in it; and justly, because there it has ceased to be Christian. But, wherever Christianity has been able to bid men look, as Jesus Christ did, and see the sorrows of the world comforted, and the wounds of the world bound up, and the good news of the Gospel carried, with light and hope in it, to the hearts of the poor, there the Church has won allegiance, and will win allegiance."

PERHAPS we may find it difficult at first to use our faith in things spiritual. Have you ever tried to imagine yourself living nearer Christ? Have you ever tried to picture yourself walking by his side? Think of it! Walking by the side of Jesus! What would you do? How would you act? Imagine the Saviour being with you in your daily life! Can you think of the effect it would have upon your life? Peter, James and John were with him frequently. Consider what the Scripture narrates about how his influence spread through them. So we must think of Christ as being by our side, walking with us; listening to our conversation, knowing our thoughts, sharing our joys and bearing our sorrows.

Would you change your language or your habits if you knew that our Lord was near you? There would be more attention paid to prayer and to Christian acts if we could have Jesus as our daily companion. Our lives would be literally transformed.

The powers of sin, Satan and death are strong in their formations. We must be arrayed against them with all the faculties we possess. Let us seek to attain better conditions, and then connect the thought with a practical result. He who is our Helper will make it possible for us to reach the goal. Then the way will be easy for us to show to others who may be b the struggle.

Each one of us stands every day, separate a from all our companions, in the plain sight actually and absolutely responsible to him that we do or say. By and by is the judgmen all souls shall meet the Judge and give sole count of themselves.

THE Bible tells of certain men, prophets, ki apostles, having visions. It was not mer leaders who saw visions. In some instances t mon people also had this experience. Ever steeped in sin saw visions of warning and adm God still communicates with man. We talk to prayer. Shall he not answer us? We are apt fuse visions with dreams. The dreamer is o lazily pictures something beautiful and fanci self a very prominent figure playing an im part in some event. Most of our dreams come result of thoughts firmly fixed in the mind. pass, leaving practically no effect on the life dreamer. A dream may even lessen ambitio endeavor. But the vision is the result of sea well as thought. It brings to us something bea and wonderful, and inspiring, and we can make the vision. A plan may be conceived which affect the whole after life. When the dream finished his dream he is no better off than b sometimes not as well. The world can get alon well without the dreamer, but it needs men of

The Old Testament tells of such men as I Jeremiah, Ezekiel and Solomon, as men who visions. These visions were studied and from something real was achieved. It was the res conscientious work. They meditated much; lived nearer to God than most people did at that and he inspired them, guided them, gave them sages.

There is a lack of vision today. Many Chris are apparently asleep. They see and realize no of the great ideals that are attainable, perhaps w their immediate reach. They are tossed about and there by every wind of this world. They be perfunctory in their worship and likewise in duties.

We should meditate and strive to bring ours to live nearer God. It is by prayer, meditation communion with the Father that we receive his sages. It is by reverent and conscientious thoug him that we may live nearer him. And by li nearer him, we are assured in his Word that he tell us to do what he wants us to do.

Jesus Christ commanded his apostles to teach. the one hundred and twenty gathered together on day of Pentecost, the Holy Spirit came with po Before his ascension Jesus said: "Ye shall be nesses unto me." That means that the laity as as the clergy are to be witnesses of Christ.

We are not merely to follow him, but to be like h We must exemplify his life. We are to be living nesses of Jesus. Four men wrote the Gospels. T were his biographers. You and I need not write life, for we would write from the records of oth But we can manifest that life, and it will be our int pretation of his Gospel.

What kind of a life are you declaring it to Compare it with the four Gospels and then ask yo self, "What lack I yet?"

---

*Vicar, St. James' Episcopal Church, Marshall, Minn.

SONNETS FROM PARIS By Margaret E. Sangster

SUNDAY MORNING

THE streets are silent, and the church bells ring
Across the city like the silver chime
Of some forgotten memory. They bring
The phantom of another, sweeter time,
When war was all undreamed. They seem to say,
"Come back, come back, across the year's of strife
"To One who reaches out a Hand today,
"A Hand that brings your dead again to life!"

A little white-haired woman hurries past,
A tiny prayer-book in one wrinkled hand;
Her eyes are calm, as one who knows at last
What only age may really understand;
That, as a rainbow creeps across the rain,
The God of Paris smiles above its pain!

AFTER PEACE

THE city thrills once more to joyous singing;
Glad laughter sounds again upon the street,
And music throbs again, until young feet
Trip merrily upon their way; the ringing
Of hour chimes are gallant voices, flinging
Their challenge through each crowded space, to greet Old friends who linger where they used to meet With other friends long gone. . . . The summer, bringing

The light of peace, has seemed to fill the city,
With happiness that echoes far and wide
In sounds of joy; there seems no room for sorrow—
Yet, like a minor chord submersed in pity,
There steals above the music of tomorrow,
The weary footsteps of the ones who died.

SUNLIGHT

THE sun shines over Paris fitfully,
As if it really were afraid to shine;
And clouds of gray mist curl and twist and twine
Across the sky. As far as one can see
The streets are wet with rain, and suddenly
New rain falls in a straight, relentless line—
And silver drops, like needles, slim and fine,
Drip from the branches of each gaunt-limbed tree.

Ah, Paris, can the very wistful sky
Look down into the center of your heart,
That has been bruised by war, and torn apart—
The once glad heart that has been taught to sigh?
The sun is like your smile that flutters by Like some lost dream, before the tear-drops start.

HE CREED WE LEARNED IN FRANCE

By a Croix de Guerre Man of the Famous Rainbow Division

A GREAT many people, correspondents, investigators and others trained in the observation of humanity in bulk, have returned from Europe in the past year with various ideas, f them strange and curious, as to just what we ved on the battlefields of France got out of the the way of religion.

nally I don't believe that the American soldier, it, got religion as it is generally construed at all is, he did not "hit the sawdust trail," nor did licly proclaim his redemption from the paths of he good old camp-meeting style.

nan, however, could possibly have gone through ething caldron "Over There" without acquiring ing. However, to me it seemed that this some- was a larger and broader Christianity—a sort of rhood whose one and perhaps only law was the Rule.

ds and doctrines were for the most part for- on the field. Protestant, Jew and Catholic or died side by side with no thought save of g each as best he might, not only God and y, but also his fellow man. Under fire at the they were united against one common foe. In ar when danger was passed this same unity ued, but against many foes—against selfish- lasphemy, drunkenness, social evils, and the n learned that to be a soldier in the truest sense word it was not necessary to be a loud-swearing, ious braggart, the embodiment of all un-Chris- ke qualities; and a new standard was borne on fields of death and suffering. The man who had his companions fall, who had come near to the me sacrifice himself, was imbued with a different sort of spirit than that which has usually and unfortunately been attributed to the soldier.

Orders and regulations for our government were many, their enforcement was necessarily strict; and prompt punishment awaited the delinquent. No less prompt and infinitely more sure was the punishment afforded him who violated the higher order—the greatest command ever imposed upon man—"Whatsoever ye would that men should do unto you, even so do ye unto them."

The army held men of every nationality—of all races and tongues; many had probably never even heard or read this wonderful command, but evidences of its power and influence were everywhere. The deeds of personal heroism which were of daily and ofttimes almost hourly occurrence—things such as the many rescues of wounded comrades in the face of deadly machine-gun fire—all were but the expressions of belief in the universal doctrine proclaiming "man's brotherhood to man"; and, being such, were of much greater value to the illiterate and unread than any printed or spoken word.

For weeks at a time our only opportunity for open worship was at the burial service of some fallen comrade. The chaplains could but seldom assemble more than a score of men together for divine services, and, under such conditions, it would seem but natural that, when the scattered units of a regiment were assembled, the response to "church call" would be but meager. This was not the case, however. All who were not actually on guard or at work unfailingly attended service. Those who at home in their comfortable, well-heated homes, with roofs over their heads and four walls to protect them from the elements, who on a showery Sabbath felt no desire and no sense of duty to attend their church, now stood reverently in the open shell-torn fields, more often than not in a never ceasing, cold, drizzling rain, and found no discomfort too great, no hardship too difficult, to endure, that they might give thanks to Him who had guided them safely through the "valley of the shadow of death."

The public assemblage for worship with its attendant ritual was not so necessary for us: for each man day by day was living a Christian life in the finest sense of the word in that he was heedless of any danger, indifferent to any hardship or risk in the service of his fellow man. Even as we had a unity of command, so had we a unity of creed and race, each merged into the one, and that one pledged to God, country and true Christian brotherhood.

As our most famous chaplain once remarked, "There was scarcely any time for praying, what with dodging shells and reading one's shirt." But such time as there was for prayer was utilized by a far larger number of men than the casual observer realized; nor was there any self-consciousness such as we are all familiar with at home.

Contrary to many of our popular novelists, men did not drop down on their knees under fire and in times of great danger and pray to their Maker for relief and guidance; but a vast majority did sincerely, though silently, commune with God each night of their lives, commending themselves to him and asking protection and strength.

Somehow the Church will reach these men—they have returned as earnest seekers for Truth—they have a real need—a real desire to learn—to know. But they will not accept a more narrow doctrine—a more conventional dogmatic religion, than they learned "Over There"—whose creed is the Golden Rule.

The Boy Scout As a Mechanical Farmer

© Gilliam's Service

Boy Scouts and their tractor

IF YOU have a Boy Scout in the family, put him on a tractor. It will serve as an outlet for the tireless energy with which the young man is imbued and prove both interesting and instructive. It will also yield a substantial return to you in production and he boy in health. For, with a record of n seventy-five to eighty bushels of corn duced by each of their 120 acres, corn ch was characterized by the Maryland icultural Experiment Station as "the est yield per acre and the best grade of corn this ion has ever seen," the Boy Scout bids fair to ke the most learned graduate of our agricultural eges look well to his laurels.

Three hundred acres of land in Potomac Park, shington, were placed at the disposal of the Boy uts of America during the "Feed a Soldier" camgn last summer. This was remade land, reclaimed m a riverside swamp and kept in place by a stone ll. The soil itself, though full of stumps, was rich l black, the sort of soil on which everything, includ- weeds, found no difficulty in sprouting.

The Scout has the largest content of enthusiasm d industry per square inch of any known people, t no amount of enthusiasm, even though combined th patriotism, ambition and hard work, can over- me the difficulties presented by a three-hundred- re track of fertile soil. Plows, disk and spring tooth rrows, seeders and cultivators were needed. Horses re especially hard to obtain, due to the heavy draft ied by four years of war upon the equine population the United States.

These difficulties appeared at first to be insur- ntable, but the Scouts are essentially progressive, this quality provided a solution.

The answer was, secure a tractor.

prominent manufacturer of farming tractors was pealed to. His answer was to load a machine in an press car, together with the plows, harrows and er necessary machinery; the express car was ached to a passenger train, and shortly afterward tractor was in operation on the Boy Scouts' farm. answered the cry for help, needed no rest, worked er, ate not when at rest, furnished power to plow p and quick, and was not stopped by hard ground, weather or flies.

Six horses at least would have been required for the duct of the farm, if their acquisition had been possible, which was doubtful. This would have meant also the erection of a suitable stable, the purchase of harness and equipment, of hay and oats, an initial expenditure of perhaps three thousand dollars, besides requiring the services of several boys in their care and maintenance. Even after the farm had become productive and the necessity for purchasing feed passed, the horses would have required the product of at least thirty acres annually for their subsistence, and at the price received by the boys for their corn this would have resulted in a distinct loss of sixteen hundred dollars.

The greatest success of the farm was not in the fact that the boys produced a huge crop and contributed so generously to the success of the "Feed a Soldier" campaign, but in the boys themselves. Few of them had ever been on a farm save in the capacity of visitors. The land they came to farm was covered with stumps, there was a long month of plowing, a constant battle with the weeds, which seemed to grow in a sort of endless chain formation, for as fast as one was pulled up another took its place as though having been waiting but for an outlet to the open air to be provided.

The real success was in the boys themselves, in the remarkable physical development with which they returned to their homes after the summer's work. They had performed a real and valuable service for their country and for their organization, and in addition to this went forth spreading the modern propaganda of labor saving and of horse and human power conservation on the farm.

As one goes on in years it becomes increasingly hard to turn from the old-time proven methods. "Horses were good enough for grandfather, why not for me?" These boys demonstrated the fallacy of such arguments, proving in a most conclusive manner that the tractor on a modern farm is a labor and money saving necessity. They demonstrated as well that no mechanical expertness is required in its operation; the boy of twelve can run a tractor as efficiently and will probably exercise more care in its maintenance than the man of forty, and they proved that a tractor does make for larger and better crops.

GARNER PALMER.

◆

A Self-Governing Store

THE big store of Filene Brothers in Boston has about all the outstanding features of a democracy. The sales organization, consisting of over 2,000 salespeople, votes on the questions of extra time off, hours of work, and conditions under which they shall work. Four delegates from the association of employees sit with the directors of the firm in their regular meetings, and thus have an opportunity to learn all about the inner workings of the business.

These Boston young people get a minimum salary, plus percentages and bonuses and prizes for suggestions, that enable them to make good pay. They are as keen to roll up big sales as the firm, for they know they will have a share in the profits and a say in what shall be done. These "junior partners" study the ads of their own store, likewise the ads of rival firms. At the noon hour they often go scouting around town to see what they can learn from other stores. They use brains, hands, feet, and all there is in them to sell goods, please their customers and build up trade.

The employees of this store are organized into a cooperative association, governed by a council of delegates from the various divisions, who in turn choose the officers. Nearly 15,000 square feet of floor space on the eight floor have been set aside by the firm for the use of the association. At the present time the association handles over $100,000 a year in its various activities, all of which comes from the members in the form of dues and is used for mutual benefit.

This unique organization touches life at every point. However, the great outstanding feature is that they actually decide by a voting system many of the vexatious questions hitherto decided arbitrarily by the management. A board of arbitration, consisting of twelve members elected from each section of the store, and a chairman appointed from the council by the chairman, insures a square deal to all.

This board settles all disputes between an employee and the management, and between employees. In every instance where the employees have been allowed to vote on questions affecting the general welfare of the business, they have made decisions that have been heartily approved by the firm. Self-government has been tried out in this store for eighteen years, and the Filene Brothers say it is a success.

A. S. GREGG.

CHANSUNG'S CONFESSION

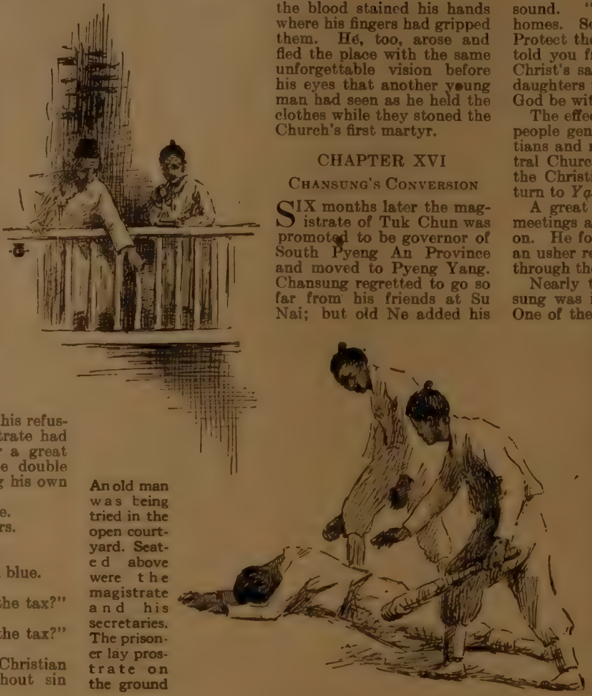
By WILLIAM NEWTON BLAIR, D.D. Illustrations by Thelma Gooch

CHAPTER XV

In the Magistrate's Office

HAN CHANSUNG, or Ne Chansung as his Tuk Chun friends knew him, sat at the magistrate's left, biting his secretarial pen with a vigor that showed he was not enjoying the scene before him.

The school in Su Nai having been closed for lack of funds and pupils, Chansung had accepted a position as secretary to his honor Kim Sangjo, magistrate of Tuk Chun County.



An old man was being tried in the open courtyard. Seated above were the magistrate and his secretaries. The prisoner lay prostrate on the ground

And the scene: an old man was being tried in the open courtyard. Seated above were the magistrate and his secretaries. The prisoner lay prostrate on the ground. On each side of him were the magistrate's runners, or policemen, dressed in official blue. The charge against the prisoner was his refusing to pay a tax which his honor the magistrate had ordered, that funds might be provided for a great sacrifice in the Tuk Chun temple, with the double purpose of placating heaven and advertising his own virtue.

"What is your name?" asks the magistrate.

"What is your name?" thunder the runners.

"Pak Chonghe," answers the prisoner.

"What is your age?" asks the magistrate.

"What is your age?" repeat the runners in blue.

"Sixty-two," responds the prisoner.

"What do you mean by refusing to pay the tax?" growls the magistrate.

"What do you mean by refusing to pay the tax?" yell the runners at the prisoner's head.

"I have refused to pay it because I am a Christian and cannot have part in idol sacrifice without sin against God."

"What!" storms the magistrate; "do you defy me? Would you teach me what is right and what is wrong? Take him out and give him twenty blows and let's see if his conscience is as deep as his skin."

Old Pak is dragged without ceremony to an adjoining yard. His hands are tied behind him and his lower garments removed. Lying on his face, he receives twenty resounding blows with the bamboo paddle on his legs above the knees. Clothed again, but with the fresh bloodstains showing through his padded trousers, he is led once more before the waiting court.

"Now, then," says his honor, "I hope you have learned some sense. Because you are an old man, I will reduce your tax one-half. Do you agree to pay?"

The runners repeat and the prisoner answers: "Have mercy, sir; I am a poor, ignorant man, but I believe in Jesus and cannot sacrifice to idols."

"What!" yells the magistrate; "are you obstinate still? Evidently the medicine was not strong enough. Take the scoundrel out and give him twenty more blows."

Whack! whack! twenty times goes the bamboo on the bruised legs, and once more old Pak is dragged before the court.

"We have had enough of this nonsense," says the magistrate sternly. "I know you are old and poor; but we cannot allow rebellion even in a beggar. I will have mercy on you and reduce your tax to five nyang. Will you pay now, or shall I have you beaten once more?"

"Oh," groans the wretched man, "have mercy upon me! I am as good as dead already."

The magistrate seems moved. "Well, then agree to pay this small amount and I will let you go."

But the answer comes back from the ground: "I cannot, I cannot, for I am a Christian."

The magistrate hesitates; but it would never do to let rebellion win. With something like a groan, he turns to the runners and orders the prisoner beaten once more.

Again the court waits in silence while the blows fall. Once more the old man is half dragged, half carried to his position at the bar. The magistrate makes his final effort. In his gruffest tones he calls, "Will you give in now; you fool, or shall I kill you?"

The runners neglect to repeat and await the answer from the half dead man. Feebly it comes: "Though I die, I cannot. May God help me!"

With an oath the magistrate springs to his feet. "I can do nothing with an obstinate dog like this. Take him out and send him home." And his honor fairly flees to his room.

As for Chansung, his face was pale as death, and the blood stained his hands where his fingers had gripped them. He, too, arose and fled the place with the same unforgettable vision before his eyes that another young man had seen as he held the clothes while they stoned the Church's first martyr.

CHAPTER XVI

Chansung's Conversion

SIX months later the magistrate of Tuk Chun was promoted to be governor of South Pyeng An Province and moved to Pyeng Yang. Chansung regretted to go so far from his friends at Su Nai; but old Ne added his advice to the governor's urging, and Chansung consented.

Synopsis of Preceding Chapters

IN THE Korean village of Tai Pyeng Dong (the Village of Great Peace) Han Chansung lived with his young wife Choonwha ("Spring Flower") in the house of his father, Han Chanho, the village elder. During the absence of Chanho, Chansung in a moment of sudden anger strikes his wife, and believing her dead, flees. When Chanho returns he finds his only son gone, and Choonwha takes the place of son and daughter to him and his wife Songsie. Chansung in his wanderings meets an old man named Ne Nyangmok, who takes him to his house and secures for him a place as teacher of the village school in Su Nai. In the meantime Choonwha, under the instruction of Elder Chanho, develops into that rare being, an educated Korean woman. After three years Choonwha goes to Pyeng Yang to visit her cousin Yungpok, who has been a pupil in the Christian Girls' School, and who takes Choonwha with her to visit Lady Sa, or Sa Puin, and Pastor Sa, the foreign missionaries, and to the Christian church, where she soon sees the light. On her return to Tai Pyeng Dong, Choonwha has to choose between her love for her father-in-law and her new-found love for Christ. She refuses to offer the heathen sacrifice, and the stern Elder drives her from his door. She returns to Pyeng Yang and the missionaries, where she becomes a teacher in the Girls' School. One day Queenai, her favorite pupil, is injured and dies—not, however, until after her grief-stricken parents have promised her to love Jesus. Choonwha is baptized with the Christian name Chunwha, "Heavenly Flower." A famous eye specialist, a Christian missionary, operates on Elder Yang, who had gone blind, but who was able afterward to read the Bible with ease.

They found Pyeng Yang city highly agitated over the prospects of war between Japan and Russia. All sorts of rumors were in the air and Governor Kim took up his office under trying conditions. Less than a week passed before the startling news came that Japan had declared war and opened the fray by sinking two Russian ships in Chemulpo harbor.

The city was in a ferment. Reports came in of a Russian army invading Korea from the north, of a Japanese army marching overland from Seoul. The people were terrified. The horrors of the Japanese-Chinese war ten years before were still fresh in the popular memory.

An exodus began and a general panic was imminent, when the Christians took a hand. The great bell rang loud on Chang Tai Chai Hill, and every night mass meetings were held for men. The missionaries united in advising the Koreans to stay and care for their homes, setting the example themselves by refusing to leave in the warship which the American minister sent for them.

Pastor Mo's advice was given with no uncertain sound. "Put your faith in God and stay homes. Send only the younger women to the Protect them no matter what happens. Ha told you from the beginning to take any i Christ's sake? But if the honor of your w daughters is at stake, resist with all your mi God be with you."

The effect of these meetings was immediat people generally followed the example of th tians and remained. Nightly the crowd at t tral Church grew larger. Seizing the oppo the Christians urged their unbelieving neigh turn to Yasu in their hour of danger.

A great revival began. Chansung heard meetings and decided to go and see what wa on. He found the church packed to the doo an usher recognizing his official position mad through the crowd and found him a seat well f

Nearly two thousand men, were present. sung was impressed with their orderly depo One of the foreign missionaries was in charge meeting, Pastor Na, co-pastor wit tor Mo, he learned from a man near; the same man who had l singing on that other Sunday three before.

One of the younger missionaries l singing and eight boys from the Ch Academy sang together a song with ringing chorus that the audience c the refrain and sang it with them Korean elder prayed and Chansung veled at the man as he stood seen talking to God.

Then Pastor Na began his se Chansung was astonished at the fo er's command of the Korean lang Not only were his words and sent clear-cut, but he spoke in true K idiom of commonplace things in e day life so simply that even the chi understood and leaned forward foll the discourse.

Pastor Na had not only a clarion but the soul of a true orator. A sight of two thousand men hangin his words, his spirit caught fire and his w swept the great building like a flame.

Chansung had never heard such spea before. The speaker seemed to be tal straight at him. His words gripped bec they came out of the preacher's own ex ence and so were true of every man be him. He pictured the misery of a sin-cu world; of the sinner fleeing afar, but the s of guilt and the consequences of sin ever lowing. He told of the Father's love for lost, erring son. Chansung thought of own father and tears came to his eyes. T followed the marvelous story of God's gif his only Son, of Jesus' life among men, and final cruel death on the cross that sin might be forgiven and won back by the vis of infinite love.

Chansung was weary with the heavy bur of sin he had carried so long. Pastor Na s that no matter what you had done would forgive if you only believed in his S and in Chansung's soul a miracle was p formed. Then and there he overthrew the teachings of a lifetime and decided to lieve in Jesus.

Surely belief is a marvelous thing. Good Book says that faith comes by heari but faith is more than hearing. Men belie the Gospel story because it exactly matc their past experience and their present ne and because the messenger himself believ the message he is giving.

When the invitation was given to accept Chri Chansung rose and went forward, saying simply, have decided to believe in Jesus."

There was great joy among the Christians th night. Many others had decided to believe, and th were glad; but they rejoiced especially because knew that God had laid his hand upon a man power in their midst that night.

Doubtless most of them thought that the conve sion was the fruit of the remarkable meeting, a largely due to the eloquence and power of the preache but Chansung knew and we know that this meetin was only a part. One had been speaking to him n for many months. In form he was old and gray, a lay groveling in his own blood and the dirt of th magistrate's court; but in that old form dwelt a Spiri that Chansung had never seen before; a Spirit tha conquered pain and shame and the fear of death.

Chansung had been ashamed that day of himself and day by day the conviction had grown within him that old Pak possessed a power other men lacked. Unconsciously he had been looking for that Spirit and that power, and he had found it that night.

CHAPTER XVII

The New Way

ANSUNG returned from the meeting prepared o meet ridicule and abuse. Others connected vith the governor's office had been present and en him go forward. To his surprise the gover- nself was waiting for him.

hat news is this, Chansung, that I hear of you t? Is it true that you have decided to become a ian?"

s," answered Chansung quietly, "I went for- onight."

ell, I am not surprised. You remember the old 'ak whom we had beaten at Kai Chun? I have forgotten that scene. There must be truth in a n that can make a man act like that. I have inquiring into the character of the Christians nd find they are sober, law-abiding people. I almost a mind to believe myself."

hat word is good to hear! I feared you would be and dismiss me in disgrace."

ave no worry about that. I hope you will con- as my secretary the same as before."

have thought of that," Chansung answered, appreciate your kindness more than words can I am afraid, however, it will be impossible. As ristian I must keep the Sabbath, and how can p the Sabbath in your office?"

e governor opened his lips to reply, then, seeing lf the difficulties involved, merely answered:

ou will have to decide for yourself. Others may you for what you have done tonight. Be sure I am your friend and wish you well."

en Chansung preached his first sermon. "For- me, your honor, if I seem over bold. Your kind- has given me courage. I have decided to be- tonight from no passing whim; but because ve come to believe that God did indeed send Son into the world to die for sinful men, of whom chief. You say you have almost a mind to be- . Can you not decide now and go into the church me?"

ne governor was silent a moment, then answered, is impossible. How can I as governor be a Chris- ? Some day I may believe; not now."

Chansung, as many another Christian before has had to do, gave up his office for Christ's sake. eft the governor's quarters and went to live with a istian family. To become a Christian in a non- istian land involves more than it seems to in so- d Christian countries. As Ruth said to Naomi, y people shall be my people, and thy my God," so with Chansung becoming a istian meant a change of companions. ith the giving up of his official position, was temporarily without employment, threw himself whole-heartedly into the ly of the Bible. Seldom has a convert to istianity brought with him such a mental paration. Scholar that he was, the study the Scriptures was pure delight. For s he did nothing else except drink in the ood News." He not only read the Bible; discussed it continually with his friends. ing himself fully to the work with that endid memory of all Oriental students, in hort time he had committed more Scrip- e than many a Western Christian com- ts in a lifetime.

CHAPTER XVIII

The Sook Chun Class

MEANWHILE the invading forces drew near the city. Russian Cossacks were reported in the neighbor- od north of Pyeng Yang the very day the vance guard of Japan's army entered the y. Several Russians actually came so ar the walls that a volley was fired at em. Great was the excitement when a ndful of Japanese horsemen threw open e gates and rushed out across the plain ter the enemy, who, with that discretion hich seemed the better part of Russian lor throughout most of the war, promptly sappeared among the hills and were seen Pyeng Yang no more.

Thereafter for days a long line of weary foot-sol- ers came marching along the east bank of the river om the south and crossed over a pontoon bridge to the city. Soldiers were quartered in all the uses; army baggage and cannon were scattered all er the campus of the Christian Academy; yet it as remarkable how quiet it was. Scarcely a bugle unded. There was no sign of carousing or lawless- s on the part of the soldiers. Indeed, these men, o formed the advance guard of Japan's force ainst the untried power of Russia, marched with faces, realizing full well that they were going to sperate battle.

With the advent of the soldiers, the meetings at Central Church closed. Chansung remained in city for a few days and then accepted an invita- n to go to Sook Chun and study in the home of an timate friend of Elder Kang's.

Going out by the Seven Stars Gate, he passed near pine wood called Keja's Grove, and was surprised see several hundred people assembled under the trees. Inquiring of a man he met coming from the grove, he learned that they were Tong Haks (Eastern Schoolmen), who hated the Christians and all Westerners; that they were planning now to attack the foreign missionaries and kill the Korean Christians during the confusion should a battle be fought at Pyeng Yang. The Battle of Pyeng Yang was never fought, and all their planning ended in words.

A little farther on, Chansung overtook a group of travelers who proved to be Christians, and several of whom he recognized. All were leaving Pyeng Yang for the time being.

In the company were several young women, and one of these was none other than Chunwha herself, going to stay for a while with an aunt who lived near Sook Chun, a Christian for years, named Kosie.

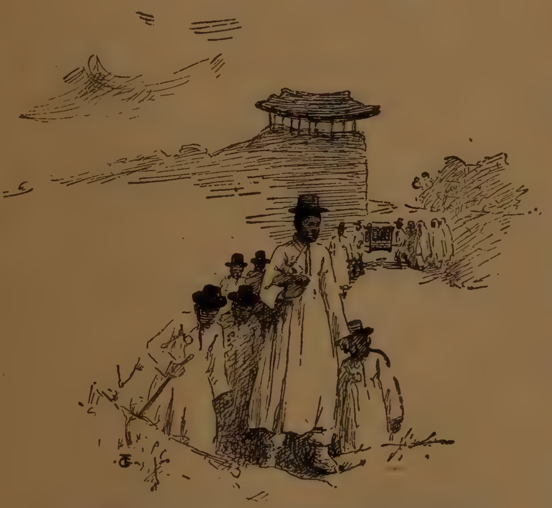
Needless to say, Chansung did not recognize Chunwha any more than she recognized him. Strange young men are not introduced to young women in Korea. Even if he had been introduced, he would not have recognized her. Not only was her name different, but she herself had changed as much from the girl wife he supposed dead these years as he was changed from the schoolboy of Tai Pyeng Dong. The truth is, Chansung scarcely noticed her. He only saw that she was an unusually attractive, cultured-looking young woman, and wondered how she came to be walking.

Finding that these friends were also going to Sook Chun, Chansung gladly accepted their invitation to join their company. So they walked on quite happily together, the men in front and the women behind in proper Korean fashion; all innocent, as we often are in life's crucial moments, of the dramatic interest centered in their journey.

But though Chansung scarcely noticed her, it is not necessary to infer that Chunwha did not notice him. She had a distinct advantage, being behind. She had heard about his remarkable conversion and had seen him at a distance several times before. Moreover, his voice as he talked so earnestly to the other men had somehow a strange familiar note in it, and she wished she might unobserved see his face more plainly.

Nearing Sook Chun their ways divided, Chunwha and her friends going on to Kosie's house, where they were to leave her, and Chansung going across the fields to a near-by village pointed out to him as the home of Elder Kang's friend, Yun Chosa, the helper in charge of the Sook Chun church.

The welcome Chansung received in the Yun home was sincere and hearty. Any Christian brother was welcome there; but one sent from Pyeng Yang by their beloved friend, Elder Kang, was doubly welcome.



In the company was Chunwha, going to stay with a Christian aunt who lived near Sook Chun Grandmother Yun at once won Chansung's heart; a dear sweet-faced old lady who fairly radiated sunshine about her.

Besides the two sons, Yun Chosa the helper and Yun Chesoo the younger brother, and Grandmother Yun, the household held one other, Great-grandfather Yun, nearly ninety and practically deaf. He loved the warm corner over the kitchen fire and sat all day making straw rope or straw shoes.

It was the great grief of Grandmother Yun and her two sons that they could never get old Great-grandfather Yun to take any interest in the Christian religion. Though he seemed to hear well enough when he wanted to, whenever they tried to speak to him about believing in Jesus, it was always: "Mu-ut? Mu-ut? Musum maligne mola (What's that? what's that? I cannot understand what you are saying)"; looking for all the world like an old fossil from another age; which indeed he was.

The month of February is the great Bible-study class-time for all the Korean churches. Most of the Christians are farmers. The fall crop has been gathered and threshed out on the dirt threshing floor weeks ago. It is a month yet before frost will leave the ground and the spring work begin. The merchants, too, have more leisure at this season than at any other. The old year's accounts are all settled before the Korean New Year, which comes about the first of February, and for centuries it has been the custom of the people to look upon the first few weeks of the new year as a general holiday. Very naturally, the Korean Christians have come to use this season as a special time for Bible study. In almost every church throughout the country, all unnecessary work is laid aside, and for a week or ten days the whole congregation assembles to study the Bible together.

The Sook Chun Bible-study class was in session when Chansung arrived. Early the next morning he and the two brothers and Grandmother Yun set off for the church together, leaving old Great-grandfather Yun to care for the house. Since he would not believe, it must be confessed, it was convenient to have some one who wanted to stay home during the class and on Sundays.

The first half-hour was a prayer meeting. Then the people divided into classes and studied two hours in the morning and one in the afternoon. At three o'clock the classes reassembled for a few minutes of prayer together, and then all were asked to go out and preach to their unbelieving neighbors for an hour at least before supper. At night a sermon was preached by one of the officers, largely directed to unbelievers, followed by an invitation to believe in Jesus.

Chansung enjoyed this class to the full. At the Yun home the lessons of the day were rediscussed in the evening, and literally from morning till night the conversation of these people was in heaven.

To be continued

◆

A Korean Native Wedding

HOW an educated Christian Korean girl was plucked back by the heathen world and married against her consent with her eyes sealed for a week to a man she had never seen, and how it all came out right in the end like a popular novel, was told by Miss Marjory Barstow on her return from a trip around the world she made to study mission work.

"She was a pretty little thing and a star pupil in the Methodist Mission High School in Seoul," said Miss Barstow. "Everybody loved her.

"Suddenly a thrill of consternation ran through the school. Her family had decided she must be married to a man they had chosen. There was a buzzing of indignant talk in the classrooms. Some of the girls urged her to resist, American style.

"The girl struggled against her fate, but there was no hope. She had to submit.

"So she was married in the heathen fashion. Some of her Christian friends, including the wife of Bishop Herbert Welch, attended the ceremonies.

"The girl's eyes were plastered shut and her face enameled. Thus deformed, and with a red robe and a kind of brass helmet on, she had to sit among the romping wedding guests for seven days. She was on inspection.

"After the week of excitement she was left alone with her husband and her eyes were unsealed. Now, according to immemorial custom, he was to tease her and she was to show what a dutiful wife she was by not answering, no matter what he said.

"So the young man cried, as if disgusted: 'This is a fine wife I've got! What a thing for my folks to wish on me!' or words to that effect.

"The bride sat silent. The bridegroom continued his banter, testing her in every way. The Christian girl became more and more impatient. Finally her husband said:

"'I don't want a dumb wife. Can't you speak?'

"'Can if I want to,' she answered quickly, thus breaking custom in a shocking manner. The young husband didn't seem to mind. He said:

"'Did you really want to marry me?'

"'No,' she replied frankly.

"Then she asked the same question of him and he replied, 'Not particularly.'

"By this time they were almost friends, so when the husband asked a moment later if she was sorry she was his wife, she hesitated a moment, looked him over and said: 'Well, no.' The husband also said he wasn't as disappointed as he had expected to be.

"Then the poor little bride broke down and told her whole story. Her husband was sympathetic. He had had troubles of his own. He turned out to be a fairly progressive young man, who had been educated in a good Japanese school. He said he had longed for a bride who would know a little bit of something. He knew the only place he could get such a bride in Korea was from one of the Christian schools. He wasn't a Christian himself. This bride had been picked by his family, but she turned out to be just what he wanted."

OUR EDITORIAL PAGE

Germany and the Peace Treaty

IT WOULD be folly to deny that Germany takes the Treaty with a bad grace. One after another, the delegates chosen to sign for the conquered nation have declined to go to Versailles for that purpose. Baron von Rantzau, Haniel von Haimhausen, and Hermann Müller, each declined in turn, and President Ebert and Premier Bauer and the ministry were kept busy appointing new delegates. All this necessitated delay, which was granted by the Allies. It was sharply intimated, however, that the limit in such delays would soon be reached and an ultimatum would follow, bringing matters to a crisis. The Allies are thoroughly alive to the fact that Germany is not to be trusted, and that Premier Clemenceau's warning, that the world is "sitting on a powder magazine," pretty accurately described the situation. The enemy will keep no treaty except under force. The threat of an ultimatum was expected, however, to accomplish its purpose.

Germany's restoration to a place in the sisterhood of nations now depends upon her own good faith. She knows that if she fulfils the requirements of the Peace Treaty, it will lie in her power to bring to her people in the coming years a measure of prosperity and contentment.

Ever since the armistice, Germany's ultimate surrender has been regarded as inevitable. Time was granted to allow her full consideration of all the treaty stipulations. Everything was done in order. Yet at every step of the negotiations Germany declared the whole proceeding "a peace of violence!" Viewed in the light of international law and reason, the peace is one of firmness and justice, commensurate in every respect with the requirements of the case. Had the fortunes of war made Germany victor, her terms would have been vastly different. The Peace Table would have been a scene of militaristic domination and harshness never to be forgotten. The whole world was convinced of this long ago.

Germany's complaints have received a full hearing, yet to the last she has maintained an attitude of sullen resentment, unwilling to yield to the fate she had invited and which she could not escape. She has uttered warnings and threatened to complete the wreck of the peace of Europe, which she had already so nearly accomplished. She cherishes the hope of future revenge; but the world has learned its lesson and will not be trapped again. Germany has been granted the right to live and to be tolerated only if she merits that right.

Even after the signing of the treaty, the Rhine army of occupation will remain till peace is fully settled. A guard will be maintained against plots and treachery. There will be no relaxation of Allied vigilance until there is full assurance of Germany having come to her senses. Never again will she have the opportunity to repeat the mad attempt at world-conquest, with its unspeakable accompaniment of blood and sacrifice, of cruelty and lawlessness, for all of which she has now been brought to righteous judgment.

A Just Balance

BOLSHEVISM is a disease; the anarchist, the I. W. W., the direct-action Socialist, is wrong-headed. Society, which has made the disease possible, must either cure it or be destroyed by it. For that reason drastic measures must be resorted to. Citizens who preach or talk or think sedition must be segregated; aliens who encourage revolution must be deported. but what is even more important, the living and labor conditions which furnish fuel for the flame of anarchy and which give credence to the agitator must be eradicated.

We must be careful, however, that in fighting the disease we do not aggravate it. The I. W. W. agitator says our courts are crooked, our judges and prosecuting attorneys capitalistic tools. Now, if a poor deluded follower is gathered in, railroaded to jail, assigned indifferent counsel, refused conference with his friends and finally released for lack of evidence or convicted by false testimony, can we wonder if he becomes an agitator and an enemy of government? The man who companies with anarchists has only himself to thank if he lands in jail. But he should be given every protection of the law and a speedy, fair and open opportunity to prove his innocence or guilt.

In the material discovered in the files of the Russian Bolshevist embassy, raided in New York, was a report from an attorney who had gone to Chester, Pa., to assist in the defense of Russian Reds arrested there on May Day. This report pictured the attorney for some big corporation as saying that there was no lawyer in Chester who would dare defend "these wretches," and that it was "a good thing those fellows did not get the protection of the law." The writer of the report declared he was quite sure the Grand Jury would indict the accused for any offense the District Attorney should chose, and that any jury impaneled would convict.

The American Federation of Labor has often complained of the partiality of courts, and in its recent convention, voted to disregard injunctions issued in strike emergencies. This is significant; it discloses both a source of Bolshevism and a fault in our structure of government.

As befits a great Christian nation, our courts should be fair, just, untouched by class prejudice, uninfluenced by popular hysteria. No matter what the charge, our law holds a defendant innocent until proven guilty. In most of our courts justice holds an even scale, and mercy lightens the load to those deserving. We can have no mercy for those who strike at the sacred temple of our liberties, but we must be fair and just, or we will be putting out fire with gunpowder, and making our courts a travesty upon our Christian profession.

Greatness Through Service

INCREASE of power and influence, whether it comes toan individual, a community or a nation, brings with it a correspondingly wider range of opportunity. Enlarged opportunity involves a greater responsibility. That this law of responsibility is unescapable and inexorable is not only made clear in the inspired writings and in the teachings of Jesus Christ in the Gospels, but it is disclosed all through world history. Whatever our station, we must face the responsibility for the use we make of our opportunities, and on the merits or demerits of that accounting nations as well as men must stand or fall.

This divine principle of Justice rules the world. Humanity, morally enlightened by the tremendous soul-stirring issues of the times, and with clearer vision, is better able to comprehend the wisdom and goodness of the Justice of God than before these experiences. We have seen the power taken suddenly away from the mighty who had failed to face the responsibilities imposed upon them. We have seen that power transferred to others, from whose hands it will also pass should they likewise fail. This is a judgment of the nations which has been steadily progressive in world history, but never on the same scale of magnitude as today. Rarely has a people, once cast down under such conditions, ever risen again. One by one, all come under the operation of this law, which is the very basis of divine government—the Law of Justice. It is true, a few have been saved by timely repentance and humiliation; but in the great majority of instances, ambition, selfishness, pride and the desire for increased power have blinded them to every danger, until, frenzied and unseeing, they have at last gone over the brink.

There has been a great deal of discussion as to our responsibilities after the war. We entered the struggle with a declaration of our purpose to aid in the establishment of Justice and Righteousness among the nations. It was a high ideal—perhaps the very highest to which a nation could aspire. To carry out that purpose involves world-service. In the past, it has been our privilege to take a foremost part in satisfying the world's crying physical needs. But world-service implies something that is broader than this. We see the nations looking to us to lift still higher the standard of Justice and Righteousness. It has become a deeply rooted conviction in minds of the Christian people of America, that this is the great mission to which our nation has been called. Some have mocked at it, deriding it as too idealistic to be seriously regarded in this busy, practical age, and declaring that our first duty is to ourselves, to look after "big business" and energize all our efforts to increase our wealth and our financial and commercial standing as a nation. They are proud of the fact that we now talk familiarly in terms of billions of money, and they see a harvest of still great national opulence to come.

This is, however, the short view, far beyond which we must look if we would measure our full opportunity for world-service, in the carrying out of which selfishness and narrowness can have no part. Though the world may laugh at the nation which accepts such a task, and call it folly, yet it is not without due recognition, for He whose Word is true hath said: "Whosoever of you will be the chiefest, shall be servant of all."

In the League of Nations, which is the direct product of the American ideal, we shall have an opportunity to aid in the promotion of international Justice and Righteousness, such as no other nation enjoyed. In saving Europe, we save ourselv shall have the satisfaction of knowing that, i our duty unselfishly and in the spirit of sacri are rendering the highest service a nation can laying the foundations of lasting peace.

Our future lies open before us. We have the point where we must choose either w greatness in the sense in which the world int them, or we can decide for the path that l service for God and humanity. The old gods, lusts, the old desires and ambitions call lou us. So they called to Israel in Joshua's time, the close of the great war the triumphant nati assembled at the place of testimony to give its between service for God or for self. May w the courage and the confidence, as a nation, with Joshua: "As for us and our house, we wil the Lord." It is only by such service that o can become truly great.

The Farmer and Daylight Savin

DOUBT is expressed in many quarters as wisdom of Congress in its attitude on the light Saving Law. The National Da Saving Association plans a nation-wide campa induce President Wilson to veto the repeal. with this comes the news that the farmers throu the country are unanimous for repeal. They that, under daylight saving, farm produce costs third more than under the old-time schedule. indictment also shows that it seriously interferes household arrangements; that field work cann done by the new schedule without at least th of a good hour a day; that in the morning the are too wet to dry out in time for work in the hours. Chickens rise, lay, and go to roost acco to the old time, while the new upsets field, or and garden work, disarranges marketing plans, w valuable hours in the late afternoon, and give real compensating advantage in the morning. impossible, they further declare, to run two sep times for business and farming, because they ar closely linked together, and the system foll should be the one that is best adapted to the nee the majority and which will not increase the co living. Patriotic self-denial may be all very we war-time, but at any other time there cannot be n satisfaction to the farmer who has to do his mor milking in the dark in order to get it to his custon the commuters, who themselves are awakened a unearthly hour, in time to swallow a prema breakfast.

It has been claimed that a new train schedule wh will give him a suitable hour for taking his milk produce to market, will meet all the objections of farmer. There is some suggestion of a horolog muddle, however. The farmer unquestionably g the most practical view of the subject, and as he "f them all," he should be accorded a right to be he even though he makes the radical claim that noth less than a return to the old method will enable to fill out the day's work satisfactorily so that hour will count.

Keep Your Armor Bright

ALL through the summer, fall and winter of 1 America was training men, making guns, paring munitions, perfecting her organizat In July, 1918, when Foch thought it time to d the Germans back, America was ready.

For more than thirty centuries the children of G on earth have battled with the hosts of evil. twenty centuries the battle has been waged under t banner of the Cross and in the glory of the light of resurrection. This battle is never-ending, but, some reasons inherent in the flesh, the battalions the Cross usually go into summer quarters in weather, and store their heavy artillery. Sometim their swords rust and their shields decay, and wh they come to cooler weather and are ready to rej the battle, they find themselves ill-equipped, wh evil, which never stops fighting, is well entrenche

This coming fall promises to mark almost an epo in Christian progress. We hear the roll of a surgi tide of renewed faith and deeper consecration. I imperative, therefore, that pastor and people shou make the summer weeks a training-ground for effecti service, that every weapon of our spiritual warfa may be kept bright, clean and ready, in order that the crest of this tide we may sweep over the emban ments of doubt and lust and greed and sin, and ta America for Christ.

HE FAMINE SITUATION IN INDIA

By REV. R. A. HUME, Ex-Chairman of the Bombay Relief Committee

t. HUME, who arrived from India recently, was taken sick shortly afterward, but is now recovered. He has the first opportunity in the following to lay before the American public, h the Christian Herald, the real story famine in India, which Christian ca has been helping to mitigate during few months. This journal has already 50,000, in four remittances, in aid of nine-stricken, and is arranging to send r remittance shortly.

'AME to America from India recently nd take an early opportunity to do wo things: first, heartily to thank he constituency of the Christian d for their generous and prompt re- e to India's appeal for relief in the it famine, and second, to give some s about India's present situation.

ierica has been so preoccupied with and post-war problems, and with s for many appealing objects, that how our country has not become ade- ly aware that after eighteen years of ption from famine, India has again into the grip of another very serious ne. Of the forty meteorological sta- which the government of India maintains, y-nine have reported that in the rainy season of year the rainfall was abnormal, i. e., insufficient nseasonable. On April 29, 1918, the government icly proclaimed that famine conditions exist in sections of the country. The population of sections numbers many millions.

hile it is impossible to say just how many people amine-stricken, it seems a conservative statement twenty millions are in great distress. The crops very small; labor on land was not available; from Burma and wheat from Australia could lly be imported because, on account of the war, ping was very scarce and millions of people had or no money for buying food. For various causes price of grain rose to three and four times the nor- and even much above the rate in previous famines. top of all; India suffered more from the influenza emic than almost any other country. Statistics that in a few months six millions died in India n influenza. How many more must have been kened from that scourge!

'he British Government has opened relief work— tly earthwork—on which a person can manage to enough to keep alive. It has opened Poor chens, at which the very infirm can get cooked l; has advanced money to help people to improve sed wells, etc. Nevertheless, government officials, Indian press and all missionary organizations are ealing for non-official relief to supplement govern- ntal relief. To no source do missions look so hope- y as to the Christian Herald.

The first need which some Indian missions feel is money to help many thousands of distressed ple to go to government relief works, where they exist till better times come. No kind of relief o economical or effective. I have sent great num- s to such relief by giving twenty-five or thirty cents each person, which would supply them with enough in till something could be earned at government rks. But for good reasons, multitudes cannot go government works. For some of these people, ssions open some small useful relief work near me, at which, at rates nearly like government tes, they can earn enough to live on and stay in eir own houses, look after the sick, let the children to school, etc. The buildings or repairs or roads us made are of permanent value, and the workers e not pauperized

Multitudes have little clothing. Missionaries re- rt seeing women obliged to sit in tanks and streams, iting till their dirty rags, which have been washed, n dry on the banks, because they had no other vering.

Probably as many children who have lost one or th parents need the care of missions in the present stress as in any previous famine. But in the present mine, missions have not enough money to maintain ir regular work. New orphans cannot be taken less some good Samaritans like the Christian erald send means for succoring new orphans. Even present rates, from thirty to thirty-five dollars will pport a child for a year.

June, July and August will be specially critical onths, because, even if good rain should fall in the ny season this year, crops could not begin to en till the close of August. Therefore it is very gent that help should be promptly cabled to India w.

I was chairman of the Christian Herald Relief Com- ittee until I left India in April. Rev. C. B. Hill of aroda is now chairman. Once more, in behalf of ousands of missionaries, Indian Christians and non-Christians, I thank the Christian Herald readers for all they did years ago and for what they are doing now.

R. A. HUME.

Children receiving a weekly dole of Indian corn, which accounts for their looking so well

Missionaries Write of Famine Relief Work

Rev. Charles B. Hill, chairman of the Famine Relief Committee, writes to the Christian Herald, enclosing letters from Rev. C. Unruh, American Baptist Mission, Miss E. E. Baird, American Friends Mission, and Manoramabai (daughter of Pundita Ramabai) of the Mukti Mission, all dealing with famine conditions. Dr. Hill states that the distress occasioned by the famine is becoming more acute, and that the suffering will hardly be lessened before October, even if rain does come. He and his committee are very grateful for Christian Herald help.

A few of the babies left to the Godhra Methodist Mission

Manoramabai's letter is very interesting. She writes: "The people whom we are helping are very needy and so many were begging for work to help them 'buy a little grain on bazaar day' that mother said she could only give work to widows and very needy orphans. Now that this story has got abroad the women are actually rubbing the red Kurku mark off their foreheads and pretending that they are widows, when they are not; just because they are in such great need. They do not ask to be given help free. But some of them are very weak. One man came by train from somewhere, and he was on his way to a village some distance away from here. The people engaged in the relief work here, finding out that he was very hungry, advised him to come here and work with them. He followed their advice and started to come here, but he dropped dead on the road before he reached us, and it seemed to be through sheer starvation.

"We are also helping some poor Christian families. As the instructions concerning the Christian Herald money were that it was to be spent in grain, rather than on materials, and the people paid in grain rather than in money, we have kept closely to these directions and used other gifts which came to us to buy materials for the work and to pay those who really seemed to need money."

In a letter from Jalna, Nizam's dominions, Rev. N. MacNicol writes: "Many of the villages are practically deserted, the people having gone off in a body to seek work. They go to those districts which have suffered less than hereabouts from lack of rain. Many have gone to a big famine camp that has been opened by the Nizam's government, twenty miles from here. On the whole it is well managed."

Miss Kennard of the Methodist Episcopal Mission at Godhra writes some touching instances. We quote from her letter: "Last evening a Bible woman came to me and said: 'Oh, Miss Sahib, what shall we do? Many little children are starving in my village and ask me to bring them to the mission. Only today I found five starving.'

"During the last few months many parents have died, leaving little children homeless. They have been coming to the mission and neighbors have brought orphan babies. The people seem to think the mission does not lack for money and that we can feed all the children they give us. It is hard to have to turn a child away. Many times a father who can only get ten cents per day is left with a little baby. The milk for the child would cost about six cents, but if the father cares for the child he cannot work, as he must go away from home. What shall we do with these little ones?"

Miss Morgan, a missionary of the Z. B. M. Mission in Sholapur, whose station recently received Christian Herald help, writes: "Our work during the past month has been chiefly the rescue of babies and children. Influenza followed by famine conditions brought us in thirty babies in a few weeks. In nearly every case the mother had died, and very often only the infant was left of the family circle. . . . One morning a Sepoy from the police superintendent came to us leading a little girl of two by the hand and carrying a tiny baby in his arms. They had been found by the side of their dead parents on the roadside. Both were sick from want of food, and fearfully dirty, but now they are fine." Many similar cases are reported by other missions from different quarters. Disease, death, desertion and misery abound everywhere.

At a meeting of the Relief Committe in Bombay, on May 12, correspondence from the Central Provinces, the Telugu area, and the district of Ganjam, all disclosed harrowing stories of suffering and death, and it was the judgment of the Committee that the distress was extended. At the same time "in the Punjab and the United Provinces, although high food prices prevailed, there are as yet no famine conditions prevalent," writes Dr. Hill, "but throughout Western India, the larger portion of the Central Provinces, portions of Central India, Behar and Orissa, Ganjam and the Deccan, the conditions are rapidly growing worse. We have increased the grants made to the Central Provinces and the Deccan to 10,000 rupees each, and have increased the grant to Behar and Orissa to 7,000 rupees, while we have reduced the grant originally allocated to the Punjab and the United Provinces to 2,000 rupees. Within six weeks our rainy season is due. We pray God that it may come, as it will give hope to the people and provide fodder for the agricultural cattle, which are rapidly dying; but even then the harvest can only come in October."

Rev. H. R. Coventry, of the Australian Disciples of Christ, Baramati, Bombay Presidency, writes: "We have taken about twenty-five girls, from babies upwards to twelve years, into our orphanage, a direct result of the influenza and famine. They came in rags, some in less than rags; they are all now well clothed and well fed, happy and contented. They are making progress in school, and God alone knows how many bright gems will arise out of these girls. Help has been made possible only by the sacrificial love of our friends, both in Australia and America. We are all praising our heavenly Father for his great outpouring of love upon India in her time of great need."

The following additional contributions to the Famine Relief Fund have been received:

R E Menderlite	$5.00	Jennie Turner	$5.00
M A Davison	5.00	Ida Montgomery	5.00
Mrs J H Musser	5.00	Mrs A E Tracey	5.00
J G Schmusk	5.00	Mr & Mrs N H Hughes	5.00
Mrs E M Jaynith	5.00	Mrs C M Thompson	5.00
P O Bergh	5.00	In Memory of Helen	5.00
Mrs Mary M Franklin	5.00	Mrs Clara Potts	5.00
——, New London	5.00	Geo Nickel	5.00
Miss Ethel Mowke	5.00	Mrs Laura Anderson	5.00
A S Ritenout	5.00	Coe F Young	5.00
C F Wilson	5.00	Mrs Maggie Laughlin	5.00
Mrs W B Singleton	5.00	Mrs Louisa Heninger	5.00
E F Wilson	5.00	Mrs R Clayton	5.00
Mrs Sarah Gibson	5.00	Miss Mary Hetfield	5.00
Milo Lewis	5.00	Clara A Sprague	5.00
D S Clemens	5.00	Mrs Hattie J Green	5.00
Augusta Peterson	5.00	Mrs M A Bestow	5.00
J W Gilchrist	5.00	Mrs & Mrs A Wott	5.00
A Friend, Phila, Pa.	5.00	Mr. G R Reynolds	5.00
J J Baechtold	5.00	Mary Caroline Potts	5.00
Mrs E Seeley	5.00	Sarah A Garis	5.00
Mrs F F Deringer	5.00	E L Johnson	5.00
Elizabeth, Schell	5.00	Mrs N M Speidel	5.00
Flora Berry	5.00	Mrs Irene Berry	5.00
Mrs James W Conrad	5.00	Williams Sisters	5.00
G Bellanng	5.00	Mrs H Schneiberger	5.00
K M Hardy	5.00	Mrs W S Marshall	5.00
Marcia L True	5.00	Mrs Emma Redmond	5.00
Fred Studer	5.00	Miss Mae Pangburn	5.00
Mrs Anna Brookens	5.00	L W Foyleman	5.00
J Newton Huston	5.00	Rev S W Browne	5.00

AROUND THE FAMILY CIRCLE

Wife-Made Men

By CHARLES GRANT MILLER

THE first passion of a woman is her love for her children.

Is that true? If it is true, her second passion is her desire to make a man of her husband.

We hear much about self-made men. It might do us good to hear more about wife-made men.

There are a lot of them. Many of the best men in the world—greatest in statesmanship, science, art, business and literature—have freely acknowledged their indebtedness to women. Perhaps to their mothers they are indebted, possibly to their wives.

A wise wife is she who completely fills her function, being comrade and source of inspiration. Not every wife earnestly seeks to be a helpful companion. Not every one who tries succeeds.

The wife who contributes to her husband's uplift and helps to enlarge his vision must not be denied high credit for his success. The best part of many a man is the femininity which comes from his mother or his wife. High character which counts for his success may have originated in one or the other. His ideals may have come from her; to her he may owe his purpose and perseverance.

And her joy in it is exquisite. This is a woman's greatest work, next to the rearing of her children—if it is second to that.

Home and Patriotism

By Hon. FRANK O. LOWDEN, Governor of Illinois

THE security of a country depends in a large measure upon the number of homes owned by the dwellers therein. Family ties grow strongest in the house, however modest, which the family calls its home. Love of home is at the root of love of country. Increase the number of home-owners and you increase the number of patriots of any land. We shall measure our progress during the years that lie ahead by the increase in the number of homes our people own.

A Baby Aristocracy

THE babies of Brockton, Mass., have their own aristocratic circle to which only the most fortunate babies can belong. In a study made public the Children's Bureau of the United States Department of Labor shows that the baby who belonged to the so-called "aristocracy" had a much better chance of living than the baby who could not qualify.

To be a member of the aristocracy a baby had to meet five requirements, selected because the Bureau's studies of nearly 25,000 babies have proved their worth in saving babies' lives.

First, the father must have earned a fair wage. Second, the mother must not have been gainfully employed either during the year before or the year after the baby's birth. She must in the third place have had at least fair medical care when the baby was born. Fourth, both father and mother must have been able to read and write. Finally, the house the baby lived in must have been well-ventilated, clean, sanitary, and not over-crowded.

Only 205 of the 1,210 babies born alive in Brockton in the year studied could meet these requirements. Fifteen of the 205 died before they were a year old, so that the infant mortality rate for the "aristocracy" was 73, which is 24 points more favorable than the rate for Brockton as a whole. The advantages of belonging to this sort of an aristocracy are further emphasized when it is pointed out that of the 1,005 babies who could not qualify for the "aristocracy" 112 died before they were a year old, making their infant mortality rate 111.

The Mother's Share

By CORA A. MATSON DOLSON

NOT great things for my child I ask;
But that the grace of God may stay
As helper in each common task
That comes to him from day to day.

Not that the highest place he know,
A leader among those who lead,
But that these God-framed hands may grow
To perfect strength in helpful deed.

But while I ask these favors, still
The knowledge burns within my heart,
That power to mold, for good or ill,
God made of motherhood a part.

The sun is shining and the birds
Are singing in the sky,
And all the little dancing leaves
Are glad, and so am I

Elizabeth FitzHugh

The Guest Room

BEFORE the arrival of a guest all closets and drawers in the room which he is to occupy should be cleared of things.

A laundry bag, several coat-hangers and a rack for shoes should hang in the clothes closet.

A small table should stand at the head of the bed, containing a water pitcher and glass, a box of crackers, either a candle or a table lamp, and matches.

The bedroom desk should be fully outfitted with writing paper, envelopes, postals, stamps, ink, a blotter, pen and pencils.

A new magazine should be in evidence.

Qualities of the Popular Gir

By LAURA A. KIRKMAN

DURING the years from fifteen to twent either is or is not popular with her yo and boy friends. What is the secret of this magnetism which seems to be able to make th world love its possessor?

Let us find out by analyzing the popular g is the girl who takes an interest in others. Sh girl who has a bright word for everybody. Sh altruism—is so filled with altruism, in fact, has no room for self-consciousness.

If the girl who wonders why she is not p would make up her mind to forget self and to only of those about her, she would find the opening its arms to her.

State May Provide Doctor's Offi

THE state may provide the doctor's office future, and it may guarantee all or part income as an outcome of the growth and wider cation of medical science, according to the fo of a New York physician.

The government will establish a departme health eventually, he believes. He inquires wh scope should be, and how far it should confi work to the prevention of disease. There might about a centralized, coordinated administrati health activities. An effort should be made to pr adequate nursing service and constructive me practice in communities at a distance from the centers, where these needs are poorly met today

The physician may some day be freed from struggle and worry that he endures now by reas the competitive and commercialized aspect o profession. But the state should recognize that icine is a profession and not a trade, leaving the sician free to think and act, to study and to serve

Canning, Drying, Preserving

WOULD you like to know how to can fruit w out sugar, how to keep beets from fading, to put up apple pie filling, how to preserve juices, how to make apple syrup from cider, how put up vegetable soup, okra soup, chicken Well, write a letter to our Washington Bureau ask for F. B. 839.

Would you like to know the best way to make h jelly, soft jelly, mint, orange, pectin jelly? W you like to know how to make watermelon rind serves, cherry, fig or strawberry preserves; w you like to know how to make quince paste, apri paste, guava paste, gooseberry paste; would you to know how to make gingered pears, grapefruit m malade, or apple butter? Ask for F. B. 853.

Would you like to know how to dry pears, peach apricots, cherries, prunes, figs? Would you like know how to take the water out of potatoes, turni cabbages, cauliflowers, onions, pumpkins, tomato okra, corn, celery? Send for F. B. 984.

Would you like to know how to apply the princi of fermentation and salting to string beans, bee cucumbers, corn, spinach, green tomatoes, so they keep like sauerkraut? Let us send you F. B. 881.

Would you like to know the best way to store your cellar such products as squashes, celery, par nips, cabbages, beans, apples, turnips, so they keep all winter? Would you like to know how be to make a cellar in which to keep them? F. B. 8 gives the information.

Address a request for any one of these to Christian Herald Information Bureau, Frederic Haskin, Director, Washington, D. C., and enclose two-cent stamp for return postage.

Midsummer Magic

By Dorothy Blair

MARY ARMAND sat up in bed. Sleep was impossible. Through the windows came the first grey light of dawn. For hours Mary een awake. For hours she had o solve her problem—to make the dream come true. But it was ss.

ping out of bed, she dressed. As anced in her mirror she saw the of a tear, the last one of many that ven expression to her feelings dur- e night. She brushed it away and sad little toss of her head decided urse. She would decline Mildred ngton's invitation.

dred was probably the only real Mary had. Making friends had difficult for her. But some common of interest had drawn the two girls her, although their positions in life ar apart. Three years after her r's death, Mary had found it neces- ar to get a position and most of the y she earned went to her mother and ised for the bare necessities of life. oney did not bother the Harringtons. y summer they closed their beautiful in the city and went to their cottage e shore. A great many of Mildred's ds summered at the same resort and late May until early September there one continuous round of pleasure. when Mary had been invited to spend vacation with them, it had seemed a gift from some fairy godmother. des being a chance to get away from city during one of the hottest ths, it was a rare opportunity to y for a time the gay, carefree life appealed to her so strongly because as so different from her own.

hen last night she had gone to the rington home, where the girls had iered to talk over their plans. Mil- l's brother Bob was just leaving the se, but stopped to speak to her.

Mildred tells me you are going to our colony this year," he said.

Yes," Mary replied, "for a week or ."

Well," he said smiling, as he went on, hope you will have a good time—and will—every one does down there!"

hen he had said good night, Mary ndered whether Bob's presence would added to the other pleasures this won- ful vacation held in store for her. nehow she had always preferred him to other men she knew just as Mildred been her favorite among the girls. Mary found the girls in a gay discus- n of their plans. They had something ieduled seemingly for every day of the mmer. What happy days they were to ! There would be bathing every day d moonlight sailing or beach parties at ght. Then, too, Mildred had planned any week-end parties. Two of these re to take place during Mary's visit. All these things had seemed like pleas- t dreams to Mary. She could picture ng stretches of sand and the ocean with big yellow moon creeping up out of the ver streaked waters. She could see her- lf at these wonderful week-end parties. r a little while at least Mary Armand as to really live! She would be happy, oriously happy——

OH, I got the most stunning evening dress today!" It was Kitty Wells lking. Clothes! Mere mention of them d ended Mary's dreaming. Once intro- iced, the subject had developed into a ngthy discussion—afternoon frocks— ort suits—shoes—hats—bathing togs! ary listened. Several times she tried to y something—anything—but each time ords failed her. She was afraid they ould ask about her new clothes. What thought! The mere possibility of it em- rrassed her and finally giving a quickly rmed excuse, she said good night.

Outside she had walked slowly home. retty clothes! She had none. How any times it had caused her unhappi- ss! How many times it had made it npossible for her to be like the girls she wanted most for friends. Now because she had "nothing to wear" she was to lose the vacation that had seemed so real—so near—so wonderful! The only solution of the difficulty was money and Mary had saved only enough for her traveling and incidental expenses. She had several dresses, but nothing like the wonderful wardrobes of the other girls. And Mary was proud.

At home her mother had been waiting news of the much-talked-of vacation.

"I'm afraid I won't be able to go to the Harrington's this summer," Mary announced as she dropped into a chair.

"Why not, dear, I thought you had completed all your plans?"

"So did I," answered Mary. "But to-night every one was talking about their pretty evening dresses and afternoon frocks. I'm afraid I would feel a little out of place." She voiced her disappointment as gently as she could—and she went no further, for Mrs. Armand was crying.

"Mother, please don't!" pleaded Mary. "Maybe tomorrow things will look different. Maybe after all I will be able to go." And bidding her mother good night, she sought the seclusion of her room.

So at dawn after a sleepless night, Mary decided to decline Mildred's invitation.

Two weeks later a group of happy, laughing girls boarded a train bound for the shore. Mary was at the station to see them off. She smiled, calling a happy farewell as the train pulled out. But when it had disappeared, the silver rails seemed to dance through her tears in the sunshine, and a sob rose in her throat as she turned to go back to the hum-drum of the office.

For days afterward Mary was miserably unhappy. It wasn't merely missing the vacation—she could forget that—but she was looking ahead. Must she always be ashamed of her appearance? Were clothes always going to hold her back and make her different from other girls?

THEN finally the problem in Mary's mind was solved and in the weeks that followed a change came over her more wonderful than she had even dreamed.

Bob Harrington, driving his touring car, noted this change one night in July when he passed Mary on her way home from work. On one or two similar occasions during the summer he had merely lifted his hat. But this night he stopped his car beside the curb just ahead of her.

"Summering in the city seems to agree with you, Miss Armand," he said. "I never saw you looking so well!"

Mary smiled at his compliment and the almost bewildered expression of admiration on his face made her heart glad—for now she knew her triumph over circumstance was practically complete!

The summer progressed. September found the girls at Seacliff anxious to get back to the city. The shore season had been a disappointment. At first there had been the usual parties made delightful by Bob and the friends he brought with him. But later when he remained in town, pleading pressure of business, Kitty was inconsolable and Mildred's parties, without his guests, became a little tiresome for every one.

So when the day for the trip homeward arrived the girls had no regrets. They were eager to get home and plunge into their preparations for the fall season. Again the question of necessary clothes was paramount in their minds.

Bob was at the station to meet them. Mildred, followed by the other girls, had almost reached his car when she suddenly stopped—stifling a cry of astonishment.

A girl, beautifully dressed—her face aglow with a radiantly happy smile—was stepping out of Bob's machine.

It was Mary Armand.

But what a transformed and adorable Mary she was! Wearing a charmingly distinctive afternoon frock she was a fascinating picture! From her hat to the tips of her dainty pumps, she was perfect!

For one long moment the girls stood bewildered by the marvelous change in the girl before them. Then conscious of their awkward staring, they rushed forward with one accord to greet her.

"Mary—you look wonderful—positively beautiful!" they exclaimed.

Even Kitty, who now realized the real reason why Bob had remained in town, could not help but admire the attractive girl they had left such a short time before in plain, almost shabby attire.

From her head to the tips of her dainty pumps, she was perfect!

"You seem surprised—am I so very, very different?" asked Mary, smiling.

"Different!" exclaimed Mildred, "why you are another person—how did it happen? Where have you been? Tell us——"

"Girls," replied Mary, "I've had the most wonderful summer imaginable and I can scarcely wait to tell you all about it!"

A little later at Mildred's, the girls crowded around Mary for her story.

"YOU girls will never know how much I wanted to go to Seacliff with you this summer," she began. "For you this vacation trip was simply the regular thing; to me it meant the first chance I ever had for a really good time! And at first I thought I couldn't give it up! You may have guessed why I had to. I simply didn't have the kind of clothes you were going to take and I knew I would be unhappy every minute contrasting my own simple little outfits with the wonderful wardrobes of you other girls. But it was terribly hard—not only because I was missing the happy times to which I had looked forward so eagerly but because I would see myself shut off for the same reason all the rest of my life from the people and places I like best.

"I guess every girl wants pretty clothes—the desire to be admired is born in all of us. We are perfectly happy only when we know we are as well dressed as the people we want for our friends. So for days after you had gone I could think of nothing else! The words kept ringing in my ears—'Clothes! Clothes! Clothes!'

"Then one night, as if in answer to my prayers, a wonderful thing happened. I had gone to my room so mother would not know how unhappy I felt. After a while, just to divert my thoughts, I opened a magazine, and my glance fell on a picture that attracted me. I began reading the article and it told the story of a girl, just like myself, who found the way to friends and happiness by learning right at home, through the Woman's Institute, to make all of her own clothes and hats.

"Almost wild with hope I read every word of the story. It seemed so real—so convincing—and so much the very opportunity I needed, that I wrote the Institute for more information that very night.

"Well, in just a few days a beautiful book arrived telling all about the Woman's Institute and the new method it has developed by which any woman or girl anywhere can easily and quickly learn at home in spare time all the secrets of the dressmaker's art. When I read how 25,000 women of all ages and in all circumstances, who live in all parts of the world, had solved their clothes problems in this fascinating new way, I made up my mind that I, too, would do it! So I joined the Institute at once and took up dressmaking.

"As soon as I saw my first lesson, I knew that I, too, had found the way to Happiness! Any one could learn by this easy fascinating method.

"Right away I began to feel like a different girl—happier than I had ever been in my life! I was so interested I devoted every spare moment I could to my lessons. And, of course, I made rapid progress—I couldn't help it. The textbooks seem to foresee and answer every possible question and the teachers take just as personal an interest as if they were right beside you!

"And I realize now how fortunate it was for me that I began my lessons in the summertime. That is absolutely the best time—the logical time—to learn dressmaking. The days are longer and every evening I had several hours daylight to devote to my work. Then, too, I could work out of doors. And the sheer summer fabrics are so much easier to handle—the summer dresses are so much simpler to make—and summer materials cost less.

"When my vacation came, I accomplished wonders! It was just delightful—working on those beautiful fabrics out of doors all day long. Almost at once I began making actual garments—that's another delightful thing about the course. Why I made a beautiful little waist after my third lesson!

"WHAT was most important to me, I also learned what colors and fabrics were most appropriate for me, how to develop those little touches that make clothes distinctively becoming. My course opened up a whole new world to me. When, after just a few lessons, I finished my first dress, I simply had to wear it to the office. And that night Bob met me. I'll never forget the expression of surprise on his face!

"I soon learned to copy models I saw in the shop windows, on the street, or in fashion magazines. Every step was so clearly explained that the things I always thought only a professional dressmaker could do were perfectly easy for me!

"Besides having more and prettier clothes than I ever had before, I have made a lot of new things for mother! She is just as happy about it as I am."

"I suppose," said Kitty, a little enviously, "you'll soon be needing a wedding dress. But, of course, you'll buy that?"

"Well, that's an entirely separate secret," Mary answered, blushing, "but a whole section of my course was devoted to planning and making a bride's complete trousseau—and I took the last stitch in my wedding dress nearly a week ago. Bob says it's the most wonderful ever!

"So that's my story," finished Mary. "I'm the happiest girl alive and I owe it all to the Woman's Institute! That alone could have made possible what Bob calls my 'Midsummer Magic.' And what I did—in saving hundreds of dollars on my clothes, having prettier, more stylish, better-made garments than I could have had any other way, and attracting happiness with them—any woman or girl can do!"

It will cost you nothing to find out all about the Woman's Institute and just what it can do for you. Simply send a letter, postal or the coupon below and you will receive, without obligation, by return mail, the full story of this great school which has proved such a wonderful blessing to women and girls the world over.

WOMAN'S INSTITUTE
Dept. 37 U, Scranton, Penna.

Please send me one of your booklets and tell me how I can learn the subject marked below

☐ Home Dressmaking ☐ Millinery ☐ Professional Dressmaking ☐ Cooking

Name . . . .
(Please specify whether Mrs. or Miss)

Address . . . .

(Adv.)

THE DAILY MEDITATION

J. H. Jowett, D.D., Rev. E. W. Caswell, P. W. Wilson, D. J. Burrell, D.D., W. W. Bustard, D.D., Prof. W. H. T. Dau

The Miracle at Home

SUNDAY. Luke 8 : 39. "Return to thine own house." Just go back home! That was the Master's counsel. I thought he might have made much larger use of a man who had been so sensationally healed. I thought he might have given him a more imposing stage. He might have sent him abroad on some pilgrimage of witness, commanding him to go north, south, east and west, to exhibit himself as one of the marvelous trophies of the Nazarene. What a phenomenal advertisement it would have been! What curiosity he would have kindled! In every village how folk would have left their fields to gaze upon him, and crowds would have gathered around him in the towns! But no! The Master told him to go quietly home! But what a home-going! He went back a new man, renewed in Christ Jesus, and his commission was to move about in common place ways, a miracle of the Lord in ordinary spheres. That is it! He was to be a miracle at home.

And this is the witness which today is demanded more than anything else. It is not spectacular beacons that we need; it is just ordinary street lamps. We want the transfigured presence in the common lot. We need lamps of the Lord to light up inconspicuous spheres and bring something of heavenly radiance into the workshop and the home. And especially we want the witness of men and women who have been renewed by Jesus, and who take an absolutely new spirit into places where hitherto they have been a burden or a nuisance.

Think of the pessimist going back home, shining with radiant hope. The funeral garb of melancholy has been changed for the bright wedding-garment of Christian confidence. Or think of some fretful, complaining spirit turning up one day clothed in the garment of praise. What an angel in the house! All these may seem to be very commonplace ministries as compared with the romance of going to Greenland's icy mountains or India's coral strand, but this is the sort of service which is going to transform the world. Return to thy house! Go and make a heaven of home, and God's kingdom will come with mighty power and grace. J. H. J.

"The Greatest of These Is Love"

MONDAY. Eph. 4 : 15. "But speaking the truth in love." It is not enough to tell the truth; a gentle compassionate spirit should accompany the proclamation. Let the words of truth come down like the life-giving raindrops on the earth, not like hailstones, destroying everything they touch. A Christian worker once said to an enthusiastic evangelist, "You fight for the Lord as though the devil was in you." It must be Christianity in love as well as in earnest. Hearts burning with love for men will find other hearts among the auditors; heart answers to heart. Justice must be tempered with mercy to reach lost ones. Obedience is slavery without loving devotion. Worship is formal and prayer is cold unless the heart goes out to the heart of our heavenly Father. He who is love itself must have love to reciprocate his affection. God's love may burn with pain in the conscience of the sinner, but it is the love that gave Jesus to save from eternal burnings. It is the consuming fire that burns up the dross of sin and makes the soul a palace for the King.

Great truths, tempered with love, winged with mercy, become messages of salvation to multitudes. Nations should speak the truth in love to each other; they are our brothers in the great family of all people. Without love we are nothing! We are only as sounding brass or tinkling cymbals, though we may have the tongue of an angel, if we have not love clothing the truth we utter. God commands thee to love thy neighbor as thyself; thy neighboring nation, thy friend and brother. E. W. C.

The Spiritual Kingdom

TUESDAY. Luke 17 : 21. "The kingdom of God is within you." At first sight, you would have said that our resources in men and money were many times greater than those of the original disciples. We confront the world with hundreds of thousands of clergy and ministers, lay preachers, Sunday school teachers and missionaries, elders and deaconesses, with organists, choirs and all the camp-followers of a great religion. But at Jerusalem the little community which met in the upper room consisted only of one hundred and twenty men, with some women in addition. Of the multitudes who had heard our Lord speak and received his healing, none save these clung to his cause. Here words, even his words, which only reached the ear—mere miracles, even his miracles, which only cured the flesh—were not enough to stand the final test. Then, as now, more was needed than preaching, however persuasive, and philanthropy, however effective. And we must find out what it was.

Certainly not money! Our churches are endowed with millions; they had scarcely a cent with which to organize a revival, while, as for a political establishment, he had by his last words before the Ascension postponed that idea. He would not thus set up his eternal kingdom upon earth. Indeed, if you had visited Jerusalem at this time, and had asked for the Christian Church, none would have known what you meant. The disciples, left to themselves, were only Nazarenes—followers of an obscure Galilean who had been executed as a felon—and it was not until years later, and then at Antioch, many miles distant, that they used the name which hails him Messiah. At the outset the Church was not even recognized as a definite society. Outsiders noted those who belonged to Christ merely because they lived in a certain "way" which differed from the customs of the time. With us, worship is public, and conduct is sometimes private. With them it was the other way round—conduct was apparent, and worship was concealed behind closed doors. There was an inner life, which God alone watched. P. W. W.

HARVEST SONG

By BLAINE C. BIGLER

GOD of the harvest, beneath whose mighty hand
The waving fields are filled with golden grain;
Let us not forget Thy presence in the land,
But give Thee thanks for every loaded wain.

We know who sent the rain and summer sun,
Who made the soil so golden grain could grow;
We're thankful, God, for all that You have done,
But may we not forget to tell You so.

"Come and See"

WEDNESDAY. John 1 : 46. "And Nathanael said unto him, Can any good thing come out of Nazareth? Philip saith unto him, Come and see." John the Baptist was preaching at the fords of the Jordan and multitudes were thronging to hear him. It was rumored that the time was ripe for the appearing of the long-expected Christ, and John bare witness of him. "Repent ye, repent ye," he cried, "for the kingdom is at hand! There cometh One after me whose shoe latchet I am not worthy to unloose!"

The Jew Nathanael sat under a fig-tree meditating on these things. He preferred to do his own thinking rather than to follow the crowd. As "an Israelite without guile," he would be glad to welcome the Messiah; but he wanted to act advisedly. To him came his friend Philip, saying, "We have found the Messiah!"—"Who is he?"—"Jesus of Nazareth."—"Can any good thing come out of that notorious town?"—By which we are given to understand that a man may be "without guile" and still handicapped by prejudice. He should have known that the whitest lilies grow in quagmires.

The world cares little or nothing for the ipse dixit of Sir Oracle. People are thinking for themselves in these days. The best an advocate can do for even a divine Client like ours is to present his case to the jury and leave the decision to their sovereign wills. The question is this: "Is Jesus the Christ?" and the best argument in his behalf is, "Come and see."

"We speak that we do know and testify that we have seen." But let hearsay pass. The case rests upon its merits. Judge ye, therefore, as wise men. Be fair with yourselves and with truth. My friend, if Jesus is what he claims to be there is no alternative for you, as an honest man, but to accept him here and now saying "My Lord, my Life, my Sacrifice, my Saviour and my all!" D. J. B.

The Master of All

THURSDAY. John 11 : 28. "The ma come." The brother had died and was The sisters sent for Christ, who in a few days at this house of mourning. As he neared the Martha hastened to her sister, saying, "Mar Master is come."

As we stop to ask ourselves the question, Master of what?" immediately there comes the a The Master of sin.

Christ was the one man who always master and was never mastered by it. The greatest of today is not the master of finance nor the of man, but the Master of sin.

Again, we know that Jesus is the Master of s We call him the Man of Sorrows, but he was the Master of sorrow. In Luke 7, we get the of a funeral—the widow burying her only son. is coming one way along the dusty road, tire not too tired to notice the little crowd of m ers coming the other way carrying the coffi which there was the body of the young He stopped the funeral procession, w around the coffin, touched the young with the touch of Life, and gave him into the arms of his anxious mother. day when he comes again he will brin gether all those who have been separate sorrow and sin.

In the last place, we may know that the Master of death. Christ is the conqu of Death. He conquered Death, which conquered all conquerors, thus robbing grave of its victory and death of its stin W. W.

The One United Family

FRIDAY. John 10 : 16. "One fold, and Shepherd." Let us take the New Te ment and read for ourselves the Acts of Apostles, and then record our first and mediate impression. Does it not strike at once that if these early Christians revis us today they would need a dictionary? seems to me that they would have been ut ly puzzled by our sectarian labels. Am the Jews, as among the Moslems of our own tin there were, doubtless, parties—Pharisees, Saduc and so on—but I hardly dare to think what P would have said about the schisms which now cle asunder the Body of Christ. We do indeed hear Nicolaitans at Ephesus, but they were solemnly nounced by John the Apostle.

Baptism was administered—that is clear—but I not find that there were people called Bap Preachers went on circuit, but there were no Met dists. Elders were ordained, but there were no Pr byterians. Congregations were autonomous, b there were no Congregationalists or Independen Galatia was a diocese, but there were no Episcop lians. Paul was probably unmarried, and he certain bound himself by vows, but he was not a monk or friar. The good and true in each group everywhe was shared by all. Many famous countries recei the Gospel, but none of them was honored by a n tional or geographical church. Every Christian w equally the elect or chosen child of the One Etern Father, and, as such, was brother or sister of eve other Christian. P. W. W.

The Way

SATURDAY. John 14 : 6. "No man cometh u the Father, but by me." This saying of Christ ca hardly be overemphasized. Great differences, indeed, exist among men as regards their intelligen and disposition, nevertheless they are all equal a regards their need of a Saviour. One may write beau ful books, while another tills his fields; one may mak a good soldier, while another excels as a mechani

God, however, views all men alike, and bears towa them all thoughts of love, mercy, and peace. H has sent us only one Redeemer, in order that we migh not seek salvation from our sins in our learning, industry, bravery, skill, perseverance, etc.

It follows, then, that whoever would be saved must have Christ, and must not rely on the power of his in tellect, the strength of his arm, the noble qualities o his heart. All these things cannot stand before th text: "No one cometh unto the Father, but by me." "Neither is there salvation in any other; for ther is no other name given among men, whereby we sha be saved." W. H. T. D.

BIXBY'S

JET-OIL

FOR BLACK SHOES

15¢

REG. U.S. PAT. OFF.
BIXBY'S
"JET-OIL"
SHOE POLISH
FOR BLACK SHOES
OF CALF, BOX CALF, VICI OR GLAZED KID PATENT AND ENAMELLED LEATHER
S.M.BIXBY & Co.
NEW YORK, U.S.A.

With shoe costs so high, you should know how to keep them in the best condition. Use Jet-Oil, an oil and wax polish, which makes the leather soft and pliable, and adds months of wear. The Bixby dauber attached to the stopper in each bottle, takes but a minute and does not soil clothing or hands

Gives a perfect shine

ShuWite

FOR WHITE SHOES

15¢

You must clean white shoes so frequently that naturally, you want the quickest and handiest cleanser. "ShuWite" is applied with a Bixby dauber attached to each stopper No rag-no brush-just uncork and apply. Takes but a minute, gives a perfect appearance, and prevents soiling hands or clothing

Keeps white shoes white

ShuWite
SHOE WHITE
3 FLUID OZ. NET.
REG. U.S. PAT. OFF.
BIXBY'S
WHITENS
AND CLEANS
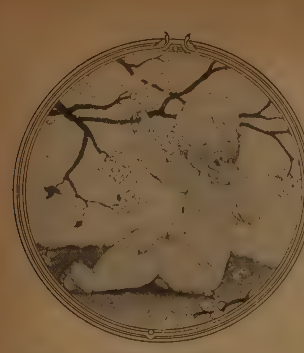
WHITE CANVAS,
WHITE BUCK,
WHITE SUEDE,
SHOES



The Petal-Texture of Baby's Skin

An apple-tree in Spring glimmers with pink and white petals that fall in rosy showers or sway in clouds of bloom. There is nothing of fresher, more innocent beauty in the world except—

Yes, a Baby! That tree might be the Tree of Life. Babies are like those blossoms. Or think of a rose garden in the summertime. The tiny hands and feet of a baby are like those silken-soft uncrumpling petals.

But, after all, a Baby is not a fairy, but an intensely sensitive little human organism that demands constant care and protection, needs plenty of healthful sleep, and is subject to tortures of physical irritation during its first years.

The first dictate of common-sense to the mother is care of that delicate, flower-soft baby skin by using constantly a safe talcum powder. The rest of the family may take a fancy to baby's talcum. They usually do. But make them buy their own MENNEN'S. And remember that MENNEN'S is the powder you want for baby. It was the original Borated Talcum and there is nothing just like it for skin-comfort.

MENNEN
TALCUM POWDERS
With the original borated formula—include
Borated Violet
Flesh Tint Cream Tint
Talcum for Men

THE MENNEN COMPANY
NEWARK, N.J. U.S.A.

TRADE MARK

Laboratories:
Newark, New Jersey; Montreal, Quebec
Sales Agent in Canada:
HAROLD F. RITCHIE & CO., Ltd., Toronto, Ont.

MENNEN'S
BORATED
TALCUM POWDER

Has Weathered the Storms Since 17

THE bells of St. Michael's! No sound appeals so touchingly to the heart of a Charlestonian as the sound of these old bells. Their tone is sacred to his ears, and men who have long dwelt in exile have yearned to hear them once more.

The South has preserved its history and historic places to a greater degree than other parts of the country, and in the South no place contains quite so many historic shrines or so many places made famous by brave deeds as does Charleston, the quaint old Southern city on the South Carolina coast. A visitor to Charleston, S. C., the center of all tourist travel between North and South, finds within a small radius more historic spots than in almost any other city in America.

Especially interesting are its churches of the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries; but the one most dearly beloved and the one that attracts the stranger most is St. Michael's, the beautiful old building standing on the corner of Broad and Meeting Streets. This church was built in 1752; is of brick, rough cast, and is now colored white. There is a peculiar repose and stability about the entire structure which never fails to impress the reverent beholder.

The Old Charleston Church

The steeple is 180 feet in height, and is scarcely surpassed for its architectural beauty by any in America. From the pigeonholes, the highest point in the tower, patriots of the Revolution watched the coming and progress of the British fleets, and almost a century later the warships of Dupont and Dahlgren were seen from the same aerie long before they crossed the bar.

Peculiarly interesting is the history of the bells, which with the clock were imported from England in 17 the British evacuated Cha 1782 Major Traille of the Ro lery seized the bells on the that they were a military p Great grief prevailed, and th applied for them on the gro they were purchased by pri scription, and Sir Guy issued an order for their res but they had already been sh England. How they mis chimes of their beloved b how happy they were when Charlestonian in England p them and reshipped them to in 1783! They were imm taken possession of, and on their chimes rang out.

When the Civil War br they were taken to Colum capital, for safe keeping, a that city was burned by S they were so much injured b to be rendered entirely usel of them were stolen and coul be replaced. In the spring they were started on their voyage across the Atlantic t cast. They were again place steeple, and once again the ol iar chimes rang out.

It would be hard to expla stranger the strong personal that every native son and daught for the sound of these, "the s chimes in all the land." The spoken to him from childh worship, of terror, of sorrow and

MAUDE GARD

The Lord's Supper

International Sunday School Lesson for July 20. Matt. 26:26-30 and I Cor. 11:20-

The Meaning of the Holy Communion

By Rev. George D. Allison, Ph.D.

IN NEARLY all religions of ancient times there was a solemn meal or feast, and around the preparation of food and the eating of it gathered the primitive ideals of God's care for men and men's duty of hospitality to one another. The Hebrews kept the Passover as a reminder of the national deliverance from Egypt, and annually reproduced the hasty meal of the lamb, with bitter herbs and unleavened bread. It was celebrated only in the family circle, and not at the Temple, so that it made the father a priest and the children the eager learners.

Jesus' last Passover was kept with his own "family" of the twelve, and he had a great desire to partake with them before he should suffer. It was the last chance to be together, and just as the meal was being finished he instituted the simple memorial of himself. "Do this when I am gone," he said; "whenever you eat together, break bread and drink of the cup, and remember that I died for you." For a long time the early disciples "met from house to house," and when it was time to eat, Peter or James or John would take the loaf and recall to them the days of fellowship and instruction in Galilee. Probably the Lord's Supper was held daily, possibly at every meal; then, as the Church grew and developed, once a week on the Lord's Day, not on the Jewish Sabbath.

In the Corinthian Letter we have the sad story of the travesty on the ordinance when it was degraded into a likeness of the heathen orgies, and "one was hungry and another drunken." Doubtless it was because of this sort of thing that the Supper was reduced to the symbolism of each taking a bit of the bread and a mouthful of the cup.

The Old Covenant was distinctly one of works. It was the pledge exchanged between a sovereign and his subjects, God promising protection and care in return for obedience and righteousness. The messenger of the old covenant proclaimed law and penalty to a primitive age. "Do right and you will be blessed; do wrong and you will suffer punishment," was the message.

But the new covenant is not merely between a King and his people, but between a Father and his children. It does not call for a slavish obedience, but a glad and eager following of the Father's will by loving and consecrated children. Its elements are inward and spiritual, binding the partakers into one family in Christ Jesus, making the ties of brotherhood and the obligations of mutual service to be plainly felt. The Sacrificing Christ portrays God's feeling of yearning and self-giving love to man, and at the same time challenges us to a willingness to bear our share of burdens for others, to give ourselves to the Kingdom of God.

So when we participate in the communion we do more than reverently remember our great Master and Teacher. We covenant together to maintain brotherhood, to care for and pray for and minister unto each other, and also to maintain Christ's Church, to be faithful to its fellowship and to extend its influence and usefulness.

Misconceptions of the Observance

The true ministry of the communion in reviving tender thoughts and eliciting new resolves of loyalty is marred by certain misapprehensions regarding its meaning and purpose. The class-room is the place to discuss and correct these misconceptions.

(1) There is current a vein of ignorant misunderstanding among many Protestants, young and older. They come with reverence, even awe, but without a real conception of the Memorial. Somehow or other, more or less magically, they suppose it does some mysterious good. But what we need is intelligent and thoughtful participation from the heart. It calls for some preparation, for forgiveness of others for repentance of sins, for a meditative remembrance of the Lord Jesus and an eager aspiration to be one with him, in life and purpose and communion with the Father. It is a place to get right with God, to put our lives at his disposal. Our part in it is very important, lest we should not receive the blessing the Spirit is striving to impart.

(2) Some of our sincerest Chri do not partake because they say, " not worthy." We honor their hu and we ought all to be equally hu But our religion is not alone fo worthy. Else there would be f enter in! We come to God as sinn our need, and must repent and confession unto him. But we d have to stay away when he is w to bless. So do not remain indiff because you are not good en However, if that means you are sorry and repentant, you are i in bad case and truly need to be soned with. If you mean that you not at peace with your fellow C tians, then meditate on Christ's w regarding forgiveness; consider C goodness and your own need of for ness too. If you can even pray t made forgiving, then come to the per and to the Christ who will teach

(3) There is another error mad some: they absent themselves bec they do not exactly believe what understand to be orthodox. We have to love Jesus and to love one other. He is not keeping people a from himself because of intellec perplexities. Rather he is saying to doubting or the timid, "Come unto

Leaving the Lord's Table

We come humble, penitent, pra ful. It is a time to think quietly, to solve deeply, to plan purposefully serve. We should leave it with pledge to respond more loyally Christ's will, to consider his plans program, to be kinder and more c siderate of others. We have b silent, thoughtful, reserved, during service. Ere we leave let us lo around upon our brothers and sist with a smile that assures of mut appreciation of the Master and of ea other. Who shall say how many st gling churches of erring, struggli saints have been saved again and ag from disintegration by the holy fello ship of the Lord's table? It endears t Church to us, as the trysting place the soul with God. It endears to us o fellow-workers in the vineyard of H Lord. It ensures our following o Paul's great injunction to Timot "Remember Jesus Christ!" en Is a Brewery Not a Brewery?

By RICHARD BRAUNSTEIN

Rainier Brewery of Portland, ., is converted into a tannery ploying 1,600 men, where it employed 156 men.

uilding of the Portland Brewing y, also in Oregon, is now used manufacture of furniture, em- 300 men. Formerly it employed rewery in Lansing, Mich., is now the manufacture of automobile rewery at Huntington, W. Va., eat-packing plant. The Iowa rewery, the Uneeda Brewery of rginia and a Cedar Rapids brew- all creameries.

Coors Brewery of Denver makes milk and a fine quality of por-

North Yakima, Wash., brewery it by-products company.

Salem Brewery, Ore., is manu- g loganberry juice.

Star Brewery of Washington, Pa., known as the Capital Paint, Oil rnish Company.

Anheuser-Busch Brewing Asso- , of St. Louis, which has so long ctured "Budweiser," and one nost expensive plants in the world, is a pork-packing concern. A new company has been organized with a $1,000,000 capital, and it is known as the Bevo Company.

The Jackson Brewery Company of New Orleans and the National Brewery Company of the same place are being converted into dehydrating plants for the production of dry vegetables and fruits and the manufacture of denatured alcohol.

In Flint, Mich., a brewery has been made over into a church, while in Chicago a brewery has been converted into a hospital.

One in Aberdeen, Wash., is a clam-canning plant. One in Spokane is making vinegar. One in Mobile is making syrup and stock feed out of watermelons. One in Peoria, Ill., is grinding corn meal. One in Rhode Island is producing moving pictures. One in Seattle is turning rice into syrup, while another is making soft drinks. These employ more men and expend more capital than ever before.

Recent gossip has it that a unique experiment is to be tried by the Easton, Pa., Brewery. This concern will make for the Hungarian, Bulgarian and Serbian trade that succulent dish known to fame as goulash.

"Rapid Transit" in China

average American, ccustomed as he is ing whirled about and from city to y twentieth century of transportation, evince consider- surprise to learn of ethods of transpor- in vogue in parts ina to-day. Our shows an old cart, by two oxen, and led over by a pictur- Chinese attendant, who walks ely alongside of his conveyance. ise of these ox-carts is common in Northern China, where the roads are worn deep into the soil from years of this heavy travel.

Young People's Topics for July 20

ading Against Intemperance

tian Endeavor and B. Y. P. U. Topic. Eph. 6 : 10–20.

HIS may be made a victory meeting, celebrating the beginning of National Prohibition in the war ibition effective July 1. But it d be shortsightedness to let the idea conclusive victory dominate the ing. The war is not over, there is a of guerilla warfare to be fought out, niping to be stopped. We might phrase the Scripture to read We tle not against flesh and blood, but nst evil intrenched, against appetite roned, against brewers and malt- , wine-growers and a host of others. men who like liquor will seek it, and men who have their money invested rewing and distilling plants, and who not yet realized how much more itable the same investment would be rned to better uses, will seek to min- to appetite. Already they are try- o cut the fangs of prohibition with a wine and beer exemption. They do everything possible to discredit ibition, to show that it does not pro- , they will lie and threaten and work ath the political surface to gain what enied them when sought openly. It be several years before the liquor evil ad and buried. It has had a knock- but it hasn't "taken the count."

Therefore we need to be crusaders, not to achieve prohibition, but to enforce it. And while we are fighting liquor, let us guard also against intemperance in thought or speech, in eating or playing. The world just now needs steady folks who will not bend to every wind of opinion that blows, who are sure of their ideals and who will not be swerved aside.

Introducing Jesus to Our Friends

Epworth League Topic. Luke 5 : 27–32.

WHEN we have a friend visiting us, we are anxious to introduce him to our other friends and they accept him because they like us, and judge him, at first, as they judge us. If we go to a friend in a revival meeting and ask him to come forward and accept our Saviour, we may meet an incredulous smile. It often happens that, renewing our consecration, we start out to do personal work and find ourselves balked by our recent unworthy living. There is only one thing to do; to live the Christ-life until the witness of our daily conduct recommends our Friend and Saviour to our friends and comrades. No amount of fine speaking or eloquent urging will introduce Jesus to our friends as will an unselfish, helpful, cheerful, sacrificing, rejoicing, Christian life. If we live in the spirit of Christ, we will make him known to our friends without much attempt at speech.

The COFFEE House
is coming back

The Coffee House, in the good old days, was the rendezvous of congenial spirits. Noted for quaintness and picturesqueness, it was here the master minds of the age were wont to foregather and sharpen the wit with merry quip and jest, to weigh matters of great moment; and give one to another, "something craggy to break the mind upon."

THE tendency of the time is toward the revival of the good old-fashioned Coffee House—where men may meet and mingle with the freedom of a club. And chat, and be sociable, and toast their friends to their hearts' content in the modern "cup that cheers but does not inebriate."

A delightful old custom is coming back—and we shall all be better for it! Good coffee is man's drink. It is cheering and soothing. It humors his whims and moods. It appeals to his better self and inspires his better nature. Good coffee is conducive to good humor, good temper, good health, good fellowship and—good citizenship.

Coffee is a civilizer—a stabilizer. In the councils of state, at the banquets of the great, in the conferences of men of affairs—wherever mighty matters portend and calm, matured judgment is required—there you will find coffee.

Who may say how much of the work of the world is aided and abetted by the cup of good coffee? In America it is the great universal drink, the common heritage of rich and poor, of great and small. We may all have coffee. Nobody need be without it—we may get it everywhere.

Iced Coffee, on a hot day, is particularly refreshing. It loses none of its savor when served icy cold in a tall glass,—with cream and sugar or without. It is both tasteful and healthful.

Coffee—the American drink

Copyright, 1919, by the Joint Coffee Trade Publicity Committee of the United States

A HEALING CREAM
Mentholatum
Always made under this signature A. A. Hyde

"The Little Nurse for Little Ills"
for Insect bites and Sunburn

STOPS the itch at once—try it and see. Cools and heals sunburn gently and surely.

Antiseptic—healing—safe.

At all druggists' in tubes, 25c. Jars, 25c, 50c, $1.

The Mentholatum Co.
Buffalo, N.Y.

How to Sell Your Real Estate

Any Kind—Anywhere

I got cash for my property in less than two weeks. Made sale myself so had no commission to pay. You can do the same with The Simplex Plans for Selling Real Estate. No matter where located, these practical, scientific plans will show you how to sell your property—quickly and for cash—without employing agents or paying commissions. Investigate at once. Learn how easily you can use The Simplex Plans, just as I did, to sell your real estate. Write today (a postal will do) to

The Simplex Co.
Dept. 68, 1123 Broadway, N. Y.

They will send you full particulars without cost or obligation.

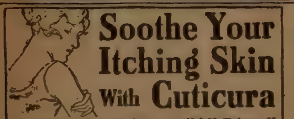
Quick Results!

"Sold for cash in 10 days. Recommend your methods."—Wm. H. Cartland, Mass. "Your method sold my farm for cash."—Mrs. L. A. Childs, Minn. "Sold my property. Your plan is quickest I ever saw."—Johnson String, N. J. "Sold my hotel for $5,375."—G. F. Stewart, Ill.

ROLLING BATH TUB WITH WATER HEATER

The wonderful new Ro-San product for homes without plumbing. Nothing like it anywhere. Equal in comfort, style and quality to our famous Indoor Toilet and Washstand. Full size metal tub, white enameled. Simple heater and 12 gallon nickeled water tank. Water heats quickly. A boon if you have sickness or need hot water quick, day or night. Use gas, gasoline or kerosene. No plumbing or extras. After use tub closes up against frame, less than 3 feet square. Covers heater. Rolls anywhere easily. Keep in small closet. Bathe in comfort—as often as you like—anywhere in the house. Write today for particulars and price.

ROWE SANITARY MANUFACTURING CO.
1607 6th St.
Detroit, Mich.



Soothe Your Itching Skin With Cuticura

All druggists: Soap 25, Ointment 25 & 50, Talcum 25. Sample each free of "Cuticura, Dept. M, Boston."

THE JEWISH PROPHETIC CONFERENCE

AT THE recent Jewish Prophetic Conference on Christian Fundamentals, held in Chicago, the 2,000 Christians present adopted the following resolutions. The Conference was held in the auditorium of the Moody Bible Institute, under the auspices of the Chicago Hebrew Mission.

"Whereas, during the past years of the great world-war the Jewish people have suffered untold agonies, and whereas these sufferings still continue, with indications that still greater tribulations are impending; and

"Whereas, we Christian believers have a deep love for God's ancient people and great sympathy for them, realizing our great debt to the Jews, chiefly because that unto them were committed the oracles of God (Rom. 3 : 2), as well as preserved by them, and because we know that theirs is the adoption, and the glory, and the covenants, and the giving of the Law, and the service of God, and the promises; whose are the fathers, and of whom as concerning the flesh Christ came, who is over all (Rom. 9: 4, 5).

"Therefore be it resolved, That we pledge ourselves daily to pray to the God of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, David's Son and David's Lord, that the day may speedily come when the dark shadows of 2,000 years may flee away, and the long-promised day of righteousness and peace may come for Israel's race.

"We also pledge ourselves to pray that the hearts of the beloved Jewish people may be turned to their own sacred Scripture, and that they may turn back to the Law and to the testimony, so that they may see him who is our Saviour and their coming King, and learn from their own prophets that which will soon come to pass.

"And furthermore resolved, That we express our sympathy to the Jewish people in the present crisis, doing whatsoever we can in their behalf, and that a copy of these resolutions be sent to the President of the United States."

Because of the remarkable events of the past year, the general interest in the Jewish problem, and the growing conviction that the true Church has a very important work in this hour of crisis, the Chicago Hebrew Mission sent forth a general call for a Jewish Prophetic Conference. As a result, fresh impetus has been given to the work of evangelizing the Jews, and a spirit of prayer and supplication has been poured out upon many Christians for the salvation of the Jews and the fulfillment of God's revealed purposes for them as a nation.

The conviction was expressed by several speakers that God is moving upon the hearts and minds of the Jewish people in a special way, and is about to do a new work on their behalf.

Among the Conference speakers were: Rev. A. C. Gaebelein of New York; Ex-Rabbi Max Wertheimer of Ada, Ohio; Rev. R. A. Belsham of Augusta, Ga.; Dr. S. S. Cryor of El Paso, Ill.; Rev. Henry Singer of Detroit, Mich.; President C. A. Blanchard of Wheaton, Ill.; Mr. Herman Newmark of Japan; Dean James M. Gray, D.D., Rev. Harry Lindbloom, Dr. Robert M. Russell, Rev. C. P. Meeker, Rev. Wm. R. McCarrell, Rev. Joseph S. Flacks, Rev. J. C. O'Hair, of Chicago, and Rev. Norman H. Camp, Superintendent of the Mission.

One of the interesting features was a visit of forty or fifty Jewish children from the Mission schools on Wednesday afternoon, as they marched into the Conference waving Jewish and American flags, and singing "Onward, Christian Soldiers." They afterward repeated a portion of the fifty-third chapter of Isaiah.

At the closing session of the Conference two resolutions were adopted. One was in the form of a message to the Executive Committee of the World's Conference on Christian Fundamentals at Philadelphia, asking that in a general call for prayer, special intercession be made on behalf of Israel. The other resolution expressed the sympathy of all Christians present for the Jews, and pledged daily prayer for them.

Chinese children in Christian school at play

CHRISTIAN TEACHING OF CHINESE CHILDREN

AT Hinghwa, Chinese children, or as many of them as limited facilities will permit, are seeking admission to the Christian schools. This center of missionary education carries the student from kindergarten to normal training school. Romanized Chinese, a simplified form of Chinese writing which reduces the number of characters to that of the English alphabet, is being t at Hinghwa. Children can le read within a year through the this system, whereas the old sy form required three or four ye master. Although China is a nat scholar-worshipers, not more tha per cent. of the entire population i to read and write.

Some Rainy Day Dollies

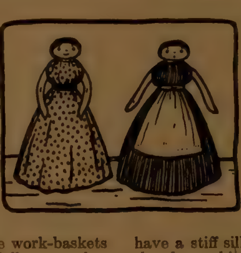
By LAURA A. KIRKMAN

PEGGY and Mary spent one long rainy morning helping their mother, so that afternoon their mother called them into the laundry and told them that she would show them how to make dolls out of clothespins—as she has done when she was a little girl.

Peggy and Mary's mother picked out two of the smoothest and whitest clothespins and then went to her desk and drew funny little faces on the head of each clothespin and made black hair.

The next step was a journey to the rag-bag, from which each little girl chose the scraps of material she liked best. Then they got their little work-baskets and began to dress the dolls as mother directed.

They first padded the upper part of the body, from just below the head to the waist-line, by winding it with a strip of muslin one inch wide and a yard long. After this they snipped four glove fi from a pair of old gloves, stuffed t and sewed two of the fingers to the ded part of each doll—thus prov arms.



The dress was not hard to make: simply cut a cir piece of material, ing a hole in the ce large enough for doll's head to through, and two o holes large enough the arms, and put on each doll. A li piece of narrow rib tied around the w finished the costu

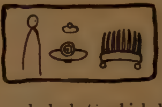
One of the dol which was dressed stiff silk, stood al The other doll ha have a stiff silk petticoat. (Of co the dress skirt and the petticoat had to be longer than the doll.)

Peggy and Mary liked these fu dolls so much that they preferred play with them rather than with th bought dolls, for a long time!

Tinfoil Jewelry

EVERY time Helen's mother bought a yeast cake she saved the tinfoil wrapper for Helen.

When Helen had a little box full of the tinfoil she suggested to her girl friends that they play "rich lady" by making and wearing jewelry of the silver paper.



It was great fun. By covering buttons with the tinfoil they made lockets which hung around their necks by having a thread run through the needle holes in the center. These, when tied about the wrist, made silver wrist-watches, and Helen made the watches look even more real by pasting discs of white paper over the tinfoil-covered buttons and drawing on these discs, with a pencil, the face of a clock.

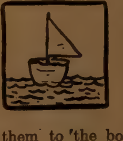
They made rings, too, by winding a piece of the silver paper around the finger and tying a bright bead on top, for a stone. Then they took the side-combs out of their hair and tipped them with tinfoil.

Indeed, they had such fun with the imitation jewelry that they saved carefully, at the end of their afternoo play, for another day.

Eggshell Boats

ON BAKING-DAY Dora alwa asked her mother to save the e shells so that she could amuse her litt brother Henry by making boats out them.

This is how she made the little boat



She washed out th most perfect half- shells and set them the sun to dry. The she cut little triangul pieces of white pap and pasted one edge match-sticks for sa When mast and sa were dry she glue them to the bottom of the eggshell by dropping a very little glue in ea shell.

Mother always let her have a pan water in the back yard to sail the boat in, and little Henry had lots of fun mak ing waves by stirring the water with stick.

e Hundred Per Cent. American Boys

' to prove that it is not necessary
the average boy to break win-stone stray cats, tie tin cans to -dogs' tails, pilfer farmers' or-products and win the disapproval
s in general, we submit the follow-ms, which are an eloquent com-ry on the fact that all a healthy
-ooded boy needs is a sense of direcr his surplus energy and desire for
. Of course the boys who won cord were Scouts, and this sum-of their war work is a practical ation of the second Scout Law, is, "A is loyal."
the four y Loans sold 1,- 747 sub-ptions,
nting to 27,744,650.
to April
hey sold 51,031.25 of War
vings
nps, and was only eginning.
anding
ut located, 758,660
rd feet,
h in other s consist-5,200 cars.
uitpits col-
ed for gas
ks amount-
o over 100
ads.
ar gardens
war farms conducted by Scouts ughout the country numbered 00.
ver 30,000 pieces of government
ature were distributed.
couts rendered all kinds of service to Red Cross, the United War Work mittee and other national organiza-
s serving the government.
athered thousands of books for the erican Library Association.
erved in the Food and Fuel Con-ation Campaigns.

Stood ready at all times to do local errands along patriotic lines, the service rendered being impossible to enumerate, much of it not even being recorded.

Nearly 70,000 Scouts earned the Treasury Department's medal in the Liberty Loan drives, and 16,000 achievement buttons have been awarded for War Savings sales, 8,221 ace medals, 18,886 bronze palms, 1,726 siver palms and 212 gold palms.

At present there are 365,214 Boy Scouts in the United States. It is the aim of national headquarters to enroll 1,000,000 boys by next February. America needs more Boy Scouts. The Manual of Organization and all information that may be desired may be obtained from headquarters, 200 Fifth Avenue, New York City. It is significant that Hon. W. G. McAdoo, former Secretary of the Treasury and formerly Director General of Railroads, will be in charge of the Citizen's National Committee, to include representatives from all states, as well as Religious, Civic, Business, Educational, Labor and War Work interests of the nation.

THE WAR IS OVER BUT OUR WORK IS NOT

The Boy Scout is an asset to every community.

There are over 10,000,000 boys between the ages of 11 nd 21 in the United States. How many of them are in your community? What is being done to prepare them for citizenship?

What are you doing for them?

What is your church doing for them?

Richard Braunstein

Mont-Lawn Is Open

HEY were a happy crowd, the sixty youngsters who were the first guests the Christian Herald Family at the mmer Fresh-Air Home at Nyack-on--Hudson. They met at the Christian rald offices and stood in a silent, ap-hensive line while the doctor lady ked at throats and tonsils, hunted for enoids and evidences of possible ill-ss, and listened to fluttering heart-ats unduly quickened by fear of the nial of a hoped-for holiday. But the ctor lady had a heart of her own and e understood, and soon the apprehenn was changed to anticipation, and e sixty small folks, duly listed by name d address, were told to sit down and it for the special trolley car which ould carry them to the Grand Central ation. They sat there somewhat isily, bobbing up at every entrance exit from the room, anxiously inquirg if the car had come, while those who d been there detailed the delights of ont-Lawn to those who were going the first time.
Two former guests had quite a verbal ttle over the question of whether they uld go from the Tarrytown Ferry to home in a motor bus or a horse-wn stage. Each insisted, until they rned that both were possible; then they decided to let the girls have the motor bus and the boys the stage. One remembered the cool shower bath, another had his lines all laid for a dash for the big slide, and another wondered if the cherries were ripe, while one small girl was hungry for roses.

We spent a happy half-hour talking with the boys and girls and listening to them. One boy said he had a stamp and the first thing he would do after getting to Mont-Lawn would be to write a letter to his mother. One had twenty-five cents and another twenty cents, and neither could quite understand why, as our guests, he would have no chance to buy anything. When told we would be there on the Fourth, a little girl solemnly informed us there would be a big strike that day, an East Side echo of the Mooney agitation. One of the boys, hearing July mentioned, said, "No more whisky." Oh, they are a live lot, and Mont-Lawn has a message of love and a widened outlook for them.

This first company was followed at intervals of two days by other similar groups, so that July 1 saw Mont-Lawn filled to capacity, ministering to over 330 little folks. We hope to tell you the story of the formal opening in next week's paper.

Stylish — and oh, so comfortable!

Keds are the vogue.

After all there's nothing so essential as good-looking, comfortable, really suitable summer shoes.

On the lawn, the club-porch, the links or at home — anywhere, any time — there are styles for all occasions.

Keds are canvas rubber-soled shoes of unmistakable value. Every pair means solid comfort and lasting satisfaction.

You and every member of the family should be able to find just the Keds you want at any good shoe-store. Ask for them. Look for the name "Keds" stamped on the sole.

United States Rubber Company

Keds

UNITED STATES RUBBER COMPANY
US
RUBBER SYSTEM
AND ASSOCIATED COMPANIES

COLOR VIEWS of the HOLY LAND
Christian Herald Bible House New York

10 WONDERFUL VIEWS OF THE HOLY LAND

HERE is a great opportunity for you to secure ten beautiful reproductions in full color of the most famous and accurate Holy Land paintings that have ever been made. These works of a great artist have preserved to the world the Holy Land of Bible days, that country known and loved so well by our Saviour.

In the past you have known the Holy Land only through the most meager and uninspired dressings, none of them presenting this wonderful country in its true beauty and charm. Now you are offered masterpieces that put before your eyes the entire birthplace of Christianity as Christ himself knew it. For the first time ten of these views in all the beautiful tints and shades of the land itself are offered you.

Like a Visit to Palestine

As you look at these pictures you feel that you yourself stand with the artist on the slope of Olivet and look across the valley of Jehoshaphat, through which winds the old road to Samaria, and beyond, under the bright sunshine, you see the walls of Jerusalem. Through these works of art you travel the Jordan road as did our Saviour so many years ago. You visit the Pool of Bethesda, and the tomb of St. James, and feel the charm, the beauty, and the dignity of every sacred place. These reproductions are in themselves a trip to the Holy Land.

David Roberts, of the Royal Academy, made the long trip from England for the purpose of painting the most famous scenes of biblical history in order that the Christian world might have truthful pictures of the birthplace of the religion. He expressed in water-colors the scenes of Christ's life and activities, as well as many things of historical interest in Egypt and the Nile country, the very cradle of modern civilization, which he visited while on his way to Palestine. Reproductions of ten of Mr. Roberts' great paintings have been made and are now offered you in folio form. The booklet is 4½x9½ inches. Every picture is worthy of framing.

With each of the ten pictures goes a complete description of the scene depicted with mention of the historical and biblical interest that attaches to the place. Every student of the Bible and every person interested in the life and progress of these early days will appreciate the beauty and value of these reproductions, both as works of art and as illustrations of the great scenes in scriptural history.

THREE SPECIAL OFFERS

These special offers are strictly limited to the supply of Holy Land Booklets which we have completed for distribution. These color reproductions are really so beautiful you will want at least a dozen after you see one.

Offer No. 1 If you are now a subscriber to the Christian Herald, add 10 cents to your remittance when renewing and one of these booklets will be sent postpaid. Any number can be ordered at 10 cents each—and they will be mailed to one or different addresses.

Offer No. 2 If you are not now a regular subscriber to the Christian Herald, fill in the coupon below and mail with 50 cents. This will entitle you to the Christian Herald for 17 weeks and also to one of these Holy Land Booklets.

LIST OF SUBJECTS
- Wells of Moses
- Ancient Temples at Baalbek
- Sea Castle at Sidon
- Road to Samaria
- Ashdod, Where Dagon's Idol Fell Before the Ark
- Flowers at the Sea of Galilee
- Serepta
- Tiberias, Looking Toward Lebanon
- Port of Tyre
- St. Jean D'Acre

Offer No. 3 Send us, with 50 cents, the name of a friend or relative who is not now a subscriber to the Christian Herald, and to whom you would like to send it. The name of the new subscriber will be entered at once for a 17 weeks' subscription to the Christian Herald. The folio of reproductions in color, twenty-four pages, will be sent you free of charge upon receipt of your order. Use the order blank below and mail it to us at once, so as to be sure of your folio. If you prefer we will send the booklet to the new subscriber instead of to you.

CHRISTIAN HERALD, 2299 BIBLE HOUSE, NEW YORK, N. Y.

———— USE THIS COUPON ————

THE CHRISTIAN HERALD, 2299 Bible House, New York, N. Y.

Gentlemen: I am enclosing 50 cents for "Color Views of the Holv Land" and the Christian Herald for 17 weeks, as per your special offer.

Send booklet to
Name......................................
Address...................................
....

Send Christian Herald 17 weeks to
Name......................................
Address...................................
....

The Most Useful Citizen

By Hon. JOHN J. CORNWELL, Governor of West Virgi

A FEW years ago a committee was given the task of officially designating the most useful—or was it the most prominent?—citizen of the state. Anyway, it named a very amiable and admirable gentleman of great wealth, whose very wonderful and genuine hospitality some members at least of the official designating committee had doubtless enjoyed, but whose name was known to no more than one per cent. of our population at that time. Were I called upon to make a new designation, I would not think twice. Off the bat would come the name of Rev. Pat B. Withrow, of the city of Charleston, superintendent of the Union Mission. Of course, in making this designation it would be understood that only peace-time activities and a peace-time basis are considered.

I first saw Pat very nearly a score of years ago. He was a red-headed bartender. Practically every other door on Capitol Street then opened into a barroom, and over a very large percentage of them were gambling houses of varying limits and respectability. I shall not attempt to tell Pat's story of his downward trip to complete failure, of his bogus attempt at suicide, or of his conversion and his comeback. Nobody but he can do that story justice. But it is of his work and the man of today I speak. Of course he has had and has now the backing of some good, unostentatious Charleston citizens, otherwise that new Mission Building, fireproof and equipped to accommodate 150 derelicts, would not be nearing completion. Pat and his good wife, who never lost faith in him even when he got too worthless to hand beer over a bar, have now seventy little orphans they are caring for tenderly; and in the seven years of the Mission they have found good homes for more than 200 babies, homeless waifs that have been handed in to them under varying circumstances, to say nothing of the hundreds of others they have cared for temporarily until father or mother reestablished a home and was able to care for them again.

But homeless babies and waifs are not a specialty with Pat. Into his services and Mission has drifted many a man, down and out, ready for Bedlam or for suicide, who has been taken by the hand, helped back upon the earth and started upon a new road entirely. All over the State Dave Bayliss, the Y. M. C. A. worker, is known. He jollied and encouraged the first 5,000 West Virginia boys at Camp Lee for months before being called elsewhere, but few know that Pat Withrow plucked him from the Kanawha County jail a him the first glimpse of the b vision now forever before his e was Pat who is responsible for birth of the Rev. William T. R of the Parkersburg Mission, Sam Swain of the Clarksburg M

Soon after coming to Charl was implored by some good frien prominent persons to pardon out a one-legged man, the father of children who needed his prot but he was a bootlegger, confess and there was no prospect that h refrain from reengaging in the b so the pardon was withheld. On told Pat to go and see the man what he could do with him, "If you can reform him, I'll give pardon for him." In a few da reported and took away the papers. That was a year ago. Claude Huff is one of Pat's depe workers for humanity and for righ ness

A few days ago an elderly gent and his wife, from a Southern came to call on me. They were an annual visit to Pat Withrow wife at the Mission. I inquired they came to know Pat and story in detail. The man is the a Southern railroad system. He son, who had gone from bad to until he had become a hobo. father had spent $10,000 getting out of scrapes, and had finally him up. The boy, booze-soaked sin-hardened, drifted into Charl broke and hungry. He found his into the Mission. Pat's fervent pr kindly words and brotherly wrought a change and started th thinking. The father boasts tha once wayward boy has paid back cent expended on him and is m $8,000 annually for the support wife and child in a happy Sou home. So why should not Mr. Mrs. Taylor come once a yea spend a few days with Pat and Pat, and again express their appr tion?

Charleston has its Nitro near. I its United States Naval Ordn Plant. It has the biggest ax facto the country and the biggest glass in all the land, but its greatest ins tion, by all odds, is the Union Mis It has among its population, perma and temporary, office-holders of va degrees of guilt, as well as statesmen statesmen and near statesmen; bu one really great personage is Pat W row, a remaker and saver of men— women too. I unanimously vote West Virginia's most useful citizen

The Great Advance of Christian Uni

IT SEEMS to me that the Bible teaches that the followers of Christ should form only one church; not a group of churches, however well they might cooperate. Complete unity would not cost the churches anything of eternal value, and would bring them many advantages. In a united church the members would pay less for such items as heating, lighting, etc., than at present when several church houses are maintained for a number of people who could all find ample accommodation in any one of them. A united Church would work with more enthusiasm than the present clannish church does. The privilege of meeting one's friends is one of the things that induces people to attend services; hence if more friends met at one place, we might expect a larger percentage of the public to attend religious meetings. But the chief reason why Christ's followers should make a complete unity is because it is undoubtedly the Master's will that we should do so (John 17:2). The reason Christ assigned as the cause of his desire for his followers to be one, is that the world might believe that the Father had sent him.

Some may think that a perfect church unity will cost party names and church creeds. It will. But let us remember that Christ compared the Kingdom of Heaven to a pearl of great price, co its purchaser all that he owned. P names are confusing to people wh not belong to any church. If a si decides to repent, he is confronted w the problem of choosing between a g number of roads to heaven. The B speaks of "the Way," not many w Denominational teaching keeps pe from getting a whole, rounded view Christianity. When a child has b taught by parents of a certain deno nation, listened to preachers defend the tenets of that religious party, he is likely to be so completely conver that no other doctrine will have a cha when he becomes a man. Dropp party names should end denominatio teaching. The preachers, not hav to defend certain peculiar doctri could spend more time telling of fundamental things of Christianity

Ellijay, N. C. RAY N. MOSES

◆

Vain is the golden sunshine when man persists in keeping his heart in c storage and has only a cold storage rece to show for it.

Which weighs the heavier in the sca of your neighbor—your careless deed yesterday, or your goodl ywords today?

nan baggage coolie at Darjeeling, India

Day This Strap Will Break

Occidental traveler in India ually protests at having his rugs and hand luggage carried by a woman. The coolie carriers a, where labor is worth only a few day, are a part of the landscape. woman carrier at Darjeeling is of India, a country burdened n ancient economic system.

e day the strap holding the load g to break, and India will be re- from the dead weight of cen- Christian missions have helped sen the strap. They have been rily responsible for the Mass nent which is turning the outcast is to Christianity with its hope new social order.

◆

ping Locomotives to France

ERICAN built locomotives, each veighing seventy-three tons and bled ready to move under their steam within a few hours after arrival in France, are among the ents of the United States Army port Force during the war and re than four hundred were so ed from New York in a few months, dition to 1,200 shipped in sections. hips used were of a special type, and hree holds, each measuring 60 by eet, with hatches 39 feet wide and ig.

o each of the holds were placed e locomotives—thirty-six to a ship. flooring on which they rested more 3,000 tons of steel rails were used. ocomotives were braced with heavy en beams and the space between oilers was packed with baled hay. this hay another flooring was and on this floor placed the tenders the smokestacks. On of the tenders was ed still more cargo to leck, and during the days the above-deck was filled with air- es.

loading the locomo- railroad barges ying fourteen locomo- each are made fast 100-ton derrick barge, h is made fast to the . A steel wire sling aced around the for- end of the boilers, her under the cab, the al given, and the loco- re lifted forty to fifty and gently loaded the hold, all in aty minutes.

How One Church Told Its Story

"WELL, what do you think of the whole idea?" the preacher asked the advertising man at the end of a detailed outline of an idea that the former had to bolster up church attendance.

"I think you're wasting your time in the wrong business," was the advertising man's sententious answer.

"What do you mean?" queried the minister rather crisply.

The other smiled. "I was just thinking what a splendid advertising man you'd make," he said.

Responding to the flattery, the preacher questioned: "Then you think the idea a good one?"

"Good? It's great," was the reply. "It is just the sort of thing all of the churches should have been doing long ago—and regularly."

The first speaker was the Rev. B. H. Reinheimer of Christ Church, Dayton, Ohio; and it gives me a great deal of pleasure to be able to report as briefly as possible some of the details of the campaign that developed and the immediate results that were secured. The many indirect results will be felt for some time to come.

Some months ago it was Mr. Reinheimer's idea and ambition to inaugurate a real publicity schedule for the entire year. The advertising man told him that it would not do not to have a definite program—a beginning planned to lead to a logical end. A spasmodic campaign would get nowhere—and would be money worse than wasted. The appropriation sufficient for a full year's campaign was not forthcoming at that time.

But here was a minister who was not to be discouraged. And that is what makes possible this article. In order to test the thing out a special campaign was planned—a campaign with a reason behind it; one that started somewhere and led somewhere definitely. The drive was made for "A Month of Sundays at Church."

Sunday, April 27, there were 218 more people at Christ Church than the same Sunday of 1918. May 4, the second Sunday of the campaign, there were 107 more in the congregation than the corresponding Sunday of last year. Following the third "ad" the increase was 118. And May 18, the last of the "Month of Sundays," the attendance beat that of the similar Sunday of last year by 121.

So the ads directly paid—and that is the full and final test. Besides, it is known that far-reaching good effects will be felt for some time to come—and probably indefinitely.

J. Horace Lytle.

◆

AN EIGHT weeks' evangelistic campaign at Winchester, Ontario, Canada, led by Rev. B. S. Taylor and party, resulted in nearly 200 conversions. The business men of the town and their families, the reeve (mayor) and his family took part in the work of soul-saving. One of the first converts was an old man of seventy-three. During the revival the pastors of the local churches held a special prayer meeting every morning at nine, and they are continuing the impulse given to the Gospel work by the visiting evangelists.

School Children Build Motor Tractor

ENTERPRISING high school youngsters of the Pacific Coast have completed a motor tractor which they are operating on one of the war gardens. Photo shows the completed tractor as it first appeared on the school grounds.

THREE WEEKS SPECIAL

PRICES GOOD UNTIL JULY FIFTEENTH

McCALL'S
JUNE 1919 MAGAZINE 10 CENTS
THE PEOPLE'S HOME JOURNAL
10¢
JUNE 1919
Modern Priscilla
June 1919 Price 15 Cents

3 Big Novels

21 Big Magazines

FICTION
FASHIONS
FANCYWORK

74 Delightful Stories
62 Splendid Articles
84 Pages of the Latest Styles
32 Experts Tell You How

1470 PAGES BRIM FULL OF INTEREST

THE PEOPLE'S HOME JOURNAL
7 Months, June to December
McCALL'S MAGAZINE
7 Months, June to December
MODERN PRISCILLA
7 Months, June to December

$1.50
Until July 15TH

THE PEOPLE'S HOME JOURNAL, McCALL'S MAGAZINE — Both for 7 months $1.00
McCALL'S MAGAZINE, MODERN PRISCILLA — Both for 7 months $1.00
THE PEOPLE'S HOME JOURNAL, MODERN PRISCILLA — Both for 7 months $1.00

Trial 7-month subscription to any one magazine June to December at the following prices:
The People's Home Journal, 50c. McCall's Magazine, 50c. Modern Priscilla, 65c.

Address all orders on or before July 15, 1919, to Dept. C, THE PEOPLE'S HOME JOURNAL, 80 Lafayette St., N. Y.

Genuine
Bayer-Tablets of Aspirin

An unmarked tablet is like an anonymous letter—seldom honest, sometimes dangerous and always a thing to beware of.

TABLETS
Tin pocket boxes of 12
Bottles of 24
Bottles of 100

BAYER

CAPSULES
Sealed packages of 12
Sealed packages of 24
Sealed bottles of 100

Marked with the Bayer-Cross for Your Additional Protection

Aspirin is the trade mark of Bayer Manufacture of Monoaceticacidester of Salicylicacid

AGENTS WANTED

This Five Passenger 37 H. P. car, 116 in. whl. base. All bearings Timken. Delco Ign.—Dyneto Stg. and Ltg. Write at once for my great Free Offer and 48-page catalog. Agents wanted to drive and demonstrate. Territory open. Prompt shipments. Big money. Cars guaranteed or money back. 1919 cars ready.
BUSH MOTOR CO., Address J. H. Bush, President. Dept. G196 Bush Temple, Chicago, Illinois

The Pittsburgh Bible Institute Prepares for the Gospel ministry and for all forms of Christian work. Tuition is free. The student of little means and even of no means is given an opportunity for training. The Institute stands for the full inspiration of Scripture; the full Godhead; the Deity of our Lord; the blood Atonement; the necessity of regeneration, and the work of the Holy Spirit. It differs from most Bible Institutes in its teaching on the ages. For further information, address

Rev. C. H. Pridgeon.
12 Congress Street, Pittsburgh, Pa.

The Intelligent Way To End Corns

Not by paring. That's a risky makeshift, and results are brief.

Not by harsh, haphazard methods made by non-scientific men.

Not by padding. Pads are unsightly, and they simply coddle corns.

Expert Methods

Blue-jay was invented by a scientific expert. It is made by a house famed for its surgical dressings.

It embodies the up-to-date method, the right method of corn treatment.

Apply it and the pain stops instantly. Forget it for two days. Remove it, and the corn is gone for good.

One corn in ten may need a second application, but that's all.

Millions of corns have been ended in this way. Aching corns are unknown to its users.

These are facts known to your own friends and neighbors. It is time that you knew them. Try Blue-jay tonight.

© B & B 1919

B&B Blue-jay
The Scientific Corn Ender

Stops Pain Instantly
Ends Corns Completely
25 Cents—At Druggists

BAUER & BLACK, Chicago, New York, Toronto
Makers of Sterile Surgical Dressings and Allied Products

Tractors, Trucks and Trailers Can Save Money on Every Farm

If They Are Properly Selected

IT IS the business of the Motor Service Bureau of The Christian Herald to help its readers choose the tractor, truck or trailer best suited to their needs.

If you will give us the information called for on the following coupon we will give you unbiased expert advice free of charge.

Check the machine in which you are interested.

Tractor . . Truck . . . . Trailer . . . No. acres on which tractor can be used

Nature of land

Distance to railway or other distributing point . . . . Kind of roads

Kind of crops . . . . Volume or weight of crops transported annually

Make of tractor, truck or trailer preferred

Approximate investment available for purchase

Motor equipment already owned by me

Name

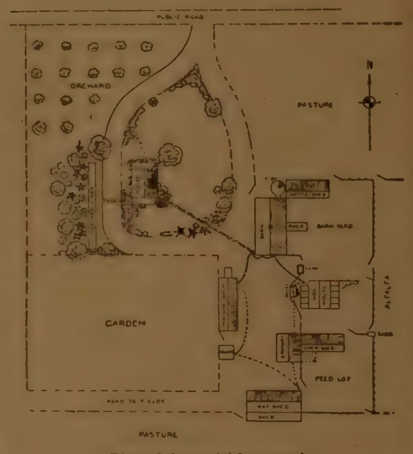
Address

The model farmstead in miniature

A Model Farmstead

Step-Saving System Planned Out at an Agricultural C

IT HAS been estimated by the Nebraska College of Agriculture that the average farmer, in doing his chores, walks one unnecessary mile a day, or three hundred and sixty-five miles a year, all on account of improper arrangement of his farm buildings. What this means in loss of time, to say nothing of shoe leather, can be imagined.



Plan of the model farmstead

To start the hundreds of embryofarmers at the college on the right road, the college has constructed, or rather the students of the college have built, a model farmstead in miniature which represents a nearly ideal arrangement for a 160-acre farm in the prairie States. Built to one-fourth scale in the workshops of the college, the model now stands on the campus, where it offers ocular evidence of the correct way to lay out buildings, fences, etc. The buildings comprising the model include a comfortable, attractive farmhouse, set on a concrete foundation and equipped with modern conveniences; an up-to-date dairy barn with a solid-wall concrete silo; a hay shed for alfalfa; a horse barn; a hog house, a tool shed and shop; a poultry house, and a machine shed. The plan was worked out for one particular farm, and has been tried out with great success on farms in several counties of Nebraska.

It is well known that factory managers save thousands of dollars each year by devising methods of saving labor, but heretofore little or no attention has been given to the arrangement of farm buildings so that farm operations can be made efficient. Working on the theory that every farm is a factory in a sense, the Nebraska college expects, through the medium of its model farmstead, to show the coming generation of farmers how to avoid many of the unnecessary handicaps under which their fathers labored. And as one-fifth of the value of all farm properties is invested in buildings, it becomes apparent what importance attaches to their construction and general arrangement with relation to each other.

In disposing the buildings of the model farmstead so as to reduce to a minimum the number of steps the average farmer has to take each day in perforn ordinary duties, consideration w to the question of just what thes consist of. A general plan w worked out which, in the mode stead, takes him from place to follov

W starti on hi ing he go the h the whe tends horse colts, and and, separ the feeds calves. skim that re is then ried t pigs at farro pens, a which farmer to the bined and g ary to the fa ing hogs fat cattle. In returning he passes to hay-shed and feeds the stock cattle, then the poultry. Next he steps the milk-room at the barn, gets cream, returns to the house, and chores are done. While doing all th has walked only 750 feet, whereas farms laid out in a haphazard ma he might have walked three or times as far. The path he has wa is shown by the dotted lines on the p of the farmstead.

Again, suppose it is evening, and the farmer is coming through the lo gate by the hay-shed. His course to barn leads past nearly all of the bui ings, and most of the chores can be d while the team he is driving is reach the tank, drinking and going to barn. When the horses and cows attended to his evening chores are do

ROBERT H. MOULTON.

Great Demand for Bibles

THERE has never been such a la demand for Bibles in the one h dred and ten years' work of the N York Bible Society as at the prese time. The Society has moved to Madison Avenue in order to have mo room and to be more accessible to many friends. In this new location will be better able to carry on its wor of distributing the Scriptures in fifty three languages and in raised type f the blind. This work the Society h been carrying on in addition to givin tens of thousands of Testaments ever week to the returning men in unifor

The Week in the World's News

ontinued from page 754

raph systems to their owners ght of July 31, the rates estab- the Government to remain in · four months unless sooner by State commissions.

ED 1,000,000 HOMES. According resident Wm. M. Garland of eles, head of the National As- of Real Estate Boards, the tates is short 1,000,000 homes, rhaps explains the soaring rents rts of the country.

NATE MALARIA. Experiments ed by the Rockefeller Founda- Hamburg, Arkansas, in 1916, l 1918 for the control of malaria oying breeding grounds of mosquitoes resulted in the reduction of ber of reported cases of malaria 12 in 1916 to 59 in 1918. The as undertaken as a demonstra- what could be done by any com- which wishes to rid itself, as one as said, of pest and pestilence. t per capita of the population ty-four cents.

NIAN JEWS. Rumania which n noted for the injustice of its lating to the property and ed- al rights of Jews, on June 22, proclamation by the King granting full citizenship rights to all those Jews born in Rumania who have not enjoyed foreign protection and to all who have served in the Rumanian army and to the wives and legitimate children of all Jewish soldiers.

TORNADO WRECKS TOWN. A tornado, on June 23, wrecked the town of Fergus Falls, Minn. It was estimated that sixty persons were killed and 150 seriously injured.

THE ROCKEFELLER FOUNDATION. The report for 1919 of the Rockefeller Foundation discussed the following activities: An extended campaign against tuberculosis in France, demonstrations of malaria control in Arkansas and Mississippi, the yellow fever epidemic checked in Guatemala and the extension of the campaign against the disease to Equador, investigation of hook-worm control, encouragement of twenty-one foreign states and countries and of twelve states of the Union for improving public health, the promotion of school hygiene and public health instruction, a gift of $22,000,000 in four years to war work agencies, the gift having begun in 1914, pushing toward completion the fifteen buildings of the new medical center in Peking, increased financial support for twenty-four missionary medical hospitals and schools in China, cooperation with South American schools in establishing research and teaching departments, the maintenance of sixty-eight scholarships in American medical schools for scholars from the United States and China and Brazil, promotion of studies in mental hygiene, additional gifts to the Rockefeller Institution and the completion of studies in industrial relations, also special service for the American Red Cross and the American Social Hygiene Association.

WINNIPEG STRIKE ENDED. On June 25, the general strike at Winnipeg, Canada, and sympathetic strikes in Edmondton, Victoria and Calgary were called off after a seven weeks' struggle, the reemployment of the men being left in the hands of a government representative who was appointed to inquire into the cause, the origin of and justification for the strike.

On the same day the city of Omaha, Nebraska, faced a similar sympathetic strike organized along much the same lines as the Winnipeg affair.

BRITISH LABOR MEETS. The 19th Annual Conference of the British labor party opened in Southport, England, on June 25. The principal question before the party was that of using industrial action, or strikes, to secure political aims. The triple alliance of miners, railway men, and transport workers has long favored the exercise of the power of labor to compel Government compliance with its demands, among which are abolition of conscription, the withdrawal of troops from Russia and the release of conscientious objectors.

PEACE AND THE SENATE. The struggle between the friends of the peace treaty and its opponents continued in the Senate during the week ending June 28. Senator Fall introduced a concurrent resolution declaring a state of peace to exist between the United States, Germany and Austria. It was thought that by passing this resolution commercial relations could be reopened, while the treaty itself was under discussion. Some senators held that this would be an irregular project contrary to ordinary procedure. The proponents of the Knox resolution which was not brought to a vote were reported to have worked out a program under which the treaty would be ratified, but a qualifying resolution passed, providing that the League of Nations Covenant should not be binding on the United States until the other nations concerned had accepted the Senate's modifications. It was charged that this resolution might keep the United States out of the League of Nations permanently. British and French opinion was that the League of Nations would stand or fall upon the action of the United States regarding membership in it. Inasmuch as many sections of the treaty itself are left to the administration of the League of Nations it was declared impossible to separate the League from the treaty without destroying the treaty itself. According to French journalistic opinion the tasks of peace are if anything more onerous than those of war, since under peace the shattered world must be rebuilt upon new foundations with new ideals.

AMERICA HOST OF IRISH PRESIDENT. Without making public the means by which he reached America, admitting only that he left Ireland on June 1, Eamonn de Valera, "President of the Irish Republic" entered New York City in triumph, and was met by the faithful at the Waldorf-Astoria. He declared that Ireland, in spite of rumors to the contrary, was as nearly united in its demands for an independent government as the American colonies were at any time during the Revolution, and announced as one purpose of his visit to America the seeking of a loan of $5,000,000, to establish the Irish Republic and government, and to pay the expenses of Embassies in various capitals and incidentally to pay the $500,000 of Fenian bonds issued in this country in1866.

"The Stars and Stripes"

Continued from page 756

He has taken these qualities that won the war and has caricatured them in a lovable, human way that has endeared him to the heart of every soldier.

The Stars and Stripes fulfilled its purpose as a newspaper in every sense of the word. And as a sustainer of morale it was also remarkably successful. Through popular subscription the staff of the paper raised enough money to care for over 3,000 French war orphans—and it's a very big something to make men away from home think of helping others. Through competitive races and competitions it speeded up the work of stevedore regiments to such an extent that supplies reached the front lines in record time. And, perhaps most important of all, it made a bond of closer interest between officers and men—between soldiers in different branches of the service, between those who directed the affairs of the army and the army itself.

I MYSELF have visited the office of the Stars and Stripes in the very center of Paris. I have spent an afternoon in the German office of the paper, in Coblenz. I have looked in upon distributing stations on the very outposts of our army of occupation, and I have seen the busy agents in the small French towns. And because I know so well what they have done it is impossible for me to put into words my feeling toward what they have accomplished.

The Stars and Stripes published its last edition on the thirteenth of June, 1919. There is a rumor that it turned over to the government $700,000, the profits of less than a year and a half. Splendidly successful in every move that it has attempted, it has closed at its zenith. And it will never be forgotten.

earn Photography
aying positions in the best studios in the country
nen and women who prepare themselves now.
ears we have successfully taught otography, Photo-Engraving and Three-Color Work aduates earn $25 to $75 a week. We assist them re these positions. Now is the time to fit your-an advanced position at better pay. Terms easy; nexpensive. Largest and best school of its kind.
or catalog today.
NOIS COLLEGE of PHOTOGRAPHY
H. 970 Wabash Avenue, Effingham, Illinois

%
PAID FOR 24 YEARS
In good times and bad, in peace and in war, for 24 years we have paid 6% on Two-Year Time Certificates and 5% on Certificates payable on demand.
erest checks are mailed semi-annually.
you have as little as $25 to invest, you l be interested in our Booklet, "6% d Safety," giving full particulars about s old and tried institution. Write for it.
he Calvert Mortgage Company
Calvert Bldg., Baltimore, Md.

Keep Your
louse Free from Rats
gh On Rats" is so economical that it costs bout 5c a year to keep a house free from rats.
re killer. Tasteless, odorless; mix it with food will eat. Oldest and largest selling extermin-Send for free booklet—"Ending Rats & Mice."
E. S. WELLS, Chemist, Jersey City, N.J.
ROUGH ON RATS
DON'T DIE IN THE HOUSE

AK FILM DEVELOPING AND PRINTING beautiful prints of uniformly highest quality. Developing roll; Prints 5c each; Cash with order. Send today for free e.—Developing, printing, enlarging, hand coloring.
THE CENTRAL PHOTO FINISHING CO. st Fourth St. Dept. H Cincinnati O

Crooked Spines
Straightened!

NO matter how old you are: no matter what caused your affliction: no matter how many years you have suffered or how hopeless you believe your case to be, there is hope for you in the Philo Burt Method.

Eminent specialists who have studied and treated spinal diseases and deformities for years are first astonished, then convinced and quickly become enthusiastic upon finding one success follow another when the Philo Burt Method is used. Ask us for the names of happy patrons right in your vicinity.

A young woman who was bed-ridden at 26 with spinal tuberculosis after suffering for 20 years, is married, happy and perfectly strong and vigorous at 29.

A boy of 8 was unable to walk or hold his head erect. After a few months every symptom disappeared and he walks daily three miles to school.

A man of 45, in cruel agony for six years, spent over $3,000 in a vain search for relief. Now works every day without the aid of any artificial support.

FREE—30 Days' Trial

The Philo Burt Method is new and different, not like anything you have tried. It has benefitted or cured over 30,000 sufferers from spinal trouble caused by tuberculosis, Pott's disease, infantile paralysis, spinal meningitis, pleurisy, rheumatism, injuries, wrong sitting and standing postures, etc. Treat yourself at home. A 30-days' trial costs you nothing; no obligations of any kind if it fails.

The perfected Philo Burt Appliance will positively cure any case that is curable and straighten any crooked spine that can be straightened. It gives firmer and more natural support to the spine than any torturing, unsanitary, old-style brace made of steel, iron, leather, plaster of paris, etc., and yet is as yielding, soft and comfortable as an ordinary corset. Goes on and off like a coat and cannot be detected under the clothing. It not only relieves and strengthens but has accomplished many amazing cures. Let us send you sworn proof.

We especially invite skeptics to investigate. Write yourself or ask your doctor to do so. Send no money. Simply describe your case fully. Get our liberal offer and helpful book on spinal troubles absolutely free. Address today.—

PHILO BURT MFG. CO.
207Z Odd Fellows' Temple, Jamestown, N. Y.

Delivered TO YOU FREE
Your choice of 44 styles, colors and sizes in the famous line of "RANGER" bicycles, shown in full color in the big new Free Catalog. We pay all the freight charges from Chicago to your town.
30 Days Free Trial allowed on the bicycle you select, actual riding test in your own town for a full month. Do not buy until you get our great new trial offer and low Factory-Direct-To-Rider terms and prices.
TIRES LAMPS, HORNS, pedals, single wheels and repair parts for all makes of bicycles at half usual prices. No one else can offer such values and such terms.
SEND NO MONEY but write today for the big new Catalog. It's free.
Rider Agents Wanted
MEAD CYCLE COMPANY
Dept. H-71 Chicago

"DON'T SHOUT"
"I hear you. I can hear now as well as anybody. 'How?' With THE MORLEY PHONE. I've a pair in my ears now, but they are invisible. I would not know I had them in, myself, only that I hear all right.
"The Morley Phone for the DEAF
is to the ears what glasses are to the eyes. Invisible, comfortable, weightless and harmless. Anyone can adjust it." Over one hundred thousand sold. Write for booklet and testimonials.
THE MORLEY CO., Dept. 752, Perry Bldg., Phila.

BLYMYER CHURCH BELLS
Bring people to church. Their clear, beautiful, sustained, far-reaching tones are a power for good. Your church should have one. Durability guaranteed. Inexpensive. Art catalog & buying plans free.
The Cincinnati Bell Foundry Co. Dept. B51 Cincinnati, O.

OUR MAIL-BAG

NOTICE

THE editors of the Christian Herald will be glad to answer any question addressed to the Mail-bag provided it be of general interest and not merely personal. No attention will be paid to anonymous letters nor to those written with lead pencil.

Questions and Answers

A READER of the Christian Herald, Mrs. John W. Kimball of Sanbornville, N. H., writes that her sister, who has been principal of a boarding-school in South Africa for many years, has written her of a very touching incident which occurred recently at the school Two little boys wandered away from the place. While searching anxiously for them, the searchers found them returning, dragging a little cart on which lay an open Bible, which they believed would protect them, because it was the Word of God. Mrs. Kimball sends the story in the form of a beautiful little poem, which is given below. It will interest not only other missionaries, but many mothers and fathers in the homeland. Her sister in Africa desired that it be sent to the Christian Herald.

Two little lads went out one day
    In Afric's sunny land so fair,
And from their home strayed far away,
    While friends were searching everywhere,
Filled with anxiety and pain
Lest they should find them not again.

Ere darkness quite had veiled the day,
    Two little figures were espied
Dragging a tiny cart, where lay
    The Holy Bible, opened wide.
Friends clasped them in their arms once more,
Weary and tired, sad and footsore.

"But, children dear, how did you dare
    To wander and so far to roam?
You know the Kaffirs might be there,
    And take you far away from home."
"We thought of that," said one small lad,
"And don't you see just what we had?

"We took the Bible, don't you see?
    We thought if Kaffir, beast or bird
Should meet us, we quite safe would be Because we had God's Holy Word;
For he has said that if we trust,
He'll keep us, and we're sure he must."

Oh childhood's faith! Oh blessed trust!
    May that blest faith and trust be mine,
As through this world of sin and lust
    I wander with my hand in Thine.
From thy Word may I not depart,
But hold it close within my heart.

N. F. H., Mena, Ark. We have never seen any authentication of the statement you mention concerning Henry Drummond.

A. O. Q., Canton, S. D. There is a wide difference between cultivating a kindly and agreeable spirit, which avoids quarrels and violence, and permitting the rowdy and the criminal to have his way unrestrained. Criminals must be checked with the strong arm of the law, otherwise the world would become a place unfit to live in. Violence must be halted and overpowered, else no life would be safe. There is a point where righteous anger should find expression, not in mere words, but in deeds. It is related of a certain divine who, when smitten on the right cheek, turned the left, and being struck there also, said to the rowdy: "Now I have fulfilled the Scripture, and I think my next duty is to give you a good thrashing." And he did, let us hope, to the edification of his assailant.

Reader, Ohio. Regarding prayer in Sunday school, the simpler the prayer and the shorter, the better. We think it is well to recognize in such petitions the lesson of the day, to ask God's blèssing on the study of it and on those present, to remember those detained or possibly forgetful, to acknowledge God's leadership, and to express gratitude for his care and guidance. There is nothing quite so useless as an attempt to preach a sermon to the children through the medium of prayer. They don't listen. If the prayer extends over two minutes, there is rustling and movement; if it runs five minutes, almost anything is liable to happen. The person who prays should have a deep love for God and for children, a knowledge of the lesson, and the ability to stop at the first good stopping-place. An attempt at rhetorical passages will be lost on the children; simple language from the heart is the best. It is well to close with the Lord's Prayer. The fact that they will be asked to participate helps to maintain attention, and this prayer, through the participation of all in it, spreads the praying spirit throughout the Sunday school.

Will Mrs. S. V., San Francisco, Calif., who wrote us about prayer books, send us her street address so that we can forward a letter which has been returned?

Mrs. R. J. C., Parsonsburg, Md. The main principle in presenting Bible history and Bible geography, or any Bible teaching to the boys is to be sure to recognize the boys' dominant interest. Boys like action, and they are natural hero-worshipers up to the age of about twelve or thirteen. They are not greatly impressed by the psychological elements of truth, but they are easily impressed with the practical elements, especially those that are applicable to everyday life. You cannot pump a lesson into a boy, but you frequently can draw it out of him by proper suggestion and skilful questioning. The stories of the Hebrew prophets, of the kings, of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob all have lessons for them, and in nearly all there are the elements of heroism, loyalty, personal sacrifice and devotion to a cause which link them up closely to the boys' natural tendencies of thought and action. We find it important also, in teaching boys, to talk the boys' language, not necessarily using their slang, but presenting ideas in the shape most easily understood by the immature mind. In this a woman is sometimes at a disadvantage. We have found in our own experience as a Sunday school superintendent that it was not wise, when men teachers were available, to place women in charge of boys' classes where the ages exceeded ten years. A man who loves boys and has not forgotten his own boyhood can gather them about him in a bond of loyalty which will last through many years.

D. V. If there be love in the heart of a man toward his wife, whom he has vowed to love and cherish, it will find expression in his treatment of and whole attitude toward her after marriage. Such a man will not speak to her disrespectfully or in such a way as to show lack of appreciation, especially before the children. By doing so, he would be setting the worst sort of an example, and destroying the very basis of home life. Of course, we cannot advise in individual cases.

J. M. J., Frankfort, Ky. 1. The 23d verse of I Thess. 5 has been much discussed by commentators, especially the clause, "I pray God your whole spirit and soul and body be preserved blameless." It refers to man in his normal integrity. All three—spirit, soul and body, each in its place—constitute man entire. The spirit links him with the higher intelligences, and is that faculty which is receptive of the quickening Holy Spirit; the soul is intermediate between the body and the spirit and is the sphere of the will and the affections; "the immaterial, animating essence," as some have described it. 2. The name "Job" is derived from an Arabic word signifying "repentance," although Job himself is held to be a real personage (see Ezek. 14 : 14 and James 5 : 11). His experiences have been cast in the form of a great allegory. There is no statement anywhere in either Scripture or tradition to show how many years his afflictions lasted.

J. D., Detroit, Mich. The Court of Reason, which was bestowed upon humanity as a divine gift, has been called the "Cabinet of the Soul," where Conscience sits premier, with Justice, Honor, Love, Courage, Duty, Reverence, Unselfishness and Truth as associate members. In every normal being these qualities exist, some of them, however, less developed than others. The individual is capa qualified to judge between ri
the good and the bad, the adv
inadvisable. Some of the n Cabinet are more capable in others, but all are helpful an pensable to round out the w
In the last resort, appeal is science and a light is thrown tion at issue which is most always reveals any defects or enabling the individual to form clusion. Character is the devel best qualities and possibilities the man. Unless we attain char ment, though we may live to p
we have borne no fruit that cou

B. B. L., Laporte, Minn. T outside of our range and the event would depend largely upo society, its objects and obligatio

Anxious, Williamsburg, Ind.
opening verses of Hebrews 10. P his argument of the preceding cha that the yearly recurring law-perfect the worshiper, and that be done through the sacrifice off Christ, which was made "once fecting the work by a single o new covenant writes upon the repentant sinner the law and its filment, so that no further offeri for sin. The law, Paul tells "shadow" and not the exact like and full revelation, such as is now the Gospel. The word "image," verse 1, means the original, clear cing setting forth of those heaven which the law furnished merely th tinct outline. As Christ is t image" of the Father (see chap. 1,
the Gospel is the heavenly verities shown to us by revelation; in othe realities themselves, and not a m description—an actual foretaste o things" to come. It is as though that the believer begins to realiz upon the heavenly life here and no generated and born again of the Spi
first question fails to give the right
II Corinthians.)

F. C. B., Salem, N. Y. "I highly your editorials in behalf of the Lea tions. In view of the partisan op the Senate, I feel that it will be n keep the subject before your reader gressive and prominent way. I f jority of the lawyers, all, or substa of the ministers, the teachers, and people, without regard to party, a League, in this section."

Mrs. O. B. H., Columbus, Neb.
religion but a philosophy, an exalta human will. It has been called "C without Christ." The right attitu lievers is to adhere to the teaching Christ as set forth in the Gospels a run after every new fad that arises Greeks who were continually "seek new thing."

Mrs. A. P. N., Flatonia, Texas. Do think that verse 5 of the 31 c Isaiah refers to the aviators flyi fend Jerusalem? I do. And, in next chapter, Christ's reign is so that we may confidently hop coming very soon after these times.

Commentators explain that the w ing" in Isa. 31 : 5 is more accurately
"hovering over" for the protection
young, and to defend them with thei
The whole chapter relates to the As vasion and the impending destruction power. The subject is very fully tr
Dr. Harris Elliott Kirk's book (which ticed in the Christian Herald of Jun which the writer drew a parallel betw tain conditions then existing and thos own day. With regard to your obser on chapter 32, which deals with the in tion of Christ's Kingdom, the attitude lievers is indicated as one of watchfuln prayerfulness, awaiting God's own goo for development. It is made very cle there are many things in the divine the times and seasons for which "n knoweth, not even the angels."

THE CHRISTIAN HERALD is published weekly by The Christian Herald, at the Bible House, Fourth Avenue, 8th and 9th Sts., New York City. The Officers are: Graham C. Patterson, President and Treasurer, Bible House, N. Y. City; Geo. H. Sandison, Vice President, Bible House, N. Y. City.

SUBSCRIPTION PRICE, $2.50 a year in advance. After July 1, 1919, an additional charge of 50 cents a year for zone postage will be required on all subscriptions west of the Mississippi, including Minnesota and Louisiana. Remittances should be made in the safest manner available. Make checks and money orders payable to The Christian Herald.

FOREIGN POSTAGE.—For copies mailed ou side the United States, Canada and Mexico, add o
dollar a year to subscription price.

CHANGE OF DATE.—It takes at least t weeks to change the date, after your subscripti is renewed.

EXPIRATION OF SUBSCRIPTION.—
date on the wrapper indicates when your subscri
tion ends.

CHANGE OF ADDRESS.—It requires thr weeks' time to make the change. Give both old an new address.

LETTERS should be addressed, THE CHRIS TIAN HERALD, Bible House, New York.

Entered as Second-class Matter at the Post Office Department, Ottawa

Real Help for Tired Feet

A busy day and on your feet most of the time—a long, tiresome trip or a hike in the country—new shoes to break in—all these mean tired feet. Soothe and rest them by applying a few drops of Absorbine.Jr.

THE ANTISEPTIC LINIMENT

Or, if you are very tired and your feet burn, ache or swell, soak them in a solution of Absorbine, Jr., and water. Relief will be prompt and lasting.

You will like the "feel" of this clean, fragrant and antiseptic liniment. It penetrates quickly, leaves no greasy residue and is intensely refreshing. Only a few drops, needed to do the work, as Absorbine, Jr., is highly concentrated.

Absorbine Jr

Keep a bottle handy at home, at the office, or in your grip when traveling.

$1.25 a bottle at most druggists or postpaid

Send 10c for Liberal Trial Bottle or procure a regular size bottle from your druggist today.

W. F. YOUNG, Inc.
5 Temple St. Springfield, Mass.

The MIRACLE of MILK

Drinking Your Way To Health

You know in a general way that milk is good for you. But if you knew what a precious life-giving fluid it really is—if you knew the almost miraculous results it produces for those who drink it intelligently, you would be truly amazed. For anemia, indigestion, constipation, any difficulties of the stomach, liver, kidneys, heart or bladder, Bright's disease, rheumatism and many other ills for which physicians have no reliable remedy, the right use of milk almost invariably overcomes the trouble. For instance, feet and hands that are usually cold and clammy, become warm and life-like a few days after beginning this marvelous self-treatment. Bernarr Macfadden, the famous physical culturist, in collaboration with Dr. Sanford Porter, the milk diet specialist, has written a book of priceless value entitled: "The Milk Diet. How To Use It."

You May Have It Free

It will be a revelation to you. Send us a three months' subscription for PHYSICAL CULTURE MAGAZINE at the regular price of 50c and we will mail you the book at once. PHYSICAL CULTURE MAGAZINE should be part of your reading every month. Its inspirational articles on Health, Hygiene and Success-Building will be of great value to you in many ways. To more broadly circulate this unique magazine, we will send it to you for 3 months for 50c and include Mr. Macfadden's above mentioned book free. Write TODAY.

PHYSICAL CULTURE PUBLISHING CO.
119 West 40th St., Dept. 17D, New York City

YOUR FUTURE
Depends on how you prepare yourself now. Personal power lies in the Art of Expression.
Its study will make you more successful and increase your popularity and earning power.

WE TEACH
ELOCUTION
BY MAIL

Whatever your occupation or position, you can improve by our course in Public Speaking, dramatic reading and entertaining, which includes physical culture and voice training. Mothers and teachers can instruct their children to recite.
Graduates receive handsome diplomas.
Send 6c. in stamps for Illustrated Recitation
THE MERRILL SCHOOL OF EXPRESSION
Dept. 10, 2905 Woodward Ave., Detroit, Michigan

"Give God a Chance"

McConkey's vital, searching, devotional booklet. A life-message for Christians. Entirely free. Drop postal to Silver Pub. Co., Dept. S, Bessemer Bldg., Pittsburgh, Pa.

Just Out-It's Free
MAULE'S Midsummer and Fall Guide

Tells all about seeds, bulbs, plants, etc., and how, when, where and what to plant for best results in vegetable and flower gardens. Gives the benefit of our 43 years' experience. Plant now and have a bumper crop.

Edition is limited. Write today.

WM. HENRY MAULE, Inc.
2182 Arch St. Philadelphia, Pa.

MAULE'S Seeds-Once Grown-Always Grown-

THE History OF THE Great War

WITH PEACE SUPPLEMENT

750 Pages, Illustrated. Fine Cloth Binding, Embossed.

The Christian Herald

feels that it is doing a timely service for its readers in publishing and offering a splendid

ILLUSTRATED HISTORY OF THE GREAT WAR

Hundreds have written to us stating that they hoped we would publish such a work. Thousands have already ordered the work.

Thomas H. Russell, A.M., LL.D. the editor-in-chief of this thrilling history of great world events, has done his work in a masterly manner and received invaluable assistance from governmental official sources, not only from our own, but from the British, French and Canadian Governments.

The Greatest of All Dramas unfolds itself in the pages of this work, so intense with the thrilling stories of eye-witnesses, that the reader gasps at the tremendous and startling spectacles caused by this war of many nations. Actual photographs, many of them furnished from the records of the Allied Governments, embellish the work throughout and are in themselves a great pictorial history.

Mobilized Armies Engaged	59,176,800
Casualties on All Fronts	33,500,000
Killed and Died of Wounds and Disease	7,781,000
Wounded	18,681,000
Prisoners and Missing	7,080,500
Cost to the Warring Nations	250 Billions of Dollars

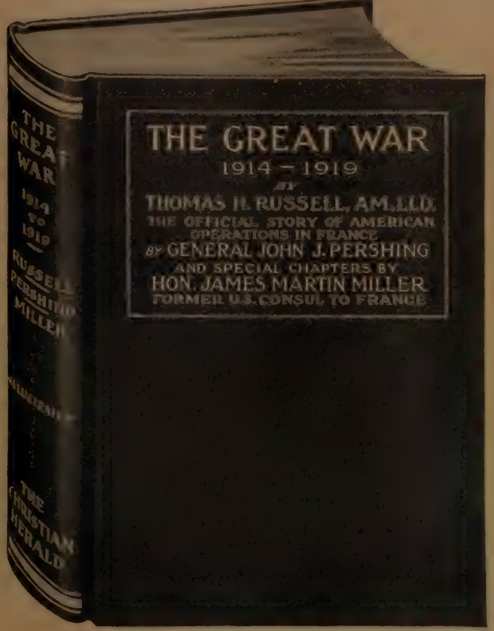
These are figures which surpass our wildest thoughts of numbers. They measure the colossal cost in life and treasure of a Modern War. This brief statement shows how necessary it is that you be informed by reading the latest work that will tell you by pen and picture, eye-witnesses and official statements, how the Great War developed from the early days of 1914 to the glorious victory of November, 1918, and how the boys of the United States turned the tide of battle in favor of democracy. The vast stretches of the oceans were bridged with ships in spite of the under-sea pirates, and America's millions were landed on the shores of France with a promptness and equipment that amazed the world.



THE GREAT WAR
1914 – 1919
BY
THOMAS H. RUSSELL, A.M., LL.D.
THE OFFICIAL STORY OF AMERICAN OPERATIONS IN FRANCE
BY GENERAL JOHN J. PERSHING AND SPECIAL CHAPTERS BY
HON. JAMES MARTIN MILLER
FORMER U.S. CONSUL TO FRANCE
THE GREAT WAR 1914 TO 1919
RUSSELL PERSHING MILLER
THE CHRISTIAN HERALD

Size of volume 6 x 8 inches, fine cloth and Gold Binding

Eye-Witnesses on the Battlefields

Aside from the value of the history as a chronicle of great events, chapters are devoted to thrilling stories of heroic acts on the battlefields which command your admiration. These are personal experiences told by actual combatants in the field, both privates and officers. The prisoners of war have their stories to tell. The wounded who survive and the refugees rendered homeless tell stories that carry conviction with them and that would move a heart of stone. The fearful state of the battlefields is described by eye-witnesses. The story of the pirates of the sea, the enemy submarines, and how they worked in their slaughter of innocents, such as the ruthless sinking of the Lusitania.

General Pershing's Own Story of American operations in France is given in full, with his glowing tribute to our fighting boys From a literary, authoritative and pictorial standpoint we cordially recommend this book to our readers as a compact record of the Great War and at moderate cost.

This history of the Great War is replete with authentic stories of the unforgetable events of the winning of Right over Might.

No American can forego this opportunity to secure a copy of this splendid book now.

How complete is it?" you ask. Right down to President Wilson sailing for the Peace Conference.

But Here Is Our Further Promise

To every one who purchases a copy of the History of the Great War for $2.50, postpaid, The Christian Herald will send a supplementary volume, bound in cloth,

Free of Charge

to include the further history of the War since the signing of the armistice in November, 1918. This valuable supplement will not only include the report of the Peace Conference, and many other important war matters, but will have a

New Series of 32 Pages of World Maps, in Colors

corrected as defined by the decisions of the Peace Conference and the terms of Peace, and bringing the World War down to the signing of the Peace Terms.

The big book is ready and the supplement will follow as soon as it is possible to complete it.

SEND $2.50 NOW

and the main volume will be sent to you post-paid WITHOUT DELAY

The supplementary volume will follow as soon as it can be completed after the signing of the Peace Treaties.

Special Notice to All Christian Herald Readers

A VALUABLE BOOK FREE OF CHARGE

THE CHRISTIAN HERALD WILL FURNISH FREE OF CHARGE to each purchaser of the Great War History a very valuable and timely supplementary war volume to include

A SPLENDID SERIES OF WORLD MAPS IN COLORS

with the latest corrections as defined by the Peace Conference

A FULL ACCOUNT OF THE PEACE CONFERENCE

and other world events of general interest together with a series of superb portraits and pictures of

The COMMANDERS of the ARMIES and NAVIES of the ALLIED NATIONS

THE GREAT LEADERS OF THE ALLIES

THE SURRENDER OF THE GERMAN FLEET OF WAR VESSELS

and stirring pictures taken from actual photographs of

THE VICTORIOUS HOMECOMING OF OUR SOLDIERS AND SAILORS

Every American Home Should Have a Set for Reference

The Christian Herald trusts that all who can will order early. The cost is very low considering the great expense in preparing and manufacturing a work of this kind.

THE CHRISTIAN HERALD, BIBLE HOUSE, NEW YORK

The Famous Oliver Typewriter

Now $57—Was $100

Latest Model
Brand New FREE TRIAL

Save $43

Over 700,000 Sold

OLIVER
No. 9
The Oliver Typewriter Co.

The Sales Policy Alone is Changed—NOT the Machine

The Guarantee of a $2,000,000 Concern

That This $57 Typewriter Was $100

This tells how you profit by our war-time experience. How you can now save $43. During the war we learned that it was unnecessary to have great numbers of traveling salesmen and numerous, expensive branch houses throughout the country. We were also able to discontinue many other superfluous sales methods.

We still retain our war-time way of selling.

You can now obtain the identical Oliver which was previously priced at $100 for $57. Not the slightest change has been made in the machine.

The Latest Model

The Oliver Typewriter Company is at the height of its success. With its huge financial resources it was determined to place the typewriter industry on a present "new-day" basis. This, you admit, is in harmony with the economic trend.

This Oliver Nine is a twenty-year development. It is the finest, the costliest, the most successful model that we have ever built.

At any price it is impossible to buy a better typewriter than the Oliver. For years it has been ranked at the top by those who know.

More than that, it is the best typewriter, in fifty ways, that anybody ever turned out. If any typewriter in the world is worth $100, it is this Oliver Nine.

Simplified Selling

Our new plan is extremely simple. It makes it possible for the consumer to deal direct with the producer.

You may order from this advertisement by using the coupon

We don't ask a penny down on deposit.

When the typewriter arrives, put it to every test—use it as you would your own. If you decide to keep it, you have more than a year to pay for it. Our terms are $3.00 per month. If you decide to return it, we will even refund the transportation charges.

Or if you wish additional information, mail the coupon for our proposition in detail. We immediately send you our de luxe catalog and all information which you would formerly obtain from a typewriter salesman.

10 Cents a Day

Our terms are $3.00 a month—the equivalent of 10 cents a day. Everyone may now own a typewriter for nearly 50 per cent less than any other standard machine.

Regardless of price, do not spend one cent upon any typewriter—whether new, second-hand or rebuilt—do not even rent a machine until you have investigated thoroughly our proposition.

Remember, we offer here one of the most durable, one of the greatest, one of the most successful typewriters ever built. If anyone ever builds a better, it will be Oliver.

It is the same commercial machine purchased by the United States Steel Corporation, the National City Bank of New York, Montgomery Ward & Co., Hart, Schaffner & Marx, the Pennsylvania Railroad and other leading businesses. Over 700,000 have been sold.

Don't Pay $100

Why now pay the extra tax of $43 when you may obtain a brand new Oliver Nine—a world favorite—for $57?

Cut out the wasteful methods and order direct from this advertisement.

Or send for our remarkable book entitled "The High Cost of Typewriters—The Reason and the Remedy." You will not be placed under the slightest obligation.

Canadian Price, $72

THE OLIVER TYPEWRITER CO.,
54-A Oliver Typewriter Building Chicago, Ill.

NOTE CAREFULLY—This coupon will bring you either the Oliver Nine for free trial or further information. Check carefully which you wish.

Mail Today

THE OLIVER TYPEWRITER COMPANY
54-A Oliver Typewriter Bldg., Chicago, Ill.

☐ Ship me a new Oliver Nine for five days free inspection. If I keep it, I will pay $57 at the rate of $3 per month. The title to remain in you until fully paid for.

My shipping point is..............................

This does not place me under any obligation to buy. If I choose to return the Oliver, I will ship it back at your expense at the end of five days.

☐ Do not send a machine until I order it. Mail me your book—"The High Cost of Typewriters—The Reason and the Remedy," your de luxe catalog and further information.

Name..............................
Street Address..............................
City.............................. State..............
Occupation or Business ....

1-cent stamp on this notice, mail the magazine, and it will be placed in the hands of our soldiers, sailors or marines.
NO WRAPPING—NO ADDRESS
A. S. BURLESON, Postmaster General.

Christian Herald

$2.50 a Year NEW YORK, JULY 19, 1919 Ten Cents a Copy
For subscriptions in Minnesota, Louisiana and in the United States west of the Mississippi add 50c. to cover Zone Postage

Patience and Power Photo by Clarence A. Purchase

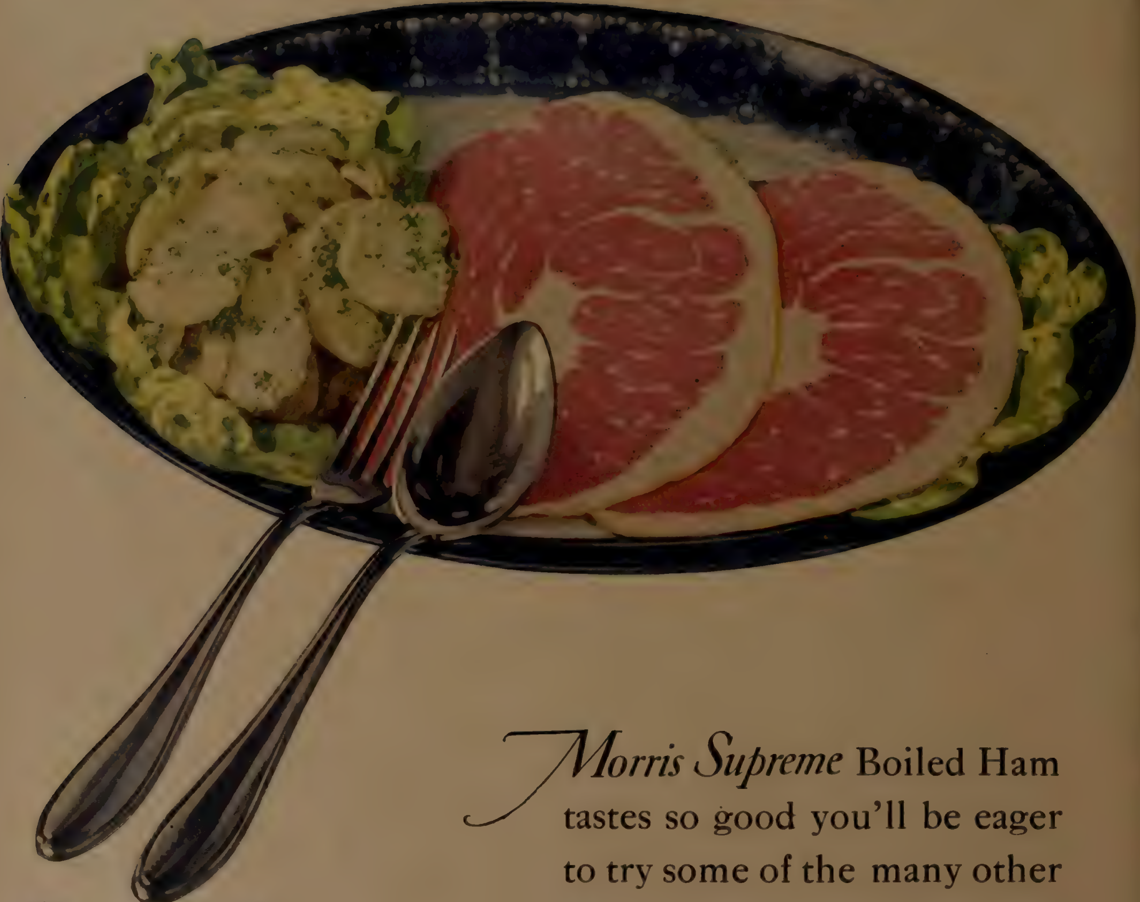
Vol. 42. No. 29. Published Weekly at New York City by The Christian Herald. Copyright, 1919, The Christian Herald.

VITALIZED SCHOOLING

MISSOURI SHOWS THE NATION IMPORTANT NEW FUNCTIONS OF THE RURAL SCHOOLS

Entered as Second Class Matter, January 25, 1909, at the Post Office at New York, under the act of March 3, 1879

MORRIS



Morris Supreme Boiled Ham tastes so good you'll be eager to try some of the many other Morris foods that bear this same flavor-mark — Supreme.

BACON
MORRIS Supreme HAM

MORRIS & COMPANY

THE CHRISTIAN HERALD
AN ILLUSTRATED NEWS WEEKLY FOR THE HOME

UBSCRIPTION $2.50 PER ANNUM
UBLISHED 52 TIMES A YEAR

GRAHAM PATTERSON
Publisher

GEORGE H. SANDISON
Managing Editor

VOL. 42—NO. 29. PRICE 10 CENTS
OFFICES: BIBLE HOUSE, NEW YORK

VITALIZED SCHOOLING

Missouri Is Showing a New Hope for the One-Room Rural School

By ARTHUR A. JEFFREY

Professor P. G. Holden, father of Vitalized Agriculture, using the same teaching methods with a group of school patrons at a community meeting

THE secret of happily effective rural schools has been re-discovered. To develop capable teachers, eager pupils and active patrons has been proved readily possible in a two-year overing more than two hundred country schools r a wide variety of conditions.

this new order of things the teacher actually ies the child instead of merely hearing him recite. sends him home bubbling over with eager news ie day's work; not borne down with textbook nments for his hours at home. Children under this are happy in school; they "have fun just work- and haven't time nor desire to get into mischief. wisely directing the child's natural activity and ager observation of real things in everyday life new plan has filled with confident hope the coun- schools of a big, backward State. It has revolu- zed—just that—the rural school methods of souri, changing that State in two years from y-second in school efficiency to the one among es now most frequently visited and mentioned by ational leaders throughout America.

oo big to be defined in words, this plan is but equately revealed in its accepted designation, lized Agriculture. It is far broader than voca- al training; more extensive in scope than agricul- . It might better be called vitalized teaching, for talizes not only the subject of agriculture but also entire school, the teacher and the community.

irst of all this plan provides for the rural school full measure of vocational training that was out- d in the Smith-Hughes Act, signed by President son February 23, 1917. It provides for farm chil- 1 appropriate and useful instruction in agriculture. s is merely the narrower phase of the proposition, withal a very commendable phase. Viewed from angle it is simply a very practical four-year rota- plan of teaching agriculture, largely without a tbook. The four yearly divisions are as follows: t year, Growing Things; second year, Making ngs; third year, Living Things; and fourth year, l and Home.

hese are taught in rotation, a subject a year in the er named, to a class composed of the four most ad- ced grades in the school. Rotation not only sim- ies the work for the teacher and permits intensive ining for the particular subject in hand, but it also ures sustained interest on the part of the younger pils. There is no threshing over of the same sub- t year after year in close succession. Even the lit- fellow in the lower grade who "listens in" on Vital- d Agriculture does not become calloused to its ap- l, for he has four years to go before taking up the ne subject in his own classwork.

Vitalized Agriculture is taught with comparative edom from a specified textbook. Taking advantage the farm child's own favorable environment, this n makes a laboratory of the everyday world of terial, growing and living things that are all und him. In this natural wonderland the child is isted in answering for himself the practical ques- ns of life and is guided in making things and in putting into immediate practice each item of newfound information.

Real, everyday lessons translated at once into useful action carry an electrifying impulse into the formerly dull and mutinous school. There is "fun just working"; the children are "so happy making their notebooks" and "the troublesome big boys haven't time now to raise the roof as they did heretofore." All these quotations, as we shall see presently, are but the beginnings of a great, glad testimony from the teachers in Missouri's reawakened rural schools.

Missouri became the pioneer in testing this plan through the sheer urgency of her needs. Vitalized Agriculture came as a ray of hope when the need of a new impulse in her rural schools was darkest. Three men were responsible for its try-out in our State: Professor P. G. Holden, originator of the plan and the untiring advocate of it as a part of the altruistic work of the Agricultural Extension Department of the International Harvester Company; Mr. U. W. Lamkin, State Superintendent of Public Instruction in Missouri, and Mr. T. J. Walker, Assistant Superintendent and Rural School Inspector. Early in 1917 these men shook hands on a resolution to make Vitalized Agriculture the impetus that should eventually lift Missouri's rural schools out of their lethargy.

Selecting fifteen of his most promising superintendents from counties in various parts of the State, Mr. Lamkin called them together for a short course of intensive training. Professor Holden and his staff came with charts and demonstration material and coached these picked apostles of the new plan in the subject, Growing Things. Fourteen hours a day and six days a week this intensive training continued for two weeks, and the county superintendents were sent home filled with the vision and skilled in teaching fundamental farm lessons from real things.

Returning home, each of these county superintendents called together his five best teachers and conveyed to them the vital messages that were to be interpreted for the children from the everyday things around them. In this work the superintendents were assisted by Professor Holden and Mr. Walker, who went from county to county and group to group in faithful support of their ideal. There came to these teachers also from Professor Holden's department, a voluntary supervisor and assistant in the work, Mrs. Laura Markley, herself a country school teacher of long experience and thoroughly filled with the vision of the new plan. The teachers, moreover, continued throughout the year to meet the county superintendent each Saturday to prepare for the new week's work.

From fifteen counties the work spread during the second year to thirty-one counties and more than two hundred schools. It was only a matter of training teachers fast enough to meet the calls from districts that had caught the idea from adjoining communities where the work had been done the first year. With the aid of the five Missouri Teachers' Colleges and the State University this special training of teachers is to be greatly extended in the summer schools of the present year.

Reason enough for such wide acceptance of the new plan is to be found in the schoolrooms where it has had a two-year test. I wish that every interested parent and teacher might share with me the intimate acquaintance with the vitalized schools in my own and the two adjoining Missouri counties, Nodaway, Atchison and Holt. Knowing this to be impossible, I ask permission to be your proxy in this inspection. I shall promise you only the honest impressions of a plain farmer—himself the parent of four rural school pupils—who writes from earnest conviction and with neither ax to grind nor fads to defend.

Blair School, Holt County; Miss Tracey Blevins, teacher. Small school, full of energy and pervaded by an atmosphere of refinement. Besides making the wash-benches, nail-boxes, bird-houses and other articles outlined in the second year's work, these pupils had made a hotbed at a nearby farm home, using old windows from the schoolhouse. Fences repaired, trellis built in front of outbuildings, all mouse-holes in school building stopped with cement. This school has had two full years of Vitalized Agriculture. District has recently remodeled, painted and decorated the schoolhouse. Community meetings are held every two weeks. Canning and poultry clubs organized. Patrons visit school frequently and are enthusiastic about the work.

Woodville School, Holt County; Miss Anna Markt, teacher. This school has made a great success of the second year's work following the splendid start made by Miss Kurtz. Pupils here excel in sewing; boys as well as girls like it.

An exercise in rope work brightens the day's work in the humble schoolroom

New Point School, Holt County; Miss Lydia Acton, teacher. Large school; every pupil working. With refreshing assurance these boys and girls accurately told how they made the rope knots while their busy fingers put the words into effect. Knowledge of farm crops, skill with tools and familiarity with household processes—all these were revealed while the poise with which these children expressed themselves proved that the ability to do real things had banished awkward self-consciousness.

Eureka School, Atchison County; Miss Arethusa Lowery, teacher. Children proud of their work. Everybody in neighborhood interested. Here a hot lunch has been served during the winter months of two years. Schoolroom re-decorated artistically. At noon several patrons in autos drove up to spend the half-hour while their horses at home were resting from the field work.

Clover Hill School, Atchison County; Miss Grace Petty, teacher. Schoolroom immaculately neat. Children well behaved and neatly dressed. A victrola with educational records opened the day's work. Pupils very responsive to questions. Carpentry, rope-splicing and notebook work all well done. Two patrons present and declared themselves in favor of the rotation plan.

Prospect School, Atchison County; Miss Louise Jones, teacher. Had perhaps done more work than any other school visited: one work-bench, one wash-bench, seven nail-boxes, five book-racks, twelve bird houses, seven rope-mounts, furniture from cigar boxes, many doll-hammocks. Farm machinery survey completed. Furniture repaired neatly. Bookcase hinges reset.

Mount Pleasant School, Nodaway County; Miss Elva Heflin, teacher. Knot-tying contest between boys and girls; girls won. One girl, aged twelve, proudly told how she had spliced her father's hay rope when it broke in the midst of haying the previous summer; not a man on the job had been able to splice it so that it would run through the pulleys. Here the patrons gathered in for a picnic dinner and watched the pupils demonstrate the successive steps in the year's work in Vitalized Agriculture. Interest keen and unanimously favorable.

Belle Grove School, Nodaway County; Miss Maude Whitehead, teacher. Big boys still in school late in March. When questioned concerning Vitalized Agriculture an eighteen-year-old boy replied: "Like it? I should say so! Books never had anything for me till I got interested in this work; now I can see the sense to books."

From other counties by correspondence from the teachers themselves come messages that contain much of special significance:

"We started our year of Making Things by planing all the old marks off the teacher's desk."—Anne E. McCune, Cass County.

"Wish you could see our charts. Our nail-box holds water."—Children in school taught by Belle Horn, Ozark County.

"The children are interested in their school work as never before."—Cora Early, Worth County.

"During the social hour of the community meeting the fathers showed great pride in the carpentry work of pupils."—Ruby Ruddell, Nodaway County.

"One boy in the eighth grade made an excellent nail-box from a piece of an old seat found in the schoolyard."—Stella Shirley, Carroll County.

"The children have done unusually good work, not only in Making Things, but in all other subjects as well. We do not have dull days any more."—Arethusa Lowery, Atchison County.

"I never think of discipline on bad days. Everybody's having fun working."—Mrs. F. D. Goodwin, Pettis County.

"This work has formed the basis of excellent drill in arithmetic and language work."—Dorsey D. Griffey, Clinton County.

"Haven't had much trouble in regard to discipline since adopting this course. The troublesome boys are contented with real things to do and to make."—Mildred Barron, LaFayette County.

"Discipline hasn't been an item this year. We still have the same big boys who formerly made so much trouble; but they are all so interested now that they haven't time to raise the roof as heretofore."—Bert Cooper, Nodaway County.

A Vitalized Agriculture school studying corn, corn products and corn enemies

"I am sorry the carpentry period has closed. I love the tap, tap of the hammers and the whiz of the saw."—Ruth Brewster, Howell County.

"I am proud of their notebooks. They were so happy making them and took great pride in having them look neat."—Blanche Dowell, Bates County.

The deep significance of these quotations is just this: By dealing with real things the children in these Vitalized Agriculture schools have accepted doing as the inseparable accompaniment of learning. They have become "not hearers only, but doers of the truth." Instruction finds its full significance only in the application of it to everyday life.

By coordinating the activity of hands with mental inquiry—both wisely directed—these little folks are learning life's lessons in the natural, logical way. In Vitalized Agriculture there is no slavish confinement to textbook—a little reading goes a long way. Each item of instruction is accompanied by actually doing or handling the things described.

By giving a portion of each week to work in the big laboratory of everyday farm life our new plan of teaching encourages a continuation of the child's normal inquiry into the mysteries of the things and processes all around him. It directs to useful purposes his exuberant activity. It turns to good account his longing to do something.

These children are encouraged to follow to application each daily lesson. Having le correct use of tools they are taught to mend the school bookcase, to reset sagging hing adjust troublesome windows. Having le relation between good seed corn, a good st good crop, they are taken on excursions int tumn cornfields to select and hang in shelt tion the best seed ears before the encroacl frost and autumn rains.

There is not a multitude of lessons in o work in Vitalized Agriculture; yet each less large significance, for it includes the doing.

The quality of character resultant fr training—the matter-of-fact acceptance of the outgrowth of knowing—is a moral a more to be desired than the most elaborate p in books.

"Of the making of many books there is n yet "where there is no vision the people Books, texts, all the accumulations of govern independent research, bulletins, libraries, t tude of periodicals—all these make scant the practices of a people surfeited with inf yet atrophied by habitual disregard of their tive impulses.

To learn the use of a screw-driver in on Vitalized Agriculture classes is merely info but Vitalized Agriculture does not stop the leads the child to apply his new-found skill to the school bookcase and to repairing rickety and that is vision. Finding close at hand, al them in everyday life, the opportunity to mal growing knowledge—that is the vision that plan of teaching imparts.

"The educated man," says Professor Hol he that can both hold the vision and use the have heard him state the same thought in still way: "The educated man is he that is prep the duties of both home and citizenship."

It is toward this high ideal and by the m have tried to describe that Vitalized Agricultu to lead the children of the country schools.

The lineage of this plan is as interetsing creditable. It is not the creation of two shor Its actual testing has been in progress onl September, 1917, but it is the outgrowth of ex shaped to purpose by a long-cherished ideal r

The Churches and Sunday Gam

WHAT may be regarded as the strongest ance of any religious assembly this year question of Sunday observance is that Presbyterian General Assembly at St. Louis. A the committee reports submitted was one strik Sunday sports and amusements and condemn unqualified terms the desecration of the Lord's through the legalization of Sunday baseball and amusements. Special reference was made t readiness with which a number of state legisl have passed laws in favor of a "liberal Sunday," the committee regarded as calculated to lead increased desecration of the day. A resolutio presented opposing all secular uses of the bath for games and sports and all unnec travel and excursions, and urging employers captains of industry to recognize the need o laboring man for his weekly rest day and s him in this right and thereby assure his larger ency and happiness and the prosperity of capital and labor.

It seems probable that the whole question of day observance will now be raised and that th nominational bodies will put themselves on re There may be a stubborn battle between the reli element on the one side and the amusement-mo and politicians on the other.

INDUSTRIAL CHRISTIANITY

A Missionary Experiment on an Enormous Scale for the Uplifting of Chilean Peons

mpse of the 4,000-acre tract where industrial Christianity is to be applied in practice

AN UNDERTAKING far larger than that ever essayed before in any country by a foreign mission board is that of the Methodists in purchasing a ranch of 4,000 acres in southern Chile, where it is proposed to train thousands of Chilean peons in modern agricultural methods and thus equip them to work out their own economic and spiritual betterment.

An apiary on the Christian Industrial colony in Chile

General manager's headquarters. Thousands of Chilean peons are to be trained in modern agricultural methods on this big estate

THE Methodist Episcopal Church has just purchased, at an t cost of $275,000, a n of almost 4,000 r that stretches for l along both sides t Malleco River in u ern Chile and is u ed in one of the s productive agri- lt al districts in the rn hemisphere.

this large property proposed to train ands of Chilean in modern agricul- methods and thus them to work out own economic and itual betterment their return to homes.

e undertaking, in is an experiment plied Christianity cale far larger than ever made before in ountry by a foreign on board.

e estate, which is one of the finest in all of Chile, etween the coastal range and the Andes, about y miles south of Concepcion. The climate is that a wide variety of products, ranging from the tropical to those grown in the temperate zones, be successfully raised.

e former owner of the property is Don Manuel V. ter, a Chilean land baron of English extraction. anch was run on modern lines, and he was espe- progressive in his attitude toward his peons. ugh the place is worth almost $400,000, Senor ter gladly sold it at the reduced price when he the possibilities of the Christian plan for serving s fortunate fellow countrymen.

hen purchased the ranch had on it over 4,000 ucing apple-trees, large orange and lemon groves, hundreds of peach, pear, apricot and persimmon . It was fully stocked with horses, cattle, hogs sheep, the latter ranging the hilly parts of the e and proving a profitable investment. The wool a particularly fine quality.

The soil of the bottom lands along the river is admirably suited to wheat and other cereals, while the annual production of potatoes runs into many tons. The lowland portions of the ranch are fully irrigated, while the physical equipment includes modern buildings, steam tractors, automobiles for the use of foremen and directors, and many modern farming implements.

The considerations which led the Methodist Board of Foreign Missions to launch upon an enterprise of such pretentiousness are interesting in themselves as well as indicative of the statesmanship of modern missionary endeavor. To understand the wisdom of such a large investment, it is necessary to know something of present-day conditions in rural Chile.

The country today, outside the cities, is but little removed from the feudal system which has not only existed the 400 years since the Spaniards came but reaches back through many preceding centuries of Indian and Inca supremacy. Peons have lived on the same estate for generations. The few acres which they may call their own are not sufficient to supply their own needs, so to eke out an existence they work as cultivators of the landlords' broad fields at a wage of about forty cents a day.

Although steeped in poverty, victims of drink and other vices, and living at a very low standard, these childlike people have readily responded to the missionary appeal. Heretofore, however, the Church has been greatly handicapped in its work through its utter inability to offer to its many converts any adequate means of economic betterment. It seemed almost futile to bring evangelical religion into the lives of such human beings and then to make no provisions for the application of Christianity in its practical aspects.

The ranch at Angol is the solution to this dilemma. Here peons from every part of Chile will come for modern agricultural training. Theoretical instruction will take up a portion of the time, and practical application of the theories by actual work on the estate will occupy the remainder.

Horticultural, agricultural, and other experts in the diversified branches of modern farming on a large scale—brand-new kinds of foreign missionaries—are to be retained by the Mission board and sent to Angol to teach. There, too, Chilean Methodist ministers will be called in for periods of agricultural training, so that they may preach to their flocks in the rural districts the gospel of modern farming efficiency as well as the Gospel of Christ.

Bishop William F. Oldham is of the opinion that this great missionary enterprise will be self-supporting, practically from the start.

One of the side lines contemplated is the building of large canneries, where the products of the estate may be prepared for shipment throughout Chile. The many foreign mining and commercial interests, which have now to import practically all the supplies for their foreign employees from England or America, provide a market ready to hand.

Native workmen taking the course of instruction at the estate will work the land at the same time they learn the new methods. This labor will serve in lieu of "tuition." Students desiring to remain on the ranch during vacations, as well as the requisite number of regularly employed laborers, will be paid a decent living wage instead of the pittances usually received.

Laid Down Arms to Take Up Books

A Glorious Record Complete and Another Instantly Begun

By Hon. NEWTON D. BAKER
Secretary of War

WHEN Marshal Joffre was in this country, before our entrance into the war, the wildest expectation of the French General Staff was when America finally did prepare to partici- on the western front, we would have as many as 000 to 500,000 men.

s compared with "a great army of 400,000 or 500,- men"—the thing which America was not so long loing—stands the fact that one year and two ths after we declared war we were training, pping, transporting and maintaining soldiers in ce at the rate of 10,000 a day; so that in June of we transported nearly as many men as the Mar- had mentioned as our great army at the maximum is greatest expectation.

nd when the armistice came we had in France 2,000,000 men, and our casualties are pretty dy as great as the maximum expectation of the hal for our entire army.

This was not the work of the Secretary of War. It was the work of America. The net result is that America's effort is altogether the most spectacular exhibition of national strength that has ever taken place on the face of the earth.

When the armistice was signed, with 2,000,000 men in France, the problem which the general command over there faced was some sort of occupation which would keep the idle soldier from becoming a discontented soldier.

The boys said: "We want education. Can't there be some sort of a provision made here by which those who know more can teach those who know less?"

When I was last in France I looked over the educational system. There was at Bonne the American Expeditionary Forces University, which had 11,000 students, selected from all divisions.

There were eleven full-fledged colleges in that university—divinity, law, medicine, dentistry, veterinary surgery, the arts, the plastic arts, drawing, painting, things of that sort, music, science.

And one of the great cheering things, I think, about this whole venture is that we went over there with the highest conceivable purpose. Our men were filled with enthusiasm, dash and nerve and daring. They performed the most extraordinary exploits on the field of battle, and the minute it was over and that great objective accomplished their cry was for learning that would fit them for superior opportunity in their civil life.

BRITISH AIRSHIP LANDS IN AMERICA

ONCE more the sea is spanned above the clouds. With the safe landing of the big British dirigible balloon R-34 at Roosevelt Field, Mineola, L. I., July 6, the first crossing of the ocean in a lighter-than-air machine was accomplished, according to plan, but with a fuel margin so narrow that full success over partial failure was by but a few gallons of gasoline.

Head winds all the way across and thunderstorms on this side, one of which sent the big balloon 800 feet skyward in a single lunge, made the flight a constant struggle, and caused Major E. H. Scott, her commander, to send wireless calls for help and to suggest a landing at Chatham Naval Station on Cape Cod instead of Mineola. Destroyers were sent out ready to supply gasoline or to take the balloon in tow, and the Bancroft, U. S. N., got into touch with the R-34 and stood by underneath. The wind then became favorable, and by nursing the ship along on two engines, she was brought safely to her anchorage. She passed Montauk Point about 8 A.M. on the 6th and became visible at Roosevelt Field at 8.35. After circling the field to get her bearings, the motors stopped at 9.11 and the ship came to rest 2,000 feet above the anchorage. Major Pritchard, the second officer, came down in a parachute to superintend the work of making the ship fast, this being necessitated by the absence of Major Fuller, U. S. N., who had gone to Montauk Point to superintend the landing there if it became necessary. The gas was released and the big ship settled gracefully on an even keel until made fast.

The R-34 at Roosevelt Field, Mineola, L. I.

It was planned to refuel her and restore her hydrogen supply and start on the return trip early on July 8. The Navy had over 1,000,000 gallons of hydrogen gas at Roosevelt Field to recharge the R-34's gas bags and held there also sufficient quantities of gasoline for her fuel tanks. The officers and crew of the R-34 were given a hearty reception by the American naval officers and a banquet was tendered at Garden City by Vice Admiral Gleaves. Admiral Gleaves declared the trip of the R-34 had spun another cable uniting the two nations. The balloon was almost entirely above the clouds during her trip, the sea being only rarely seen. The monotony of the voyage was relieved by the discovery of a stowaway, a rigger named Ballantyne, who had been dropped from the crew to lighten the ship, but who decided not to be left behind. He worked his passage. The distance traveled in the voyage was 3,200 miles and the time 108 hours (4 days, 12 hours) a trifle longer than the steamship record, Queenstown to New York. The actual time from Ireland to Newfoundland was 59 hours. The R-34 is 670 feet long, 79 feet beam and 90 feet from the bottom of the gondola to the top of the gas bag.

The big British dirigible began her long planned cross Atlantic flight at 1.48 o'clock A.M. on July 2, starting from the East Fortune aerodrome near Edinburgh. The United States Navy was represented in the crew by Lieut. Commander Lansdowne.

The Week in the World's News

Allies Advance in Russia. The Allied Russian and British troops on the Archangel front advanced on June 26 against the Bolshevist positions south of Kurgomon on the Dvina, defeating the Bolsheviki, one hundred dead being reported, while the Russians captured 500 prisoners, 3 field guns, many machine guns and destroyed an enemy aerodrome.

General Denikine's Kossacks were reported on July 2 to be sweeping northward along the Volga. At the same time the Bolsheviki wireless from Moscow claimed the recapture of the important town of Perm from the Siberian forces of Admiral Kolchak. Kossack troops, on July 1, were reported within 380 miles of Moscow. Odessa, evacuated by the Allied forces on April 7, because of a mutiny on board the French fleet, was recaptured by Ukrainian troops on July 3 after a sanguinary battle.

Food Riots in Italy. Following a mass meeting at Forli, Italy, on July 2, the people excited by inflammatory speeches, plundered the food shops of the city, carrying the goods to the Chamber of Labor, where they placed them at the disposal of the people. The riots spread throughout Italy on July 3 and 4. Soviets were organized in many places and food was seized and sold at reduced prices. Merchants accused of extortionate prices were arrested and jailed in some places, and in others the zeal of the populace resulted in the destruction of stores and the spilling of goods on the streets. In Florence the streets ran with a mixed stream of wine, beer, olive oil and gasoline. As a result of these excesses, prices tumbled throughout Italy, but violence continued.

President Works Hard. President Wilson's ship, the George Washington, on June 30, met the transport "Great Northern" at sea and one of the escorting destroyers transferred to the George Washington a pouch of mail for the President in which were a number of appropriation bills which it was necessary for him to sign before July 1. The George Washington, being a naval vessel is technically American soil and the President was able to sign the bills with full legal sanction. This is said to be the first time in the history of the nation that a President affixed his signature to legislation when outside the continental boundaries of the United States. President Wilson was expected to land on July 8. He was reported to be preparing an address to be delivered before Congress shortly after his return.

Telegraph Strike Ends. After 21 days of failure to tie up the telegraph systems of the country the strike of the Commercial Telegraphers' Union against the Western Union and Postal Companies was called off on July 2.

A New Big Five. President Wilson, Premier Clemenceau and Premier Lloyd George, having worn themselves out in the preparation of the treaty signed by Germany, and feeling it necessary to return to the governments of which they were the heads, the supreme council of the Peace Conference was reconstituted under the chairmanship of Stephen Pichon, French Foreign Minister, the other members being Robert Lansing, Arthur J. Balfour, Tomasso Tittoni and Baron Makino of Japan, making it a Big Five. Full pressure was put on the work of preparing the peace treaty with Austria, Italy accepting the settlement of the Dalmatian question proposed by Secretary Lansing, but a threat of delay was seen on July 1 in the report that Italy would renew her demand for Fiume and would ask that the Austrian treaty provide the final determination of all Austrian territory to be ceded to Austria's neighbors.

The Kaiser to the Tower. Premier Lloyd George, addressing the Commons on July 3, said that more than a score of powers would ask Holland to extradite the Kaiser, and that the former rul be brought to England for trial. The Londo Mail said the Kaiser would be brought to on a British warship and confined in the T London while awaiting trial. It was also r that he would not suffer the death penalty, bu probably be banished to some lonely island. opinion appeared much divided as to the prop giving up the royal refugee. It appeared that the courts of Holland would first hear th case and that the Kaiser might then be eithe dited, or asked to leave the country as an und person. On July 4, von Hindenburg was qu declaring that he, himself, was responsible for orders and proclamations issued from Main quarters after August 29, 1916.

Casualties in Siberia. The skirmishes b American troops guarding the Siberian railw Bolshevik regular forces had resulted on July total of 50 casualties out of a company of 1 were killed in battle or died of wounds, 8 were s wounded and the rest slightly. Detachments recover the prisoners taken by the Bolshevis ceeded only in driving the Bolshevists further a French, British and American Allianc the same time that the general peace treat signed treaties of alliance were signed at Versai tween France and the United States and Fran Great Britain, each depending for validity up ratification of the other. The text of the t has not been given out, but it is understood tha provide that the United States and Great Brita not wait for the usual process provided in the L of Nations, but will immediately come to the m aid of France in case of non-justified aggression

Polish Treaty. At the same time that th treaty of peace was signed the German and the delegates concerned affixed their signatures t treaty establishing the new Polish nation. this treaty the boundaries of Poland and Ge and of Poland and Russia are left to later deter tion. The new Polish nation is fully recognize treaty announcing that the success of Allied arn restored the independence of which the Polish had been unjustly deprived. The sovereign Poland over former Russian Poland and other tories already under her sway or to be added to later determination was recognized and Poland herself, the guarantee being underwritten b League of Nations, to assure absolute equality the law to persons of all races, languages and c

Cities Raise Wages. On July 1 Chicago's Council passed the largest appropriation meas the history of the city, an increase of $45,000,00 total of $115,000,000 for the year, being c largely by increased salaries for city emplo Provision for further increases was expected to f within a short time. Ole Hanson, Mayor of Se announced on June 28 that Seattle was raising wages of all of her employees, declaring that the employees must and shall be paid enough to liv decency and comfort, and that neither cities nor ployers should wait until forced by threats of str to do justice to their employees.

© Paul Thom

The crew of the R-34. Left to right: Lt. Com. Lansdowne, U. S. N., Wallace Durrant, Lt. Guy Harris, Major Pritchard, Gen. Maitland, H. Lick, Lt. D. Slotter.

A Dry Launching. On July 1, the first day of prohibition, a 5000-ton steel vessel was launched Newark, N. J., and christened with ginger ale.

Newfoundland-Atlantic City Flight Fails. T giant 4-engined Handley-Page airplane, "Atlanti which had been sent to Newfoundland to try for t

Continued on page 793

PEACE THAT IS NOT PEACE

pite of the League and the Treaty, There Are Now Twenty-three Wars in the World, More Than Half of Europe and Nearly Half of Asia Being Involved

By R. D. HENKLE

E accept the judgment of the proponents of League of Nations it is the greatest step in tory toward the elimination of all war.

But—

ep your powder dry," says Georges Clemenceau, r of France. "The world is living on a powder rr"

" is not all over yet. The world was never in a lesperate situation. Today, our chief of the l staff tells me there are twenty-three wars in ss," says Andrew Bonar Law, Lloyd George man and government leader in the House of ons.

area of hostilities on the day the treaty was embraced more than half of Europe and nearly Asia. The theaters of war may be itemized order:

1. The Archangel front: British, French, Serbians, ns, and a few lingering Americans are slowly ground against the Bolsheviki. Approximately men on both sides are engaged in the operavith nearly all the newer implements of battle except tanks.

2. Finnish front: General Mannerheim and an of Finns are having indifferent success against lsheviki in the direction of Petrograd.

3. Esthonian front: An Esthonian army, handi- d at times and aided at other times by scattered n detachments, is watching Petrograd from uthwest from a distance of twenty-five to forty after having approached to within fifteen miles city. A strong Bolshevist force is opposing it.

4 Lithuanian front: A three- and at times a four- conflict is in progress east of the Neimen River. and Lithuanians conducting operations against olsheviki are none too friendly allies, and they ound it desirable at times to turn on each other verlook the presence of a common enemy. The n army has not yet entirely evacuated the , and Marshal Foch during the week ending 21 sent a peremptory demand to hasten the ation. The Germans have been aiding first the and then the Lithuanians, making chaos of sion.

5 Polish front: The Poles are engaged in clearing rest-Litovsk country and the valley of the Bug lsheviki and Ukrainians.

Posen front: Active fighting between the Ger- and the Poles has been resumed after a tempo- suspension under the terms of an armistice im- by the Peace Conference. The Poles now are usly pleading for aid from the Western Allies ck three separate German threats where the y is moving on important strategic points.

7 Galician front: Poles and Ruthenians, aided by Ukrainian forces, have been fighting desperately e region between Przemysl and Lemberg, with y for the time on the side of the Poles.

8 Volhynian front: Here a strictly Polish-Ukrain- nflict has been waging between General Pilsud- forces on the one hand and General Petlura's ine army. Armistice arrangements recently en- into have been denounced as unauthorized by s, and active hostilities of a really important cter are in full swing. Pilsudski's command in- s several thousand Polish-Americans who were d near New York City and transported to France e United States and England, where they joined al Haller's Polish Legion fighting the Allies. During the spring r's divisions were transported gh Germany to the eastern front m the backbone of Poland's army.

Don front: General Denikine strong and well organized army ssians and Cossacks which he is against the Bolsheviki in con- ty with an understanding entered few weeks ago with the Kolchak nment at Omsk.

Kieff front: General fighting has in progress for several months een Ukrainians and Bolsheviki. w and fairly well-organized force ntered the field here under the er of an adventurer named Zeleny seems to be opposing both the factions. His supporters are ipally disaffected Little Russians.

Bessarabian front: General ing between Bolsheviki, Ukrain- and Rumanians.

Eastern Hungarian front: A yar Soviet army, after early re- s, is making substantial gains st a strong Rumanian army in h is a sprinkling of French Greeks Serbs, with French aircraft.

TWENTY-THREE wars in progress on the day when representatives of the greater part of the world seated themselves in the Hall of Mirrors in the Versailles Chateau and solemnly affixed their signatures to an 80,000-word agreement to end all war!

M. Clemenceau's pessimism is founded on his knowledge of nationalities, national aspirations, and human nature in general, but it is a prediction of calamities that may never occur.

Mr. Bonar Law's words in the House of Commons are a statement of present fact to which may be added the quite obvious suggestion that the belligerency represented by twenty-three wars will be intensified, and its manifestations increased, with the release of the pressure exerted for six months by the Peace Conference. Will the youthful League of Nations be able to ameliorate or control this situation?

The efficacy of the League of Nations is a matter purely of individual opinion. President Wilson is confident of its power for good. Mr. Lloyd George, M. Clemenceau and Signor Orlando have plainly and unmistakably let it be known that they seriously doubt its value. This has been emphasized in many ways by France and England, but in none more emphatic than their insistence on an agreement for concert of action by France, England and the United States, to be formally recognized in an Anglo-Franco-American alliance.

Another Triple Entente to balance what the shrewdest and most able diplomatists fear will develop at some time in the not distant future into another Triple Alliance with Germany, Russia and Japan as signatories!

Granting the clarity of the President's vision and the merit he finds in the League of Nations, the first task of its governing body will be the stabilization of the world. And to bring this about there must be actual, not theoretical, peace.

Men whose names appear on the treaty creating the League have declared that seeds for future wars can be found in almost every one of the articles of the German treaty. So not only must the League harmonize the Europe and Asia of today by effecting a just and lasting peace among the peoples engaged in the twenty-three wars referred to by Mr. Bonar Law, but it must see to it that hot-blooded nationalism is cooled to the temperature where it will be unable to germinate the seeds contained in the Versailles document.

13. Western Hungarian front: The Magyars have defeated the Czechoslovaks, advanced into Slovakia and are endangering the hold of the new Czech state on this territory.

14. Danube front: Serbians and Magyars are engaged here, and again the latter are meeting with more or less success.

15. Dalmatian and Istrian front: Jugoslavs and Italians are engaged in skirmishing, which at times reaches almost the proportion of battles.

16. Carinthian front: Conflict over the new frontier has brought German Austrians and the Jugoslavs into sharp engagements.

17. Teschen front: While the war between the Poles and the Czechoslovaks over the Duchy of Teschen has been halted by an armistice, both countries are maintaining their forces in readiness to resume fighting if the distribution of the old Austria by the Peace Conference is not done to their satisfaction. And since, in this district, satisfaction for one means disappointment for the other the armistice seems to be little more than a breathing spell for the soldiery.

18. Montenegrin front: Montenegrin rebels, supporters of the old dynasty against the new Jugoslav state, are opposing Serb forces which are attempting to subdue them.

19. Gulf of Finland: A sharp naval war which has resulted in important losses of warships on both sides has resulted from the efforts of the British navy to keep control of the Gulf of Finland and the gate to Petrograd. The Bolsheviki, manning the vessels remaining from the old Russian Baltic fleet, are disputing the possession of the gulf with the British.

20. Indian frontier: The Third Afghan war is occupying the attention of the British Indian army. The Amir of Afghanistan, actively supported by the Bolshevist government in Moscow, has all his available army in the field. Quite serious fighting is in progress around Khyber Pass. The British are using airplanes extensively to bomb the Afghan camps and towns, but they have not succeeded in advancing with their cavalry and infantry more than a few miles beyond the frontier. Their objective is believed to be Kandahar.

21. Siberian front: American, British, French, Italian, Japanese and Chinese troops cooperating with two Russian columns are attempting to subdue the Bolsheviki in Siberia. The first Americans killed or wounded in action on this front were reported the middle of June as a result of an action with the Bolsheviki about one hundred miles from Vladivostok.

22. Ural front: Admiral Kolchak's All-Russian army had marked success against the Bolsheviki during May, but in the weeks following lost almost all the ground it had gained. Kolchak is pleading for aid from the Allies. This assistance must come quickly, he says, or his situation by winter will be one of considerable danger. Thus far there are no indications that material help will reach him during the summer.

23. Egyptian front: Great Britain has largely reinforced her army in Egypt and there has been serious and costly fighting between the British and natives, who are supporting a strong nationalist movement. The uprising was general, reaching from Cairo to the Upper Nile, and has not yet been put down.

To this list of troublous districts may be added at least two more where conditions are such as to hold the attention of the world.

Turkish nationalists fiercely resent the efforts of Greeks and Italians to establish themselves on the eastern Mediterranean littoral and have opposed any efforts to penetrate into the hinterland. The Peace Conference was compelled to order Italian detachments back to their transports after landings had been effected at several points. The Turks are receiving at least passive support from the British, and several circumstances have encouraged them to use their arms to prevent, if they can, a complete breaking up of the old Ottoman Empire. They seem to resent particularly the claims of the Greeks and Italians.

The Korean revolt has been worrying Japan, and it has aroused much sympathy outside Asia. The Japanese army in the colony has been reinforced until it now numbers close to 150,000 men, but the soldiers can find no armed men to fight. The entire country is in rebellion, but its leaders are determined to prevent as much bloodshed as possible and place all the onus of violence on the shoulders of the Japanese. The strength of the revolt is growing under very shrewd and skilful direction, and for the reason that it is of a passive character the Imperial authorities are at a great disadvantage. The situation here is one, however, which the League of Nations specifically excludes from its jurisdiction. Like the smoldering Irish rebellion, it is regarded as a strictly internal affair.

And Mexico! For the first time in its history the United States has been compelled to fortify a frontier. Disorders south of the Rio Grande are responsible for the need. Surely Mexico is a field in which the League can exercise its beneficent influences.

The Sunken Interned German Fleet

The German fleet sunk by crew in Scapa Flow harbor. Sunset view of the ships taken from a dirigible.

Putting God First

A SERMON BY REV. CHESTER FAIRMAN RALSTON, D.D.*

TEXT—Phil. 2 : 5. "Let this mind be in you which was also in Christ Jesus."

ON THE eve of his departure for college a mother said to her son, "Remember, my boy, if you are to succeed in life, if your service is to be at its best, you must be willing to be third." When that young man had finished decorating the walls of his dormitory room with pennants, pictures and banners, there hung immediately above his study table this motto, "I am willing to be third." Many were the curious glances cast at that motto by classmates and friends during the freshman year, while not a few made light of the very strange and, to them, meaningless words. Near the close of the year one of his chums confessed an intense curiosity and desire to know the meaning of this unusual motto. It was then, for the first time, that the story of what passed between the young man and his mother became known. "But what did your mother mean by such a remark?" was the further inquiry. "Her explanation," he replied, "was that in order to make my life of greatest service I must be willing to put God first, others second, self third."

In striking epitome, this is exactly what Jesus did, and this is the essence also of the Master's teaching for those who would follow after him. The "mind which was in Christ Jesus" led him to consider first and always the will of God the Father, then the need and condition of those to whom he was sent, his own welfare always receiving last consideration.

To put God first in life's plans and activities presupposes a surrendered will. This much is granted without further word. But it means more. To put and keep God first implies a knowledge of God and his purposes which can come only through fellowship with and obedience to him. Whatever our belief concerning a tendency to sin as the natural drift of life, I am convinced that more men and women would be lovers of God, and willing co-laborers with him, if only they knew him and understood his purposes. The personality and purposes of God as revealed in Christ will command the assent and admiration of men. For a man to be willing to walk with God is to come to love and understand him, and this, in turn, will result in keeping God first. If one will fully acquaint himself with God's ideal for man, as revealed in the life and teachings of Christ, there will be no misunderstanding as to the rightfulness of God's claim to the first place in one's plans and service.

PUTTING God first in life gives one a right adjustment, in truth, the right adjustment to all of life's problems. It furnishes right adjustment toward one's self, toward others, toward material and spiritual values, toward matters temporal and matters eternal. It does away with many of the false values which are at once so deceptive and so alluring. It helps to render otherwise difficult questions easy of decision. It takes time by the forelock and enables one to answer some of life's hardest questions even before they arise. To determine definitely to put God first is a great life-stabilizer. It holds man in just balance Godward, manward, selfward; inward and outward, earthward and heavenward. And it should be remembered that it is a thousand times easier to put God first, to serve him with the heart and soul and mind and strength, than to give him only partial right and place on the throne of one's heart. God is always in the way in such a life. To such a one religion is ever an annoyance, a constant source of irritation. There is no peace or joy for such a life. Jesus included the whole problem in the striking words, "Ye cannot serve God and mammon." It cannot be God and mammon; it must be God or mammon. For the person who would be at peace with God, who would find joy in the fellowship of God, who would render the most effective service in life, this is a first and unalterable requirement: he must put God first.

"Others second." The demands of self unceasingly cry out against the interest of others. One may decide he is willing to give God the first place in his life only to discover that self precipitates another fight in its demand for "rights" and consideration over and above consideration for others. Again the "mind which was in Christ Jesus" points the way. "He saved others, himself he could not save." That was more than a taunting cry of the Jews. Because he saved others he could not save himself. He put the will of the Father first, the welfare of others second, and buried himself.

"Look not every man on his own things, but every man also on the things of others"; "We that are strong ought to bear the infirmities of the weak, and not to please ourselves"; "Bear ye one another's burdens, and so fulfill the law of Christ"; "If meat causeth my brother to stumble I will eat no meat"—these are among the words of Scripture which clearly teach that thought for others must be paramount with those who would follow their Master. It has not been pleasant for Edward Steiner to enter the ports of our country five and twenty times in the steerage of an ocean liner. But he has not chosen to do so because it is pleasant, because he sought his own comfort; he has done so because he put others second and self third. He has done so that he might be the better able to speak a message to the entire country in behalf of those with whom he shared a steerage sailing. He was considering the "things of others" that he might serve them. We rise just as high in this life as we seek to lift others; no higher. We receive our greatest good in this world by giving ourselves to others, not by receiving from them.

WHEN Jesus commanded the rich young man to sell his all, and distribute among the poor, it was the Master's way of trying to bring into the life of that young man a blessing he had never known, not even with his faithful observance of the negative commandments of the Decalogue. Jesus would have him learn the joy of losing his own comfort and selfish interest in the need and welfare of others. His riches separated not only between himself and his Lord, but between himself and his brother.

In his "Life of Henry Drummond," George Adam Smith tells of an incident which came under the observation of Mr. Drummond during his ministry among the students of Edinburgh University. He recites the case of an American student, a graduate of an American university, who remained in Edinburgh one year after graduation for the sole purpose of trying to win to Christ a fellow student, an avowed and rabid atheist, with whom he had been closely affiliated. This young man resigned his opportunity to open in a home city a promising medical practice, that he might serve the other man in the higher way. Nor was his willingness to put others second without its due reward. Through his personal influence the student friend was won from atheism to Christianity, and more; he later went as a medical missionary to the foreign field.

The centering of one's mind upon others removes self from the immediate foreground of one's thought, thereby giving full opportunity for the best development of character. No life can be at its best, no character can put on strength and beauty when attention is centered upon self. The self-centered life moves in a circle so small that the circumference of one's interests is so near the center as to make the larger and truer visions of life practically impossible. Whatever his pretensions may be, if a man fills his thoughts and talk and plans with "I" and "me" and "my," God and others must remain in the farthermost background of his life; his usefulness in the Kingdom of God must await a readjustment of his attitude toward the great world outside himself.

Native reader in North Africa

Self third! If one is possessed of the mi characterized Jesus, if the young man shal the injunction of his mother, there will be littl for self in all his thoughts. When the mother and James desired for them first places in the dom of God, when the disciples quarreled themselves for the chief places, the Master re them for their self-seeking, pointing out at th time that the only way to come into the pl honor and leadership is through the denying in the service of others; in other words, by k self in third place.

A FEW years ago a young woman was gra from an Eastern college as president of he This young woman was compelled to earn her expenses, and therefore had little time for soc while in school. Her off hours were spent in m and darning for other girls, and doing such oth as she could secure. Hers was a very busy lif she was never too engrossed with her own nee interests to be forgetful of the comforts of her mates and friends. She found time in some way favors and kindnesses for the girls. She w among the brightest in her class, but she w garded the most unselfish, thereby winning th fidence and love of her classmates. Througho college course she had made herself the serv those about her, and they, in turn, exalted her senior year to the highest honor within their by electing her president of the class. Thos bury self in the interest of others and of God w blessed in rendering the highest possible servic will be exalted to a place of confidence and ho the affection and esteem of their friends.

And the secret here is what? Simply this: who put God and others above self will have th resources of the Divine Spirit and of human f ship at their back. Such can God safely trust the riches of his grace and power. To such will give their confidence and allegiance. When one sciously puts God and others to the front in his thoughts and service, one finds that God and fellows get behind him and exalt him to positio increased responsibility and service.

The whole record of missionary service from day of Paul to that of Pitkin is in illustration o fact. And what holds in these positions of outs ing service maintains also in every life, howeve significant the position occupied, where self is b in the interest of Christ and humanity.

WE ARE exhorted by Paul in our text to "let mind be in you which was also in Christ Je and which the apostle defines in the verses follo as the mind of self-denying service in the intere others. "Wherefore," he continues, "God highly exalted him, and given unto him the that is above every name." Thus hath the Fa honored his Son in carrying to its highest fruitio law for which we appeal in this sermon. And so, have men lifted up Christ, the sacrificial Christ, they have declared him "the holiest among mighty, the mightiest among the holy."

No one has ever been bold enough to claim that Master did not go to the full limit in his self-renu tion and self-sacrifice in his ministry for others, the exemplification of this great law of the Gosp his life that has placed him high above all other teachers and leaders. Not alone the beauty strength of his character, nor the wisdom of his te ings, nor his power to heal and to help, has given him "the name that is above every name" in affection and confidence of mankind; it is because "being in the form of God, did not reckon his eq ity with God a thing to be clung to; but emptied h self, taking the form of a servant, and was mad the likeness of men; and being found in fashion man, he humbled himself, and became obedient u death, even the death of the cross." It was his ingness, which became the purpose of his life an turn the reality of his life, to put God first, ot second, self third, that draws a self-centered, wic and lost world to the foot of his cross.

We must conclude that the mother, in her final junction to her son, was right; that she laid bef him the one inclusive law of Christ for all high worthy service—a law which she, as a Christ mother, had long before learned and practiced; which for us all is as fundamental and inexorable any word of the unchanging Christ.

---

*Baptist pastor, formerly of Yonkers, N. Y., now of Oberlin, Ohio.

TRIP ON A TRANSPORT

By Margaret E. Sangster

EFT France from the same port that I landed u—Bordeaux. I left France in the first glow of wonderful springlike morning, after a night of vaiting on shipboard for the right tide. The hat I sailed on, strangely enough, was the same which I had left New York, the Chicago. But interim between my arrival in France and my away from France, the Chicago had been ted from a typical French Line passenger ito a transport.

re are always a thousand and one things in the proverbial last minute—a mil- id one things to see. I had left many tasks e. I had left countless details unattended id strangest of all, I felt, during those last a dragging sorrow at my heart. For, gh my homeland lay bright before me, ll the radiance of a dream coming true, I to leave France. Somehow France had to occupy a unique place in my heart. home, even as I paid for my ticket and ed my deck chair in Paris, seemed unreal, a It wasn't until I landed in the crowded, ng station at Bordeaux that any shade of seemed to touch me.

E transport was crowded with soldiers oing home. From all about me I heard talking boyishly, exuberantly. Here and on the deck a horizon-blue uniform showed among the olive-drab masses—here and a civilian stood out from the background iforms. There were very few women on the boat—a sprinkling of French wives to the home of their adoption, a Red Cross , a government worker or two, and myself. As hip swung heavily away from the dock, we all led dizzily against the rail, waving madly familiar faces, calling our good-bys to the stran- vho had come out of curiosity to see our boat Strangely my eyes were a little dim as I blew kiss to France—and yet I was laughing.

m somewhere below deck a band—a real mili- band—began to play catchy American music, and nly I felt at home for the first time in months. ned to a young lieutenant who was standing e me, and spoke. "Well, we're on our way!" I him, and though I didn't even his name, I felt as if we were iends.

e lieutenant looked at me, his rinkled up into a chuckly smile of ement. And "It just ain't possi- answered the lieutenant.

AVE spoken of my voyage to rance as a picture gallery. It was doscopic, unreal; a story told in hed paragraphs. But my trip , on the very same boat, was different. It was a definite, con- d thing from the very moment of g to the last second before we d. Perhaps it was different be- the sea was a fairly smooth of water—because the sun shone lly day after day. Perhaps it because I was surrounded by my trymen, who had proved their h, who had passed their test gal- y, with colors flying. Perhaps it ecause we were going home!

ipboard friendships are queer, al things, that have a way of fill- quite subtly, a very wide place in heart. My voyage home was a , joyous, houseparty sort of r, filled with friendships that every day into more perfect er. Some of the boys that I came now so very well I shall never see n, and the ones that I do meet never be able to achieve again the easy air of good-fellowship. But ve memories of them pigeonholed y in a mental treasure-box for all here was the boy whom we called General." Why we called him I didn't quite know. Perhaps be- e he was a serious soul, who car- himself with a sturdily erect e—perhaps because his blue eyes ed so straight into the soul of gs. He was bashful, rather—he mered and blushed when I talked him, and confided to the other that "women folk were hard to erstand!" But he admitted once he was a criminal lawyer in a e Southern city, and his friends me later that he never blushed or mered when he was working out a he blonde, very young boy we called Alonzo. He resented the name bitterly, but came in time to recognize it as his own particular burden. He had three gold stripes on each sleeve of his blouse. The three on his left sleeve stood for eighteen months in active service; the other three for wounds received at Belleau Wood and, later, at Château Thierry. There was a scar from one of them on his temple—a cruel scar that ran well up into his hair. "It's hard to smile," he told me very soberly one night when I was teasing him; "I've seen such an awful lot of fighting."

A Prayer for Our Boys Returning

GOD, bring them back just as they went away;
  A little wiser, maybe, but unchanged
In all the vital things—let them today
  Take up the lives that war has disarranged.
Let them renew the youth they laid aside
  To fight their battles in the world of men,
God, bring to life their little dreams that died,
  And build their altars new again, and then—

Show them the paths of right that they have fought for Through bloody mists on bloody fields of strife;
Show them the gallant truths that they have sought for;
  Show them, anew, the better things of life.
God of the hosts, blot out the months of pain—
And let them have their boyhood back again!
AMEN.

The Marine Major was going home to sadness, for death had visited his loved ones while he was fighting his way through a death-swept country. He was going home to emptiness—to a house that would echo at his lonely footsteps. He played, most of the time, with a wee Franco-American baby that its war-bride mother was bringing to New York. He didn't smile much, either.

And then there was the group of men who worried. De-De, who was a captain, was worried because he was engaged to three girls back home and didn't know which one he loved. And John, another captain, was equally worried because he wasn't engaged to any girl. There was the man who worried because his job had not been kept for him, and the other man who didn't want the work that was waiting for him. There was the man who told me that he had grown away from his wife—and the boy who said that his wife had grown away from him.

There was a man from Missouri who was going home to sit on the porch of his house and stay there. "Ah ain't nevah goin' to leave that fahm no mo'!" he told me emphatically.

And there was Bob, who hated to give up his uniform, which was becoming, and who wondered whether he ever would fit into the scheme of things again. "It just seems, Miss Margaret," he told me, "that I've got to go on. I can't just sit still—after all o' this! Why, my feet'll be achin' to hit the trail again. And back home"—his face was a sober face—"the folks are expectin' me to settle down!"

They were all my friends, those men who had gone over to fight for my country. But the most joyous part of the trip—the most unforgetable part of it—is woven around a curious five-sided friendship that I achieved with four boys who had gone from college, in the first part of the war, to fight with the French. Very young they were, very good-looking in their horizon-blue uniforms, very thrilled with the thought of getting home. And the plans that they made, sitting in their deck chairs! the boyish, exuberant plans!

They were going camping first—real camping in the Maine woods. And then they would go, they supposed, into business. Perhaps together. What business? Oh, most any business with money in it. Pat was all for a great scientifically arranged farm. Bennett wanted to manage a factory run along real profit-sharing lines. John thought there might be a great deal in the perfume business. Only Heinie, who was quite terribly seasick, was content to drift. "Future?" he said once. "I'm going to go out somewhere in the middle of a continent—any continent! And I'm going to stay there. I don't even want to see another ocean!"

Oh, friends of mine, if my trip over was a picture gallery, my trip back was a photograph album, a nice family album, a little worn on the edges, and a little threadbare—perhaps from constant use.

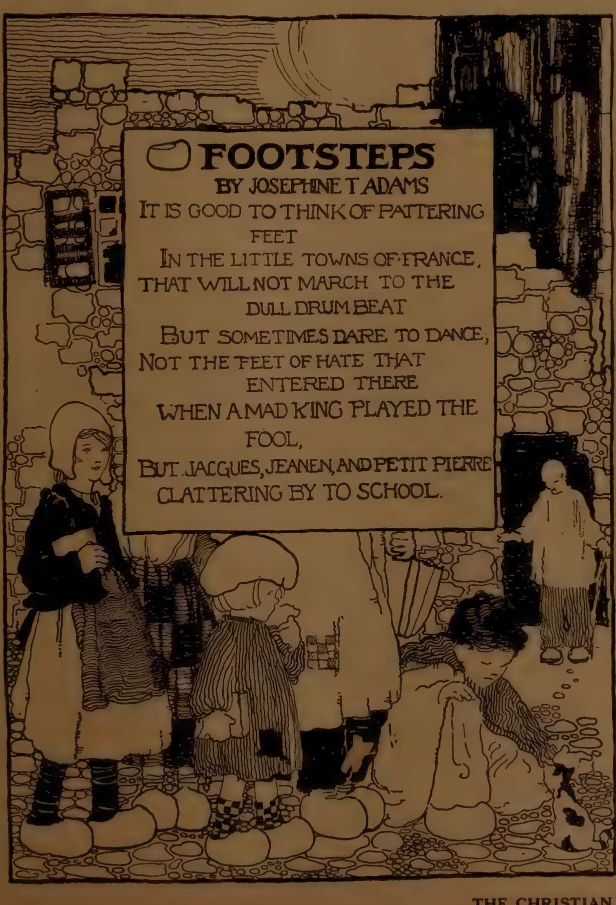
I shall never forget my first sight of my homeland—from the ocean. It was about four o'clock in the afternoon and we were walking about the deck, when suddenly, off in the distance, some one saw a black streak rising, chimney-like, against the sky. At first we thought it must be the smoke-stack of some passing boat, but it stayed so immovably upon the horizon-line that the idea became absurd. And then somebody said, in a hushed whisper, "It's a lighthouse!" And it was.

We anchored somewhere not far from Sandy Hook for the night. For we had to see inspectors and health officers and passport men before we could be allowed to land in the morning. Nobody felt like sleeping that night. It was too wonderful to be alive, and awake, and young—and almost home. Even I, who had only seen the last curtain fall upon the last act of a world drama, could somehow catch the feeling of the boys who had stage-managed the fall of that curtain.

It was a happy evening, but as it grew later and later the happiness became an almost silent happiness. I stood up on the hurricane deck with the four boys who had been in the French army, and watched the shoreline—watched with a feeling that might almost have been a feeling of reverence.

We saw the pilot come out in his little bobbing boat. We watched excitedly as he climbed the rope ladder that was thrown to him. The soldiers below deck were shouting, singing. And then a fireship, vividly alight, swept toward us down the bay. It was Pat who spoke as it drew near. "The searchlights on that boat look like arms, don't they?" he said softly; "like arms stretched out to welcome us home."

All at once I was seeing the fireboat through a mist of tears.



FOOTSTEPS

BY JOSEPHINE T ADAMS

IT IS GOOD TO THINK OF PATTERING FEET
IN THE LITTLE TOWNS OF FRANCE, THAT WILL NOT MARCH TO THE DULL DRUM BEAT
BUT SOMETIMES DARE TO DANCE;
NOT THE FEET OF HATE THAT ENTERED THERE
WHEN A MAD KING PLAYED THE FOOL,
BUT JACQUES, JEANEN, AND PETIT PIERRE CLATTERING BY TO SCHOOL.

OUR EDITORIAL PAGE

The President and the League

WITH the homecoming of the President, the country may expect to hear from his own lips the full story of the Peace Treaty and the League of Nations. It will then be known definitely how he has fulfilled the great mission to which he was assigned as the chief representative of this people, and to what extent the United States has been an influence for world peace. We have believed from the very outset of the League movement that our people as a whole were heartily favorable to the project. Now, it will be known as far as any unbiased and open mind can desire to know, just to what extent the hopes kindled by the League have been justified by the outcome.

That there are some sincere people, even outside the range of partisan politics, who doubt the utility of the League, we can readily believe. Their opinions are entitled to be heard. Nothing that is human is perfect; the highest good would seem to be well-nigh unattainable. We can hardly expect the League to be free from imperfections. Yet as the matter stands it has this logical aspect: a League of Nations is the world's greatest hope for averting future wars; and as such a League without America—which was its parent and projector—would be virtually impotent, our duty in the line of world service in behalf of peace and justice makes our identification with it indispensable as the only available means of avoiding world wars in the near future, at least.

Our heroic dead, could they speak to us from their graves, would tell us how they gave their lives for world peace. To reject the League now would mean that their splendid courage, their confident hope and their sacrifice had all been in vain. We are bound by the ties of national honor, as a duty we owe both to the dead and the living, to stand by the League, to aid in making it an organization of real worth in the world, and to justify the confidence the other nations have in us to help in attaining that end.

If from the standpoint of human necessity the League be indispensable, it is even more so for high moral reasons. Its field of service will include the improvement of labor conditions among the nations, the just treatment of tutelary territories, bettering the condition of women and children, the abatement of the drug traffic by which multitudes are slaughtered for profit, the introduction of sanitary methods in different lands, and other important tasks related to social justice and well-being on an international scale. Peace is but one, although the most important, of its many duties. It will be in the largest sense a broad, practical illustration of the Christlike ideal of brotherhood. As President Wilson himself has said, in one of his recent addresses, the League of Nations will "maintain peace by maintaining right and justice. . . . It is a great charter for a new world order of affairs."

Dr. Charles W. Eliot, President Emeritus of Harvard, one of the clearest of American thinkers, in a powerful argument for ratification declares that the Treaty "aims at justice, liberty and peace for Europe and America, and at the promotion of national and international righteousness and well-being. It is by far the most promising agreement among the freer and more progressive nations that has ever been worked out. It suggests and will promote the organization of several new republics. . . . The League of Nations offers the only available means of putting into execution the ideals for which the American people went to war. Without it, the sacrifice America made for the war will be in vain. With it, we will have earned an immense gain for mankind."

Opportunity Schools

DENVER has struck a new educational idea which deserves the attention of practical minds in other cities. It is the "Opportunity School," and it aims to find out what kind of a career the student is best fitted for by natural inclination, and then to develop his latent abilities in that direction. Several years ago, Superintendent Cole of the Denver schools and one of his brightest lady principals, on comparing notes of their observations of the pupils' predilections, concluded that it was possible to find a more direct way to practical training of both mind and body than could be reached by present methods. They believed that an opportunity should be given to the student to begin the real battle of life with his best working qualities trained in the right direction for success. Some surprising results have been achieved thus far by making the teaching fit the student. The "Opportunity School" is, in a very definite sense, industrial, and a majority of its students are men and women who have had comparatively little education. It has already shown that under the new method of making the training fit the individual scholar, it is possible to reach without waste of time a point at which he or she may be rated as qualified for good work.

One man who when he entered the school confessed that he "knew nothing" is now, after two years' training, the well-equipped foreman of a large foundry. A young woman engaged at simple tasks in a packing plant, through her "Opportunity School" evening studies developed qualities which won quick recognition and promotion from her employers. Many other instances of the same sort, we are assured, could be quoted to show that the new idea is well worth investigation by the educational boards of our cities. We should like to see the "Opportunity School" idea thoroughly tested as a means of equipment for self-support and real progress for all our American youth.

Bolshevism Revealed

BOLSHEVISM, as a new ideal of human equality, has been widely exploited by its friends and apologists in America. They have asked that Lenine and Trotzky be let alone, with the assurance that, once unopposed, they would construct on the ruins of Russia a Utopia which would open the eyes of the world. On the other hand, the enemies of Bolshevism have painted its story in gory red and have warned the world against it, as a political disease, infectious and certainly fatal. Much that has come to us as news has been colored by the medium through which it came.

But on June 30, U. S. Consul Embry, just home from Omsk, from which vantage point he had observed the Reds since last November, gave us a real story, uncolored, exact, of what Bolshevism did to a group of Siberian cities which were afterward released from the terror by Siberian troops. Bolshevism may be a beautiful ideal, but the road to the realization of that ideal appears to be a path of murder, of rapine, of vandalism, of destruction of all that man has counted as civilization. A whisper of dissent is good for a bullet. An accusation is a condemnation. Fair trials are tedious and human liberty a nuisance. You may choose to agree or to die. It is more terrible than the Commune and less hopeful of good results. But there is a hopeful side. Mr. Embry believes that Admiral Kolchak will be able finally to overcome the Reds and to restore sanity and orderly government to Russia.

The world will not be safe for democracy so long as the Bolshevist fever is unconquered anywhere. It seems now to be past the crisis, but whether receding or reviving, Mr. Winter's story which is announced in this issue will give a definition to "Bolshevist," and will supply a reliable basis of judgment.

A Scapegoat of the Kaiser

VON BETHMANN-HOLLWEG, ex-Chancellor of the German empire, has offered himself as a scapegoat to bear the sins of his former master, the ex-Kaiser. This proposition has brought him suddenly into the limelight. He claims that he, who originated the famous phrase, "that scrap of paper," as applied to the violation of Belgium, was alone accountable for precipitating the war, the Chancellor being the responsible head of the government. He now proposes that he should stand trial in Wilhelm's stead, and declares his willingness to become a vicarious sacrifice to justice, and to accept the consequences whatever they may be.

There are certain obstacles, however, in the way of accepting this somewhat theatrical proposition. First: The Chancellor, as the records absolutely show, was merely a tool of Wilhelm Hohenzollern and the pliant slave of the Junker cabal which then dominated the imperial policy. Second: It happens unfortunately for the ex-Chancellor that the Allies are firmly resolved to compel the ex-Kaiser to face his judges in person and not by proxy; he alone must answer his accusers. A third reason is that the program for bringing the world-wreckers to justice is an inclusive one, and involves all the leaders who were parties to the crime, and who must now answer at the bar. As this will necessarily include Von Bethmann-Hollweg, it is quite superfluous for him to pose as a voluntary scapegoat for another.

It would have been quite a different matter, however, if the ex-Kaiser had been smitten with the desire to offer himself as the sin-bearer for his people. Instead of allowing his Chancellor to snatch the glory of such an opportunity, he could have pr his intention of facing his accusers and mi come forth with something of dignity from to the ordeal. He has missed an opportuni awakening the pride of his people, and has ingly lost the chance of getting even a passi of approval from the world which is awai judgment. The Kaiser is rather given to impulse; yet the opportunity has gone.

A Sober Nation

"GOING DRY" has not proved the sev which many anticipated. Now that thing accomplished, as far as the enfo of the War Time Prohibition Law is conce awakens a general feeling of gratification t liquor-selling forces and their allies, the brew distillers, with all their law-defying threats vices, have failed to stem the tide of prohibiti that we are started on the way to becoming nation.

It is a marvelous transformation which has gun, the full extent and meaning of which can yet be appreciated. An evil which had been rec as unconquerable has been tamed and drive a corner. But the saloon men, although the accepted the situation, have not yet abandone The day before the closing down of the saloo marked by no riotous orgy or carousal, but by deliberate, sodden drinking, as though the indulgence were reluctant to let the last oppo pass without a farewell debauch. It was th debasing wake of King Alcohol.

Wherever prohibition has been fairly tried, resulted in moral, physical and economic improv in the material reduction of crime, and in a les of taxation and other burdens which liquor- communities have to bear. A sober nation m happy and prosperous nation. It means a full basket, well fed and comfortably clad children, home surroundings where the wolf of poverty enter. It means emancipation from one of the gr wreckers of manhood the world has ever know

To Our Readers

SOME months ago a well-known journalis Nevin O. Winter, of Toledo, Ohio, we Europe as the Special Commissioner o Christian Herald, with instructions to get a bottom facts concerning Bolshevism. He has returned from a very remarkable series of vis Russia, Poland, Germany, Czechoslovakia, gary and other contiguous countries. The sto has to tell is one that will surprise the Ame people. It is the first presentation of the a naked truth concerning Bolshevism, and comes absolutely reliable sources. Many have inqui there was any good side to Bolshevism. They find the answer in Dr. Winter's articles, the fi which, entitled "The Truth About Bolshevism,' appear in the Christian Herald very soon. strongly urge all readers of this paper to notify friends of this fact and get them to subscribe. American who wishes to know the truth conce this unparalleled political and social develop which has shaken the world can afford to re uninformed.

Another feature which will be welcomed with versal approval is by Homer Rodeheaver, the fa Gospel singing evangelist, and first lieutenant of Sunday, who writes a short series of articles ent "My Experiences in France." Everybody k "Rodey" as the genius who put the pep i musical services in Billy Sunday's Gospel campa The great evangelist regards him as unequal Rodey spent many months in the trenches with heroic boys, and he tells the story of his advent in these chapters, which are full of human inter giving entirely new aspects of the soldier's life in time. Rodey has the faculty of seeing the b side of things wherever he goes, and it is that which he now presents so entertainingly that all read his story will be delighted. The first instalm of his adventures will appear in the Christian He at an early date.

Do not allow your subscriptions to expire. Se in your renewals in good time, and we hope th everyone will take the opportunity to send in a same time one or more new subscribers, that as m good people as possible may find enjoyment in readi the Christian Herald. We want to keep our Fam Circle constantly growing, and we invite your hea cooperation in helping us to do this.

Bringing up the Children

Dad

By HENRY TURNER BAILEY

A l the glory of children are their fathers." Prov. 17:6.

HAKE hands, Dad. How many children call you that? There are five who have called me Dad or Pa or Poppy. Excuse me for mentioning it, but I want you to know that I am no theorist in this matter of being the father of a y.

w here is some straight stuff: It is father's duty e some time every week to his boys and girls. only time I have been able to give to mine is y. My Sundays have belonged to the children. ave been to church and Sunday school with always, because in the light of some hundreds ars of history there is nothing that yields better s, in the long run, than habitual reverence for "Only those who believe in God do good in te," say the French.

day afternoons we have always taken a walk, the weather permitted, or if too stormy we have story books together, or have made various kinds ap-books.

our walks we usually had a definite objective. ent to see somebody, or to get a particular view, visit our favorite trees, or to look for some one in particular. We counted birds' nests one on another we searched for cocoons; on a third, into old stumps to see what we could discover; ooked under pieces of wood and bark, l the smallest growing things; collec- eaves or seed packs of as many kinds ossible; learned the wild flowers, the , the butterflies and moths, the ferns, rees, the mushrooms; made collections lored things—flowers, leaves, insects, les and so forth, and arranged them in spectrum order; followed a brook in ner with Tennyson's Brook as a guide; wed one in winter with Lowell's Brook he Vision of Sir Launfal) as a guide. word, we studied God's great wonder- utdoor book in the afternoon, just as ently as we studied the best literature e morning.

d what results? Five open-eyed, -minded, intelligent young men and en, devoted to their parents and grate- or what their heavenly Father and his ren have done for them; a mother is still young and happy (because she a little rest on Sunday during those nuous years); to say nothing of a father now thanks God for the privilege of being a boy though in his fifties.

e shall never forget those long eve- s in our city home when the girls came from seminary and high school and boys from Harvard and "Tech," and sat around the dinner-table together, etful of time. We were all more en- aining to each other than any show ever ed, because by this time each of the dren had discovered his own special of interest and delved into it beyond limit of the others in the great realms ature and literature that we had begun enjoy together when they were little dren. Each one could therefore make own particular contribution to the de- t of all.

ool rooms, clubs, stag parties? When short-sighted, self-indulgent, arrogant ers learn that in their own wives and dren are the possibilities of perennial ghts and solid satisfactions compared h which other things are dust and es?

e confidential relation between the er and the children is one of the most ious and important things in life. One uld never take chances of forfeiting this ation. It costs something to keep it, but s worth everything to the father and dren.

The Boy's Room

By LAURA A. KIRKMAN

WHILE daintiness is the keynote of the young girl's room, utility should be the first consideration in planning the boy's room. For boys are naturally more energetic than girls, and should have durable things about them.

For this reason furniture of some dark wood is better than white-enameled furniture for a boy's room. Cretonnes, too, seem out of place here; they are apt to become mussed and tumbled during the boy's vigorous play.

A good-sized rag rug is best for the floor of the boy's room, for this can be washed when forgetful feet track mud on the floor. The washstand china should be thick and plain, rather than fancy and fragile. The ornaments on the bureau should consist of a small clock, a pin-tray, a necktie box and a standing frame for mother's photograph.

But the most important piece of furniture, in the boy's opinion, is a work-table at which he may study, play games, and tinker with things mechanical. Boys are naturally inventive, and there is no better place in the house for such tinkering than in his own room, where he may have his boy friends in to experiment with him on rainy days.

Of course, carpentry work should not be done on the bedroom work-table; that should be done in the woodshed or barn. "Only noiseless work" should be the rule regarding this table. An ordinary kitchen table is excellent for this purpose.

The·birdies·spread·their wings·and·fly—
I'm·spreading·mine, so
why·can't·I?
Elizabeth·FitzHugh.

First Lessons in Music

By HARRIET AYER SEYMOUR

TELL Bobby to listen very intently while you play the C scale, one tone at a time, C-D-E-F-G up to C. Ask him whether one tone is like the last, or different. He will naturally say that each tone is different, until you get to the second C, which he hears as the same as the first note,. but higher. Go back and count the tones; there are seven. Then there are seven tones, and after that the same tone as the first, repeated, only higher up.

Let Bobby pick out the scale himself and sing it as he goes along. Alas! his little fingers are like pokers, and cannot go up the scale smoothly at all. This leads to a little talk about how to control them.

What shall we do? Let us think of our body and how we control it. When you want to close a door, how do you do it? First you think, then you get up, walk to the door, put out your hand, and close it. What made your feet take you to the door and your arm and hand close it? You first thought and then your body obeyed your thought. Now how shall we get our fingers and arms to obey when we play? Why, first think, and your fingers will obey you. Your body is your servant ready to obey you.

Now there are two things to be considered in regard to piano playing: a relaxed arm and a strong hand. To strengthen his hand, have Bobby practice dropping the weight of the arm on one finger, keeping the finger firm and having it touch the keyboard full on the end. To relax his arm, have him first drop it limply into his lap to get the feeling of limpness, and then in the same way onto the keyboard.

Now have Bobby play the C scale with each finger in turn, holding the arm limp and dropping the weight onto the finger as directed, until the proper relationship is established. This is one of the best exercises for producing beautiful tones.

The Free Bird

ONE day while walking in the Public Gardens in Boston, I heard the twitter of a little bird in a tree. I looked but could not see the bird. A lady sitting near me seemed to answer the bird each time.

Then she walked up to the tree, and held out her finger, and down flew a beautiful little bright apple-green parrot with yellow under its wings, and perched on her finger, and she brought it to her seat.

Presently it flew away again.

I was surprised at the trust she placed in the little bird, and said,

"Are you not afraid you will lose so tiny a bird?"

She replied, "Oh, no,; he knows my voice and will follow me. I bought him in South Africa a year ago. He will never grow any larger. He is a young bird. I have never caged him. I could not drive him away."

I thought: "What an object lesson I have learned today from this little bird, so young, and from a far country! It has learned the voice of its mistress and has followed trustingly and happily, each trusting the other completely. How beautiful was this love exhibited by the bird and its protector, the only friend it had.

I thought of the Christ love for us—and if we could know his voice and follow him as sweetly and trustingly as this little bird did its owner, and feel secure in that love, how free and blessed that life would be. The divine life is charged with the dynamo of heaven a spiritual fire that cannot be quenched.

Let us get that love that abides forever.

Jacksonville, Fla. H. M. WRIGHT.

◆

"Know what thee wishes to buy, what use thee will make of it, and how much thee should spend for it."

CHANSUNG'S CONFESSION

By WILLIAM NEWTON BLAIR, D.D. Illustrations by THELMA GOOCH

CHAPTER XIX

The Rescue

ON SATURDAY, the last day of the class, there was no night meeting. The Yun family were enjoying the evening together. The helper was explaining to Chansung a difficult passage in John's Gospel when the sound of running feet was heard and a small boy burst open the door and fell exhausted to the floor.

"Why, it's Kosie's son, Nechai!" exclaimed Grandmother Yun.

Before more could be said, the boy recovered and began half speaking, half crying; "Aigo, a terrible—thing—has happened! A—company of—men—broke into—our house—while we were—eating supper—and hit mother on the head—and killed her. aigo! aigo! and they are carrying—Paksie away, aigo! aigo! aigo!"

Swift looks were exchanged between the men. They understood too well what had happened. A crowd of heathen men had taken advantage of the confused state of the country and following an old heathen custom had come upon the defenseless home, struck down the elder woman and carried the younger woman off for their devil purposes. Evidently they had overlooked the boy and he had escaped.

"Aigo! aigo! What shall we do?" wailed Grandmother Yun.

"Be quiet, mother, we must save her, of course," Helper Yun answered firmly. "As believers in Jesus it is ours to suffer all things for his name's sake; but in a case like this it is our duty if need be to fight."

"Yes," interrupted Chansung eagerly, "I myself heard Pastor Mo say only a few days ago: 'If the honor of your wives and daughters is at stake, resist with all your might, and God be with you'!"

"There is no time to go to the church for help," said Yun Chosa. Turning to the boy he asked: "How many men were there?"

"At least twenty," answered the boy, still sobbing.

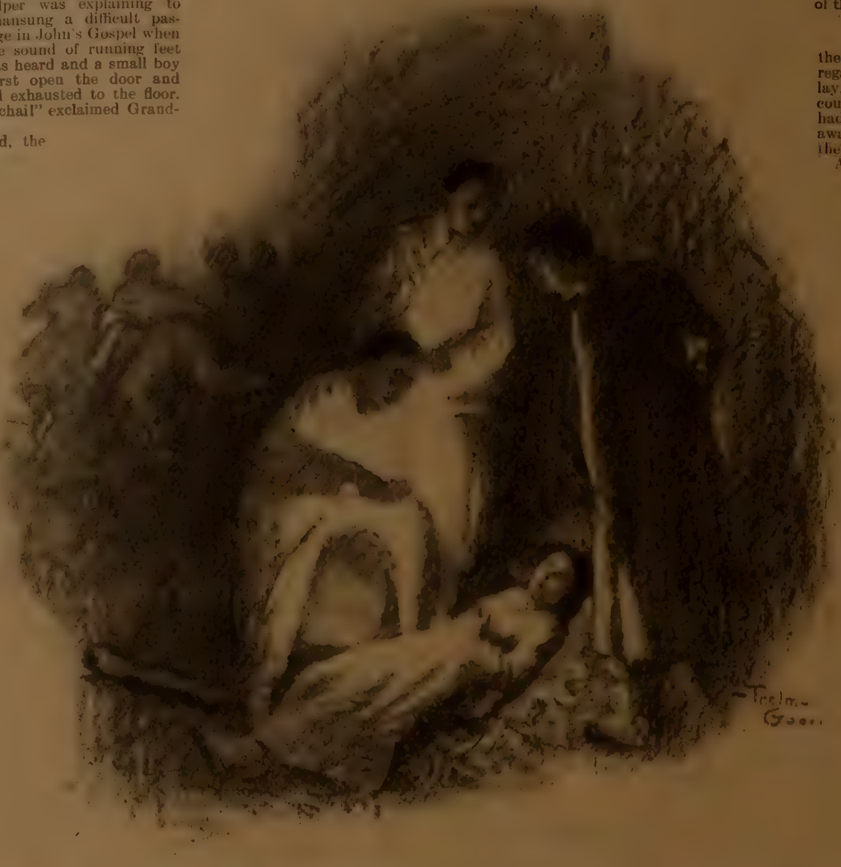
"It makes no difference. Come; we must pursue and overtake them. Get a club, each of you; follow me."

Every inch of the ground was known to the Yun brothers, and they set off running rapidly even in the dark in the direction the boy indicated. Chansung followed as best he could. After what seemed an age to him, they came out upon a small road and distinctly heard voices in the distance, and at the sound Chansung's brain caught fire. He leaped forward crying as he ran: "Here they are! Here they are! Let her go, you scoundrels! Let her go, you scoundrels!"

The others followed his example, racing forward and crying with all their might: "Let her go, you scoundrels! Let her go!"

For a moment the crowd hesitated; then with a cry, "The Christians are upon us! The Christians—" scattered and fled in every direction for their lives, fully persuaded that the more than half-hundred Sook Chun Christians were following hard after them.

Chunwha lay unconscious, breathing heavily, at the side of the road. One of the men lit a match, and its brief flare disclosed a pale face with closed eyes and an ugly cut on the side of the head.



One of the men lit a match, and its brief flare disclosed a pale face with closed eyes and an ugly cut on the side of the head.

"Let's not waste time here," said the helper. "The men may return any moment."

Stripping off his long coat, he directed, "Here, slip this under her. I will take the front; each of you hold a side; we will carry her to our house as quickly as possible."

No more was said between the men. Swiftly but gently they arranged the litter and started for the Yun home with all possible speed. Chunwha moaned once or twice on the way, but was still unconscious when her rescuers laid her down on the bed of comforts Grandmother Yun had ready for them.

The lighted room revealed a piteous sight. Chunwha was not only cut above the temple; her clothes were in tatters and dripping with blood, showing plainly that the villains had first struck her with a club when she resisted and then had dragged her senseless body across the rough ground to the spot where the three men had rescued her.

As Chansung looked down upon the blood-stained face a sudden dizziness seized him; his head swam. For a moment he seemed to be again in the old home in Tai Pyeng Dong, and before him lay the form of a young girl with red blood coursing from the wound his hands had made.

Completely unnerved, he left the room and walked forth under the open sky. For a time he forgot all else in the pain of his own soul. He lived again through that terrible night when he had fled from his father's home. And who was this young woman whose very look could move him so? Even in her pitifully injured condition she was beautiful. How his heart had gone out to her as they had carried her through the darkness!

Somewhat calmed by the night air he reentered the house. Chun regained consciousn
lay, very pale,
couch. Grandmoth had washed the bloo away and smooth
the wealth of dark
As Chansung
Chunwh
her eyes
him. A fa crept to cheeks a lips mov
"Com
she wh and as Cl came to she lo straight i eyes: "I what yo done for ni ht. Y saved m worse death. M bless you
I will nev
get."
She clo eyes wi weary sig was soon
As for Cha
he was too
to speak turned aw one in a
When t had bro
Chunwh
Yun Cheso younger br had left a for Kosie's with the b
see what h come of mother. To relief, they that Kosie recovered was telli
what had happened to a group of neighbors wh two appeared. Her joy and gratitude over her rescue, who can describe? One must know he ism at its worst to understand from what a death Chunwha had been saved. Kosie kne rejoiced in full measure.

CHAPTER XX

Chansung Finds Employment

CHUNWHA remained at the Yun home next day, which was the Sabbath. Her came over early in the morning, and sh Grandmother Yun cared for the injured girl,
the men went to church as usual.

Chansung's mind was rather distracted. Wit effort he would concentrate his thoughts o Helper Yun was saying; then again Chunwha' would come before him, her dark eyes looking into his, and her whispered words would crowd ou helper's sermon: "I know what you have don me tonight. You have saved me from worse death. May God bless you; I will never forget."

The following morning Chansung returne
Pyeng Yang. It was many months before h Chunwha again. Though her wounds healed ra she remained in the country until the first divisi the Japanese army had passed by.

The necessity of making a living forced Chan to go to Elder Kang for advice.

"What is there that I can do? You know I always lived as a student and writer. I hav training for business."

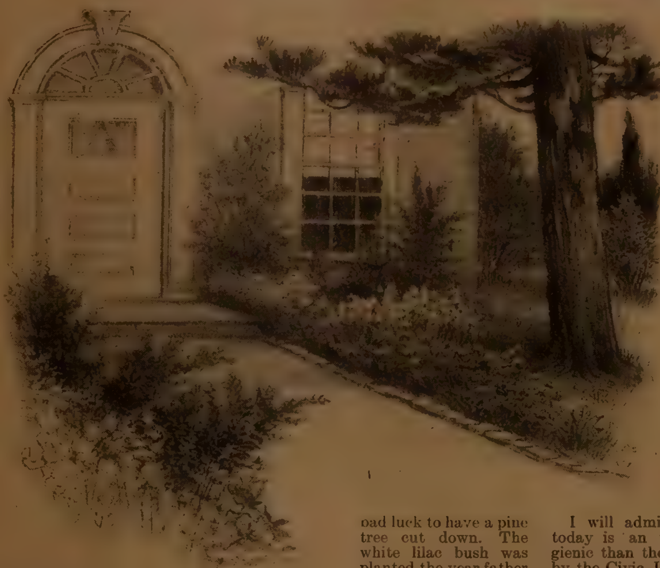
"That is just the trouble with our people!"
claimed the Elder. "We have been a natio

Continued on page 788

A LAMENT FOR FRONT YARDS



WITH the wanderlure of summer almost upon us, with the thought of roses and song of and all the enchanting that spring and summer in their train, there comes a haunting memory of the yard" in the old home in the old home town, with iscriminate mixture of flow- d shrubs, and trees, of chil- nd birds and bees. A feel- in to homesickness is the of regret, not for "what have been," but for what en and is no more.

no longer have "front " We have lawns, beauti- lvety green lawns they are, ut I wonder if the fellow duty it is to get up at five and mow the lawn will not e in a sigh for the front yard ch, only a few times during ason, the scythe was used to e long grass, and a sickle to round the shrubbery and these were the days of roses! the rare perfect monthly which, carefully pruned and cted, have a properly ap- ed place of their own in the en," but roses which ran ollowing their own sweet will looming in gay profusion.

ere were the Yellow roses, always the first to re- l to the friendliness of spring; the little white h rose; the Seven Sisters and the Prairie Queen, of which twined the pillars of almost every porch old home town; and there were the Sweet Briar, loss rose, the Hundred Leaf rose, the Blush rose innamon, Cherokee White, the Baltimore Belle, dozen others, the scent of any one of which will e me a child again just for tonight."

ese roses were not sprayed; they were seldom ned. Like Longfellow's turnip, "They grew and grew and they grew."

wns are neater than front yards were, I admit; may be more beautiful—to those who like them— hey all look alike to me. There is no originality, dividuality.

ront yard was as interesting and as diversified as zy quilt or a charmstring, and as family historical scrap-book. That tree near our dining-room ow really made the room too dark, but mother d not have it cut down, for it was set out the very that John, her first-born, came. Not only that, t was a pine tree, and some one told her it was bad luck to have a pine tree cut down. The white lilac bush was planted the year father bought the place; grandmother brought the purple one from her old place when she came to live with us. The yellow and red honeysuckles that met over the arched trellis at the front gate were sacred to Emily because they were in full bloom, and the night air was heavy with their fragrance, when she and Tom stood in their shadow and Tom told her the old, old story.

So almost every tree, shrub and plant had its reason for being and for license to grow where it pleased and as it pleased. The pink Flowering Almond trod on the toes of a white Bridal Wreath, and purple and yellow Flags rubbed elbows with "Pinies" of richest hues.

Down each side of the front walk was a flower bed, neatly outlined with bricks, corners up, and the contents of those beds far outnumbered Heinz's fifty-seven varieties. They were bordered by Mignonette and Sweet Alyssum or Portulacca; they were filled with Phlox and Marigolds and Tuberoses and Four O'clocks and Verbenas and Cigar Plants—dollars to doughnuts, familiar as you are with cigars, none of you have a Cigar Plant—and Dusty Millers and Larkspur and Feverfews and—well, you tell something that was not in those wonderful flowerbeds.

Nor were we dependent on greenhouses or seed catalogues. In the fall we took in our geraniums; we gathered seed of every flower; we carefully put away bulbs, and some of what we had we swapped with the neighbors for what we hadn't.

We were more neighborly when we had front yards. While we exchanged slips and seeds we also swapped stories and confidences and, perhaps, just a little bit of good-natured gossip.

How can the children of today have the same loving associations with, the same happy memories of, lawns that we have of front yards in the "old home places in the old home town"? What mere lawn has a lilac or snowball bush big enough to hide under while reading "David Copperfield" till the dinner dishes are done? The trees along the parking are so symmetrically trimmed there is little chance to climb them and none to have a swing.

I will admit that the censored back yard of today is an improvement; the cinerary more hygienic than the garbage pail; but the prizes offered by the Civic League have certainly worked a hardship on the boy who had a hickory turning-pole in the backyard, on which all the boys "chinned the pole" and "skinned the cat," and all the girls tried to; and on the boy who had a dog, a pair of white rabbits, a pet squirrel and a trained coon, and gave a circus performance every Saturday afternoon in the barn loft.

I do not see the children of today having half the fun on the roof of the garage that we used to have on top of the smokehouse and the woodshed, when mother wasn't drying corn on them—the woodshed half hidden by trumpet and wild cucumber vines.

As for the delicate, dewy Morning Glories, to see which made it worth while getting up with the sun, if Civic Leagues and backyard censorship are responsibility for their rarity—away with Civic Leagues!

Many of the good old-time things are gone, but not their precious memories,

Yes, summer is coming. The roses will bloom again in their primly appointed places; the birds will sing and nest in symmetrical, carefully trimmed trees; but my old-fashioned heart longs to see once more a "front yard." ELIZABETH PALMER MILBANK.

AID BEING GIVEN TO BALKAN STATES

le goat girl of Greece. ind her is Mount Par- . She is just one of 200,000,000 people in al Europe and the kans who were hit ardest by the war

THROUGH its commission the American Red Cross is distributing 25,000,000 pounds of food, clothing, soap and medical supplies among the destitute inhabitants of the Balkan countries.

To Rumania, where the need is great, the American Red Cross has sent 1,000,000 yards of cloth, 1,000 sewing machines and hundreds of tons of foodstuffs and hospital supplies. In Greece 4,000,000 pounds of relief supplies have already been distributed. Northern and Southern Serbia, which suffered heavily in the war, received 3,500,000 pounds of supplies. To Montenegro, the smallest and poorest of the Balkan states, 1,000,000 pounds of food and general relief supplies have been sent. Albania has received 600,000 pounds and Bosnia 50,000 pounds.

In all of these countries, the American Red Cross is carrying on its relief work with American doctors, nurses, field workers, numbering nearly 1,000. The destitute are being fed and clothed, the sick cared for and American methods of sanitation introduced. Special attention is being given to the welfare of children.

The epidemics of typhus and other diseases are being vigorously combated. Workers of the American Red Cross units have reestablished thousands of refugees in their homes, have opened schools for the reeducation of mutilés and have established plants for manufacturing artificial limbs.

Lieut. Colonel Henry W. Anderson, in charge of American Red Cross activities in the Balkans, has issued the following statement: "The American Red Cross is doing more than merely distributing supplies. By their presence and example, Red Cross workers are inculcating in the peoples of the Balkan countries new ideas of thrift, self-help and cleanliness, which must have a lasting influence. Through its activities the Red Cross is helping to improve the spirit and morale of the Balkan peoples, who have suffered severely from poverty, sickness and misery arising from the war. Americans are giving the unfortunate inhabitants of these countries not only that material assistance which they themselves are unable to provide, but that stimulus to greater effort and desire to improve their living conditions which must come from contact with the representatives of larger and more progressive nations."

For children like this sick boy the American Relief Administration is providing foods such as condensed milk and chocolate, bought with money raised by subscription. Hundreds of canteens have been started scholars and worshiped letters; now in these changed days we are hard put to it to make a living."

CHANSUNG'S CONFESSION

Continued from page 786

"Well," said Chansung, "I am strong. Our friends at Sook Chun have offered me land. Perhaps I had better become a farmer."

Elder Kang thought a moment. "No," said he, "we need you here. I will go and consult with Pastor Mo and see you later."

Pastor Mo sat in his office. Apparently it was one of his busy days from the number of shoes outside his door. His secretary, however, could have told you that every day was a busy day with Pastor Mo. This man, who had been the pioneer missionary to Pyeng Yang, was not only co-pastor with Pastor Na of the great Central Church, but pastor of threescore country churches besides. He had traveled up and down the road from Seoul to Weiju till the name Mo Moksa (Pastor Mo) became the common term among the people for all missionaries. For all that, he was not yet forty, and looked ten years younger.

Rising in the midst of his visitors, he greeted Elder Kang with hearty cordiality. "Well, Elder Kang, have you come too? Are you in peace?"

Elder Kang answered that he had no room for complaint, and desired to know if Pastor Mo was in peace, and if he had eaten his morning meal. After similar salutation had been exchanged all around, Pastor Mo instructed his secretary to conduct his visitor to an inner room, saying; "I shall be with you in a few moments."

Five minutes later, he joined the Elder. "What beautiful springlike days these are!" he exclaimed. "Already the buds are swelling on the pear tree in front of the house. I was sorry not to get back in time for the prayer meeting last night. Did you have a good attendance?"

"Yes, the people gathered well; but I wish we could get all the church to attend. I doubt if there were more than eight hundred present."

"Then," said Pastor Mo, "let us put more emphasis on the prayer meeting. I believe it is the most important meeting of all. I know I enjoy it more than any other. But what was it you wished to see me about this morning?"

"I came," said the Elder, "to see you about Ne Chansung, the governor's secretary, you know, who was converted in the meetings last winter. He is a man of unusual ability and promise; but since resigning his position with the governor he has found no employment. He came to see me this morning and is thinking of going to Sook Chun to begin farming. I am sure he will be a great help to the church here if we can find some way to assist him. It has occurred to me that he might possibly be used as a language-teacher for one of the new missionaries. Do you suppose it could be arranged?"

"Why, that's the very thing!" responded Pastor Mo with enthusiasm. "The language committee asked me only yesterday to find a suitable teacher for Hyun Puin, the new single lady missionary who arrived last week. There are many who want the place, but none so promising as Ne Chansung."

So Chansung became a language-teacher and undertook the trying task of forcing Korean words to fit the stubborn Western tongue, a task which so exhausted his pupil that he had part of each afternoon and every evening for his own study. Probably no other Korean has made such progress in the study of the Bible as Chansung made that year. When he was baptized, at the end of one year as a catechumen, he had read the New Testament through several times and much of the Old Testament in Chinese, this portion of the Scriptures not having yet been translated into Korean. As for the Gospels, he had committed most of them to heart. Even before his baptism, his power as a speaker was recognized and he had been asked to speak in numerous cottage meetings. Shortly after he was baptized he was elected as a deacon, and at the end of his second year as a Christian he was appointed by the session as a leader. He was given a position on the platform and took his turn at preaching, and no officer, not excepting the gifted Elder himself, was heard by the congregation with greater pleasure. His oratory had not the vivid imaginative quality of the great Elder's; but he spoke with the direct power of absolute conviction. Especially when he spoke of sin and its terrible results, his words laid hold of his hearer's hearts.

CHAPTER XXI

HEART BATTLES

THUS two years passed by, outwardly without storm or stress in the young leader's life; but the real battles of life are not on the surface. Ever since his return from Sook Chun, Chansung had been fighting in his heart one of those fierce struggles that try men's souls far more than the battle's clash. Those dark eyes that looked straight into his own must have had some wondrous magic in them that left their image and their owner's pale, sweet face photographed on this man's brain so that he seemed to see little else. I am afraid that at first he did not try very hard to see anything else.

The piteous condition of the girl and the awful nature of her experience were such as to draw out all his sympathy, and for a time he was not conscious that his constant thought of Chunwha had in it anything more than sympathy; but when Chunwha returned to Pyeng Yang entirely recovered from her injuries and radiant with health and the sweet power of her unspoiled young womanhood, it was not long before Chansung began to realize how much his interest in her had grown.

Though they attended the same church and were both engaged in teaching, they seldom met in Pyeng Yang; never as Western young people meet one another. Only in passing in the street, or at long distance on opposite sides of the church, did they even see one another. Nevertheless, Chunwha found opportunity of letting Chansung know that she had not forgotten what he had done for her. It was a joy to him to meet her in the street going or coming from school, accompanied always by a flock of school children. Chunwha's brief little smile and nod held somehow so much of grateful friendliness and the sweet fragrance of flowers that the rest of the day he walked in a dream garden.

Still there was not as yet in Chansung's mind any purpose to follow the outgoing of his heart to Chunwha with any profession of love or offer of marriage. For all he knew, they were both free to marry if they chose; but all these years he had never permitted the thought of another marriage to enter his mind. He had slain his young girl-wife with his own hand, and the very thought of taking another was repugnant to him. Friends who came with suggestions of marriage met with such scant courtesy that they gave up all effort to alleviate his unfortunate condition. So Chansung, under the power of long established habit of thought, refused to listen to the pleadings of his heart while day by day he was being carried farther and farther out on a rising flood.

And what of Chunwha? As we have looked deep into the heart of the man and seen the conflict raging there, let us also with reverent, gentlest touch draw back for a moment the curtain, that veils a woman's heart and understand, what we may have guessed before, that most of life's real struggles are fought out and won here, before the slower creature man perceives the battle's on.

It was inevitable that Chunwha's affection should go out to this man, whose face had from the first so strangely attracted her. The terrible night at Sook Chun had revealed him as her savior from a fate too awful for contemplation. True, others had taken part in the rescue; but, oddly enough, and yet not oddly either, Chunwha's heart had named Chansung as the hero of that hour.

Yet, just as Chansung at first was conscious only of deep sympathy for the injured girl, Chunwha on her part was conscious only of great gratitude toward the man who had rescued her. She returned to Pyeng Yang glad indeed to meet Chansung, if only for a moment in passing in the street, and let him know how real her gratitude was.

But as the days and weeks went by and their one chance meeting on her way to school was repeated again and again, Chunwha realized that the meetings were not all accidental. She read in Chansung's face what he s conceal, and looking into h heart was frightened at what there.

Kiddies of Korea

Chansung resisted the impu heart, not because his growing and delight in Chunwha seem self to be wrong, but becaus counter to the determined pur his life. With Chunwha, the different. She had been true the not to the memory of a dead husb to one living somewhere whom loved and for whose return sh each day of her life. To her t thought of giving place to an even in her secret heart was a Clear-eyed now, she saw wha sung's regard already meant, startled as she confessed to her dear to her even a brief glimps face in the street had grown. tears of self-reproach she deter put Chansung out of her lif avoided as far as possible any with him, and if perchance th she merely gave a hurried gre longer rewarding his eager eyes old frank smile.

Chansung was puzzled. Co that he had offended Chunwh no; twice since she had seemed t him he had looked up suddenly f seat on the platform and surpri eyes upon him and she had flush dropped her gaze, and Chansun to understand. Could it be th avoided him not because she care, but because she cared? An cared what then? It was useles to deceive himself longer. He k loved Chunwha with all his hea had struggled to master his love knew that she also cared for him; could struggle no longer. The look surprised in Chunwha's eyes had aside all the determination of yea Chansung sought Elder Kang. have been as a father to me," "and I have come to you now for You may have wondered why I married. I was married once, b wife died under very sad circums and I had fully determined ne marry again; but unexpectedly desire has come into my life Chansung hesitated—"I would marry again. Will you help me?

Elder Kang smiled his kindest "Indeed I will, and with great pl but you have not told me yet w young lady is."

"Haven't I? Whom should I marry except Chunwha?"

"No," said Elder Kang, "I d know, and why did you not tell fore?" The Elder's voice was "Is it possible you have let your go out to Chunwha like this, and has told you?"

"Told me what?" exclaimed sung in a voice so strange that Kang was frightened."

"This is terrible; but you mu trol yourself. Listen. Chunwha is a dear and beautiful woman; but not for you or any other man, b she already has a husband."

"What, alive?" groaned Cha

"Yes, brother, alive; and you m brave and put this thing from yo

But Chansung did not hea God," he cried, "and this is my p ment! It is greater than I can b

Rising he left the room, pu aside the Elder's hand, and was s in the night with the fiercest batt ing in his heart that man can kn

At first Elder Kang thought to then changed his mind, and kn poured out his heart to God f stricken brother.

"O Lord, as thou hast called this to thyself, be with him now and hel win this battle."

Surely God heard this prayer. the next morning Chansung came t Elder again, pale and worn with a night struggle, but victorious.

"I am very much ashamed of th I acted last night," he said. devil came near getting me again; thank God I have gotten the vic He would not let me go."

To be continued

A Bible Class That Does Things

VE HELP young men make good." That is the motto—a real, working motto—of the ian Men-Builders (inc.), a young Bible class of the Third Christian h of Indianapolis, Ind. This church organization is incor- d and its affairs are conducted strictly business lines. It has at- d and held men until now, five after its incorporation, it has an membership of 350 and an aver- nday school attendance of 135. ry officer in this class must make or resign. And so with every of the class affairs; results alone Out of a membership of 350 were, during the war, 209 in the and navy and six in the Y. M. C. vice. The men at home made that each man in the service ed two personal letters and also Official News Bulletin" of the ach week. That meant altogether personal letters. the service men have returned they have been absorbed back he class. The class has an em- ent department, but this depart- does not merely help a man to find it helps him make good on that The business of the department keep in touch not only with the for whom employment is found, so with his employer. Christian Men-Builders was in- ated under the laws of Indiana in with a charter membership of -five, with the idea of conducting airs on a business basis that would appeal to business men. Mr. Merle Sidener, the organizer and leader of the class, is a prominent advertising man of the city, and the six officers of the class are successful young business men who set aside certain hours each week for their Sunday school class.

The class has a president, a vice-president for employment, a vice-president for social affairs, a vice-president for membership, a vice-president for advertising, and a treasurer. Every Monday night the officers hold a cabinet meeting, following which each department head meets with his workers. At these executive sessions an analysis is made of the Sunday school attendance and every absentee is reminded by telephone and letters to be present at the next Sunday school meeting.

Once a month the social department gives a stag party and once a year they arrange a more ambitious program that takes in everybody. The class has an "Active Squad" that has successfully conducted Sunday night services in various churches. Nearly half the men have pledged themselves to devote at least one night a week to the work of the class.

The organization has a complete office equipment, including nine typewriters, an addressograph and a mimeograph. The operating expenses in 1918 amounted to $2,700. Each member makes an annual subscription for the financial support of the class, and the class has pledged $10,000 toward the erection of a departmental Sunday school building.

CHARLES S. RYAN.

escued Through the Bowery Mission

AS sitting at my desk a few min- es ago, when I was interrupted by ce, speaking in very broken h, bidding me good-day, and as ked up I found a hand offered me g from a well-groomed man of fifty. ked him to sit down, and immedi- he told me that some years ago d been secretary to a leading mem- f the Provincial Parliament of . He was a printer by trade ad drifted to the Bowery, drifting ward step by step until he reached ottom—all through drink. wandered up and down this street," id, "hungry, and without a place my head, and happened by ac- to pass the Bowery Mission, I was induced to enter by hearing g. I listened attentively to a big explaining how he got out of the s. I said to myself that if he could is, with God's help so could I. I d to some one in charge, and they me to the settlement in Yonkers, I remained two months. Having ed my health, I set about answer- ds, and got an appointment to a representative of a publishing any at a hotel here in the city. I took this letter to the manager of the settlement, and he said: 'You cannot meet any business man in your condition. Go down to the Mission and be fitted out with a new rig.' He gave me carfare and when I got to the Labor Bureau they sent me downstairs, and in a few minutes I emerged a far different-looking man, well dressed, and fit to meet any one.

"I prospered, kept on to my job with this firm for two years, and am now back in my old city, happy, useful, and a Christian man. I have come to tell you how grateful I am for the assistance I received when I so sorely needed it, and I would like to repay you for your kindness."

I told him we were not looking for payment—that what we were here for was to help men who were down and out. Before he left he handed me a new, crisp $20 bill and gave me his name and address in Montreal.

What a wonderful instrument in God's hands is this Old Mission! This is simply one instance of a thousand, as you know, that has happened in the many years the Bowery Mission has been in existence.

A. C. BAKER.
Assistant Superintendent.

Not on the Editor

E alert little woman had listened attentively to the one-sided but ted discussion concerning the lity of the local editor for the do- f the Congretarian Church. hy, he never gives our church any s," said the president of the Aid y, "and positively that's all there the paper—things about the Con- rians." en the alert little woman spoke up. wonder," she said, "if perhaps our st in our own church doesn't make st a little biased. Maybe the s the Congretarians get look big- an they are and those we get look er. This may be rank heresy, I , but really I have thought our r did pretty well by us. Let's look . For the past few months I have been keeping a file of the paper because of the soldiers' letters."

She got up and came back soon with a bundle of papers; she handed one to each member of the society.

"Now," she said, "we'll mark with a cross every item about our church and with a circle every item about the Congretarian church; then we'll count the lines each has had."

For fifteen minutes eyes and pencils were busy. Finally the papers were all checked and the alert little woman and the president of the society counted the lines. When they compared the two totals the president looked incredulous and the alert little woman smiled. The president went over the figures again.

"Why," said the president, "we've had twenty-five more lines than they have!"

1869-1919
50TH ANNIVERSARY—FIFTY YEARS OF PROGRESS

HEINZ
OVEN BAKED BEANS

AS a luncheon dish, they are as appetizing as they are nutritive. More than this, they are ready to serve. Good hot or cold.

Heinz Baked Beans are baked in ovens by dry heat until all the beans are mealy, sweet and wholesome. It is the painstaking way, but it is the way to attain quality.

Everything that Heinz makes is good to eat. That is the unvarying testimony. And everything that Heinz makes is good to eat because, first, last and all the time the aim of the entire business is quality.

Some of the 57
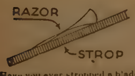
Vinegar Spaghetti
Cream Soups Olive Oil

HEINZ
BAKED BEANS
WITH PORK AND TOMATO SAUCE

four kinds

All Heinz goods sold in Canada are packed in Canada

Catch a Barber
Shaving Himself



Have you ever stropped a blade scientifically designed to strop? A blade made with a broad, firm back, hollow ground, and swelling into a slight bulge to give backbone to the edge; this blade can be stropped by you as easily as by your barber. The blade meets the strop at just the correct angle to assure a perfect shaving edge.

DID you ever catch a barber shaving himself? He was using the GENCO type of razor on himself, just as he does on everybody else, wasn't he?

All professionals shave with razors that can be stropped. They know that only a freshly stropped blade gives a clean, cool shave.

Anybody Can Strop a GENCO Razor

It's designed to strop.

The broad back, concave surface, and slight supporting bulge backing up its edge make it meet the strop at just the correct angle. A few easy strokes and there it is with a truly business-like edge.

Admitting that some men prefer a guarded blade, we offer them the Genco Safege.

The blade is exactly like that of the regular Genco, but slightly shorter, and it is equipped with a guard that fully protects the user. The guard may be turned back or slipped off to permit stropping.

Go to your dealer and look at these GENCO Razors. The dealer will show you that anyone can strop them.

If your dealer hasn't GENCO Razors, we will supply you. But whether he or we supply you, you're guaranteed shaving satisfaction—"GENCO Razors must make good or we will."

GENEVA CUTLERY CORPORATION
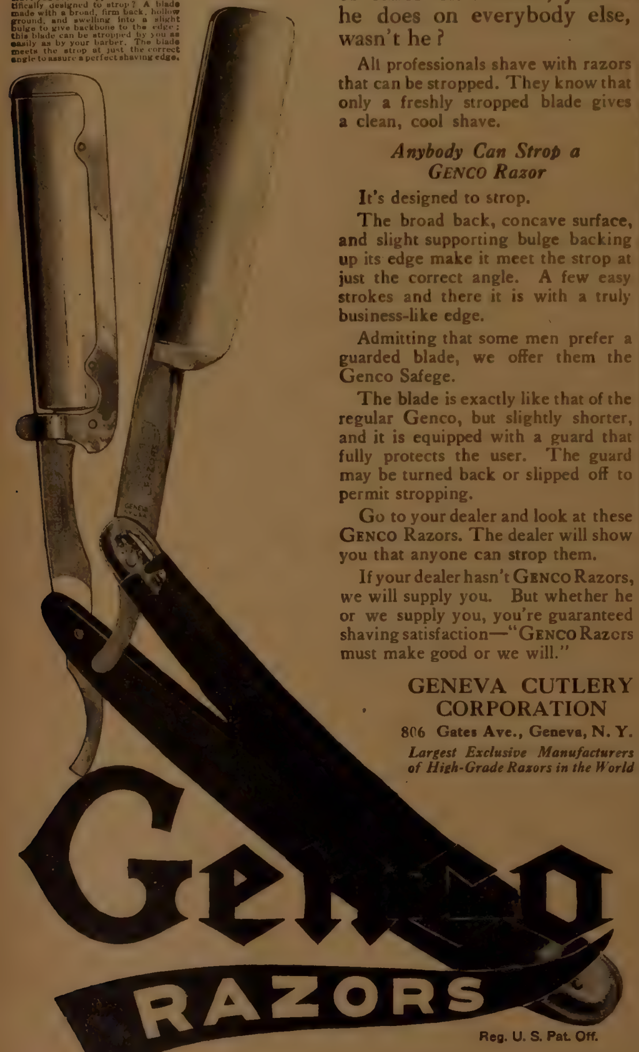
806 Gates Ave., Geneva, N. Y.
Largest Exclusive Manufacturers of High-Grade Razors in the World



Reg. U. S. Pat. Off.

THE DAI

J. H. Jowett, D.D., C. C. Albertson, D.D.

The Inheritance of Meekness

SUNDAY. Matt. 5:5. "Blessed are the meek, for they shall inherit the earth." It is a thousand pities that the word "meek" has lost its crown. It moves about like some dethroned monarch, and it carries no hint of its ancient sovereignty and power. Meekness is now the equivalent of weakness. It carries a suggestion of softness, and of almost cowardly retreat. Meekness is now an anæmic spectator on the fringe of the arena, not an athlete contending in the very thick of the fray. And yet the Old Testament type of meekness is Moses, the antagonist of tyrants, the leader in great ventures, the captain of prolonged crusades. And the New Testament type of meekness is Jesus of Nazareth, the Lion of the Tribe of Judah. There is need, therefore, that we restore its lost royalty to the word, and enrich it with its old qualities of strength and courage, of sacrificial venture.

For what is meekness? It is much more than a feeling of our personal frailty. It is more than a modest estimate of our personal resources. It is a sure reckoning upon the unsearchable riches of Christ. It is more than a sense of dependence; it is a vital dependence upon the amazingly overflowing sufficiency of God. Meekness is more than soul-thirst; it is thirst drinking at the river of the water of life. It is more than humility; it is humility in the presence of the Lord. It is more than modesty; it is modesty at divine communion. It is reverent fellowship with the eternal springs.

And just because meekness is living intimacy with the Lord, it surely drinks of the river of his pleasures. It discovers spiritual satisfactions, and it finds its inheritance on every side. Meekness may be associated with a material poverty as dull and grievous as that of a pauper, yet even in bonds of poverty meekness wanders over the glories of the earth with a strangely elevated sense of possession. Paul had nothing, and yet he strode along with a sense of possessing all things.

Yes, in the heavens which declare the glory of God, and in the earth, which is also full of his glory, the meek have a satisfying appreciation without a burdensome possession. Their spirits have an appropriate sense of whatever things are lovely, and they enter into the joy of the Lord.
J. H. J.

Living for the Future

MONDAY. Heb. 11: 26. "By faith Moses . . . had respect unto the recompense of the reward." Literally, this verse declares that Moses looked away unto the recompense of reward. In short, he lived for the future. Professor John R. Slater, of the University of Rochester, in a helpful little book bearing the above title, reminds us that in order to live for the future we must live intensely, communicatively and helpfully. The youth who learns to scorn delights and live laborious days in order to obtain an education, is living for the future. The man who buys government bonds and the child who invests in War Savings stamps are living for the future. They who deny themselves the pleasures of the senses that the life of the spirit may flourish are living for the future. They who labor for the establishment of the Kingdom of God among men are living for the future. The first missionaries in India worked seven years single native convert was secu five years our missionaries labored before the first Co service was held secretly in the Dr. Underwood, with seven present. They were living future. A woman, a farmer saved her "butter and egg mo seventeen years to give her son to go to college. She began sa summer he was born. She w for the future.

Whatever discordant voices heard here and there, hosts of women in the world are looking to and laboring for a future of not only purged of war but of causes that lead to war. O idealists of the world have fait future—only the dreamers who dream of a new heaven and a ne wherein dwelleth righteousness.
ness is living for the future as i sight, to whom the past and fu an ever-present Now. C

The Vine and the Bran

TUESDAY. John 15: 5. "I Vine, ye are the branches."
this the most beautiful figure an Christ's nature pictures? Mor plete and intimate than the sh and the sheep, the body and th
the water and the bread, the sun light, or the sower and the seed beautiful the words, "I am the the one original Source. "Ye branches, a part of myself. You on me for life; I depend on y fruit. We are absolutely and one; I am not a vine when depr branches, you are not branches severed from me."

We live by his life and he lives fruit bearing. As he is, so are this world, pure as he is pure, frui he is all powerful, happy when th of joy flows to fruitage and victo

The stalk and the root an branches make up the vine, and one in him. We are joint heir him to his riches, as the branch of the stem. We are of one ki brotherhood, one family. If the b is harmed, the vine feels it, with healing compassion. If the v assailed, the branches respond enduring devotion, affection and ciation. O Thou Christ divine, gives us strength to bear fruit un eternal and be one with thee at the harvest time, one at the heavenly when we drink the wine anew a marriage supper of the Lamb.
E. W.

The Source of Power

WEDNESDAY. Rom. 8: 10.
Spirit is life." The life live
Peter and Paul led to a good hop end to harassing uncertainties, and noble love for fellow men. A supreme problem for us is this: In in whom lay their power? How when and whence received they Spirit? This is what we must inv gate. It was not eloquence. The preacher whose eloquence is partic mentioned is Apollos, and not one of his remains on record. It wa sensationalism. Gamaliel, the Pha leader, drew an instructive distinc between the apostles and men Theudas, who boasted himself somebody, and Judas of Galilee, w a revolt. In addressing the Saloni Paul expressly avoided "flatte

EDITATION

well, P. W. Wilson, D. J. Burrell, D.D.

And the Corinthians were that words of wisdom might have made the Cross of Christ effect. The "power" depended ich aids. It was the privilege of o were not their own, but bought
price.
sentence, it was the power of pirit." Throughout the entire ve power and Spirit are linked r in one phrase. In the power of rit Jesus began his public min-Asked by what power he healed
e man, Peter in his answer was with the Holy Spirit. Even Magus knew that the secret of ostles' power was this Spirit.
with the Spirit, the converted creased in strength. Wherever nen of the Spirit went there was ourageous speech, wise and far-policy, righteous and terrible
, patient and sympathetic teach-n the Spirit they became states-physicians, orators, theologians, ers, and good citizens and
ors. And that same Spirit is , available for every age, every
, every circumstance.

P. W. W.

Our Withered Hands

RSDAY. Mark 3:1. "And ere was a man there which had a d hand." Let us fix our attenw upon that withered hand, for ds as a significant figure of the ity which is occasioned by sin.
is paralysis. Observe Paul's sis of it: "Alienated from the life l." And what does that mean—ion from the life of God? Noths than spiritual death. It is no figure of speech to say that the s are "dead in trespasses and
We have no spiritual life but which we share with God, who d us after his own image. We erefore, when we become alienated is life.
right hands are the prime agents iciency. The question is, What e doing with them? There are objects in life; namely, to make the of ourselves, to serve our fellow and to glorify God.
the roadside in India you may see oly Yogi with a hand uplifted in osition so long that its nails are like an eagle's claws and its
s and tendons rigid as whipcord, t he can no longer move it. The itself may in like manner be hied by disuse.
you ever wake in the morning your arm asleep and wonder—the conjured fears that always us in the watches of the borderland were a stroke of palsy? And did b it till it tingled and say, "Thank it's all right! There can't be where there's pain"? Are some red hands tingling today? Are thoughtless ones seeking the r life in Christ?
d expects great things of us whose red hands he would heal. Let us isappoint him.

D. J. B.

The Vision That Stayed

IDAY. Psalm 40:8. "I delight do thy will, O my God." Duty desire are often conflicting emo-. Obedience to the call of duty is nce of the largest nobility of char-
. The slacker seeks safety in the ered nooks of private security when e, family and the nation are in peril.
Duty, the grandest word in the heart of heroism, has no place in his vocabulary. He has no thought of laying down his life for his friends, and much less for his enemies, as his Master did on Calvary. How quickly the superficial friend draws back when your own character or life is put on the dissecting-table by your foes!

Only in true hearts does duty blossom into ardent desire to help and defend. The noblest Christian spirit gives itself to rescue the lowest outcast prodigal; sits with him at the Father's table, rejoicing in his redemption. The religion of cold morality springing from the desire of self-protection is a weakling beside the true Christian hero. Christlikeness is sympathetic, tender, loving toward the fallen. Jesus is the great Physician who comes to the sick, wounded and suffering.

It is said that a monk in his cell at prayer had a glorious vision of his Lord. Just then the bell rang for him to go and distribute bread to the poor at the gate. The monk was sorely tried as to whether he should lose the vision, but finally went on his errand of mercy. When he returned, the vision remained, more glorious than before. The bell that calls millions to the hill of Calvary in Europe and to suffering and sacrifice everywhere is the bell that brings the fullest vision of our Lord Jesus Christ and his matchless love.

E. W. C.

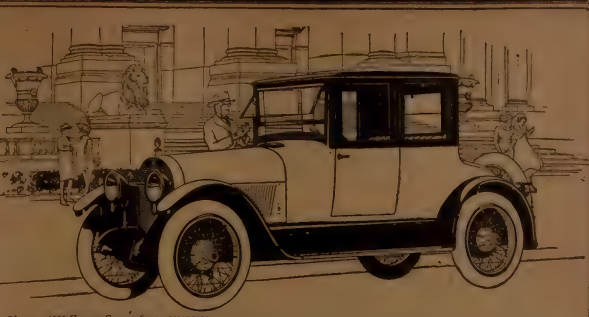
The True Ordination

SATURDAY. Gal. 1:1. "Not of men, neither by man, but by Jesus Christ." Matthias was elected—I am sure he fulfilled his apostleship—but it is a fact that he is not again mentioned. When Peter faced the multitude a day or two later, it is curious that he is described as one of the Eleven, as if the vacancy were still unfilled!

But there is a delicate humility in the subsequent behavior of the excluded Joseph, surnamed Barsabas. He made no trouble and he had his reward. For he appears to be again referred to, a few years later, as an honored leader of the Syrian Church, ranking with Paul and Barnabas and Silas.

Some think that the man who ultimately filled that vacant chair, who supplied the statesmanship of the Church—was Paul, appointed "not of men, neither by man," as he told the Galatians, "but by Jesus Christ and God the Father." Not in Jerusalem, among the Twelve, but in Arabia did Paul receive consecration, nor did he "confer with flesh and blood." When he visited Jerusalem, he did not see James, who presided over the parent Church; and, in staying for a fortnight with Peter, it was as a guest and an equal. What Paul here argued was that a man speaks with authority only on the things which he has received personally from the one Lord to whom each of us is directly responsible. For him, hearsay was not enough; he did not listen merely to the Gospel, he discovered it, he searched for it and found it. He was not easily convinced, and conviction only came to him when Christ spoke. At the first link, therefore, the apostolic succession was—I will not say broken, but made to depend, year by year, on present contact with Christ. They are the children of Abraham who do the works of Abraham, and they are the sons of Paul in the faith who follow Paul, as Timothy did, into those solitudes where the lightest whisper of the one Voice can be heard and obeyed.

P. W. W.



The new 1920 Haynes Coupé—four passengers—twelve cylinders—cord tires—five wire wheels standard equipment. Price $3800.

This advertisement copyrighted, 1919, by The Haynes Automobile Company

FOUR FACTORS OF CHARACTER IN THE NEW 1920 HAYNES

BEAUTY—strength—power—comfort—these are the four factors essential to character in an automobile. If one factor is lacking, or if one or two are slighted to secure the others, the result is an incompleteness in service and satisfaction for the owner. These four factors of character are insisted upon by the engineers and designers of the new 1920 Haynes.

The full aluminum body, with its lustrous, lasting finish, its straight, graceful lines and the thoughtful incorporation of beautifications and conveniences, lends itself harmoniously to the picture of car-beauty. The strength of the chassis and of the general construction, and the dependable, velvety power of the famous Haynes motor, accentuate the comfort of the roomy seats and hand-buffed leather upholstery, affording travel-ease without weariness of body or mental strain.

Buying a car today is not a haphazard experiment. It is an investment worthy of serious contemplation. You will buy your new Haynes for a long term of service. It will deliver this service together with honest satisfaction, because in it are skillfully blended the four factors of car-character which distinguish the new 1920 Haynes with twenty-six years of character-building history behind it.

Deliveries are being made as rapidly as is consistent with our factory inspection standards. We urge you to place your order promptly, because of the unprecedented Haynes demand. If you do not know where your nearest Haynes dealer is, please write us and we will advise you.

The Haynes Automobile Company, Kokomo, Ind., U.S.A.

NEW 1920 "LIGHT SIX"
Open Cars
Touring Car—7 Passenger	$2485
Roadster—Four doors, 4 Passenger	2485
Closed Cars
Coupé—4 Passenger	$3100
Sedan—7 Passenger	3350
Limousine—7 Passenger	4000
Wooden Wheels Standard Equipment

NEW 1920 "LIGHT TWELVE"
Open Cars
Touring Car—7 Passenger	$3250
Roadster—Four doors, 4 Passenger	3250
Closed Cars
Coupé—4 Passenger	$3800
Sedan—7 Passenger	4000
Five Wire Wheels Standard Equipment

Prices are F. O. B. Kokomo.

A new catalog, beautifully illustrated, will be sent on request. Address Dept. 723.

The Haynes, AMERICA'S FIRST CAR, now exhibited by the government at the Smithsonian Institution, Washington, D. C., was invented, designed and built by Elwood Haynes in 1893.

1893—THE HAYNES IS AMERICA'S FIRST CAR—1919

CHAMPION
REG. U.S. PAT. OFF.

Champion
Dependable Spark Plugs

Play Important Part in Tractor Industry

FOR hours and hours at a stretch, the tractor engine is taxed to its utmost, imposing a sustained, maximum demand upon the spark plugs.

Our famous No. 3450 Insulator, with its greater resistance to shocks and temperature changes, together with our patented gasket construction, fortify Champion Spark Plugs for the terrific battle they must constantly wage in tractor engines.

Because Champion Spark Plugs dependably perform this strenuous service a large number of tractor manufacturers use them as factory equipment.

Champion Spark Plug Company
Toledo, Ohio
Champion Spark Plug Company, of Canada, Ltd., Windsor, Ontario

Champion Heavy Stone
For Tractors, Trucks and High-Powered Cars B 43, ⅞-18 Price $1.25

SMITH BROTHERS'
S. B.
COUGH DROPS.
S. B.
Stamped on each Drop
POUGHKEEPSIE, N.Y., U.S.A.
Reg. U. S. Pat. Off.
TRADE
MARK
S.B. COUGH DROPS
SB

Why have your children coughing all the time? It annoys you and spoils their fun. And it's so unnecessary. S. B. Cough Drops relieve it. Give the children all they want. Absolutely pure. No drugs.
Just enough charcoal to sweeten the stomach.

Drop that Cough
SMITH BROTHERS of Poughkeepsie
FAMOUS SINCE 1847

WE PAY CASH FOR OLD FALSE TEETH
Don't matter if broken. Also cash for old gold, silver, platinum, dental gold and old gold jewelry. Will send cash by return mail and will hold goods 10 days for sender's approval of our price. Mail to
MAZER BROS.
Dept. 241---2007 So. 5th St., Philadelphia, Pa.

CHURCH BELLS SCHOOL
Ask for Catalogue and Special Donation Plan No. 85
THE C. S. BELL CO., Est. 1858, Hillsboro, Ohio

Cuticura Soap is Easy Shaving for Sensitive Skins
The New Up-to-date Cuticura Method

Christian Fellowship

International Sunday School Lesson for July 2
Acts 2 : 42, 46, 47; Phil. 4 : 10-20

Brotherhood in Jesus Christ

By Rev. George D. Allison, Ph.D.

RELIGION can best be stated in terms of relationships, rather than of argument or philosophy. When Jesus was asked for a summary of religion he replied, "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God . . . and thy neighbor." That is to say, one can fulfil the law and the prophets by having right relationships with the heavenly Father and with our fellow men. To be on terms of love and trust with God and to be in fellowship with one another is to come as near to the heavenly life as earth can ever know. Jesus lived such a life himself. He had a sense of friendly contact with the Father, of cooperation in effort, mutual sympathy and understanding, the inspiring joy of communion. He wanted to pass this on to his disciples and to establish a human society where this would come to be the prevailing experience, realizing that the cure of human antipathies and hatreds is found in a common recognition of the Father God. So he says, "Henceforth I call you not servants, but friends; for all things that I have heard of my Father I have made known unto you." To be a friend of God is to become more and more friendly to men.

The Christian Brotherhood

It must have gladdened the soul of the Risen Lord to see the primitive Christian Church living in the fellowship which the readings in the book of Acts portray. Evidently they had caught his vision, and because they were his friends lived as friends one to another. We cannot quote too often the comment of paganism, "Behold how these Christians love one another!" for it is again and again a challenge so to live together in the Church of today that the same comment may once more be elicited from those without the membership. This fellowship prevailed during the ministry of St. Paul, there being many a touch in his letters that shows the depth of Christian loyalty to the growing Church, whose members were members one of another. In the lesson today from Philippians we see how much the great apostle appreciated the thoughtful care of the Church, counting more valuable by far the spirit of love evinced than the gifts themselves. "Fellowship" is one of his great words. A common experience of redeeming love, a common suffering under temptation and persecution, a common ministry of evangelization, made the early Church a "beloved community" indeed, the center of affection and joy in the Lord.

How the spirit of the Master must have been saddened as the emphasis changed to the doctrinal disputes of the later time, the grim rigidity of the Medieval Church with its pompous ecclesiastical lords and substitution of forms and ranks of standing for the freedom and quality of the pioneer days! How Jesus must have winced at the church quarrels of recent centuries and the lack of fellowship between sectarian Christians of every sort of name! But now, thanks be to God, a new era of fellowship has dawned. We are coming together, and coming nearer to each other and nearer to him! Concerning Christian fellowship and comity, concerning Christian unity, ask yourself only this question: "Does Jesus want to see it?" There is but one answer.

One object of Christianity is to permeate the world with the Gospel and as a result to establish on earth the Kingdom of God, which is the extension of Christian fellowship, until it transforms all the relationships of earth. When true and sincere Christians meet, they are brothers beloved though they hail from the extremes of the East and the West. The missionaries have been heralds of fraternity to the lands where caste has divided men and f has been an unknown word.
mean the breaking down of both between God and man
tween man and his neighbo world is full of antipathies e and the Church of Jesus faces hard campaign to overcome the suspicions of men of divergent r nationalities. The only solutio of walking in the light as he i light. When men walk "th road" they must walk together.

The simple fact is this: a L Nations would not have been s as dreamed of, were it not for reaching effect of Christian tea
the Christian lands and of C missions in the lands as yet alie faith. It is the Spirit of Christ t made the conception of world and friendship seem so desirable attractive. From the very be the fellowship which is in him ha leaped boundaries and broken do walls of partition. No one w content till we get a great deal the Kingdom ideal in our relatio with other lands, both near and

But if men labor and pray m mutual friendship and esteem
the competing nations of earth, it is obvious that the Christian themselves can no longer hold from one another. If we are to bi earth in one holy fellowship of s we must do it together. A Lea Churches is at once essential to th tinuance of a League of Nations to the strengthening of the loos perilous ties which at present hol countries together. The Interc World Movement described in Christian Herald gives promis bringing in a new era in the fello of the followers of Jesus.

The Fellowship of Today

The watchwords of the world now are those of brotherhood. " darity" is a slogan among the t masses of Europe, the feeling of mon needs and common sufferings u unjust burdens. How tragical if C tianity fails to lead and utilize truly Christian conception of munity of interests! Many of the ing ideals of Socialism and Commu have an attraction for people bec there is a real passion for justice brotherhood latent in them. Shall be developed for good by the frien Jesus, or used for evil by those who at heart materialists and unbeliever Christ? Along with the strong sens class and group loyalty there is a g ing spirit of interclass suspicion hatred, even a preaching of the " war." Is it not possible for Christia to keep the rich and poor on term equality and fraternity before who is the Father of them both?
trades unions, the lodges and frate ties, the labor agitators, all preac restricted brotherhood, a fellows confined within a group. The Chu of Jesus alone preaches a universal lowship that overflows all bounds brings into mutual service and re those who otherwise would be hos and self-seeking. The only world-w vision of brotherhood is that of broth hood in Christ. The Church wants see the world changed and better remodeled economically and politica for the larger happiness of manki
She alone sees a way of bringing all about without war, without cla strife, without hatreds.

Fellowship then is the master-wo of the hour. It recognizes the f newly established by psychology a economics, that none of us liveth himself and none of us dieth to himse
It relieves Christianity of the fal charge of being an individualistic ligion, and puts the emphasis whe Jesus did, on right relationships and service. "Thy kingdom come" wa Christ's first petition and is becomin the chief desire of his people also.

'he Week in the World's News

Continued from page 780

antic prize, started on July 4 on-stop flight to Atlantic City. of an accident to one of her she was forced to land on July 5 rrsboro, Nova Scotia. The plane siderably damaged in landing.

HANDISE FOR THE STARVING. erican Committee for Relief in ar East is making a new exepri- relief work by sending a $500,- go of cloth, shoes and manufac- ods to a Russian Black Sea port rtered for grain to feed.

TO PEACE BASIS. General Chief of Staff, on July 3, ordered y reduced by Sept. 30, from its standing of 965,000 to the peace ength of 180,000.

GOOD ROADS. The offer of Fed- l in the building of good roads en taken up promptly by the On June 30 Pennsylvania had s approved that would involve l aid to the amount of $1,444,697, al cost of projects being $2,516,- Illinois projected a system of o cost $1,636,445, for which it ceive $818,222, Federal money. ny Co., Md., will build 4 7-10 of concrete road at a cost of a mile. The 174 projects d in April provide for a total of 1,443, while 150 projects in covered a mileage of 1,270. The rojects approved up to May 1 35, covering a mileage of 46,625 estimated cost of $39,059,329.

D RELIEF ENDS. The American Administration was loading its up for food relief in Europe on 29. Altogether from December May 20, 512 ship loads, totaling 230 tons of foodstuffs worth 75,000, were loaded at American to relieve hunger in Finland, l, Czechoslovaka, German Aus- ungary, Rumania, Serbia and Ger- The agents of the commission main in Europe for some time to ise the child-feeding bureaus, , on July 1, were furnishing daily mentary meals to 4,000,000 chil- and to superintend the distribution er foodstuffs.

FERENCE OF AUSTRIAN PARTS. Bolshevist Government of Hun- was reported on June 1 to have sed a conference of all the nations which sprung up in former Austrian territory to discuss all of the questions regarding frontiers, the division of former Austrian debts, and other matters which must be settled before normal relations can be established.

CARRANZA'S POLICY. General Candido Aquilar, son-in-law of President Carranza, was interviewed in New York on July 2. He said that the Carranza Government controlled practically all of Mexico, except for some isolated and segregated spots, which were in the hands of outlaws. He said that Carranza had no idea of seizing mines or oil property, but that he felt that the great natural resources belonged to the people and that taxes were levied on this basis. The American oil and mining companies had been resisting the taxes, denoting them confiscatory. Carranza was also reported as about to ask the United States not to repeat the Juarez demonstration, and to keep its troops on its own side of the border, giving assurance that Mexican Federal troops would prevent any outrages. To support him in this the United States Government was asked to enforce rigid prohibition on the shipment of arms across the border.

◆

Bible Conference at Eagles Mere

THE annual Bible conference conducted by the Moody Bible Institute of Chicago at Eagles Mere, Pa., is being held this week, ending July 20. The leading speakers are Rev. James M. Gray, D.D., dean of the Moody Bible Institute, and Rev. W. H. Griffith Thomas, D.D., of Wycliffe College, Toronto, Canada. Dr. Gray, who presides, delivers lectures on such timely subjects as "What the Bible Teaches about a League of Nations," "Changing the Map of Europe in the Light of Prophecy," "The Proposed World Church Union, Is It of God or Man?" etc. He will also expound the doctrinal and practical teachings of Paul's Epistle to the Colossians. Dr. Griffith Thomas also gives a series of addresses on these five questions: "Has God Spoken?" "Can We Trust the Bible?" "Is Forgiveness Possible?" "Need Sin Defeat Us?" and "Is There a Future Life?" and five addresses on "What Think Ye of Christ?" The Bible Studies are under the direction of Mrs. Margaret T. Russel of the extension staff.

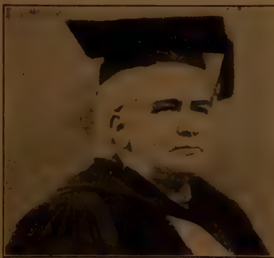
Suffrage Leader Dies

. ANNA HOWARD SHAW, Honorary President of the Wo- Suffrage Association, died at her at Moylan, Pa., on July 2, aged ars. Dr. Shaw was taken ill with nonia at Springfield, Illinois, in while on a tour in the interest of League of Nations. She had a n relapse on July 1.

. Shaw was born at Newcastle-on- , England, February 14, 1847, and to America in 1853. When she ine years old her parents moved Massachusetts to Michigan. She ed all the privations, faced the fold dangers and conquered the plied problems of the pioneer. At n she began teaching school. By hing and lecturing she earned her through three years in Albion Col- 1872 to 1875. 78 she gradu- from the Theo- l School of n University. use of poverty suffered both er and want dur- er theological e. On her grad- n she was or- d by the Meth- t Protestant ch and served as r of Methodist copal churches 1878 to 1885. then resigned pastorate to up the fight for temperance, suffrage and social purity. She became national lecturer for the Woman's Suffrage Association in 1886 and was elected President of the association in 1904, serving until 1915. During her administration the members of the association increased in number from 17,000 to 200,000, the activities of the association were multiplied by ten, the number of States granting full suffrage to women increased from four to twelve, and the movement gained the momentum which has resulted in the passage of the Susan B. Anthony Amendment by Congress.

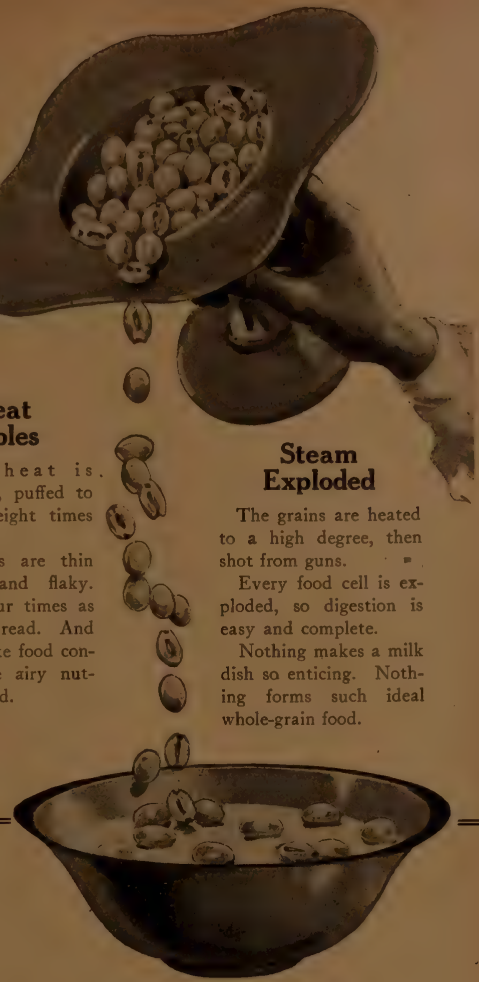
Dr. Shaw did such effective work under the Council of National Defense, from America's entry into the war until the end, that she received the Distinguished Service Medal, Secretary of War Baker presenting it in person.

Dr. Shaw had the good fortune to see assured the consummation of the great reform to which she gave her life, but she was by no means a woman of but one idea. She fought injustice, sin, and inequality wherever it offered battle, and was active in temperance, purity, anti-lynching, educational and civic movements.



© Underwood & Underwood

Dr. Anna Howard Shaw



Wheat Bubbles

Puffed Wheat is whole wheat, puffed to bubbles eight times normal size.

The grains are thin and crisp and flaky. They are four times as porous as bread. And they taste like food confections—like airy nut-meats, toasted.

Steam Exploded

The grains are heated to a high degree, then shot from guns.

Every food cell is exploded, so digestion is easy and complete.

Nothing makes a milk dish so enticing. Nothing forms such ideal whole-grain food.

So Thin, So Airy

That They Seem Like Fairy Foods

Prof. Anderson created the greatest grain foods in existence. Never were whole grains made so delightful, never so digestible as these.

Puffed grains are not mere breakfast dainties. They are all-hour foods—foods for playtime, foods for bedtime, foods for every hungry hour.

Let no day pass without them. Children need whole grains. And here they are as ever-ready, tantalizing tidbits.

No supper dish you ever served compares with Puffed Wheat in milk.

Puffed Wheat Puffed Rice
and Corn Puffs

Each 15c, Except in Far West

Mix With Fruit
To add delightful blend.

Eat Like Peanuts
Crisp and lightly butter.

The Quaker Oats Company
Sole Makers

3161

DU PONT AMERICAN INDUSTRIES

Save Needless Housework

Dust will settle! Tea, coffee, chocolate and a thousand things will stain. Tiny hands and little shoes must leave their trace behind them but—if your home is Fabrikoid upholstered housework is cut almost in half.

DU PONT FABRIKOID CRAFTSMAN QUALITY

equals fine leather in feel and appearance yet it's as easy to clean as glass. It is water, dust, grease and stainproof and can be washed with soap and water. It doesn't absorb dust and germs can't hide in it.

Ask your local department store or upholstery dealer about Craftsman Fabrikoid. If you cannot buy it in your own town, we will mail you a piece 25 inches square, ample to cover almost any chair seat or cushion, for $1.00. State whether you want plain black, or Spanish leather effect in brown, green, red or blue tones. Write today for our free booklet "Home Upholstering" and send us the name of your local department store or upholstery goods dealer.

Visit the Du Pont Products Store when in Atlantic City, N. J.

Du Pont Fabrikoid Company
Wilmington, Del. New Toronto, Canada.

DU PONT

Tractors, Trucks and Trailers Can Save Money on Every Farm

If They Are Properly Selected

IT IS the business of the Motor Service Bureau of The Christian Herald to help its readers choose the tractor, truck or trailer best suited to their needs.

If you will give us the information called for on the following coupon we will give you unbiased expert advice free of charge.

Check the machine in which you are interested.

Tractor........Truck ....Trailer...... No. acres on which tractor can be used
Nature of land
Distance to railway or other distributing point .... Kind of roads
Kind of crops............. Volume or weight of crops transported annually
Make of tractor, truck or trailer preferred
Approximate investment available for purchase
Motor equipment already owned by me
Name
Address

How Babylon and Eden Look To

A MISSION worker of the Union Theological Seminary of Pasumalai, South India, writes an interesting account of a journey through Mesopotamia, including a side trip to the Land of Eden. M. J. J. Banninga, the writer, responded to the call of the Y. M. C. A. to go to Mesopotamia with a company of workers, and their journeying occupied precisely one hundred days. They sailed from Bombay to Busrah, traveled to Amara by train in a box car, then by steamer from Amara to Keet. Of part of the journey Mr. Banninga writes:

"One of the first trips I took after reaching Bagdad was out to Ramadie and Hit on the Euphrates River. As these places are in the region where the Garden of Eden is supposed to have been, I was interested to see whether the country there looked like the mental picture we have of the Garden of Eden. After I had traveled through it, I concluded that there was no other spot in the world that could have a better right to having been the Garden of Eden than this' place. There was nothing but thorns and briers for vegetation, and there were no animals that I saw save jackals, and for insects there were scorpions, mosquitoes, and sand-flies and the only birds were hawks and kites. Along the river there are a few trees and small gardens. There also one saw grouse but away from the river everything looked as though it still had the curse resting on it.

"The city of Hit itself is most interesting. It is situated on a hill and can be seen for a long distance on all sides. It seems as though the town had been rebuilt many times and that in each case the new houses had simply been built on the ruins of the old, and so, as centuries passed, the town rose higher and higher in the air. The children of Israel on their way back from Babylon stopped here. It is called Ahava in Ezra 8. The main industry of Hit is the digging and refining of bitumen. Noah used bitumen in "pitching" the ark. The bitumen is found both in springs and in solid form. It is then refined over fires and, as the stuff is also burned as fuel in these refineries, the air is filled with a dense black smoke and the fumes. Looking over the fields south of the city, one thinks that it more nearly re the mouth of an inferno than t
of Eden. One of Mr Bannin trips was from Bagdad to Baby those portions of the ruins t accessible he writes:

"The portions excavated by savants before the war are le one-quarter of the total area, b in this small part many things great interest have been found.
being able to get a fairly good the size and plan of the town, w also examine more carefully the of the palace of Nebuchadnezz of the temples of his time, and mains of the hanging gardens foundations show the size and the buildings, and enough of remains have been found to sho
the superstructures looked like.
indeed interesting to feel that on in the very places where Danie have walked and lived, and thou cannot but be disappointed in Babylon so much smaller and les nificent than one expects, it wa worth seeing for the sake of the ical sense it gives. Daniel beco real figure in history, rather t character in an ancient story.

◆

Summer Evangelism in New York

AT THE annual meeting of the Evangelistic Committee of New York City, Stephen Baker was elected chairman; E. E. Olcott, vice-chairman; W. B. Millar, secretary; and John Nicholson, treasurer. It was voted to proceed to incorporation, to name separate committees on work for boys and work for children, and to form a woman's auxiliary, the latter proposition calling for the assistance of Mrs. J. E. L. Davis, Mrs. Finley J. Shepard and Mrs. William W. Borden. To succeed Dr. A. F. Schauffler, deceased, as chairman of the executive committee, Dr. E. W. Work, pastor of the Fourth Presbyterian Church, was chosen. Dr. E. S. Holloway was made vice-chairman and Rev. James Palmer, secretary.

Several reports dealt with the permanence of the work of past years. Dr. Arthur J. Smith, general secretary, said that while preaching in an uptown church recently a lady greeted him and told him that thirteen years ago when a child she had been led to accept the Gospel message at the tent at One Hundred and Forty-sixth Street and Seventh Avenue when despondent and on the verge of yielding to a great temptation; that she is now happily married and has a fine home and wished to send thanks to the committee for the tent. Dr. Smith told also of a man who proclaimed himself an anarchist, recently engaged as sexton of a church, and of another, once an anarchist editor, now an assistant pastor of a Bronx church.

THE "ANTI-COLIC" BR
THREE-H
NIPPL
SEE THE THREE HOLES
One Million B
Use THIS Ni

Price
6
Cents ANTI-COLIC
BRAND
3 Hole Nipple
Look for the BLUE LABEL
REGULAR SIZE

It has three s holes like the mother's instead of only one. Three fe give perfect, even flow, an baby's mouth shapely and p
"ANTI-COLIC" Brand Th
are used in maternity hospit shows regular size (No. 147). P (No. 247) is a trifle smaller. I getting the "ANTI-COLIC" Brand 12 cents in stamps (or coin) we
2 NIPPLES (either size) prepaid.
DAVOL RUBBER C
DEPT. B. PROVIDENCE

Church Organ
LATEST APPROVED METHODS. HIGH
EST GRADE ONLY. ESTABLISHED 182
Main Office and Works: Kendal Green, M Hook & Hastings Co.
BRANCHES
Boston, New York, Phila., Chicago, Louisville, D

The Pittsburgh Bible Institute Prepares for Gospel ministr
for all forms of Christian work. Tuition is free.
student of little means and even of no means is giv opportunity for training. The Institute stands fo full inspiration of Scripture; the full Godhead; the De our Lord; the blood Atonement; the necessity of r eration, and the work of the Holy Spirit. It differs most Bible Institutes in its teaching on the
For further information, address
Rev. C. H. Pridgeo
12 Congress Street, Pittsburgh, Pa.

CHURCH FURNITURE
Pews, Pulpits, Chairs, Altars, Book Racks, Tables, Desks—EVERYTHING. The finest furniture made. Direct from our factory to your church. Catalog free.
DeMoulin Bros. & Co. Dept. 54. Greenville, Ill.

For Spot Cash send false teeth, discar jewelry, old gold,
monds, watches, War Bonds or stamps—anything v able. Cash by return mail. Goods will be return price n t O. K. Ohio Smelting & Refining Co
pany, 202 Lennox Building, Cleveland, O

KIDDER'S PASTILLES Standard relief for ASTH (Inhalation.) All Druggists, 50 cts., or trial size for 2c. stam
STOWELL & CO., 50 D Main St., Charlestown, Ma

PATENTS Send sketch or model for p liminary examination. Boo free. Highest references. B results. Promptness assured. Watson E. Coleman, Pat
Lawyer, 624 F St., Washington, D. C.

he Christian Herald Prayer League

A Christians are urged to unite with ie members of the Prayer League in orayer at the noon hour. Also any at liberty to send a request for prayer acknowledgment of answered prayer, becoming enrolled as a member of ayer League.

A MEMBER of the Prayer League in a letter just received asks us to pray that he may have moral cour- id more spiritual strength, and that y get out of the rut. This is a most il request, one in which the whole r League may well join personally. is nothing more necessary to Chris- ife than moral courage, and it is rable from spiritual strength. The filled man will fear no evil, because l know that evil has no power over Most of us are traveling along in a or less well-defined rut. If the hes are to meet the problems of the diate future both members and or- ıtions must get out of the rut on to road highway of united action and ed service.

ittle girl, eleven years old, asks us ay that her father and her uncles quit drinking and get converted, and her aunt may be healed. She says lows that God answers prayer. God ready begun to answer the first part prayer through the National Pro- on Amendment.

Christian Herald reader, who signs lf "Yours in Faith and Hope," asks rs for a country girl who has been elled to live in the city, where she s a failure of everything, and is ng for her home in the country, but scouraged and downhearted. It l not be out of the way to pray that would make this girl capable of suc- ng where she is. Perhaps by pining e country she is defeating the pur- of God in her life. It would be bet- r her to pray, not for a home in the try, but for God to reveal his will to nd help her to recognize and act it.

Friend in Michigan asks prayers for ther whose heart is breaking over a tened danger to her daughter at the s of a man claiming to be a Christian. asks prayer that God will step in and it in time to save her.

any requests are coming in for er for a new baptism of the Holy t in order that better work may be in the service of God. More and it appears that personal desires sinking into the background before owing appreciation of the immediate vital importance of the spiritual work of the church, for the spreading of the Gospel of Christ as the Saviour of sinful men. We confidently believe that this trend in the petitions of the Prayer League indicates a growing spiritual power in the churches, which will be manifested through the coming year by increased activity along every line of Christian service.

Pastor Cox of the Central Baptist Church at Memphis, Tenn., in reporting the progress of the Memphis Noon Prayer Meeting, sends an impressive list of prayers answered, of illness relieved, of business saved, of souls converted and of doubt removed.

A very pitiful letter from a young friend at La Harpe, Ill., asking prayers that an interrupted love correspondence might be resumed, suggests the thought that the young lady may thank God that she has been saved from the evils of emotional foolishness.

Will the lonely little girl who wrote to the Prayer League and to Mrs. M. S., Parkersburg, W. Va., kindly send her name to the Prayer League?

Will the young man who signs himself "One who wants to be a child of God" kindly send his name and address?

A mother who signs herself "Brokenhearted" and who has lost her eighteen-year-old son, asks the prayers of the League.

Among the individual requests for prayer for self or others, sixty-two are for healing of the body, and twelve are for healing of the mind; fourteen are for grace and guidance in financial troubles; five are for release from the tobacco habit and eight from drink; four are for restoration or reunion of estranged relatives or friends; one is for the return of a daughter, and one is for success in study.

Thirty-three ask prayer for spiritual blessing; an evangelist asks for the baptism of the Holy Ghost; one asks prayer for the conversion of an infidel; two ask for the conversion of their fathers, and two for that of their mothers; five seek the salvation of their brothers and three that of their sisters; thirteen parents desire the conversion of their children, and four wives the conversion of their husbands. Seven persons ask prayer for the conversion of friends. A mother of five, grandmother of fourteen and great grandmother of ten asks for the conversion of her whole family.

Acknowledgments of answered prayer have been received from Mrs. R. H. W., Clarendon, Vt.; Mrs. A. E. J., West Allis, Wis.; Praying Member, Lowryville, S. C.; J. W. K., Harlan, Ia.; S. M., Mitchell, Ind.; Mrs. M. E. D., Corning, N. Y.; A Sister, Brooklyn, N. Y.; Mrs. E. C. R., Decatur, Ark.; J. E. A., Chicago; Mrs. M. B., Crescent City, Fla.; Constant Reader, New Castle, Ind.

Young People's Topics for July 27

men's Part in the Redemption of the World

Y. P. U. Topic. Luke 13 : 20, 21.

WOMEN, by virtue of their womanhood, have played and must still play a vital part in the ading of the Gospel. They may or not be evangelists, they may or not lead the organized force of teousness, but as mothers of Chris- homes or Christian teachers in day Sunday school, as nurses, as neigh- ood visitors, in ways impossible to , they may educate the youth or set example for the nation, or spread vision of a new ideal before the or the unlearned. Special liter- e has been prepared for this topic. d two cents for return postage to the men's American Baptist Foreign Mis- ary Society, 16 North State Street, cago, or Ford Building, Boston. For y-two cents the American Baptist lication Society, 1701 Chestnut et, Philadelphia, Pa., will mail a copy "Women Workers of the Orient."

at Paul Learned at the Track Meet

orth League Topic. Phil. 3 : 13; II Tim. 2 : 5; I Cor. 9 : 26.

AUL was no cloistered philosopher. He knew life and his letters are ous with reality. Sports were a central feature of Greek and Roman life. The Christians knew the rules of the track and field. Using terms they knew, Paul taught them in the spiritual battle to fight fair, to fight long and to achieve. The runner keeps the body under, so must the winning Christian. The vanquished in the fight hit a good deal of empty atmosphere. Paul told the Christians to strike sin surely and squarely. Those who win must observe the rules. So the Christian who would win victory in his own life, or commend his Lord to others, must play fair in all things. Little compromises with sin destroy both influence and Christian growth. Little excuses to conscience may fool us but not our friends. The runner who wins keeps on to the tape. He may be second or third today, but tomorrow he will be victor if he keeps in training. The Christian never knows when the gun will crack for a new race with evil. He must be always trained, with every moral muscle ready for the contest. And if we run steadily and honestly and persistently, we will wear the victor's wreath on some field day of faith.

How Do Men Confess Christ and How Deny Him?

Christian Endeavor Topic. Rom. 10 : 9; Luke 22 : 55-61.

See issue of May 17, under Epworth League Topic for May 25.

Carnation
MILK

As cream with cereals and fruits

FILL your cream pitcher with Carnation and try it with corn flakes, shredded wheat biscuits, oatmeal, puffed grains and all other prepared or cooked breakfast cereals. It is of the consistency of cream and with its appetizing flavor makes your dish of breakfast cereals complete.

Use Carnation (undiluted) with coffee, as well as with cereals. For cooking or to drink, reduce its richness by adding an equal quantity of pure water.

Carnation is only cows' milk—clean, sweet and pure—evaporated, hermetically sealed, and sterilized to maintain its wholesomeness. It is economical and safe. It is the wasteless milk supply for your home. Try it.

The Carnation Recipe Book Free

Write us a postal request for a free copy of our special booklet of a hundred choice, tested recipes. Address Carnation Milk Products Co., Recipe Booklet Dept., 744 Consumers Building, Chicago.

Guaranteed by Carnation Milk Products Co.
Seattle Chicago Aylmer, Ont.
Condenseries located in the better dairying sections of the United States and Canada

Remember—Your Grocer has Carnation Milk

Use Carnation with cereals

Carnation Milk

Tapioca Pimento Salad

Boil half a cupful of MINUTE TAPIOCA in two cupfuls of salted boiling water until clear, add one-half cupful of mayonnaise dressing and a dozen chopped olives and stir until creamy; pour into pimentos (the large red peppers put up in oil), set aside to cool, then slice them in rounds and serve on crisp lettuce leaves.

Minute Tapioca

To salads, entrees or desserts, Minute Tapioca gives a delightful flavor. It may be used in a surprising number of unusual recipes as well as those which have long been family favorites. Always ready for use, it may be thoroughly cooked in fifteen minutes.

Look on your grocer's shelf for the red and blue package with the Minute Man. New Minute Cook Book sent free upon request.

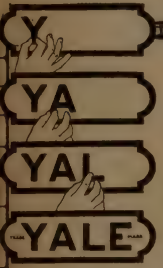
MINUTE TAPIOCA CO., 97 East Main Street, Orange, Mass.

Minute
Tapioca

You can be quickly cured, if you
STAMMER
Send 10 cents coin or stamps for 70-page book on Stammering and Stuttering, "Its Cause and Cure." It tells how I cured myself after stammering for 20 years.
Benjamin N. Bogue, 5506 Bogue Building, Indianapolis

CASH FOR OLD FALSE TEETH
We now pay higher prices whether broken or not. Send now. Cash sent by return mail. Packages returned at our expense if our offer is refused. Highest prices also paid for OLD GOLD JEWELRY, GOLD CROWNS, BRIDGES, DENTAL GOLD, PLATINUM, DIAMONDS and SILVER. Send for latest catalog of new jewelry.
United States Smelting Wks., Dept. 120, Chicago., Ill.

Attacked with Axes but still on the Job



It lived up to its reputation

THIS Yale Padlock, on guard over a printing shop, was powerfully attacked with axes which cut, dented and battered it but could not break its grip.

Your "Yale" may never have to meet the test of assault or the malicious attempt to get by. But you know that it is always on guard, sturdy and unyielding, ready to meet the test when it comes.

Correct construction, in both materials and design, assures the reliability and endurance of Yale padlocks and of every other lock bearing the trade-mark "Yale".

"Yale" will not fail to protect.

Go to your hardware dealer for the Yale padlocks you need. You can make sure by SEEING the trade-mark on each one. It is always on Yale products, including Yale Night Latches, Door Closers, Builders' Locks and Hardware, Cabinet Locks, Bank Locks and Chain Blocks.

The Yale & Towne Mfg. Co.
9 East 40th Street New York City
Chicago Office: 77 East Lake Street
Canadian Yale & Towne Ltd.
St. Catharines, Ont.

The Yale Cylinder Night Latch is another Yale Product equally capable of withstanding malicious attack.

OUR MAIL-BAG

NOTICE

THE editors of the Christian Herald will be glad to answer any question addressed to the Mail-Bag provided it be of general interest and not merely personal. No attention will be paid to anonymous letters nor to those written with lead pencil.

Questions and Answers

HOMER RODEHEAVER, the famous Christian evangelist and musical director, in a letter to the Christian Herald has this to say about the importance of good music for the Sunday school and religious gatherings generally: "Every time we go into a Sunday school or young people's service, we see the need of the right kind of music. You know how our young people are drawn to every other kind of place through the music that pleases them. The sooner we can begin to see this and analyze it and the sooner we supply this kind of music through the Church, the sooner we can get the interest of the young people. The young people who sing, or who are musical in any other way, have no avenue to develop their talent. We warn them against the theater, but we do not give them the opportunity through the church to exercise their musical ability. If we can train leaders to go back into their different sections and develop the talent among the young people, it will be a great service to them and a great service to the Church as well."

F. D., Covington, Ky. Apostasy, or "falling away," is the act of professed believers who knowingly reject revealed truth as to the deity of Jesus Christ and redemption through the Atonement. The apostate may still retain the form and appearance of Christianity; he may be, in the eyes of the world, an admirable person; yet, writes Dr. C. I. Scofield, he belongs to those who speak "great swelling words," with the promise of liberty—a philosophy of the kind that the world hears and highly esteems.

T. C. W., Rodman, Iowa. The marriage laws vary in different states. This being the case, you had better consult an attorney in your own state as to the laws on the particular point in question.

Any reader knowing the address of Charles Clarence Perry, formerly of Lynn, Mass., then of Butte, Mont., and afterward of Seattle, Wash., will confer a great kindness by sending information to the Christian Herald.

H. B. C., Big Island, Va., writes: "A few weeks ago I noticed you were asking for information concerning a tribe of Indians known as Tuckahoes. There is a prong of the Blue Ridge Mountains dividing the counties of Augusta, Rockbridge and Botetourt on the west side, and Bedford, Amherst and Nelson on the east. When I was a boy all who lived on the west side were called Tuckahoes and all on the east were called Cohoes, and it was as common to hear one say 'There goes a Tuckahoe' or 'There goes a Cohoe' as it was to hear one say 'There goes a Yankee' or 'There goes a Confederate.' I have often heard my people speak of the Tuckahoe Indians."

J. B. T., Beloit, Ohio. Egypt has been called the "cradle of leprosy," as the scourge has existed in that country from remote times. It has been known in India 3,000 years, in China for at least 2,000, and was known in Palestine as early as 260 B.C. In the United States, according to statistics for 1911, there were 278 lepers.

E. T., Loyce, Fla., writes: "If you could spare the space in the Christian Herald for a short talk on taking God's name in vain, I would be glad. I hear it done so much that I wonder if the people who do it ever think of it as a sin. Some are church members, too. A great many people have their children memorize the Ten Commandments. It is a good practice to teach the children the Commandments and their meaning, for if taught while young they will be more apt to obey them when grown up. Some people who seem to be very nice otherwise use God's name lightly, even when they do not have the excuse of anger—although anger is by no means a real excuse. Some say 'God' and 'Lord' even when they are not speaking of sacred things. Surely, when God says: 'Thou shalt not,' it is the duty of all human beings, young and old, to obey. Let us try and impress upon the children the meaning and importance of obeying the Commandments. Let us also teach them to have regard for the church, and never to mark upon its walls or carve with their knives upon its furniture, for that shows disregard for God's house whether it be a fine building or just a humble church in some small village."

A. H., Maryland. The average pastor, whether denominational or independent, is usually underpaid. Statistics have been gathered showing this. While salaries and wages in all other occupations have risen as one of the results of the high cost of living, only a very small percentage of the pastors have had their salaries increased. It is true, one hears of certain popular preachers in wealthy churches who have large salaries, but these are the exceptions. Among something like 120,000 Protestant ministers, representing all denominations, in the United States today, we are assured that it is within the mark to say that three-fourths are underpaid, and have a hard struggle to make ends meet.

C. F. E., Hanford, Calif., advises us that Mr. H. J. Heinz, whose death was reported in our issue of May 31, although he got his early training in the Methodist Church, was at the time of his death an elder in the Point Breeze Presbyterian Church of Pittsburg, Pa.

Martin J., Vancouver, Wash. It may be a very good appliance, and probably is, but you should consult an oculist, who can give you the benefit of expert advice.

Reader, N. M. When a man receives an honorable discharge from the army and re-enlists in the service, he is entitled to the sixty dollars bonus, but not to the additional mileage for transportation. Application for the bonus should be made to the Additional Pay Section, Zone Finance Officer, 18 and C St., Washington, D. C., and should be accompanied by the discharge certificate and a statement of all military service since April 6, 1917, together with the present address.

Reader, Covington, Va. For positions along agricultural lines, or manual training, write to the Federal Board for Vocational Training, Maltby Building, Washington, D. C. They are on the lookout for competent men.

Mrs. G. W. M., Texas. Philathea, coming from the Greek philos, loving, and aletheia, truth, is an international, interdenominational organization of Bible classes of young women.

No Name, Stroudsburg, Pa. We understand that the contemplated law to carry into effect the Eighteenth Amendment will prohibit the giving away of intoxicating liquors, as well as the selling of them, and the storing of quantities of these intoxicants will probably also be made illegal, unless it can be proven that the stuff is privately owned for personal use.

Mrs. E. K., East Sparta, Ohio. The verse you were looking for is probably Matt. 21 : 22—"And all things whatsoever ye shall ask in prayer, believing, ye shall receive."

Rev. G. W. Ridout, who was Y. M. C. A. secretary-chaplain overseas, has recently returned from France. He will be open for pulpit supply or evangelistic engagements for the summer. Address him at 6037 Lambert Street, Germantown, Pa.

J. R. T., Montross, Va. Children's Day originated in the First Universalist Church of Chelsea, Mass., in 1856. The Methodist Episcopal Church arranged for a Children's Day in connection with its Centennial celebration in 1865 and made it a permanent annual feature in 1868. Since then its observance has been adopted by churches everywhere. As originally planned the day was meant to provide opportunity for dedication of children to God and the rededication of parents to their God-given task of Christian parenthood. Children's Day is now devoted to the cause of Christian education.

Mrs. T. D., Nebraska. The divorce laws differ materially in the various states. The questions you write should be submitted to a Nebraska lawyer.

THE CHRISTIAN HERALD is published weekly by The Christian Herald, at the Bible House, Fourth Avenue, 8th and 9th Sts., New York City. The Officers are: Graham C. Patterson, President and Treasurer, Bible House, N. Y. City; Geo. H. Sandison, Vice President, Bible House, N. Y. City.

SUBSCRIPTION PRICE, $2.50 a year in advance. After July 1, 1919, an additional charge of 50 cents a year for zone postage will be required on all subscriptions west of the Mississippi, including Minnesota and Louisiana. Remittances should be made in the safest manner available. Make checks and money orders payable to The Christian Herald.

FOREIGN POSTAGE.—For copies mailed outside the United States, Canada and Mexico, add one dollar a year to subscription price.

CHANGE OF DATE.—It takes at least two weeks to change the date, after your subscription is renewed.

EXPIRATION OF SUBSCRIPTION.—The date on the wrapper indicates when your subscription ends.

CHANGE OF ADDRESS.—It requires three weeks' time to make the change. Give both old and new address.

LETTERS should be addressed, THE CHRISTIAN HERALD, Bible House, New York.

Entered as Second-class Matter at the Post Office Department, Ottawa

"I'm happy because I took The New Way in Typewriting Course. It has enabled me to earn more money than other girls."

You, Too, Can Earn $100 to Per Month

Retain your position when others are discharged. Thousands of typists wi out through lack of efficiency. Now time—take the NEW WAY Course—s home and rise to bigger wages. A few learned lessons at a small cost. Free B Training given each student. THE WAY in Typewriting guarantees a rate of 80 to 100 words a minute. for free booklet.

THE TULLOSS SCHO
NEW WAY IN SHORTHAND AND TYPEWR
5327 College Hill, Springfield, C

Don't Wear a Truss

Brooks' Appliance, the modern scientific invention, the wonderful new discovery that relieves rupture, will be sent on trial. No obnoxious springs or pads.

MR. C. E.

Brooks' Rupture Applianc

Has automatic Air Cushions. Binds draws the broken parts together as you a broken limb. No salves. No lies. Du cheap. Sent on trial to prove it. Protect U. S. patents. Catalog and measure b mailed free. Send name and address t

C. E. BROOKS, 498 State St., Marshall,

SKA
SILVER POLIS

Make money with it for church or so easily, honestly. Will sell it to you at 7 can; resell at 15c, the regular retail price. profit to the cause. Skat polishes silver, t nickel and copper. "The luster lasts." economical. Sells on sight. Write now.

THE SKAT CO., Hartford, C

A New Way to S
Real Estate No Mat
Where

I got cash for my property in less tha weeks. Made sale myself so had n mission to pay. You can do the sam

The Simplex Plans for selling Real Estate. No matter where located, these practical, scientific Plans will show you how to sell your property —quickly, and for cash—without employing agents or paying commissions. Investigate at once. Learn how easily you can use The Simplex Plans, just as I did, to sell your real estate. Write today (a postal will do) to

The Simplex Company
Dept. 75, 1123 Broadway, N.Y.

They will send you full particulars without cost or obligation.

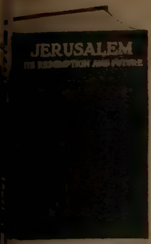
Quick Res
"Sold for Cash days. Recommen methods." — W Cartland, Mass. method sold my fa cash." — Mrs. Childs, Minn. my property. You quickest I ever sa Johnson String, "Sold my hote $5,375." — G. F. art, Ill.

HRISTIAN HERALD SUBSCRIPTION OFFERS

ERUSALEM—ITS REDEMPTION AND FUTURE"

IS only now that the real story of the Redemption of Jerusalem can be ld and it is that story which the Christian Herald presents in the book led "Jerusalem—Its Redemption and Future." It tells the story in vivid l of conditions in the Holy city during the war.

e book reads like the unfolding of a vast drama, one of the grandest ever n. The redemption is not confined to Palestine, but includes all the lands: Syria, Armenia, Arabia, Mesopotamia, the old country of the patriarchs, and even the "Eden Land"—the cradle of the human race. It is a volume which should be in the possession of every Christian man and woman in America, as it is plentifully illuminative of the fulfilment of God's pledge which is being brought about in a remarkable way in our lifetime. Illustrated with fifteen pages of beautiful pictures from the Holy Land.



We will send a copy of "Jerusalem—Its Redemption and Future," postpaid, together with the Christian Herald for one year, for $3.00.

We will send a copy of "Jerusalem—Its Redemption and Future," postpaid, to Christian Herald subscribers, as a reward for sending us ONE NEW yearly subscription to the Christian Herald with $2.50.

"Jerusalem—Its Redemption and Future," separately, $1.00 per copy, postpaid.

"OH, MONEY! MONEY!"

By* Eleanor H. Porter, Author of "Pollyanna," etc.

H, MONEY! MONEY!" is a romance of a New England Cinderella and a Western millionaire. "If you don't know how to get happi- out of five dollars, you don't know how to get ut of five thousand," says Maggie, the cheery osopher of "Oh, Money! Money!" and this is keynote of Mrs. Porter's latest story. Out of a r sky came three checks to the three Blaisdell ilies. How each family tried in its own way to happiness from its unexpected fortune—and d; and how poor Maggie, without trying and out a fortune, succeeded, is told in "Oh, Money! ey!" e will send a copy of "Oh, Money! Money!" postpaid, ther with the Christian Herald for one year, for $3.00.

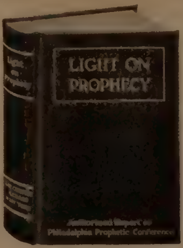
e will send a copy of "Oh, Money! Money!" postpaid, to stian Herald subscribers, as a reward for sending us NEW yearly subscription to the Christian Herald $2.50.

Oh, Money! Money!" separately, $1.50 per copy, postpaid

"LIGHT ON PROPHECY"

Report of the Philadelphia Prophetic Conference

"LIGHT ON PROPHECY" links up the prophecies of the Bible with the great events of today and shows conclusively that we are living in an age of prophetic fulfilment. When we set out several months ago to print "Light on Prophecy," we felt that it was a book which our readers would welcome. It held something that very many good people want to know. The result, however, far exceeded our expectations. "Light on Prophecy" has now passed through four large editions, and the demand is still growing. The book contains all the notable addresses on prophecy delivered at the Philadelphia Prophetic Conference, which was the most important gathering of its kind ever held in this country or perhaps in the world.



We will send a copy of "Light on Prophecy," postpaid, together with the Christian Herald for one year, for $3.00.

We will send a copy of "Light on Prophecy," postpaid, to Christian Herald subscribers, as a reward for sending us ONE NEW yearly subscription to the Christian Herald with $2.50.

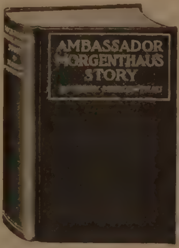
"Light on Prophecy," separately, $1.00 per copy, postpaid.

KILLING A MILLION ARMENIANS

Ambassador Morgenthau's Revelations

AS GERMANY is now suing for peace, it is important that the world should know some things she has tried to keep secret.

This inside history and much more, all significant and breathlessly interesting, is in "Ambassador Morgenthau's Story." This book tells why the Turks killed 1,000,000 Armenians and fixes on the Germans the responsibility for the atrocities. It reveals the perfidy of Germany's attempt to start a holy war against Christians. It is the kind of a book that keeps one reading on and on. It is entertainingly written, yet it is packed full of authoritative facts. Illustrated with photographs, maps and diagrams. Over 400 pages; cloth bound.



We will send a copy of "Ambassador Morgenthau's Story," postpaid, together with the Christian Herald for one year, for $3.50.

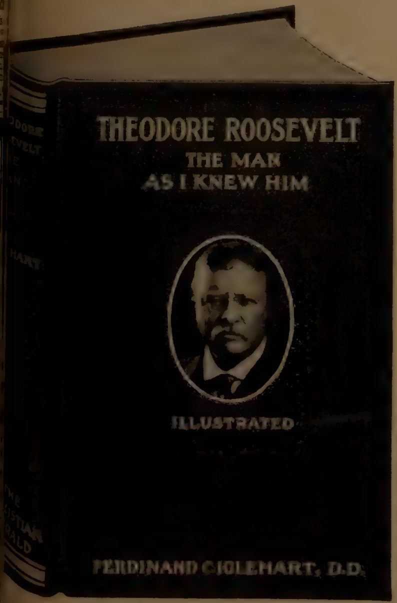
We will send a copy of "Ambassador Morgenthau's Story," postpaid, to Christian Herald subscribers, as a reward for sending us TWO NEW yearly subscriptions at $2.50 each.

"Ambassador Morgenthau's Story," separately, $2.00 a copy, postpaid.

CHRISTIAN HERALD, 2199 Bible House, New York, N. Y.

THEODORE ROOSEVELT THE MAN AS I KNEW HIM

By* FERDINAND COWLE IGLEHART, D.D., *of the Editorial Staff of the Christian Herald



IE BOOK will be printed on fine book paper and will include 16 pages illustrations on plate paper. There will be nearly 350 pages, in 31 apters. The binding will be fine cloth embossed in gold. Size 5x7¼ in.

DOCTOR IGLEHART has written for the Christian Herald (to publish in book form) his appreciation of Theodore Roosevelt, from an intimate friendship of many years. The Author cooperated with the Colonel back in the strenuous days when Colonel Roosevelt, as Police Commissioner of New York City, made the saloons obey the law on Sunday closing. For over 20 years, the two have been intimate friends. Dr. Iglehart will honor in this appreciation the memory of a great personality who has left a warm spot in the hearts of all Americans. In this book the author tells a fascinating story of the career of Colonel Roosevelt.

FROM EARLY BOYHOOD TO HIS DEATH

Many of the Colonel's lifelong friends have gladly furnished the Author with addresses to be included in the work on Theodore Roosevelt.

Dr. Albert Shaw, Editor of the Review of Reviews is enthusiastic about this book and after reading the advance proofs says it is an exceedingly able book and is bound to have a wide sale here and in Europe.

Send No Money Now We do not want any money now. This splendid book will be ready for delivery in a few weeks. We would, however, like to have a post card from as many Christian Herald Readers as possible stating that they will take a copy when ready at the price of $1.50 a copy, postpaid. This will give us a good idea of how many copies to make for the first edition. We will notify all who order when the edition will be ready.

AGENTS WANTED—WRITE FOR LIBERAL TERMS

THE CHRISTIAN HERALD, BIBLE HOUSE, NEW YORK

$$17^{\underline{50}}$ for a Real $$27^{\underline{50}}$ S
Tailored to Your Measu

An Amazing Offer!

A HIGH-GRADE suit cut to your individual measure—tailored with all the skill and style that only the best custom tailors can give. Finished with highest grade trimmings and linings the kind that wear and give satisfaction. A special proposition to introduce to the readers of this magazine the wonderful values offered by our system of tailoring. Nothing else like it no value to equal it.

Mail Coupo
MONEY SA Catalog on thing You

We Shi
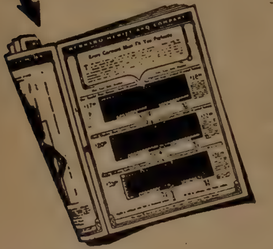
Cha

How Our Plan Saves You Money

We have no agents, no dealers, no traveling salesmen. Our catalog is our only representative. Actual comparison will show that our plan saves $10 or more on every suit and gives you real individuality in your dress—clothes that are tailored to fit you and you alone—reflect your personal tastes. Our line includes a wonderful selection of fancy wool worsteds, cassimeres, and all-wool blue serges, at unheard-of low prices.

Our Guarantee

Send only $3 and your measurements, with cloth selections made from our catalog. We will make the suit to your measurements and you pay balance on arrival—we paying all transportation charges. You must be pleased in every particular—in fit, in style, in workmanship and materials, or we refund all your money including $3 deposit. Could anything be fairer? Write today and wear tailor-made clothes of exceptional style and value dress better and save money.



FREE!

Catalog of Styles and Cloth Samples

Our big, new Fall and Winter book is ready for you—contains samples of latest woolens—also lowest prices on men's hats, shoes and furnishings. It is your guide to correct and economical clothes buying. Mail coupon above or write, mentioning this publication, so we can identify this special offer.

Bernard-Hewitt & Co., Desk 67
424-434 So. Green St., Chicago, Ill.

Please send me your new men's wear Fall and Winter style book with samples of latest woolens and full details of your plan.

Name..............................

Address..............................

....

Other Bargains From Our Catal

COLLARS Six for 79c

Illustrated in catalog. Four-ply, hand laundered stiff or soft collars, 21 different styles to select from, selling everywhere now at 25c each. We sell them at six for 79c. In ordering state size, number and style desired.

TIES Large Four-In-Ha 3 for $1.15

Illustrated in catalog. Large imp shape, flare and four-in-hand beautiful striped and flowered ef hundreds of patterns, regular 50c 75c values, three for $1.15. Try th State color desired.

SHIRTS Satin Stripe 3 for $5.60

Illustrated in catalog. Guaranteed $3 shirts, latest effects in broad satin or silk stripes, coat front, soft turn-back cuffs, hand-laundered body. Try three at our low price, 3 for $5.60. State size of neckband in ordering. Choice of black, blue and lavender stripes.

HOSE Silk Lisle 6 Pairs for $2.0

Illustrated in catalog. Double S Silk Lisle sock, made of merceri yarn. High spliced heel and dou sole. Medium heavyweight. Col black, tan, navy, pearl, white. St size. 35c a pair, 6 pairs for $2.

BERNARD-HEWITT & CO
424-434 S. Green St., Desk 67 Chicago, Ill.

When you finish reading this magazine place a 1-cent stamp on this notice, mail the magazine, and it will be placed in the hands of our soldiers, sailors or marines.
NO WRAPPING—NO ADDRESS
A. S. BURLESON, Postmaster General.

Christian Herald

No. 30. Published weekly at k City by The Christian Herald.
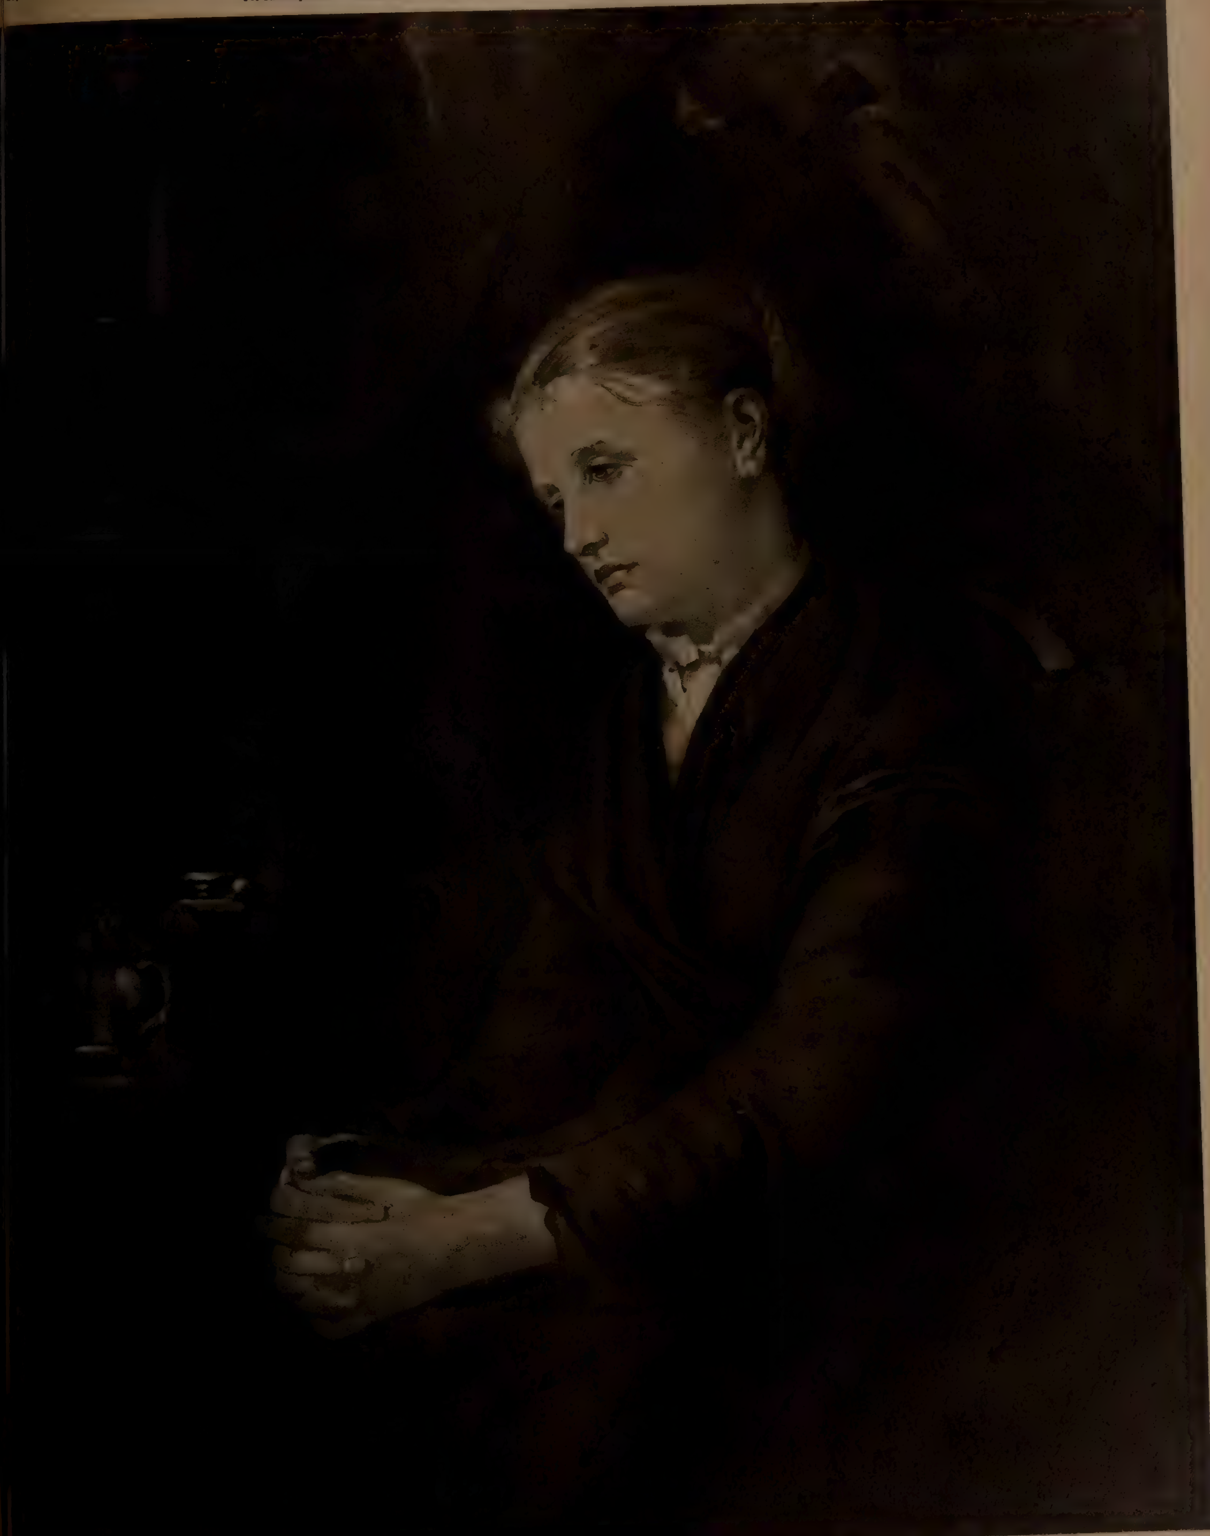
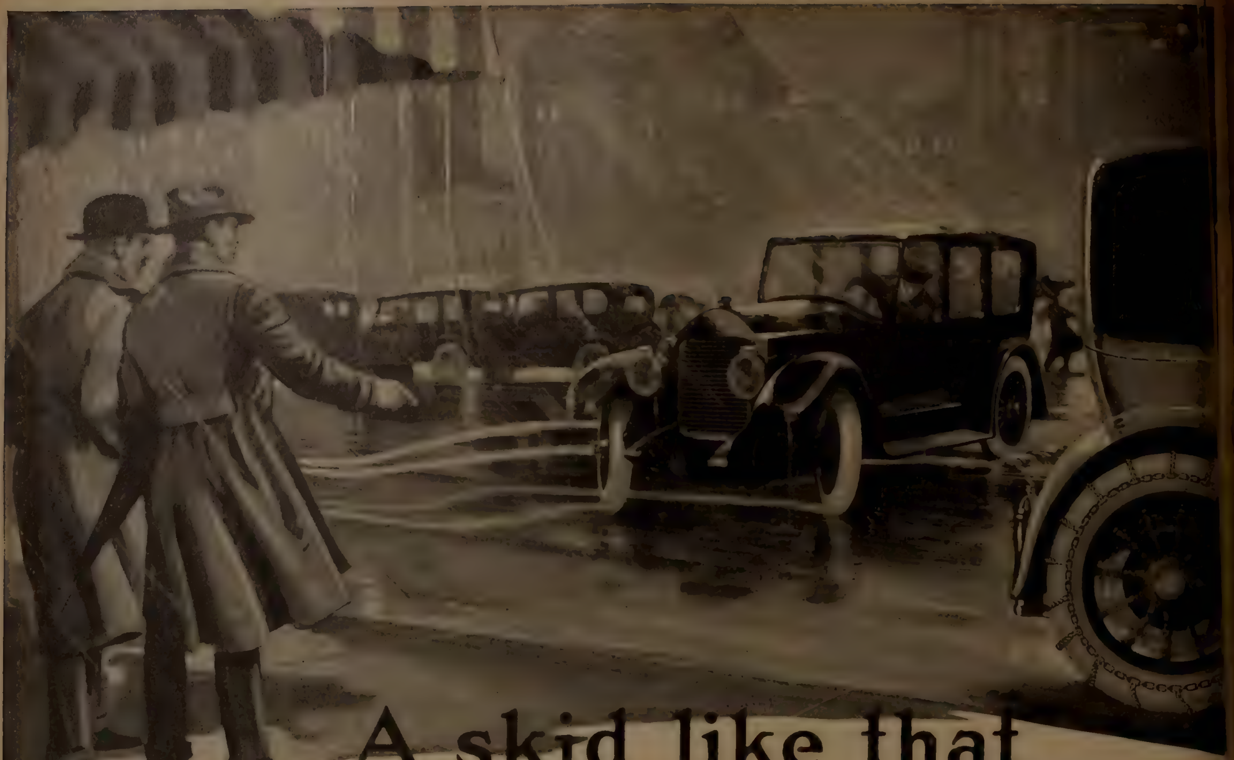
it, 1919, The Christian Herald.

$2.50 a Year NEW YORK, JULY 26, 1919 Ten Cents a Copy

For subscriptions in Minnesota, Louisiana and in the United States west of the Mississippi add 50c. to cover Zone Postage

Entered as Second Class Matter, January 25, 1909, at the Post Office at New York, under the act of March 3, 1879.





A skid like that wears out tires

No matter how careful a driver you may be, when roads are wet and slippery, it is next to impossible to avoid skidding unless your tires are equipped with Weed Tire Chains.

When a car skids, it "shoots" over the road, the tires being pressed down on the grinding surface by the weight of the car—the rubber tread is ground away—the fabric is stretched and weakened—separation and disintegration begin—with the inevitable blowouts and punctures.

Only a crazy man would dream of spinning his tires on coarse sand paper or on a rough file—which is exactly the effect of skidding.

Everytime you skid you wear off miles and miles of tire service and you well know what tires cost these days.

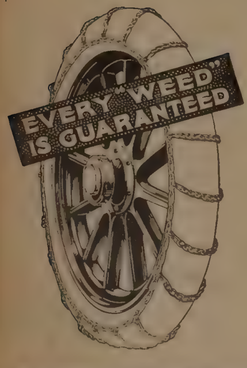
Weed Anti-Skid Chains

Protect Tires

Weed Chains continually shift—"creep"—backwards around the tire and thus the cross chains do not come in contact with the tread at the same place at any two revolutions of the wheel.

When you drive with chainless tires on wet, skiddy, slippery roads, if you are lucky you may escape accidents that threaten your life and the lives of others; but you can't escape the injury to your tires—you reduce their service by hundreds of miles.

"At the first drop of rain" put on your Weed Chains



American Chain Company, Inc.

BRIDGEPORT CONNECTICUT

In Canada: Dominion Chain Company, Limited, Niagara Falls, Ontario

Largest Chain Manufacturers in the World

The Complete Chain Line—All Types, All Sizes, All Finishes—From Plumbers' Safety Chain to Ships' Anchor Chain

THE NAME WEED ON EVERY HOOK

THE CHRISTIAN HERALD

AN ILLUSTRATED NEWS WEEKLY FOR THE HOME

UBSCRIPTION $2.50 PER ANNUM
UBLISHED 52 TIMES A YEAR

GRAHAM PATTERSON
Publisher

GEORGE H. SANDISON
Managing Editor

VOL. 42—NO. 30. PRICE 10 CENTS
OFFICES: BIBLE HOUSE, NEW YORK

MY OVERSEAS EXPERIENCES

/ar Heroes As I Know Them---I Fire a Cannon at the Enemy---An Aeroplane Experience

By HOMER A. RODEHEAVER

Cheerfully
Homer Rodeheaver

EVERYONE has spoken of the modesty of the American soldier boy—so few of them want to talk of their exploits. But ict that when we do begin to get of the war stories of the real can soldier boys, we will lay our books of fiction and our of adventure, and give our time reading of actual deeds of our boys. If I had the ability to do n interesting way, I would like to a history which we would call Heroes of the S. O. S.", or the es of the Training Camps"— splendid, magnificent fellows worked from early morning, till t night to make the necessary ration or to prepare the ammunition and foodstuffs—that other great known as the "rear line of ce." In every one of these ent branches of service we would eal heroes.

illustrate what I mean: In the days of the American fighting, Twenty-sixth Division was going gh Paris on their way to the line. The order was given that men be taken out of this division help in the hospitals, which were crowded, and did not have gh help. One of the boys taken s order was appointed to the bath rtment in one of the great hos- s near Paris. Can you imagine hing more ignominious? Here he a strong, husky, American boy, a er, a fighter—he had his gun all up, he had his ammunition ready, he had been trained to use it. He had dreams at night of the thrill of e, and of how he was going to it himself when he got over there, how he would bring honor and to the father and mother at e, and to his country, and the ous Stars and Stripes. All these gs had been his mental pictures, dreams and night dreams. Then as taken off the train, and put into spital to wash the muddy, bloody, nded men who were brought in the battle-field. He was not to front line trench. He was not to a gun go off. He was not to have single thrill of the great battle. you imagine his feeling? Did he about it? Of course not! He an American soldier! He went rly to the task, although greatly disappointed. ral weeks afterward, when he was on leave, he telling one of the Y. M. C. A. girls about it— never a thought of any special glory or honor to self, never a thought that he was a hero, but er deprecating the fact that he did not get into the t lines, and explaining what he did try to do and he tried to do his work faithfully and well.

e said, "You know, miss, when they brought 'em my department, they had to handle 'em easy, when any o' them stretcher bearers got careless jostled those wounded fellows and made 'em hurt, bet I just gave it to 'em hot for it! I'd cut the muddy, bloody clothes off 'em, then I'd just ease down into the bath-tub, and clean 'em up clean when they went in to my Major Doctor, there n't a speck o' dirt on 'em. After I had got 'em d up and ready to go out, lots of 'em said to me, on't see how you done it so easy.'" claim that man was a hero, as much as if he had over the top with his gun and bayonet. Suppose ad neglected his work, and had left the wound not perly clean—the surgeon in his hurry had plunged in the knife and carried with it infection—the wounded soldier would have lost his life, not because of the German bullet, but because of the carelessness of the man in the bath department. And so we could go through every branch of the service, and find real heroes, because they did faithfully and well the job that was given to them to do.

ANOTHER illustration of the tremendous value of a department about which great stories could be written, concerns the motor replacement plant at Verneuille. Here were five thousand American mechanics, and two thousand German prisoners. These five thousand fellows spent from a year to a year and a half in France, possibly, and very few of them ever saw a front line trench, or even heard a gun go off. Nevertheless, they were true American soldiers. They were there from early morning till late at night, most of them at the same kind of work they had done at home, at about one-third or one-fourth the salary. Some of you men or women who can write stories take this for an outline, and write a book on the heroes of the Motor Replacement Plant.

Paint a picture of the boys in the front line, holding back the oncoming German army—guns are working splendidly, they are holding their own and checking the advance, little by little, even gaining a few yards. Suddenly they discover that the ammunition is getting short. They send a dispatch rider on a motor cycle back along the road to hurry up the ammunition. This dispatch rider finds the trucks loaded with ammunition, but the steering gear out of commission, and the trucks in the ditch. Our boys up at the front can hold out no longer—they are being surrounded and thousands are being killed, because of the lack of ammunition. This is what might have happened, and what would have happened, had it not been for the patient, faithful work of these men in the Motor Replacement Plant.

There was a certain wonderful truck taken over to France because of its efficiency, and used to haul ammunition to the front line. Very soon, the continuous jarring over the roads of France seemed to crystallize in some way the steel in a particular, peculiar, twisted part of the steering gear. These pieces began to break. It would take months to get duplicates from the United States. By that time the war would have been lost. What did they do? Colonel Hegeman discovered this grave error. He went to a steel plant and had a chemist dictate a formula for the kind of steel necessary to stand the strain. He had it made 'specially, hurried to the Motor Replacement Plant at Verneuille, and there his pattern makers had made a great pattern, and the steel was heated, put into a great stamping machine, and this particular part of the steering gear was stamped out by the hundreds and thousands, so when these pieces began to break in those very important trucks, they had others ready to put in immediately. So the ammunition was furnished to the boys in every emergency, and because of the faithfulness of these boys who were not in the fighting line at all, the battles were won.

Then the boys on this side, who did not get over at all! They deserve credit, because every one was anxious to go, and every one of them was disappointed because he could not go. Practically all the desertions ever known in France were men who ran away from the leave areas back to the front line trenches, to try to get into the battle again. So when you see any man who has been a soldier on this side of the Atlantic, be very sure he deserves your appreciation. When you see a man with a wound stripe or a croix de guerre or a distinguished-service medal, it is right that you take off your hat to him. It is right that you honor him in every possible way. He deserves those marks of distinction, or he would not have them. He earned them, every one. But while you are giving honor to those boys who won the special honors, do not forget that there were three million five hundred thousand other American soldiers who would have done exactly the same thing had they been in that one's place.

I WAS walking along a row of batteries just over the hill from the little town of Varennes in the Argonne Forest, carrying my trumpet in my hand. The fellows would come out from the dug-outs in the side of the hill and yell for a tune. I would stop and play for them, then pass on to the next group.

In one place, where I was playing, just below the road and beautifully concealed by some bushes, were two big "one-hundred fifty-fives." In the midst of my tune, the gunners fired both of them at the same time. It jarred the trumpet away from my mouth, and made quite an unexpected pause in the selection at that particular point. One Lieutenant, in charge of a battery, said:

"Mr. Rodeheaver, would you like to shoot that gun?"

I said, "I certainly would, if you have it pointed at the Germans!"

He said, "Yes, it's pointed right in the midst of them."

So he ordered his men to load it up, gave the signal, and I pulled the trigger. My hat went right straight up in the air. My friends who were standing around said it was my hair that pushed my hat off, but it really was just the concussion of the gun!

That happened on the fourth of October. You can go and look up the history of the war, and you will find that from the very minute that I shot that gun from the battery at Varennes on the fourth day of October, the Germans have been going the other way ever since. Now do not misunderstand me—I am not taking all the credit for winning this war. Nevertheless, this is a fact that cannot be disputed!

There are a lot of facts of this kind presented by the boys from over seas, about which folks will have to be very careful before they try to refute them, even though they may not understand them all. For instance, one boy was writing back to the folks at home, and in his letter he said:

"Father, I get so close to the Germans every night, that I could reach out and touch them with my bayonet. I can hear them whisper among themselves."

His Lieutenant, who was censoring the letter, called him in and said, "Now, look here, Jack, why do you want to be lying to your folks about what you are doing over here?"

The soldier very promptly saluted, and said, "Lieutenant, I am not lying to my folks."

He said, "Now, look here, boy, you may be able to put that across your folks, three thousand miles away from here, but you certainly do not think you can put it across me, do you? Look here at what you say in this letter. Where have you ever been in all your life so close to the Germans that you could touch them with your bayonet, and that you could hear them whisper among themselves?"

Then that doughboy again saluted, and said, "Don't you know, Lieutenant, that I am a guard over at the stockade?"

Of course, he was right, no matter how impossible it may have seemed to those who would read his letter.

ONE of the greatest thrills I have ever had was in France, when different fellows were kind enough to take me up in their aeroplanes. My first ride was over the Orley Field, over the city of Paris. I stood on the field after having played and sung for the boys the night before, watching them take off and land. A young fellow with fair hair and blue eyes, a very nice-looking, modest-appearing young man, walked up by my side, and said:

"Did you ever go up?"

I said, "I never did."

He said, "Would you like to try it?"

I replied, "I most certainly would."

He said, "I will see the Major, and if I can get a ship, I will take you up."

I did not know whether he could take it up or not, he did not look like a flyer! But nevertheless, I was willing to take a chance. In just a few minutes he returned with permission. He put me into the back seat. After the usual maneuvering across the field to take off against the wind, we were in the air. I had an idea it would be very smooth. Occasionally it was like a tumble over a rough road, when we hit an air pocket. On this particular occasion, in the language of the flyer, it was rather "bumpy." However, we got sufficient height, and circled around over the city of Paris. It was one of the most beautiful sights I ever have hoped to see, as we curved along the wonderful, historic Seine, over the Eiffel Tower, looking down on the roads, lined on each side with wonderfully beautiful trees, all leading into Paris.

After a ride or two like this, I conceived the idea of taking my trombone up in the air. The first time I tried it, it was on the field near Clermont Ferrant. Lieutenant Powell took me up in his "Liberty." We took the trombone, and blew it over the flying field and the surrounding towns. It cannot be heard higher than about five hundred feet. When we would go up about a thousand or fifteen hundred feet, and then shut off the motor and glide down, I was told they could hear it beautifully. This was the first attempt of the kind, and I very likely have the only trombone that was ever up in an aeroplane.

The next time I tried it was on the field at Issondun. Here I was taken up by Lieutenant Davis, son of a preacher in one of our Western cities. We were getting ready for the flight, when I heard the mechanics talking among themselves. They would occasionally nudge each other, and snicker, and say:

"He ought to go up with Lieutenant Joyce."

Then I overheard them tell some of the exploits of this particular Lieutenant—how he would climb out on the wings, change seats in the air, and do a good many different stunts like that. I was starting across the field after a very delightful flight, when a bright, snappy young fellow walked up to me and said,

"Mr. Rodeheaver, I want to shake hands My Dad hit the trail in the Sunday meeting Baltimore, and it has made a lot of differen home. I'd like to take you up in my plane, can write Dad and tell him about it."

I said, "That will be mighty fine! I can any time." Then I said, "What is your nam

He said, "Joyce."

I KNEW I was in for it then. I tried to excuse because of a meeting, but he insist and so, after my next meeting, we got int Avro, which seemed to be his favorite machine. He put me into the front seat, tu motor over a few times, told the mechanics to the plugs, and off we started. I naturally him to taxi around the field and take off aga wind in the usual way. He did not waste anything of the kind, but cut straight across and before I knew it we were up in the air, wi of the quickest and fastest turns I knew a about. He showed me the great flyin surrounding one of the camps. Then, after he shut off his motor a little bit and turne and said,

"We are up three thousand feet now. I a to do a simple loop. You won't mind this just hold on to the side."

The next thing I knew, I was looking up at t and the trees and the town. It does not give sensation of falling, but you are sitting in y just as usual, although you are upside down. soon the sky came into place again, then ear back above us. After a few revolutions of th he looked me over and decided I could stan more. Finally, after having done nearly eve known to the flyer's art, he said,

"Now we are going to do a tail-spin," passed on this comforting information, "This most dangerous thing that is done in an aer This is what most fellows get killed doing."

Then we started in to do it, and I want to you that I saw more scenery in the next three m than I had ever seen in any three years of m After a while, he said,

"Now we will just slide-slip down and land."

Then he turned that neat little aeroplane up side, and simply let it fall until it almost h ground, as it seemed to me, when he pulled little stick, turned on the power, and glide beautifully across the landing field.

This flying business is a little exciting while y doing it, but it is so fascinating that I am willing and try it again any time, and the more stun better, so long as the flyer knows how to hand plane.

THE GOOD FELLOWSHIP CLASS

A Friend's class of sixty-eight members in a small rural community in Iowa

A SHORT history of The Good Fellowship Class shown in the picture might be of interest.

We consider that a class with sixty-eight enrolled in a small rural community is rather out of the ordinary, and demonstrates what can be accomplished by a live up-to-date, competent teacher, such as George Renaud has proven himself to be. He is shown in the center of the class with his Bible, the Superintendent of the School, Roy Williams, is on the extreme right, and the pastor, G. W. Wood, on the left end.

The class was organized by George Renaud in 1911, with ten charter members, and has steadily increased to its present number.

Several reasons might be given for the splendid work of this class. However, most of the credit for their continued activities is due to the teacher. In the first place, George R. is a man of pleasing and magnetic personality, who knows how to make the lessons interesting; and above all he is a consecrated, practical Christian, in whom all have implicit confidence. The class are regular in their Church attendance and are practically all consistent Christians, due largely to the untiring efforts of their teacher.

The class is organized to the limit—president, vice-president, treasurer and a number of committees. The social life of the class has been one of the strong features. The monthly socials have not only done much to cement a stronger friendship among the membership but have had the direct result of bringing new members in that were first attracted by the social features and are now constant in their attendance.

Originally, the class was a young married people's class; however, some that were charter members, are not as young as they once were, except in spirit.

The class is like one big harmonious family, each striving for the good and comfort of all. A number of attempts have been made to divide the class, as we not have a Sunday-school room large enough to commodate them. The class spirit is so strong their devotion to their teacher so intense that t prefer meeting in the main auditorium rather t divide.

Their efforts are not confined alone to the upbu ing of the class. This class furnishes a majority the teachers and officers of the school. In the rec drive for two hundred thousand dollars for P College, our class gave a little over four thousa five hundred dollars.

We are looking forward to building a new mode Church, and when the time comes our class will ready with their part.

We are justly proud of The Good Fellowship Cla and offer this as an example of what can be acco plished in any community by a consecrated, live-wi teacher.

One of the Class.

RESIDENT LAYS TREATY BEFORE SENATE

SIDENT WILSON appeared fore the Senate on July 10, rrying under his arm Amer- 's copy of the Peace Treaty, laid on the Vice-President's e President was escorted from e House by a committee com- Senators Lodge, Hitchcock, McCumber, and Borah. The of the House, the Senate and net crowded the Senate floor diplomatic and visitors' gal- e filled to overflowing.

the first time in the history of try that a President had sub- treaty in person. President id at the outset that it was not se to summarize or construe ty, but that he would attempt eneral characterization of its d purpose. After sketching the difficulties created by the rrents of politics and of inter- said that America's great rôle that of the disinterested cham- right, and that we had inter- selves in the terms of peace in capacity. He sketched the ion of our army both to the f France and the other Allies, he ultimate victory, and said our duty to do everything that ithin our power to do to make aph of freedom and of right a riumph in the assurance that ght everywhere live without t was not easy to graft the new ideas on the old, and some of s of the grafting might for a bitter; but all the men at the le desired sincerely to get away bad influences, the illegitimate , the demoralizing ambitions, rnational counsels and expedi- of which the sinister designs of y had sprung.

been the privilege of America, to formulate the principles vere accepted as the basis of nd the leaders of other nations to America to explain these s. The breaking up of the two entral Empires, he declared, he creation of new nations, and imperative that a new order e established which would rest ree choice of the peoples, them- ather than upon arbitrary au- The Germans had never d their colonies, but had only d them, and in the Turkish em- leveloped peoples were in need ate guarantee of friendly pro- guidance and assistance. Out xecution of these great enter- liberty there had sprung oppor- to attempt what statesmen er found the way to do before— uard the rights of racial, na- nd religious minorities, to regu- itary establishments, to free the ic life of nations, to clear the s of commerce of unfair ob- ns and to secure for labor the on of definite international this, he said, the statesmen of nference realized could not be oroughly or permanently if the onference was to be the end of tive authority and common among the governments of the and he added that even states- first skeptical as to the possi- f creating a workable League of had come to see that the or- ion of the League was the only guarantee the permanence of While statesmen may see diffi- in the way of a world League of the people, he felt assured, ee none, and would brook no the united power of free nations ut a stop to aggression and the ust be given peace!

The statesmen who had prepared the Covenant of the League, the President assured the Senate, saw it "as the main object of the peace, the only thing that could complete it or make it worth while. They saw it as the hope of the world, and that hope they do not dare to disappoint. Shall we or any other free people hesitate to accept this great duty?" he asked. "Dare we reject it and break the heart of the world?" He admitted that the Treaty was probably not what any one delegation would have written; compromises had been necessary, but none of these compromises "cut to the heart of any principle."

He told the Senate that he would soon lay before Congress a special treaty with France, the object of which was a temporary protection from unprovoked aggression by Germany.

The American delegates to the Conference, according to the President, had been welcomed as disinterested friends, and had been resorted to as arbiters in many a difficult question. "We were generously accepted," he said, "as the unaffected champions of what was right." America has reached her majority as a world-power, he declared, having started upon that road in 1898, and having demonstrated her sincerity and unselfishness in her treatment of Cuba and the Philippines. Our participation in the great war established our position among the nations, and nothing but our own mistaken action can alter it. We are no longer isolated and devoted to a policy which has our own interest and advantage for its object.

In closing, he said, "We answered to the call of duty in a way so spirited, so utterly without thought of what we spent of blood or treasure, so effective, so worthy of the admiration of true men everywhere, so wrought out of the stuff of all that was heroic, that the whole world saw at last, in the flesh and in noble action, a great ideal asserted and vindicated by a nation they had deemed material and now had found to be compacted of the spiritual forces that must free men of every nation from every unworthy bondage. It is thus that a new rôle and a new responsibility have come to this great nation that we honor, and which we would all wish to lift to yet higher levels of service and achievement.

"The stage is set, the destiny disclosed. It has come about by no plan of our conceiving, but by the hand of God, who led us into this way. We cannot turn back! We can only go forward, with lifted eyes and freshened spirit, to follow the vision. It was of this that we dreamed at our birth. America shall in truth show the way. The light streams upon the path ahead, and nowhere else."

The speech was received by the members of Congress and by the press in a somewhat divided spirit. From the Democratic side came hearty commendation; from the Republican, commendation with reservation or guarded criticism. A number of Republican senators expressed themselves as being still in favor of making reservations to some of the provisions of the Treaty before ratification, and on July 14, supporters of the policy of reservations claimed that they could command a majority in the Senate.

Following the speech, the President went to his office in the Senate where he received senators and friends, discussing the Treaty and the issues growing out of it.

THE Treaty in the form in which it was laid before the Senate was a document 20 inches long, 14 inches wide and 6 inches thick. Five hours after the completion of the President's address, the Government printing-house was turning out copies of the Treaty for members of Congress and the public.

© Paul Thompson

President Wilson is glad to be home

The Week in the World's News

R-34 REACHES HOME. With a severe storm centering over the Great Lakes and moving east and atmosphere conditions over the Atlantic improving, the British dirigible, R-34, which had been delayed for 48 hours by adverse weather, left Mineola, L. I., at 11.57 P.M., July 9, circling over New York City, and heading straight across the sea for Edinburgh. It had required the skill and resource of nearly a thousand Army and Navy men, who acted as human anchors, to hold the big ship down and prevent injury from the winds that blew while she was anchored in Mineola. She took on 5,000 gallons of gasoline, a million cubic feet of hydrogen gas, fresh provisions and a bag of mail—in which was a letter from President Wilson answering the one from King George carried on the westerly trip. They left behind the first air stowaway, who was doomed to travel back on the surface of the sea. The R-34 reached Pulham, England, on July 13 at 2.56 A.M. New York time, after an uneventful trip. She crossed in seventy-five hours, although one engine was disabled in mid-ocean.

POLK TO REPLACE LANSING. It was announced, on June 8, that Frank L. Polk, acting Secretary of State, would go to Paris to head the peace delegation and that Secretary Lansing would come home in order that his intimate knowledge of the details of the peace-making might be available to Congress.

REDS ON THE RUN. The Trotzky army was reported, on July 12, to have been completely driven out of the Crimea and to be fleeing before the volunteer forces of General Denikin, which were already west of the Dnieper River and approaching Saratov, having passed forty miles beyond Kharkov. Loyal Russian airmen were scattering bombs and printed matter among the disordered troops, whose panic Trotzky was reported to be attempting to stop by a wholesale shooting of officers.

GERMANY'S BUDGET. Herr Ertzberger, Minister of Finance, told the German National Assembly, on July 8, that Germany would have to raise 17,500,000,000 marks during the coming year for home needs and indemnities. He said that expenditures would be strictly watched and that non-employment grants must be reduced, while the burden of taxation must be increased. The debt of Germany, he explained, had reached 72,000,000,000 marks, and he declared against the annulment of war loans. A great levy on capital is said to be planned, to yield 90,000,000,000 marks.

ARMY ATTACKS COST OF LIVING. To meet the mounting cost of food, the Army authorities on July 12 announced that surplus supplies of canned and cured meats would be sold at prices 20 per cent. below cost to the government. The goods, $120,000,000 worth, were offered to municipalities to be sold direct to the consumer through public markets.

REVOLUTION IN PERU. On July 4 the Peruvian Government of President Pardo was overthrown by the army in the interest of President-elect Leguia. Leguia at once resumed the office of Provisional President and organized a ministry. It was reported that the Pardo Government was trying to defeat the result of the election.

JOHN FOX DIES. John Fox, Jr., author of the "Trail of the Lonesome Pine," the "Little Shepherd of Kingdom Come," and many other books, died at his home in Big Stone Gap, Va., on July 8.

PROFITEERS TO JAIL. Seventeen men found guilty of conspiring to raise the price of fish in war times were sentenced in Boston on July 9 to pay fines and serve terms in the House of Correction.

King Victor Emanuel of Italy issued a decree that profiteers should be fined $2000, sentenced to prison for from three months to three years, and suffer confiscation of their goods. Under the pressure of the decree prices tumbled throughout Italy and people thronged the stores. In some places the stores were sold out before noon on July 7. Premier Nitti told the Italian Parliament on July 9 that there was no more unrest in Italy than in the other nations of Europe and pledged the government to establish the country on a peace

Continued on page 816

What They Will Do With Forty Million Dollars

An Interview With DR. DAVID D. FORSYTH. By Charles W. Wood

"WHAT would you do if you had ten million dollars?" was my assignment some years ago for a series of magazine "features." I asked all sorts of people, except those who had millions and knew what they were like, but I got only one sort of answer. Everybody, man, woman, and child, declared he or she would spend that ten million in some sort of service.

But nobody suggested that he would give it to the Church.

That, as I said, was several years ago. Today one Christian denomination in America is planning to spend four times ten million dollars for "Home Missions and Church Extension." There are no millionaires on the committee which will have charge of this expenditure. There are few, if any, millionaires on the list of contributors. It is, generally speaking, a poor man's project—the actual raising and spending of forty millions by the same type of people I once interviewed on that freak assignment. All for Home Missions and Church Extension!

But listen! That isn't the whole story. For there is scarcely one of those poor man's dreams which is not actually coming true. Home Missions and Church Extension means a lot of things which I never guessed it meant. It means social service on a hitherto undreamed-of scale.

To tell the truth, I wasn't strong for it. Then I interviewed Rev. Dr. D. D. Forsyth, chairman of the Joint Centenary Committee of the Methodist Episcopal Church and corresponding secretary of the Board of Home Missions and Church Extension.

DR. FORSYTH is anything but a dreamer. He is a dealer in cold facts. No matter how pretty a scheme may look, Dr. Forsyth is not apt to be terribly impressed, so long as it is only a scheme. Sometimes he seems antagonistic, cold. Mere enthusiasms do not sweep him off his feet; and the enthusiast with a pet scheme for the sudden transformation of the world may leave his presence chilled. But facts impress him mightily. And when I asked him just how this vast sum would probably be spent, he didn't begin his answer by theorizing. He recounted some church history instead.

"Let me tell you," he said, "about two churches in the same city, and perhaps you can find the answer for yourself. They are both in Boston, both in the same neighborhood. One is the Morgan Memorial. One is the People's Temple."

I listened attentively and was already jumping at a conclusion. "People's Temple" sounded impressive. That would be a people's church, I thought. It would be a place for the masses to congregate. It would be forward-looking, alive, up to date. As for "Morgan Memorial," wasn't the name itself enough? "Memorial" suggested a cemetery, and "Morgan" was the American metaphor for conservatism and great wealth.

"These churches started on about an even footing," said Dr. Forsyth. "They have the same class of people about them. But the Morgan Memorial is one of the livest, most useful, most prosperous churches in America, while the People's Temple is being sold. Its congregation has dwindled. It finds itself in the same desperate state of uselessness that has been the despair of so many 'down-town' churches in American cities. The Morgan Memorial has shown us how to meet the problems of the down-town church. The People's Temple has shown us how not to meet them."

"And the difference?"

"Essentially this," he said. "One type of church aims primarily at maintaining itself. When it finds itself in a different environment, owing to the encroachment of industry or business, its regular members moving uptown or into the suburbs, and an entirely alien population taking their place, it tries to stem the tide and hold its own against the handicap. One of the first things it thinks of is to get a more eloquent preacher, one who will draw crowds from all sections of the city. It may also arrange for finer music; and if that doesn't accomplish the desired result, for Sunday evening lectures and other attractions.

"The other type of church forgets itself completely and looks for opportunities to serve the new community. It doesn't aim merely at getting members; it ministers unto those who need its ministry, and trusts in the Lord for results. It doesn't measure its success always by its members so much as by the amount of service it succeeds in giving.

"That was the course which the Morgan Memorial pursued. It found men unemployed and it found employment for them. It found others unemployable and it taught them trades. It collected cast-off shoes and clothing throughout New England, and it found cast-off men and women in the neighborhood and taught them how to transform this wreckage into serviceable garments. Furniture also, and everything that could be salvaged for the general good of the community. The church has a millinery department, a dressmaking, tinkering, weaving and cooking industry, even a rug factory. It also has a kindergarten and children's settlement, where mothers may leave their little ones while they go out to work.

Dr. David D. Forsyth, Secretary of the Board of Home Missions, Methodist Episcopal Church

"Such a church does not have to introduce 'attractions.' It does not have to depend solely upon eloquent preachers. And it does not have to wonder how to reach the masses: for it is of the masses, and not one of God's children is alien in its sight."

DR. FORSYTH does not purpose that every city church shall be turned into a Morgan Memorial. But churches that do not serve the particular needs of the communities in which they are situated, he says, might just as well close their doors. "Church Extension" to him does not always mean the building of new edifices where those of a particular persuasion may worship according to their accustomed formulas.

"In many American communities," he told me, "there is a distinct movement for fewer and better churches; and the Methodists have found that real church extension means sometimes better cooperation with other denominations. Just a little while ago, for instance, in a Western city there were two struggling churches, one Methodist and one Congregational. The success of both was impossible. The Methodist came to an understanding with the Congregationalist and gave up the field, their membership going en masse into the Congregational Church. One result is that the united church now has double the membership which the two churches had before, and the community is receiving double service.

"At the same time, in another section of the same city, the field was left clear for a Methodist church. This soon became a strong community church, open seven days and seven nights a week, responding in a hundred ways to the special needs of the community."

IF THE reader is led to suspect that this movement for community service means any dilution of the "old-time religion," he is invited to attend one of these churches and be disillusioned. The Gospel of individual salvation is preached with as much fervor as ever, and the prayer and testimony meetings are by no means neglected. The great difference, as Dr. Forsyth sees it, is that the Church is once more becoming articulate. It is preaching the same Gospel as before, but in a language which the pe stand.

"For a long time before the war," said D "the church seemed to be losing its grip masses. Methodism had traditionally religion of the common people; and yet, i sections of our cities where the com were becoming most numerous, the churches were closing their doors. now finding out the reason.

"It was not that the church w worldly. It was not that the religio had lost any of its saving power. I we were dealing with a new and stra to which the Church needs to be These groups need a larger ministry by preaching. They need more cont possible in a church whose services to the Sabbath Day."

The man who was talking about plexities of city life is not, as one pose, a product of a great American was born in Wisconsin and spent his in western Iowa and Nebraska when t was truly the "Wild West." He livec out 100 miles from the railroad, where no school, no church, and mail onl week. In 1876, the year of the Custer the whole community had to move cause the Sioux Indians were on a Young Forsyth used to run a mowin in those days, while his father rode alo with a Winchester rifle to protect "claim-jumpers." For amusement the broncos and hunted elk, deer and bu 1889, after graduating from Nebraska versity, he became a Methodist preach ing five preaching-points in his first

The America he knew in those early practically passed away. There is West" left and no frontier. With it h the rock-ribbed individualism which environment developed; and the ru also is thinking in social terms.

"And the rural church," Dr. Forsyth r "if it is to serve the new time efficiently, n become a church of social service. Instead, building little meeting-houses where itineran ers may hold forth once a month, we are a build rural institutional churches which will for all kinds of human service seven days a

ONCE again, Dr. Forsyth was not theorizi Methodists have already started a nu such institutional churches, and one of the m esting Centenary activities is the special tra pastors for life service in rural communitie these churches are not to be built according special pattern. Rural problems in the Unite are as varied as are our city problems; and t tution that would fit one section perfectly w totally out of place in another. Even two N land villages cannot be compared; for one the quiet haven of a few hundred retired farmers, while the other may consist of a c knitting-mills with an assorted population c speaking a dozen different tongues.

To relate the Church, city and country, and downtown, on the prairie or in the lumbe on New York's East Side or in the Black Belt South, in slum districts where children die f of sunlight, and in suburbs where their so chilled by the very lack of contact with God mon people—to relate the Church in all thes to the particular needs of the community it to serve—this seems to be the way the Metho the United States intend to spend four times t lion dollars.

◆

Chinese Medicine

THERE are many of us to whom the docto scription is scarcely more intelligible th hieroglyphic inscription on an Egyptian tom but the majority of us are reasonably sure that tains neither dried frogs nor asbestos. Yet these substances are common ingredients "order" which the Chinese doctor prescribes patient, after he has performed on him the ceremonial of feeling both pulses to gain a clue ing the condition of his internal organs. For th of variety he may include in the prescription the following, for which the patient, perhaps, press a preference: scorpions, rhinoceros skins, shavings, flies, crushed pebbles, moths, centi toads, lizards, caterpillars, powdered snakes, o

OW MONT-LAWN CELEBRATED

VICTORY YEAR" and the celebration of the Fourth will long be remembered by the hundreds of little folks who took part in the observance at the Christian Herald Children's Home, Mont-Lawn on the Hudson. The buildings of the Home were prettily decorated with flags and bunting, and the Stars and Stripes waved in front of the tower of Fort Plenty and on the big lawn before the Homestead. as the "Children's Paradise" looked lovelier attractive.

he little folks were up nd early. Visitors began by noon, and a number rough the snowy white ries on little tours of in- , while others strolled he playgrounds watching dren at their sports.

eal celebration of the day, began after dinner, the feature being a great Parade by the children assembled under their captains on the ball field it through various march- lutions, every child carry- American flag. In front wo divisions, each led by dard-bearer carrying a ag, were seven boys and irls, who carried banners the letters VICTORY division to the right, while the left bore standards AMERICA. To the of a band they marched the lawn in fine order. At 3 o'clock, the visi- ving already crowded the auditors' seats in ildren's Temple, the parade filed into the ul stone building and the children took their r a short hour of patriotic songs and es, each section led by its standard-

In the row upon row of eager faces toward the platform, one could dis- h many different nationalities.

singing of the children delighted the , and their patriotic rendering of new pieces selected by Music-Master as especially fine. The opening was opsch's old favorite, "Hurrah for the and the children, as they waved their ds of flags in the chorus, made the building look like a sea of patriotic They sang "Men of Our America," composition with a rousing chorus, of which had been supplied by the -Meredith Co., and another of the lass, "Thank God for Liberty," the for which was written by Prof. Noll. rse, the old favorites were not forgot- or the sweet strains of "Mont-Lawn " and "Can We Hear the Flowers "—songs which have become dear to earts of the Mont-Lawn children h successive generations.

"America--Victory"

MR. GRAHAM PATTERSON, president of the Christian Herald and now a member of the Board of Trustees of the Children's Home, made a short, inspirational address in which he paid a glowing tribute to the memory of Dr. Klopsch, the founder of the Home. He told them how Dr. Klopsch, through his love for little children, had built for them the beautiful Paradise which had sheltered over 50,000 little folks in the last twenty-six years, and which had come down to them by inheritance as a legacy from one who "loved God and little children." Mr. Patterson told the children that when Dr. Klopsch was a poor little boy without toys and with but little time to play he made a resolution that when he grew up he would help to make life happier for other little children. So when Dr. Klopsch became the publisher of the Christian Herald he told his friends and readers about the many little children who were brought up in the slums of New York without a chance to see the flowers and the grass and to play in the wonderful sunshine.

"How many of you little children," continued Mr. Patterson, "when you grow up to be big men and women will remember the good times you had at Mont-Lawn and will try and help other little children?" The hands sprang up like magic and the faces glowed with this new idea and purpose.

Dr. Klopsch asked this same question every summer for many years and many of the child-promises have developed into grown-up actualities.

The speaker then assured the little folks that he, like the founder of the Christian Herald, loved little children and wanted them very much to love him in return.

He spoke of the happy lot of American childhood and the opportunities that awaited all boys and girls who strove earnestly to do their best.

Mrs. Jansen, an American missionary from Manila, gave an interesting talk on "Child Life in the Philippines" and how the little folks of that country as well as those of our own honored and celebrated the Fourth.

Just boys. They so thronged about the camera man that it took him and two teachers to get them quiet enough for a snap shot. The city was sweltering at 98°. Mont-Lawn was swept by cooling breezes.

AT THE conclusion of the speeches, a final song was rendered by the children, after which they filed out to the lawn, where they marched around the great Liberty pole in gradually narrowing circles, and went through the impressive ceremony of saluting the Flag. The marching finished, the parade was then broken up and the rest of the afternoon was passed in games on the lawn and on the ball field, the whole being enlivened with the stirring strains of instrumental music.

In many respects, so the visitors declared, the Fourth was the most enjoyable they had ever spent at Mont-Lawn. The children seemed to carry into the program the true spirit of patriotism. Among them were many whose fathers and brothers had been serving under the Flag during the great war. Whatever their nationality or descent, it could easily be seen, these little folks were all 100 per cent. American.

Among the visitors who enjoyed the celebration were Mr. and Mrs. Graham Patterson and family, Mrs. Louis Klopsch, Mrs. Stephen Merritt, Mr. and Mrs. L. D. Fernald, Mr. Garner Palmer, and many others. We only wish that you, whose gifts made possible this happy day, might have shared it.

Into the Children's Temple for the hour of song

Contributions to the Christian Herald Children's Home

V Stillman	$6.00
sa E. Der- r	5.00
na S Kort	5.00
Fisher, Jr	6.00
Chapman	6.00
Thomas	5.00
Johnson	6.00
S Williams	6.00
n S Farr	5.00
lward Row-	5.00
Thompson	5.00
ight	6.00
A & Alice orge	12.00
L Hibbard	6.00
er Fisher	10.00
f Christen-	12.00
Kurtz	25.00
Witteman	10.00
W Mayer	18.00
L Moulton	10.00
MacDonald	6.00
Berkey	10.00
Mrs F T At- r	5.00
Hinterman	5.00
lary L Win-	6.00
rwin F Keller	6.00
M Genthner	6.00
G Ely	6.00
arter	10.00
J McClung	6.00
lary A Bowen	6.00
A Craig	6.00
Mrs J C Gotobed	$18.00
S E Miller	6.00
C C Club	9.00
H G Smith	5.00
T E Morgan	5.00
Mrs C H Laurence	3.00
Mrs W H Griffing	3.00
Mrs E P Devare	5.00
J F Miller	5.00
Mrs J H Hagens & Daughters	13.00
S B Chapin	10.00
B F Nickerson	5.00
Bernice Woodbrom	10.00
Katharine Herrmann	6.00
Mrs Henry W Peter	6.00
Mrs J F Fairbanks	6.00
F T Black & Sisters	12.00
W C Merrell	6.00
Mr Fred Busse & Family	6.00
Wm A Gillespie	24.00
W W McComb	10.00
Miss Mattie Kirkpatrick	5.00
Mrs W A Kibber	6.00
Mrs J W Ward	5.00
Wm Chaplin	19.50
Golden Circle of the Shelton Congregational Ch	10.00
Miss H N Harvey	5.00
Martha Weaver	10.00
Mrs E P Blanchard	$5.00
Mr & Mrs Wallace Griggs	6.00
Mrs A L Rhodes	5.00
Mrs W H Buck & Mrs J H Woodruff	10.00
Mrs Clara Wagner	5.00
D M Stearns	5.00
Mr & Mrs F E Schierholz	9.00
Mr & Mrs W W Brown	5.00
H H Geyer	5.00
A F Hays	5.00
John J Leuven	5.00
——, Brandon, Ia	5.00
——, La Mesa, Cal	10.00
Mrs Lottie Cook	6.00
Mr J E Freeman & Mrs C E Freeman	6.00
Mrs A P Mahard	5.00
Mary E Varley	5.00
Mrs Emma Striker	6.00
Mrs Sadie (McCauley) Nightingale	10.00
H R Hanks	6.00
Guyon Miller	5.00
Mrs E G Denman	7.00
Mrs J C Wilkinson	10.00
Mrs A D FonDeersmith	5.00
Mr & Mrs W H Thayer	5.00
M Pryer	5.00
Ella Spaun	10.00
Mrs S S Barnes	5.00
Samuel Reid	$5.00
C H Mereheimer, MD	6.00
Mrs M O Scobee	7.50
Mrs J H McCullough	5.00
Miss Jessie Williams	5.00
Mrs Emma E Randolph	5.00
J F Walker	5.00
Mrs Sela Buckbee	5.00
Bessie M Cowley & Sister	6.00
Mrs P A Christensen	5.00
Lizzie Kennel	7.00
Mrs P Jensen	6.00
Mrs Albert Seago	5.00
Mary M Millen	5.00
Mrs A Harris	5.00
Troy Branch Int. Sunshine Soc.	6.00
E L Remele	3.00
A A Barnes	5.00
Carrye E Smallwood	10.00
Arthur G Wilbur	5.00
Willis P Bannock	10.00
Asa Wells	5.00
Mrs Melia Kutch	5.00
M R Sinks	6.00
Maude C McCollum	10.00
E S Pegram	5.00
Mrs John L Morgan	5.00
Louise Seton Blair	6.00
Mrs I G Pratt	10.00
E J Hughes	$6.00
Mr & Mrs Wm Barnett	9.00
Margaret Betyemann	10.00
Josephine M VerPlanch	5.00
Emma Perisho & Lester T Perisho	12.00
Mrs M A Payne & Mr & Mrs A H Ingram	30.00
Inez Frank	10.00
Sarah A Beardsley	5.00
Mrs E Ferrell	6.00
Miss E E Hart	6.00
Mrs Mary Clark	5.00
S E Barton	6.00
Mrs G Grevers	6.00
A W Anderson	10.00
Mr & Mrs E E Van Ness	6.00
Columbia Grange, No. 1008	6.00
Fred M Newton	5.00
Mrs Lucie Walker	5.00
Howard Goslin	15.00
Wm H Stephen	5.00
Mrs Luther Fleming	5.00
Jean A Wilson	15.00
Mrs Payson Merrill	5.00
Henrietta Burns	5.00
Wm H Blackmon	21.00
Mrs Dorothy Gantz	6.00
Mrs Frank A Robinson	9.00
Mrs Julia A Hill	$5.00
Dorcas Missionary Society	5.00
Mrs G V Williams	6.00
A Fremont Reader	6.00
Ella Van Dyke St Clair	24.00
Grace Hinkley	6.00
Mrs C A Palmer	6.00
Mrs E E Pearson	5.00
Friends, Stewardson, Ill	5.00
John Lanser	1.00
Mrs Mary E Russell	1.00
Mrs Margaret Carson	1.00
—, Proctor Home, Ill	1.00
Mrs Robt Turner	1.00
Geo D Weeks	1.00
Mrs Mary Teale	1.00
Mrs Mary E. Robbins	1.00
Ellen W. Carey	1.00
Mrs C Rhodes	1.00
W H Woods	1.00
Anna Ioder	1.00
E B Gardiner	1.00
Rev Geo Tester	1.00
Geo A Wemhaner	1.00
Mrs Wm Forsyth	1.00
Mrs John Watson	1.00
Rev E I Strom	1.00
L Morby	1.00
A B Shibly & Mrs Shibly	1.00
—, Rockford, Ill	1.00
E G Jacobs	$1.00
A Friend, Beaver Crossing, Neb	1.00
J. Fletcher Poulsen	1.00
Harry S Loper	1.00
J Fitzpatrick	1.00
Jacob Sonneschein	1.00
M C Johnson	1.00
John Swart	1.00
Paul Kouba	1.00
P C Hanson	1.00
Mrs G A Barg	1.00
Mrs W H Spikings	1.00
A R Morell	1.00
Mrs L. E Francis	1.00
C C Boster	1.00
Mrs E W, Brooklyn, N. Y	1.00
Mrs J K Dunwoody	1.00
Mr & Mrs J N Rogers	1.00
Mrs Sarah Reice	1.00
Mary Dimberg	1.00
Mrs Chas Werner	1.00
C A Luhnow	1.00
Julia L Hopping	1.00
Herman B Sheffield	1.00
Mrs P W Ziegler	1.00
Mrs B F Harrison	1.00
Mrs Sadie Vannice	1.00
N R Lyford	1.00
D W Foster	1.00
G A F Seeley	1.00
Toni de Yong	1.00
J B Vogelback	$1.00
E G Brandon	1.00
Mrs Mary Cecil	1.00
Mrs Titus Smith	1.00
Mrs C C Graybeal	1.00
Ellen Simmers	1.00
Percival Golden	1.00
Aug O Frey	1.00
S A Metzler	1.00
Mary Richardson	1.00
Mr A W Miller and Miller Bros	1.00
Mrs Kate Christenan	1.00
—, Cherokee, Iowa	1.00
Ruth Fueman	1.00
A J Hunt	1.00
Mrs C M Souney	1.00
Katherine A Freyschlag	1.00
—, Red Wing, Minn	1.00
—, Englewood, N J	1.00
Mrs Amy E Winter	1.00
J E Adams	1.00
Mrs M E Breckenridge	1.00
Bernice M Overturf	1.00
Jacob Shand	1.00
Mrs Isabella Sinclair	1.00
J M Mead	1.00
J F Bohi	1.00
Miss C L Beckingham	1.00

God's Way to Happiness and Peace

BY REV. CHARLES EDWARD JEFFERSON, D.D.*

TEXT—I Cor. 12 : 31. "A still more excellent way."

ONE of the first names given to the Christian religion was "the Way." The expression occurs several times in the book of the Acts and seems to have been in general use not only among believers, but by the Gentile public. It is a beautiful name, and suggests the practical character of the religion of Jesus. It was recognized from the start as a way of life. It was a path which men were summoned to tread. It was not merely a theory to be speculated about, but a life to be lived.

Paul liked to think of it as a way. It was a way out of the world's difficulties and confusions. It was a road to preeminence and power. It was a path to happiness and peace.

The church in Corinth was in a lamentable condition. It was torn by dissensions and bitter with strife. Envy and vanity and discord made havoc of the life of the Christian community. The very things which God had given the Corinthians for their advancement had been used to bring about their undoing. Heaven's gifts are bestowed that we may build one another up. The Corinthians used their gifts to pull one another down. They knew how to speak, but their speaking only increased the confusion. They were acute thinkers, but their thinking only drove them farther apart. They had rich stores of knowledge, but their knowledge only made them bumptious and overbearing. They were ardent with ambition to excel, but their ambition filled them with envy and rancor. They were devoted to the leaders they loved, but this devotion plunged them into the bigotries and follies of partisan strife.

Paul sets himself to get them out of the ditch into which they have fallen. He tries to extricate them from the predicament in which they are floundering. He admires their zeal and devotion and sympathizes with their ambition to make progress and climb to the top. He reminds them that in asking for God's gifts it is wise to ask for the highest, those which build our brother men up. And then he says: "Let me now go on to point out a super-excellent way," or, as James Moffat translates it, "a still higher path." This higher path is the path of love. Without love, the apostle asserts, all gifts of every sort are useless. Unless men love there can be no genuine progress. No matter what men possess, even though they be the things upon which mankind sets the highest value, there is no deliverance from the world's tragedy except through love. It is only love which is strong enough to strangle vanity and arrogance and irritableness. Love alone can overcome impatience and envy and greed. Love is mighty in faith and in hope and in endurance. Love is the only force which never fails. Love is the wise builder, and when men build upon love they build upon foundations which are eternal. Love is the rock of ages.

THE whole world today has become a Corinth on a vast and distressing scale. We are in a more baffling situation than we were eight months ago. Then we were fighting with weapons of steel. We had faith in our weapons, and we felt that victory was sure. The fighting ceased, and we said with jubilant voices, "Peace has come!" But, alas! there is no peace. There is less harmony in the world now than there was before the armistice was signed. Mankind has come down to a distinctly lower level. With our howitzers and machine guns we fought on the mountain top. We are now scrambling and mauling one another on the plain. Humanity seems to be possessed of even more than seven devils. Jealousy, and vanity, and suspicion, and malice, and partisanship, and greed, and ill-will, all these have thrown mankind into a spasm, and the whole world foams at the mouth. Great Britain and France are not so close together as they were last October, nor are Italy and France, nor are France and the United States, nor are the United States and Great Britain.

In every country sarcastic and hateful things are said in the newspapers which would not have been thought of while the guns were booming. There are papers in England which jeer daily at President Wilson, and disparage everything which the United States did in the war. There are influential groups in the United States which have an ineradicable distrust of Great Britain, and give expression to their ill-will in irritating and exasperating ways. The beautiful international concord has been broken.

Within the individual nations, all is strife and confusion. Political animosities held in leash for a season have broken loose with even more than their old-time venom and fury. Labor and capital have each other by the throat, and one strike after another only indicates how widespread and deep-rooted is the enmity of these two mighty antagonists.

Even the armies and navies of the various countries are honeycombed with the spirit of jealousy and ill-will. Men of one section sneer at the achievements of another, and these sneers are met with a response no less derisive and bitter. In whatever direction one looks, he sees enmities, strife, jealousies, wraths, factions and divisions, and while men in every country are thinking and talking of peace, there is no peace anywhere.

THE fact is, the whole world is desperately sick. "From the sole of the foot even unto the head, there is no soundness in it, but wounds and bruises and festering sores." For a half-century nations have sat at the feet of teachers who have expounded the philosophy of force, laying it down as fundamental that government is founded on force, that national greatness is to be expressed in terms of force, that the last resort is in every case force, and that the supreme aim of a nation is to make itself mighty in physical power.

The war was the result of this false teaching, and the world cannot be cured by war. War is a surgical operation, and no patient is ever cured by the use of the surgeon's knife alone. After the use of the knife must come the long and patient ministry of fingers that are gentle and the application of remedies which are mild. This world is rooted in love. Government is founded on love. All nations are measured by their works of love. The last resort is in every case love. The greatest force in the world is love. In outbreaks of desperate and reckless wickedness the first resort may be physical force, but everywhere and always the last resort is love.

That is our resort today. We have done all it is possible to do with poisonous gases and shells, and we see how far short we fall o reached the goal. The world is bleeding dead, and there is nothing for us to do bu back upon love.

WHITEFIELD

Statue of George Whitefield, unveiled on the campus of the University of Pennsylvania

The industrial problem is critical and There is an ugly spirit in the hearts of th of wage-earners which makes one fearful of t which lie ahead of us. There is a selfishnes hearts of thousands of capitalists whic in some way or other be overcome if thi is ever to have peace. The spirit of good-wi only spirit sufficiently potent to save societ ruin.

We hear much of the Bolsheviki of Russia. seem to exist in every land. When we were down to our long-looked-for banquet at the en war, these men sprang up, and by their behavi have taken our appetite away. Who are the who in every land are filled with a fierce hatre existing institutions and are willing to pull dc pillars of the temple of our civilization? Tl men who have never been loved. From their they have been neglected, ill treated, in man trampled on. Their minds have become per their hearts have been made bitter. They are r victims of ideals which are false, and of scheme lead to the abyss.

What shall we do with them? Some say shoo down, and others say imprison them, and still say transport them. The Christian answer is them. Use force when necessary to curb their actions, but do not fail after that to make ab use of the gentle measures of love. Educate th gracious to them, give them an opportunity a free and normal life, and their vagaries will and they will sit down with us at life's feas brethren in Christ.

WHAT are we going to do with Germany that we have whipped her? She deser thrashing, and there was nothing for the Allies but to administer it. The lash had to be applied and with vigor. At last the culprit cried: "I' enough!" And now what shall we do? We m the interest of justice and mercy see that the w safeguarded against any sudden outbreak of th spirit of Potsdam. This is one of the dictate provisions of love. But this is not all that lov do. We must show Germany good will just as as she justifies us in trusting her intentions to do is honorable and right. We must not need humiliate her, or keep nagging at her, and cri her through an indefinite term of years. Ger has surrendered to our arms, but she has done it protest and with a wry face. She is like the rest No nation surrenders with a willing heart to Germany, like America, will never surrender i heart to anything but love.

We must have a League of Nations. Without a League future progress is blocked. It is only League that the fruits of the Allied victory ca conserved, and that mankind can be kept from f again into the ditch.

But a League of Nations depends entirely o spirit behind it. Without good-will in the hearts nations composing the League, this political mach will come to nothing. Even though the League sh speak with the tongues of angels, and should power to remove many mountains, and even if it sh give food and raw materials to a vast number o poor, unless it was founded on love and directe love, it would in the end profit the world nothin EVERYTHING depends on the disposition of heart. Out of the heart are the issues of Without the new heart, all our schemes will b down and our most promising programs will com naught. This is the conviction not only of clergy but of generals and admirals. It is the belief of e man who accepts the message of the New Testar as a revelation from God.

It was a great address which Sir Douglas Haig recently at the University of St. Andrews. Fresh the battlefield, he put the supreme emphasis on m and religious forces. He boldly confessed that political expedient and no military preparedness guarantee the kind of peace on which the heart of world is set. The great general sees no solution the world problem except in the Christian relig It is only in a united Church that he finds any for mankind.

---

*Pastor of Broadway Tabernacle (Congregational), N. Y.

THE DAILY MEDITATION

J. H. Jowett, D.D., Rev. E. W. Caswell, C. C. Albertson, D.D., P. W. Wilson, D. J. Burrell, D.D., W. W. Bustard, D.D.

hen the Light Is Low

NDAY. Eph. 5 : 14. "Christ hall give thee light." Cotter orrison, in his "Macaulay" in he "English Men of Letters," very significant word which I apture for a far more vital ap- 1. Writing of Macaulay he He is not one of those writers ve seek when our light is low, ns of things which belong to our I think that is true, but it is e of a multitude of writers. They e us information, they may grat- interest, they may offer us ent, but they do not provide a , usable lamp when the darkness on us, and when the night ter- lurking along the road. There ers whose intimate beneficence discovered when our sun has gone They reveal their kindly light ings are dark and cold. We keep oks by our bedside, and we turn to ith eager and trustful assurance. these are only books, and their d really only vital worth is to us of a presence. It is the Lord Christ who is preeminently our when the light is low. It is his s pleasure to walk with us in the g and on through the hours of But his friendship becomes more e as daylight wanes and other o out one by one. He does not s when our fires of physical vital- burning low, and when we are d as useless by the hustling cou- trade. No; his benign fellow- en restores the smoldering fires of ly, and makes them glow again. I nown men bow before him in phy- eariness, and his vitalizing com- n has so refreshed them that they sen to their feet like a strong man a race. He quickens our mortal by his Spirit that dwelleth in us. how companionable is the Sa- when the light of hope is burning J. H. J.

The Cross

NDAY. Gal. 5 : 11. "Then hath he offense of the cross been done How can there be an offense cross? For the cross is a golden upon our churches, an ornament our person, embossed upon our and is an emblem of the sacri- ervice and suffering of the Son l for the world. But the cross the crucifixion of the flesh, the der of the affections, the control passions. Therefore Calvary is r to the devotees of sinful pleas- Men put Christ to death to escape ndemning light of his character. oks awful before the face of the ng Saviour; its terrible burden im to his death. The way of the s the way of self-denial, of endur- ame for his name and being par- of his suffering. It is therefore ry to the natural heart to love y of the cross. We see no beauty blood till it cleanses our sin away, ry in the Christ till it makes us ith him in the love of the Father. inside of the cross is white, pure eautiful; there is hidden the face who is altogether lovely. There eld the glory of his throne, the of his heaven. The cross then es such a burden as sails are to a wings are to a bird. In bearing oss it bears us and lifts us up the white-robed throng washed blood of the Lamb. cross changes the relationship n God and man. It gilds the hymns of the Church, it glorifies the Holy Communion Supper, showing forth his death till he comes again. The cross is our ladder to the skies, our pathway to the Highest. To die at the cross is to live forevermore with him, where this mortal shall put on immortality and this life receive grander, wider vision in his universal realms. E. W. C.

Coveting the Best Gifts

TUESDAY. 1 Cor. 12 : 31. "But covet earnestly the best gifts: and yet show I unto you a more excellent way:" A rich young man came to Jesus inquiring what to do that he might inherit eternal life. He had great possessions and loved them. He saw Jesus and loved him. He heard the Gospel from the Master's lips and loved it, but he loved his property more. Jesus bade him dispose of his property, impoverish himself, and join the apostolic group. Jesus did not denounce private property. Only the modern Bolshevik does that. A hundred thousand private residences in Petrograd and Moscow have been seized by the Soviet Councils, whose members move in as the owners move out, stack their rifles against grand pianos, and sit in easy chairs with their feet on mahogany tables. Jesus was no communist, holding that "private property is theft," but he knew no man could be an apostle of the new faith and be anxious about his pecuniary investments. That would have been a divided loyalty, and would mean inefficient service. He could not use such a man in the founding of the Church. The rich young ruler was covetous, but he did not covet the best things.

Often our choice is not between good and evil, but between things that are good and things that are less good. What is to determine our choice in such a case? Faith is the determining factor, faith in the sense in which Arnold of Rugby defined it in one of his sermons to schoolboys. He said, "Faith is the preference of unseen good to that which seems good at the moment." Another great teacher has said, "Faith is a finer imagination, a bolder logic, a more penetrating intelligence." The rich young ruler saw the present good, but failed to see the greater future good. His weakness was a failure of vision. He was short-sighted. Faith is far-sight of the soul. Faith fixes its eyes upon the best things, and covets them. C. C. A.

The Happiness of the Faithful

WEDNESDAY. Acts 13:52. "And the disciples were filled with joy, and with the Holy Ghost." The Church today is puzzled because the number of her children does not increase. We ask why it was that the disciples, though few at the outset, multiplied so rapidly. In one day at Jerusalem about three thousand converts were won, and later we read of five thousand, with multitudes of men and women, added daily. But persecution, when it arose, did not hinder it. By their efforts to stamp out the fire in Jerusalem, the priests scattered sparks throughout the Roman Empire.

Sometimes a preacher, like Philip, who is now recognized as illustrious, spread the cause, but not always. Churches often sprang into existence, as it were, by spontaneous combustion. At Damascus, and in the desert, there were Christians waiting to receive the converted Saul. Years before the Apostle of the Gentiles was taken under escort to Cæsar's courts there were communities of Christians, organized with elders, unordained by any known apostle, and meeting in residences, like that of Priscilla and Aquila.

Even at the best of times it always cost something to become a Christian. They endured hardship, imprisonment, flogging and violent death. And the question for us is: What made it worth while?

The churches grew because the Christians were happier than other people—the disciples with their praises of God shed abroad a sudden gladness, and this radiance of joy was infectious.

It was the Gospel, and only the Gospel, that changed Onesimus the slave, with his master Philemon, into "brothers beloved." It was in no garden of Eden that these men cultivated happiness. As pilgrims and sojourners they had no abiding city. Yet, unlike the exiles by the waters of Babylon, they did not refuse to sing the songs of Zion in a strange land. Instead of hanging their harps on the willow-tree, they joined together in psalms and hymns and spiritual songs, making melody in their hearts. P. W. W.

A Vineyard on a Fruitful Hill

THURSDAY. Isa. 5 : 3. "Judge, I pray you, betwixt me and my vineyard." We are glad to be living in America today. We are at peace, while the world is at war. Think what that means in our home-life, our churches, everywhere. Verily, ours is a vineyard on a fruitful hill.

Observe God's treatment of this vineyard on a fruitful hill. "He hath fenced it round about." We expect to continue at peace with all nations because we are protected against invasion by our sea-walls.

"And he hath planted it with the choicest vine." We speak of "the melting-pot." Our country is a refuge for the oppressed of all nations. So may it ever continue to be! As our forefathers fled from tyranny beyond the sea, it behooves their children to keep open house. These refugees are the choice siftings of the world, men and women moved by lofty hopes and noble aspirations. It is for us to see that the melting-pot shall fuse them into loyal citizens of the Commonwealth of God.

"He hath also made a winepress therein." This is the winepress that was trodden by his only begotten Son. Ours is a Christian nation. The shadow of the Cross is over it. A nation of Christian homes, of Christian schools, of Christian churches! Here we sit, under our peaceful vine and figtree, with none to molest or make us afraid, while the rest of the world trembles and the skies beyond our horizons are lurid with the flames of war.

The hour of opportunity has come for our country. What possibilities are before us if only, as a Christian nation, we turn our thoughts away from material gain to the service of God and humanity! If only our unexampled prosperity were turned into channels of universal betterment! If only our factories now employed in the making of munitions of war were transformed into Bible houses and mission-centers in the interest of the Kingdom of the Prince of Peace! D. J. B.

God's Bandages

FRIDAY. Ps. 147 : 3. "He healeth the broken in heart, and bindeth up their wounds." There never was a time in the world's history when this text so described the condition of the human race. Millions have been killed and many millions crippled for life. An epidemic, like an avenging angel of death, has gone through every land and taken one from almost every home. There never were so many broken hearts and wounded spirits in the world as now. It is comforting at a time like this to know that God has bandages with which to bind the broken-hearted.

First, there are the promises of his Word, for God's Word is a Book of Promises, containing hundreds of them. The word "promise" means "something sent before." Whenever we reach the place of need, there we find one of God's promises waiting to help. God himself is a Promise-Keeper, as one of his significant names indicates in the Hebrew. Solomon declared of all the promises, which God had made to Abraham, not one had Jehovah failed to keep.

The second bandage is the presence of God's Spirit. When Jesus went away, he said, "I will not leave you comfortless. I will come to you." The Spirit is "the one who is alongside" to help in the hour of need and to comfort in the time of distress.

The third bandage is the confidence of our faith in God. We know that God is Love, and we have a right to believe that all things will work together for our good. Faith is a mighty power in the world and a great comfort for hearts which are broken by sorrow.

The fourth bandage is the joy of self-forgetfulness in the service of others. The best way to forget our sorrow is to think of another's. We will never really lose ourselves in our sorrow, but only lose our sorrow as we help others out of theirs.

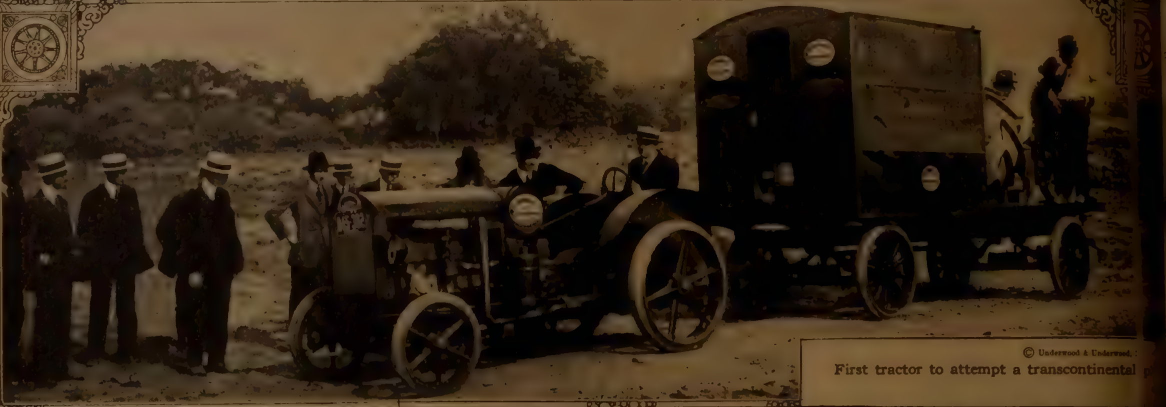
Here then is the promise of God, "That he will heal the broken-hearted." There is balm in Gilead for our wounded spirits. Christ has revealed God to us as the Heavenly Father who loves and who cares even for our cares. W. W. B.

The Modesty of the Saints

SATURDAY. Gal. 6 :14. "God forbid that I should glory, save in the cross of our Lord Jesus Christ." In the Middle Ages, wherever the name of a disciple is mentioned in the New Testament, people put the word "Saint" as prefix, and, in their pictures, surrounded the head with a halo. Among the apostles no such practices prevailed. Great lamentation was made for Stephen, but he remained Stephen. Of him, as of the Saviour no relics were preserved. There were no pilgrimages to his tomb—no masses for the repose of his soul—no prayers associated with his memory.

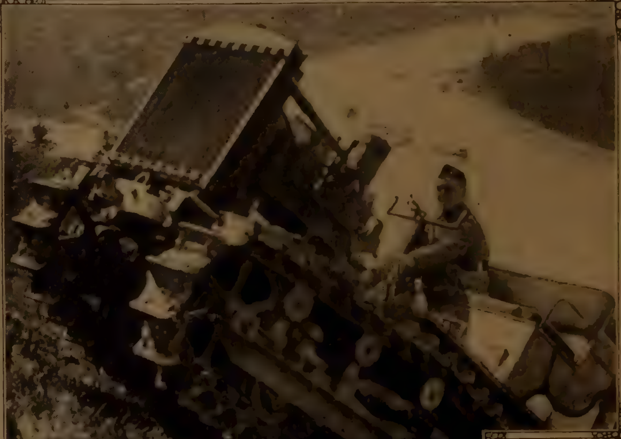
In that upper room at Jerusalem, what made people wonder was not a halo, imposed from without by the art or authority of man, but a flame, kindling within by the divine Spirit of God. On every one of them that fire burned. Every disciple, without exception, was thus fully a saint, women as well as men, for, as it seems to me, neither sex is excluded by the narratives. I like to think that, whereas each of them could see the flame over his neighbor's head, none could admire it over his own. As Paul put it years afterward, each esteemed other better than himself. Indeed, of the actual apostles, one-half disappear at this point from the recorded history. The book which we call the Acts of the Apostles should be entitled more accurately the Deeds of the Spirit. These noble-hearted men were like great artists who leave us pictures without a signature, as if to imply that their inspiration belongs wholly to the one eternal Author. They drove their mines far below ground, declining advertisement, and while you will not find their names on posters that meet the eye, those names are graven none the less, as John declared, on the foundations of the City of God. P. W.W.

TRACTORABILITY



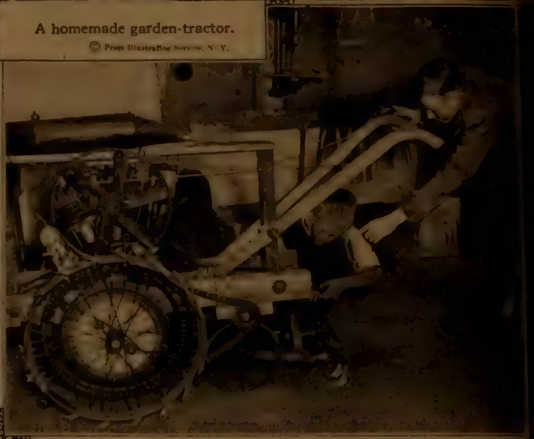
© Underwood & Underwood,

First tractor to attempt a transcontinental



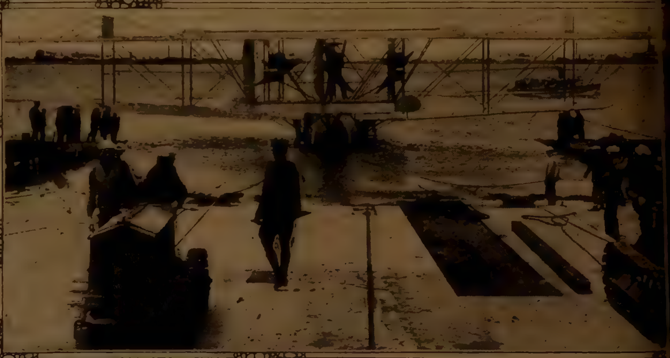
© Underwood & Underwood, N. Y

U. S. Army tractor on heights above the Rhine.



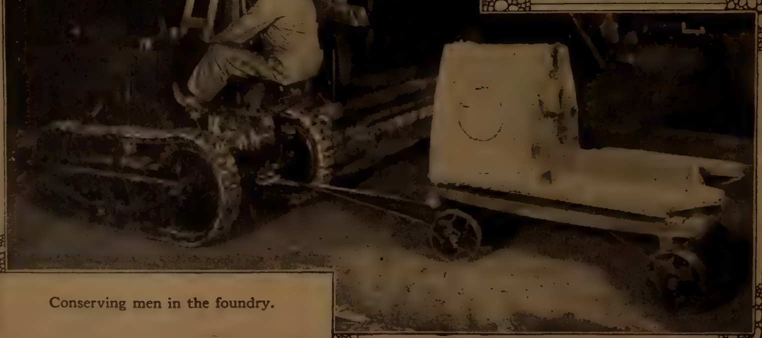
A homemade garden-tractor.

© Press Illustrating Service, N. Y.



© Underwood & Underwood, N. Y.

Commander Towers' ill-fated NC-1



Conserving men in the foundry.

Tractors are rapidly assuming a place in the day's and their scope of activity is by no means limited to ing and kindred pursuits. The first photograph shows a tractor and the trailer in which its crew wil during a transcontinental trip from Elmhurst, L
Los Angeles, California. The second picture shows a Army tractor maneuvering on the banks of the Rhi a point near where the Moselle joins the Rhine at Co

The homemade garden tractor was constructed by high-school boys of Los Angeles from an abandoned m cycle wreck.

The NC-1 is shown being drawn from the water completion of its last trial trip before starting on voyage to Europe which terminated at a point some more than one hundred miles west of the Azores.

The last picture shows the method adopted by a Co
biana, Ohio, foundry to transport white-hot castings machine shop, the tractor replacing men in this dange and uncongenial occupation.

CHANSUNG'S CONFESSION

By WILLIAM NEWTON BLAIR, D.D. Illustrations by THELMA GOOCH

CHAPTER XXII

OLD NE MAKES AN INVESTMENT

ALTHOUGH old Ne and Nyangsie had united in urging Chansung to go to Pyeng Yang, they missed him sorely. The adoption announced at the inn that first day had become the happiest fact in their lives. How they enjoyed Chansung's days in Su Nai! Childless for years, they gladly gave the strange, earnest-faced young wanderer a place in their home and lives. As for Chansung, his gratitude was so great that he never ceased his t repay the debt incurred. From the first onored old Ne with the title, orisen (hon- ather), and Nyangsie with the simpler, rer term, omanie (mother).

ne, too, had smiled on the home in Su he water from the spring became avail- over the little farm. The profitless bean let fields had been speedily transformed uable rice "paddies," and old Ne became hose most fortunate of men; not rich but k-how, enough to live on in peace and , for all of which he was grateful to provi- nd Chansung.

Chansung became a Christian, he at ote his friends in Su Nai all about his new ce, sending numerous tracts and copies ospel; but it is difficult to make the "mys- he Cross" plain in letters even to a friend. was politely interested, but wrote back for him, he was afraid he was too old to and the new doctrine.

sung would have gone to Su Nai at once osition as language teacher had not pre- Instead he tried to induce his foster visit Pyeng Yang, writing so many glow- rs about the wonderful sights of the city great church on the hill with its huge ll summoning multitudes of believers, l Ne finally decided to go and see the nd his boy again.

y for the journey was ready in the strong his new clothes almost finished when the k-coated cousin came.

Ne Sangho, of the blue silk coat, was a parts and ambition, who lived in a slate- house near the magistracy in Kai Chun. never troubled himself before to visit his atives over the pass in Su Nai, being too busy friends with magistrates and men of means ght help him in his various schemes for quick getting. But circumstances alter cases. He ested heavily with several others in a gold mine f Kai Chun. Of course there was gold,—un- f quantities; there always is, at least in the ng, but their limited funds were exhausted.

t old man Ne over at Su Nai a relative of asked one of the partners. "I hear he has ed of late. Why not interest him in this prop-"

," Sangho replied, "he is a relative of mine, I scarcely know him. He has always been as a beggar until the least few years. I have hat he is getting on a little better; but he anything to speak of."

haps not," said the first; "yet you can never t how much one of these old fellows has laid r situation is desperate, and I advise you to n."

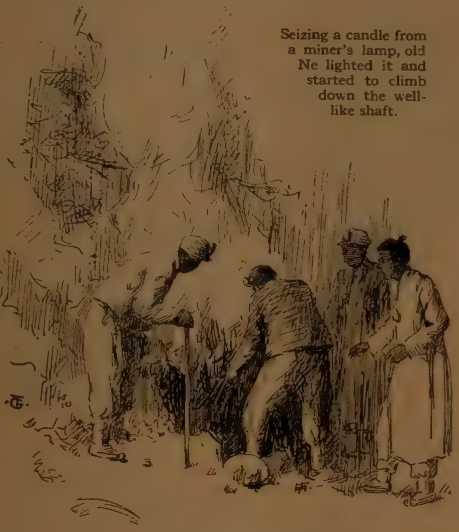
long after this, Ne was surprised to receive a fusive letter from the aforesaid cousin, asking is health and prosperity; also telling of a busi- p he was forced to make to Tuk Chun County purpose to call at Su Nai on his return.

d Ne wondered a little at this unexpected he saw no untoward purpose in it, and was in little flattered at the prospect of so important With true mountain courtesy, he set to o prepare the best possible taijup (entertain- for his guest.

ptly on the day named the visitor arrived in causing no small excitement among the villagers ame jingling along on his handsome donkey.

n Ne knew how to be pleasant when he wanted was interested in everything; asked questions he farm and the live stock and the ever wonder- ng till he quite won his hosts' hearts, and when uraged them to talk of Chansung and related ny good things he himself had heard of this onal young man, his conquest was complete. until late in the evening did he touch upon his fairs, then very modestly, remarking that his house was a very poor one, he hoped it not be long before he might have the opportunity to repay their hospitality in Kai Chun. They probably did not know; but he had been a very busy man; this explained his never visiting Su Nai before. He hoped, however, that the success of his present affairs would largely relieve him of the constant grind and that he might have more leisure to cultivate his friends than he had had before. Since they had shown such interest in him, he did not mind telling them of the fortunate investment he and a few friends had made in a very rich gold mine north of Kai Chun.

"I have had considerable experience in the gold mining business," he asserted, "and I have never seen a mine like this before. The ore is extra fine. Some of it is assaying sixty yen to the ton, and it grows better and better as we go down. We intend to develop it ourselves. Those Westerners from the big gold mines at Kun San are trying to buy us out. Last week word reached me in a roundabout way that they would give us two hundred thousand yen."



Seizing a candle from a miner's lamp, old Ne lighted it and started to climb down the well-like shaft.

Cousin Ne smiled deprecatingly, as if two hundred thousand yen was a very small matter to him. Old Ne's and Nyangsie's faces showed that they were properly impressed.

"By the way," Cousin Ne continued, "we are going to have a little feast over at the mine next week to celebrate the success of our enterprise, and I am going to insist that you come over and spend the day with us."

Old Ne hesitated. One doesn't refuse a feast easily in Chosen. He would really like to see the wonderful mine, too; but there was his preparation for the trip to Pyeng Yang.

"Thank you very much," he considered, "but I am afraid it will be difficult."

"Difficult? Not a bit! The mine is only thirty li from the pass, you know; just a good half day's journey from here. See here! I will send my donkey for you. There are always merchants traveling from Kai Chun to Tuk Chun, and it will be no trouble whatever."

Thus urged, old Ne consented. He was anxious to be off for Pyeng Yang; but the thought of traveling in state on that jingly donkey could not be resisted. Besides, his new clothes were not quite finished, and his absence for a day would make little difference.

This is how it came about that five days later old Ne found himself in such unusual circumstances. Cousin Ne had been as good as his word about sending the donkey, and the old man had had the ride of his life on the swift, high-spirited animal.

He found his host and several friends waiting for him at the mine, and under their united guidance he went over the property and deep down under ground, where several men were working with drills by the unsteady light of candles.

"Do you see this vein of quartz?" Cousin Ne indicated a certain place in the damp, glistening wall. "From here to here is all number one gold-bearing rock. You see we have only touched it. It gets bigger and better the farther we go. There's millions in this mine if there's a yen."

Old Ne noticed that so much water collected in the bottom that several men had to be kept busy carrying it out and asked;

"Won't the water trouble you more as you go down?"

"Oh, no!" his friends answered in chorus. "We will fix that all right when the pump comes."

Later at the feast, which was lavish, the talk was all of the mine and its fine prospects. Old Ne had never heard men talk in millions before, and he felt his own importance rise just to be in such company.

Wine was served in small dishes, and though old Ne rarely drank at home, he could hardly refuse the small amount offered. It was just enough, however, on top of his exciting day's experience, to upset his usually shrewd, level balance; to make the world seem over fair and all thing possible.

"And now," said Cousin Ne to his jovial companions, "how do you like my Tuk Chun cousin?"

"Good! Very good!" They shouted, and beamed upon old Ne with such evident friendliness that his eyes moistened. Surely he had never met such likable men before.

"I knew you would," continued the questioner, "and now I am going to make you a proposition. What do you say to letting my cousin in with us on this venture? I know we have decided not to let any one else in; but I have taken such a fancy to my cousin that I want him to share our fortune with us. Of course, if you object, I can let him have a part of my own toogum (stock)."

"No, no!" interrupted one of the friends; "we cannot allow that. How much stock would your cousin like to have?"

How much would he like to have? Old Ne had never thought of investing in a mine in his life; but a kindness seemed intended, so he answered cautiously;

"I have had no experience in this business. What is the price?"

"As for the price, our toogum will sell on the market for one hundred and fifty yen per too; but we weren't thinking of selling you shares at the regular price," Cousin Ne explained. "My proposition is that you come into the company as one of the partners, and we will let you have one hundred shares at a mere nominal price of five yen a share to make the transaction legal. Let's see! One hundred shares at one hundred and fifty yen each are worth fifteen thousand yen. A nice little sum, isn't it? But only a small part of what the shares will be worth when the mine is fully opened. All you have to do is to put down five hundred yen and you will be a rich man."

Old Ne was deeply interested; but not yet won.

"Think," cousin Ne continued, "what it would be to be rich. You could build a new house, and there's Chansung in Pyeng Yang. I know you would like to help him."

This really settled it; but old Ne made one more effort.

"Five hundred yen! I haven't nearly that much money in cash, and you know I have been saving up for the trip to Pyeng Yang."

"Oh, very well! You don't need to, of course, unless you want to; but you will never have another such a chance. It won't hurt to postpone the trip to Pyeng Yang a few months, and when your profits begin to come in you won't have to walk."

"I'll do it," said Ne, unable longer to resist the temptation of such amazing wealth. "I will pay half down now and the rest in two weeks."

This is why old Ne wrote Chansung that he had postponed his visit, hinting vaguely at important business connected with a gold-mining project that needed his presence.

Chansung read the letter with a sober face. He knew gold-mining was worse than risky business; but the investment had evidently been made without asking his advice. All he could do was to wait for fuller information.

CHAPTER XXIII

"GREATER LOVE HATH NO MAN THAN THIS"

OLD NE had to sell part of his farm to get the five hundred yen; but he did not hesitate. People who have the gold fever never do hesitate. His head was so full of visions of great wealth and what he would do with it that he even persuaded Nyangsie to believe in it too, though at first she was far from enthusiastic.

At the mine a small boom was evident. Old Ne's five hundred yen certainly greased the wheels while it lasted. The promoters were making a desperate effort to develop the mine so that it could be put on the market.

Old Ne spent much of his time on the ground, overseeing the preparation of timbers and the construction of outside buildings. The real mining he never understood, and it was left perforce to his partners.

All seemed to be going so well that old Ne was shocked one day to learn in a meeting of the partners that the funds of the company were exhausted and that the mine would have to be closed unless they could raise more money. It seemed that the partners

Continued on page 814

Announcing a

¶ You are accustomed to look upon a motor car bearing the name Reo as substantially standard rather than novel. ¶ In the long history of this com models have been few. ¶ For our policy has been to build, not something diff something better. ¶ The splendid reputation the Reo product enjoys is largely of that policy. ¶ Insofar as the science has advanced and Reo engineering has we believe you will find this a better Reo. ¶ You will find in this new m features ardently desired by many Reo distributors and a large percentage of Reo clientele. ¶ The motor is a six. ¶ Call it a "light six" if the term ple
¶ We maintain, however, that beyond a certain point, lightness is incompa longevity and Low Upkeep. ¶ Too many cars are light to the point of f

Reo Motor Ca

THE GOLD

Model—a "Six"

eo designed, the dimensions of this new Six guarantee that surplus power you have ed to expect in a Reo. ¶ Clean-cut in design, rugged in construction, it possesses he same time great flexibility and great "lugging" power. ¶ Outwardly it is ely different—but close examination will disclose a pleasing rearrangement of e distinctly Reo features without which you would not expect to find that rmance, that durability and economy that are Reo attributes. ¶ Body design is —of course. ¶ New bodies are not unusual. ¶ This new Reo Six will strike you as ularly beautiful and in excellent taste. ¶ Your Reo distributor may have his sample he time you read this. ¶ If so, ask him to treat you to a ride. ¶ Then you will experie the only real surprise the Reo engineers have prepared for you in this new Reo six.

sing, Michigan

OF VALUES"

OUR EDITORIAL PAGE

Korea Must Be Saved

ONE of the most urgent questions of the time and which thousands are asking themselves today is stated in this letter from Estherville, Iowa:

"I have read in the Christian Herald about the terrible campaign of persecution that the Japanese are now conducting in Korea. It seems hard to believe that such things can be permitted in this day and age of enlightenment and Christianity.

"Is there nothing that can be done? Cannot some campaign be started that will lead to quick results in putting an end to this terrible thing? A. M."

There is certainly much that can be done and some things that must be done at once. It is the duty of all the civilized peoples to protest against a continuance of the atrocities in Korea. It is the duty of Christians to pray that they may instantly cease, and not only to pray, but to work to the same end.

Japan is an ambitious and progressive nation. The Japanese are a forward-looking people. Between their nation and our own there has been a friendship that has lasted ever since the time when Commander Perry, with a U. S. squadron, visited that country in 1853, as a special envoy commissioned by President Fillmore and negotiated the first Treaty with Japan, which marked the opening of that country to foreign commerce. Our influence with Japan is greater than that of any other nation. Japan is progressive, and the present outbreak in Korea is a discordant note in her progressive policy. We believe that she can be convinced of the wisdom and justice of granting entire religious freedom to the people of Korea, permitting them to worship God in the way that they may choose and putting an end to all persecution.

If Japan can be made to realize that by taking such a step she would win the approval of the civilized nations, and especially of the United States, which ever since the foundation of our Government has guaranteed religious freedom to all our people, and that this policy has been one of the mightiest factors in American progress, her statesmen will have their eyes opened to the wisdom of granting religious toleration and protection to the Koreans. Such a step would be in line with the policies of the civilized nations and would be most cordially approved by the Allies.

This commends itself to us as the "way out" of the trouble in Korea, and we trust that America, either with or without the cooperation of other powers, will take the necessary steps to urge its adoption. Korea must be saved, and by earnest prayer and prompt action the Christians of America may accomplish this great triumph for civilization and humanity.

Progress of Christian Unity

CHRISTIAN Unity is still a dominant thought in the minds of a very large proportion of good people throughout the country. Every mail brings us communications on the subject. Many of the writers are impatient of the slow progress that has been made thus far. One of these friends, who seems to have been a pretty close observer of the surface indications of progress, writes us:

> "At the beginning of the movement practically all the denominations were mightily stirred by a general impulse to draw closer together. Indeed, Unity seemed to be almost a universal desire. Even the denominational leaders took up the movement with an enthusiasm that gave promise of big results. I see by the letters from Professor Richards, Rev. Dr. Herring and Bishop Hamilton, which I find in my Christian Herald of July 12, that it is still making progress, although somehow the impression has become fixed on my mind that there are obstacles in the way which the average man is not permitted to perceive. A year has passed since the effort toward Unity began. The aspect of the theological sky has changed in several quarters. Episcopalians and Baptists are, to say the least, lukewarm; Lutherans even indifferent. There no longer seems to be the popular ardor of the 'first love' of Unity, and one cannot escape the impression that other denominations may be similarly disposed to let the spiritual storm pass by, trusting that it may not be one that will pull them up from their ancient moorings after all."

It is quite premature to conclude that the Church, or any considerable part of it, is indifferent to the outcome. Far-reaching changes are in process in the moral, political, social and economic affairs of the entire globe, and it is impossible that these could develop as they are doing without affecting, in a very vital sense, the Church's influence and authority. We cannot agree with the writer of the letter quoted, that any one of the denominations is indifferent to the progress of Unity, or that any branch of the Church has decided on a "do nothing" policy in order to preserve its individuality and its material interests. We are not among those who believe that the Christian Church in America is wedded to the world. In those trying years just past, the whole Church has shown the true spirit of self-sacrifice, and in many ways has rendered such service as cannot be forgotten.

Church Unity is not a problem for America alone, but for every land where God is worshiped and the Gospel preached. It is everywhere recognized that the old order must give place to the new; the Church must keep abreast of the spiritual needs of the times. We have already referred on previous occasions to the progress of Church Unity abroad. In his book, entitled "Social Studies of the War," Dr. Elmer T. Clark, describing religious conditions in England, quotes the Countess of Warwick, in her arraignment of the Established Church, for its lack of moral courage at a critical period and its preference for the old platitudes. "The Established Church," she says, "deliberately dwelt in a world of its own imagining and never had the strength or will or purpose to tell home-truths to the comfortable and self-possessing classes.

One of the most interesting chapters in Dr. Clark's book is "The Challenge to the Church." He has discovered that a man may be a sincere Christian without sectarianism. He points out, first, that there is a widespread feeling that church divisions, being based mainly upon trivialities, rather than upon fundamentals, repel the average man; that "the divisions have long since lost the loyalty of the laity"; yet, withal he finds that real religion "is not suffering overmuch and Christianity is still supreme," although multitudes have been drawn away to sacrifice at the altars of strange doctrines. They must be won back, for their own sake and for that of the whole world. The reorganized and united Christian Church must take the people into her confidence, otherwise it will be impossible to avoid a conflict between an autocratic church and the democratic spirit now abroad in the world. Hence a new missionary message is demanded—a message for the real needs of the times.

Turkey As a Trouble-Maker

WHILE the United States is not disposed to shrink from taking up its share of the work of world reconstruction, there are certain propositions in that connection which will hardly be viewed with favor. Since the close of the war, Turkey has been loud in its declarations of friendship for the Allies. There has been a very definite suggestion that the United States would be the fitting power to assume the duties of mandatory in the realm of the Turk, and at the same time it has been indicated that Constantinople may be left in Turkish hands. There is little probability of such a plan finding favor here. Turkey has long been a bone of contention in Europe from which, for the sake of all concerned, she should have been expelled long ago. Tolerance for the Turk in the face of a long record of infamy and oppression was the crowning blunder of Great Britain and France for many years, and one which Gladstone deeply regretted. Now that the opportunity has come on legitimate grounds to send the Turk, bag and baggage, across the Straits, the Peace Conference should earn the gratitude of the civilized nations by removing the dark infidel blot from Europe altogether.

With regard to Armenia, which has been our protégé for a score of years and more, we can have only the warmest feelings of sympathy. Our missionary field there is an extensive one, and we have large interests which should be safeguarded. But even there, while we have been in full sympathy with the Armenian people in their long and costly struggle for freedom, it is not essential that we should become officially entangled with what is clearly a duty devolving upon the European Powers.

In whatever direction duty lies it will be performed; but a mandate would not seem to be indispensable, if Turkey were rendered permanently incapable of becoming an element of disturbance, not only in Europe, but in the Near East. Unless this is done, and done thoroughly, future complications are not improbable which may seriously affect the value of the Allied conquest of Palestine and Syria.

The President's Welcome

VERY hearty and sincere was the welcome the country extended to the President on his return from his European labors. He has accomplished much of which the nation can well be appreciative. For our people, he has won the confidence and enthusiastic good-will of the peoples of the older continent by his eloquent advocacy of whatever is just and right, and by his broad and generous Americanism. He has probably done more than any other man living to reveal to the world the true spirit and character of America.

Like all other public men, he has been crit but President Wilson is enough of a philosop take criticisms kindly as they come, and to mee squarely at the right time. There is little dou in his proposed speaking tour in support of the and the League of Nations, he will go very far t effacing misconceptions that have arisen duri absence, and in justifying his attitude as the sentative of the Nation, in every essential act t has done.

His ardent temperament and the kindly nat the man bubbled out in his address at Carnegie the first speech he made after reaching a home He had been the "most homesick man in the A. E and was glad to be back again. Our boys ' there" always reminded him of home; they w those foreign streets "as if they knew that the longed wherever freemen lived." His homesic was relieved at those times when he lifted his eyes the immediate task to the distant horizon. The saw the vision that has upheld him. "We aware that all the peoples of the earth had t their faces towards us as those who were the fri of freedom and of right, and we knew we were u bonds to do the large thing and the right thing. am afraid some people do not understand that vi They do not see it; they have looked too much the ground." Being asked "Will America come in help?" he replied: "Of course, America will come in help! She will not destroy any high hope that been formed of her. Least of all, will she in this of new-born liberty, fail to extend her hand of as ance to those who have been made free."

He comes back to us to face the great task that still to be performed—the task of making the p one which will save the world from unneces bloodshed. In this task he invites the cooperatio all our people, both for humanity's sake and that may retain our high place among the nations.

The Power of Consecrated Youth

WHAT shall we do with these boys who are c ing back from overseas and who are ask the church to lead them in the service Christ? They are little interested in our old formul but they have a new ideal of self-sacrifice, a new m sure of devotion, a new, an almost impetuous des to spend themselves in services of helpfulness. I ligion to them has meaning only when it is doi "something for somebody." Some churches ha prepared to answer this demand for religious opp tunity by widening their work. City churches a offering mission classes to these boys; they are sendi them out on the streets to present the Gospel messa to the crowds that gather round them; they are sen ing them out on neighborhood surveys to find opp tunities for good work, needs to be filled, wants to supplied; they are making these boys officers in Su day school and in their Young People's Societies.

And the churches that are thus answering the que tion are vibrant with new life, quickened spiritually never before. The church may confidently call the service men to duty, and may be assured that i greatest work of former years can be doubled.

We were talking the other day to a leader in Sunda school work. He saw the need of having Christi tasks ready, that the boys might be set at once t work. He sensed the power of their consecrat youth, but he felt that we should be careful of ou adulation and not immodest in our praise. He sa the spiritual purpose in the heart of a young m might be dulled by too much heroics, that most o them were modest fellows who preferred to go quietl to work for the Lord. He believed the best pla would be to survey the field, organize it and say t the soldier lad back home and ready to serve, "He is a place for you; your training fits you for it, w know you can do it." Then he would see that every collateral assistance possible was rendered, to brin early promise of success and to hold enthusiasm high.

The Church faces the opportunity of the centuries. The war has given her new hands, new hearts, a new emphasis on the old message, a new reason for changing her divided garments for the seamless robe, a new demand for wider service. The activities of the Church will no longer be confined within its building; which will become a center from which streams of human interest and spiritual power will radiate to every corner of the parish.

How shall we meet this opportunity? How shall we make these youths the churchmen of tomorrow? In an early issue we will give some letters which answer this question at least in part. It is a question we must answer.

The End of a Perfect Day

IN your ordinary daily round of activity you feel as though you were in something like a cage. It is the special virtue of Paramount-Artcraft Pictures that they free you from this cage.

The adventurous heart of mankind everywhere presses against the bars of monotony for larger flights into the blue.

Can any Corporation anywhere set before itself a grander and more sublimely serviceable ideal than this repeated liberation of humanity's heart?

When the show is over—the last touch of Paramount-Artcraft magic vanished—you stroll away richly content. A fitting end for a perfect day.

Paramount-Artcraft Motion Pictures

These two trade-marks are the sure way of identifying Paramount-Artcraft Pictures—and the theatres that show them.

FAMOUS PLAYERS-LASKY CORPORATION
ADOLPH ZUKOR Pres. JESSE L. LASKY Vice Pres. CECIL B. DE MILLE Director General
NEW YORK

Paramount-Artcraft Stars
Latest Productions

Listed alphabetically, released up to July 31st. Save the list! And see the pictures!

Paramount

John Barrymore in "The Test of Honor"
Billie Burke in "Good Gracious Annabelle" Marguerite Clark in "Girls"
Ethel Clayton in "The Sporting Chance"
Dorothy Gish in "Nugget Nell"
Lila Lee in "Rose of the River"
"Oh! You Women" A John Emerson-Anita Loos Production
Vivian Martin in "Louisiana"
Shirley Mason in "The Final Close-up"
Wallace Reid in "The Love Burglar" Bryant Washburn in "A Very Good Young Man"

Paramount-Thomas H. Ince

Enid Bennett in "The Haunted Bedroom"
Dorothy Dalton in "Other Men's Wives"
Charles Ray in "Hay Foot, Straw Foot"

Paramount-Artcraft Specials

"Little Women" (from Louisa M. Alcott's famous book) A William A. Brady Production Maurice Tourneur's Production "Sporting Life"
"The Silver King" starring William Faversham
"False Faces" A Thomas H. Ince Production
"The Firing Line" starring Irene Castle
"The Woman Thou Gavest Me" Hugh Ford's Production of Hall Caine's Novel
"The Career of Katherine Bush" starring Catherine Calvert
"Secret Service" starring Robert Warwick Maurice Tourneur's Production "The White Heather"
"The Dark Star." A Cosmopolitan Production

Artcraft

Cecil B. deMille's Production "For Better, For Worse"
Douglas Fairbanks in "The Knickerbocker Buckaroo"
Elsie Ferguson in "The Avalanche"
D. W. Griffith's Production "True Heart Susie"
Wm. S. Hart in "Wagon Tracks"
Mary Pickford in "Captain Kidd, Jr."
Fred Stone in "Johnny Get Your Gun"

---

*Supervision of Thomas H. Ince

GHOSTS OF HAPPINESS

By
MARGARET E. SAN

THE Man came slowly up the lane that led to the white cottage. His eyes held a strange furtiveness—his feet faltered as if he half feared something, and the hands, hanging limply at his sides, twitched nervously. When a bird called, with a sudden crooning note, from one of the low-hanging trees he seemed almost ready to turn back.

There was nothing, apparently, in the appearance of the white cottage to inspire fear. It was a pleasant enough little place with a tangled garden growing up to its very doors. For all its obvious air of emptiness it did not show a glaring neglect—only the flowers, blooming too riotously among tall grasses, proclaimed that it was a deserted house. And the narrow walk, bordered with oyster shells, was green with weeds.

The Man went stumblingly up the walk and tried the front door with a shaking hand. It was locked. After a moment's hesitation he started through the tangled garden, toward the back door. Twenty years ago it was that he had crept, just as stealthily, around the corner of the house—twenty years ago, with never a backward look, he had gone, shadow-like, down the lane. Death and despair had gone with him.

He reached the back of the house and fumbled at the knob of what had been a screen door with a fearful hand. It pulled out and the inner door swung inward with a creak of rusty hinges. A shaft of sunlight fell across the floor of the room that lay in front of him. It was a kitchen.

The Man stood in the doorway, panting as a runner pants at the end of a race. With a curious tensity of expression he surveyed the room which in twenty years, had not changed much. The sunlight rested with an almost gay, tinsel glory on a tin pail that stood on a bench—it had once been painted white—directly in front of him. The Man started as he noticed that it was half full of water. In his surprise he spoke aloud.

"Someone's livin' here!" he exclaimed, and flinched at the harsh sound of his own voice.

As if in answer to his abrupt sentence steps sounded from the room on the other side of the kitchen, and a connecting door opened with a sudden scraping sound. A woman stepped across the threshold and into the patch of sunlight—a middle-aged woman with her sleeves rolled up and a muslin cap drawn low on her forehead. She spoke.

"Did th' real estate man send yer?" she questioned. "He said there wouldn't be no one up—not till afternoon."

The man answered hoarsely.

"No, nobody sent me," he said, "I was just walkin' through, an' I stopped a minute to rest—" his voice dwindled off.

The woman sat down on a long, low bench that had once been painted white. She dangled a dust cloth in her hand.

"I'm cleanin' up," she told the man, "an' I'm findin' some dirt, I can tell you! They say as no one's lived here for nearly twenty years, an' I can well believe it. It would've gone for another twenty years, I reckon, if they hadn't decided to sell."

"Oh," the Man's nervous hands were clenching and unclenching, "so they're going to sell?"

"Yes—" the woman's voice was excited, "to someone from the city—someone as thinks the cottage is picturesk! I'd not live in it myself. I claim that there is ghosts here."

The Man had moved into the room. Gingerly he seated himself on the other end of the once white bench.

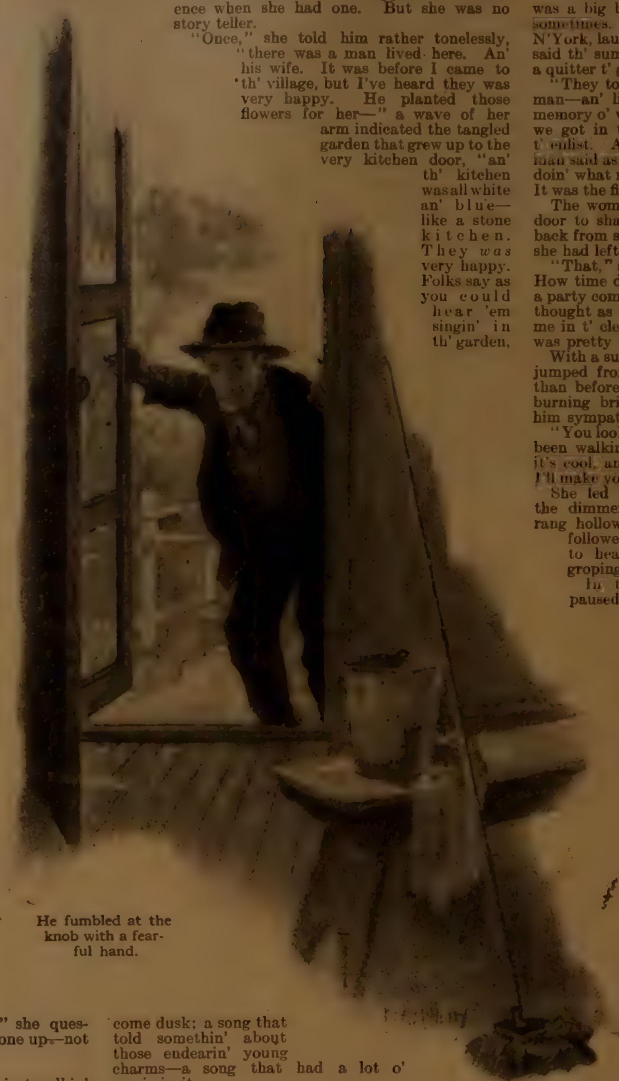
"Ghosts?" he questioned in a voice that was almost steady.

The woman nodded emphatically. She was a talkative soul, was the woman.

"Yes—ghosts," she repeated; "not th' kind of ghosts that you'd see, exactly—nor yet th' kind you'd read about. But—" quite without knowing it the woman waxed poetic, "there are other kinds of ghosts—th' ghosts o' happiness, an' o' love."

The Man was looking at the blank wall of the kitchen—looking with the eyes of one who sees visions.

"Yes?" he prompted.



He fumbled at the knob with a fearful hand.

The woman knew an appreciative audience when she had one. But she was no story teller.

"Once," she told him rather tonelessly, "there was a man lived here. An' his wife. It was before I came to th' village, but I've heard they was very happy. He planted those flowers for her—" a wave of her arm indicated the tangled garden that grew up to the very kitchen door, "an' th' kitchen was all white an' blue—like a stone kitchen. They was very happy. Folks say as you could hear 'em singin' in th' garden, come dusk; a song that told somethin' about those endearin' young charms—a song that had a lot o' music in it.

"They was very happy. . . . An'—then th' baby came. . . . An' she died. He was sittin' out in th' garden, with th' flowers, when th' doctor came down from her room an' told him. An' they say, at first, that he wouldn't believe it. An' then they say that he looked at th' doctor, somethin' awful, an' screamed out—'Leave me—alone!' An' th' doctor left him—He didn't dare t' stay. . . . An' when somebody came out, half an hour later, to say somethin' comfortin' he was gone. An' no one never seen him again."

The woman paused and regarded the garden musingly. The Man did not speak. After a moment the woman went on—

"Some say as he killed himself," the woman said slowly. "There was a poet in th' village as said it was a tribute to a great love. I dunno. It was kinder rough on th' baby, bein' left that way, I thought."

Of a sudden The Man was staring at the woman. His voice held a queer cracked note as he spoke—

"The baby—lived?" he questioned.

"An' a fine boy, too!" the woman acquiesced. She rambled on, "a fine boy. Some relatives took him. They was nice to him, I guess, but it wasn't like a family. In time he grew big enough t' know things an' then they told him about his mother an' his father. How they'd loved each other, an' all. An' how they'd used to sing, at nights, in th' garden. An' he'd often run away, when supper was through, after he heard that. An' he'd come to th' garden, an' wait. When folks asked him why he was waitin' he'd say that he expected his daddy back some day.

"He never give up th' idea—never. Even was a big boy. Th' other fellers made fu sometimes. An' once a summer young m N'York, laughed about it, 'I don't call it a gr said th' summer young man, 'I'd say yer fa a quitter t' go.'

"They told me how he fought that summ man—an' licked him good, too. But I t memory o' what he'd said must 've stuck. F we got in th' war he was th' first from th t' enlist. An' he said t' th' recruitin' man, man said as how he was pretty young t' go—'I doin' what my father'd a-done! He's dead y' It was the first time he'd admitted it!"

The woman rose from the bench and went door to shake out the dust cloth. When sh back from shaking it The Man was still sittin she had left him.

"That," she said rather softly, "was two ye How time does fly, anyway! An' so last wee a party come an' wanted t' buy th' house his r thought as they might as well sell it. An' th me in t' clean. I've been cleanin' ever since— was pretty dirty."

With a sudden almost fierce movement the m jumped from the bench. His face seemed than before, a bit more drawn. But his eye burning bright in his head. The woman re him sympathetically.

"You look right done out," she said; "p'raps been walkin' too far. Come inter th' parlor it's cool, an' rest. An' when I get th' dustin' I'll make you somethin' ter drink—an' eat."

She led the way through the dim little h the dimmer little parlor. Her middle-aged rang hollowly on the uncarpeted floors. The followed her mechanically. He did not to heard—he was like a blind man gro groping . . .

In the doorway of the parlor the w paused. The face that she turned to The showed a vague embarrassment embarrassment of the unsentime prosaic person who had succumb a half-romantic impulse.

"Of course," she said pointin the tightly shuttered window, wasn't anything to me. But house was his, an' somehow it see sort o' full o' him. An' so wh come t' clean I brought this an' h it. I'm an old fool, I suppose, they can't nobody see it from side——"

She stopped speaking suddenly the man, with empty arms stretched stumbled forward. pointing hand, wavered, dropped.

Pinned neatly to the drawn sh hung a cheap little service flag w one gold star in the center of it.

◆

Wrens and Sparrow

I HAVE often read that the Engli sparrow drives away other a more desirable birds; but I know one occasion when it was the sparro that had to retire, and it was a ti little wren that did the job.

There was a box for the bluebirds on a tree in o yard, also one for the wrens on the house; the blu birds had only been around a short time, and we preparing to take up housekeeping, when alon came the sparrows and tormented them till the gave it up.

When the wrens came the sparrows had started t build their nest in that box; now the first thing tha Mr. Wren did was to covet that box, and he mad known his disapproval of the sparrows in no uncer tain way, flying about, chattering and scolding at great rate.

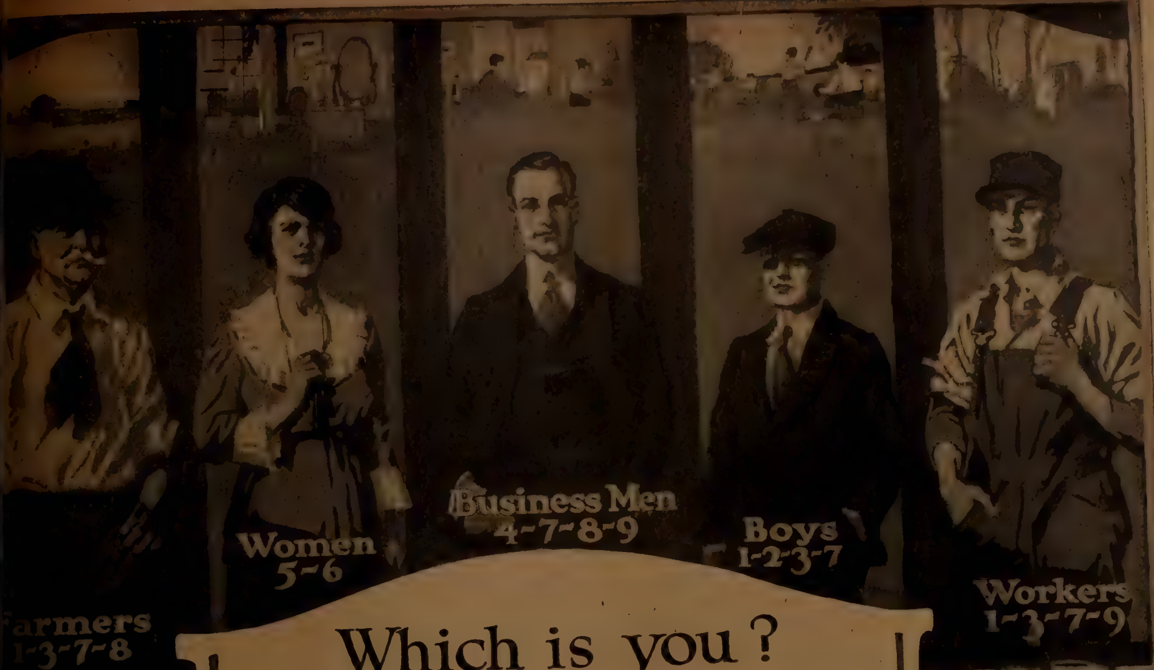
The sparrows carried in their nesting material in the morning, and usually disappeared some time during the afternoon; this was Mr. Wren's opportunity and he was not slow to avail himself of it.

Every afternoon, after the sparrows had gone, he started to clean out what they had carried in; and how he did work, out and in, out and in, like a flash, carrying out feathers, straw, etc.! He had no time for singing, just worked with all the energy he had.

This performance went on for several days. Every afternoon Mr. Wren was to be seen at his job, with the result that the sparrows fianlly gave it up and went off. And how Mr. Wren did rejoice over his victory! He would go into the box, then come out, and mount up on to the top of it, and sing as if his little throat would burst.

He built his nest in his own box, but kept watch over that one, all summer, and kept away all intruders.

A BIRD LOVER.



Which is you?

PICK the character which most nearly represents you. Then note the numbers beneath the picture, match them with the corresponding numbers under the watches, and you have a choice of time-pieces best suited to your needs.

From the sturdy Yankee to the handsome 7-jeweled Reliance, "There's an Ingersoll for everyone!" The Radiolite watches—the hands and numerals of which are coated with a substance containing real radium – tell time in the dark.

But while you are admiring the good looks of Ingersoll watches and recalling stories of their sturdiness, remember this: Ingersoll watches are built to keep accurate time.

The system of inspections and tests assures their time-keeping quality. In the Reliance model, for instance, there are 127 separate inspections before the movement is completely assembled. The assembled movement is tested in six positions. A final five-to-ten day test of finished watches is made before they are sent out to dealers.

Yet Ingersolls are the low priced watches. You can buy an Ingersoll for as low as $1.75 in these days when a dollar will buy only half of what it previously would buy in other necessities of life

Somewhere on this page there's the watch you need. The dealer will show it to you if you ask him. Look for the store with an Ingersoll display. Many stores will have a display like this ad in colors in their window.

ROBT. H. INGERSOLL & BRO., 315 Fourth Ave., New York City

Also Chicago, San Francisco, Montreal, Buenos Aires, Shanghai   Ingersoll Watch Co., Ltd., London

Prices include the tax

Ingersoll

Illustrations ⅝ actual size

① Yankee . $1.75
Canadian Mapleleaf $2.00

② Junior . $3.50
In Canada $4.00

⑨ Reliance · $9.00
Gold Filled Case (7 jewels)
In Canada $9 00

⑧ Reliance - $6.00
Nickel Screw Case (7 jewels)
In Canada $6.00

③ Radiolite $3.00
In Canada $3.00

④ Eclipse Radiolite $3.75
In Canada $4.25

⑤ 2-in-1 Radiolite $3.25
In Canada $3.25

⑥ Midget Radiolite $4.50
In Canada $5.00

⑦ Waterbury Radiolite
(4 jewels) $5.25   In Canada $5.50

The Review of Reviews

For August Reviews Dr. Ferdinand C. Iglehart's new book.*

THE books about Theodore Roosevelt begin to make their appearance, one after another, and within a year or two the number of them will be considerable. It is understood that we are soon to have Mr. Bishop's authorized biography, based largely upon Roosevelt letters and papers. There will be essays, estimates and tributes from many sources. Meanwhile there will also be popular volumes, some of them mere compilations made out of newspaper clippings, and others genuine books written out of a good deal of knowledge and from the standpoint of the particular author.

One of these now appearing entitled "Theodore Roosevelt, The Man as I Knew Him," has been written by the Rev. Dr. Ferdinand C. Iglehart and is a book that will hold its place just as some of the books about Lincoln have survived as written by neighbors or associates who knew him intimately. Dr. Iglehart—who has had a long career as one of the most eloquent of the Methodist preachers and as one of the leaders in the temperance movement—has always had a talent for politics, and through the whole of Roosevelt's career the older man was a profound admirer of the younger. Through a great part of that career the preacher was the warm and devoted friend of the politician and statesman.

Dr. Iglehart's biography of Roosevelt is intensely personal. It is the kind of book that will be read with sympathy and pleasure by old and young in many a modest home. The book will be a family treasure for one reason above all others, namely, that its hero-worship is genuine from beginning to end. It does not try to be a critical estimate of the Rooseveltian period in American politics, nor a philosophic study of Roosevelt's personality. It begins by giving Roosevelt a sure rank with Washington and Lincoln, and then proceeds to tell the story of his boyhood, his youth, and his manhood, in a very readable, unsophisticated fashion that does credit not only to the robust American manhood of the subject, but also to that of the nature-loving, humane and large-spirited author.

The chapters in Mr. Roosevelt's early official life are here restated with delightful freshness, and with many touches of new material in the way of anecdotes and illustrative sidelights. As a very skilful public speaker, accustomed to hold popular audiences, Dr. Iglehart understands the use of anecdotes and the personal appeal. Knowing Colonel Roosevelt well, he had many conversations with him at different times, as had many other friends of the Colonel. But most of those friends would not now be able to write out a statement of such conversations, giving the Colonel's own vernacular. Dr. Iglehart perhaps made notes at the time. However that may be, he manages to reproduce a great many conversations which are excellent reading and which are positive additions to the stock of material which the public will be glad to possess. Dr. Iglehart is able to tell us more than most of the Colonel's friends knew in answer to questions regarding religious views and personal characteristics. He has several chapters dealing with such matters.

The reader will regard it as not less appropriate than convenient that Dr. Iglehart has found space to give us some of the memorial tributes that were called out soon after Colonel Roosevelt's death. He has included that of Archdeacon Carnegie in Westminster Abbey, that of Mr. Chauncey Depew, a fine one by Bishop Luther B. Wilson of the Methodist Church, and at greatest length the superb oration of Henry Cabot Lodge in the United States Senate. The address of Charles E. Hughes is also given at length, with those of Chairman Will H. Hays and Gifford Pinchot. Dr. Lyman Abbott's tribute in the Outlook is reprinted, as are estimates by Gen. Leonard Wood, Secretary Lane, and Chancellor James R. Day. Gen. Goethals contributes an original chapter about Mr. Roosevelt's relation to the Panama Canal, and Dr. Albert Shaw has written a chapter at Dr. Iglehart's request on Mr. Roosevelt's characteristics in the office of the Presidency.

In one or two concluding chapters, Dr. Iglehart compares some of the great achievements of Roosevelt with the labors of Hercules. Thus the book is not merely a labor of love and appreciation, but it is an unusual book in its range of fresh information. It will be welcome in that it sustains so fully the best of the Roosevelt traditions. The nation likes to believe in its leaders; and the spirit of hero-worship is still eager in its quests. Americans like to believe that Roosevelt was highly worthy of affection and honor; and Dr. Iglehart's book will do much to convince the next generation as well as to satisfy contemporaries.

Theodore Roosevelt, The Man as I Knew Him. 1 vol., 12 mo, illustrated, cloth binding, 400 pages, is sent postpaid for $1.50 a copy by the publishers, The Christian Herald, Bible House, New York

CHRISTIAN WORSHIP

International Sunday School Lesson for August 3. Matt. 6:5, 6; John 4:1- 19-24; Heb. 10:19-25; Rev. 7:9-12.

The Nature and Value of True Worship

By Rev. George D. Allison, D.D.

EVERYWHERE, from the earliest times until now, men have sought to worship their Creator. Archeology finds its choicest relics having to do with shrines and altars, and its primitive writings, prayers and hymns. Before there were buildings for worship, "The groves were God's first temples."

But the most inspiring development of the universal spirit of worship is found in the Old Testament account of the history and religion of the ancient Hebrews, who had a positive genius for the spiritual such as has probably never since been equaled. It was they of all earth's tribes who were chosen of God to receive his supreme revelations of himself. They established and defended the monotheistic interpretation of religion at a time when the cultured Greeks and Romans worshiped a host of gods and goddesses. Under such teachers as Isaiah they came to appreciate the holiness of Jehovah, with Hosea they learned his loving kindness and forgiving mercy, with the Psalmists his attentive care for our human needs and longings. What a glorious background primitive Christianity had after all in the riches of the Old Testament Scriptures.

In Micah 6:6-8 there is the memorable summary of the divine requirement of man: "to do justly and to love mercy and to walk humbly with thy God." The third of these constitutes worship, and is not to be omitted.

Jesus' Principles

The spirit of true worship has always been handicapped by petty qualifications and by disputes as to place and time and manner. Jesus cut through all these to the essence of worship which he found in the fact that the Father seeks communion and trust from his child and the wise man seeks the fellowship and guidance of his Heavenly Father. In our lesson from the Story of the Woman of Samaria it is clear that she thought to divert Jesus' attention from her sins and folly by a theological discussion concerning the proper place of Jehovah-worship, whether at Gerizim or at Jerusalem. But he replied that the time had come when the old restrictions were no longer applicable—spirituality and sincerity alone counted.

Because of his sincerity and his freedom from superstition the Master could find communion on the mountain top as Moses did; or in the little Galilean synagogue with its simple readings and simpler comment, or within the stately Temple at Jerusalem with all its elaborate ceremonial and wonderful choral singing. There are many who have caught the point of view of Jesus who today feel as he did: they worship in the inner chamber or at the family table, they attend the gospel services at the little country church or neighborhood prayer-meeting, or they sit comfortably in the stately city church with its marvelous architecture and sonorous organ music, and in each of these places they find what their souls need, the reassuring love of God and the voice of the Spirit speaking to their inmost wills.

The Value of Public Worship

Thus we see plainly today that Jesus decided once for all that the place of worship is not the essential thing, it is the spirit of the individual that makes or mars the communion with the Father. The ugly barns in which the early Dissenters in England held their services were temples whence issued a new impulse of reality and devotion into the life of our times. This was not because of their very ugliness but because of the fervor of the spirit and devotion to truth which characterized the worshipers. We are right in beautifying our churches in every way, for the surroundings can be made very helpful to the spirit of praise and prayer, but we well know that the physical equipment may be perfect yet the church ineffectual in God's sight.

There are some who underestimate the value of public worship. It is a fact that most people do get more real inspiration and uplift out of the service, in church, on a Sunday morning, than they could ever get from the most earnest attempts at private prayer. Even those who are more happy in their secret devotions gain a peculiar blessing from corporate worship with the visible church of Christ. As he promised where "two or three" are gathered together he manifests himself in special power and helpfulness. The accustomed place predisposes the worshiper to a receptive attitude, the surroundings are congenial and free from distractions, there is an order of worship planned to lead the spirit on into the divine presence, the reading of the Word and the "psalms and hymns and spiritual songs" unite the congregation and mellow hearts for the sermon, which should be, and usually is a message from God to his children. All that is done from the time of quiet entrance into the sacred building until o should minister to worship.
"Order of Service" of a certai
one reads instead of "Collect
"Offering" these words—"Wo God with our gifts." Thus t of worship can pervade every of the hour devoted to the se
God and His will.

In our reading from Hebre writer emphasizes the value of attendance upon social worshi are apt to think of those first Ch as more loyal and enthusiasti ourselves, yet there are abunda dences as here of their making mistakes to those made today.
many, many Christians have lo hope in the Lord by "forsaki assembling of themselves tog Oliver Wendell Holmes said of c going: "I find there is in the co my heart a little plant called rev which wants to be watered o week." This fragrant flower has ered from neglect in innumerable
To attend public worship is to cul it and to enjoy its fruits in due s

In Jesus' Name

Our Master is to us all a patter guide in all things, nowhere more than in the quest for God. "M teach us to pray" was the petiti his disciples long ago. We make i today—"Lord, show us the sec
worship, that we may go to Go Father as simply, as directly, as ingly, as thou didst in Galilee long Prayer in Jesus' Name does not m mean a use of words, but a hab mind, a likeness to himself that w sire with all our hearts. Humble dence in God is its watchword: " Father knoweth, Your Father see such, How much more shall Father in Heaven give good gift them that ask him."

The true worshipers are the ele earth. They have a sure refug time of storm, a present help in tro Theirs is the deepest satisfaction of soul which cannot rest content less than communion with the Infi Their joys are multiplied and add sorrow. At times they stand on Mount of Transfiguration with t Saviour, and the glory of the Lord with them as they tread the daily p of duty in the valley.

What better thing could we give our boys and girls than this, that t might have understanding and kn Jehovah who seeketh justice, lov kindness and righteousness in the ear
To know Him aright is Life Eternal

OUR MAIL-BAG

NOTICE

THE editors of the Christian Herald will be glad to answer any question addressed to the Mail-Bag provided it be of general interest and not merely personal. No attention will be paid to anonymous letters nor to those written with lead pencil.

Questions and Answers

FRIEND, Mechanicsville, N. Y. 1. Your minister was absolutely correct in saying that being a Christian was a habit. It is a very good habit. A habit is a mode of procedure which we follow without definite thought. Walking is a habit, and with some, talking is also a habit. When first converted, we have to take definite thought for every step of the Christian life. When you come to act as a Christian by force of accumulated tendency, living as a Christian has become a habit. But if the Christian life is merely a habit, it is not complete. The Christian must be ever ready to enter some new avenue of service, to step aside from the ordinary course of life at the cry of distress or for the salvation of some soul. 2. The Kaiser was a member of the German State Church, which was Lutheran in theology.

E. B. S., Zanesville, Ohio. While the Prohibition Party has upheld the banner for no license and temperance from the beginning of the Prohibition Movement until the present, it has by no means included in its ranks all prohibitionists. Many of those who believed in Prohibition felt convinced that it could be sooner realized through the strong party to which they belonged than through a third party. Bryan was a Prohibition Democrat. He tried to place the party on record for Prohibition, and finally succeeded at the convention in 1916.

Reader, Florida. "Pay that thou owest" is a good old Scriptural injunction. It means that we should pay our honest debts when we have the money. If we have the money and do not pay them, we are not following the Bible advice. To devote money to the Lord which rightly belongs to our creditors is unsound both in principle and practice. It would not be our own gift, but a gift made from that which rightly belongs to others. An exception might be made in the case of a person who pays a portion of his debts satisfactorily to a creditor, the latter being willing to wait; but this should be a case in which a clear understanding had first been established.

E. L. H., South Rehoboth, Mass. The Jews of today in the United States observe the Passover as nearly as possible in accordance with the Scriptural command. The orthodox keep the feast for eight days, closing business on the first two and last two of t eight days, eating unleavened bread and stricting their diet in other ways, the dis being guarded from contact with leaven. T reformed Jews celebrate only seven da keeping the first and seventh as special f days. Special services are held at the syn gogues by both organizations on the spec fast days. Freedom and its obligation is t keynote of the celebration, which comme rates the freeing of the Israelites from Egy tian tyranny. Unleavened bread is characte ized as the "bread of affliction," bein unleavened because of the enforced hast departure from Egypt.

M. S., California, Pa. For informatio concerning the Camp Fire Girls, write t
Camp Fire Girls' Headquarters, 31 Eas Seventeenth Street, New York City.

J. A., New Castle, Pa. The cost of support ing one child one year in the Fukien Industria Homes, China, is $25.

O. W. S., La Grange, Wyo. There are many different views regarding the methods of Church Union, but we have seen few that question its advisability. You seem to have overlooked the fact that Christ himself foreshadowed the ultimate union of all the Christian forces in his name, as one flock and one Shepherd.

T e Widened Program of the Church commission on the Church and cial Service of the Federal uncil of Churches of Christ rica, following the convention eland, made a report on the and Social Reconstruction, in t sees the reorganized Church ing to a reorganized community. he whole social order in chaos, mission sees in the Church the ce capable of bringing order out sion. The churches are pictured izing as never before that the m of God is as comprehensive an life with all its interests and that the whole world is the sub- redemption, and that the ethical les of the Gospels are to be ap- industry and to the relations of If social reconstruction is to y peaceful methods instead of by truggle, violence and revolution, port declares that the supreme ngs of Christ's love and brother- must express themselves in our racy in the cooperation of every for the good of each and all. The holds that the hope of the world he cooperation of individuals and and the final elimination of in the brotherhood of Christian y, and that to build up this cooper- should be the supreme endeavor churches.

ognizing that conspiracy and vio- must be restrained by the forces of d order, the report declares that y the rights of freedom of speech eaceable assembly must be pro- . It recommends as a remedy for rial unrest the vindication of racy in the government of indus- o that the employed will share the employer the direction of common enterprise, recognizing ll that the community is a third er.

rough the democratic participation or in management the commission he possibility of a hearty cooper- of all engaged in industry, which mean a new era of good will. It es that wages must be high enough intain a standard of living worthy sponsible free citizenship and de- acy.

uching upon the unemployed, the declares that any attempt to meet roblem of unemployment must in- the cooperation of a nation-wide oyment service, the reorganization asonal trades to remove as far ossible their seasonal nature, a y of public works development and settlement capable of abolishing ployment and unemployment as- nce sufficient to prevent want with- ncouraging idleness.

plea is also made for vocational ing as a part of the permanent ed- ional policy of the nation. The s of women to equality are declared fundamental to democracy, and commission pleads for adequate guards to prevent the exploitation omen in industry. Along with other lopments of democracy the report ds for full justice to the negro. ecially should the act of lynching condemned by public opinion and ished by vigorous measures and alties.

earnest plea is made for the rch to take a large forward step in ericanization, in providing English uction for foreigners, and in pro- ing American standards of life and king.

he report declares that a new social ality is developing; that there is a public opinion in favor of the trol of venereal diseases. The rch is urged to cooperate in munity efforts to abolish segrega- vice districts, at the same time g its utmost influence to preserve integrity of the home. The churches urged to provide abundant and wholesome opportunities for social relations.

Recognizing the passing of the saloon under prohibition as an accomplished fact, and recognizing also its place as a community center, the report recommends to the churches that they seek to provide an equivalent of seven-days-a-week community service with helpful religious education and social activity. The report recognizes also that the home is the best substitute for the saloon.

The Church is declared the greatest social force in the nation, and this is visualized by statistics showing that there are 135,000 ministers, priests and rabbis with church congregations in the United States numbering 42,000,000 communicants, the Protestant churches alone having 115,000 ministers with 25,000,000 communicants, an influential religious press, a great system of educational institutions, and large numbers of social agencies, such as hospitals and child-caring foundations. It recommends that the ministry of the Church be made a community ministry, suggesting as one of the methods that the Sunday evening service be made a forum for discussion as well as a service for worship.

The pastor as the leader of disciplined forces is declared to have a double obligation to public service, and every matter of economic and social interest is declared of vital concern to the Church. The Church, the people and pastors are urged to take a sympathetic interest in the community center movement to keep it out of control of politicians, under the control of public-spirited citizens, and to avoid needless duplications of effort.

One of the important tasks for the next ten years is said to be the bringing of the Church into closer relations with the wage-earners. The Church is urged to ally itself with the workers to help them achieve the great objects for which labor is struggling, such as living wages, reasonable hours, safe conditions of labor, equal opportunities for women, a fair share in management and ownership, and the abolishing of child labor.

The report declares that, now that the war is over, the Church should return to its historic functions of Christian nurture, evangelism and religious education, with a sure knowledge that its ministry to the inner life and to the building of character is its greatest contribution to social welfare.

In conclusion the report declares "it must not be forgotten that in social reconstruction we are dealing with matters that vitally affect the welfare and happiness of millions of human beings, and that we have come upon times when people are not submissive to injustice or to unnecessary privation and suffering. They are deeply and justly in earnest. As was said by Lloyd George, we are laying the foundations of a new world.

"If those who are the actual industrial, political and social leaders of the nation will not act upon the principle that the greatest shall be the servant of all, then the people themselves, with indignation and bitterness, are sure to take their destiny and that of the world into their own hands. The social question cannot be dealt with casually. People who are born with unusual ability, of whatever kind, or who receive special advantages, are given them for unselfish service. Large holdings of property can be justified only by devotion to the common good. We are entering upon an era in which the absorbing concern of the world will be for social justice and the greatest well-being of the greatest number. This will animate the religious spirit of the future—a spirit which has found its supreme expression and example in Jesus Christ."

Ever notice that in most homes where Grape-Nuts is a daily food, health and happiness radiate from every countenance?

Grape-Nuts

is a wonderful food

"There's a Reason"

Primer of Christian Unity

Answers to Vital Questions That Are Stirring the Church of Christ

By H. K. CARROLL, LL.D.

A Small Pocket Volume, 64 Pages, Large, Clear Type. ONLY 10c A COPY POST-PAID

I thank you for the courtesy in allowing me the privilege of reading the Primer on Christian Unity prepared by our mutual friend, Dr. H. K. Carroll. It is a most admirable presentation and will render great service in the cause of a united Christianity. Dr. Carroll is particularly fitted for such a task, and he has produced in a simple and comprehensive form, the important issues involving the Unity of the Church of God.

Peter Ainslie

(PASTOR AND EDITOR, CHRISTIAN UNION QUARTERLY)

Baltimore, Md.

The Primer of Christian Unity should be in the hands of every one who is interested in this greatest of church reconstruction movements. We would suggest that congregations desiring to have their members fully informed, so that they may be able to discuss intelligently the whole question at issue, should take advantage of the opportunity to send in their orders early.

The Price of the Primer Has Been Fixed at 10 Cents per Copy Post-paid

10 COPIES Post-paid,	.75	50 COPIES Post-paid,	$3.00
25 COPIES Post-paid,	$1.75	100 COPIES Post-paid,	$5.00

Book Department, Christian Herald, Bible House, New York

for Insect bites or Sunburn

"The Little Nurse for Little Ills"

A HEALING CREAM
Mentholatum
Always made under this signature A.A.Hyde

THE cooling, healing action of Mentholatum relieves the pain and the "drawn" feeling; stops the itch of insect bites at once. Try it and learn its comfort. Antiseptic and gently healing for cuts, bruises, and other "little ills."

The Mentholatum Co., Buffalo, N. Y.

At all druggists' in tubes, 25c. Jars, 25c, 50c, $1.

MILLER SERVICE
for Investors in Real Estate Mortgage Bonds

Only high-grade, good paying investments in first mortgage real estate bonds are offered. Conditions in our territory enable us to net the investor 7%.

Denominations $100: $500: $1000

MILLER SERVICE relieves you of worry and care and safeguards your interests in every possible manner. Our methods conform to recognized conservative banking practice.

Interest and principal payable at the Third National Bank, Atlanta, Ga., or the Guaranty Trust Company of New York, 140 Broadway, New York City.

Write for literature describing MILLER SERVICE, our booklet entitled "BANKING CREDENTIALS" and details of our current offerings.

G. L. MILLER & CO., Inc.,
126 Hurt Bldg., Atlanta, Ga. Also Miami, Fla.

6%
PAID FOR 24 YEARS

In good times and bad, in peace and in war, for 24 years we have paid 6% on Two-Year Time Certificates and 5% on Certificates payable on demand. Interest checks are mailed semi-annually.

If you have as little as $25 to invest, you will be interested in our Booklet, "6% and Safety," giving full particulars about this old and tried institution. Write for it.

The Calvert Mortgage Company
863 Calvert Bldg., Baltimore, Md.

6% Real Estate Gold Bonds

We offer investors carefully placed First Farm Mortgages and Real Estate Gold Bonds from one of the best agricultural sections in the United States. We are right on the ground and personally examine the security under every loan offered. 35 years' experience without the loss of a dollar. Ask for pamphlet "O" and current offerings

E. J. LANDER & CO., Grand Forks, N. D.
Est. 1883. Capital and Surplus $500 000.00

Your Best Asset
— A Skin Cleared By —
Cuticura Soap

All druggists; Soap 25, Ointment 25 & 50, Talcum 25. Sample each free of "Cuticura, Dept. M, Boston."

MENDETS — WONDER MONEY MAKERS mend leaks instantly in all utensils, hot water bags, etc. Insert and tighten. 10c and 25c a package postpaid. AGENTS WANTED. Collette Mfg. Co. Box 444-A, Amsterdam, N. Y.

CHANSUNG'S CONFESSION

Continued from page 805

were all unusually pressed for money just then; but additional funds had to be raised or they would lose all they had put into the business.

"I move," said Cousin Ne, "that we each go home and raise two hundred yen more for the company. This will surely carry the work to the point where profits will commence coming."

The motion carried, and old Ne went heavy-hearted back to Su Nai to sell the second third of his land. He and Nyangsie both shed tears when the property was signed away; but there seemed no help for it unless they were to lose all the first investment.

It is perhaps unnecessary to state that old Ne was the only one who raised any money; not that they informed him of this fact, however. The partners were getting desperate, and a small deception like this did not trouble them.

The truth was that the gold was fast playing out, and unless they struck better ore at once the mine would have to be abandoned. Each was so loaded with debts incurred in previous ventures that admission of failure here would bring all their creditors upon them.

Old Ne's second two hundred yen represented their last effort to thwart fate.

It was quite evident to Ne this time that things were not going smoothly. Money was so short for everything that he began to suspect the others had not paid in what they had promised. Part of the workmen were dropped, and the merchants who had erected huts near the mines were leaving one by one as rats desert a sinking ship.

It was about this time that old Ne wrote to Chansung telling him how things stood and of his perplexity. Chansung read the letter and went straight to his young pupil-employer and asked for a week's leave of absence in such distress that Hyun Puin at once consented. The next morning he was on his way to Kai Chun.

Things at the mine had come to an impasse. The partners held a meeting. This time old Ne was not invited, although he was on the ground. A half-hour later they came out and asked old Ne to take full charge for the day, as they were going to Kai Chun.

It was customary to rest one hour at noon, and the mine was usually deserted during that time. Today, however, old Ne had set six men at timbering a drift from the lowest point in the mine, and, being anxious to complete the work before the drillers returned, ordered the men to stay at the job till it was completed. He had just finished his own meal at the company's house below and had gone up on the side of the mountain with a workman to look at some timber. From where he stood he had an excellent view of the company's ground and the black hole above that marked the entrance to the mine.

Suddenly a man came out of the woods and entered the mine. Old Ne was sure it was Cousin Ne; yet how could that be when he had left an hour before for Kai Chun?

He was still standing considering the matter when the man reappeared, this time on the run, and fled into the bushes.

Whoever it was, his actions were highly suspicious. Old Ne called the workman to follow and started up the mountain as fast as he could go to investigate.

They had gone about half the distance when a tremendous explosion occurred. Rock and broken timbers were hurled from the mouth of the mine, together with smoke and flame.

And in that instant old Ne understood what had happened. Cousin Ne and his friends had not gone to Kai Chun, but had waited till the noon hour when the men would be out of the mine to blow it up in a miserable attempt to cover up their crooked dealings and "save their faces."

Old Ne had lost all faith in the partners, and this desperate act at once confirmed his worst suspicions. Righteous anger flamed hot within him.

"E-noma!" (you scoundrel!) he cried, and started to pursue the fugitive; then as suddenly stopped short, the memory of the men still working in the mine flashing in upon him.

"Aigo, ta chuggeso!" (oh, they will all be killed!) He dashed toward the mine, all else forgotten.

The entrance was blocked with fallen timbers and débris through which smoke and the sulphur smell of powder oozed stiflingly. Old Ne set furiously to work to open up a passage, assisted presently by many others from the village, all yelling, "There are men inside! There are men inside! Aigo! aigo!" tearing madly with their hands at the rocks and broken timbers.

By degrees a small passage was cleared at the top of the débris; but the smoke pouring through the opening blinded their eyes and the roar from within showed plainly that they had only made a draft for the flames.

Most of the men drew back; but old Ne fought on in the face of the advancing furnace until, completely overcome by the smoke, he fell backward exhausted, his hands and face blackened by the flames.

For some time he lay dazed on the ground outside the mine where they had dragged him, while around him surged the panic-stricken crowd; the din increased now by the wailing of the wives and children of the entombed men.

Gradually consciousness returned. He sprang up, snatching wildly at his face, which seemed to be blazing where the skin had already fallen in patches. The pain cleared his brain, and he rushed once more to the mouth of the mine, only to be hurled back by the heat of the flames.

"Is there no other opening?" he cried to the miners in the crowd.

"Yes," answered one, "there is, but you can't get down there; I tried it."

"Show me the way!" old Ne ordered, and the man led him, followed by the crowd, to an airshaft in a clump of trees some distance from the larger opening.

